The Chase And The Steeplechase restores a famous occasion with Gordon, but beware: it's an import record and may not always be available. It lives up to reputation – just – though the additional CD material is fairly routine.

* Wardell Gray Properbox Properbox 55 4CD As for selections above; some additional personnel. 46–52.
(*) Complete Sunset And New Jazz Masters Jazz Factory 22810 Similar to above. 46–50.
 Wardell Gray, 1946–1950 Classics 1324 Similar to above. 46–50.
The available discography took a giant leap forward with these. Completists will need the exhaustive Properbox, nicely packaged with an informative booklet and full session details, but there is much to recommend the budget Jazz Factory compilation and Classics have their dogged chronological approach for those who value that. The Properbox volumes – Blue Lou, The Chase, Twisted and Farmer's Market – seem also to be available singly, though there's no reason not to go the whole hog. One of the best parts of the set comes on disc two with a private recording of a session in Portland, Oregon, from October 1947 with the Sonny Criss group, but there's good music to be had throughout and the sound is respectable, certainly better than the mushy Classics and more faithful than Jazz Factory's brittle remastering.

Also, in brief:

(*) Way Out Wardell Boplicity CDBOP 014. 48.
Shaky jams, originally issued as a Crown LP.

 Light Gray Cool & Blue C&B 116. 48–50.
Further salami-slicing with these early sessions for other leaders.

 Live At The Haig 1952 Fresh Sound FSR CD 157. 9/52.
Listed out of stock as we went to press, though there are sure to be copies around; worth catching for the presence of Hampton Hawes (p).

The Great British Jazz Band

GROUP

Cream of the home trad crop.

 Jubilee /  The Best Of The Great British Jazz Band /  A British Jazz Odyssey /  Swing That Music Candid CCD 79720 / Empire 709 / Candid CCD 79740 / 79780 Mike Cotton, George Paterson (t); Digby Fairweather (t, v); Pete Strange, Roy Williams (tb); Dave Shepherd (cl); John Barnes (cl, ts, v); Jim Douglas (g); Brian Lemon (p); Len Skeat (b); Allan Ganley (d). 98; 98; 00; 02.
They have the finest rhythm section you'll hear anywhere; in Williams and Barnes two of the best trad/Dixieland horns in the business; and in Fairweather a front-man of charismatic charm and solo presence. All of these are packed with first-rate music, delivered at a pace that would leave most of the younger Turks gasping. Nothing fancy; just home-cooked jazz: cut-out-and-keeps include 'Petite Fleur' and 'KC Blues'.

Bennie Green (1923–77)

TROMBONE

A Chicagoan, he joined Earl Hines, then led hard-bop groups in the '50s and early '60s.

 Blows His Horn Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1728 Green; Charlie Rouse (ts); Cliff Smalls (p); Paul Chambers (b); Osie Johnson (d); Candido (perc). 6–9/55.
(*) Walking Down Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1752 Green; Eric Dixon (ts); Lloyd Mayers (p); Sonny Wellesley (b); Bill English (d). 6/56.
 Bennie Green With Art Farmer Original Jazz Classics OJC 1800-2 Green; Art Farmer (t); Cliff Smalls (p); Addison Farmer (b); Philly Joe Jones (d). 4/56.
 The Swingin'est Collectables OC7171 Green; Nat Adderley (t); Gene Ammons, Frank Foster (ts); Frank Wess (ts, f); Tommy Flanagan (p); Eddie Jones (b); Albert 'Tootie' Heath (d). 60.
 Bennie Green Time 1046 Green; Jimmy Forrest (ts); Sonny Clark (p); George Tucker (b); Al Dreares (d); Joe Gorgas (perc). 9/60.
 Glidin' Along Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1869-2 Green; Johnny Griffin (ts); Junior Mance (p); Paul Chambers (b); Larry Gales, Ben Riley (d). 3/61.
 Go Ahead And Blow! Ocium OCM23 Green; Norman Faye (t); Eddie 'Lockjaw' Davis, Coleman Hawkins, Budd Johnson, Big Nick Nicholas, Billy Root (ts); Frank Wess (ts, f); Charlie Ventura (ts, bs); Cecil Payne, Ben Ventura, Rudy Williams (bs); Ted Brannon, Al Haig, Ike Isaacs, Jimmy Jones, John Malachi, Cliff Smalls (p); Roy Kral (p, v); John Collins (g); Nelson Boyd, Chubby Jackson, Kenny O'Brien, Tommy Potter (b); Art Blakey, Roy Haynes, Osie Johnson, Ed Shaughnessy, Shadow Wilson (d); Candido Camero (perc); Jackie Cain (v). 10/48–4/54.
While these are good records, they rate some way below the discs Green made for Blue Note in 1958–9 (Soul Stirrin' was available briefly as a Blue Note Connoisseur edition). Albums for Bethlehem and Jazzland, all from the early '60s, would also be welcome in reissue form, though Glidin' Along has reappeared: a good-natured blow with Griffin, with a set of scrappy originals betraying the lack of preparation.

The Swingin'est, a loose jam with Ammons and two other horns, is pleasant but by no means earth-shaking, which means that the 'bonus' alternative takes are actually more of a liability. The Time has had a chequered history, on that label and Bainbridge. It's a rollicking set, with quite a strong emphasis on Forrest's soulful tenor.

Although he was one of the first trombonists to fraternize with bop – he was in the Hines orchestra with Parker and Gillespie – Green's personal allegiance remained with swing. The 1955 session highlights his singing tone and straightforward phrasing on attractive versions of 'Travellin' Light' and 'Body And Soul'. The band is a congenial one and Rouse's solos are an ounce more interesting than the leader's. Walking Down features a less impressive group, though Green is again in swinging form. Best is the edition of the Prestige session which matched Green with Art Farmer, whose affable and calmly intense playing is a piquant complement to the somewhat more boisterous leader: compare their solos on Farmer's 'Skycoach'.

The material on Go Ahead And Blow! was made with Charlie Ventura and with his own septet. It's a mixed bag of tracks, of which the opening 'Euphoria' and 'Platinum', the latter with Coleman Hawkins's group, are outstanding. Ocium are newcomers to the scene, specializing in enhanced CDs with archive images. While Green seems an unlikely priority for this treatment, it's a welcome inclusion. As his decline in later years suggests, Bennie was never forceful enough, either as a soloist or as a business manager, to make it in the business.

Benny Green (born 1965)

PIANO

Early experience with Betty Carter set this veteran of the contemporary scene on his way. His style is relatively conservative, influenced by Horace Silver and Wynton Kelly, but by Oscar Peterson above all.

 Prelude Criss Cross 1036 Green; Terence Blanchard (t); Javon Jackson (ts); Peter Washington (b); Tony Reedus (d). 2/88.
 In This Direction Criss Cross 1038 Green; Buster Williams (b); Lewis Nash (d). 12/88–1/89.

Green came to prominence as pianist with Betty Carter's group, and his mastery of bebop piano – particularly the chunky rhythms of Horace Silver – was leavened by an apparent interest in swing styles as well. Green hits the keyboard hard on up-tempo tunes, and has a preference for beefy chords and straight-ahead swing. These albums for Criss Cross feature a lot of piano, but there's nothing particularly outstanding about them. The quintet date sounds too much like a mere blowing session for any of the players to make a distinctive mark, and the trio set seems hastily prepared, although the rhythm section lends impressive support.

(*) Testifyin': Live At The Village Vanguard Blue Note 98171 Green; Christian McBride (b); Carl Allen (d). 11/91.

An apparent survival from Green's long run of Blue Notes, this is a top-notch club date from a sanctified venue, and it's a useful if not exactly exceptional picture of pianist and trio at the start of his second decade as a professional. The group's tight and good, the sound's excellent, but there's nothing here that would challenge the oft-repeated assertion that Criss Cross had long since inherited the Blue Note mantle.

(*) Naturally Telarc CD-83498 Green; Russell Malone (g); Christian McBride (b). 1/00.

Telarc's become a refuge for piano-players. Naturally is mostly delightful. Though there are three solos – including a rationalization of Wayne Shorter's often misbegotten 'Lester Left Town' – the trio tracks are seasoned by nicely intuitive interplay. Carl Perkins's 'Grooveyard', taken at a considerate pace, and Benny's original 'Beg Your Parlan' are irresistible. Since Green has been all but anointed as principal heir to Oscar Peterson's mantle of jazz communicator, the joyous approach here fits him well.

 Green's Blues Telarc CD-83539 Green (p solo). 1/01.

Benny's such a master of the trio idiom that to find him by himself for a whole album brings on the feeling that something's missing. As if to compensate, there's a degree of overplaying, and the record works best a few tracks at a time. But Green remains a pleasure to hear.

* Jazz At The Bistro / (*) Bluebird Telarc CD-83560 / CD-83604 Green; Russell Malone (g). 6/02; 11/03.

Two natural showmen, but nobody expects a classic from a piano/guitar duo on some small-time live gig in St Louis. So they settle down and create it anyway: good tunes from jazz composers (Benny Carter, Paul Chambers, Cannonball Adderley), a bit of pop ('How Deep Is Your Love'). Chopsmanship is here, but not too much, and they know when to be funny, and are secure in the knowledge that their audience will get the joke, and laugh along with them. In its modest way, this is a classic set for the new century, even as it dwells in and celebrates values which have succoured jazz for decades.

Perhaps it was inevitable that Telarc would try and get the same result on a studio date. It's terrific, but it falls short of the live session, maybe missing the simple spark of an in-person event. Still, it underscores how much two creative players can extract from the supposedly exhausted bebop book ('Passport', 'Reunion Blues', 'Bluebird'), and even such shopworn standards as 'Love For Sale' and 'Moonglow'. Since then, nothing.

Bunky Green (born 1935)

ALTO SAXOPHONE

His native Milwaukee isn't a famous jazz town and he's spent a lot of time in education. However, he's much admired as an innovator by younger-generation saxophonists.

 My Baby (Step High) Collectables COL 7143 Green; Donald Byrd (t); Jimmy Heath (ts); Wynton Kelly (p); Larry Ridley (b); Jimmy Cobb (d). 60.

Green's recorded output is fairly scattered. This valuable reissue, previously on Vee-Jay and intermittently on Fresh Sound as well, was originally released as Step High and without Wynton Kelly's name as co-leader. Green's alto sound is fluid but hard-edged, somewhere between Eric Dolphy and Jimmy Lyons and his attack places him somewhere between the soul-jazz honkers and the avant-garde, which may be why he has such a betwixt-and-between reputation.

His originals here, 'Counterpunch' and 'Step High', are both strong bop ideas with a lot of harmonic detail and plenty of scope for blowing right through the band. Kelly is his usual bluesy self, but Byrd has some revelatory moments, not least on the ballad 'Don't Blame Me', which is by far the longest cut.

 Playin' For Keeps Lone Hill Jazz LHJ10288 Green; Paul Serrano, Walter Strickland (t); John Avant (tb); James Meyer (ts, bs); Kenny Soderblom (sax); Willie Pickens, Charles Stepney, Billy Wallace (p); Cleveland Eaton, Larry Ridley (b); Jimmy Cobb, Harold Jones, Marshall Thompson (d); Eli Gutierrez (perc). 2–1/66, 10/60.

This brings together Playin' For Keeps and Testifyin' Time, together with 'Step High' from the record above to keep his '60s quartet recordings (Byrd and Heath didn't play on it) entire. His lead into 'On Green Dolphin Street' is curiously plangent and it's not until the Latin-tinged rhythms kick in that one sees where he's going with it: swinging, harmonically flexible and sufficiently unusual to sustain interest. There's a restless, tumbling quality to Green's playing throughout, but he's fortunate in partners like Pickens, whose slightly approximate touch is perfect for this stuff. The Beatles' 'Yesterday' was a sign of less fortunate things to come.

(*) Healing The Pain Delos 4020 Green; Billy Childs (p); Art Davis (b); Ralph Penland (d). 89.

The tone is darker and more burnished than of yore, though an occasional switch to soprano restores the sharp, bluesy quality. Much of the material is original, the tone decidedly sombre: no track called 'Healing The Pain', but signs throughout of some mournful personal agenda. He starts with a fine interpretation of 'The Thrill Is Gone' and works through 'Who Can I Turn To', 'Wild Life' and 'Goodbye', interspersed with a beautiful 'Love Theme' that has some of the same menace as the Godfather music. The band's sympathetic and strong.

(*) Another Place Label Bleu 6676 Green; Jason Moran (p); Lonnie Plaxico (b); Nasheet Waits (d). 11/04.

He's now in his fifth decade as a recording artist, and still more admired by younger generation players – Greg Osby, most obviously – than by jazz fans. Recent years have seen him much involved in jazz education, but the chops are secure if the inside/outside approach is less daring than it once was. The set opens and closes with a pair of standards – 'It Could Happen To You' and the peerless 'Soul Eyes' – but the rest is original, with 'Tune X' and the title-piece most effective. Moran's a young master, and the rhythm section has wonderful flexibility, Plaxico in particular steering Green back towards that 'Latinization' that gave one of his forgotten albums a name.

Also, in brief:

 Transformations Universe UV03. 11/76.

Back in the studio after a long gap and an uneasy mix of originals and pop material.

Dave Green (born 1942)

DOUBLE BASS

British jazz's Mr Dependable went to school with Charlie Watts and founded a group with him. After a bout of skiffle, he spent nearly 20 years with Humphrey Lyttelton and between 1965 and 1967 was house bassist at Ronnie Scott's.

(*) Time Will Tell Ronnie Scott's Jazz House JHCD 061 Green; Iain Dixon (ts, cl, bcl); Gene Calderazzo (d). 7/98–1/99.

The title-piece here is by Jimmy Woode, anchor of the Ellington band in the post-Blanton era. As the dateline suggests, this isn't an album dashed off in a quick session or two, but the product of patience and deliberation, and doubtless fitted in around a full diary. The most extended cut, a brilliant version of 'The Way You Look Tonight', offers a perfect illustration of Green's strengths. He drives the metre, but generously and without undue haste. One doesn't feel the absence of a harmony instrument, so acute is his understanding of the chords, and the drummer is free to embellish the line as he sees fit.

Dixon and Calderazzo are ideal foils. The saxophonist has an attractively sour tone, which turns warm and woody when he switches to clarinet for 'Time Will Tell'. Calderazzo, who was just trying out his first kit when Dave was playing with Ben Webster, is on the money. Towards the end of the set there is a brief improvised 'Interlude' followed by two other tracks that seem to have emerged spontaneously in session. Together with the familiar standards and some nice writing from Dixon (Green only takes a credit for 'Licks'), they bespeak a warm creative understanding.

Grant Green (1931–79)

GUITAR

St Louis-born, he spent much of his career in the shadow of Wes Montgomery, but though he was less subtle harmonically, he had the ability to drive a melody line and shape a solo as if telling a quietly urgent story.

 First Recordings Gambit 69268 Green; Jimmy Forrest (ts); Harold Mabern (p); Gene Ramey (b); Elvin Jones (d). 12/59.

 Grant's First Stand Blue Note 21959 Green; Baby Face Willette (org); Ben Dixon (d). 1/61.

 Green Street Blue Note 40032 Green; Ben Tucker (b); Dave Bailey (d). 61.

 Sunday Mornin' Blue Note 52434 Green; Kenny Drew (p); Ben Tucker (b); Ben Dixon (d). 7/61.

Various discs claim to be Green's first recorded statement. The Gambit reissue is legitimate only to the extent that these were the guitarist's first studio sessions, but they were made for Delmark under the leadership of Jimmy Forrest. The saxophonist plays more subtly than on some of his earlier R&B sessions, and the rest of the group is excellent, but anyone expecting a revelatory glimpse of the 28-year-old Green will be disappointed.

The first Blue Note sessions as leader, recorded in November 1960, only appeared as late as 2001, with two versions of 'Woody'N'You' recorded with a different group almost a year later. So the real debut is still First Stand, which was a considerable rarity until its reissue. Kicking off with 'Miss Ann's Tempo', an original composition, Grant impresses as a bright, uncomplicated player who has delved deeply into the tradition without being in thrall to it. The blues predominate.

Green Street first came out in 1995 and comes now with a couple of uninspiring bonus tracks. Interesting all the same to hear Green in a trio, unsupported by organ or by a second front-line instrument. The originals, 'No. 1 Green St', 'Green With Envy' and 'Grant's Dimensions', are generic and slightly dull with it, though there are nice interpretations of 'Alone Together' and 'Round About Midnight' which lift the pace a little.

Sunday Mornin' unusually had Green working with a piano-player. As ever, the guitarist favours clean-picked single-note runs, fleet and expressive but somehow missing a dimension which, fortunately, Drew is on hand to supply. 'God Bless The Child' and 'So What' are exceptional performances that would have an influence on a whole generation of soul-jazz and later acid-jazz performers.

(*) Standards Blue Note 21284 Green; Wilbur Ware (b); Al Harewood (d). 8/61.

Not technically perfect but it brings up to date some more Green material not previously available in the West. By the standards of the time, these are complex readings of familiar material. 'I'll Remember April' is a typical call-and-response solo, but unpredictable in cast. Green had on occasion expressed a special preference for the uncluttered sound of a guitar/bass/drums trio; the pace is light, fast and dancing, and Ware's solos are models of invention. A pity about anomalies in the sound, which seem to have arisen when the tapes were remastered in 1980. Save for the most fastidious of listeners, these won't diminish the pleasure.

 Grantstand Blue Note 46430 Green; Yusef Lateef (ts, f); Jack McDuff (org); Al Harewood (d). 8/61.

* Born To Be Blue Blue Note 84432 Green; Ike Quebec (ts); Sonny Clark (p); Sam Jones (b); Louis Hayes (d). 12/61, 3/62.

Grantstand established the sound and the approach that was to make Green – and Blue Note – a good deal of money over the next few years, to the dubious benefit of the former, who had narcotic problems. The combination of Green's smooth lines, Lateef's simple but inventive tenor and delicate flute tone, and McDuff's swirling lines and choked-off probings is very effective indeed, even if the balance is sometimes off, even on CD. 'Old Folks' and 'My Funny Valentine' give the hornman lots to do, and he responds with some vintage playing.

We've always liked Born To Be Blue best of all the Blue Notes, along with the splendid Idle Moments and Street Of Dreams. Quebec, who was Blue Note MD at the time, is still not widely admired, but he's on cracking form, and his pitch and phrasing on 'Someday My Prince Will Come' should be a lesson to all young jazz players. Green has, for us, his finest hour, rippling through 'My One And Only Love' and 'If I Should Love You' with a ruggedness of emotion that goes hand in hand with the simplicity of diction. Not a note is wasted. 'Count Every Star' actually comes from an earlier session, but it too is judged to perfection, toned down just as it threatens to get schmaltzy. Sonny Clark, another Blue Note artist still being reassessed, is also in sparkling form, with just enough light and shade to temper his colleagues' bluff romanticism.

[redacted]

 The Complete Quartets With Sonny Clark

Blue Note 571924 2CD Green; Sonny Clark (p); Sam Jones (b); Art Blakey, Louis Hayes (d). 12/61, 1/62.

The first five items on disc one were available for a time as Nigeria, a re-reversal of the Sonny Rollins staple 'Airegin', which kicked off the set. Everything else on this valuable reintroduction has been issued previously only in Japan. Blue Note completists will know the material from Gooden's Corner and Oleo. There are alternative takes of both Rollins tunes (the rejected 'Oleo' had already been heard on a 1989 Mosaic box), a superb pre-Coltrane interpretation of 'My Favorite Things', an exquisite 'Moon River' and an equally beautiful 'Nancy (With The Laughing Face)'. If all this suggests sessions heavy on lyricism rather than swinging pace, this is partly true. The presence of the long-neglected, now canonized Clark guarantees that the tempo never slackens, even on the gentlest ballads, and that the harmonic configuration is always adventurous. Hayes is the drummer on all the 1962 cuts, though Blakey's work on Nigeria is inventive first to last. The key performance is a ten-minute workout on 'It Ain't Necessarily So', completely reworked melodically, Green's long winding phrases cutting across Blakey's 12/8 pattern. A remarkable performance.

 The Latin Bit Blue Note 37645 Green; Ike Quebec (ts); Johnny Acea (p); Wendell Marshall (b); Willie Bobo (d); Carlos Patato Valdes (perc); Garvin Maseaux (shekere). 4 & 9/62.

Once Blue Note recognized that they were dealing with a marketable talent, there was increasing pressure on Green to make themed records. This is the 'south of the border' session. Quebec is featured only on the two tracks recorded in September 1962. Despite Green's fleet invention, there is a plodding obviousness to much of the setting. Acea was probably fine as a straight Latin player, but he understands too little of the subtler side of Green to be a genuinely creative partner.

 Goin' West Blue Note 90843 Green; Herbie Hancock (p); Reggie Workman (b); Billy Higgins (d). 11/62.

(*) Feelin' The Spirit Blue Note 84682 As above, except omit Workman; add Butch Warren (b), Garvin Maseaux (tamb). 12/62.

Goin' West finally made it onto CD in 2004. It sounds preposterous, the thought of such a band playing 'On Top Of Old Smokie', but quality will out and these Western chestnuts are hot and tasty, even if 'Tumblin' Tumbleweeds' pushes it a bit. Blue Note A&R also thought it would be a good idea to have Green record an album of gospel tunes. Again, contrary to all expectation what emerges is a superbly balanced and movingly performed set that never troubles to up or change the pace but just keeps on bearing soulful witness. 'Just A Closer Walk With Thee' sounds momentarily as if it might break into a closer jogtrot, and 'Go Down Moses' – or 'Go Down! Moses' – pushes the ecstatic button a little too firmly. However, these are excellent performances and Herbie seems to be enjoying himself, sounding a little like a mischievous choirboy with flattened-down hair.

 Blues For Lou Blue Note 21438 Green; John Patton (org); Ben Dixon (d). 63.

This trio was one of Green's most durable associations. Issued for the first time as an acid-jazz classic in 1999, Blues For Lou is definitive organ–guitar jazz. Patton is strictly no-nonsense and stamps his personality on the album right from the start, a swirling, voluptuous reading of 'Surrey With The Fringe On Top'. Patton's own composition, 'Big John', isn't merely an organ feature. It also includes one of Green's most effective solos, not to be topped until the trio of blues tracks at the end of the album. Dixon has to clatter to make his presence felt.

 Idle Moments Blue Note 99003 Green; Joe Henderson (ts); Bobby Hutcherson (vib); Duke Pearson (p); Bob Cranshaw (b); Al Harewood (d). 11/63.

This vies with Born To Be Blue as Green's finest session. This one featured three other men – Henderson, Hutcherson and Pearson – who were also trying to make some sort of mark at Blue Note, and Green is sometimes eclipsed by the vibist. He holds his own on 'Django' and turns the song around with a lovely, uncomplicated solo. Henderson is rather remote in the mix, and one can see why Rudy Van Gelder might have wanted him held back a notch. A lighter-voiced reed-player would have been better sonically, but Joe's intelligence and grave humour would have been missed.

 Matador Blue Note 78444 Green; McCoy Tyner (p); Bob Cranshaw (b); Elvin Jones (d). 5/64.

 Solid Blue Note 33580 As above, except add James Spaulding (ss, as), Joe Henderson (ts). 5/64.

The Blue Note sessions were coming thick and fast, and Green seemed inclined to experiment. Inevitably, Solid didn't see the light of day for another 15 years. It's certainly one of the boldest of the guitarist's albums, and the presence of Joe Henderson ups the improvisational ante quite considerably. 'Ezz-Thetic' and 'The Kicker' occupy opposite musical poles, but both are hauled into shape by a strong group.

It was a bold stroke to programme 'My Favorite Things' with two thirds of John Coltrane's rhythm section as he did on Matador, but it served to illustrate first how adventurous Green could be, even within his harmonically uncomplicated idiom, and also how very different that modern icon could be made to sound. Cranshaw is a funkier bassist than Jimmy Garrison and he probably makes the biggest overall difference to the sound. Tyner provides a near-perfect pianistic echo of Green's combination of delicacy, structural awareness and understated power. The guitarist already knew Jones from Chicago and from a 1959 Jimmy Forrest session. A fine album that shouldn't just be valued for the contributions of the supporting cast.

(*) Talkin' About Blue Note 21958 Green; Larry Young (org); Elvin Jones (d). 9/64.

Though definitely led by Green, this was included in Mosaic's complete set of Larry Young's Blue Note sessions. Inevitably, Larry captures much of the attention, with huge, swirly figures on 'Talkin' About J.C.', 'Luny Tune' and 'I'm An Old Cowhand', but Green is also in fine form, spinning out some unusually complex lines for him. We've always loved the sound on this record, like fudge ice-cream sitting on ice cubes. Green plays rich and simple by turns, and even Elvin Jones is cool and abstract under all the intensity.

 Street Of Dreams Blue Note 21290 Green; Bobby Hutcherson (vib); Larry Young (org); Elvin Jones (d). 11/64.
Another exceptional record. Though hooked into that easily overcooked guitar/organ/drums format, the personnel is such that one can reasonably expect a blend of power grooves and subtlety. Young is exceptional, very much on form, and Hutcherson makes an enormous contribution to a slower-paced and more meditative session. There are no originals, but the choice of material, from Charles Trenet's 'I Wish You Love', the staple 'Lazy Afternoon', the Victor Young-written title-track and the closing 'Somewhere In The Night' (often referred to as 'The Naked City Theme'), is spot-on. The alternation of solos on the title-track, with Green springing off from Larry Young's ever more intense chord-patterns, is the most impressive, but the quality never drops for an instant. Capitol haven't added any alternatives or unreleased material; 35 minutes is short rations by present-day standards.

(*) I Want To Hold Your Hand Blue Note 59962 Green; Hank Mobley (ts); Larry Young (org); Elvin Jones (d). 3/65.
Leading off with a Beatles tune was pretty much par for the course at this time, and it feeds Green and Young with some interesting lines. 'Stella By Starlight' is weak, sounding as if it's been round the circuit too many times, but Steve Allen's 'This Could Be The Start Of Something' (Allen was a favourite of Green's) is excellently done. Mobley isn't deficient in ideas, but he does seem surplus to requirements for much of the set, and it would have been interesting to hear the same material done by a trio. Again, the total duration seems stingy at less than 45 minutes.

 His Majesty King Funk Verve 527474-2 Green; Harold Vick (ts, f); Larry Young (org); Ben Dixon (d); Candido Camero (perc). 5/65.
This compiles Green's record and Up With Donald Byrd, a joyous swinger from the trumpeter. 'The Cantaloupe Woman' was a hit for Green, but his section of the album is dominated by a wonderful, long 'Willow Weep For Me' and a cracking original called 'The Selma March'. Vick is very much in the same mould as Mobley, or perhaps Stanley Turrentine, and he prettty much falls in with what's expected of him. By this stage, though, Young sounds as if he might want to be doing other things, and on 'That Lucky Old Sun' he is positively lethargic. Dixon is a less than satisfactory replacement for Jones, who at this point was having 'personal problems' and was otherwise committed to the Coltrane group.

 Iron City FiveFour 5 Green; Big John Patton (org); Ben Dixon (d). 67.
 Space Flight / Iron City Gambit 66701 As above, except add Sam Lazar (org); Willie Dixon (b). 60; 67.
Easy to assume that away from Blue Note Green wasn't worth a button. Whatever the shortcomings of his brief association with Verve, Iron City, made for Savoy, but available on a bewildering array of imprints since, confounds the suggestion. It's a richly funky date, with some fine playing from a well-established group. Patton's soulful grind works beautifully on 'High Heeled Sneakers' and Nat Adderley's 'Work Song' and Green's title-track suggests he was still able to make original themes out of familiar resources. If you're a Green fan, this 2003 reissue shouldn't be overlooked. It's also available on a Gambit release, augmented with some 1960 cuts originally made under Lazar's leadership.

(*) Alive! Blue Note 25650 Green; Claude Bartee (ts); Ronnie Foster (org); Billy Bivens (vib); Idris Muhammad (d); Joseph Armstrong (perc). 70.
It seems remarkable that Blue Note weren't more enthusiastic sooner about recording Green in his natural setting. This, from the Cliché Lounge in Newark, is among his best. The bigger band adds exponentially to the richness of the sound, and on tunes like 'Sookie Sookie' they get into the deepest and bluest of grooves. Green's opening shot, Kool And The Gang's 'Let The Music Take Your Mind', was a brilliant coup, but the reissue includes more challenging fare than that; bonus tracks include the Isley Brothers' 'It's Your Thing' and Herbie Hancock's 'Maiden Voyage', another 27 minutes to the running time, every second of it worthwhile.

(*) Live At The Club Mozambique Blue Note 63552 Green; Houston Person (ts); Clarence Thomas (ss, ts); Ronnie Foster (org); Idris Muhammad (d). 1/71.
Recorded in Detroit, where Green was living at the time, this was another that lay in the vaults ever since. It's hard to imagine music of this energy and professionalism ever being out of fashion. Right from the opening 'Jan Jan' (by M. Davis, but not the one we know), the group is on fire. Some of the material is aimed at a pop/soul audience, with a fairly straight reading of 'Walk On By', the Mizell brothers' 'One More Chance' and some other basic funk stuff. However, there's also some great jazz playing, from Person predictably and also the little-known Thomas, who's credited with the long 'Farid'. The drummer is one of the essential soul-jazz players; Green comes through cleanly and takes some shimmering solos.

 Live At The Lighthouse Blue Note 4 93381 Green; Claude Bartee (ts, ss); Gary Coleman (vib); Shelton Laster (org); Wilton Felder (b); Greg Williams (d); Bobbye Porter Hall (perc). 4/72.
Green spent his last few years playing on autopilot, but he was occasionally capable of turning in an exceptional date. This Hermosa Beach session is a case in point. He sounds in excellent fettle, and while he isn't doing anything either new or special, it's exactly what the audience has come to hear. The original disc-jockey announcements have been eliminated here, but for an introduction by Hank Stewart. The live feel is maintained, though, and a long version of Donald Byrd's 'Fancy Free' is worth the wait. Laster's 'Flood In Franklin Park' contains no surprises, but it's an entertaining enough piece. Unlike some recent reissues, there is at least some value for money here, a solid hour of uncomplicated funk.

Also, in brief:

() Am I Blue? Blue Note 35564. 5/63.
One of Grant's duller albums and the reissue doesn't contain any surprises.

 Ballads /  Retrospective Blue Note 36560 / 40851. 61–72.
Two more repackaging jobs, attractive if you haven't any of the Blue Notes already.

(*) Street Funk & Jazz Grooves: The Best Of Grant Green /  The Best Of Grant Green: Volume Two /  Blue Breakbeats Blue Note 789622. 64–72.
These were unashamedly targeted at the club dance scene and won Green some new admirers. The second volume is more jazz-orientated, and it usefully includes material from unavailable records. SF&JG has the more obvious stuff, like 'Grantstand' and 'A Walk In The Night', but now that more material has returned to the catalogue it's a less appealing purchase. Breakbeats was compiled by DJ Smash and cemented Green's standing as one of the presiding deities of the club scene.

 Carryin' On /  Green Is Beautiful Blue Note 31247 2 / 28265 2. 9/69, 1/70.
Green arguably suffered more than most of his peers from the growing dominance of rock, and his response to the challenge wasn't convincing, even as he returned to the Blue Note fold.

 The Original Jam Master: Volume 1 – Ain't It Funky Now /  ... Volume 2 – Just For The Funk Of It /  ... Volume 3 – Mellow Madness Blue Note 5603522 / 5603532 / 5603542. 69–72.
Three effective themed compilations from the later period of Green's contract with Blue Note. You'll still need the classic early stuff.

 The Final Comedown Blue Note 35564. 12/71.
The label's first soundtrack disc wasn't really a Green set at all, but a Wade Marcus production for a forgotten blaxploitation flick.

 The Main Attraction CTI/Epic 5051672. 3/76.
Despite a starry session-man line-up, this was a dispiriting time for Grant, lost in the middle of Creed Taylor's softcore production.

 Easy Unidisc 4111. 4/78.
There's a rusty locomotive on the cover, and that's just about right for the sound as well. A sorry coda.

Jesse Green (born 1973)

PIANO

Son of Urbie Green and singer Kathy Preston, he started on trombone before switching to piano under the influence of Oscar Peterson.

 Lift Off Chiaroscuro 319 Green; Joe Cohn (g); Paul Rostock (b); Bobby Durham (d). 9/92.
 Sea Journey Chiaroscuro 328 Green; Gary Burton (vib); Gene Bertoncini, Joe Cohn (g); Michael Moore (b); Jackie Williams (d). 93.
(*) Sylvan Treasure Chiaroscuro 221 Green; Patrick Doran (flhn); Phil Woods (as); Chris Potter (ss, ts); Dave Liebman (ts); Frank Hauch (b); Bruce Cox (d); Jerry Davis (v). 5/02.
Green has made a living playing shipboard on jazz cruises. The 1993 album is from the SS Norway. It benefits greatly from guest appearances by former teacher Burton and Bertoncini. Jesse seems to like working with guitarists. The duets with Cohn on Lift Off (a Space Shuttle cover Jesse and his label probably both now regret) are the best parts of that album, which is a bland mix of standards done à la Chick Corea and even blander originals. Chick's 'Sea Journey' is prominent on the second disc, which putters out around that point after a cracking opening on 'Softly, As In A Morning Sunrise', 'All The Things You Are' (where he trades ideas with Bertoncini) and 'Billie's Bounce'. The third album is the most inventive of the three. Again, it leans quite heavily on guest spots (notably Woods, but also Davis on 'I've Got You Under My Skin'), but the originals have more prominence and the opening 'Extreme Sporting' (he's a skateboarder, apparently) is excellent. Doran is superb on 'PorpDog'; the brighter attack of brass horns suits Green's approach very well indeed. 'Sylvan Treasure' might sound bucolic but this is a tough-minded disc which asks for and gives no quarter.

Urbie Green (born 1926)

TROMBONE, VALVE TROMBONE

Green worked with Gene Krupa in the '40s, before taking over from Bill Harris with Woody Herman, and in the '50s he was fronting studio sessions which mixed cool and hard-bop stylings. Less visible subsequently, he now plays as he pleases.

(*) Blues And Other Shades Of Green Jazz Beat 504 Green; Ruby Braff (t); Med Flory (as); Al Cohn (ts); Frank Wess (ts, f); Eddie Costa, Dave McKenna, Sir Charles Thompson (p); Freddie Green, Jimmy Raney (g); Aaron Bell, Vinnie Burke, Percy Heath (b); Kenny Clarke, Bobby Donaldson, Joe Morello (d). 53–8/56.
 Complete 1956–1959 Recordings Lone Hill Jazz LHJ 10309 Green; John Carisi, Burt Collins, Al Derisi, Joe Ferrante, John Frosk, Bernie Glow, Irving Markowitz, Doc Severinsen, Phil Sunkel, Nick Travis, Joe Wilder (t); Eddie Bert, Billy Byers, Jack Green, Marshall Hawk, Lou McGarity, Rex Peer, Jack Satterfield, Chauncey Welsch (tb); Tom Mitchell (btb); Bill Barber (tba); Ray Beckenstein, Hal McKusick, Gene Quill (as); Rolf Kuhn (as, cl); Al Cohn, Dick Hafer, Don Lanphere, Boomie Richman (ts); Pepper Adams, Danny Bank, Sol Schlinger (bs); John Bunch, Hank Jones, Dave McKenna (p); Barry Galbraith (g); Vinnie Burke, Milt Hinton, Teddy Kotick, Jack Lesberg, Russ Saunders (b); Osie Johnson, Nick Stabulas, George Wettling (d). 8/56–2/59.
 The Complete Persuasive Trombone Lone Hill Jazz LHJ10308 Green; John Bello, Don Ferrara, Bernie Glow, Irving Markowitz, Doc Severinsen, Nick Travis, Joe Wilder (t); Bobby Byrne, Paul Faulise, Frank Rehak, Chauncey Welsch (tb); Gil Cohen (btb); Bernie Kaufman, Hal McCusick (as); Rolf Kuhn, Walt Levinsky (as, cl); Carl Perkel (ts); Eddie Wasserman (ts, f); Pepper Adams, Gene Allen, Sol Schlinger, Stan Webb (bs); Eddie Costa (p, vib); Dave McKenna, Nat Pierce (p); Barry Galbraith (g); Bob Haggart, Milt Hinton (b); Don Lamond (d). 61–62.
A dramatic transformation in the Green discography this time, with the appearance of these handsomely produced sets. The early small groups include a rare 10-inch LP called Urbie Green And His Band from summer 1954, together with the title-date and a trio of tracks released under Burke's name. The most interesting of the three is inevitably the title-set with Green and Raney paired on most tracks. 'Frankie And Johnny' is done as a valve trombone/piano duet with McKenna and the big pianist takes a couple of solo tracks at the end of the album, but from the October 1955 session. The big-band dates on the first of the Lone Hills include the LPs All About Urbie Green and Let's Face The Music And Dance, together with Jimmy McHugh In Hi-Fi and The Message, the latter pair never previously having been on CD. Green's big rounded trombone sound is probably best sampled in his fleetly boppish small-group sets, but in a big-band context it's a lovely sound. This is essentially dance music with a sufficient jazz component to keep it interesting (though something like 'Moonlight Serenade' on Persuasive is played pretty much straight and unembellished.

'Persuasive' is exactly the right word. Green has an even, reasoned approach to a solo. There's no showboating, other than when he reaches for a very low note, and he concentrates on simple, straightforward statement. These aren't exciting records, but the arranging skills are considerable and Green's always lovely to listen to.

 Sea Jam Blues Chiaroscuro CR(D) 338 Green; Chris Potter (ss, ts); Jesse Green (p); Paul Rostock (b); Glenn Davis (d). 5–6/95.

Sea Jam Blues is taken from a jazz cruise where the Green family (Jesse is Urbie's son) were in residence. Potter's presence adds some extra spice to the occasion (he chews up the opening Ellington blues before Urbie even gets started), but it's an altogether congenial setting, and 'You've Changed', rich and ripe, soon affirms Green's well-being. Potter storms through 'Giant Steps' almost by himself, but here it seems like a rather fractious interlude on what is, after all, Urbie's date. A nice memento if you were there.

Also, in brief:

 Septet And Octet /  East Coast Jazz Series 6 Fresh Sound FSRCD 451 / Bethlehem R2 76686. 53–55; 55.

Characteristic of the sessions he helmed at the time. Al Cohn appears as 'Al Horowitz'.

Rowland Greenberg (1920–96)

TRUMPET

Based in and around Oslo for most of his working life, he played in an uncomplicated swing style, despite being among those who backed Charlie Parker on his celebrated Swedish tour.

 Portrait Of A Norwegian Jazz Artist Gemini GMOJCD 9504 Greenberg; Jack Butler (t); Ivan Jacobsen (tb); Per Nilsen (as); Arvid Gram Paulsen, Bjarne Nerem, Erling Andersen, Ben Webster (ts); Jan Fredrik Dahl, Rolf Larsson, Oistein Ringstad, Carsten Klouman, Sigurd Jansen, Arne Klette, Willy Andresen (p); Per Byhaug, Eilif Holm, Arno Guilberg (vib); Robert Normann, Finn Westbye (g); Fred Lange-Nielsen, Frank Cook, Bjørn Pedersen , Hakon Nilsen, Arne Wilhelmsson, Tore Nordlie (b); Stein Lorentzen, Edgar Vestgard, Hans Jarnefeldt, Egil Johansen, Omar Heide Midtsaeter, Per Nyhaug, Kenneth Greenberg, Kurt Falk (d). 2/40-87.

Greenberg played good swing trumpet with a rasp that can sometimes catch out a listener expecting something much sweeter: his 1960 reading of 'Lover Man' is tough and even vehement. A 1969 'Perdido', where he stands next to Ben Webster, is forceful enough to bring the tenorman out of his indolent shell. This hotch-potch of obscure tracks, unearthed by the Oslo Jazz Circle, is hardly an adequate memorial, but it's all he has at the moment. If he gave bop a grudging respect, it left his style largely untouched, and such influences as Roy Eldridge and Nat Gonella coloured most of what he did. The sound is dusty, but Greenberg's playing is consistently smart.

Burton Greene (born 1937)

PIANO

Studied classical music in Chicago, then formed the Free Form Improvisation Ensemble in NY, 1963, and joined the Jazz Composers Guild. Moved to Paris in 1969. Also studied Indian and klezmer music.

 Free Form Improvisation Ensemble Cadence CJR 1074 Greene; Gary William Friedman (as); Jon Winter (f); Alan Silva (b); Clarence Walker (d). 66.

(*) On Tour ESP 1076 Greene; Allen Tintweiss (b); Shelley Rusten (d). 66.

(*) Shades Of Greene Cadence CJR 1087 Greene (p solo). 4/92–12/97.

 Throptics CIMP 182 Greene; Wilber Morris (b); Lou Grassi (d). 7/98.

Greene has had a strange time of it: a pioneer spirit in the free jazz of the early '60s, his ESP quartet album ('uninformed by any apparent communicative purpose' – Max Harrison) was reviled and applauded in about equal proportion, though it was ignored altogether in far greater numbers. The recovery of FFIE, a survival of the early days of free jazz, doesn't cast much more light, and the live trio music is a bore. Subsequent bulletins have until recently been spasmodic, though Cadence/CIMP seem convinced of Greene's genius. Shades Of Greene collects material from three solo concerts, two long pieces in Toronto, seven from Hilversum and a much earlier version of 'Off Minor' from a 1992 Amsterdam broadcast. As ever, Greene rambles away to some strange agenda of his own – he can be as long-winded as the most bloody-minded of improvisers, but he can also be pithy and almost epigrammatic when he wants to be – and it's this unpredictability which makes him either intriguing or exasperating, according to taste. We are somewhere in the middle.

The trio set at least allows Wilber and Grassi to centre him to some extent. 'Lennie Lives', for Tristano, and 'Tilo Akandita Brikama', by Pierre Dørge, for Johnny Dyani, are characterful excursions which Greene hurls himself into, but there is a good deal of chaos as well: the opening 'Light Blue' may well finish off some listeners at the first hurdle. A maverick spirit, to be sure!

(*) Retrospective: 1961–2005 CIMP 355 Greene (p solo). 8/05.

 Signs Of The Times CIMP 339 Greene; Paul Smoker (t); Russ Nolan (ts); George Schuller (d). 8/05.

 Ins And Out CIMP 345 Greene; Ed Schuller (b); George Schuller (d). 8/05.

In August 2005, Greene recorded a marathon three-day session for CIMP. These are the results. The solo piano 'retrospective' is another enigmatic affair. Though somewhat more communicative than the ESP Disk which so thoroughly failed to speak to Max Harrison, it's still an odd affair. It's not quite clear what is being retrospected, since he begins with Shorter's 'Backstage Sally' and proceeds to other repertory pieces like 'Little Rootie Tootie' and 'In Your Own Sweet Way'. Robert Rusch describes Greene's first exercises of the session as being 'like a reptile warming to heat' (this is his producer!), which is possibly too strong even for us, but there's a scaley, cold-blooded quality to it all and even the archaeology of early pieces of his own, transparently derivative of Monk, aren't enough to generate enthusiasm.

Smoker's a musician who always delivers and the quartet date and relatively swinging and straight-ahead trio session are about the best Greene we've heard. On the latter, he opens with the deceptively slight 'Skumpy' and lets it flow from there. It's still not a beautiful sound; nor does it have the attraction of being challengingly ugly. It just somehow fails to cross the air from player to (these) listeners with its virtues intact.

Greene's klezmer records are available on BvHaast. We're immune to these as well, though some may find them entertaining, even moving.

Also, in brief:

() Peace Beyond Conflict CIMP 251. 7/01.
Mark Dresser (b) plays with typical commitment, but is it reciprocated with anything worthwhile?

(*) Isms Out CIMP 316. 6/04.
A mystifying release with everyone, including the fine Roy Campbell (t), sounding off his game.

Everett Greene (born 1934)

VOICE

Indianapolis crooner, making his recording debut at bus-pass age.

 My Foolish Heart Savant 2014 Greene; Houston Person (ts); Norman Simmons (p); Ray Drummond (b); Kenny Washington (d). 98.
This one is for lovers of some of the old big-band singers, guys like Billy Eckstine and Al Hibbler. Greene has a less individual voice than either of those, and might well be swamped by a heavier accompaniment than producer Person gives him here, but he has a nice sound and a good touch with a song. Opening on 'When Did You Leave Heaven?', he carves out a solidly dependable set for his first disc and saves best to last with 'Hello, Young Lovers' and 'The Very Thought Of You'.

Jimmy Greene (born 1975)

TENOR AND SOPRANO SAXOPHONES, FLUTE

Born in Connecticut, the son of a saxophonist. He's made steady progress.

 Introducing Jimmy Greene Criss Cross 1181 Greene; John Swana (t, flhn); Steve Davis (tb); Aaron Goldberg (p); Darrell Hall (b); Eric McPherson (d). 10/97.
 Brand New World RCA 09026-63564-2 As above, except omit Swana, Hall; add Darren Barrett (t, flhn); Dwayne Burns (b); Khalil Kwame Bell (perc). 6/99.
(*) Forever Criss Cross 1245 Greene; Xavier Davis (p); John Benitez (b); Jeff 'Tain' Watts (d). 11/03.
Greene made a few waves as a runner-up in one of the Monk Institute competitions and was noticed working with Horace Silver. The debut discs are solid enough. The RCA debut had its teeth drawn slightly by the simultaneous appearance of the Criss Cross set, actually recorded some two years earlier. Introducing feels like just another Criss Cross record for the most part, although here and there Greene is a degree more personal: with the rather dark and sidelong arrangement of 'I Love You', for instance. Swana and Davis sound as if they've just turned up to do the date. The RCA set is stronger, but not enough to make a huge difference. Greene has an attractively light and unemphatic sound, which makes it harder to create a whiz-bang impression. The band is much the same and the leader's composing takes more prominence, which seems to fuse the front line into a more characterful sound.

It would be flippant to suggest that Greene has turned to the Lord for career advice when RCA gave up on him after just one disc, but Forever is a full-on album of spirituals, cast in five originals, Ellington's 'Come Sunday', 'Old Rugged Cross' and Thom Bell's 'You Make Me Feel Brand New'. The suggestion that we're in for an hour of sombre testifying is undercut by the brightly grooving treatment of 'Rugged Cross', and thereafter Greene keeps energy levels high and the band on its toes. The Coltrane spin he puts on 'In Many Tongues' is deftly personalized. Two soprano and piano duets, 'Forever' and 'He Is Lord' are dry enough not to seem pious or simpering. It's a fine rhythm section, Watts piling in with his usual fervour, though he's not quite as musclebound as he can be.

 True Life Stories Criss Cross 1279 Greene; Jeremy Pelt (p); Xavier Davis (p); Reuben Rogers (b); Eric Harland (d). 12/05.
(*) Gifts And Givers Criss Cross 1296 Greene; Marcus Strickland (ts); Danny Grissett (p); Mike Moreno (g); Reuben Rogers (b); Eric Harland (d). 4/07.
Things seemed stalled at the time of our last edition, so it's good to report on two new discs from Jimmy. Or it would be if they marked any significant advance. There's some interest in cutting loose on True Life Stories, but the version of 'How Great Thou Art', another spiritual, is somnolent and it deadens the impact of the title-piece, which is nicely medleyed with 'Evidence' and like a few of these tracks played out at length.

The most recent record has definite strengths, not least a fuller sound. Strickland actually works very well as a front-line partner and their work together on Coltrane's '26-2' is interesting. The originals aren't much, but Harry Connick Jr's 'Greene Blues', written for Jimmy (or for his father?), is a nice coup and the long medley of Dorham's 'Blue Bossa' into his own 'Boudreaux' works very well. Moreno and Grissett combine nicely and don't get in each other's way. A sign of better things to come?

Sonny Greenwich (born 1936)

GUITAR, KEYBOARDS

Canadian visionary with bold agenda.

() Days Gone By Sackville 2052 Greenwich; Ed Bickert (g); Don Thompson (b); Terry Clarke (d). 6/79.
A more accommodating and gentler side of Greenwich comes out on this archive release with fellow Canadian Bickert. Whether the setting leaves enough scope for Sonny's usual idiom is a moot point. He sounds a touch constrained and at half-throttle for a good deal of this record and, while he has the chops to deliver, almost no matter what the setting, it is Bickert who takes the plaudits. Sonny asserts himself most forcefully on 'Nica's Dream', the Horace Silver classic, affording him time and space to soar away on some inventive ideas. An even longer improvisation ends the album, with some friendly duelling between the two guitarists. For the most part, though, this is a lacklustre performance from Sonny.

 Standard Idioms Kleo 1 Greenwich (g solo). 11/91– 9/92.
Greenwich tries to synthesize contemporary guitar jazz and the sound of the late John Coltrane Quartet. This might sound misguided, but it occasionally works. The debut recording on Sonny's own label finds him in pretty familiar form, knocking out big, blocky sounds on a set of originals and tributes that have nothing obviously to do with standards jazz at all, and which are not strictly idiomatic in terms of conventional jazz guitar. 'Memories Of Miles', 'Let Your Heart Sing' and the opening 'Sunshower' are all long, slowly developing improvisations, which don't deliver too quickly.

(*) Fragments Of A Memory Cornerstone CRSTCD116
Greenwich; Charles Ellison (t); Mike Allen (ts); Don Thompson (p); Jim Vivian (b); Barry Elmes (d). 4/01.
This is a challenging jazz set, and as powerful as any Greenwich has done over the years. The title-piece and 'Fontainebleau' are vivid ideas, with long lines and a measure of abstraction. The guitarist's interaction with Ellison and Allen is riveting and the exemplary Thompson doesn't so much hold it all together as give the music a coherence and shape without normalizing it. 'The Entertainer' is something of a joker/wild card, but lovingly played.

Also, in brief:

 Hymn To The Earth / (*) Spirit In The Air Kleo 2 / 3. 10/94; 11/95.
Sonny takes a step into creative New Age music with these curious discs; not enough substance for most mainstream jazz fans.

 Special Angel CBC 3006. 01.
Impressionistic duos with Marilyn Lerner (p); heavy on texture.

Guillermo Gregorio (born 1941)

SAXOPHONES, CLARINET

A student of Warne Marsh, this inspired Argentinian has taken striking liberties with the harmonic language of classic jazz and swing.

 Background Music hatOLOGY 526 Gregorio; Mats Gustafsson (ts, bs); Kjell Nordeson (d). 96.
 Red Cube(d) hatOLOGY 531 Gregorio; Mat Maneri (vn); Pandelis Karayorgis (p). 3/98.
The language of these records will not seem strange to anyone who has experienced the avant-cool of Franz Koglmann. After a little exposure, and certainly after one hears what he does with jazz-based material on Red Cube(d), it becomes evident that he has roots in that tradition as well. The later album was seemingly inspired by a batch of lost Red Norvo discs from the '40s. Gregorio's reworkings of Fletcher Henderson's 'Red Dust', 'Ghost Of A Chance' (or 'Chu's Spectre') and 'These Foolish Things' suggest just how much he has tried to combine jazz and other harmonic languages within a rhythmic conception which is not drum-led. The most remarkable piece of all is 'Woodchopper's Nightmare', a palimpsest of themes by Norvo, Shorty Rogers, Woody Herman, Flip Phillips and others. Its concentration is highly impressive and the interplay of saxophone, piano and violin is virtuosic.

Background Music runs some risk of being taken as just that, but anyone who knows Gustafsson's work will be taken by his reflective and low-intensity playing here. It's a very quiet record, understated in places almost to the point of disappearance and calls for some patience. Gregorio is unlikely to be for every taste, but like Koglmann he has important things to say about jazz and its relation to other musics.

 Coplanar New World 80369 Gregorio; Marc Unternährer (tba); Ken Vandermark (reeds); Aram Shelton (cl); Kyle Bruckmann (ob, acc); Jim Baker (p, syn); Steffen Schleiermacher (p); John Corbett (g); Jen Clare Paulson (vla); Fred Lonberg-Holm (clo); Michael Cameron (b); Warren Po (cracklebox); Jennifer Walshe (v). 06.
Other recent records of Gregorio's have been on the new-music hatNOW imprint. This would seem closer to that world, too, but Gregorio's graphic scores are not much different from many another free-music project and the results, which vary sharply from piece to piece as the instrumentation changes, are consistently alive. Only at one point is the whole ensemble in; this was probably wise, since these are all players with distinctive voices and Gregorio's ideas are unusually spacious. Another fine (non-)statement from the music's great conceptualist.

Also, in brief:

 Otra Musica Atavistic 209. 63–70.
This documents Gregorio's involvement with Fluxus and with tape music, as well as including examples of his free improvisation.

Stan Greig (born 1930)

PIANO

Edinburgh-born, he worked as a teenager with Sandy Brown and joined the Ken Colyer band as a drummer in 1954. Has also worked with Humphrey Lyttelton, the Fairweather–Brown group and Acker Bilk, and led his own Harlem Blues And Jazz Band.

 Boogie Woogie Lake LACD97 Greig; Johnny Hawksworth (b); Richie Bryant (d). 71–97.
Though Greig's main calling is as the archetypal mainstream-band pianist, this set features him in boogie mode. For the most part it's a reissue of an obscure 1971 set for Rediffusion. The piano sound is rather hard, but the playing – of chestnuts such as 'Shout For Joy' and 'Death Ray Boogie', as well as a few appropriate originals – is delightfully bright and bumptious. The sleeve-note claims there aren't many 'authentic' boogie-woogie players left; it's more that the style has gone out of fashion. This set explains why: though well done, it palls at CD length. Three 'new' tracks, featuring Greig solo in 1997, are more sedate.

Phil Grenadier

TRUMPET

A sophisticated leader; brother of bassist Larry Grenadier.

(*) Sweet Transients Fresh Sound New Talent FSNT 93 Grenadier; Seamus Blake (ts); Ethan Iverson (p); Larry Grenadier, Doug Weiss (b); Bill Stewart (d). 6/00.
* Playful Intentions Fresh Sound New Talent FSNT 159 Grenadier; Kurt Rosenwinkel (g); Larry Grenadier (b); Bill Carrothers (d). 9/02.
The talented Grenadier brothers enjoy a fraternal moment on the debut disc with a lovely duo version of 'Lonely Woman' (Horace Silver's one). The Ornette connection is made with a couple of other tracks, most obviously the two-bass instrumentation used for Beck's intriguing 'Derelict' and on 'Emma', which has a curiously stark quality. Only the title-track is an original composition, though 'Cali Mist' is spontaneously improvised. Iverson occasionally sounds out of touch with the rest of the group, but he plays well when he clicks into action and the closing read of 'Nefertiti' is superb.

The second record is more assured and assimilates its pop and rock material (Fiona Apple, Radiohead) more comfortably. 'Idioteque' is a highlight. Elsewhere, Grenadier tries to keep the 'jazz' quotient up with a stunning 'Speak Low', but the real coup of the record is 'What Is This Unanswered Question?', which might be a hybrid of Charles Ives and 'What Is This Thing Called Love?'. Clever and brilliantly done as a kind of abstract fusion. Again, there are touches of free jazz and open improvisation, but more securely melded to the written charts elsewhere. Less need, perhaps, to show off versatility on a second record. Rosenwinkel's a huge asset. Things look bright.

Drew Gress (born 1959)

DOUBLE BASS, PEDAL STEEL GUITAR, ELECTRONICS

He's been associated with such contemporary luminaries as Dave Douglas and Don Byron. His own projects are resolutely inventive.

 Heyday Soul Note 121314 Gress; David Binney (as); Ben Monder (g); Kenny Wollesen (d). 98.

 Spin & Drift Premonition 90752 Gress; Tim Berne (as, bs); Uri Caine (p); Tom Rainey (d). 6/00.

(*) 7 Black Butterflies / * The Irrational Numbers Premonition 558709 / 90775 Gress; Ralph Alessi (t); Tim Berne (as, bs); Craig Taborn (p, ky); Tom Rainey (d). 9/04.

Apart from a couple of themes from Bartók's Mikrokosmos, all of the material on Heyday is by Gress himself and reveals a complex musical personality that's hard to pin down. The bassist can sound fairly jagged – to borrow an adjective from one of his groups – but can also write and play very sweetly indeed, and the pedal steel (heard on Spin & Drift) is an unexpected instrument to find in an avant-garde jazz setting. Or it was.

'Devil In The Details' and 'Beeline – Back In The Cage' are big, ambitious pieces, but there's nothing on this rather to suggest the technical experimentalism of Spin & Drift. Replacing guitar with piano enriches the harmonic possibilities, Gress provides a running commentary in the interstices, and he employs multi-tracking on the opening 'Disappearing, Act I', in which Berne becomes a whole saxophone choir. It's an amazing, arresting start and though nothing else on the record quite comes up to that pitch of drama, it guarantees you keep listening. Caine is instinctively responsive to Gress's polytonality. Tunes occasionally drift in the direction of Dave Douglas's post-post-modal jazz, but there are also classical references and some more straightforward grooves.

The most recent pair are terrific. Gress sits at the centre of the ensemble, Taborn is a master at creating outsize environments for his colleagues, and Rainey drives things along powerfully. The leader's whispery electronics add vivid atmosphere to The Irrational Numbers. Berne's on alto exclusively, and the drummer is positively torrential. It's the finer of the two, but as a pair they're pretty indispensable.

Alan Gresty / Brian White

TRUMPET / CLARINET

Purveyors of uncomplicated but not unsubtle Dixieland and ragtime.

 The Bobcats Recaptured Jazzology JCD 258 Gresty; White; Geoff Cole (tb); Goff Dubber (ts, cl); Alan Root, Jonathan Vinten (p); Malcolm Harrison, Jim Forey (g); Tony Bagot (b); Geoff Downs (d). 98.

 Muted Trumpet & Slide Trombone Lake LACD 131 As above, except omit Vinten, Harrison, Forey, Downs; add Colin Miller (d). 99.

 'Muggsy Remembered': In Concert – Volumes 1–3 Jazzology 116 / 200 / 316 As above, except omit Miller; add Graham Scriven (d). 05.

'Big Noise From Winnetka' and 'March Of The Bobcats' from the first of these should be enough to establish the Gresty–White axis as impassioned preservers of the spirit of Dixieland. And it's spiritedness that counts on these records. The playing is good but relies on energy much of the time. The Muggsy Spanier tribute palls rather quickly as a cycle of records (too much?), but track by track it's perfectly enjoyable. The two lead guys don't have particularly distinctive voices, but Dubber and, on his day, Cole are more intriguing players.

Al Grey (1925–2000)

TROMBONE, VOICE

Joined Benny Carter after military service, then was with various groups until a key period with Count Basie in 1957–61. Afterwards freelanced, often with old friends Jimmy Forrest and Buddy Tate.

 Snap Your Fingers Verve 0602498603079 Grey; David Burns, Donald Byrd (t); Billy Mitchell (ts); Floyd Morris, Herbie Hancock (p); Bobby Hutcherson (vib); Herman Wright (b); Eddie Williams (d). 1–2/62.

He'll always be remembered as a Basie sideman, even though he spent more years away from the Count's band. His humorous, fierce style of improvising is more in the tradition of such colleagues as saxophonist Lockjaw Davis than in the more restrained trombone lineage, though he did rather assume Vic Dickenson's mantle as the great trombone individualist, and he was especially accomplished with the plunger mute.

This brings back a little-known Argo album made just after he left Basie. The first five tracks are a studio sextet date, tightly arranged around gospel and blues themes; the next three are from a live date at Birdland, where Byrd and Hancock came in for Burns and Morris, although neither is featured much. The surprise presence here is Hutcherson, in a very early appearance, who gets quite a bit of space. Grey's solos are in a rather more modern line than his Basie work would have suggested. It's a satisfying time-waster rather than a great record.

 Ain't That Funk For You Black & Blue 974 Grey; Arnett Cobb (ts); Ray Bryant (p); John Duke (b); J. C. Heard (d). 77.

A typical B&B date by visiting Americans: Cobb and Grey make a great front line and this kind of bluesy situation is catnip for Bryant, too. Like the earlier record, it's pleasing but hardly essential.

(*) Night Train Revisited Storyville STCD 8293 Grey; Jimmy Forrest (ts); Shirley Scott (p); John Duke (b); Bobby Durham (d). 7/78.

 Al Grey–Jesper Thilo Quintet Storyville STCD 4136 Grey; Jesper Thilo (ts); Ole Kock Hansen (p); Hugo Rasmussen (b); Alex Riel (d). 8/86.

The 1978 session catches a good band – at a very unfashionable time for this kind of jazz – enjoying themselves in a few sets from Rick's Café Américain in Chicago. Forrest and Grey sound terrific and they get rambunctious support from Shirley and the rhythm section. The later Storyville session, made on one of his many European sojourns, is typical of his usual manner: brisk mainstream with some sterling blues-playing, although Thilo and the rhythm section accommodate rather than compel Grey into his best form.

 The New Al Grey Quintet Chiaroscuro CD 305 Grey; Mike Grey (tb); Joe Cohn (t, g); J. J. Wiggins (b); Bobby Durham (d). 5/88.
(*) Al Meets Bjarne Gemini GM 62 Grey; Bjarne Nerem (ts); Norman Simmons (p); Paul West (b); Gerryck King (d). 8/88.
The quintet date for Chiaroscuro features a 'family band': Mike is Al's son, Joe is Al Cohn's son, and J. J. Wiggins is pianist Gerald's offspring. Although the group sound a little rough and ready at times, and the absence of a pianist is probably not quite as useful a freedom as it might have been, it's a very entertaining record. Mike is almost as ripe a soloist as his father, and the sound of the two trombones together leads to some agreeable moments; Joe Cohn's playing is equally spirited, and Wiggins and Durham sound fine. The set-list includes some standards and a few pleasingly obscure choices, such as Hank Mobley's 'Syrup And Biscuits' and Art Farmer's 'Rue Prevail'.

The session with Nerem was cut on a visit to Norway. The title-blues is almost indecently ripe, and 'I'm In The Mood For Love' is taken at surely the slowest tempo on record, but there are meaty blowing tunes as well and Nerem, a player in the swaggering swing tradition that Grey enjoys, has the measure of the trombonist. Outstandingly good studio sound.

 Centerpiece: Live At The Blue Note Telarc 83379 Grey; Harry 'Sweets' Edison (t); Jerome Richardson (ts); Junior Mance (p); Ben Brown (b); Bobby Durham (d). 3/95.
A fine night (actually, the best of three) from the old fellows. Richardson is strangely muted, in his playing and in the mix, but Mance is another near-ideal pianist for Al, and Sweets was still doing remarkable things at this juncture, even if his chops are questionable. It's by no means an over-predictable set. 'Lester Leaps In' is there, along with some Basie-era stuff, but who programmes Barry Harris's 'Nascimento'? Ironically, this is Richardson's best moment, a neat flute solo, oddly reminiscent of Frank Wess on the same horn. Great fun, all round.

Also, in brief:

 Fab Capri 74038-2. 2/90.
Self-consciously produced round Grey, with too many guessable routines.

 Christmas Stocking Stuffer Capri 74039. 8 & 9/90.
We like Christmas albums and Al's is a beauty: warm, funny, utterly musical.

 Live At The Floating Jazz Festival Chiaroscuro 313. 10/90.
A busy year, so he deserved a little autumn sun.

 Matzoh And Grits Arbors ARCD 19167. 4/96.
Al seemed ageless, even when he was playing the sly old man, but the others here – Joe Cohn (g) and Bobby Durham (d) apart – are pretty ordinary.

Francine Griffin

VOCAL

She sang with many of the bop and post-bop greats, but somehow eluded fame until the '90s.

* The Song Bird Delmark DE512 Griffin; Art Hoyle (t); Paul McKee (tb); Hank Ford, Ed Petersen, Mike Smith (sax); Willie Pickens, Brad Williams (p); John Whitfield (b); Wilbur Campbell, George Fludas, Mike Raynor (d). 4/91, 10/98.
Ms Griffin graced the jazz scene quietly for many years before being recorded. Pointless to dwell about might-have-beens, and somewhat insulting to value her solely for who she sang with in the past – the list includes Charlie Parker, Miles Davis and Eric Dolphy – for this is a wonderfully accomplished vocal album, perhaps a little over-styled and professional in the accompaniments but consistently lifted by Griffin's warm voice, brilliant bop phrasing and ability to deliver a quieter song, like her lament on 'I Remember Clifford' (she probably does), with intense emotion. The upbeat stuff – 'Anthropology', 'Will You Still Be Mine?' – bespeak her years of experience and there's a certain frustration in not being able to hear this great voice evolve and develop over time. This, though, is a precious arrival.

Johnny Griffin (1928-2008)

TENOR SAXOPHONE

Born in Chicago, the Little Giant was part of the first bebop generation, but only found his true voice in the '50s, often in partnership with Eddie 'Lockjaw' Davis. He spent some time in Europe in the '60s but has enjoyed a resurgence back home.

 Johnny Griffin Tenor Argo 624 Griffin; Junior Mance (p); Wilbur Ware (b); Buddy Smith (d). 56.
 Introducing Johnny Griffin Blue Note 46536 Griffin; Wynton Kelly (p); Curly Russell (b); Max Roach (d). 4/56.
 A Blowing Session Blue Note 99009 Griffin; Lee Morgan (t); John Coltrane, Hank Mobley (ts); Wynton Kelly (p); Paul Chambers (b); Art Blakey (d). 5/57.
 The Congregation Blue Note CDP 789383 Griffin; Sonny Clark (p); Paul Chambers (b); Kenny Dennis (d). 10/57.
This is the period when Griffin's youthful rep as the fastest tenor on the block was made official. The Argo disc – albeit slight in duration at just 26 minutes – is an ideal place to start. Griffin's approach is unexpectedly tinged with bebop, notably on Wilbur Ware's 'Bee-Ees', but the dominant impression is of a player soaked in the blues. 'I Cried For You' is delicate enough to prompt some momentary puzzlement as to who might be playing, though there are some giveaway phrases there as well. 'Satin Wrap' is Johnny's first recorded masterpiece, a headlong solo packed with shrewd invention.

The first Blue Note session was made some weeks later (Griffin had already made a few sides for Okeh three years previously) and again he has a piano-player who knows how to play the blues. 'The Way You Look Tonight' and 'Cherokee' are both CD bonuses and well worth having, but the real triumph is the closing version of 'Lover Man', a vintage reading of a great song.

In the company of Coltrane and Mobley, on the second Blue Note session, he rattles through 'The Way You Look Tonight' like some love-on-the-run hustler. Only Trane seems inclined to serenade, and it's interesting to speculate how the track might have sounded had they taken it at conventional ballad tempo. 'All The Things You Are' begins with what sounds like Reveille from Wynton Kelly and then lopes off with almost adolescent awkwardness. This was a typical Griffin strategy. For much of his most productive period Griffin more or less bypassed ballad-playing and only really adjusted his idiom to the medium and slower tempos as he aged. 'It's All Right With Me' is way over the speed limit, as if Griffin is trying to erase all memory of Sonny Rollins's magisterial reading of a deceptively difficult tune. Blowing Session is merely that, combative but ultimately dull.

He'd been recording with Art Blakey extensively, but the boss wasn't available for the Congregation session. Though relatively unknown, Dennis is quite good, though he finds the boss's tempo challenging in places. Clark's formidable on 'Main Spring' and the title-track and Griff ends his first big year on a high.

(*) Way Out Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1855 Griffin; Kenny Drew (p); Wilbur Ware (b); Philly Joe Jones (d). 2/58.
Recorded by Orrin Keepnews in New York City, this is a set that nevertheless breathes Chicago. In some respects, it isn't the 'person we knew'; Griffin sounds quieter, more measured and contained, and apart from a blaze through 'Cherokee' at high tempo he is content to play a much gentler set. Items like 'Where's Your Overcoat, Boy?' and 'Teri's Tune' centre on Ware's hugely expansive bass-line, with Drew in close proximity, leaving Griff to develop and embellish. 'Little John' is distinctive for Drew's solid chording and interchanges with the drummer. The rhythm section is flawless.

* Johnny Griffin Sextet Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1827 Griffin; Donald Byrd (t); Pepper Adams (bs); Kenny Drew (p); Wilbur Ware (b); Philly Joe Jones (d). 2/58.
A Chicago group par excellence, and a pity he didn't record more with this line-up. Everything seems magnified, and tunes like 'Stix' Trix' and 'Woody 'N' You' are gloriously pumped-up and brazen. They sound like they're just about to hit their proper stride when the record ends. Ware is magnificent as always, and Drew stretches himself ambitiously.

 The Little Giant Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 136 Griffin; Blue Mitchell (t); Julian Priester (tb); Wynton Kelly (p); Sam Jones (b); Albert 'Tootie' Heath (d). 8/59.
This isn't the only album bearing the diminutive saxophonist's nickname, so it might be worth checking that you're getting the right one. Heath finds it harder than Blakey to keep up, but the rhythm section gets it just about right, opening up the throttle for Griffin and two rather underrated brass soloists with just the right amount of brassiness in their tone to match the leader's.

 Studio Jazz Party Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1902 Griffin; Dave Burns (t); Norman Simmons (b); Vic Sproles (b); Ben Riley (d). 9/60.
The deal here was that the band would play live, not in a club, but before an invited studio audience. The atmosphere is loose and relaxed, and Babs Gonzales MCs in an attempt to authenticate the live atmosphere, but the freshness and novelty wear off very quickly after 'Good Bait' and 'There Will Never Be Another You'. The band is anonymous, but with Griff occupying the spotlight throughout that isn't so much of an issue.

(*) Lookin' At Monk Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1911 Griffin; Eddie 'Lockjaw' Davis (ts); Junior Mance (p); Larry Gales (b); Ben Riley (d). 2/61.
Something amiss here. Much as ragtime piano was ruined by a refusal to look even cursorily at Scott Joplin's intended tempi, so Griffin and Lockjaw race through a set of Monk compositions with lights blazing and tyres squealing, and with no real indication that they have a feel for a tune as delicately nuanced as 'Ruby, My Dear' or 'Well, You Needn't', let alone that old warhorse 'Round Midnight'. The two saxophones attack each tune like a pair of drag-racers, and there's not much more satisfaction to be had from the performances, unless you have an appetite for empty displays of virtuosity.

 The Kerry Dancers And Other Swinging Folk Original Jazz Classsics OJCCD 1952 Griffin; Barry Harris (p); Ron Carter (b); Ben Riley (d). 12/61, 1/62.
Griffin has long been interested in folk themes. Like Stan Getz, he favours the Scandinavian lullaby 'Hush-A-Bye', which figures here alongside some old British and Appalachian themes – 'The Londonderry Air (Danny Boy)', 'Green Grow The Rushes' and 'Black Is The Colour Of My True Love's Hair' – as well as original themes like '25½ Daze' and 'Oh, Now I See'. Griff's in spanking form, and some of his solos here rank with his very best for pace, logic and control. There's also warmth and humour in the playing, which is a nice relief from the headlong stuff.

 White Gardenia Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1877 Griffin; Ernie Royal, Clark Terry (t); Nat Adderley (c); Jimmy Cleveland, Paul Faulise, Urbie Green (tb); Ray Alonge (frhn); Barry Harris (p); Ron Carter, Barry Galbraith, Jimmy Jones (b); Ben Riley (d); strings. 7/61.
A smoothly orchestrated tribute to Lady Day that avoids pastiche. Griff is no Lester Young, and he isn't perhaps the obvious soloist for a gig of this sort. Even so, he makes a wonderful job of 'God Bless The Child' and 'Left Alone', though it's 'That Old Devil Called Love' which allows him to be most fully and obviously himself. The band is not so smooth as to blur some real jazz feel, and the strings are there mainly for depth of focus and harmony, rather than as emotional treacle.

 Live In London Harkit 024 Griffin; Stan Tracey (p); Malcolm Cecil (b); Jackie Dougan (d). 12/63.
Griff gives a brief interview on this one, recorded with the house band at Ronnie Scott's during a British visit. Americans were in mostly muted form following the assassination of John F. Kennedy, but Griffin's bustling, multi-note style is still very much to the fore, even if some of the lines seem a little down-turned and blued at the edges. Fine stuff, if not a great recording.

 In Copenhagen Storyville STCD 145 Griffin; Kenny Drew (p): Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen (b); Art Taylor (d). 64.
We like this a lot. 'What Is This Thing Called Love?' and 'Body And Soul' are good, but there are problems with the source tape. The playing is generally very good and the band is in cracking form on 'Wee Dot' and 'A Night In Tunisia', which begins with a strange, almost warlike chant. NHØP is his reliable and inventive self, and Taylor (credited as co-leader) delivers crackling cymbal figures and furious cross-rhythms that seem to mark a bridge between classic bebop and the complexities of the Coltrane quartet.

 Blues For Harvey Steeplechase SCCD 31004 Griffin; Kenny Drew (p); Mads Vinding (b); Ed Thigpen (d). 5/73.
Unaccountably omitted from our last edition, this fills in a gap in the discography and provides some characteristically vivid tenor-playing. The three long cuts, 'That Party Upstairs', 'Soft and Furry' and 'Blues For Harvey', are delivered by a band clearly stoked and in sympathy with the others' approach. It must count as one of Drew's best performances of the period, and Thigpen swings his socks off.

* Bush Dance Galaxy 95004 Griffin; George Freeman (g); Sam Jones (b); Albert 'Tootie' Heath (d); Kenneth Nash (perc). 10/78.
Distinguished by long, exploratory versions of 'A Night In Tunisia' and 'Lover Man', this is one of Griffin's best records from the period. The guitar accompaniment, from Von's brother, opens up the harmony and offers Griffin more space to develop his ideas. Certainly this is not the headlong rush one associates with him. Originals like 'The Jamfs Are Coming' boot along at an extravagant clip, but the mood is more thoughtful in the main. Jones and Heath are expert collaborators, but Nash's contributions are a revelation, adding more than colour.

(*) The Return Of The Griffin Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1882 Griffin; Ronnie Mathews (p); Ray Drummond (b); Keith Copeland (d). 10/78.
Griffin returned without ever really having been away. The 1978 album was the product of his first visit to the USA since 1963. His style of playing had been at something of a discount for a time, and the Galaxy recording was intended to revive his fortunes. Mathews is a bright and responsive accompanist, and 'A Monk's Dream' and 'Autumn Leaves' are both strong performances; a slightly altered melody statement on the latter gives it a wry ambiguity. Copeland has never been a highly regarded player, except by other musicians, and this is further proof of his considerable powers.

 Catharsis! Storyville 8306 Griffin; Kenny Drew (p); Jens Melgaard (b); Ole Streenberg (d). 00.
This only appeared in 2000. It's every bit as good as In Copenhagen, though one or two of the tracks – notably 'Slukefter Blues' and 'Hush-A-Bye' – are unnecessarily extended. 'Rhythm-A-Ning', though, is brisk and evocative. Drew isn't having one of his very best days and may be held back a bit by the second-string rhythm section. But a good reflection of both the front-men in their Scandinavian fastness, and 'Isfahan' is just delightful.

 In And Out Dreyfus FDM 36610 Griffin; Martial Solal (p). 6–7/99.
These two old stagers are a near-perfect match, able to balance laconic power with genuine romanticism. The opening and closing tracks are 'You Stepped Out of a Dream' and Monk's 'Well, You Needn't' and both are magnificent. Little of the rest matches up, but the playing is good and Solal's grouchy delivery is a perfect foil for the newly laid-back Griff. 'Hey, Now' is crackerjack, but one might reasonably look for a spot more variety.

 Johnny Griffin And Steve Grossman Quintet Dreyfus FDM 36615 Griffin; Steve Grossman (ss, ts); Michael Weiss (p); Pierre Michelot (b); Alvin Queen (d). 00.
Nine hard-blowing tunes from the co-led quintet. Grossman lends the sound some much-needed variety and texture, doubling on soprano. Queen dispenses cheerfully manic energy, playing at the kind of pace Griff these days rarely attains. Johnny's 'Waltzswing' and Gigi Gryce's 'Nica's Tempo' are two of the highlights of an album that has delivered most of its promise before halfway. The remaining tracks are conventional, even trite, and only Grossman's intelligence and ability to vary pace, tone and attack save it from tedium.

Also, in brief:

 The Big Soul-Band Original Jazz Classics OJC 485. 5–6/60.
A little like standing in a high wind. Griffin wasn't the most subtle of bandleaders but he knew how to make a band swing.

 Change Of Pace Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1922. 2/61.
It attempted to do what it said on the box, but he'd always been capable of it. This just stretches the point.

(*) Tough Tenor Favourites Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1861. 2/62.
A generic two-tenors duel with Lockjaw: catnip to some, a headache for most.

 Pisces Original Jazz Classics OJC 1104. 5/62.
Co-fronted by Eddie 'Lockjaw' Davis (ts), but oddly they don't play together and stick mostly to ballads. A curiosity.

 Grab This! Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1942. 6/62.
Effective soul-jazz, abetted by organist Paul Bryant.

 Do Nothing 'Til You Hear From Me Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1908. 63.
With Monk Montgomery on acoustic bass (rarely) and brother Buddy on piano and vibes. The Ellington classic is a standout track.

 Live At The Jazzhus Montmartre, Copenhagen: Volumes 1 & 2 DA Music 1047 / 1048. 7/72.
Griffin swoops on the material with an almost delinquent energy. Kenny Drew (p), NHØP (b) and Tootie Heath (d) man the barricades.

 Blues For Harvey /  The Jamfs Are Coming Steeplechase SCCD 31004 / Timeless SJP 121. 7/73; 12/75, 10/77.
These mark something of a low-point in a generally even output. Numbed solos and questionable material on Blues For Harvey, and an absence of chemistry with Rein de Graaff (p) on Jamfs.

 Johnny Griffin And The Great Danes Stunt STUCD2012. 7/96.
Not Griff and a troupe of musical hounds but a live set from Molde with a fine Scandinavian rhythm section. He's forthright on 'Just Friends', achingly delicate on 'All The Things You Are'.

 Close Your Eyes Minor Music 801085. 2/00.
A delicately nuanced set of duets with Horace Parlan (p), both on top form and intimately recorded in Hamburg.

Frank Griffith (born 1959)

TENOR SAXOPHONE

Grew up in Eugene, Oregon, studied at the Manhattan School of Music and with Bob Brookmeyer and in recent years has been based in England.

(*) The Suspect Hep 2077 Griffith; Tom Harrell, Chris Rogers (t, flhn); Joel Weiskopf (p); John Hart (g); James Genus (b); Billy Drummond (d). 11/90.
 'Live' Ealing Jazz Festival 2000 Hep 2081 Griffith; Henry Lowther, Steve Fishwick (t); Malcolm Earle Smith (tb); Bob Martin (as); Duncan Lamont Jr (bs); Tom Cawley (p); Dominick Howles (b); Matt Fishwick (d). 8/00.
 The Coventry Suite 33 Records 33JAZZ112 As above, except omit Smith, Lamont, Howles; add Adrian Fry (tb); Mick Foster (bs); Gareth Lockrane (f); Dave Chamberlain (b); Trudy Kerr (v). 03.
Label boss Alastair Robertson's coup was to team Griffith up with a top-notch rhythm section and with Tom Harrell on the first four tracks. Not to do down Rogers, but Harrell's genius makes the record. His solo on the first cut, otherwise marked by a brilliant exchange between Genus and Drummond, is the first inkling that something special is taking place. On the slower 'Afterthoughts' it's Hart, also a Hep artist, who catches the attention with a smooth but thoughtful solo, somewhat in the manner of Philip Catherine. Griffith's own statement on 'Afterthoughts' is attractive enough, but sandwiched between Hart and Harrell on flugelhorn he has little chance to shine. Frank gets stronger as the session continues and by the final cut, 'Ricochet', he's in blazing form, but his gifts seem to lie more in the direction of writing and arranging than as a soloist. That's borne out strongly on the live set, which features a 'Birth Of The Cool'-proportioned band and some very inventive arrangements. Apart from 'The Barnes Bull', which closes the set, all the themes are by other hands, but Griffith's voicings are infinitely subtle. The veteran Lowther is on spanking form and on 'Save Your Love For Me', a rare old Buddy Johnson tune, he delivers an almost perfect solo. Like Griffith, altoist Martin is now based in Britain; he shines on 'Young And Foolish'. Other tracks include Blue Mitchell's Carib-funky 'Funji Mama', Gil Evans's drum-centred 'Gone' (originally written for Philly Joe Jones, but here featuring Matt Fishwick) and Jimmy Deuchar's superb 'Here We Are'. Again, Griffith's strength seems to lie in leadership rather than saxophone-playing. The Coventry Suite is full of engaging moments and some excellent playing by the Nonet stalwarts, but there's a feeling that the music has stalled and hasn't yet found a productive new direction.

Henry Grimes (born 1935)

DOUBLE BASS

The Philadelphian was a key figure in the '60s avant-garde, working with Albert Ayler, Cecil Taylor and many others. He left New York in 1967 and dropped from view; some believed he had died. In 2002, Grimes was found by a social worker and jazz fan in LA. He had suffered unspecified mental problems. Gifted an instrument by a latter-day disciple, William Parker, he returned to playing.

 Henry Grimes Trio ESP 1026 Grimes; Perry Robinson (cl); Tom Price (d). 12/65.

 Live At The Kerava Jazz Festival Ayler AYLCD 028 Grimes; David Murray (ts, bcl); Hamid Drake (d). 6/04.

The only record of Grimes's 'first' career was a typical ESP date. It isn't a particularly distinguished set, though interesting for a first view of Robinson and for some strong solo statements from the leader.

There could hardly have been a more appropriate imprint for the comeback album. Grimes was fondly remembered for his work with Albert Ayler; one of the poignant sidebars to Henry's first interview after being rediscovered was that he didn't know Albert was dead. This live date from Finland suggests that 30 years of inactivity haven't done his chops any serious harm. His solo on the opening 'Spin' has the same rumbling power he always conjured (something not much in evidence on the ESP). Drake is the composer of the second piece, 'Eighty Degrees', and these are then followed by two shorter pieces, Murray's perennial 'Flowers For Albert' and another Grimes original, 'Blues For Savanah'. The cover painting of a mysterious sunlit ship on deep, dark water speaks volumes about Henry's career.

Tiny Grimes (1916–89)

PIANO, VOICE

A four-string guitar-player, he was a sensation in the Tatum trio and then elsewhere in NY clubs of the '40s. Later he tried his luck with rock'n'roll and after illness returned to the festival circuit in the '70s and '80s.

 Tiny Grimes, 1944–1949 Classics 5048 Grimes; James Young (tb); Charlie Parker, Red Prysock (as); John Hardee (ts); George Kelly (p, cel); Clyde Hart, Marlowe Morris, Joe Springer (p); Lucille Dixon, Charles Isaacs (b); Clyde Butts (b, v); Ed Nicholson, Sonny Payne, Jerry Potter, Harold West (d). 9/44–49.

Fame with Tatum spurred Grimes into a solo career, first of all with a group featuring Charlie Parker, later with an outfit called the Rocking Highlanders which featured another altoist, Red Prysock. This unvarnished compilation brings together all the material he recorded under his own name over the period, including a date for Blue Note, still very much in its R&B phase. The tracks with Bird are obviously of interest, but 'Red Cross' is exceptional and some of the later cuts, including versions of 'See See Rider' and the notorious 'Annie Laurie', are worth having as well. One of the best of the early vocals is 'Romance Without Finance'. A nice introduction to a singular talent.

 Callin' The Blues Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 191 Grimes; J. C. Higginbotham (tb); Eddie 'Lockjaw' Davis (ts); Ray Bryant (p); Wendell Marshall (b); Osie Johnson (d). 7/58.

 Blues Groove Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 817 Grimes; Coleman Hawkins, Musa Kaleem (ts); Ray Bryant (p); Earl Wormack (b); Teagle Fleming Jr (d). 57.

 Tiny In Swingville Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1796 Grimes; Jerome Richardson (ts, bs, f); Ray Bryant (p); Wendell Marshall (b); Art Taylor (d). 8/59.

One of the midwives of popular music, Tiny attended bebop's first contractions (the earliest of the legendary Charlie Parker Savoy sessions were under his leadership) and then, in the early '50s, slapped rock'n'roll firmly on the bottom with his kilted (sic!) Rocking Highlanders. In Swingville dispenses with the theatricals. Though there's still a novelty element to the music, which includes 'Annie Laurie' (hoots, mon!) and 'Frankie And Johnnie', frontman Richardson is a gutsy player and Grimes himself glides through some parallel sections that would do Kenny Burrell proud. The earlier Callin' The Blues has the improbable pairing of Higginbotham and Davis for the front line, while Blues Groove summons the great Hawkins to the studio (as well as Kaleem, a Blakey sideman back in 1947). The material is either blues or obvious standards, and nothing feels very substantial, but Grimes likes being in charge and he gets sterling work out of all hands.

(*) Some Groovy Fours Black & Blue 874 Grimes; Lloyd Glenn (p); Roland Lobligeois (b); Panama Francis (d). 5/74.

Grimes enjoyed a resurgence in the '70s. 'Lester Leaps In' is proof he was always more than a novelty act. He still has great chops and his soloing is often quite sophisticated, even on a basic blues. There is other, better material from this late period (including Profoundly Blue for Muse), but sadly it's all deleted.

Also, in brief:

 And Friends /  And His Rocking Highlanders: Volume 1 /  Cat And The Fiddle; Volume 2 Collectables COL 5321, 5304, 5309. 42–49.

Three nice packages of early Tiny and Highlanders stuff. Not well documented or packaged, but great fun.

 Complete: Volume 1 – 1944–46 / ... Volume 2 – 1947–1950 / ... Volume 3 – 1950–1954 / ... Volume 4 – 1950–1954 / ... Volume 5 – 1950–1954 Blue Moon 6005–6009. 44–54.

A nicely compiled sequence of discs, all available separately.

 Tiny Grimes, 1951–1954 Classics 5146. 51–11/54.

This is mostly pop stuff with the Highlanders and with guest appearances by Screamin' Jay Hawkins and others.

Danny Grissett

PIANO

Born in LA, he now works the other side of the continent, a sideman of growing reputation.

(*) Promise Criss Cross 1281. Grissett; Vicente Archer (b); Kendrick Scott (d). 12/05.

The title seems too self-conscious, but Grissett then delivers an interpretation of 'Moment's Notice' that immediately makes you sit up. He's actually too talented to be merely promising. Originals like 'Cambridge Place' and the tough-minded 'On The Edge' are already mature writing. The group interaction on that opening Coltrane cut suggests a group that work together thoughtfully and supportively. A fantastic debut; the sequel will be worth waiting for.

Brian Groder

TRUMPET

Son of swing-era musicians, he's a distinguished teacher and writer.

(*) Torque Latham 5106 Groder; Sam Rivers (ts, ss, f); Doug Matthews (b); Anthony Cole (d). 4/05.

Groder has a few more CDs out, but this one stands out and not just because the greatest octogenarian saxophonist on the planet is involved. The trumpeter has a wonderful touch with a theme – not unlike Rivers's own – and they're delivered in a headlong rush of relatively miniature tracks here. That would be frustrating, were they not so intriguing. When it does stretch out, as on 'Involution', which Groder co-wrote with JoAnne Brackeen, he's a compelling solo voice as well, though inevitably he shares top billing with Sam, who's glorious on soprano for the improvised 'Tragic Magic'. A delight from start to finish.

Don Grolnick (1947–96)

PIANO, KEYBOARDS

One of the most creative figures on the American studio scene of the '80s and '90s, he succumbed early to lymphoma.

 The Complete Blue Note Recordings Blue Note 57197-2 2CD Grolnick; Randy Brecker (t); Barry Rogers, Steve Turre (tb); Michael Brecker, Joe Lovano (ts); Marty Ehrlich, Bob Mintzer (bcl); Dave Holland (b); Bill Stewart, Peter Erskine (d). 92.

 Medianoche Warners 946287-2 Grolnick; Michael Brecker (ts); Dave Valentin (f); Mike Mainieri (vib); Andy Gonzalez (b); Don Alias, Steve Berrios, Milton Cardona (perc). N.D.

(*) The London Concert Fuzzy Music PEPCD008 Grolnick; Randy Brecker (t); Robin Eubanks (tb); Marty Ehrlich (as, bcl); Michael Brecker (ts); Peter Washington (b); Peter Erskine (d); Don Alias (perc). 1/95.

Grolnick's standing on the studio circuit obscured his own music to some extent, but these very fine records ought to have a wider hearing. Grolnick's two Blue Note albums, Weaver Of Dreams and Nighttown, have been repackaged as a two-disc set. These are superb sessions, utilizing a starry personnel with exemplary finesse, sharing out duties with democratic insight but letting each man test the weight of the music. Grolnick might have been saving his best writing for the second date, since the compelling 'Heart Of Darkness', for one, cuts anything on his previous records, good though they are, and the brilliant update on 'What Is This Thing Called Love' is a recurring surprise. Brecker, Turre and Lovano play to their best, but it's Ehrlich's bass clarinet which is the key voice in the ensemble. Grolnick himself plays shrewd composer's piano as the icing on a considerable cake.

Medianoche reshapes some of Grolnick's material (a new 'Heart Of Darkness') in a more Latinized environment. The three percussionists and the light timbres of flute and vibes give the music a deceptively slight and sunny air. Actually, there is a good deal more going on than at first seems apparent, with Grolnick finding all sorts of harmonic and textural nuances in the situation. Brecker, almost the faithful disciple at this point, plays some gracefully measured solos, in contrast to his breast-beating on The London Concert. This is a fine souvenir, nicely recorded on a British tour but without the finesse of the studio records; even so, a momentous delivery of five Grolnick classics.

Nicolai Gromin

GUITAR

Russian-born, he's been based in Denmark since 1979.

 Blue In Green Stunt STUCD19709 Gromin; Jesper Lundgaard (b); Jesper Elén , Alex Riel (d). 97.

As the title suggests, Gromin's main influences are Miles Davis and Bill Evans. He has a lovely, flowing articulation, with too many guitaristic clichés, which makes this music sound very much like transcribed piano material. That said, it's also firmly idiomatic and beautifully executed by all concerned.

Richard Grossman (1937–92)

PIANO

Though he recorded little, an influential figure in the West Coast tradition of free improvisation with a growing posthumous reputation.

 Trio In Real Time Nine Winds NWCD 0134 Grossman; Ken Filiano (b); Alex Cline (d). 10/89–1/90.

 In The Air Nine Winds NWCD 0146 As above, except add Vinny Golia (sno, ss, bcl); John Carter (cl). 10–12/89.

(*) Even Your Ears /  Where The Sky Ended hatOLOGY 515 / 541 Grossman; Ken Filiano (b); Alex Cline (d). 1/90–3/92; 12/89–3/92.

Grossman's death silenced a valuable piano voice. He managed the rare feat of distilling structure and freedom, lyricism and astringency, in a tough yet profoundly sensitive way. His playing from moment to moment evokes most of the post-Taylor masters without ever sounding much like any of them, and he secures a very fine interplay with Filiano and the virtuosic Cline, who really does run the gamut from whispered skin-strokes to screaming clatter. The trio album on Nine Winds revises piano trio dimensions, taking in a pulsing, Evans-like quietness along with the more customary energetics, ideas appearing and evolving with formidable speed. Seventy minutes are sustained here without much trouble. The quintet date is even longer and is cleverly programmed around one theme, an opening improvisation, a very long sequence of overlapping solos and a sardonic encore entitled 'Henny Youngman's Bird Imitation'.

The hatOLOGY discs are survivals from various Californian concerts and are a valuable addition to a meagre discography.

The first is the superior one. 'Fresh Vegetables' and 'The Switchbacks At Big Sur' are piano solos which underline his originality. A flinty, decisive touch and a reluctance to use much sustain spell out how prodigious his imagination was, each phrase a complete entity while still a building-block in a bigger conception. Cline is for once a bit too loud and fierce on the trio tracks, but these are still way, way ahead of most piano/bass/drums situations, as the supernal glow of 'Rubidoux Twilight' suggests. On Where The Sky Ended, 'Afternoon Full Of Hummingbirds' is a typically fascinating solo, laden with Grossman's unique harmonic thinking, and the delicate piano/drums tracery of 'Green Of The East' matches it. The long trio piece 'Like Godzilla' is less interesting, and the recording quality is far from terrific.

Steve Grossman (born 1951)

SOPRANO AND TENOR SAXOPHONES

New Yorker Grossman's precocious start found him playing with Miles Davis as early as 1969. He worked with different leaders during the '70s and has operated mostly as a freelance since, often basing himself in Europe.

 Born At The Same Time Owl 9847684 Grossman; Michel Graillier (p); Patrice Caratini (b); Daniel Humair (d). 77.
 Love Is The Thing Red RR 123189 Grossman; Cedar Walton (p); David Williams (b); Billy Higgins (d). 5/85.
(*) Bouncing With Mr A.T. Dreyfus FDM 36579-2 Grossman; Tyler Mitchell (b); Art Taylor (d). 10/89.
 My Second Prime Red 123246-2 Grossman; Fred Henke (p); Gilbert Rovere (b); Charles Bellonzi (d). 12/90.

Grossman was working with Miles Davis in his teens, and it's tempting to suggest that his career peaked too early. He has a prodigious command of the saxophone and a fearless energy, which puts him in the same class as Michael Brecker and Bill Evans, but a sometimes faceless facility can also make him appear as just another hired-gun Coltrane/Rollins disciple. Right from the start on the reissued Owl, he peels off suitably muscular solos against a conventional post-bop rhythm section. Bouncing With Mr A.T. could have been a great one: trouble is, the sound – a club in Genoa – mistreats both Mitchell and Taylor. Grossman sounds terrific here, and his beautiful treatment of 'Soultrane' should be heard. The first of the Reds (though see below) is led off with a bold 'Naima' and follows up with more Trane references, including an original called '415 Central Park West'. The other is a grandstanding festival set, with the time of year marked by Grossman's choice of 'The Christmas Song'. His tone has a dusky, almost chargrilled feel, and some improvisations of expansive power, but the rhythm section merely marks time.

 Do It Dreyfus FDM 191032-2 Grossman; Barry Harris (p); Reggie Johnson (b); Art Taylor (d). 4/91.
(*) I'm Confessin' Dreyfus FDM 36902 Grossman; Harold Land (ts); Fred Henke (p); Reggie Johnson (b); Jimmy Cobb (d). 6–7/92.
(*) Time To Smile Dreyfus FDM 36566-2 Grossman; Tom Harrell (t, flhn); Willie Pickens (p); Cecil McBee (b); Elvin Jones (d). 2/93.
 Quartet Dreyfus FDM 236602-2 Grossman; Michel Petrucciani (p); Andy McKee (b); Joe Farnsworth (d). 1/98.

Persistence made Grossman into an impressive character. For consistency, he's hard to beat, but if the sheer strength of his playing usually transcends banality, he seldom goes for broke either. The difference here is in the calibre of his accompanists. Do It is all heartland bebop – 'Cherokee', 'Dance Of The Infidels', 'Oblivion', 'Chi Chi' – possibly at Harris's request, though he doesn't seem quite at his best and it's Taylor's incisive work that stimulates Grossman into his best moments. The meeting with Land, which seems to have been reissued in 2007, is a more relaxed affair. The older man settles Grossman into an easier groove, and there's more palpable enjoyment in his playing. Time To Smile sets up a meeting with another great drummer, and with Harrell sitting in on some tracks and a smart set-list to work with, the music is mature and satisfying. Quartet was one of Petrucciani's last dates, and he brings a note of distinction to the event. So much so, actually, that Grossman himself sounds oddly heavy and even fatigued here and there, his solos often leading down some strange byways. 'Body And Soul' is positively laboured. Petrucciani shines as always, and even though he often plays more circumspectly than he would in a solo or trio situation, his solos are worth attention.

There seem to have been a couple of things on small labels since the turn of the decade, but they haven't come our way.

Also, in brief:

 Way Out East: Volumes 1 & 2 Red RR 121382 / 121383. 84.
Good trio date with Juni Booth (b) and Joe Chambers (d). Avoids a Trane-wreck, but steers it close.

Marty Grosz (born 1930)

GUITAR, BANJO, VOICE

Born in Berlin, he began making a name for himself as a rhythm guitarist and sometime group-leader in Chicago in the '50s, playing – and singing, and speaking – in an old-fashioned style that makes him a favourite on the club circuit.

(*) Sings Of Love And Other Matters Jazzology JCD-210 Grosz; Dan Barrett (c, tb); Dick Meldonian (ss, as, ts); Keith Ingham (p); Phil Flanigan (b). 5/86.
(*) Swing It! Jazzology JCD-180 Grosz; Peter Ecklund (t); Dan Barrett (tb); Bobby Gordon (cl); Loren Schoenberg (ts); Keith Ingham (p); Murray Wall (b); Hal Smith (d). 6–7/88.
 Songs I Learned At My Mother's Knee And Other Low Joints Jazzology JCD-220 Grosz; Randy Sandke (t); Peter Ecklund (c); Bob Pring, Joel Helleny (tb); Ken Peplowski (as, cl); Dick Meldonian (cl, ts); Keith Ingham (p); Greg Cohen (b); Chuck Riggs (d). 3–6/92.
(*) Keep A Song In Your Soul Jazzology JCD-250 Grosz; Peter Ecklund (c); Joel Helleny (tb); Bobby Gordon (cl); Dan Black (cl, as); Dan Levinson (as, Cmel); Scott Robinson (ts, bs, bsx); Chris Dawson, Keith Ingham (p); Greg Cohen (b); Arnie Kinsella, Hal Smith (d). 10/94.
(*) Ring Dem Bells Nagel Heyer 022 Grosz; Jon-Erik Kellso (t); Scott Robinson (cl, ss, bs); Martin Litton (p); Greg Cohen (b); Chuck Riggs (d). 2/95.
(*) Rhythm For Sale! Jazzology JCD-280 Grosz; Peter Ecklund (t, c); Dan Block (cl, as); Bobby Gordon (cl); Scott Robinson (ts, bs); Jack Stuckey (cl, as, bs); Vince Giordano (bsx, b); Pierre Calligaris (p); Keith Ingham (cel); Greg Cohen, Murray Wall (b); Hal Smith, Arnie Kinsella (d). 5/93–1/96.

Grosz has been industriously documenting hot and sweet tunes of prewar vintage on the basis that they don't write 'em like that any more. He is a master entertainer who takes everything – and nothing – seriously, so even the corniest relics in his set-list are usually funny and convincingly hot at the same time. His genuine affection for this kind of music takes it out of the museum bracket, and it is all performed with much aplomb. Grosz has assembled a favourite repertory of players, and some or all of them are guaranteed an appearance on all of these records. The hot, wistful Ecklund, the charming Gordon, the ineffable Barrett and the mysteriously versatile Robinson chime in with playing that has freshness and bloom.

The above discs are variously credited to the Orphan Newsboys, the Collectors Item Cats and Destiny's Tots. There aren't any bad Grosz records, just some which are superior to others. Swing It! is a shade hotter, and Songs I Learned At My Mother's Knee has the best title. Sings Of Love And Other Matters is fresh and Marty sings on most tracks, with his classic 'The English Blues' to round matters off. Ring Dem Bells is completely fired up from the opening 'Rose Of The Rio Grande'. The occasionally restrained Robinson really lets himself go on the likes of 'Old Man Blues', Kellso plays livelier horn than he ever has, and Grosz seems to relish every moment. Keep A Song In Your Soul and Rhythm For Sale! include everything from 'Satan Takes A Holiday' to 'Sentimental Gentleman From Georgia'. Since Grosz never changes his act much, one could argue that this is starting to seem like a lot of records in a similar guise; on the other hand, one could say the same about Coltrane.

(*) At Bob Barnard's Jazz Party Nif Nuf 43/002 Grosz; Bob Barnard (c); John McCarthy (cl); Howard Cairns (b); Len Barnard (d). 4/99.
This live album (from St Kilda, Australia) is essential for Groszphiles, since it finds him solo on most tracks and enshrines a lot of his in-concert schtick – finally, a proper documenting of one of the premier jazz entertainers. Barnard and friends join in on a few tracks and there's a new version of the immortal 'English Blues'.

 Chasin' The Spots Jump 1228 Grosz; Jon-Erik Kellso (t); Randy Reinhart (tb, c); Daniel Block (cl, as); Scott Robinson (sax); Vine Giordano (bsx, b); Arnie Kinsella (d). 2–6/04.
If you remember 'Whispering Grass', 'Swing High, Swing Low', 'My Prayer' or 'When My Dreamboat Comes Home', you'll warm to this evocation of the Ink Spots. It's not a pastiche album, just a gentle tribute by a variety of personnels, anchored on Marty's vocals. Jump do interesting records, often deceptive in content and approach, and this one is much more musical, much less a nostalgia item than you might expect.

(*) And His Hot Combination Arbors ARCD 19319 Grosz; Jon-Erik Kellso (t); Ken Peplowski (cl, ts); Scott Robinson (sax); James Dapogny (p, c); Greg Cohen, Vince Giordano (b); Arnie Kinsella (d, bells). 2/05.
Not much in the way of 'concept' here, just a delicious blowing album in the company of like-minded players, presented as a welcome party to the new label. Arbors do this kind of thing better than anyone else. Marty offers long spoken introductions to 'Just A Gigolo' and 'English Blues'. Peplowski's in terrific form and Kellso eats up these occasions. Highlights? 'If It Ain't Love' and 'Life Begins When You're In Love' – who else is doing this stuff?

Also, in brief:

 Hooray For Bix! Good Time Jazz 10065-2. 12/57.
A rare documentation of his '50s gang, playing Bix tunes with youthful enthusiasm and not a great deal of finesse.

 Just For Fun! Nagel Heyer 039. 4/96.
More familiar standards than usual and some dodgy vocals (though not Marty's).

 Left To His Own Devices Jazzology JCD-330. 1–6/99.
Business as usual for Marty, but it's not really one of our favourites.

(*) Remembering Louis Jump JCD 12-25. 10/01.
With Kellso, Giordano, Peps and a Pops link, it's plain old jazz rep, but the gang play great.

Carl Grubbs (born 1944)

ALTO SAXOPHONE

Little-documented improviser who formerly worked as Grubbs Brothers with saxophonist brother Earl, who died young in 1989.

 Stepping Around The Giant CIMP 273 Grubbs; Odean Pope (ts); Chris Sullivan (b); Newman Taylor Baker (d). 7/02.
Grubbs has known some tough times: losing his brother, having to struggle to pay for an earlier recording date for Cobblestone, finding work that doesn't compromise his vision; but that's true of any creative musician and one shouldn't listen to his music in the light of hard-luck stories. This is a highly impressive date by a highly committed band. Both saxophonists shine on two versions of 'Sax Talk' and the striking title-piece, but there's an oddly slipshod feeling to the recording, less to do with CIMP's familiar approach than with the music itself, which seems to suggest grand schemes uncertainly founded and ambitious playing that doesn't always (Pope aside) come up to its own promise. One looks for more secure signs of Grubbs's ability.

George Gruntz (born 1932)

PIANO, BANDLEADER

Studied in his native Basle and Zurich, and worked in European obscurity – despite a spell with Phil Woods – until forming what in 1978 became the Concert Jazz Band.

(*) Sins 'N' Wins 'N' Funs TCB 96602 Full personnel unlisted. 3/81–4/95.
(*) Liebermann TCB 99452 Gruntz; Marvin Stamm, Alexander Sipiagin, Scott Wendholt, Matthieu Michel (t, flhn); Luis Bonilla, Clark Gayton (tb); Chris Hunter (as, ss, f); Sal Giorgianni (as, ts, f); Larry Schneider (ss, ts, f); Donny McCaslin (ts, f); Steffen Schorn (bs, bsx, bcl); Mike Richmond (b); John Riley (d). 11/98.
 Merryteria TCB 99502 As above, except omit Michel; add Kenny Rampton, Terell Stafford, Jens Winther (t, flhn); Ray Anderson, Art Baron (tb); Dave Bargeron (tb, euph); Earl McIntyre, Christoph Schweizer (btb); Raphael Wall (d). 3–11/98.
(*) Global Excellence TCB 21172 As above, except omit Stafford, Winther, Anderson, Baron, Schweizer, Schorn, Wall, Riley; add Matthieu Michel (t); Scott Robinson (bcl, bs, bsx, cbsx); Mark Egan (b); Danny Gottlieb (d). 12/01.
Gruntz cheerfully plunders various aspects of big-band tradition, but he has an unusual way of bridging the kind of freedoms one associates with, say, the Globe Unity Orchestra and the grand language of Ellington and Kenton. Perhaps the CJB is most like a liberated successor to the Clarke–Boland Big Band.

The group's not always easy to pin down on record, but these are reliable survivals. Sins 'N' Wins 'N' Funs collects tracks from some 15 years' worth of concerts, in New York, Rome, Israel, Tokyo and elsewhere. Although the collective personnel isn't listed, the soloists by themselves – from Eje Thelin and Sheila Jordan to Tim Berne and Seamus Blake – are testament to the kind of groups Gruntz has managed to put together down the years, the kind of wish-lists which even George Russell and Gil Evans couldn't have matched. As a record, it doesn't hang together but, as a jumble of entertaining bits and pieces, it's fine.

The dedicatee of Liebermann is the late Rolf Liebermann, composer and polymath, whose 1954 'Symphony For Jazz Ensemble' is the centrepiece of this set. Besides this, there are three new pieces and a version of Wayne Shorter's 'Footprints'. The band, recorded at the 1998 Berlin Jazz Festival, is in great heart. Among the soloists, none surpasses Stamm, usually deemed a pro's pro but rarely acknowledged as an improviser. A fine place to make the group's acquaintance.

As ever, the other two sets' appeal may depend on how much you take to Gruntz's composing and which of the soloists appeals. We slightly prefer Global Excellence, for Stamm's gilded playing in 'Two As One', the raving showcase for the tenor section in 'Steam Passage', and having Robinson get out his contrabass saxophone on 'Brain Play'. The earlier set doesn't slouch and Sipiagin's feature, 'Novgorod Bells', works well.

 Ringing The Luminator ACT 9751-2 Gruntz (p solo). 12/04.
A surprise solo set by Gruntz, one of a number of discs issued in ACT's new Piano Works series. While a little more sober than his big-band records, this follows an enjoyably eclectic course through his own originals and music from such writers as Monk, Gillespie, Frank Rosolino and even Andreas Vollenweider. The ensemble records cheerfully pillage jazz styles; George approaches the piano literature in much the same way.

 Tiger By The Tail TCB 26702 Gruntz; Franco Ambrosetti, Matthieu Michel, Kenny Rampton, Marvin Stamm (t); Dave Bargeron, Luis Bonilla, Gary Valente, Jack Walrath (tb); Earl McIntyre (btb); Howard Johnson (tba, bs); Sal Giorgianni, Chris Hunter, Dave Liebman, Donny McCaslin (reeds); Danny Gottlieb (d). 3/05.
If the title's intended to suggest that listening to this big band is like catching a big cat by the caudal appendage, it isn't quite that exciting, but Gruntz is never caught napping and this set of brisk charts – 'You Don't Know What Love Is' is the only standard – keeps going from soup to nuts, with 'So If Loves's A Triumph Of Illusion' as a sardonic afterthought. There are moments when the opening 'So: What (Serious Fun)' has some Gil-like gestures, though the three best tunes are by Stamm, Walrath and Liebman in the latter half of the set: theirs, but duly transformed by the wily watchmaker.

Also, in brief:

 Mental Cruelty: The 1960 Jazz Sountrack Atavistic Unheard Music 238. 60.
There's an enormously complicated story behind this; Barney Wilen (ts) and Kenny Clarke (d) star, but L'Ascenseur Pour L'Echafaud it ain't.

(*) Theatre ECM 815678-2. 7/83.
The programme is portentous – a long and rather worthy 'The Holy Grail Of Jazz And Joy' takes up the bulk of it – and the results disappointing.

Gigi Gryce (1927–83)

ALTO SAXOPHONE, FLUTE

Worked with Tadd Dameron and Lionel Hampton in 1953, then with Oscar Pettiford, the Jazz Lab Quintet and his own small group; but it was his writing which established his reputation. Drifted from sight in the early '60s and didn't record again.

 And The Jazz Lab Quintet Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1774 Gryce; Donald Byrd (t); Wade Legge (p); Wendell Marshall (b); Art Taylor (d). 2–3/57.

 Sayin' Somethin' Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1851 Gryce; Richard Williams (t); Richard Wyands (p); Reggie Workman (b); Mickey Roker (d). 3/60.

 The Hap'nin's / (*) The Rat Race Blues Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1868 / 081 As above, except omit Workman; add Julian Euell (b). 5/60; 6/60.
Joe Goldberg's liner-note for The Hap'nin's makes the point that Gryce's real talent was as a leader who catalysed talent in others. Of the many pieces he wrote for a variety of ambitiously proportioned projects – big not in numbers but in conception – the only ones which have really entered the jazz mainstream are 'Nica's Tempo' and, to a lesser extent, 'Speculation' and 'Minority'. Gryce was never a virtuosic player, but these sessions suggest that he was more interesting than is often supposed, and was certainly not a Bird copyist. His tone was darker and with a broader vibrato, the phrasing less supple but with an emphatic, vocal quality that carries over into his flute-playing. 'Laboratory' and 'workshop' have always been weasel terms, useful camouflage for the well-founded jazz tradition of rehearsing – or experimenting – at the public's expense. Gryce, though, was a genuine experimenter, even if a relatively modest one. He never stopped trying to find new colourations and new ways of voicing chords, and the set from 1957 is no exception. No great revelations, but Byrd is a responsive partner in the front line and the rhythm section is less hung-up on its own ideas, more aware, one suspects, of what Gryce himself is looking for.

On the later dates again, the writing is more interesting than the playing. Gryce is often overshadowed by Williams, and the rhythm section boil away as if on their own private date. The Rat Race Blues is the best set, track by track, from this rather crowded vintage, but there are good things, too, on The Hap'nin's, including an excellent 'Nica's Tempo', which was originally written for the Messengers, and two lovely standards in 'Lover Man' and 'Summertime'. With the items below, the picture is now a good deal fuller than it was.

Ivar Grydeland (born 1976)

GUITAR, BANJO

Improviser from Norway.

 These Six Sofa 312 Grydeland; Tonny Kluften (b); Paul Lovens (d). 6/03.
Grydeland uses acoustic instruments on these half-dozen improvs and sounds like a Bailey disciple at first, but he's quite content to strum rhapsodic chords as well as more spidery plunking. Lovens is as quietly titanic as always.

Vince Guaraldi (1928–76)

PIANO

Born and based in San Francisco, he had an uneventful time in the '50s but found his niche as a pop-jazz composer in the '60s. His Charlie Brown music won him a big audience. A smooth jazzer, ahead of his time.

() Vince Guaraldi Trio / () Jazz Impressions / () A Flower Is A Lovesome Thing Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 149 / 287 / 235 Guaraldi; Eddie Duran (g); Dean Reilly (b). 4/56; 4/56; 4/57.
* Jazz Impressions Of Black Orpheus Original Jazz Classics OJC 437 Guaraldi; Monty Budwig (b); Colin Bailey (d). 62.
() In Person Original Jazz Classics OJC 951 Guaraldi; Eddie Duran (g); Fred Marshall (b); Colin Bailey (d); Benny Valarde (perc). 5/63.
() The Latin Side Of Vince Guaraldi Original Jazz Classics OJC 878 Guaraldi; Eddie Duran (g); Fred Marshall (b); Jerry Granelli (d); Bill Fitch, Benny Valarde (perc); string quartet. 64.
* The Grace Cathedral Concert Fantasy 9678 Guaraldi; Tom Beeson (b); Lee Charlton (d); St Paul's Church Of San Rafael Choir. 5/65.
() From All Sides Original Jazz Classics OJC 989 Guaraldi; Bola Sete (g); Fred Marshall, Monte Budwig (b); Jerry Granelli, Nick Martinez (d). 65.
 Greatest Hits Fantasy FCD-7706-2 Guaraldi; various groups as above. N.D.
 A Boy Named Charlie Brown Fantasy FCD-8430-2 Guaraldi; Monty Budwig (b); Colin Bailey (d). N.D.
() A Charlie Brown Christmas Fantasy FCD-8431-2 As above, except add Fred Marshall (b); Jerry Granelli (d). N.D.

Guaraldi was not as profound as Dave Brubeck, not as swinging as Ramsey Lewis, but he was capable of fashioning catchy tunes from favourite licks; the most famous example remains his Grammy-winning 'Cast Your Fate To The Wind'. If his music appeals, the best way to sample it is through the Greatest Hits collection. The earlier trio dates offer mild, unambitious variations on standards, with Eddie Duran figuring more strongly than Guaraldi himself. The Black Orpheus set is marked by the seemingly relentless triviality of the material. In Person is live, and at a slightly higher temperature, while The Latin Side is about as hot-blooded as a game of dominoes. The Grace Cathedral Concert finds him jazzing the liturgy to a less than holy-rolling effect.

As a composer, Guaraldi will always be best represented by his music for the Charlie Brown TV cartoon series (which prompted Wynton Marsalis to make a tribute album). The first record includes some charming miniatures, performed with surprising delicacy. The second is merely more of the same with less of the freshness, though it is stuck with Yuletide material. Easy to dismiss him as a featherweight, but look how many records he has in print.

Tom Guarna

GUITAR

Talented player with understated bop-influenced approach.

 Get Together Steeplechase SCCD 31577 Guarna; Gary Versace (b); Tom Ferber (d). 8 & 9/03.
(*) Out From The Underground Steeplechase SCCD 31607 Guarna; George Colligan (p); John Benitez (b); E. J. Strickland (d). 1/06.
 Wing Span Steeplechase SCCD 31634 Guarna; Joel Frahm (ss, ts); Paul Gill (b); Willie Jones III (d). 1/07.

He had a skimpy entry last time out, but there's been a flurry. Guarna's work smacks of an older generation. On Get Together, he includes Bird's 'Segment', 'My Old Flame', 'Get Out Of Town' and Kessel's 'Swedish Pastry' in a set that also features his own boppish originals; a nice ring to his playing, which favours slightly out-of-whack metres, guaranteeing interest. The second date is all originals, which is a bold initiative. The same individuality comes through in the writing, especially on hard-to-place things like 'Two If By The Sea' and the title-tune. He can't reasonably claim ever to have worked 'underground', but he certainly merits wider exposure. The most recent disc is another pungent display, though one misses Colligan's distinctive presence. Frahm makes up the leeway, but Tom has largely returned to repertory material, with just a couple of originals; unusually, they're the best things on the set.

Johnny Guarnieri (1917–85)

PIANO

Took up jazz piano after hearing the stride players, worked with Benny Goodman and Artie Shaw in the '30s, and staffed at NBC in the '40s. Moved to California but continued to compose non-stop; he reckoned to have written 5,000 tunes.

 Johnny Guarnieri 1944–1946 Classics 956 Guarnieri; Billy Butterfield (t); Hank D'Amico (cl); Lester Young, Don Byas (ts); Dexter Hall (g); Billy Taylor, Slam Stewart, Leo Guarnieri, Bob Haggart (b); Cozy Cole, Sammy Weiss, J. C. Heard (d). 4/44–1/46.
 Johnny Guarnieri 1946–1947 Classics 1063 Guarnieri; Tony Mottola (g); Bob Haggart, Trigger Alpert, Leo Guarnieri (b); Cozy Cole, Morey Feld (d); Rosemary Calvin (v). 5/46–47.
 Walla Walla: The Definitive Black And Blue Sessions Black & Blue 942 Guarnieri; Jimmy Shirley (g); Slam Stewart (b); Jackie Williams (d). 78.
(*) Echoes Of Ellington Star Line LCD9003 Guarnieri (p solo). 84.

Guarnieri's consummate professionalism, unselfish attitude (a generous and much-liked teacher later in life) and robust energy made him a fixture in New York club jazz of the '40s, although various big-band leaders tried to squirrel his talent away in the confines of their own orchestra. His own-name LP recordings are minor works which have never been reissued. The Classics compilations pull together mostly minor-league stuff. His 1944 Savoy trios form the bulk of Classics 956, and they show how much of his right hand came from Waller and Tatum: these are frothy, mischievous dates which also highlight Slam Stewart's hokum. But the first session has Lester Young hiding in the shadows, and a later one has some splendid work by Don Byas. Aside from a couple of vocals by Rosemary Calvin, Classics 1063 is all solo, trio or (with Mottola's guitar) quartet material. There's a novelty element to much of this music and to the similarly confected session on Black & Blue: the pianist isn't interested in touching great depths of feeling, preferring to make his point through a precise, almost dainty paraphrase of melodic material. He sings on 'Bobo, The Bowery Barber', which makes one glad that he didn't do it too often.

Odd that his best record – his view, as well – should have been a set of Ellington themes. Guarnieri wasn't a charismatic player, but even in the last year of his life there is tremendous intellectual energy and adventure in his interpretations of things like 'Mississippi Moan' and 'Birmingham Breakdown', hardly overworked material; to be fair, most of the remainder are very familiar indeed, though unhackneyed in execution.

Jostein Gulbrandsen

GUITAR

Bright Norwegian talent, making his way in NY.

 Twelve Fresh Sound New Talent FSNTCD291 Gulbrandsen; Jon Irabagon (ts, cl); Eivind Opsvik (b); Jeff Davis (d). 06.

This falls somewhat into the troublesome Nu-Jazz browser, but Gulbrandsen, who's seeing considerable service in the US, has sufficient chops and imagination to make that seem a good thing. His metrical sense is highly evolved, and on pieces as various as 'Sundance', 'Black November' and 'Message In A Bottle' he and the group convey a sense of adventure and enterprise that allows one to overlook some lapses of technique and taste.

Friedrich Gulda (1930–2000)

PIANO, VOICE

Notorious for eccentric behaviour, including faking his own obituary, he began as a classical performer before becoming involved in jazz. He influenced the young Joe Zawinul.

 Friedrich Gulda At Birdland RCA Victor PM 1355 Gulda; Idrees Sulieman (t); Jimmy Cleveland (tb); Phil Woods (as); Seldon Powell (ts); Aaron Bell (b); Nick Stabulas (d). 6/56.

Gulda was exotic fruit when he arrived in the United States, somewhat as Joe Zawinul was to be, but no one could deny his ability to play modern jazz. Contrary to the title, this isn't a live gig but a studio session. Here, along with 'A Night In Tunisia' and the Leiber–Stoller 'Bernie's Tune', his band swings through a set of somewhat sombre originals, including 'Dark Glow' and 'Air From Other Planets' (an indirect reference to Schoenberg). The piano sound isn't great, but Gulda's comping is absolutely spot-on and there is enough solo action from the horns to make this a worthwhile sample of a musical one-off.

 Friedrich Gulda And His Big Bands Emarcy 986661-2 Gulda; Stan Roderick, Robert Politzer, Kenny Wheeler (t, flhn); Ack van Rooyen, Dusko Goykovich, Freddie Hubbard, Palle Mikkelborg (t); Erich Kleinschuster, Harry Roche, Rudolf Josel, Jiggs Whigham, Bobby Lamb, J. J. Johnson (tb); Alfie Reece (btb); Herb Geller, Rolf Kühn, Sahib Shihab, Ferdinand Povel, Phil Woods, Fatty George, Tubby Hayes, Hans Salomon, Pepper Adams (reeds); Pierre Cavalli (g); Ron Carter (b); Tony Inzalaco, Mel Lewis (d). 65–70.

 Fata Morgana – Live At The Domicile MPS 981144-7 Gulda; Fritz Pauer (p); Klaus Weiss (d). 4/71.

Gulda's substantial catalogue for MPS is finally making its way to CD. The orchestral collection gathers in 'Concerto A Quattro', cut in 1965 and featuring Hubbard, Shihab, Johnson and Gulda as soloists, and 'Fantasy For 4 Soloists' (Mikkelborg, Woods, Povel and Cavalli), made five years later. They are rich and detailed pieces, the first in a classical concerto form, the second more wide-ranging and eclectic. Gulda's prodigious musical knowledge doesn't get in the way of the results, but – rather as with Don Ellis's music – there is a curiously dated quality, utopian and self-consciously visionary. A piano track from 1970's It's All One is tacked onto the beginning.

Fata Morgana features Gulda and Pauer – on both acoustic and electric instruments – in an extravagant meeting of minds. The sleeve-notes call it a 'groovy live session', and they do get groovy on the blues 'Encore', and the old-fashioned electric-piano sound will appeal to acid-jazz followers.

(*) Midlife Harvest MPS 982894-5 5CD As Emarcy and MPS discs above, except add Rudolf Josel (tb), Paul Fuchs (horns), J. A. Rettenbacher, Jimmy Woode (b), Manfred Josel, Albert Heath (d), Limpe Fuchs (perc), Blanche Aubry, Georg Kreisler (v), strings, choir. 65–72.

This was originally a set of nine LPs, covering most of Gulda's frames of jazz reference. It brings together the best of what had been released on MPS up to that point, as well as then-new material. The span of music includes the Weill-like 'Galgenlieder', a 'Concertino' for a choir, orchestra and jazz quartet, the 'Little Suite' for trio, two piano concertos for soloist and big band, the notorious set of lieder sung by one Albert Golowin (actually Gulda himself in a beatnik wig and beard!), the dazzling set of 'Play Piano Play' pieces and the variations on 'Light My Fire', a set of variations for two pianos and band (with Fritz Pauer), various duets with Klaus Weiss and some of the big-band music also issued on the Emarcy disc. Gulda's admirers will be elated at its reappearance, and everyone else will most likely find much of it mystifying. A classical virtuoso who rejected Third Stream as 'superficial and mannered', a practical joker who took jazz profoundly seriously, a rigorous structuralist who went on to embrace free playing – there was no one quite like Gulda, and this entertaining marathon, which we have squirrelled away on tattered vinyl for many years, is diverting proof of his eminence.

Lars Gullin (1928–76)

BARITONE SAXOPHONE, PIANO

A major figure in Scandinavian modernism, he is eminent in Europe but still little known beyond. His career tailed off somewhat in the '70s and early death denied him the inevitable revival.

 The Sideman 1949–52 Dragon DRCD 391 Gullin; Anders Svärd, Sixten Eriksson, Olle Hedberg, Rolf Ericson (t); Åke Persson (tb); Leppe Sundevall (tr hn); Putte Wickman (cl); Arne Domnérus (as, ts); Per-Arne Croona (as, bs); Zoot Sims, James Moody, Stan Getz, Martin Tidlund, Seymour Österwall, Carl-Henrik Norin, Rolf Blomqvist, Gösta Theselius (ts); Mats Olsson, Dick Hyman, Rolf Larsson, Bengt Hallberg, Reinhold Svensson, Gunnar Svensson, Ingemar Westberg (p); Sten Carlberg (g); Arthur Österwall, Charlie Short, Arne Söderlund, Gunnar Almstedt, Yngve Åkerberg, Simon Brehm, Bengt Wittström (b); Sture Eriksson, Ed Shaughnessy, Gunnar Olsson, Sture Kallin, Robert Edman (d); Charles Judah, Alice Babs, Brita Borg, Allan Johansson, Gunnar Nilson, Bengt Elmberg (v). 3/49–2/52.

 First Walk 1951–52 Dragon DRCD 380 Gullin; Rolf Ericson, Weine Renliden (t); Åke Persson (tb); Leppe Sundevall (tr hn); Åke Björkman (fr hn); Jonas Bergström (as); Rolf Blomqvist, Carl-Henrik Lindgren (ts); Gunnar Svensson, Bengt Hallberg, Mats Olsson, Ingemar Westberg (p); Gunnar Almstedt, Bengt Wittström , Yngve Åkerberg (b); Jack Norén, Nils-Bertil Dahlander, Anders Burman (d). 2/51–5/52.

(*) Silhouette 1951–53 Dragon DRCD 395 Gullin; Arnold Johansson (t); Åke Persson (tb); Åke Björkman (frhn); Arne

Domnérus (as); Rolf Blomqvist (ts); Gunnar Svensson, Rune Öfwerman (p); Yngve Åkerberg , Simon Brehm (b); Jack Norén , Nils-Bertil Dahlander (d). 10/51–2/53.

 Lars Gullin With Chet Baker 1955–56 Dragon DRCD 224 Gullin; Chet Baker (t); George Olsson (tb); Arne Domnérus (cl, as); Rolf Billberg, Bjarne Nerem (ts); Lennart Jansson (bs); Richard Twardzik, Gunnar Svensson (p); Georg Riedel, Jimmy Bond (b); Peter Littman, Bosse Stoor, Egil Johansen (d); Caterina Valente (v). 4/55–5/56.

Gullin has been gone for 30 years now, but he remains among the most creative of European voices. After working in big bands as an alto-player, he took up the baritone at the age of 21 and developed an utterly distinctive sound, delicate, wistful, pensively controlled. When he wrote for six or more instruments he made the band sound like a direct extension of that big, tender tone. He seems like neither a bopper nor a swing stylist.

Dragon's reissue programme has expanded to include some of his earliest sessions. The Sideman is useful as a snapshot of the various threads that were running through the Swedish scene of the time, welcoming visitors such as Getz and Moody, mixing swing-band pop with small-group cool, and finding no shame in a novelty such as 'Be-Bop Knopp' (sung by Alice Babs). Gullin is, as the title suggests, a bit-player on these tracks but is already finding his way on baritone.

The 22-year-old saxophonist steps out as leader for the first time on First Walk, with a session by the group he was then co-leading with Bengt Hallberg. By the end of the final session, made 13 months later, he is all but fully formed as a stylist. Most of these tracks are standards done in the cool Swedish manner of the time, but with Ericson, Hallberg and Gullin all contributing pithy solos, the music still has freshness. Silhouette is an interesting mix of studio dates and broadcast rarities: some of the latter are in dusty sound, including two versions of 'You Go To My Head', but as the sole horn on these titles Gullin has ideas to spare; captivating improvisation. The band titles find his writing to the fore and are pertly played by what is mostly an eight-piece line-up, actually derived from Arne Domnérus's regular group of the time. Several of the tunes are steals from American standards, but already Gullin's composerly wit is in evidence. Eight titles by a pianoless quartet with 20-year-old Åke Persson round off the disc in style.

The meeting with Baker's quartet is the focus of DRCD 224, with a few precious glimpses of Twardzik, a melancholy 'Lover Man' and Caterina Valente vocalizing on 'I'll Remember April'; there are also three charming octet pieces.

* Modern Sounds 1953 Dragon DRCD 234 Gullin; Weine Renliden, Conte Candoli (t); Frank Rosolino (tb); Lee Konitz (as); Zoot Sims (ts); Kettil Ohlsson (bs); Putte Lindblom, Bob Laine, Mats Olsson (p); Yngve Åkerberg , Georg Riedel, Simon Brehm, Lars Pettersson, Tauno Suojärvi , Don Bagley (b); Jack Noren, Bosse Stoor, Stan Levey (d); Rita Reys (v). 3–12/53.

The second volume released in Dragon's comprehensive survey includes the superb tracks that were issued as a ten-inch album by Contemporary in the USA. Gullin sustains a steady, effortless flow of ideas on all his solos and plays alto on two tunes. The rest of the disc includes various studio sessions with other leaders and three tracks with the visiting Americans, in which Gullin holds his own comfortably.

CORE COLLECTION

* Danny's Dream

Dragon DRCD 396 Gullin; Carl-Henrik Norin (ts); Rolf Berg (g); Georg Riedel (b); Alan Dawson, Robert Edman, Bosse Stoor (d). 11/53–1/55.

Fine as the above disc is, this one surpasses it. It includes the quartet sessions for Metronome in which Gullin was supported only by Berg, Riedel, and either Edman or Stoor, and offers the definitive versions of 'Danny's Dream', 'Manchester Fog', 'Lars Meets Jeff' and 'Igloo', haunting masterpieces where Gullin's even dynamics and controlled expression do little to mask the intense beauty of his improvising and the poignancy and yearning which characterize the best of his writing. In addition there are four tracks with Norin sharing the front line.

 Late Summer 1954/55 Dragon DRCD 244 Gullin; Leppe Sundevall (bt); Kurt Jarnberg (tb); Rolf Billberg (ts); Jutta Hipp, Bengt Hallberg, Claes-Göran Fagerstadt (p); Rolf Berg (g); Georg Riedel, Simon Brehm (b); William Schiøpffe , Bosse Stoor (d); Moretone Singers (v). 9/54–6/55.

Lower marks only because the seven tracks with the cooing Moretone Singers may disenchant some supporters, even though Gullin's own playing remains impeccable (the fine improvisation on 'Lover Man', for example). Four brief tracks with Hipp's trio are unremarkable, but two tracks by the Gullin sextet, 'Late Summer' and 'For F. J. Fans Only', are superb.

(*) Stockholm Street 1959/60 Dragon DRCD 264 Gullin; Bengt-Arne Wallin (t, flhn); Andreas Skjold, Eje Thelin (tb); Putte Wickman (cl); Rolf Billberg (as); Harry Bäcklund (ts); Lars Bagge (p); Sune Larsson (g); Lars Pettersson, Claes Lindroth, Erik Lundborg (b); Sture Kallin, Bosse Skoglund, Robert Edman (d). 1/59–9/60.

The series picks up again with the contents of four EP sessions plus four other tracks from the same period. The brief playing-time afforded by the medium concentrates Gullin's writing, the harmonic weight offset by the plain rhythmic language. Arguably not his best work as a player – there is a bonus in two tracks from an abandoned session, including a longer treatment of 'Darn That Dream', which have extended but somewhat desultory solos by the leader – but some of these miniatures are hauntingly effective, especially 'Nightshade' and the bittersweet gem 'The Yellow Leaves' Love To The Earth'.

Also, in brief:

() In Germany 1955 & 1956 Vol. 1 / () In Germany 1955, 1956 & 1959 Anagram CD 2 / 5. 11/56–3/59.

Olle Lind has been collecting Gullin recordings for many years and these two discs are the projected beginning of a ten-CD series which opens his archive for the first time.

 Alma Mater – Almah Alma Anagram CD 10. N.D.

Another of Olle Lind's archive recordings. For collectors, in the main.

Peter Gullin (1959–2003)

BARITONE AND TENOR SAXOPHONES

The son of Lars played able post-bop horn.

 Tenderness Dragon DRCD 222 Gullin; Jacob Fischer (g); Ole Rasmussen (b). 2/92.

 Transformed Evergreen / (*) Untold Story Dragon DRCD 266 / 315 As above, except omit Fischer; add Morten Kaargard (g). 3/94; 3/97.

 From Time To Time Dragon DRCD 392 As above, except add Linda Pettersson (v). 03.

It's brave for a son to follow quite so closely in the parental footsteps, and it's ironic that Peter, too, should have died prematurely. His baritone sound was fuller and throatier, or sounds so in modern recording. What the old man wouldn't have given for the bright top-notes and rich bottom-end Peter (whose birth was celebrated in 'Peter Of April') gets on Tenderness and its two sequels. The classical references pall after a while, but they are handled with some taste both on the first album and on Untold Story, where Prokofiev and Rimsky-Korsakov are both namechecked on 'Incognito'. Gullin Jr stuck with the same drummerless concept from the beginning. With a piece like 'Men Stig In' on the same record he showed that he had begun to write themes which sit comfortably with it. Kaargard (a Dane, like Rasmussen) is also a gifted writer, and his three pieces include the title-track. Gullin himself only latterly began to develop convincingly in this direction. The three 'Fantasias' on the previous disc border on the pedestrian, while 'The Hollow Clown' ('crown', surely?) suggests he'd been listening to Mingus. From Time To Time was released right at the end of his life; some false notes, including a dull Lennon–McCartney reading, and Pettersson doesn't add much. Not a note that isn't played with taste and conviction, but it may yet be a touch too dry and accommodating for some tastes.

Onaje Allan Gumbs (born 1949)

PIANO, KEYBOARDS

A prolific presence in American jazz and crossover music.

 Return To Form Half Note 4915 Gumbs; Rene McLean (as); Marcus McLaurine (b); Payton Crossley (d); Gary Fritz (perc). 11/00.

 Sack Full Of Dreams 18th & Vine 1051 As above, except omit McLean, Crossley; add Mark Shim (ts); Bob DeVos (g); George Gray (d); Obba Babatunde (v). 6/06.

Little documented in his own right over recent years, Gumbs does, indeed, return to form with a bright, but by no means underpowered live set. They're mostly original compositions, but 'Dreamsville' and a nice read of Coltrane's 'Equinox' find him and the group playing with imagination and care. The follow-up has the ambition of recovered energy and the guests are more generously deployed, with Shim making a more interesting intervention than McLean's on the earlier record.

Also, in brief:

 Onaje Steeplechase SCCD 31069. 95.

A solo set; mostly his own themes, but there's a bold assault on 'Giant Steps'.

(*) Remember Their Innocence Ejano 7111-1. 04.

Some interesting guests, including Sadao Watanabe (as), but the material is featherweight and sentimental.

Russell Gunn (born 1971)

TRUMPET, FLUGELHORN, KEYBOARDS, PERCUSSION

Raised in St Louis, he was a trumpet competition winner in 1989 and a rapper in high school. He played with the Oliver Lake group before going to New York and featuring in Buckshot LaFonque and the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra.

(*) Smokin' Gunn High Note HDCD 7056 Gunn; Bruce Williams (as); Marc Cary (p); Eric Revis (b); Terreon Gully (d). 12/99.

 Mood Swings High Note HCD 7107 Gunn (t); Radam Schwartz (org); Eric Johnson (g); Cecil Brooks III (d). 12/99.

His debut record for Muse, Young Gunn, was a cautious, promising start, but it soon disappeared. Back, for a moment, in a no-fuss acoustic setting, Gunn and crew make a much stronger statement than on earlier releases for the label (see 'in brief' below). It looks forward but takes its basic grammar from the period when hard bop was opening out into wider forms: so Gunn and Williams bring to mind several past stylists while doing their best to assert themselves on the interesting material. In covering 'Delfeayo's Dilemma', they also start the process of entering modern tunes into a new modern repertory. Gunn's own playing sounds more assured and more adventurous too, and the chameleonic Williams sounds like he'll fit into all kinds of situations.

The follow-up (recorded the same month!) drops him down into an organ/guitar combo situation, but his playing is a constant – tough, gritty, elegant when he wants. 'Blues To Lee', a Morgan homage, more or less apotheosizes his approach in this setting.

 Plays Miles High Note 7161 Gunn; Orrin Evans (ky); Mark Kelley (b); Montez Coleman (d); Kahlil Kwame Bell (perc). 7/06.

He comes from Miles's home town of East St Louis, so this was near-inevitable. Whether it was desirable is another matter. Mercifully, Gunn sticks largely to electric-period material, including 'Bitches Brew' and 'Tutu', though there's some damage inflicted on 'Blue In Green' and 'Nardis', as well as a poor interpretation of Wayne Shorter's 'Footprints', which Chico Freeman's electric Brainstorm programmed very effectively 20 years ago.

Also, in brief:

() Gunn Fu / () Love Requiem High Note HCD 7003 / HCD 7020. 12/96; 8/97.

Impressive cast-lists but these sets are unachieved and oddly positioned on a usually down-home label.

 Ethnomusicology: Volumes 2–4 Justin Time JUST 172 / 189 / 210. 00–04.

Very big casts but mainly just to vary the pace. They're angry, uptight records, railing at critics, prejudice and intolerance, and the musical element is inconsistent. The live Volume 4 is probably the best of them. An earlier volume seems to be out of print.

John Gunther (born 1966)

ALTO, TENOR AND SOPRANO SAXOPHONES, BASS CLARINET

Contemporary free-bop multi-instrumentalist and composer.

 Permission Granted CIMP 136 Gunther; Leo Huppert (b); Jay Rosen (d). 1/97.

Gunther is a thinker's saxophonist, almost a Tristano-ite in his reluctance to plumb false registers. With Huppert often hidden in the music, the propulsion all comes from Rosen, whose drum-parts, for all their invention, often overwhelm everything else. The tunes are quirky and the record gets quieter and more remote as it goes on, with the lonesome 'Lines' and the bass/tenor duet 'Us' particularly well focused. Gunther ends on a tenor solo of 'Stardust', played with the minimum of elaboration: an affecting coda.

(*) Healing Song CIMP 163 As above, except add Ron Miles (t). 9/97.
(*) Above Now Below /  Gone Fishin' CIMP 176 / 232 As above, except add Rob Thomas (vn). 6/98; 9/00.
(*) In This World CIMP 319 As for Permission Granted. 10/04.
Gunther's composing is the thread that makes these discs work, with 21 pieces across the discs – all of them memorable – as well as useful provocation for the improvisers. He's helped greatly by the arrival of the admirable Miles, who can get all over the horn (he gets an unearthly growl in the lower register), and, on the second disc, Thomas, who divides his time between barn dance figures and a Stuff Smith-like swing. There's a lot of humour in this music (not this label's stock-in-trade), and pieces such as 'BooBoo Joins The Circus', 'The Collective' or several of the episodes in the three 'suites' which fill the second disc should provoke a grin. He's in hock to Ornette Coleman some of the time – 'Sound Byte' is pure Coleman, and 'Colemanation' a homage – but nothing wrong with that. Very engaging music altogether. With tunes supplied by Monk, West Africa and Native America (and Gunther), Gone Fishin' is a cheerful mix of urban, urbane and rural. Gunther scores on charm and songfulness, but the record's bitty, and too long. In This World restores the trio, keeps up the sanguine humour, programmes some Monk and a cowboy song, and is hard to fault.

Gush

GROUP

A collaborative trio, from which the peripatetic Gustafsson has since moved on.

(*) ... From Sounds To Things Dragon DRCD 204 Mats Gustafsson (sax); Sten Sandell (p, ky, v); Raymond Strid (d, perc). 5 & 10/90.
(*) Gushwachs Bead 002 As above, except add Philipp Wachsmann (vn, vla, elec). 5/94.
() Live At Fasching / () Norrköping Dragon DRCD 313 / Atavistic ALP 161 As above, except omit Wachsmann. 6/96; 5/03.
Gustafsson's the 'star' here, but it's very much a triumvirate. Much of the impetus comes from Strid's big-hearted approach to the kit and associated percussion; the drummer has the rare capacity to suggest a pulse without laying down the rhythmic law. Sandell is a suprisingly fleeting and fugitive figure in this context, often seeming to come in at the last moment to smooth the music into a more finished shape. He is more prominent (or perhaps easier to identify) on the first record. On Gushwachs, he blends into the electronic soundscape established by Wachsmann. The addition of the violinist brings an extra dimension to the music, creating a dark mise-en-abîme effect, like a multiple reflection in a hall of cracked mirrors. The Fasching record is in some ways the most disturbing of the three. Sandell sets a fierce agenda on 'And Any Warranty Otherwise', which Gustafsson finds himself decorating rather than getting inside. Sometimes it feels like a group coming to the end of its tether, but at other points there's unexpected humour and flight. Norrköping is more of the same, but with no sense of stinted effort or imagination.

Mats Gustafsson (born 1965)

BARITONE, TENOR, SOPRANO AND SOPRANINO SAXOPHONES, FLUTEOPHONE, OTHER INSTRUMENTS

A Swedish improviser, now widely travelled and much documented.

 Hidros One Caprice CAP 21566 Gustafsson; Axel Dörner (t); Günter Christmann (tb, clo); Fredrik Ljungkvist (ts, bs, cl); Sten Sandell (p); Fred Lonberg-Holm (clo); Per-Åke Holmlander (tba); Barry Guy (b); Raymond Strid (d). 10/97.
(*) Windows Blue Chopsticks BC 4 Gustafsson (ts, bs, fluteophone solo). 1/99.
 Sticky Tongues And Kitchen Knives Xeric-CD-101 Gustafsson; John Corbett (g, turntables, CD players). 1/99.
(*) Port Huron Picnic Spool Line 10 Gustafsson; Kurt Newman (g); Mike Gennaro (d). 5/99.
 Xylophonen Virtuosen Incus 38 Gustafsson; Jim O'Rourke (g, junk). 9/99.
Gustafsson is becoming one of the giants of European improvisation. Blessed with a seemingly effortless technique, a wittily deconstructive approach to his instrument(s) and a generous intelligence, he never produces work that is less than thoughtful or other than exuberant.

Hidros One is a big-scale piece, conducted and 'composed' by the leader; away from any visual sense of the performance, though, it's hard to hear it as anything other than a multi-part improv which has its dead spots as well as highs. The one extraordinary moment arrives in the use of the tape at a point halfway through, a subterranean electronic rustling which certainly disturbs the balances.

Windows is a fascinating homage to Steve Lacy, who comments on the sleeve: 'you wouldn't even know it's a saxophone, it's just some new sounds'. Of the Lacy pieces, 'Retreat' is sonorously performed as a baritone dirge. 'Deadline' is a long, completely deconstructed revision. The original 'Outline' is often little more than breath and finger flutterings, yet it holds a fragment of Lacy's inspiration somewhere inside. There's also a Cecil Taylor piece from when Lacy was working with the pianist.

Gustafsson's refusal to submit to saxophone screaming makes much of his small-group work depend on sometimes infinitesimal detail. Port Huron Picnic sounds very like an edition of SME, built around momentous, even furious scrabblings which teem with tiny incidents. Xylophonen Virtuosen's appeal may depend on how much one takes to O'Rourke's methods, which include lots of open-toned country-blues picking. It certainly makes for an unlikely contrast with Gustafsson's guttural explosions on 'Calling Patti'.

The duos with Corbett produce unabashed mayhem. The first half sets Gustafsson's extremes of tenor saxophone technique against whatever sounds Corbett can produce from turntables and CD players; the second is a more conventional application of baritone sax against Corbett's post-Bailey electric guitar, rather less interesting than his manipulations in the first half, which are sometimes startling. On the basis of the first half here, orchestration suits Gustafsson better as a context.

* The Thing Crazy Wisdom 001/159073 Gustafsson; Ingebrigt Håker Flaten (b); Paal Nilssen-Love (d). 2/00.
 Diskaholics Anonymous Trio Crazy Wisdom 005/014788 Gustafsson; Jim O'Rourke (syn, computer); Thurston Moore (g). 00.
The trio with Flaten and Nilssen-Love is Gustafsson in power mode. The Thing, aside from two brief items, is made up of extended rampages through four Don Cherry pieces, the saxophonist sticking to alto and tenor. They make a joyful noise out of the likes of 'Cherryco', a black squall out of 'Awake Nu' and a grand showpiece out of 'Trans-Love Airways' that runs from stately bass intro to all-out power-play. A great modern free-jazz record, with Gustafsson complemented by superb work from both Flaten and the amazingly energetic Nilssen-Love.

The other trio starts with wall-of-sound guitar, drifts away into more familiar Gustafsson small-group territory of whisperings and grumbling, then dies away in another guitar diminuendo. Not our favourite, but it tickles to know that one of the world's largest record companies, Swedish Universal, is responsible for selling this stuff on Gustafsson's own imprint.

 I Love It When You Snore Smalltown Supersound STS 063 Gustafsson; Paal Nilssen-Love (perc). 11/01.
(*) Live At Blå Smalltown Supersound STS 099 As above, except add Ingebrigt Håker Flaten (b). 6/03.
The duo date isn't as engaging as The Thing but is still a fascinating encounter with Scandinavia's most interesting percussionist of the younger generation. There's less obvious dialogue on this, too, and some signs that the two players are working in parallel rather than together, but that doesn't detract much. The trio is reconvened for the other one of these, and the difference is immediately palpable; roaring, excitable noise on two long medleys of 'material', with Flaten making occasional bids to mediate, but usually giving up and egging them on anyway.

(*) Blues Atavistic ALP 163 Gustafsson; David Stackenas (g). 11/03.
One of the things that immediately separates Gustafsson from his (presumable) role model, Lars Gullin, is his innate capacity to play a blues. That isn't quite what this set is about, though the duo takes it as far down that round as they're ever likely to go. Remarkably fresh music, feelingly played. Sample the delicious 'You Have To Get Low As A Toad Again'.

 Catapult Doubtmusic 103 Gustafsson (bs solo). 1/05.
Several of the pieces are inspired by the American novelist Paul Auster, but there's also a tribute to Lars Gullin, and it's touching to think that the two Swedish baritonists are among their country's most distinguished musical exports. Much like Brötzmann when playing solo, Mats is more thoughtful and even wistful than you expect, and there are some heart-stoppingly lovely moments on this.

Also, in brief:

 Hidros 3 Smalltown Supersound STS080. 10/00.
Intriguing collaboration with avant-rockers Sonic Youth.

Rigmor Gustafsson

VOICE, GUITAR

Raised in the Swedish countryside, where the nearest building was 'a barn and not a jazz club', she moved to New York in her middle 20s after studying in Stockholm.

 In The Light Of Day Prophone PCD 034 Gustafsson; Gabriel Coburger (ts); Tino Derado (p); Hans Glawischnig (b); Roland Schneider (d). 4/96.
 Close To You ACT 9703 Gustafsson; Nils Landgren (tb); Jacky Terrasson (p); Sean Smith (b); Eric Harland (d). 7/04.
(*) Alone With You ACT 9717 Gustafsson; Jonas Östholm (p, org); Max Schutz (g); Lars Danielsson (b); Eric Harland (d). 4/07.
The debut has gauche charm: Gustafsson offers wayward enunciation and 'interesting' pitching at times, but she also tackles some stiff material head on, including 'Very Early', 'Freedom Jazz Dance', 'Infant Eyes' and Chick Corea's 'You're Everything', and her girlishly light tone takes some of the weight out of a few of the lyrics to beneficial effect – 'In The Light Of Day', where she duets affectingly with Coburger, works notably well in that regard. Derado, who has a Corea-like touch, contributes a couple of so-so originals. The band is capable, putting skates under her without pushing her too fast or too far.

Close To You is unlikely to convince any who were impervious to the charms of the earlier sets. Fourteen songs associated with Dionne Warwick are given plainer treatments that suggest a maturing singer and a producer (Nils Landgren) who is understanding her better. The often self-indulgent Terrasson is surprisingly restrained and cogent, and though there are some misfires, there are some genuinely effective interpretations: 'Alfie' and 'Walk On By' might seem untouchable, but she does very well by both of them.

What a transformation when she sings in her own language. 'Medan Du Väntar' is almost lost two thirds of the way through the excellent Alone With You, but it's a revelation. She had to deal with some distressingly banal English lyrics elsewhere, but as always this game and understated singer handles them with some aplomb. The group's terrific and co-producer Danielsson gives her a nice tight sound that suits this material to a T.

Also, in brief:

 Live Prophone PCD 054. 10/99.
A tough enough set; 'Over The Rainbow' is nicely handled.

 I Will Wait For You ACT 9418. 1–4/03.
Her ACT debut is a disappointment, too much like a studied pop project.

Tord Gustavsen (born 1970)

PIANO

Young Norwegian, in the vanguard of the country's new jazz.

* Changing Places / (*) The Ground / * Being There
ECM 016397 / 4761938 / 2017 Gustavsen; Harald Johnsen (b); Jarle Vespestad (d). 11/01–6/02; 1/04; 12/06.
Gustavsen's style is all simplicity – aphoristic melodies, gently syncopating rhythms (he's played a good share of traditional jazz), blues figures, rocking sequences. Somehow he puts this together into a style which is utterly captivating. On Changing Places it helps that one of the modern masters of kit-drumming, Jarle Vespestad, is in the group, although he is obliged to play very differently from his normal power-packed style. The group work through 13 pieces that feel all alike yet are without any suspicion of routine or preset pattern-playing.

The immediate complaint might be that The Ground shows no 'advance' on the previous disc. In concert, the trio certainly develop their music in more dramatic ways. But suggestions that this is little more than luxury-class easy listening are some way off the mark. Gustavsen still finds ways to resolve his melodies, slight as they often are, in intriguing ways, and Vespestad – in some ways the key – hints at a coiled power that asks the listener to stay alert. Manfred Eicher's consummate production confers a special elegance.

Minute for minute much of this music is more arresting than anything the fêted Brad Mehldau has released in a similar vein. In a scene awash with neo-Evans trios, this one is seriously underrated. So significant advances again on Being There, but just (!) another consummately conceived and executed record without a gram of fat.

Also, in brief:

(*) Aire & Angels Bergland 008. 5/02.
A latter-day Liederbuch with Siri Gjaere (v). Might be hard to find, in any case.

Barry Guy (born 1947)

DOUBLE BASS

He has kept up a parallel career in classical and new-music work and in improvisation. He was a pioneer figure in SME, Amalgam and Iskra 1903 and is the motivating force behind the London Jazz Composers' Orchestra.

 Improvisations Are Forever Now Emanem 4070 Guy; Howard Riley (p); Philipp Wachsmann (vn, elec). 12/77, 1/79.
Some of this material has previously been issued on LP, but a large part of it has not been heard before. It is an abrasive sound, electronically manipulated by both bassist and violinist, and physically changed by the pianist's inside work. There are no harmonic or melodic reference points and no obvious rhythmic markers either. Sometimes, as on the second improvisation, it appears confused and inchoate, but there are moments of astonishing beauty, as when Riley plays softly with just a minimal string accompaniment on the sixth track. 'Trio Ten' is previously unreleased, a quarter-hour of hardcore improvisation. It's tough going but adds to a valuable picture of where British improvisation was in the late '70s.

(*) Study – Witch Gong Game II/10 Maya 9402 Guy; John Korsrud (t); Ralph Eppel (tb); Bruce Freedman (ss); Graham Ord (ss, ts, pic); Saul Berson (as); Coat Cooke (ts, bs, f); Paul Plimley (p); Ron Samworth (g); Peggy Lee (clo); Clyde Reed, Paul Blaney (b); Dylan van der Schyff (d). 2/94.
Guy's large-scale compositions and improvisation structures are still not as widely regarded as, say, Braxton's, which baffles us. This is an important work, inspired by the Scottish painter and saxophonist Alan Davie, which has continued to be part of Guy's working repertoire (see Glasgow Improvisers Orchestra entry). It's a relatively unusual ensemble, mostly Canadians, but they take to the discipline vigorously, if without much brio.

 You Forget To Answer Maya MCD 9601 Guy; Mats Gustafsson (ss, ts, bs, fluteophone); Raymond Strid (d, perc). 11/94, 7/95.
Gustafsson is the obvious star, using his whole range of saxophones, adding devices like a crumpled beer-can in the bell of his baritone, and pioneering the fluteophone, which is basically a flute with a saxophone mouthpiece stuck on one end, and a clarinet stand jammed in the other (a device discovered by accident!). His sound is very strong and, in partnership with the barrel-chested Strid, he generates considerable excitement. It takes a couple of hearings before one realizes that Guy is the fulcrum and the driving force of this group, creating a complex fabric of sound and pushing the two younger men out into areas that don't so much suggest total abstraction as a kind of mathematical abstractness, a rapid computation of possibilities that is, as mathematics always is, deeply exciting. 'Schrödinger's Cat' is the most vibrant track: playful, wry and not taking itself too seriously. Great, detailed sound.

(*) Inscape – Tableaux Intakt 066 Guy; Herb Robertson (t); Johannes Bauer (tb); Per-Åke Holmlander (tba); Evan Parker (ss, ts); Mats Gustafsson (ss, ts, bs); Hans Koch (ts, cl); Marilyn Crispell (p); Raymond Strid (d, perc); Paul Lytton (perc). 98.
This might look like a cut-down version of the London Jazz Composers' Orchestra, with European and American stand-ins, but in fact this beautifully constructed piece is perfectly weighted for these forces. The emphasis lies very solidly on Guy's writing, but with soloists as individual as Robertson, Parker and Crispell it is clear that considerable freedom remains at the music's disposal. And that is how it feels listening to Inscape – Tableaux: Guy's conception unfolds organically and with an internal logic that has little to do with either the composer's or the performers' will. It's an intensely powerful experience, perhaps lacking the sheer intellectual beauty of some of the LJCO recordings, but with an intimacy and immediacy which they cannot hope to emulate.

 Odyssey /  Ithaca Intakt 070 / 096 Guy; Marilyn Crispell (p); Paul Lytton (perc). 99; 04.
A number of the pieces on Odyssey – 'Harmos', 'Double Trouble', 'Odyssey' – are Guy compositions, more or less familiar from other projects, and only four tracks are collectively improvised. The tonality is mostly quite sombre, though 'Rags' is a loud and skittish idea, and after the bass/percussion introduction 'Harmos' turns into a brooding processional that brings out the very darkest colours in Crispell's palette. The level of interaction is very high and there is constant empathy between the players. How much of this is down to Guy's scores and direction is difficult to gauge from the outside. These don't sound like dot-driven pieces; the emphasis is still very much on improvisation, but within very definite structures and trajectories. It's not without humour: 'Heavy Metal' gives Lytton a chance to explore his expanded kit and for the others to lean back a bit as well. The second record finds the trio sounding ever more settled and comfortable with each other's idiom. Here, Guy has been influenced in his compositions by the painting of George Vaughan and by the architecture of Daniel Liebeskind and others. Crispell has rarely played better.

(*) Birds & Blades, Studio & Live Intakt 080 2CD Guy; Evan Parker (ss, ts). 9/01.
Over two nights in Zurich, Guy and Parker recorded a studio session, followed by a live set at Sphères Bar-Buch-Bühne. On the first disc, they exploit the studio intelligently and affectingly, creating a language that seems to belong to the moment but also to a much wider experience. In a revealing liner-interview, Parker says of his playing partner that he turns sunlight into music, that Guy always knows where the sun is, even when it's cloudy. This might sound pretentious or sentimental, except there is a strong feeling in Guy's writing and playing that he keeps a numinous musical energy constantly in view, no matter what he's playing. That comes across very strongly on the live set in the Zurich book-bar. Parker's intense improvisations have their own emotional temperature, but one can hear him orbiting his old friend's boiling fusion of ideas, drawing heat and light from it. This is a remarkable encounter, new ground, a new intensity of expression from a pair of musicians who after 30 years might be thought to have exhausted each other's creative hydrogen entirely.

* Symmetries Maya MCD0201 Guy (b solo). 01.
The presence of Mingus compositions ('Weird Nightmare' and 'Eclipse') on a Barry Guy solo record shouldn't be surprising. The bassist's interest in jazz composition has always been implicit in his work. More unexpected is its appearance alongside an unaccompanied version of Guy's 'Odyssey' and another set of 'Fizzles'. Barry's compositional touch and mastery of his instrument are now part of the same sweeping vision. He seems to deal in archetypes and universals; hence a long-term interest in Alan Davie, whose art appears on the cover.

* Oort-Entropy Intakt 101 Guy; Herb Robertson (t, flhn); Johannes Bauer (tb); Per-Åke Holmlander (tba); Hans Koch (bcl); Evan Parker (ss, ts); Mats Gustafsson (bs, fluteophone); Agustí Fernández (p); Paul Lytton, Raymond Strid (perc). 04.
A second appearance from Guy's New Orchestra. The now familiar combination of written passages with improvisation has rarely been as well executed as in this piece, first performed at the Taktlos Festival. The Oort Cloud is the mass of undifferentiated material that floats beyond the edge of the solar system and seems to fuel comets and other transient visitors. The music accordingly has a strange and evanescent quality, working in shifting masses of sound that sometimes resolve into identifiable themes or lines but which more often remain distinct and separate. Robertson and Parker are both superb, but everyone contributes substantially.

* Portrait Intakt 123 As above and for London Jazz Composers' Orchestra. 72–06.
A near-perfect introduction to 30 years of vivid music-making, issued to celebrate Guy's 60th birthday. Who could listen to 'Harmos' and not think that this is one of the leading composer/improvisers of recent times?

Also, in brief:

 Fizzles Maya 9301. 9/91.
Solo bass and chamber bass; nicely varied sonorities, but not as compelling as the later Symmetries.

 gryffgryffgryffs Music & Arts 1003. 1/96.
The Guy–Gustafsson–Strid trio with Marilyn Crispell (p) on Radio Sweden.

 Gudira Nuscope 06. 5/97.
The title derives from Guy, Robert Dick (f) and Randy Raine-Reusch (zither, perc). An intriguing sound-world, almost Middle Eastern.

* Folio ECM 68460. 6/06.
A classically inclined piece with a complex background. Deeply impressive (and with a substantial proportion of improvisation) but at the frontiers of our concerns here.

Iro Haarla

PIANO HARP KEYBOARDS

Widow of percussionist Edward Vesala, carrying forward his vision and her own.

(*) Heart of a Bird TUM CD 004 Haarla; Rasmus Korsstrom (ss, ts); Uffe Krokfors (b). 1 & 3/03.

 Penguin Benguine TUM CD 011 Haarla; Anders Bergcrantz (t); Mikko Innanen (ss, as, bs); Rasmus Korsström (ss, ts); Mikko Iivanainen (g); Antti Hytti (b, saw); Tom Nekljudow, Tomas Törnroos (d); Johanna Iivanainen (v). 1/04.

* Northbound ECM 1918 Haarla; Mathias Eick (t); Trygve Seim (sax); Uffe Krokfors (b); Jon Christensen (d). 04.
Haarla's method, a gradual accretion of harmonic and melodic detail, can look naive and minimalistic, but not once the structure of a piece becomes obvious. She is an impressive architect, with a great sense of form and order, and the best of her recorded work stands strong alongside anything by her late husband. The duo album with new partner Krokfors combines an elegiac sadness with a heart-lifting joy in the wonder of things. The first of the records features the saxophonist on only four titles, leaving the bulk of the album to a dialogue that deepens as it develops. Korsström is most effective on 'Lullaby For The Unborn', when he fugues over the duo's extraordinary evocation of timeless time.

Penguin Benguine is still largely shaped by Haarla and Krokfors but attributed to the group Loco Motife. The imagery of the project title is very accurate, a similar distribution of small ideas and motifs, but on this occasion given a huge thrust of energy from an ensemble that, like Vesala's Sound & Fury, always manages to strike a brilliant balance between chaos and order. The best of the compositions hark back to '70s fusion of the Weather Report school, but with admixtures of folk, classical and modal jazz; an electrifying record.

Despite the cachet of ECM, Northbound's sound is no better than that of the earlier records. It marks, however, a steady deepening of Haarla's vision. The pieces are substantial, with a sense of drama that seems organic, unforced, mythical rather than the result of empty virtuosity. 'With Thanksgiving' builds from the familiar opposition of small cells. The equally substantial 'Light In The Sadness' is packed with musical detail. Emphasis falls less on soloing per se than on an ensemble sound made out of discrete and discontinuous elements, which means that individual artists are only highlighted in pursuit of a unified impact.

Haazz & Company

GROUP

Short-lived improvising ensemble founded by Kees Hazevoet.

 Unlawful Noise Atavistic Unheard Music Series ALP UMS219 Peter Bennink (as, sno); Peter Brötzmann (ts, cl); Han Bennink (cl, bcl, perc); Kees Hazevoet (p, cl); Johnny Dyani (b); Louis Moholo (d). 10/76.
A witches' kettle of clarinets gets this BIMHuis date underway. It doesn't get much quieter or more accommodating thereafter, and the second piece, 'Agitprop Bounce', is unremittingly hostile, but there is some phenomenal playing, plus a chance to hear some treasured figures in somewhat unfamiliar roles and contexts. Originally a KGB release (the label, rather than the Russian state police), it's a welcome recovery from the vault.

Bobby Hackett (1915–76)

CORNET, GUITAR, PIANO

One of the best-liked men in the business, he was born in Providence, Rhode Island, and began as a guitarist on the local scene. Influenced by Bix and Armstrong, he eventually formed his own group in 1938 and played at Benny Goodman's celebrated Carnegie Hall concert. He also worked with Glenn Miller but largely disappeared into the studios thereafter.

 Bobby Hackett, 1938–1940 Classics 890 Hackett; Sterling Bose, Harry Genders, Joe Lucas, Bernie Mattison, Jack Thompson, Stan Wilson (t); Jerry Borshard, George Brunies, Cappy Crouse, John Grassi, George Troup (tb); Brad Gowans (vtb, as); Bob Riedel (cl); Pee Wee Russell (cl, ts); Jerry Caplan, Louis Colombo (as); Bernie Billings, George Dessinger, Hank Kusen, Hammond Rusen (ts); Jim Beitus, Ernie Caceres (bs); Dave Bowman, Frankie Carle (p); Eddie Condon, Bob Julian, Bob Knight (g); Sid Jacobs, Eddie McKinney, Clyde Newcombe (b); Johnny Blowers, Don Carter, Andy Picard (d); Lola Bard, Linda Keene, Claire Martin, The Tempo Twisters (v). 2/38–2/40.

Louis Armstrong liked to keep the opposition under close observation and so, for much of the '40s, Hackett played second trumpet under the wing of the man who had influenced his style so much. He was probably too modest for leadership, but in 1938 made the first recordings under his own name for the Vocalion label, with whom he stayed for the next two years, even though there were more lucrative possibilities elsewhere.

Hackett had worked in a trio with Pee Wee Russell, and, though temperamentally they were very different, to put it mildly, the clarinettist and guitarist Eddie Condon were first-call recruitments to the Hackett orchestra which recorded four sides in February 1938. Of these the best is the pairing of 'At The Jazz Band Ball' and 'If Dreams Come true', the latter a vehicle for Lola Bard. A different band but the same formula for the November session that same year, with 'Poor Butterfly' the best showing for Hackett's sweetly melancholy cornet.

Thereafter he tended to use slightly larger bands with augmented saxophones. The sound is closer to the easy swing of the Miller Orchestra, and the romantic tension seems to have deserted the leader. Here and there, there are flashes of brilliance, as on 'Bugle Call Rag' and 'I Surrender, Dear' from July 1939, the latter with a vocal by (the first) Claire Martin, but the latter half of the disc is disappointing.

 Rare Live At Nick's And Boston Vintage Music Productions 0201 Hackett; Andy Russo (tb); Brad Gowans (vtb); Ernie Caceres (bs); Joe Marsala, Phil Olivella, Pee Wee Russell (cl); Al Drootin (cl, v); Andrew Ackers, Hank Duncan (p); George Barnes, Eddie Condon (g); Vic Lewis (g, c); Buzzy Drootin, Cliff Leeman, George Wettling (d); Zutty Singleton (d, v). 10/38–5/75.

Yet more excavated tapes, including studio tracks from Baldwin in October 1938, some 1947 and 1957 Armed Forces Radio transcriptions, live material from Nick's in 1949 and even music from the Scotch and Sirloin Restaurant in Boston from the year before Bobby's death. So, obscure as some of it is, this also serves as a curious career compilation.

(*) Backstage With Bobby Hackett: Milwaukee 1951 Jasmine JASCD 274 Hackett; Vic Dickenson (tb, v); Gene Sedric (cl, v); Nat Ray (p); Irv Manning (b); Johnny Vine (d). 5/51.

An entirely predictable set-list and some rather cursory playing from all concerned, this one never quite manages to build up a sense of occasion and the vocals are on the ropey side.

 Complete In A Mellow Mood And Soft Lights Sessions Lone Hill Jazz LHJ 1011 Hackett; Lou Stein (p); Billy Bauer (g); Arnold Fishkind (b); Denzil Best (d); strings. 53–55.

(*) Bobby Hackett 1948–1954 Classics 1403 As above, except add Cutty Cutshall (tb); Peanuts Hucko (cl); Ernie Caceres (bs); Charlie Queener, Joe Bushkin (p); Eddie Condon, Carl Kress, Danni Perri (g); Irv Manning, Bob Casey (b); Morey Feld, Don Marino, Cliff Leeman (d); Glenn Osser (cond). 6/48–11/54.

This was Hackett's first foray into 'genuine' easy listening, with two albums made for Capitol which prefigure the enormous success he would enjoy with Jackie Gleason (though Gleason collected most of the financial rewards). His sheer professionalism carries the music, and though the string parts are handled by small groups rather than orchestras, they do point at the way his career would go. The Classics disc covers some of the same ground but also offers three rare V-Disc titles from 1948, one a duet with Joe Bushkin, and nine titles made for Columbia by Hackett with just a rhythm section in support. Hackett is at his swinging best on 'Royal Garden Blues' and delicious on the ballads.

(*) Complete Live At The Voyager Room Lone Hill LHJ10271 Hackett; Bob Wilber (cl, as, ts, vib); Ernie Caceres, Dick Hafer (ts, bs); Dick Carey, Pinie Caceres (p); Tommy Gwaltney (vib); John Dengler (bsx, tba); Buzzy Drootin (d). 56–57.

Broadcast from the Henry Hudson Hotel in New York over a two-year period, this is one of Hackett's most interesting groups, co-fronted with Wilber and dipping into modern repertoire like Golson's 'Whisper Not', which is oddly but effectively delivered. The group has a distinctive sound, with Dengler's bass instruments giving a rich foundation to the other horns and Cary's arrangements all sparking interest.

(*) Bobby Hackett Sextet & Quintet Storyville STCD 8230 Hackett; Vic Dickenson, Urbie Green (tb); Bob Wilber (cl); Dave McKenna, John Ulrich (p); Franklin Skeets, Nabil Totah (b); Morey Feld, John Mead (d). 1/61–62, 1–2/70.

The first six tracks on this fine CD were originally made for a film by the Goodyear Rubber Company. Along with a further half-dozen they were released on a Storyville LP, now augmented with sessions from 1970 with Dickenson back on board as trombonist. Green is a fine player, but it is clear from the very simple themes chosen for the programme (perhaps a sop to the sponsors) that Hackett is playing more notes and relying less on Green for elaborated material than he would on the more formidable Dickenson. Vic is astounding on 'Wolverine Blues', which is very much pitched at his range, and then Bobby comes in with strength and delicacy and makes a small masterpiece of 'Satin Doll'. Good to hear big Dave McKenna making an early appearance on the 1962 session and already playing with his trademark two-handed style. Bob Wilber is also instantly recognizable, with that faintly hollow-toned, very reedy sound coming through on 'Sentimental Blues' and 'When The Saints', where he sounds like one of the old-time New Orleans guys.

(*) Butterfly Airs Storyville STCD 101 8344 Hackett; Sir Charles Thompson (p); Benny Wheeler (b); Ed Polito (d). 64–67.

Club recordings, with Sir Charles in good fettle and the boppish Polito really giving the group a good kick on the quicker tunes. It's Hackett's show, though, and he plays a mix of quality jazz material and the show-tunes he was buttering his bread with at this point. As an unadorned display of his powers, this might be his best record in print.

(*) Live At Roosevelt Grill: Volumes 1–4 Chiaroscuro CR(D) 105 / 138 / 153 / 179 Hackett; Vic Dickenson (tb); Dave McKenna (p); Jack Lesberg (b); Cliff Leeman (d). 3–5/70.

This was a very happy engagement for Hackett, with some of his favourite players in the band and Dickenson sharing the front line. In all, there were seven LPs of material issued, and the four discs Chiaroscuro have put together offer a vintage portrait of the kind of mainstream playing which, connoisseurs of the style will suggest, doesn't exist any more.

Also, in brief:

 At The Jazz Band Ball Jasmine JASCD 2579. 38–40.
Typical Hackett material, in nicer sound than on Classics.

 1943 World Broadcasting Jam Session Jazzology JCD 111. 12/43.
Self-explanatory: a date set up by Milt Gabler for WBS Inc. Not a vintage band, but some fine playing.

 V-Disc Recording Parties Storyville STCD 2094. 12/43–6/48.
Rare wartime sides, shared with Bob Haggart. Some good things and a highly atmospheric mix.

 Dr. Jazz: Volume 2 – 1951–1952 Storyville STCD 6042. 2/52.
Broadcast from Lou Terassi's on West 47th St as part of a WMGM series; with Vic Dickenson (tb).

 Last Encounter: Hollywood Bowl 1963 Rare Live Recordings RLR 88628. 60, 7/63.
Shared with some Teagarden material; Hackett only appears on half the material. There's other stuff from a 1960 date of Tea's in Minneapolis.

() The Swingin'est Gals In Town / Jazz Impressions Of Lionel Bart's 'Oliver!' / (*) Plays The Great Music Of Henry Mancini / Plays The Music Of Bert Kaempfert /  Hello Louis! / Plays Tony Bennett's Greatest Hits Collectables COL-CD-7410 / Collectables COL-CD-7411 / Collectables COL-CD-6697. 2/63–3/6; 5–11/63; 4/64–7/66.
Attractive easy-listening dates, though it's hard to find the best of Hackett in them, scattered as his good features are.

Charlie Haden (born 1937)

DOUBLE BASS

Born in Indiana, he was a child performer who began working in LA circles in 1957. Associated with Paul Bley and Ornette Coleman, later with Keith Jarrett, and was leader of his own Liberation Music Orchestra. Since 1980 he has combined free jazz, post-bop and the more lyrical and nostalgic sound of Quartet West.

(*) Liberation Music Orchestra Impulse! 051188-2 Haden; Don Cherry (c, f); Michael Mantler (t); Roswell Rudd (tb); Bob Northern (frhn, perc); Howard Johnson (tba); Perry Robinson (cl); Gato Barbieri (ts, cl); Dewey Redman (as, ts); Sam Brown (g, thumb p); Carla Bley (p, perc); Andrew Cyrille, Paul Motian (d, perc). 69.
The man from Shenandoah helped redefine modern jazz with Ornette Coleman's quartet and gave a new impetus to jazz bass. Haden is the ultimate timekeeper, bending and stretching the pulse like a true relativist, but never once forgetting his duties. This, coupled with a heartbeat tone, has placed him at the centre of hundreds of important sessions.

Ten years after making The Shape Of Jazz To Come, his best performance with Coleman, Haden recorded under the collectivist banner of the Liberation Music Orchestra a suite of revolutionary songs from the Spanish Civil War (arranged by Carla Bley), Ornette's 'War Orphans' and Haden's own 'Song For Che'. Like the almost contemporary Jazz Composers' Orchestra (of which most of these players were members), the LMO was a blend of collectivism and radical individualism. Ensemble was everything – but solos were everything, too. On the long suite of anarchist songs begun by 'El Quinto Regimiento', Brown, Cherry and Haden himself are featured, followed by Rudd in the middle section and the almost caustically toned Barbieri in the conclusion, 'Viva La Quince Brigada'. The bassist dominates the brooding 'Song For Che', with Cherry and Redman in support.

 Magico / (*) Folk Songs ECM 823474 / 827705 Haden; Jan Garbarek (ts, ss); Egberto Gismonti (g, p). 6/79; 11/79.
Though Garbarek tends to dominate the sound, it's Haden who calls the shots musically. He sounds more sombre than usual, perhaps in reaction to Gismonti and the saxophonist swooping like gulls overhead. Magico is fine, but Folk Songs endures, retaining an uncomplicated charm that wasn't to surface again until Quartet West.

(*) The Ballad Of The Fallen ECM 811546-2 Haden; Don Cherry (pkt-t); Michael Mantler (t); Gary Valente (tb); Sharon Freeman (frhn); Jack Jeffers (tba); Jim Pepper (ts, ss, f); Dewey Redman (ts); Steve Slagle (as, ss, cl, f); Mick Goodrick (g); Carla Bley (p, glock); Paul Motian (d). 11/82.
There were seismic shifts in both music and politics between 1969 and 1982, an entire decade of retrenchment and renewed attachment to order. The reconvened Liberation Music Orchestra was never going to sound as it had. What's immediately clear from this is that the LMO was in essence a small group, Redman, Bley, Haden and Motian, augmented ad hoc by low brass, additional horns and percussion. Almost all the energy comes from that axis and, if this time around the solo spots are less vibrant, even inflammatory, the big difference is that the arrangements are structural rather than decorative.

As before, and as again on Dream Keeper in 1990, the arrangements are by Bley. Most of the tracks are extremely short, building towards 'Too Late' (a superb bass/piano duet), 'La Pasionaria' and 'La Santa Espina'. The climax is as fiery as it has been long in coming.

(*) Quartet West Verve 831673-2 Haden; Ernie Watts (as, ts, ss); Alan Broadbent (p); Billy Higgins (d). 12/86.
The Liberation Music Orchestra was an ambitious ad hoc venture. Haden's diary had long been packed with dates for other leaders. The one thing seemingly not catered for was a regular, working small group. That changed with the formation of Quartet West, a lyrical ensemble featuring two unsung heroes of the mainstream, and with the recruitment of Larance Marable later a third; Higgins's credentials are, of course, unimpeachable.

The first of the Quartet West discs is still the best. Haden wanted to recapture something of the musical atmosphere he had soaked up in childhood, when he had starred in a family radio show. The later Haunted Heart was a rather mannered exercise in nostalgia. The 1986 record is in the style of the '40s, beautifully and idiomatically played. Watts and Broadbent are as aware of contemporary harmonics as one would expect, but they aren't prepared to dismiss an older language either. Haden himself straddles the broad highway that runs from Jimmy Blanton to Jimmy Garrison, and some of the phrase shapes irresistibly recall Wilbur Ware. Even allowing for the crystalline quality of the record, who could with confidence have dated these performances of 'Body And Soul' or 'My Foolish Heart'? 'Taney County' is a solo feature, an evocation of the days when he played and sang on the family show; the playing is firm, sure and very expressive.

(*) Charlie Haden's Private Collection: Volume 2 Naim CD 006 Haden; Ernie Watts (ts); Alan Broadbent (p); Paul Motian (d). 4/88.

(*) The Private Collection Naim 108 2CD As above, except add Billy Higgins (d). 8/87, 4/88.

This time the 'private' tapes come from a public event, and a stirring version of Quartet West reuniting Haden with Motian. Drummer and live setting affect the music more than a little, and Watts responds with an angular, sometimes almost caustic approach that diverges sharply from the other recordings by this group. The Private Collection includes Haden's 50th birthday concert. The recording sounds as if it was made on the fly, but the playing is good enough to make up for any technical insufficiencies. Haden programmes future associate Pat Metheny's 'Hermitage' and 'Farmer's Trust' (which also surfaces on Volume 2) with two little-known Parker tunes, 'Passport' and 'Segment', Miles Davis's 'Nardis' and Tony Scott's 'Misery'.

* The Montreal Tapes Verve 000197902 Haden; Joe Henderson (ts); Al Foster (d). 6/89.

From the same Haden retrospective/tribute as the sequence of Montreal Tapes previously reviewed in the Guide but released much later and not numbered as part of the series, this has been elegantly repositioned by Haden as a memorial to the saxophonist. The music comes across as fresh as paint, Joe with his sweeping, unstaunchable ideas, Foster with his sure-footed sense of time and melody, Haden solid but mobile and effortlessly inventive. They start with a wonderful version of 'Round Midnight', which sounds so rich with ideas the tune might have been written just moments before. After that a long, long 'All The Things You Are', on which Henderson again moves off into modal territory. Next, a surprise: a virtually free rendition of Haden's own 'In The Moment', which calls on maximum invention from all concerned. They round out the set with a blazing version of Charlie Parker's 'Passport'. The sound isn't 100 per cent perfect but it's a wonderful modern jazz set.

* In Montreal ECM 843813-2 Haden; Egberto Gismonti (g, p). 7/89.

The duos with Gismonti were only released in 2001 but they were well worth waiting for. The guitarist is in inspired form, from his own opening 'Salvador' onwards, and responds with typical intelligence and grace to Latin-tinged Haden compositions like 'First Song' and 'Silence'. He also reveals himself to be a more than competent pianist; the phrasing on his own 'Maracatu' is formidable, though here the tape quality isn't quite as pristine as one might like.

 Haunted Heart Verve 513078-2 Haden; Ernie Watts (ts); Alan Broadbent (p); Billy Higgins (d); Billie Holiday, Jeri Southern, Jo Stafford (v on record). 90.

 Always Say Goodbye Verve 521501-2 As above, except omit vocalists; add Stéphane Grappelli (vn). 7 & 8/93.

Flagrant exercises in nostalgia, utterly beyond the pale but for the complete lack of irony and detachment. Haunted Heart is Haden's Radio Days set, a reconstruction that uses old vocal recordings as scene-setting. Always Say Goodbye further underlines Haden's passion for Jo Stafford, adding material by Duke, Coleman Hawkins, Chet Baker and Django Reinhardt, which helps explain the charmingly unexpected addition of the late Stéphane Grappelli. Watts is in very good form.

The palimpsests on Lady's 'Deep Song' and Jeri Southern's 'Every Time We Say Goodbye' – and indeed Jo Stafford's 'Haunted Heart' – are cleverly conceived and executed, but the idea is a trifle overcooked and one almost yearns for some interactive medium which allows performance with or without the archive material, and at will.

CORE COLLECTION

* Beyond The Missouri Sky
Verve 537130-2 Haden; Pat Metheny (g, sitar). 96.

This has sold like SnoCones in the desert, a record that obviously appeals to Metheny fans first and foremost, but also to a cohort of New Agers who are hip to the unguarded frontiers of jazz. The original intention was to record a set of acoustic duets, but these have been embellished with guitar overdubs and with Metheny's previously unveiled acoustic guitar/sitar. At the heart of the set, two tunes dedicated to Haden's late parents: Roy Acuff's country classic 'The Precious Jewel' and the traditional 'He's Gone Away'. Also in the line-up, Jim Webb's 'The Moon Is A Harsh Mistress' and two themes from the movie Cinema Paradiso. It's easy enough to dismiss this music as undemanding, pastelly and soft-focus. As ever, it's also formidably disciplined, and there's a hint of rock only just under the surface.

(*) Night And The City Verve 539961-2 Haden; Kenny Barron (p). 9/96.

The liner-notes are by the novelist Rafi Zabor, author of The Bear Comes Home, one of the finest fictional creations ever with jazz as its background. The imprimatur is hardly needed, since Haden is playing exquisitely and in Barron he has a partner who knows the repertoire with the intimacy of a genuine creator. Dedicated to Manhattan, it's another atmospheric album built around luminous versions of 'For Heaven's Sake', 'Spring Is Here' and a slow, ardent 'Body And Soul'. Each man has an original, Barron's lovely 'Twilight Song', which gets the sun down and the lights on at the start of the set, and Haden's often-covered 'Waltz For Ruth' towards the end. If it has a downside, it is that the artistry often seems too easy, too unflustered. There is not much risk in any of these tracks.

* None But The Lonely Heart Naim CD022 Haden; Chris Anderson (p). 7/97.

Anderson is not only blind but a victim of the same brittle-bone ailment that afflicted Michel Petrucciani. A veteran of the Chicago scene, he has played with everyone from Bird to Sonny Rollins and along the way has acquired a formidable grasp of jazz harmonics. There isn't a single track on this magnificently recorded album of standards that doesn't bring something new to the original melody. Even 'Alone Together', that tiredest of all duo chestnuts, takes on a new resonance, while 'Body And Soul' and 'The Things We Did Last Summer' should henceforward be in the study file of every young jazz pianist. Both voices are recorded in a big, alert acoustic (Cami Hall in New York City) which brings out every detail in both bass and piano.

(*) The Art Of The Song Verve 547403-2 Haden; Ernie Watts (ts); Alan Broadbent (p); Larance Marable (d); Bill Henderson, Shirley Horn (v); orchestra, Murray Adler (cond). 2/99.

Brave to lay down a first public vocal recording for 45 years (aside from the scarcely noticed cameo on Carla Bley's Escalator Over The Hill); braver still to do it in the company of Shirley Horn and Bill Henderson. Shirley's opening reading of Bernstein's 'Lonely Town' establishes the note of nostalgic longing that has surrounded Haden's work for some years. Concert master Murray Adler's violin solo offers the perfect balance to her breathy intimacy.

Adler returns as soloist on Haden's own composition, 'Ruth's Waltz'; Henderson delivers the lyric with a sardonic poise which never sounds remotely cynical. His reading of 'Why Did I Choose You?' from The Yearling is no less arresting, a song that requires great maturity if it isn't to sound either immature or offhand. There follows a remarkable arrangement of Rachmaninov's 'Moment musical, Opus 16' which features just Haden (stately, precise and full-voiced) and Watts over strings. The other classical arrangement is Ravel's 'Prelude in A minor', a perfect tonality for Haden.

Broadbent and Watts team up with the orchestra on Jeri Southern's 'Theme For Charlie', which is thereby recast as a tribute to the leader and a prelude to his first recording vocal since the Haden family show days. Interesting that his choice should be the traditional 'Wayfaring Stranger', with its mournfully upbeat 'going over Jordan' conclusion. Another deftly crafted album from a great romantic.

 The Capitol Sessions Naim CD025 Haden; Mike Melvoin (p); Bill Henderson (v). 8/99.
Melvoin is a near-legendary figure in the music business, with credits that include the Beach Boys, John Lennon and Michael Jackson. This was a first reunion between bassist and pianist since 1962. It's a relaxed and easy-going affair, but with some fine musicianship on both sides. Henderson's vocals are limited to three tracks, which is about as much as the album needs. The real delight is the intelligently lyrical interplay between piano and bass, notably on 'Here's Looking At You' and 'Blues For Leroy'.

 American Dreams Verve 064096 Haden; Michael Brecker (ts); Brad Mehldau (p); Brian Blade (d); orchestra. 02.
It sounds here as if the American Dreamer set himself the task of soothing the country's post-9/11 woes with an album of soothingly hopeful songs. Given the quality of the band he assembled, the sliding strings (arranged by Alan Broadbent) seem like an overdose of unguent. The best of the material is, almost inevitably, jazz-based: Keith Jarrett's lovely 'Prism', Mehldau's 'Ron's Place' and Haden's own 'Nightfall' and the title-track. Pieces like 'America The Beautiful' and the soft-pop of Stephen Bishop's 'It Might Be You' need something more. Not irony, since that isn't part of Haden's self-remit, but certainly a more robust rethink.

The principals all play beautifully. Brecker is in comparatively reticent form, doubtless aware of what Haden got from Ernie Watts in Quartet West days. His phrasing is sparer and less emphatic than usual and Mehldau and Blade contribute to an open-textured performance that isn't so much 'jazz-lite' as needlessly soft focus.

* Nightfall Naim CD077 Haden; John Taylor (p). 10/03.
Recorded in the Roy O. Disney Music Hall at CalArts, this exquisite session pairs Haden with one of Britain's – and Europe's – finest piano improvisers. Taylor's career, and his approach here, ranges from free jazz to the most delicately lyrical quasi-classical forms, taking in folk and bebop along the way. He does some intriguing work direct on the piano strings on the opening 'Chairman Mao', but for the most part plays with limpid directness. Haden uses his bow to great effect on 'Song For The Whales' but largely limits himself to playing resonant melodic figures that combine considerable virtuosity with a delicious simplicity.

(*) Not In Our Name Verve 000494902 Haden; Seneca Black, Michael Rodriguez (t); Curtis Fowlkes (tb); Ahnee Sharon Freeman (frhn); Joe Daley (tba); Miguel Zenon (as); Chris Cheek, Tony Malaby (ts); Carla Bley (p); Steve Cardenas (g); Matt Wilson (d). 7/04.
So much of Haden's recent effort has been expended on lyrical Americana that it's a surprise to find the Liberation Music Orchestra still functioning. Arguably, it's never been more relevant. It's pointless to argue whether the music is as 'angry' or 'committed' as it was in previous incarnations, because Haden's politics have always seemed to combine passionate protest with strong affirmation of core values. That's the case here. There is an eclectic range of material, from Dvořák's Ninth Symphony, From The New World, to 'America The Beautiful' (cleverly proclaimed and subverted), Barber's Adagio for Strings, 'Lift Ev'ry Voice And Sing', 'Amazing Grace' and Pat Metheny, Lyle Mays and David Bowie's 'This Is Not America' from The Falcon And The Snowman. Just to round it out, an original each by Haden and Bley. It's a very beautiful collage and even a cursory hearing answers the question about Haden's stance on the material. It's respectful but with a certain impatience over the routine sentimentalization of these lovely tunes, particularly at a time when the country is again at war. He re-appropriates them and gives them a strong libertarian lilt.

 Heartplay Naim CD098 Haden; Antonio Forcione (g). 6/06.
We've always found Forcione overcooked, but Naim's other big signing is in relatively low-key form here, and content to follow Haden's lead. 'Silence' and 'La Pasionaria' are standard fare for the bassist and the guitarist has to work to keep pace; other pieces, like the closing threnody for Alice Coltrane ('For Turiya') are less familiar but no less exquisitely done. Not as appealing as the dates with Gismonti but still first rate.

Also, in brief:

(*) Duo Dreyfus Jazz Line 365052. 9/78.
Forgettable, if it didn't offer advance notice of Haden's gentler side. Guitarist Christian Escoudé is the other half of the pairing.

 Silence / (*) First Song Soul Note 121222 / 121172. 11/87; 4/90.
Chet Baker was dead by the time the second of these was recorded, but the remaining trio of pianist Enrico Pieranunzi and drummer Billy Higgins shine at the reunion.

 In Angel City Verve 873031-2. 6/88.
QW with a new drummer, Larance Marable, and for one track Alex Cline. Enjoys uncertain circulation now.

 Steal Away: Spirituals, Hymns And Folk Songs Verve 527249-2. 7/94.
Duos with Hank Jones (p), inspired by the recent death of Haden's beloved mother.

 Now Is The Hour Verve 529827-2. 95.
Reliable product from the well-established Quartet West. Ernie Watts (ts) steals the show again and the final sequence – 'Palo Alto', 'Marable's Parable' and the title-track – is very fine.

 Nocturne Verve 013611. 99.
This is curiously one-dimensional, pinned to a single mood by Ignacio Berroa's inflexible rhythm. Pat Metheny (g) and Joe Lovano (ts) fail to set it alight.

 Land of the Sun Verve 000288702. 12/03.
Haden, Gonzalo Rubalcaba (p), Joe Lovano (ts) and guests in an exploration of Mexican folk music by composers Marroquin and Sabre, Lara and Manzanero. Pretty and evocative but without staying power.

Dick Hafer (born 1927)

TENOR SAXOPHONE

A doughty Hermanite, he only began recording on his own account in middle age.

 In A Sentimental Mood Progressive 7094 Hafer; Johnny Varro (p); Johnny Leitham (b); Gene Estes (d). 12/91.

There is a slightly later and arguably better Fresh Sound date from 1994, Prez Impressions, but it was unavailable as we went to press, so it's thin pickings for such a distinguished career. Hafer, though, emerges as a more than capable sole horn, and while the set-list isn't exactly avant-garde, it isn't predictable either, with Al Cohn and Bob Enevoldsen themes that aren't often called on the stand, plus a nice version of Estes's standard-based line 'Forever After', whose antecedent will be obvious when you hear it. A thoroughly enjoyable disc.

Tim Hagans (born 1954)

TRUMPET

The Ohian worked in the Kenton and Herman bands before moving to Sweden, where he's MD of the Norrbotten Big Band.

 Future Miles ACT 92352 Hagans; Scott Kinsey (ky); Norrbotten Big Band. 02.

(*) Beautiful Lily Pirouet 2016 Hagans; Marc Copland (p); Drew Gress (b); Bill Stewart (d). 1–6/05.

Hagans's Blue Notes of the '90s have all gone, which is why he failed to figure in our last edition. These, at least, offer some reminder of his striking talent in its different incarnations. The small group looks, at a glance, something out of the ordinary and it delivers something out of the ordinary, too. Copland is consistently underrated and his co-written themes here are typically unhackneyed. Gress and Stewart make for an inventive rhythm section, while Hagans blows comfortably over the top, though unlike some big-band players working on the smaller scale he doesn't mistake energy and high notes for real interest. Every phrase has weight and character. The only minor false note is a version of 'Footprints' that doesn't quite come off.

Hagans has been working with the Norrbotten outfit for some time now. It's a big, professional blowing outfit that knows how to deliver a chart with surgical correctness, but has enough brawny exuberance not to make it sound surgical. Kinsey isn't the obvious front-man, but it's worth noting that this isn't a set of Miles covers delivered as pastiche or doused in keyboards, but a genuinely imaginative suite conceived 'in the tradition' but with nothing slavish about it.

Gerard Hagen

PIANO

Deft player who ranges between mainstream and progressive.

 Far Horizons Resurgent 121 Hagen; Gary Foster (as); Domenic Genova (b); Jerry Kalaf (d). 7/98.

 Stay Tuned Sea Breeze 3049 Hagen; Chuck Manning (ts); Larry Koonse (g); Henry Franklin, Domenic Genova (b); Jerry Kalaf (d). 3–6/00.

Born (like Bix!) in Bismarck, North Dakota, Hagen brings solid self-reliance and a spirit of independence to his playing. When he tackles a standard like 'Sweet And Lovely' on Stay Tuned, he does so with seriousness and restraint, saving his more exploratory work for more abstract contexts. The basic trio is augmented by some effective guest spots, most obviously Koonse's crackerjack contribution to Steve Swallow's 'Eiderdown' (Stay Tuned again); 'Up Jumped Spring' and 'Confirmation' reveal him to be a pianist who avoids unnecessary displays, preferring to work with the structure of a tune. Kalaf is a revelation, a spirited drummer who writes effectively. He's at his best on the earlier record, and particularly in Foster's company.

John Hagen (born 1950)

SOPRANO, ALTO AND TENOR SAXOPHONES

Versatile veteran who studied with Bill Dixon and others and has toured with Steely Dan's Donald Fagen.

 Segments Cadence CJR1171 Hagen; Denman Maroney (p); Shanir Blemenkranz, Mark Dresser (b); Todd Capp, Gerry Hemingway (d). 04.

Hagen was 54 when made his debut as leader. The 'segments' of the title are short, melodic figures which are the starting-point for solo and group improvisations. Given the presence of Dresser and Hemingway on some tracks, and the multi-instrumental approach, it's inevitable that some will compare his work with Braxton's. That's potentially misleading, except that Hagen's approach to material is similar to some of the great man's information systems. Hagen isn't a showy or dramatic player, but he repays close and repeated attention.

Bob Haggart (1914–98)

DOUBLE BASS

A self-taught and individual player who was the last survivor of Bob Crosby's Bobcats.

(*) A Portrait Of Bix Jazzology 149 Haggart; Tom Pletcher (c); Ron Hockett (cl, Cmel); Jack Howe (ts); Spencer Clark (bsx); Mike Katz (p); Doug Jams (d). 3/86.

(*) The Music Of Bob Haggart Arbors ARCD 19274 Haggart; Jon-Erik Kellso, Randy Sandke, Byron Stripling (t); John Allred, Wycliffe Gordon (tb); Ken Peplowski (cl); Jack Stuckey (bs); Ed Metz Sr, Derek Smith (p); Howard Alden (g); Greg Cohen (b); Joe Ascione, Tony DeNicola (d). 3/95, 6/02.

 The All-Stars At Bob Haggart's 80th Birthday Party Arbors ARCD 19265 Haggart; Ruby Braff, Yank Lawson, Randy Sandke, Joe Wilder (t); Dan Barrett, George Masso (tb); Kenny Davern, Jerry Jerome, Walter Levinsky, Ken Peplowski, Flip Phillips, Allan Vaché , Bob Wilber (reeds); Rick Fay (reeds, v); Dick Hyman, Derek Smith, Ralph Sutton (p); Howard Alden, George Van Eps, Bucky Pizzarelli (g); Jack Lesberg (b); Milt Hinton (b, v); Jake Hanna, Bobby Rosengarden, Jackie Williams (d). 3/94.

 Hag Leaps In Arbors ARCD 19156 Haggart; John Bunch (p); Bucky Pizzarelli (g). 11/95.

Impressive to think that Hag could even think about leaping when he made the first Arbors disc at the age of 81. It's a late flowering for a player who seemed a link to the first generations of jazz men. Pletcher actually sounds a ringer for Bix on the first date, so that connection works well and it's a fond, respectful set of obvious themes. The Swing Three date kicks off with 'Big Noise From Winnetka' and checks out on 'Air Mail Special', so it's more obviously in a swing-era mode. The other two dates are obviously tribute projects for the great man. The Music Of concentrates on the Porgy And Bess arrangements Haggart made at the end of the '50s, lovely, delicately nuanced charts played by an excellent contemporary ensemble led by Sandke. There's some other material as well, including Bob himself on 'Big Noise ...'. The birthday party's a mass bash, and a glance at the line-up promises some vivid cameos at worst. He made a late start, but Haggart checked out with some terrific records to his name.

Joe Haider (born 1936)

PIANO

Born in Darmstadt but seems to have favoured jazz over serialism. House pianist in Munich's Domicile club for many years, he has co-led orchestras with Slide Hampton, Conte Candoli and others.

 Anniversary Big Band JHM 3603 Haider; Ingolf Burkhalter, Bert Joris, John Longo, Wolfgang Pemberger, James Zollar (t); Marc Godfroid, Vincent Lachat, Erik van Lier, Danilo Moccia (tb); George Robert (as, cl); Jürg Morganthaler (as, f); Domenic Landolf, Andy Scherrer (ss, ts); Roman Schwaller (ts); Rainer Heute (bs, bcl); Christian Diener, Reggie Johnson (b); Mario Gonzi, Wolfgang Haffner (d). 92.

 Magic Box JHM 3601 Haider; Bert Joris (t, flhn); Roman Schwaller (ts); Isla Eckinger (b); Wolfgang Haffner (d). 94.

 Katzenvilla JHM 3622 Haider; Isla Eckinger (b); Pierre Favre (d, perc). 01.

 Grandfather's Garden /  A Magyar/The Hungarian/Die Ungarische JHM 3619 / 3626 Haider; Giorgos Antoniou (b); Daniel Aebi (d). 4/00; 11/01.

 Mysterious Double Moon 711 Haider; Thomi Geiger (ss); Giorgos Antoniou (b); Daniel Aebi (d); Modern String Quartet. 05.

Haider has made an impressive number of records in all formats from trio to big band, but circulation is inconsistent. He's well represented on a recent compilation of German jazz from the '60s called Forum West, with the likes of Hans Koller, Rolf and Joachim Kühn, and Wolfgang Dauner, but is otherwise not always easy to find. One of the most intelligent writer/arranger/leaders around, he deserves wider exposure. The trio records – both the earlier ones with Eckinger and the later with Antoniou and Aebi – are uniformly good, blending complex boppish language with Haider's signature repositioning of swing/bop idiom. The Anniversary record is not a patch on similar work with Hampton and Brigitte Dietrich. The recent double-quartet record shouldn't conjure up anything like Ornette Coleman's Free Jazz, since the other half of the group is a string quartet and the idiom is still relatively conventional, though as ever idiosyncratic in delivery.

Also, in brief:

 Keep Hot JHM 3604. 86.

Really a Mel Lewis record, the drummer guesting with Joe's fine orchestra.

Al Haig (1924–82)

PIANO

A master of bebop piano, he was much neglected, never making a single record for a major label. His work with Parker, Gillespie, Getz and others shows how fine a group pianist he was, but his 'name' work conveys a rare mastery: an understated, 'cool' stylist inside the hot medium of bop.

 Trio And Sextet Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1929 Haig; Stan Getz, Wardell Gray (ts); Jimmy Raney (g); Bill Crow, Tommy Potter, Gene Ramey (b); Lee Abrams, Charles Perry (d); Carlos Vidal (perc). 5/49–3/54.

♛ * The Al Haig Trio Esoteric Fresh Sound FSRCD 38 Haig; Bill Crow (b); Lee Abrams (d). 3/54.

* Al Haig Trio Fresh Sound FSRCD 1613 As above. 3/54.

* 3/13/54 One Day Session Fresh Sound FSRCD 432 As above, except add Harry Babasin (b); Larry Bunker (d). 3/54, 9/52.

 Al Haig Today! Fresh Sound FSR-CD 1621 Haig; Eddie De Haas (b); Jim Kappes (d). 65.

If Haig denied himself the high passion of Bud Powell's music, he was still a force of eloquence and intensity, and his refined touch lent him a striking individuality within his milieu. The early sextet material, now on OJC, was made for Dawn and Seeco, though Al was also recording under Getz's leadership for larger imprints. The first trio album, originally released on Esoteric, is a masterpiece that can stand with any of the work of Powell or Monk. Haig's elegance of touch and line, his virtually perfect delivery, links him with a pianist such as Teddy Wilson rather than with any of his immediate contemporaries, and certainly his delivery of an unlikely tune such as 'Mighty Like A Rose' has a kinship with the language of Wilson's generation. Yet his complexity of tone and the occasionally cryptic delivery are unequivocally modern, absolutely of the bop lineage. Voicings and touch have a symmetry and refinement that other boppers, from Powell and Duke Jordan to Joe Albany and Dodo Marmarosa, seldom approached. The second Trio album, originally released on Period and also on OJC, dates from the same day of recording and is virtually as good and they're also now together on a single disc with a bonus track from 1952 with Babasin and Bunker. Haig's bittersweet reduction of 'Round Midnight' and a solo 'Don't Blame Me' (one of three unaccompanied cuts) are unmissable.

Today! is a stray bulletin from the mid-'60s, originally very rare on vinyl, and several of the tunes sound foreshortened. 'Bluesette' and 'Polka Dots And Moonbeams' still show that Haig's powers were undimmed.

* Invitation Spotlite SPJ-CD 604 Haig; Gilbert Rovere (b); Kenny Clarke (d). 1/74.

It's poorly recorded, the piano is unexceptional, and Rovere and Clarke do little more than accompany in the most basic manner, but Haig's playing is superb. If ever there was a performance to assert his complete mastery of not just bebop but the wider refinements of piano jazz, this is it. He makes elaborate but entirely logical fantasias out of the likes of 'Invitation' and 'If You Could See Me Now', both hands engaged in immensely detailed yet graceful lines. His touch and nuance are sublime. Unlucky in the studios, Haig never made a better 'modern' record than this, and it's a source of frustration that it's not better registered and that it isn't just one of many.

 Ornithology Progressive PCD 7024 Haig; Jamil Nasser (b); Frank Gant (d). 77.

(*) Un Poco Loco Spotlite SPJ-CD 701 As above, except omit Gant; add Tony Martin (d). 9/78.

 Expressly Ellington Spotlite SPJ-CD 620 As above, except add Art Themen (ts). 10/78.

Haig went through a burst of recording late in his life, and he remained a marvellous musician to the end. Ornithology is so-so. Nasser and Gant are just workmanlike, and Al himself is sometimes content to take it easy, though his version of Strayhorn's 'Daydream' reminds us how he might have been the premier poet of bebop. Un Poco Loco is rather better. The set-list includes 'Naima', Cedar Walton's 'Voices Deep Within Me' and 'All Blues', and Haig's investigation of these is as thorough and elegant as with the bebop tunes he also delivers. The quartet date with Themen isn't quite as strong, the Ellington tunes played graciously enough but hardly in a challenging way.

Also, in brief:

(*) Meets Master Bop Saxes Definitive DRCD 11136. 48–49.
Early material with Wardell Gray and Stan Getz (ts). Al's there, but hardly at centre-stage.

 Al Haig Quartet Fresh Sound FRSCD 12. 9/54.
With guitarist Benny Weeks, Teddy Kotick (b) and Phil Brown (d). Non-vintage.

 Bebop Live Spotlite SPJ-CD 623. 5/82.
A scruffy recording of a 1982 gig in Hampstead with Peter King (as) and Art Themen (ts); the pianist's greatness glimmers through, just about.

Sadik Hakim (1919–83)

PIANO

Born Argonne Thornton. He recorded with Charlie Parker in 1944.

 Witches, Goblins, Etc Storyville SCCD 31091 Hakim; Errol Walters (b); Al Foster (d). 11/77.
 Lazy Bird Storyville STCD 4156 Hakim; Errol Walters (b); Clifford Barbaro (d). 4/80.
Hakim was present at Charlie Parker's iconic 'Ko-Ko' session, but his exact role is somewhat controversial. Whatever the case, subsequent fame eluded him, and little survives but for a scattering of LPs on Progressive and these later dates. He's a decent bop pianist in the Powell mould, but there isn't much individuality to the playing, and while some of Hakim's originals on the Steeplechase have an arresting quality, his trios (Foster aside) play like the obscurities they are. Nevertheless, a player who had his moment in the spotlight.

The Halfway House Orchestra

GROUP

Pioneer New Orleans band, early to record.

 The Halfway House Orchestra 1925–1928 Jazz Oracle BDW 8001 Albert Brunies (c); Joe Loyacano (tb); Sidney Arodin, Leon Rappolo (cl, as); Charlie Cordella (cl, ts); Red Long, Mickie Marcour, Bill Whitmore (p); Bill Eastwood, Angelo Palmisano (bj); Chink Martin (tba, b); Leo Adde, Emmett Rogers (d). 25–28.
The Halfway House was a supper club, midway between New Orleans and Lake Pontchartrain, and the patrons were entertained by the (white) band led by Albie Brunies, a strong cornet-player who is the one musician to play throughout all these sessions. Rappolo (from the Rhythm Kings) is on the rowdy first session for OKeh, but the later sides (for Columbia) use either Cordella or the excellent Arodin. The band is sometimes polite, but at their best they bridge a gap between jazz and dance music and are hot enough to impress, despite some unpromising material.

Edmond Hall (1901–67)

CLARINET

A New Orleans man, often unfairly eclipsed by lesser players. His three brothers all played clarinet too, but Ed spent several years with Claude Hopkins in the '30s and then freelanced for the rest of his life.

* Edmond Hall 1936–1944 Classics 830 Hall; Billy Hicks (t, v); Sidney De Paris, Emmett Berry (t); Vic Dickenson, Fernando Arbello (tb); Meade Lux Lewis (cel); Cyril Haynes, Teddy Wilson, Eddie Heywood, James P. Johnson (p); Red Norvo (vib); Leroy Jones, Jimmy Shirley, Al Casey, Carl Kress (g); Al Hall, Israel Crosby, Billy Taylor, Johnny Williams (b); Arnold Boling, Big Sid Catlett (d); Henry Nemo (v). 6/37–1/44.
 Edmond Hall 1944–1945 Classics 872 Hall; Irving Randolph (t); Benny Morton, Henderson Chambers (tb); Harry Carney (bs); Teddy Wilson, Don Frye, Ellis Larkins (p); Everett Barksdale (g); Johnny Williams, Alvin Raglin, Billy Taylor (b); Big Sid Catlett, Arthur Trappier, Jimmy Crawford (d). 5/44–45.
* Profoundly Blue Blue Note 821260-2 Similar to above discs. 2/41–5/44.
Hall was one of the most popular musicians in the Eddie Condon circle, but his experience – with big bands in the '20s and '30s and with Louis Armstrong's All-Stars – was much wider than that. He played in a driving manner that married the character of his New Orleans background with the more fleet methods of the swing clarinettists. Classics 830 starts off with an obscure session by Billy Hicks and his Sizzlin' Six, with Hall as a sideman, but the meat of it is in Hall's first three sessions for Blue Note and a stray Commodore date. This is outstandingly fine midstream swing, with superb contributions from De Paris, Berry, the incomparably refined Wilson, Lewis, James P. Johnson and, above all, the magnificent Dickenson, whose solos on the blues are masterful statements of jazz trombone. And there is Hall himself. Sound is mainly excellent, but the final Blue Note date is a bit scruffy. The next Classics disc is less involving: the first session, with Morton and Carney, is more fine small-group swing, but eight tracks in a quartet with Wilson are comparatively sedate and the two final band sessions merely agreeable.

Collectors will welcome Blue Note's own edition of their three Ed Hall sessions on Profoundly Blue. The sound is, surprisingly, not much better than on the Classics discs, with a lot of surface noise on several tracks, but the music stands tall and three alternative takes are well worth having. The May 1944 session is especially pleasing here, with Carney and Morton getting turns in the spotlight which are as rare as Hall's own.

 Edmond Hall With Alan Elsdon Jazzology JCD-240 Hall; Alan Elsdon (t); Phil Rhodes (tb); Andy Cooper (cl); Colin Bates (p); John Barton (g); Mick Gilligan (b); Billy Law (d). 66.
 Edmond Hall Quartet Jazzology JCD-207 Hall; Colin Bates (p); Mick Gilligan (b); Billy Law (d). 11/66.
* Edmond Hall In Copenhagen Storyville STCD 6022 Hall; Finn Otto Hansen (t); Arne Bue Jensen (tb); Jørgen Svare (cl); Jørn Jensen (p); Bjarne 'Liller' Pedersen (bj); Jens Sølund (b); Knud Ryskov Madsen (d). 12/66.

 Edmond Hall's Last Concert Jazzology JCD-223 Hall; Bobby Hackett, George Poor (c); Joe Robertson (tb); Joe Battaglia, Evans Schwartz, Marie Marcus (p); Wally Livingston, Russell Best (b); Dale Pearman, Bob Saltmarsh (d). 4/64–3/67.

Hall toured until his death, and there is a rash of late recordings. The first two Jazzology discs come from a British tour with Elsdon's band: one with the horns, one without. The date with horns just has it for the better variety, though this is in the main an unremarkable line-up, and Hall's careful heat and elegant, supple parts outclass his surroundings, even in his final year. Last Concert comes from only days before he died. Sitting in with Hackett and some local players from South Byfield, Massachusetts, Hall still sounds in great shape. So does Hackett: but the indifferent band and low-fi sound make this for fans only.

The Copenhagen date makes the best memorial. 'I like to work in different contexts, but I can only play one style': hot, fluent, swinging, pinching the odd note here and there, but mostly displaying a clean and supple line, here is Hall at his best. The Papa Bue band play on two tracks, the rhythm section and Hall on most of the others, and while the Danes aren't virtuosos, they know how to respect a player who is. Hall even turns in a lovely a cappella treatment of 'It Ain't Necessarily So'. Splendid remastering of a beautiful record.

Also, in brief:

 The Alternative Takes: Volume 1 – 1940–1944 /  ... Volume 2 – 1944 Neatwork 2043 / 2052. 10/40–7/44; 7–11/44.

Hardcore collectors only, surely?

Jim Hall (born 1930)

GUITAR

Played on the West Coast with Chico Hamilton and Jimmy Giuffre in the '50s, then returned East to work with Sonny Rollins and Art Farmer. Many years were spent in studio work, but in his 50s and 60s Hall became much more prominent as a leader and is now recognized as a subtle master of his instrument.

 The Unreleased Sessions Lone Hill Jazz LHJ 1182 Hall; Buddy Collette, Bud Shank (as, f); Red Mitchell (b); Shelly Manne (d). 56, 59.

 The Complete Jazz Guitar Gambit 69259 Hall; John Lewis, Carl Perkins (p); George Duvivier, Percy Heath, Red Mitchell (b); Connie Kay (d). 1/56–7/60.

 Where Would I Be? Original Jazz Classics OJCLD 649 Hall; Ben Aronov (p); Malcolm Cecil (b); Airto Moreira (d). 7/71.

Hall's smooth, gentlemanly approach got seriously interesting only once he had passed his 60th birthday and started to work with larger groups. The problem with these early sessions boils down to their unvarying niceness. Totally professional, Hall delivers reliably every time, with no apparent difference in approach between live and studio sessions. He can certainly never be accused of pointless redundancy, for his solos are always unimpeachably controlled. The Jazz Guitar date with Perkins and Mitchell was originally issued on Pacific with overdubbed drums (Larry Bunker), which seemed a curious decision, though perhaps an understandable reaction to their relative blandness. It was also a very short LP. The Gambit reissue adds other material from the period, which makes it somewhat more desirable. The Lone Hill material is valuable documentation, but not even Jim's staunchest fan would accuse these sets of concealing any excitement.

 The Storyteller (Circles / All Across The City) Concord CCD 2131 2CD Hall; Gil Goldstein (p, ky); Don Thompson (p, b); Steve LaSpina, Rufus Reid (b); Terry Clarke (d). 3/81, 5/89.

Circles finds him more conventionally swinging than for some time, but in a rather oddly weighted group in which Thompson doubles on piano and bass (Reid's only in for the fine 'All Of A Sudden My Heart Sings' – did he show up late?). There's not a lot of substance to it, and it would be as flat as a pancake if it weren't for Clarke's peppy drumming, a feature of most Hall records from here on.

All Across The City contains some of Hall's most innovatively 'contemporary' playing. Certainly, no one thrown into the deep end of 'R.E.M. Movement' – a Gil Goldstein composition with free passages from all the players – would suspect the provenance. Elsewhere the material is more familiar. 'Young One (For Debra)' consciously recalls Bill Evans and 'Waltz For Debby'. Of the other originals, the gentle 'Jane' is dedicated to Mrs Hall, composer in turn of 'Something Tells Me'; 'Drop Shot' and 'Big Blues' are tougher but also more humorous in conception, the former featuring Goldstein's electronic keyboards to good effect, the latter an unexpected tribute to Stanley Turrentine. The title-track, a gentle and slightly wondering cityscape, also recalls Hall's association with Bill Evans. Hall, though, is much more than an impressionistic colourist. His reading of Monk's 'Bemsha Swing' confirms his stature as one of the most significant harmonic improvisers on his instrument.

(*) Dedications & Inspirations Telarc CD 8365 Hall (g solo). 10/93.

Not entirely solo, since here he experiments with a multi-playback system that allows him to overlay rich contrapuntal patterns and often surprisingly austere textures. The telling thing is that at no point does the technology ever render it difficult to recognize Jim Hall in there. The voice is his from start to finish, and what he does with 'Bluesography' and 'In A Sentimental Mood' could bear no other stylistic signature. It's perhaps a little too much sheer technical virtuosity to absorb at album length, but track by track it's hard to beat.

 Dialogues Telarc CD 83369 Hall; Tom Harrell (flhn); Joe Lovano (ts); Bill Frisell, Mike Stern (g); Gil Goldstein (acc); Scott Colley (b); Andy Watson (d). 2/95.

There are only two duet tracks, both with Goldstein on his regular and bass accordion; the rest are small-group performances designed to highlight horns and guitar, and with Colley and Watson taking pretty much a back seat. With the exception of the closing 'Skylark', which features Harrell in exquisite form, all the tunes are Hall originals, written with a playing partner in mind – 'Frisell Frazzle', 'Calypso Joe', and 'Stern Stuff' – and it is Mike Stern who delivers the surprise of the session with an offbeat blues sound on 'Uncle Ed'. Frisell is in typically playful form on the opening dedication, reappearing on 'Simple Things', which has more of a country feel. The saxophonist has had more convincing days, but he manages to give his two appearances a reasonably personal slant. Telarc recordings are famously good, but on this occasion John Snyder and Jane Hall have outdone themselves. Holding back a notch on the rhythm section was a risky stratagem, but what they have produced has near-perfect balance and no loss of definition.

(*) Textures Telarc CD 83402 Hall; James Finegan, Ryan Kisor (t); Claudio Roditi (flhn); Conrad Herwig, Jim Pugh (tb); Alex

Brofsky (frhn); Marcus Rojas (tba); Joe Lovano (ss); Louis Schulman (vla); Myron Lutzke (clo); Scott Colley (b); Terry Clarke (d); Derek DiCenzo (steel d); Gordon Gottlieb (perc); strings. 9/96.

As he neared 70, Hall grew more adventurous. The main drawback of this well-crafted record is that it attempts too much in too short a span. A brass-dominated 'Fanfare' with Hall, Roditi and Pugh all featured; a couple of tracks with strings; a 'string quartet'; and the curious multicultural 'Sazanami', with its steel pans part. 'Ragman' is a further dialogue with Lovano, a plaintive evocation of urban loneliness and decay, beautifully constructed. 'Quadrologue', with Hall's electric standing in for first violin and Colley's bass shifting the tonality downward, is a piece of latter-day Third Stream, while 'Passacaglia' is in near-classical form, a little soft-centred on repeated hearings but an elegant line. Jim's daughter, Devra, contributes an illuminating liner-note.

(*) Panorama Telarc CD 83408 Hall; Art Farmer (flhn); Slide Hampton (tb); Greg Osby (as); Kenny Barron, Geoff Keezer (p); Scott Colley (b); Terry Clarke (d). 12/96.

Cut live at the Village Vanguard, where Hall invites various masters to sit in with his own trio. It makes for a bitty album, but there are some specific highlights, most particularly Osby's two turns: his blues playing on 'Furnished Flats' is as fine as anything he's set down on record (and paved the way for Hall to feature on one of Osby's own sets). All-original material keeps the situation from turning into a series of walk-on cameos and the results are more than pleasing.

 Jazzpar Quartet + 4 Storyville 4230 Hall; Chris Potter (ts); Thomas Ovesen (b); Terry Clarke (d); Zaploski String Quartet. 98.

No one has deserved the Jazzpar accolade more, and Jim's musical reaction to the prestigious Danish music prize is a fine set of originals and standards, performed by his own group and – '+ 4' – by the Zaploski String Quartet, who deliver a well-read performance of his early classical piece, 'Thesis'. The strings are also present for a run-through of Hendrix's 'Purple Haze' which owes a good deal to the Kronos concept; but the real highlights of this record are the more straightforward jazz performances: a duo with saxophonist Potter on 'Chelsea Bridge' and a wonderfully paced 'Stella By Starlight'.

(*) By Arrangement Telarc 83436 Hall; Jamie Finegan, Lew Soloff (t); Tom Harrell (t, flhn); Conrad Herwig, Jim Pugh (tb); Joe Lovano (ss, cl); Greg Osby (as); Pat Metheny (g); Scott Colley (b); Terry Clarke (d); New York Voices; strings. 98.

There are some real treasures on this set, which, as the title suggests, as well as featuring the guitarist is arranged by him. All the settings are extremely imaginative. 'Waltz For Debby' has the New York Voices singing Gene Lees's words to the Bill Evans classic; a string section backs Hall and Metheny on Gordon Jenkins's 'Goodbye', and Harrell contributes a magnificent solo on Paul Desmond's all too rarely covered 'Wendy'. The larger-scale arrangements are consistently excellent, but it is Hall's ability to invest a small group, even a duo, with an almost orchestral quality that makes him stand out. Lovely stuff.

(*) Grand Slam: Live At The Regattabar Telarc 83485 Hall; Joe Lovano (ts); George Mraz (b); Lewis Nash (d). 1/00.

What a night this must have been at the Cambridge, Massachusetts, nightspot. Hall was in great form and his companions for the evening are well up to the challenge. Lovano contributed his own 'Chelsea Rendez-Vous', which kicks in straight off the back of Jim's own extended 'Slam' and gets the set off to a belting start. Joe's second composition, 'Blackwell's Message', is in a relatively unfamiliar idiom for Jim, but he rises to it magnificently, as he has to every challenge throughout his career, and the playing is great throughout the group. Nash and Mraz are masters at this kind of thing, giving the rhythm section edge as well as a profound lyricism. Hall's 'All Across The City', now an established favourite, tees up the ending, which, surprisingly, is another Lovano tune, the joyous 'Feel Free'. An almost faultless set and straight up there with Hall's best. We'd be tempted to give Joe joint credit, which is why the star rating is fairly modest.

(*) Jim Hall & Basses Telarc 83506 Hall; Scott Colley, Charlie Haden, Dave Holland, Christian McBride, George Mraz (b). 2/01.

The title is pretty much self-explanatory, a series of duets with some of the finest bass-players on the scene. Much of the material is original, and a good deal is improvised, like the set of 'Abstracts' that draw in Haden, Colley and Mraz during the course of the set. Exemplary playing throughout, but it's Jim who stars.

* Magic Meeting ArtistShare 0002 Hall; Scott Colley (b); Lewis Nash (d). 4 & 5/04.

Colley and Nash have been regular collaborators but have not previously worked with Hall as a trio. These lovely tracks were recorded live at the Village Vanguard during a spring 2004 residency. The music is full of delights and surprises. Jim's duo with Colley on the closing 'St Thomas' is reminiscent of the best of the & Basses record, and the track springs into renewed life when the drummer decides they've had enough time to themselves. There's an epic 'Body And Soul' that confirms Hall's magnificent harmonic understanding. The originals – 'Furnished Flats', 'Bent Blue' and 'Canto Neruda' – are all splendid (and instantly recognizable as Hall lines), but it's his work on the other standard, 'Skylark', that really makes the record special. Special price, too, and only available through the label website.

* Duologues Camjazz 5009 Hall; Enrico Pieranunzi (p). 9/04.

The purple patch continues. These original improvisations, some co-written, are testimony to Hall's continuing desire to push the envelope. The writing is crisp and intelligent, with Pieranunzi bringing in some classical elements. The 'Duologue' pieces feel as if they were worked out in rehearsal, but they're far from dry or academic. The sound is excellent, with Hall's guitar nicely locked in to the keyboard.

Also, in brief:

 Hallmarks – The Best Of Jim Hall Concord CCD 30076 2CD. 7/71–1/01.

Valuable selection of work for both Concord and Telarc.

(*) Alone Together Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 467. 8/72.

A live duo with Ron Carter (b); not a single rough edge or corner, and with almost no improvisational tension either.

 Live! Verve 065428. 75.

Recorded in concert in Toronto, this is a great chance to hear the '70s Hall stretching out on some sympathetic material.

(*) Live At The North Sea Jazz Festival Challenge 70063. 79.

Jim and Bob Brookmeyer (vtb) in engaging dialogue; check the wonderful opening arrangement of John Lewis's 'Skating In Central Park'.

 The Concord Jazz Heritage Series Concord CCD 4831. 81–89.

Draws on some of the best work he did for Carl Jefferson's label. Not perhaps the most balanced sampling of Jim's work during the '80s, but a valid introduction nevertheless.

 Jim Hall And Pat Metheny Telarc CD 83442. 7–8/98.
An obvious pairing that delivers no less and no more than you'd expect.

(*) Downbeat Critics' Choice Telarc 83557. 2/95–1/01.
Nice compilation of material from half a decade's activity for the label. Good introduction to the later stuff.

Bengt Hallberg (born 1932)

PIANO, ORGAN, ACCORDION

Born in Gothenburg. He played swing as a teenager, before adapting to bop and working with Stan Getz and other Americans. He has some reputation abroad, but his local status endures as one of the major figures in Swedish jazz.

(*) All-Star Sessions: 1953–1954 Dragon DRCD 402 Hallberg; Ernie Englund (t); Åke Persson (tb); Åke Björkman (frhn); Arne Domnérus (cl, as); Carl-Henrik Norin (ts); Lars Gullin (bs); Putte Wickman (cl); Simon Brehm, Red Mitchell (b); Robert Edman, William Schiøpffe , Bobby White (d). 11/53–1/54.
In our last edition, we expressed the hope that Hallberg's music might be better represented on CD. His numerous discs for Phontastic are now all but impossible to locate and his early music has been largely neglected. That has been partly answered by the appearance of this early set. It's somewhat repetitive, given that the majority of tracks are offered in multiple takes (three of 'Blues In Fourths' with Gullin, Mitchell and White), but as a picture of Hallberg as a cool arranger in the fashionable Swedish style of the time it is a valuable one.

 In A Mellow Tone Improkomp IKCD 4 Hallberg; Hans Backenroth (b). 96.
 Stardust In My Heart Improkomp IKCD 6 Hallberg (p solo). 6/99.
These have to stand service for the remaining 40 years of music-making. The plan on Stardust was to play 20 standards in as steady and unfussy a way as possible, so there's very little improvising and much respect for the melodies. Bengt takes most of them at a sedate, jogging pace. It's more like a recital than a jazz set, although even here Hallberg can't resist tickling a few embellishments into the situation, and there is a lovely version of his waltz 'In My Heart'. There's somewhat more going on in the duos with Backenroth, but mostly the music is delivered pretty straight. Some improvement in the situation, but still thin pickings for such a major figure.

Rich Halley

TENOR AND SOPRANO SAXOPHONES, FLUTE, PERCUSSION

A zoologist and computer programmer from Portland, Oregon, seasoned in free bop.

(*) Live At Beanbenders Nine Winds NWCD 0215 Halley; Rob Blakeslee (t, c); Michael Vlatkovich (tb); Troy Grugett (as, bs, perc); Phil Sparks (b); William Thomas (d). 5/98.
 Coyotes In The City /  Objects Louie 021 / 025 Halley; Clyde Reed (b); Dave Storrs (d). 3/01; 12/01.
(*) The Blue Rims Louie 030 As above, except add Bobby Bradford (c, perc). 12/02.
 Mountains And Plains Louie 035 As above, except omit Bradford. 6/04.
The set from Beanbenders in Berkeley is rich with sonorous horns and nicely varied between solos with counterpoint, wailing chorales and sparsely textured improvisations; Blakeslee is particularly strong. Objects is a good example of the regular trio at work, although the record perhaps falls short of a truly memorable statement. Halley's big, Rollinsesque sound is strong by itself, yet he does seem to gain an extra ounce of power and impetus from the presence of other horns. However, the slightly earlier Coyotes In The City, recorded the day after a gig and with the trio firing on all cylinders, has some gutsy and sustained playing.

The guest presence of Bradford on The Blue Rims makes a difference. This is gracious and muscular free bop with excellent playing by all hands. After ten years together, though, the basic trio is as strong as iron and as combustible as a matchbox. Reed and Storrs (the latter also as engineer) deserve as much credit as Halley for the success of the record. Built out of vamps or tattoos, sculpted with a decisive intensity that makes the Oregon landscapes on the CD cover seem an entirely appropriate image, this is heartland American jazz of tremendous power and authority.

Lin Halliday (1935–2000)

TENOR SAXOPHONE

Born in Little Rock but a stalwart on the Chicago scene.

 Airegin Delmark DE 523 Halliday; Jodie Christian (p); Dennis Carroll (b); Tom Kronquist (d). 9/88.
 Delayed Exposure /  East Of The Sun Delmark DE449 / 458 Halliday; Ira Sullivan (t, flhn, f); Jodie Christian (p); Dennis Carroll (b); George Fludas (d). 6/91; 11/91, 4/92.
 Where Or When Delmark DE468 As above, except omit Carroll, Fludas; add Larry Gray (b); Robert Barry (d). 3/93.
Halliday didn't rush into the studios. Delayed Exposure and its immediate successor were already the work of a mature, hard-swinging hard-bopper, somewhat reminiscent of Hank Mobley, but more often likened to Sonny Rollins. The repertoire is fairly predictable and some of the cuts are played out longer than necessary, though with the versatile Sullivan and Christian in the group there's plenty to say.

Though it was the first release under his name, Delayed Exposure was preceded by the private sessions documented on Airegin and put out shortly after Lin's relatively early, but not entirely unexpected, death. The Rollins influence isn't necessarily more obvious here; the title presumably wasn't Halliday's and one again hears him exploring other avenues of tenor hard bop. The new rhythm section fares fine on Where Or When, propelling Lin through 'My Shining Hour' and 'Dear Old Stockholm', as well as a romp over the 'Pent-Up House' chords, but also giving him a gentler steer on 'Over The Rainbow', his best ballad solo on record to date.

To non-Chicagoans, it must have seemed a rather brief career, but listening to these records in chronological order one gets a certain feeling that Halliday said all he had to, and to the best of his ability. No more can be expected of an artist than that.

George Halliwell

ALTO SAXOPHONE

Gifted improviser with a richly distinctive voice.

 9 Points In Ascent Bruce's Fingers BF 24 Halliwell; Simon H. Fell (b). 97.

Fell is now more often heard in large-scale works, but paired here with the beautifully toned Halliwell he demonstrates what a superb improviser he can be. The saxophonist is hard to fault, but it's the label boss who makes this fine record.

Jimmy Halperin (born 1958)

TENOR AND SOPRANO SAXOPHONES

He works primarily in the Tristano idiom of improvising.

() Psalm Zinnia 110 Halperin; Sal Mosca (p). 1/97.
This is the Tristano doctrine in its coolest and most concentrated form. The disc consists of seven lines written by Halperin, played as a series of formal duets and followed by improvisations on six of them: it runs as 49 minutes of uninterrupted music. The lines are utterly remote from their standard chords, as serpentine as any composing in this manner, and the improvising is enacted completely in the spirit of the occasion: oblique, far-sighted, completely self-absorbed yet drily compelling. Halperin suggests an unswerving dedication to the idiom and Mosca is the ideal partner. Scarcely to every jazz taste, but all the better for it.

() Cycle Logical Cadence CJR 1142 Halperin; Don Messina (b); Bill Chattin (d). 4/01.
Messina and Chattin are regular workmates (and also play together in the Larry Bluth group) and their lightly earnest accompaniments are a hand-in-glove platform for the saxophonist to work from. This is a live gig (from the Rahway Arts Guild in New Jersey) and Halperin purls his way through some originals and tunes by Konitz and Tristano – ideal fodder, naturally, and he is consummately relaxed without sounding in any way becalmed. Some of the improvising is as close to immaculate as this form will ever get – rounded, free-flowing, but purged of cliché or the easy route and the simple resolution. There's also the matter of the tenorman's tone, which has a downy lustre which even Warne Marsh might have envied. If there's a complaint, it's that the live recording is just a little too monochromatic – suits the music in a way, and recalls the unglamorous sound of the great Tristano sessions, but a little more presence in the group wouldn't have hurt.

Also, in brief:

(*) Joy & Gravitas CIMP 301. 1/04.
A huge disappointment after the quiet intensities of the earlier records; with Dominic Duval (b) and Jay Rosen (d) – 70 minutes of ragged music.

Lenny Hambro (born 1923)

ALTO SAXOPHONE

The New Yorker worked a couple of shifts with Gene Krupa and later joined the New Glenn Miller Orchestra.

 The Nature Of Things Collectables COL 7452 Hambro; Eddie Costa (p); Barry Galbraith, Sal Salvador (g); Arnold Fishkin, Clyde Lombardi (b); Harold Granowsky, Gus Johnson Jr (d). 5 & 12/56.
Hambro's brief recording career as leader ended when he joined the Glenn Miller ghost band and then drifted off into commercial music. This final date for Columbia is fairly lightweight, but Hambro's light graceful tone sees it through and in the ever-present Costa he has an accompanist who understands his needs and adds just the right amount of scaffolding to hold it all up.

Ian Hamer (born 1932)

TRUMPET

Veteran of many fine sessions enjoying a rare moment as leader.

 Acropolis Jasmine JASCD 641 2CD Hamer; Keith Christie (tb); Tubby Hayes, Dick Morrissey, Alan Skidmore (ts); Alan Branscombe, Harry South (p); Ron Mathewson, Kenny Napper, Daryl Runswick (b); Bill Eyden, Spike Wells (d). 66–74.
The main selling-point here, one suspects, is the inclusion of five previously unreleased cuts featuring Tubby Hayes, including the last session he played on and an otherwise unrecorded Tubbs composition, 'Sienna Red'. However, Hamer's deft, quick-witted phrasing and clear, intense tone deserve attention as well. His originals, including the title-piece, bespeak a real musical intelligence, also reflected in the bold choice of repertoire by others, including Wayne Shorter. Exact session details aren't absolutely certain, but the packaging is lovely, with some excellent photographs that haven't had wide circulation before.

Bob Hamilton

PIANO

Another of those who've laboured in the studios, exiled from their first love.

 Wixwax Capri 74083 Hamilton; Jeff D'Angelo (b); Duncan Moore (d). 07.
One's first thought is why one hasn't heard him before. The short answer is that Hamilton has been a busy session-man who's only now been able to record in his preferred form. He's an elegant stylist, without sounding too much like an 'elegant stylist'. His solos are thoughtful, full of information (notably on his own 'I Can't Remember A Thing', a great line) and logically shaped. D'Angelo in particular answers to all his needs. A terrific piano trio record.

Chico Hamilton (born 1921)

DRUMS

An LA native, he played there in the '40s, forming his own band, which won much acclaim, in 1955. In the studios thereafter, until his touring and recording schedule began again in the '80s.

 The Chico Hamilton Trio Fresh Sound FSRCD471 Hamilton; Howard Roberts, Jim Hall (g); George Duvivier (b). 53–54, 56.
 Live At The Strollers Fresh Sound FSRCD2245 Hamilton; Buddy Collette (cl, as, ts, f); Jim Hall (g); Fred Katz (clo); Carson Smith (b). 55.
() The Complete Recordings Featuring Buddy Collette And Jim Hall Lone Hill LHC 10217 As above, except add Jon Eardley (t); Gerry Mulligan (bs); Red Mitchell (b). 11/54–1/56.
 The Original Ellington Suite Blue Note 24567 Hamilton; Eric Dolphy (as, bcl, f); John Pisano (g); Nate Gershman (clo); Hal Gaylor (b). 8/58.

 With Strings Attached / The Three Faces Of Chico Warners 124534 Hamilton; Eric Dolphy (as, bcl, f); Dennis Budimir (g); Nate Gershman (clo); Wyatt Ruther (b). 10/58.

 Gongs East / Three Faces Of Chico Collectables COL 7801 As above. 12/58.

 Truth – Featuring Eric Dolphy Fresh Sound FSCD 362 As above, except add add Ralph Pena (b). 5/59.

A less celebrated drum-led academy than Art Blakey's, and yet Hamilton has always surrounded himself with gifted young musicians of the quality of Eric Dolphy, Larry Coryell, Charles Lloyd and, much later, Eric Person. Hamilton has unfailingly taken an inventive and even idiosyncratic approach to the constitution of his groups, and often the only identifying mark is his own rolling lyricism and unceasing swing. Anyone who has seen the classic festival movie Jazz On A Summer's Day will remember the almost hypnotic concentration of his mallet solo.

Recent years have seen the rediscovery and reissue of some important early work. Fresh Sound have done sterling work, restoring the early trios which helped establish Hamilton's reputation. Mild as they sound now, this was fairly unusual work at the time, with the drummer so foregrounded. The broadcast Strollers date from Long Beach helped bring the subsequent quintet to notice. That material is also repeated in the Definitive compilation of the early group with Collette and Hall (and adds in a drum solo with the Mulligan quartet at Stockton High School). Gongs East (which also has The Three Faces as a bonus) is an attractive slice of jazz exotica, but along with the 'Oriental' title-track there are strong compositions by Gerald Wilson ('Where I Live' and 'Tuesday At Two') and a lovely version of Billy Strayhorn's 'Passion Flower'. Inevitably, much of the critical attention has focused on Eric Dolphy. The solos aren't earth-shaking, but they're attractive enough and point the way forward to Eric's own brief, meteoric career. The compilation of Three Faces and With Strings Attached is a significant contribution to the discography and a valuable addition to the amount of Eric Dolphy material available, but it was the uncovering (by chance and in England) of test pressings that have now yielded The Original Ellington Suite which has really excited collectors and students of the period. Dolphy's alto, clarinet and flute are prominently featured throughout the recording, notably on 'Everything But You' (flute) and 'In A Sentimental Mood' (alto). His phrasing and tone are still relatively conventional, though it seems too advanced for the producer, Richard Bock.

The other reissued set is more familiar and closer in mood to the Hamilton appearance at Newport, but collectors may well already be in possession of these sides. The generally quiet and unemphatic chamber-jazz approach still hasn't won over everyone conditioned by bebop, but these are eminently listenable recordings and Chico's own playing is magnificently controlled and seemingly effortless.

The May 1959 sessions – previously released as That Hamilton Man – are darker and more angular. On his last studio appearance with the quintet, Dolphy chips in with his first recorded composition: the moody 'Lady E' largely avoids the folkish sentimentality of parts of Gongs East and helps sustain the later album's prevailing air of appealing melancholy.

(*) The Dealer Impulse! 547 958-2 Hamilton; George Bohannon (tb); Arnie Lawrence (as); Jimmy Woods (ts); Charles Lloyd (ts, f); Archie Shepp (p); Ernie Hayes (org); Larry Coryell, Gabor Szabo (g); Richard Davis (b); Albert Stinson (b, v); Willie Bobo (perc). 9/62–9/66.

The CD includes the original album, with earlier material from Chic Chic Chico and Passin' Thru, as well as a single track – the not entirely representative 'Big Noise From Winnetka' – from the label compilation Definitive Jazz Scene: Volume 3.

As ever, much of the emphasis falls on young and relatively untried players. Coryell is treated as the remarkable discovery he undoubtedly was, with generous solo space on almost every track. His soulful blues line and rock intensity are best sampled on 'Thoughts', which begins with an echoed vocal from Chico himself; Larry's spot is punctuated with sharp, pots-and-pans accents from the leader, before giving way to arguably Richard Davis's best solo on record, a wonderfully constructed thing. On his jazz debut Coryell also makes his presence felt with his first recorded jazz composition: 'Larry Of Arabia' is a pretty basic rise-and-fall idea, but it spurs the drummer into a fabulous solo. Too bad the track fades away so lamely; so much so that one suspects there must have been a tape problem.

Shepp stops by to add a piano-line to his own 'For Mods Only', as quirky and self-possessed as ever. There is uncredited percussion on the closing 'Jim-Jeannie', a tribute to the Cheathams. Jimmy provides the arrangements for 'The Dealer' and 'Baby, You Know' and conducts 'A Trip', so it's not inconceivable that he was persuaded to shake a tambourine as well. Arnie Lawrence is virtually unknown. A Brooklynite who moved to the West Coast in search of work, he sounds superficially like Charlie Parker but has a rawer tonality and eccentric phrasing.

 A Different Journey Collectables COL 8345 Hamilton; George Bohannon (tb); Charles Lloyd (ts, f); Gabor Szabo (g); Albert Stinson (b). 1/63.

A first-rate Hamilton group – he sometimes claimed that it was the best ever – that, like the above, featured the playing and writing skills of Charles Lloyd. The sound is subtle and textured and the solo space is always carefully integrated into the ensemble. Originally on Reprise but now available again in affordable form.

 Reunion Soul Note 121191 Hamilton; Buddy Collette (f, cl, as); Fred Katz (clo); John Pisano (g); Carson Smith (b). 6/89.

This was a brief album-and-tour reunion of the original Hamilton Quintet, with Pisano in for the otherwise-engaged Jim Hall, and it reveals Hamilton as one of the most underrated and possibly influential jazz percussionists of recent times. Rather than keeping up with any of the Joneses, he sustains a highly original idiom which is retrospectively reminiscent of Paul Motian's but is altogether more abstract. The spontaneously improvised 'Five Friends' might have worked better as a duet with Collette (like 'Brushing With B' and 'Conversation'), but the immediately preceding 'Dreams Of Youth', dedicated by its composer, Fred Katz, to the dead and betrayed of Tiananmen Square, is one of the most moving jazz pieces of recent years, drawing out Hamilton's non-Western accents.

(*) Arroyo Soul Note 121241 Hamilton; Eric Person (as, ss); Cary DeNigris (g); Reggie Washington (b). 12/90.

That Hamilton should christen this band Euphoria is testimony to his continued appetite for music-making. Though it's as far in style as it is in years from the '50s quintet, there are clear lines of continuity. Hamilton's preference for a guitarist over a piano-player helps free up the drums, allowing Hamilton to experiment with melodic improvisation. Typically, DeNigris is given considerable prominence – much as Jim Hall, Larry Coryell and John Abercrombie were at different times – with Person assigned a colourist's role.

The long opening 'Alone Together' is a vibrantly inventive version of a chestnut. Hamilton's polyrhythms open the tune to half a dozen new directions and Washington produces some of his best work of the set. The other standard, Lester Young's and Jon Hendricks's 'Tickle Toe', has the drummer scatting with the same relaxed abandon he applies to his kit. His writing on 'Sorta New', 'Cosa Succede?' and the intriguingly titled 'Taunts Of An Indian Maiden' is still full of ideas, exploiting band textures to the full. DeNigris and Person both claim at least one writing credit, and the guitarist's 'Stop' is ambitious and unsettling.

(*) Trio! Soul Note 121246 Hamilton; Eric Person (as, ss, sno); Cary DeNigris (g). 5/92.

At 71, Hamilton was still producing a beefy sound and still refusing to revisit his youth. The 'heavy metal' mannerisms of his late-'80s bands have mellowed, though both Person and DeNigris let rip when the need arises. The trio had been around for some time when the record was cut, and they play as if they're used to one another. DeNigris and Hamilton combine effectively on 'C & C', but the outstanding track is Person's long '10th Vision', which calls in M-Base mannerisms, the oozing funk of old-time organ trios and hints of a free-ish idiom.

(*) My Panamanian Friend Soul Note 121265 As for Arroyo, except omit Washington; add Kenny Davis (b). 8/92.

To mark the 30th anniversary of the saxophonist's death, this is a tribute to former employee Eric Dolphy, who was of Panamanian descent. Predictably, perhaps, Hamilton selects from among the least wiggy areas of Dolphy's output: 'South Street Exit', 'Springtime', the blues 'Serene', the inevitable 'Miss Ann' (perhaps Dolphy's best-known composition), 'Mandrake', 'Miss Movement' and, from Out To Lunch, 'Something Sweet, Something Tender'. Dolphy's young namesake plays decently, but a lot of the emphasis falls on Hamilton.

Also, in brief:

 Chico Hamilton Quintet in Hi-Fi Pacific Jazz 1216. 1 & 2/56.

Fine early set coming just after the pioneering work with Gerry Mulligan's pianoless quartet and a stint as Lena Horne's drummer.

 Classical Jazz Fivefour 1031. 56.

Brings together Quintet and Zen, the latter devoted to Fred Katz's compositions.

 Nomad Collectables COL 7774. 79.

A useful reissue from a relatively quiet period.

 Dancing To A Different Drummer Soul Note 121291. 3–4/93.

Solo percussion is a hard furrow, but Hamilton's melodic touch sustains this long recital.

 Forestorn Koch 7870. 10/00–1/01.

Dedicated to his late son and namesake, this is a moving set, with an intriguing roster of guest spots: Steve Turre (tb) and Akua Dixon (clo), Arthur Blythe (as), Charlie Watts!

 Thoughts Of ... Koch International 51009. 02.

Outwardly a series of tributes to his influences – Pres, Trane, Miles – but really no more than a vaguely themed set of otherwise unremarkable originals and guest spots.

 Believe /  6th Avenue Romp / (*) Heritage /  Hamiltonia Joyous Shout 10002 / 10003 / 10004 / 10008. 00–06.

His longevity is astonishing, but these late releases are patchy projects, often dipping into crossover territory, sometimes breathtakingly original (as in the choice of The Who's 'The Kids Are Alright' as a 'standard') but there really isn't enough here to justify four CDs. Hamiltonia is a best-of from the label's first block of releases.

Jimmy Hamilton (1917–94)

CLARINET, TENOR SAXOPHONE

Worked around Philadelphia in the late '30s, then with Teddy Wilson, but his main professional association was with Duke Ellington, whom he worked with for 25 years from 1943.

 And The New York Jazz Quintet Fresh Sound FSRCD2002 Hamilton; Clark Terry (t); Kenny Kersey (p); Barry Galbraith, Sidney Gross (g); Oscar Pettiford, Jimmy Woode (b); Osie Johnson (d). 55.

 Swing Low Sweet Clarinet Fresh Sound FSRCD 351 Hamilton; John Anderson (t); Britt Woodman, Dave Wells, Booty Wood (bhn); Paul Gonsalves (ts); Jimmy Rowles (p); Aaron Bell (b); Sam Woodyard (d). 60.

 Can't Help Swingin' Prestige PRCD 24214-2 Hamilton; Clark Terry (t, flhn); Britt Woodman (tb); Tommy Flanagan (p); Wendell Marshall (b); Mel Lewis, Earl Williams (d). 3–4/61.

The best of Jimmy Hamilton is with Ellington, of course, but the pair of dates for Prestige – originally issued as It's About Time and Can't Help Swinging – will appeal to collectors of small-group Ellingtonia, and more so, perhaps, than the scrappier groups on the earlier Fresh Sound. For once, there's no Ducal tune in the set-list, but with four fellow Ellingtonians in the band and most of the 'originals' being variations on the blues, it's not hard to imagine how the music turns out. Terry and Woodman are only on the first session, and while both sometimes defer to the nominal leader as far as solo impact goes, it's all very gentlemanly. The second date, with Hamilton as the sole horn, is more interesting. The famous contrast between his sweetly amiable clarinet and rasping, almost R&B-styled tenor is less pronounced, since he actually plays more saxophone than usual ('Six months may go by before I get a chance to pick it up'), and at ballad tempo he affects a Websterian approach.

Even more appealing in some regards is Swing Low Sweet Clarinet. Again, the players are nearly all Ellingtonians, and the interesting twist is that Woodman, Wood and incomer Wells are playing baritone horns instead of their familiar trombones (and not baritone saxophones as noted in some sources). It's a rich and capacious sound, which Hamilton exploits to the full on a set that's pretty well stocked with Duke's compositions: 'In A Sentimental Mood', 'Do Nothing Till You Hear From Me' and 'The Nearness Of You'. Jimmy contributes two ideas of his own, 'Tempo De Brazilia' and the fun 'Taj Mahal'. Gonsalves is in fine voice, though slightly restrained on a couple of his spots as if trying not to shade the leader.

Scott Hamilton (born 1954)

TENOR SAXOPHONE

Born and raised in Providence, Rhode Island, Hamilton has helped redefine mainstream jazz for two decades. To say that he plays like Ben Webster or Don Byas is to miss the point, for Hamilton has always been more resolutely contemporary than conservative.

* From The Beginning Concord CCD 2117 2CD Hamilton; Bill Berry (t); Nat Pierce (p); Cal Collins (g); Monty Budwig (b); Jake Hanna (d). 77–78.

(*) Tenorshoes Concord CCD 4127 Hamilton; Dave McKenna (p); Phil Flanigan (b); Jeff Hamilton (d). 12/79.

He doesn't double on soprano, bass clarinet or flute. He probably doesn't know what multiphonics are. He has never been described as 'angular', and if he was ever 'influenced by Coltrane' it certainly never extended to his saxophone-playing. And yet Scott Hamilton is the real thing, a tenor-player of the old school who was born only after most of the old school were dead or drawing bus-passes. His wuffly delivery but clear tone, containing elements of Bean, Chu, Pres, Byas and Zoot, are definitive of mainstream jazz, and the affection in which Hamilton is held on both sides of the Atlantic is not hard to understand.

Hamilton's Concord debut was called Is A Good Wind Who Is Blowing Us No Ill, after Leonard Feather's enthusiastic imprimatur; more of a breath of fresh air in retrospect and one that refocused attention on the undischarged possibilities of pre-bebop jazz. It and the unimaginatively named second album are now available on From The Beginning. The opening lines of 'That's All' confirmed that a special new talent was at work. At 22, Hamilton had the poise and the patience of a much more experienced player. He runs ahead coltishly a couple of times, but his discipline is impressive.

The follow-up was recorded almost immediately afterwards, perhaps too soon in retrospect. The absence of Berry was unfortunate, and the addition of guitar makes for a rather smoother and less pungent product. For once, Hamilton seems content to fall back on predetermined ideas. Though everything on the record is played with exemplary professionalism, it never seems to get beyond that point and remains rather formulaic.

The cover of Tenorshoes features a pair of bronzed basketball boots (a Hamilton signature at the time), and beside them a dish of chocolates. However tired Hamilton must have been about constant references to his age – a veteran at 25 – he might usefully have sued over the sweets, because his saxophone-playing is fat-free and low-cholesterol. However saccharine some of the tunes – 'I Should Care', 'The Shadow Of Your Smile' and 'The Nearness Of You' might all have come from the confectionery counter – Hamilton explores the changes with a fine, probing intelligence that is every bit as intellectually satisfying as it is emotionally fulsome. The unaccompanied intro to 'I Should Care' and an energetic reading of 'How High The Moon' bespeak a rapidly developing sense of structure and dynamics. McKenna is superb and the recording is bright and unfussy.

 Major League Concord CCD 4305 Hamilton; Dave McKenna (p); Jake Hanna (d). 5/86.

Hanna brought a fierier pace. The trio had previously played together under McKenna's leadership. He's certainly still the playing star of this set, turning in a magnificent solo on 'It All Depends On You' and running a powerful, low-register left-hand line that more than amply takes up any slack from the missing bassist.

CORE COLLECTION

* Plays Ballads

Concord 4386 Hamilton; John Bunch (p); Chris Flory (g); Phil Flanigan (b); Chuck Riggs (d). 3/89.

Still for some Hamilton's best record, not because the ballad programme allows him any paths of least resistance, but simply because this is the sort of material which allows him to show off his strengths: harmonic subtlety at slow tempos, delicate, almost seamless transitions between ideas, and an ability to invest a simple, familiar melody with maximum expression. 'Round Midnight' and 'In A Sentimental Mood' are read with an intriguing slant which freshens up the Monk tune considerably. 'Two Eighteen', dedicated to Hamilton's wife (and we suspect it may refer to the number of a honeymoon suite), is surprisingly his first recorded composition; at first blush, it doesn't suggest a writing talent commensurate with his playing skills, but it's a fine piece nevertheless. The Don Byas-associated 'Laura' and an oblique 'Body And Soul' (also considerably freshened) were added only when Ballads was transferred to CD. This seems odd, because these are the outstanding performances on the record and, we hear, are much enjoyed by Don and Bean up in heaven.

* East Of The Sun Concord CCD 4583 Hamilton; Brian Lemon (p); Dave Green (b); Allan Ganley (d). 8/93.

A devoted Anglophile, Hamilton was spending more and more time playing in the UK, where he has a more than loyal following and where in this group he has found like-minded players of great experience. Just to complicate the geography a little, the tunes on East Of The Sun were the result of a readers' poll in the Japanese Swing Journal. Hamilton had long wished to record with a British group, and one can see why. Lemon is one of the finest accompanists around, and he solos with such bluff confidence that he often masks the subtlety of what he is playing. Ganley and Green combine effectively, and both of them are accurately caught.

(*) The Red Door Concord CCD 4799 Hamilton; Bucky Pizzarelli (g). 3/95.

Who's playing the bass? It's Bucky, whose 7-string guitar – with low A string – and nimble technique make it sound as if there is at least a trio at work here. The idea of the album was a tribute to Zoot Sims and it includes material that would have been familiar to the great saxophonist. Bucky frequently quotes his distinctive phrases. 'Gee Baby, Ain't I Good To You' is astonishing, pitched high and fast, but it's a subtly transposed interpretation of 'Jitterbug Waltz' that really catches the attention: virtuosic, intelligent jazz, played at a very high level.

(*) After Hours Concord CCD 4755 Hamilton; Tommy Flanagan (p); Bob Cranshaw (b); Lewis Nash (d). 96.

So effortless and smooth that it could almost pass by unnoticed. This is very close to late-nite-and-lite, exquisitely done as you would expect, given the personnel, but curiously lacking in bite and chew. 'Woody'N'You' is a great group performance, a real meeting of minds. Nothing that follows comes close to its elegant pace. Flanagan is in magisterial form, leading a rhythm section that is recorded with gentle authority, a Concord strength.

(*) Live In London Concord CCD 2172 Hamilton; John Pearce (p); Dave Green (b); Steve Brown (d). 6/02.

In London, at the Pizza Express, playing a typically venturesome set of swing and jazz pieces, ranging from the familiar ('When I Fall In Love', 'When You Wish Upon A Star') to the more challenging (Dameron's 'The Squirrel', Al Cohn's 'The Goof And I'). Hamilton always likes to flatter a crowd with things they won't immediately recognize, though the musicians at the bar might. It's a clever strategy and has paid dividends. The backing group are all a saxophonist could want, attentive, assured and completely across the material. Green in particular sounds stately and wicked by turns.

 Heavy Juice Concord CCD 2258 Hamilton; Harry Allen (ts); John Bunch (p); Dennis Irwin (b); Chuck Riggs (d). 2/04.

A nice chance to hear two of mainstream's most effective tenorists in tandem. Allen and Hamilton swap solos effortlessly on this. The surprise is the emphasis given to bebop staples, namely Dizzy's 'Groovin' High' and a long closing version of 'Ow!', but for the most part they stick to standard repertory: 'If I Should Lose You', a delightful 'Warm Valley' and another long version of 'If Dreams Come True'. Not just an exercise in two-tenor nostalgia but a dream date for anyone with fond memories of Zoot Sims and Stan Getz.

 Back In New York Concord CCD 2274 Hamilton; Bill Charlap (p); Peter Washington (b); Kenny Washington (d). 9/04.
Pairing Scott with the hot piano trio of the moment was a nice idea, but it doesn't make a blind bit of difference to his approach. Most of Charlap's subtler gambits are ignored in favour of Hamilton's usual straight-down-the-middle approach. None the less, there are some nice things here: 'Blue'N'Boogie' and 'Bouncin' With Bud' continue the examination of bop themes; 'Lullaby Of The Leaves' is both nostalgic and cleverly fresh; 'I've Grown Accustomed To Her Face' is one of the few versions that conveys the resigned passion of the song. Nice stuff.

 Our Delight! Woodville WVCD 111 Hamilton; Mark Nightingale (tb); John Pearce (p); Dave Cliff (g); Dave Green (b); Steve Brown (d). 05.
There's something cheerfully inexorable about Hamilton since the turn of the decade. Like Jack Nicholson, whose speaking voice he unnervingly shares, Hamilton is defiantly himself, whatever the company and context. The quartet (Cliff and Nightingale are guests) plods along nicely. Pointless to complain that there's a sameness to the work now. That is what has kept him working all these years.

Also, in brief:

 The Grand Appearance Progressive 7026. 1–2/78.
Unfamiliar label, typical Hamilton fare: mid-tempo swingers and ballads. Tommy Flanagan and Hank Jones alternate on piano. George Mraz (b) and Connie Kay (d) complete a fine group. Standout track: 'The Shadow Of Your Smile'.

 Ballad Essentials Concord CCD 4885. 78–90.
But only essential if you haven't the original albums.

(*) Concord Jazz Heritage Concord CCD 4819-2. 77-98.
Ditto.

 Late Night Christmas Eve Concord CCD 4922. 97.
Everyone (except us) hates Christmas albums. Except Ella's. And this one.

 Blues, Bop & Ballads Concord CCD 4866. 2/99.
An eclectic survey of material, too various to work entirely successfully as an album, but with Ike Quebec, Tadd Dameron, Roy Eldridge and Charlie Chaplin among the composers.

 Jazz Signatures Concord CCD 4939. 5/00.
Another solid set from Hamilton, though no one but a solid fan could distinguish it from most of the others. Buy it for 'In Your Own Sweet Way'.

Tardo Hammer

PIANO

He only began recording in the late '90s, having worked for two decades as a sideman and accompanist, with Junior Cook, Abbey Lincoln and Art Farmer. His mature style betrays little of his Tristano-school training.

(*) Hammer Time /  Somethin' Special Sharp Nine 1014 / 1020 Hammer; Dennis Irwin (b); Leroy Williams (d). 5/00; 01.
(*) Tardo's Tempo Sharp Nine 1028 As above, except omit Williams; add Jimmy Wormworth (d). 9/03.
(*) Look, Stop And Listen: The Music Of Tadd Dameron Sharp Nine 1040 Hammer; John Webber (b); Joe Farnsworth (d). 5/07.
Hammer's debut CD isn't so much disappointing as predictably professional and unlikely to light up the sky. Combining competent original material with tunes by Monk, Duke Jordan and Bud Powell, he gives a good impression of his chops at a range of tempos. The standards – 'Moment To Moment', 'I Concentrate On You', 'You Leave Me Breathless' – are expressive enough but one looks for a little more drama.

The follow-up is rather better and the trio seems ready to tackle similar material with more gusto and adventure. Hammer opens with a fierce display of technique on Powell's 'John's Abbey' and then loses the plot with his own 'Divertimento', which should have gone way down the programme. There are expressive interpretations of Rollins's 'Blues For Philly Joe' and the title-track is a Sonny Clark composition. Again the standards are the most expressive elements: 'Take Me Out To The Ballgame', 'You're My Thrill' and 'If I Loved You'.

Some claim to hear elements of Bill Evans's pianism in Hammer's recent work. Beyond a couple of technical flourishes, we aren't picking up on it. In fact, 'Very Early' on Tardo's Tempo seems to be an effort to deny the Evans influence. It's played up and hot, still subtle, but with an almost angry strength. The rest of the album is easily as good, with a fantastic version of 'The Last Time I Saw Paris', Tommy Flanagan's 'Minor Mishap' and a great closing read of 'Thelonious'.

The Dameron project is both obvious and non-obvious territory for him: professionalism and technical surety point one way, but one doesn't quite hear him cutting loose on the 'Hot House' changes or scurrying after 'The Squirrel'; until he does, that is. That it works so well has a lot to do with Farnsworth, who gets steadily better, but also because Hammer has relaxed and allowed some levity to creep into his work, as on 'Flossie Lou'. A terrific date.

Gunter Hampel (born 1937)

COMPOSER, VIBRAPHONE, PIANO, REEDS

Born in Göttingen. He studied music and architecture before firing up much of the German free scene of the early '60s. Formed his own Birth label in 1970.

(*) The 8th July 1969 Birth 001 Hampel; Anthony Braxton (as, ss, sno, f, cbcl); Willem Breuker (ss, as, ts, b cl); Arjen Gorter (b); Steve McCall (d); Jeanne Lee (v). 7/69.
 Dances Birth 068 Hampel (vib, reeds). 69.
Virtually all of Hampel's work since 1969 has appeared on the fissiparous Birth label and virtually the whole Birth catalogue consists of Hampel's work, in small groups and in various versions of his improvisation collective, the Galaxie Dream Band. It's a label that has had inconsistent distribution over the years. In this edition of the Guide, we are listing only the early items above and more recent issues known to be in general circulation at the time of writing.

There are obvious and misleading parallels between Hampel's work and that of the similarly cosmically obsessed Sun Ra, but Hampel is typically saturnine rather than Saturnian and he lacks the ripping, swinging joy of Ra's various Intergalactic Arkestras. 8th Of July 1969 isn't quite as time-warped as some of his work of the time, but nor is it quite as individual. Lee's voice is one of the most significant in contemporary improvisation. Breuker is already an imaginative and powerful soloist. Braxton, who in 1969 had just completed the epochal solo For Alto, still sounds as if he's fishing for a music commensurate with his evolving vision.

Dances was only released in 2004. It finds Hampel exploring similar areas of concern but with a concentration one doesn't hear in the group recordings. He deploys a huge range of instruments on the record. He also hums and dances, which gives parts of the album an eavesdropped quality.

 Jubilation Birth 0038 Hampel; Manfred Schoof (t); Albert Mangelsdorff (tb); Perry Robinson (cl); Marion Brown (as); Thomas Keyserling (as, f, af); Barre Phillips (b); Steve McCall (d); Jeanne Lee (v). 11/83.

 Fresh Heat – Live At Sweet Basil Birth CD 0039 Hampel; Stephen Haynes, Vance R. Provey (t); Curtis Fowlkes (tb); Bob Stewart (tba); Perry Robinson (cl); Thomas Keyserling, Mark Whitecage (as, f); Bob Hanlon (ts, f); Lucky Ennett (ts); Bill Frisell (g); Kyoto Fujiwara (b); Marvin 'Smitty' Smith (d); Arthur Jenkins, Jeanne Lee (v). 2/85.

(*) Dialog – Live At The Eldena Jazz Festival, 1992 Birth CD 041 Hampel; Mathias Schubert (ts). 7/92.

(*) Time Is Now – Live At The Eldena Jazz Festival, 1992 Birth CD 042 Hampel; Mike Dietz (g); Jürgen Attig (b); Heinrich Köbberling (d). 7/92.

 Celestial Glory – Live At The Knitting Factory Birth CD 040 Hampel; Perry Robinson (cl); Mark Whitecage (as, ss); Thomas Keyserling (as, f); Jeanne Lee (v). 9/91.

Hampel's international standing grows steadily. Jubilation is an excellent album – 'Little Bird' particularly strong – which lacks some of the instinctive empathy of the Galaxie Dream Band but also some of its increasingly hermetic inwardness. The live New York City set smacks of no one more forcibly than Charles Mingus, whose broader legacy is still largely unexplored, other than by bass-players.

The Knitting Factory would seem to be a potential home away from home for Hampel. Unfortunately, the three pieces included on Celestial Glory are drab and slabby. Robinson is always interesting, and his solo passages and duets with the leader provide much of the interest. Lee is recorded very close, which introduces some ugly pops and squawks, and there is an overall lack of good production.

The duos with Schubert at Eldena are very good indeed; 'After The Fact' is one of the best documented performances by any of the Hampel 'family'. The other record, taped a day earlier at the same festival, has a less familiar line-up but is marked by 'Serenade For Marion Brown', a heartfelt tribute to a loyal ally who seems to have been ill with dental problems at the time.

(*) Legendary Birth 045 Hampel; Manfred Schoof (t, flhn); Alexander von Schlippenbach (p); Arjen Gorter (b); Pierre Courbois (d). 5/97.

A reunion for Hampel's late-'60s band, the same line-up which recorded Heartplants, now only available in Japan. 'Legendary' is a flute solo by Hampel, lateral and sardonic, but with his usual romantic burnish. There is also a reprise of 'Spielplatz', a group composition with a rough-hewn architecture that is entirely Hampel's own. The album is bulked out with a new reading of 'All The Things You Could Be If Charles Mingus Was Your Daddy', a perverse, jolly idea that cements Hampel's open-form approach.

Schlippenbach's contribution is considerable. He is courtly and thoughtful but swings outrageously even when the metre is almost uncountable. Schoof is the Darth Vader of contemporary trumpet-playing, a sweet and accommodating talent who has turned to the dark side. His tone is expansive, but with an astringent, tobacco-y quality. Hampel's multi-instrumentalism is no longer a surprise, but his adaptability and ability to shift between idioms is consistently impressive.

 Köln Concert: Parts 1 & 2 Birth CD 047 / 048 Hampel; Christian Weidner (as, ts); Clemens Orth (ky, v); Christian Jaroslawski (b); Gerrit Juhnke (d); Smudo, Christian Vargas, Nuclear B, Sprite, Nore (v). 5/97.

Recorded just a day after Legendary and at the same festival. It was a good wheeze, naming these records after one of the best-selling jazz records of all time. Unfortunately, instead of Keith Jarrett's tortured intensity and virtuosic handling of technical problems and instead of the thoughtful penetration of the Legendary quintet, the Next Generation band indulge themselves mercilessly. It's no accident that the most impressive music here is instrumental, the beautiful 'Jazz Life' on Part 1, and the equally touching 'Sun Down' on the sequel. Jeanne Lee's role seems restricted to writing. She has a hand in 'You Ever Saw Birds Gather And Lift Off?', which opens the set, but one misses that rising, potent voice.

Also, in brief:

(*) All The Things You Could Be If Charles Mingus Was Your Daddy Birth 031. 11/78, 7/80.

A reference to Mingus's reworking of 'All The Things You Are', scored for just percussion, woodwinds and voice.

 Next Generation Birth 0043. 9/95.

Subtitled Concepts In Jazz-Rap-Hip-Hop, this turns out to be no more self-consciously fashionable than anything this determined individualist has done. The vibes work is (literally) incomparable.

 Solid Fun Birth 044. 9/95, 1/96.

Duos with Christian Weidner (as, ts), all but one recorded live at Auerbach Jazznight.

 The 8th September 1999 Birth 049. 9/99.

The Sextet caught live and playing well at Sweet Basil.

(*) Challenge of the Now Birth 066. 8/02.

Hampel in a trio situation with Perry Robinson (cl) and Lou Grassi (d).

 On Fire: Hierseins-Erfahrungen /  Emission 2004 Birth 069 / 070. 04.

Hampel and his young group with music for dance (On Fire) and in a trio (saxophone and drums) format on Emission.

Lionel Hampton (1908–2002)

VIBES, PIANO, DRUMS, VOICE

Born in Louisville, Kentucky, he learned drums in a Chicago boys' band. He went on to work with Les Hit and backing Louis Armstrong before switching to vibes and leading his own group in LA, where Benny Goodman recruited him. He recorded for RCA Victor in NY, 1936–40, and ran his own big band from 1941, dominated by a show-stopping style that anticipated R&B and let the band survive the lean rock'n'roll years. In the '80s and '90s he was also a major figure in education, publishing and housing programmes.

CORE COLLECTION

(*) Lionel Hampton 1937–1938
Classics 524 Hampton; Ziggy Elman, Cootie Williams, Jonah Jones (t); Lawrence Brown (tb); Vido Musso (cl, ts); Mezz Mezzrow, Eddie Barefield (cl); Johnny Hodges, Hymie Schertzer, George Koenig (as); Arthur Rollini (ts); Edgar Sampson (bs); Jess Stacy, Clyde Hart (p); Bobby Bennett, Allan Reuss (g); Harry Goodman, John Kirby, Mack Walker, Johnny Miller, Billy Taylor (b); Gene Krupa, Cozy Cole, Sonny Greer (d). 2/37–1/38.

Lionel Hampton's Victor sessions of the '30s offer a glimpse of many of the finest big-band players of the day away from usual chores: Hampton cherrypicked whichever band was in town at the time of the session, and although most of the tracks were hastily organized, the music is consistently entertaining. If one has a reservation, it's that if you don't enjoy what Hampton himself does, these discs won't live up to their reputation, since he dominates. Hampton cut a total of 23 sessions between 1936 and 1941. The personnel varies substantially from date to date: some are like small-band sessions drawn from the Ellington or Goodman or Basie orchestras; others – such as the extraordinary 1939 date with Gillespie, Carter, Berry, Webster and Hawkins – are genuine all-star jams. Carter wrote the charts for one session, but mostly Hampton used head arrangements or sketchy frameworks. The bonding agent is his own enthusiasm: whether playing vibes – and incidentally establishing the dominant style on the instrument with his abrasive accents, percussive intensity and quickfire alternation of long and short lines – or piano or drums, or taking an amusing, Armstrong-influenced vocal, Hamp makes everything swing.

(*) Lionel Hampton 1938–1939 Classics 534 Hampton; Cootie Williams, Harry James, Walter Fuller, Irving Randolph, Ziggy Elman (t); Rex Stewart (c); Lawrence Brown (tb); Benny Carter, Omer Simeon (cl, as); Russell Procope (ss, as); Hymie Schertzer (as, bcl); Johnny Hodges, Dave Matthews, George Oldham (as); Herschel Evans, Babe Russin, Jerry Jerome, Chu Berry (ts); Edgar Sampson, Harry Carney (bs); Jess Stacy, Billy Kyle, Spencer Odun, Clyde Hart (p); Allan Reuss, Danny Barker (g); Billy Taylor, John Kirby, Jesse Simpkins, Milt Hinton (b); Sonny Greer, Jo Jones, Alvin Burroughs, Cozy Cole (d). 1/38–6/39.

(*) Lionel Hampton 1939–1940 Classics 562 Hampton; Dizzy Gillespie, Henry 'Red' Allen , Ziggy Elman (t); Benny Carter (t, as); Rex Stewart (c); Lawrence Brown (tb); Edmond Hall (cl); Toots Mondello (cl, as); Earl Bostic, Buff Estes (as); Coleman Hawkins, Ben Webster, Chu Berry, Jerry Jerome, Budd Johnson (ts); Harry Carney (bs); Clyde Hart, Nat Cole, Joe Sullivan, Spencer Odun (p); Allan Reuss, Charlie Christian, Al Casey, Ernest Ashley, Oscar Moore (g); Billy Taylor, Milt Hinton, Artie Bernstein, Wesley Prince (b); Sonny Greer, Cozy Cole, Big Sid Catlett, Slick Jones, Zutty Singleton, Nick Fatool, Al Spieldock (d). 6/39–5/40.

 Lionel Hampton 1940–1941 Classics 624 Hampton; Karl George, Ernie Royal, Joe Newman (t); Fred Beckett, Sonny Craven, Harry Sloan (tb); Marshal Royal (cl, as); Ray Perry (as, vn); Dexter Gordon, Illinois Jacquet (ts); Jack McVea (bs); Nat Cole, Sir Charles Thompson, Marlowe Morris, Milt Buckner (p); Oscar Moore, Teddy Bunn, Irving Ashby (g); Douglas Daniels (v); Wesley Prince, Hayes Alvis, Vernon Alley (b); Al Spieldock, Kaiser Marshall, Shadow Wilson, George Jenkins (d); Rubel Blakey, Evelyn Myers (v). 7/40–12/41.

Surprisingly few tracks stand out from these sessions: what one remembers are individual solos and the general climate of hot, hip good humour. One might mention Benny Carter on 'I'm In The Mood For Swing', Chu Berry on 'Shufflin' At The Hollywood', Dizzy Gillespie on 'Hot Mallets', J. C. Higginbotham on 'I'm On My Way From You' or Buster Bailey on 'Rhythm, Rhythm'; but there are few disappointments, despite the leader's showboating. Hamp's drum and piano features are less than enthralling after one has heard them once, but they don't occupy too much space. While the Classics CDs take a full chronological look up to December 1941 and the start of Hamp's own big band, the sound is inconsistent: some tracks field too much surface noise, others seem unnecessarily dull. Bluebird's series has disappeared altogether: it is surely time for a comprehensive box of this music from that source. Classics 624 includes the final 13 tracks for Victor and, while these are less interesting than the earlier dates, it's useful to have them in sequence.

 Lionel Hampton 1942–1944 Classics 803 Hampton; Snooky Young, Wendell Culley, Joe Morris, Dave Page, Lamar Wright, Ernie Royal, Karl George, Joe Newman, Roy McCoy, Cat Anderson (t); Booty Wood, Vernon Porter, Andrew Penn, Fred Beckett, Sonny Craven, Allen Durham, Al Hayes, Harry Sloan (tb); Herbie Fields (cl, as); Gus Evans, George Dorsey, Ray Perry, Marshal Royal, Earl Bostic (as); Arnett Cobb, Fred Simon, Jay Peters, Dexter Gordon, Illinois Jacquet, Al Sears (ts); Charlie Fowlkes (bs); Milt Buckner (p); Billy Mackel, Irving Ashby, Eric Miller (g); Charles Harris, Ted Sinclair, Vernon King, Vernon Alley, Wendell Marshall (b); George Jenkins, Fred Radcliffe, Lee Young (d); Rubel Blakey (v). 3/42–10/44.

 Lionel Hampton 1945–46 Classics 922 As above, except omit Anderson, Newman, Dorsey, Royal, Bostic, Gordon, Jacquet, Miller, King, Alley, Marshall, Radcliffe, Young, Blakey; add Joe Morris, Al Killian (t); Abdul Hamid, John Morris, Al Hayes (tb); Bobby Plater, Ben Kynard (as); Johnny Griffin (ts); Dardanelle Breckenridge, John Mehegan (p); Dinah Washington, Bing Crosby (v). 1/45–1/46.

() Lionel Hampton 1946 Classics 946 Mostly as above, except add Jimmy Wormick (tb); Jack Kelso (cl); Joe Comfort (b); Curley Hamner (d). 1–9/46.

 Lionel Hampton 1947 Classics 994 Hampton; Wendell Culley, Duke Garrette, Jimmy Nottingham, Kenny Dorham, Leo Shepherd, Snooky Young, Teddy Buckner, Walter Williams, Benny Bailey (t); Britt Woodman, James Wormick, Sonny Craven, Andrew Penn, James Robinson (tb); Jackie Kelso (cl, as); Bobby Plater, Ben Kynard (as); Morris Lane, Johnny Sparrow (ts); Charlie Fowlkes (bs); Milt Buckner, Michael 'Dodo' Marmarosa (p); Billy Mackel (g); Charles Harris, Joe Comfort, Charles Mingus (b); Curley Hamner, Earl Walker (d); The Hamptonians, Wini Brown, Roland Burton (v). 4–11/47.

Hampton's big bands of the '40s were relentlessly entertaining outfits, their live shows a feast of raving showstoppers which Hampton somehow found the energy to replenish time and again. He tended to rely on a settled repertoire – including 'Flying Home', 'Hamp's Boogie Woogie' and a few others – but his ability to ignite both a band and an audience prevented staleness. The studio sessions are tamer than the stage show, but there's good, gritty playing, which opened the book on a blend of swing and R&B which other bandleaders followed with some interest. Classics 803 gets stuck on some dull material – four different takes of 'Flying Home' in all, including a two-part V-Disc version

– but there are also some strong charts by Clyde Hart and Milt Buckner. Classics 922 is another mixed bag, but there is a lovely Dinah Washington vocal on 'Blow Top Blues', two bits of fun with Bing Crosby, a couple of bacchanalian V-Disc sides and a thumping 'Rockin' In Rhythm'. The 1946 disc has fewer pickings and is really only for Hampton nuts, although Arnett Cobb gets off a couple of superheated solos. The 1947 set picks up a bit with the arrival of Dorham and Mingus, and some good set-pieces such as 'Three Minutes On 52nd Street', 'Red Top' and 'Mingus Fingers', ending on a vigorous sextet date.

 The Lionel Hampton Story Proper PROPERBOX 12 4CD As discs above. 37–49.
Proper's trawl through the best of the Victor and Decca sessions is as nicely packaged as the rest of this series, but transfer quality is very mixed. The music of Hamp's vintage years needs to be addressed by a company with a budget and access to the best possible sources.

 The Complete Lionel Hampton Quartets And Quintets With Oscar Peterson On Verve / (*) The Lionel Hampton Quintet /  Just One Of Those Things Verve 559797-2 5CD / 589100-2 / 547437-2 Hampton; Buddy DeFranco (cl); Oscar Peterson (p); Herb Ellis (g); Ray Brown (b); Buddy Rich (d). 53–54; 4/54; 54
(*) Jazz Masters 26: Lionel Hampton With Oscar Peterson Verve 521853-2 Hampton; Roy Eldridge, Dizzy Gillespie (t); Bill Harris (tb); Buddy DeFranco (cl); Flip Phillips, Ben Webster (ts); Oscar Peterson (p); Herb Ellis (g); Ray Brown (b); Buddy Rich (d). 53–54.
Hampton's early sessions for Norman Granz were originally spread over some 15 LPs, so this comprehensive five-disc set from Verve clears up a discographical muddle. Hampton and Peterson clearly enjoyed each other's company, and the generous solos, jocular interplay and general bonhomie is usually uplifting. That said, we offer only a low rating since the music quickly seems very unvaried and the packaging is ugly. There are things to enjoy, such as a second classic treatment of 'Star Dust', but one wishes these discs had been made available separately in a more economical way. DeFranco arrives for one session and offers some useful contrast, but as a block of music this is one of those sets to dip into very sparingly.

The Jazz Masters package has been around for a while and is still a good place to hear Hampton with Verve. Just One Of Those Things fillets sundry 1954 tracks from the complete set. Best of the slimmer selections is Quintet, which brings together two full albums from these dates in a handsome Master Edition (with the original David Stone Martin artwork).

 Olympia 1961/1966 Laserlight 36181 2CD Hampton; Dave Gonzales, Floyd Jones, Andrew Wood, Virgil Jones, Wallace Davenport (t); Vincente Prudente, Harlem Rasheed (tb); Bobby Plater (as, cl, f); John Neely (as, cl); Edward Pazant (as, ts, cl, f); Andrew McGhee (ts, cl); Edlin Terry (ts); Lonnie Shaw (bs, f); Harold Mabern, Zeke Mullins (p); Roland Faulkner, Billy Mackel (g); Lawrence Burgan (b); Wayne Robinson, Al Levitt (d); Bertice Reading, Pinocchio James (v). 3/61–10/66.
 Salle Pleyel 1971 Laserlight 36133 2CD Hampton; Roland Connors (t); Bob Snyder (cl); Tommy Gambino (ss, as); Illinois Jacquet, Chuck McClendon (ts); Milt Buckner, John Spruill (org, p); Billy Mackel (g); Eustis Guillemet (b); Kenny Bolds (d). 3/71.
Previously released in RTE's series of French concert broadcasts, these are welcome retrievals from an otherwise undocumented period. Both the 1961 and 1966 Olympia concerts are in excellent sound, and although there's the usual crowd-pleasing – via some of the hits, an over-excited Bertice Reading and Pinocchio James, a singer in the Joe Wiliams mould – there is some outstanding Hamp on 'Tenderly' (dedicated to Mezz Mezzrow), a boppish 'Glad Hamp', both versions of 'Midnight Sun' (especially the first) and a 'Stardust' with a spot for Billy Mackel.

The 1971 concert gives plenty of space to Jacquet and Buckner, neither a shrinking violet, and something like the Sam Price blues 'Big Joe' works up a monumental head of steam. Hamp browses through a few standards that take his fancy – 'Summertime', 'Avalon', 'Who Can I Turn To' – and Jacquet gets beefy on 'Ghost Of A Chance'. Working with a smaller group, the set has more of an R&B feel, and although the second disc is packed with warhorses, there's lots to listen to.

 Ring Dem Vibes Emarcy 159825-2 Hampton; Claude Gousset (tb); Michel Attenoux (as); Gérard Badini (ts); Raymond Fol, Reynold Mullins (p); Danny Doriz (vib); Billy Mackel (g); Michel Gaudry (b); Sam Woodyard (d). 5/76.
(*) As Time Goes By Sonet 981489-2 Hampton; Svend Asmussen (vn); Rune Öfwerman (p); Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen (b); Ed Thigpen (d). 78.
Cut during a low-point in Hampton's recording regimen, he still sounds irrepressible, and if this is basically a routine mainstream jam with another gang of Parisian players (plus old faithful, Billy Mackel) he's enthusiastically up for it. Oddity: a long version of Horace Silver's 'Psychedelic Sally'. The Sonet album dates from the same period: same old material, Asmussen seems uninvolved and even Thigpen sounds bored.

 Live At The Blue Note /  Just Jazz Telarc Jazz CD-83308 / 83313 Hampton; Clark Terry (t, flhn); Harry 'Sweets' Edison (t); Al Grey (tb); James Moody, Buddy Tate (ts); Hank Jones (p); Milt Hinton (b); Grady Tate (d). 6/91.
Hampton's final period of recording was, with the best will in the world, a mere echo of a major talent. Since he isn't the kind of artist to indulge in autumnal reflections, one has to use his earlier records as a yardstick, and these sessions inevitably fall short in energy and invention. No one can blame Hamp for taking things steady at this stage in what's virtually a 70-year career. The session recorded at New York's Blue Note is an expansive all-star session by musicians whose best work is, frankly, some way behind them: only the seemingly ageless Terry and the exuberant Grey defy the circumstances and muster a sense of commitment. Everyone else, including Hampton, falls back on simple ideas and tempos which give no cause for alarm. The second volume, Just Jazz, is more of the same.

Also, in brief:

() Lionel Hampton 1949–1950 / () ... 1950 Classics 1161 / 1193. 1/49–1/50; 1–9/50.
He was never a man to deny popular tastes, and Hamp's big band in these sessions sounds more like an R&B outfit, and with the ludicrous but effective 'Turkey Hop' he all but invents big-band rock'n'roll. The casualty is the jazz material.

 Lionel Hampton And His French New Sound Volumes 1 & 2 Emarcy 549405 / 549406. 55.
Hampton was often recorded on his various European visits, and these discs find him in mixed company, locals and Americans on hand. Not bad, but largely for Hampton completists.

 Mai 1956 Emarcy 013880-2. 5/56.
A stopover on a mammoth European tour, this Paris date is good-natured if not terribly involving.

(*) You Better Know It!!! Impulse 051140-2. 10/64.
Bob Thiele got a great band on its best behaviour, but the results are dull.

Slide Hampton (born 1932)

TROMBONE

Locksley Hampton played with Lionel Hampton before joining Maynard Ferguson as an arranger in 1957. Freelanced in the '60s before a spell with Woody Herman and a long stint in Europe, though he returned to the USA in 1977. His arranging has often taken precedence over his playing, but he remains a quick and skilful trombonist.

 Sister Salvation Collectables COL 6173 Hampton; Freddie Hubbard, Ernie Royal, Richard Williams, Bob Zottola (t); Bernard McKinney (tb, euph); Billy Barber (tba); George Coleman (ts); Jay Cameron (bs); Nabil Totah (b); Pete LaRoca (d). 2/60.
Slide often thought in quite large-scale musical terms, and he has a more distinctive personality as a member of ensembles than he does as a soloist. This is a crisply funky and often very intelligent octet session, packed with musical ideas, and nicely balanced between original material like his own title-tune, 'Asseveration' and 'A Little Night Music', and imaginative rearrangements of pieces like Weston's 'Hi-Fli' and Ellington's rarely covered 'Just Squeeze Me (But Don't Tease Me)', which was written for and with Will Gaines.

* Roots Criss Cross 1015 Hampton; Clifford Jordan (ts); Cedar Walton (p); David Williams (b); Billy Higgins (d). 4/85.
A session in which everything worked out right. Hampton and Jordan are perfectly paired, the trombonist fleet yet punchy, Jordan putting a hint of dishevelment into otherwise finely tailored improvisations; and Walton has seldom played with so much vitality, yet without surrendering his customary aristocratic touch. Williams and Higgins are asked to play hard throughout the four long titles, and they oblige without flagging. Although a very fast 'Solar' is arguably the highlight, it's a fine record altogether.

(*) Dedicated To Diz Telarc 83323 Hampton; Jon Faddis, Roy Hargrove, Claudio Roditi (t, flhn); Steve Turre (tb, shells); Douglas Purviance (btb); Antonio Hart (as, ss); Jimmy Heath (ts); David Sanchez (ts, ss, f); Danilo Perez (p); George Mraz (b); Lewis Nash (d). 2/93.
Having Faddis in a Gillespie tribute guarantees a certain authenticity. The idea of the Jazz Masters, as this group was known, was to record larger-scale arrangements of work associated with the greats. A great charts man as well as player, Hampton handles this one with characteristic discretion and charm. It might have sounded better done in a studio than live at the Village Vanguard. There are moments when the sound is imperfect, and one or two of the ensembles should have been touched up. The high-points are 'Lover Man' and 'A Night In Tunisia'. Faddis is quite properly the star, but Hargrove, Roditi and Turre, Heath and Sanchez also have their moments in the sun.

 Spirit Of The Horn MCGJazz MCGJ1011 Hampton; Jay Ashby, Bill Watrous, Michael Boschen, Steve Davis, Hugh Fraser, David Gibson, Andre Hayward, Tim Newman, Benny Powell, Douglas Purviance, Max Siegel, Isaac Smith, David Taylor (tb); Martin Ashby (g); Larry Willis (p); John Lee (b); Victor Jones (d). 5/02.
This is great fun, although a 14-strong band of trombonists does make one fear the worst. In the end, Slide deploys his huge team very deftly, making 'A Flower Is A Lovesome Thing' sing (Duke loved his trombones, too) and having them breeze through 'Dolphin Dance'. Watrous, who might be the greatest trombone technician jazz has ever seen, is sensibly used as a lead solo voice, and everybody gets their turn in 'Blues For Eric'. It can't quite escape the novelty-record tag, but you can't fault Slide for trying.

Also, in brief:

 Two Sides Of Slide Fresh Sound FSRCD 349. 59–61.
A mouth-watering personnel, but they only have an ensemble role; Slide takes most of the solos, which is fair enough – these were his dates, after all.

 Exodus Emarcy 013033-2. 11/62.
Reissued as part of Emarcy's celebration of jazz in Paris, this is a thoughtful and well-balanced set that once again demonstrates Slide's skill as an arranger and bandleader.

Herbie Hancock (born 1940)

PIANO, KEYBOARDS

One of the most significant composers in modern jazz, the creator of 'Watermelon Man' and 'Dolphin Dance' as well as the unforgettable 'Rockit', the Chicagoan was a child prodigy, playing Mozart as a youngster. He has embraced bebop, funk and elements of classical form: a formidable technician.

(*) Takin' Off Blue Note 37643 Hancock; Freddie Hubbard (t, flhn); Dexter Gordon (ts); Butch Warren (b); Billy Higgins (d). 5/62.
Following master's work at the Manhattan School of Music, Hancock made his professional debut with Coleman Hawkins. He signed up with trumpeter Donald Byrd and came to the attention of Alfred Lion at Blue Note, who agreed to allow the 22-year-old to record with a horn-led group. The result is astonishingly mature and poised. 'Watermelon Man' digs back into memories of Chicago's South Side, a gospelly roller which prompts a full-hearted solo from Hubbard; not the obvious choice for the gig, perhaps, with Byrd a more likely candidate, but he fits right in. As does Gordon, who was only getting back to serious work after his tribulations; he sounds earthy and intense, and much more focused than on the alternative take, which has been added to the CD. The collaboration was to firm up a friendship that would last till the end of Gordon's life and the Tavernier movie Round Midnight. 'Three Bags Full' is a curious piece, almost Eastern in harmony and apparently intended to underline the stylistic differences between the three soloists. This might almost be something by the '50s Miles Davis group, with Gordon emulating Coltrane. 'The Maze' is a puzzle-piece, and 'Driftin'' is a relaxed blowing tune featuring Hubbard's flugelhorn. Perhaps the most effective track of all is the ballad, 'Alone Am I', moody and philosophical, with a superb solo from Hancock. Can there ever have been a more auspicious debut?

 My Point Of View Blue Note 21226 Hancock; Donald Byrd (t); Grachan Moncur III (tb); Grant Green (g); Chuck Israels (b); Tony Williams (d). 3/63.
My Point Of View was the second of Hancock's records for Blue Note. It's never been the most celebrated, despite including the wonderful 'Blind Man, Blind Man', which is now represented in an extra take. Herbie's relationship with Tony Williams is often regarded as the key to this fine record, and revisiting it in this special Rudy Van Gelder edition merely reinforces that view. 'King Cobra' is a brilliant synthesis of Williams's rhythmic genius and Hancock's structural gifts. Herbie's passing interest in R&B surfaces on 'And What If I Don't', which most blindfold testees would be hard-pressed to identify.

 Inventions And Dimensions Blue Note 563799 Hancock; Paul Chambers (b); Willie Bobo (d); Chihuahua Martinez (perc). 8/63.

The forgotten album. Few Blue Note sessions of the time were created with such freedom. Hancock gave his musicians nothing more than a time-signature and some general idea of shape, and the session went from there. 'Succotash', named after the sound of Willie Bobo's brushes rather than the beans-and-corn mix, is in double waltz-time. 'Triangle' falls into three distinct sections, with the feel of the blues but no obvious blues content. 'For Jack Rabbit' and 'A Jump Ahead' were effectively co-written by Paul Chambers; on the former track the bassist drives the improvisation along with a repeat figure, while the title of the latter derives from his four-note pedal at the start.

♛ * Maiden Voyage Blue Note 95331 Hancock; Freddie Hubbard (t); George Coleman (ts); Ron Carter (b); Tony Williams (d). 64.

* Empyrean Isles Blue Note 98796 As above, except omit Coleman. 6/64.

(*) Cantaloupe Island Blue Note 29331 As above, except add Donald Byrd (t); Grachan Moncur III (tb); George Coleman, Dexter Gordon (ts); Butch Warren (b); Billy Higgins (d). 5/62, 3/63, 6/64, 3/65.

Maiden Voyage has been tussled over before. Revisionists argue that it is glib and superficial. We disagree and have no hesitation in placing it in our premier league, a colossal achievement by a man still just 24 years old. It is a quiet record, likened by Joachim Berendt to Debussy's La Mer. Coleman plays with delicate understatement and Hancock never puts a foot wrong. No great surprise that the chemistry was so good: with the obvious exception of Hubbard, this was Miles's group.

Empyrean Isles is almost as good. 'Cantaloupe Island' is a glorious piece of quartet jazz and 'Dolphin Dance' has seldom been out of the repertoire in the last 30 years. The absence of Coleman puts ever-greater emphasis on piano and, though one misses his slightly breathy delivery, there's an amazing clarity here.

Cantaloupe Island is a compilation of material from Takin' Off and Empyrean Isles, and includes, from My Point Of View, 'Blind Man, Blind Man'.

 Jazz To Funk Aim 1604 Hancock; Don Cherry, Freddy Hubbard (t); Phil Woods (as); Jimmy Heath, Joe Henderson (ts); Ron Carter (b); Jack DeJohnette, Albert 'Tootie' Heath (d). 66–69.

A curious, mixed-bag compilation which takes that 'transitional' tag as its premiss. The material here includes out-takes from the Blow Up sessions, as well as four cuts from an album originally released under Al Heath's name, and, also on the first side, the long, slightly rambling 'Maulana'. Given the quality of the personnel, this is an obviously desirable item for collectors of the period as well as Hancock completists, but don't expect too many revelations.

 Speak Like A Child Blue Note 746136 Hancock; Thad Jones (flhn); Peter Phillips (btb); Jerry Dodgion (af); Ron Carter (b); Mickey Roker (d). 3/68.

An experiment in sound-texture, this was the first of Hancock's records to suggest that he might welcome a swing towards electronics. The sound is slithery and quite abstract, certainly not dance-orientated but full of intimations of what was to come in the '70s. Jones was an unexpected recruitment, but he plays with delicate beauty and some muscle throughout. An easy record to overlook; well worth hearing.

 The Prisoner Blue Note 25649 Hancock; Johnny Coles (t, flhn); Garnett Brown (tb); Jack Jeffers, Tony Studd (btb); Romeo Penque (bcl); Jerome Richardson (bcl, f); Joe Henderson (ts); Buster Williams (b); Albert 'Tootie' Heath (d); Oren Waters (v). 4/69.

Dedicated to the spirit of Martin Luther King Jr, this final Blue Note and first since leaving Miles Davis is one of Hancock's most ambitious projects, with a rich phalanx of horns and a certain amount of dabbling on Fender Rhodes. It's a notably thoughtful record, and the opening sequence of 'I Have A Dream', 'The Prisoner' and a version of Charles Williams's 'Firewater' (there are alternative takes of the latter two on the reissue) is one of the most powerful in the whole range of Hancock's work. So why, then, is this album so little known, relative to the others? The short answer is that it has been only sporadically available and, more pressingly, that it is a markedly inward and even solipsistic work. Henderson is magnificent, as is the underachieving Coles, and Hancock himself plays with a calm authority that was increasingly rare in his subsequent work.

* The Complete Blue Note Sixties Sessions Blue Note 4 95569 2 6CD As above, except add Melvin Lastie (c); Johnny Coles, Thad Jones (flhn); Garnett Brown (tb); Jack Jeffers, Tony Studd (btb); Jackie McLean (as), Jerry Dodgion (as, f), Jerome Richardson (bcl, f), Romeo Penque (bcl), Hubert Laws (f), Stanley Turrentine (ts), Eric Gale, Billy Butler (g), Bob Cranshaw (b), Albert 'Tootie' Heath , Bernard Purdie, Mickey Roker (d). 12/61–4/69.

As well as the Blue Notes issued above, this includes the whole of Speak Like A Child and Herbie's last album for the label, The Prisoner. Blue Note have included some interesting filler material. There are early tracks recorded under the leadership of Donald Byrd and Jackie McLean, some material with Bobby Hutcherson from Blow-Up, and 'The Collector' from Wayne Shorter's Adam's Apple date. At the very end of the set, a rarity: Herbie's one and only serious dabbling in R&B, in a band fronted by Melvin Lastie and Stanley Turrentine.

 Fat Albert Rotunda Warner 47540 Hancock; Johnny Coles (t); Garnett Brown (tb); Joe Henderson (ts, af); Buster Williams (b); Albert 'Tootie' Heath (d). 10 & 12/69.

Working with Miles Davis suggested the possibilities of an electric band. When he moved on, Hancock immediately experimented with his own version. The three albums for Warner Bros were Fat Albert Rotunda, Mwandishi (the Swahili name he had adopted for himself) and Crossings.

Written for Bill Cosby's Fat Albert cartoon, the music began to take on a life of its own and started Hancock's personal exploration of fusion. It also marks a first use on his own date of the Fender Rhodes which was to become something of a Hancock trademark over the next few years. With the criminally under-recorded Johnny Coles on trumpet and Joe Henderson on tenor and alto flute, the session has a surging, almost breathless power that takes it far beyond its origins.

 Mwandishi Warner Brothers 1898 2CD Hancock; Eddie Henderson (t); Julian Priester (tb); Bennie Maupin (sax, bcl, af);

Jose Areas (g, perc); Ronnie Montrose (g); Buster Williams (b); Billy Hart (d); Leon Ndugu Chancler (d, perc). 12/70.

 Crossings Warner 475423 As above, except add Patrick Gleeson (syn), Victor Pantoja (perc), Victoria Domagalski, Della Horne, Candy Love, Sandra Stevens (v). 12/71.

Mwandishi is altogether more thoughtful and personal. On tunes like 'Wandering Spirit Song', Hancock experiments for the first time with sheer duration, and it's hard to believe that this album did not exert some sort of reciprocal influence on Miles Davis, notably the saturnine Agharta and Pangaea. Maupin's multi-instrumentalism is a key element, but the other Henderson's melancholic trumpet is the main dramatic focus. 'You'll Know When You Get There' is a long journey across the Kalahari, punctuated by harmonic mirages and sudden changes of pace.

The set was recorded in a single session over New Year's Eve, 1970, and the long opening 'Ostinato (Suite For Angela)' has signs of being approached in the same way that Miles's sessions were taped, though with a greater sense of predetermined structure. Priester's 'Wandering Spirit Song' has In A Silent Way's hazy, ethereal quality.

The final episode of Hancock's Warners period takes the electric group even further out into the avant-garde. The electronic gadgetry is now almost the main focus of the sound, with everything pumped through echoplexes and wah-wah pedals, distorted and run through tape machines in any number of different ways. The long 'Sleeping Giant' is a wonderfully atmospheric piece – though, interestingly, Herbie cedes composition duties to Maupin for the remainder of the record, on 'Quasar' and 'Water Torture'. Where Hancock's own work differs markedly from Miles's superficially similar conception is in the level of structure and organization. 'Sleeping Giant' is almost symphonic in form, and has a wonderful sense of completion, where Miles's pieces of the time felt as if they might rumble and clatter on indefinitely. Patrick Gleeson's Moog is an integral element of the sound here, spooky, tortured and sometimes giving off an eldritch beauty.

 Sextant Columbia CK 64983 Hancock; Eddie Henderson, Julian Priester (tb, atb, btb, perc); Bennie Maupin (ss, bcl, picc, perc); Jaco Pastorius, Buster Williams (b); Billy Hart (d, perc); Buck Clarke (perc); Scott Beach, Della Horne, Candy Love, Sandra Stevens (v). 72.

Sextant marks a shift towards the electronic funk of mid-decade, but it has an infectious freshness. 'Rain Dance' is one of Hancock's most delightful themes, shifting between metres, harmonically agile. 'Hidden Shadows' and 'Hornets' are more like long-form jams, though the basic architecture of the second track is very impressive. Where Miles Davis was interested in abstraction and pure sound, Hancock was still devoted to melody. The doubling of lines, often by Priester and Maupin in conjunction with the bassist, was a key element here, and it's deployed to great effect.

CORE COLLECTION

* Head Hunters

Columbia CK 65123 Hancock; Bennie Maupin (ts, ss, saxello, bcl, af); Paul Jackson (b); Harvey Mason (d); Bill Summers (perc). 73.

Miles legitimized a view of black musical history that made room for Sly Stone and James Brown, as well as Charlie Parker and John Coltrane. Head Hunters was the direct result, an infectiously funky and thoroughly joyous record; only the closing 'Vein Melter' hints at melancholy. Hancock includes 'Watermelon Man', not because he is short of ideas, but because he wants to demonstrate the essential continuity of his music. For the simplest demonstration, listen to Butch Warren's line on Takin' Off and then compare the toppling, dotted rhythm Paul Jackson brings to it on Head Hunters. Hancock's electric keyboards can sound one-dimensional and the Hohner Clavinet is very much an acquired taste. The latest remastering, coupled to budget release and including a new essay by Hancock, gives the biggest-selling jazz record of all time a new gloss and impetus: 'Chameleon' (on which Hancock improvises beautifully) and 'Sly' have renewed vigour. Maupin performs a role much like Wayne Shorter in Weather Report, not soloing at length or necessarily carrying the line but placing brushstrokes and punctuating moods much as Miles did. 'Vein Melter', which is perhaps his best moment on the record, is a throwback to the more introverted music of the very early '70s, but is no less effective in this context and a valuable change of mood.

(*) Thrust Columbia CK 64984 As above, except omit Mason; add Mike Clark (d). 74.

 Man-Child Columbia 471235-2 Hancock; Wilbur Brisbois, Jay DaVersa (t); Garnett Brown (tb); Dick Hyde (btb, tba); Jim Horn, Ernie Watts (sax, f); Wayne Shorter (ss); Bennie Maupin (ts, ss, saxello, bcl, af); Stevie Wonder (hca); Blackbird McKnight, David T Walker (g); Henry Davis, Paul Jackson (b); Mike Clark, James Gadson (d); Bill Summers (perc). 1/76.

Thrust was conceived as a near-exact replica, but this time the bank of Arps – Odyssey, Soloist, 2600 synth and string synth – lacks creative personality. 'Palm Grease' is unmistakable Hancock, oozing with class and a politely ironic menace. Jackson's bass is a little like a truncheon round the head and ribcage, not quite in earnest, but not quite easy to listen to either. Mike Clark is your basic Rock Skool drummer, but quite effective in this context and capable of some delicacy, as on 'Butterfly'.

Vividly textured and awash with new ideas of instrumental colour, Man-Child now sounds like Hancock's shade-card for the bands of the mid-'70s. He wasn't to use quite such a broad spectrum again, and on occasion he trades in drive and energy for surface tone. The work of the early '70s was influenced by Indian and African idioms and makes much use of doubled instruments, out-of-synch transitions and rhythmic overlaps that seem to happen in phase rather than at once. The horns are uniformly good, if a little too uniform in focus. The fast, semiquaver patterns were to become irritating later. Here they are modulated more carefully. Veering close to 'space music', Man-Child isn't the easiest album to locate in the continuum, but it remains eminently listenable.

 Flood Sony International 35439 Hancock; Bennie Maupin (ss, ts, bcl, f); Blackbird McKnight (g); Paul Jackson (b); Mike Clark (d); Bill Summers (perc). 6–7/75.

Somewhat like Miles Davis's dark epics of the time, this was originally only released in Japan. Like them, it's a live recording, and a good representation of what the Headhunters sounded like out of the studio. 'Chameleon' sounds almost freely improvised or like a demonstration of electronic keyboards, depending on how you look at it. 'Watermelon Man' is more straightforward, and the long closing 'Hang Up Your Hang Ups' is rousing jazz-funk. The most illuminating section, though, comes right at the beginning, where Herbie plays a long acoustic introduction to 'Maiden Voyage' that reminds us he was still a jazz musician at heart and still not averse to playing a regular piano.

(*) V.S.O.P. Sony 34688 Hancock; Freddie Hubbard (t); Eddie Henderson (t, flhn); Julian Priester (tb); Wayne Shorter (ss, ts);

Bennie Maupin (af); Ray Parker Jr, Wah Wah Watson (g); Ron Carter, Paul Jackson, Buster Williams (b); James Levi, Tony Williams (d); Kenneth Nash (perc). 7/76.

(*) V.S.O.P.: The Quintet /  Live Under the Sky Sony 65462 / 87165 2CD Hancock; Freddie Hubbard (t); Wayne Shorter (ss, ts); Ron Carter (b); Tony Williams (d). 7/77; 7/79.

A pre-Internet grapevine buzzed with rumour before Hancock's retrospective at the 1976 Newport Jazz Festival that the great Miles Davis Quintet might take the stage and play an acoustic set. In the event, trumpet duties were left to Freddie Hubbard, probably as planned all along, but the gig had a disproportionate impact on modern jazz, inspiring younger-generation players who were tiring of electro-funk to revisit the classic Prestiges and Blue Notes.

'Maiden Voyage' and 'Nefertiti' are performed without much dynamism, and the complex line of the latter tune almost unfurls onstage. Hancock is playing an electric instrument, albeit the closest thing yet devised to a genuine Steinway, and, partly as a result, the sound of the band is hard and brittle. Hubbard is, as ever, unwilling to play himself in and blasts away; in comparison to the more reflective Eddie Henderson, who crops up later, he sounds vulgar and brusque. Almost perversely, the concert and album also reflect the changes that had overtaken jazz, with a final performance by the recent Hancock sextet (which included Henderson) and some post-Head Hunters funk from the new unit. The sextet is represented by just two tracks – but this, equally perversely, given that it was a farewell gig, is where the real musical action is. 'Toys' is a splendid piece of post-Miles jazz, and Henderson's part indicates the direction Miles might have gone in had he not opted for the turbid landscapes of Agharta and Pangaea. The Headhunters stuff at the end is engaging enough but overlong and excessively indulgent.

The name stood for 'Very Special One-time-only Performance', but, inevitably, it was too money-spinning an idea to leave as a one-off so, in the summer of 1977, the quintet went on the road. Bootleg tapes of these concerts are of variable quality, but so was the music. This is one of the middling sets, recorded at two Californian venues. Unlike the retrospective event, this was a project of leaders, and so there are compositions by Hubbard ('One Of A Kind'), Shorter ('Dolores'), Williams ('Lawra') and Carter ('Third Plane') in a shapeless set. The band was clearly pulling in too many directions at once and, given the number of powerful egos on the stand, it's a wonder they got it together at all.

The band didn't work much back in the States, but in Japan they were demigods. In the summer of 1979 Sony Japan made a concert recording in the midst of a biblical rainstorm (the event was also broadcast live on television) and released it as a Japan-only set. It's now available with the second night's recording added as a bonus. The storm is plainly audible, but, far from detracting from the music, it gives the set a curiously moving atmosphere. The opening 'Eye Of The Hurricane' seems particularly apposite in the context and Hubbard plays magnificently, pushed along by Williams. The following night's version is longer but not so powerful. The two sets are identical, but the second-night material has bonus versions of 'Stella By Starlight' and 'On Green Dolphin Street'.

(*) Mr Hands Columbia 471240 Hancock; Bennie Maupin (ts); Wah Wah Watson (g); Ron Carter, Paul Jackson, Byron Miller, Jaco Pastorius (b); Leon Ndugu Chancler, Harvey Mason, Tony Williams (d); Sheila Escovedo, Bill Summers (perc). 82.

A similar line-up to 1978's Sunlight, but behind it a strong recognition on Hancock's part that the funk experiment is over, both creatively and commercially. The first sign of change is that once again the leader is credited with all the material. 'Calypso' isn't 'Cantaloupe Island', but it is Hancock's strongest jazz writing for some years, and the attack is strong and pianistic. Other tracks, notably 'Just Around The Corner' and the gloriously danceable 'Shiftless Shuffle', are still at the fusion end of things, but with a less one-dimensional beat and a growing harmonic flexibility grafted on.

 Quartet Columbia CK 38275 Hancock; Wynton Marsalis (t); Ron Carter (b); Tony Williams (d). 82.

As his interest in rock and pop receded, Hancock made carefully selected forays back into the world of straight jazz. Perversely, the chops don't sound nearly as good as they did on Head Hunters, and the standard and repertory material, like 'I Fall In Love Too Easily' and a couple of Monk tunes, don't afford him much respite. Fortunately for the album, Marsalis is feeling his oats, dispatching his solos with testy arrogance, and of course the other two rhythm players are in superb shape.

 Future Shock Columbia CK 65962 Hancock; Michael Beinhorn (ky); Pete Cosey (g); Bill Laswell (b); Grandmixer DST (turntables); Sly Dunbar (d, perc); Daniel Ponce (perc); Bernard Fowler, Dwight Jackson, Lamar Wright (v). 83.

A decade on from Head Hunters, Hancock was to have one last throw of chart success with 'Rockit', a number one single that propelled Future Shock up the album charts as well. Working with Bill Laswell put him in touch with elements of the New Wave, a more brooding sound that once again kindled memories of Miles's organ bands (and the presence of Pete Cosey brought the connection into even sharper focus).

 A Tribute To Miles Qwest/Reprise 45059 Hancock; Wallace Roney (t); Wayne Shorter (ts); Ron Carter (b); Tony Williams (d). 9/92.

Hancock founded V.S.O.P. in 1976, mainly as a festival outfit; but as long as Miles was alive there was a hope that one night he might sit in and reunite the old quintet. Only when the inevitable happened did the dream fade. Roney makes a creditable job of it, pungent, agile and a good deal more acerbic on 'So What' and 'All Blues' than the composer had ever been. Both are recorded live but seem a touch lifeless. The rest was taped in studio, and it would be fascinating to hear the out-takes of something like 'Pinocchio', which is executed so smoothly it's hard to believe that it wasn't fully written out beforehand.

(*) The New Standard Verve 527715-2 Hancock; Michael Brecker (ts, ss); John Scofield (g, sitar); Dave Holland (b); Jack DeJohnette (d); Don Alias (perc); woodwinds, brass. 96.

The notion of what constituted a 'standard' seemed to ossify in the aftermath of bebop: Broadway tunes, torch ballads, some novelty items, but a pretty consensual playlist. It was John Coltrane and, as ever, Miles who blew that away, deconstructing tunes like 'My Favorite Things', 'Chim Chim Cheree' and 'The Inch Worm' almost with savagery, and then in Miles's case digging into chart pop for 'Time After Time' (the Cyndi Lauper version) and Michael Jackson's 'Human Nature'. Hancock takes a very similar line on The New Standard, programming tunes like British soul diva Sade's 'Love Is Stronger Than Pride' (a lush, big-band interpretation) and Kurt Cobain's 'All Apologies', Prince's irrepressibly funky 'Thieves In The Temple' and Peter Gabriel's 'Mercy Street'. The essential approach is no different from any other standards recording, except that Hancock is obviously aware that some of these songs will not stand too much harmonic deconstruction at this stage in their public histories. They are not as yet true contrafacts, except for the more familiar 'Scarborough Fair', and the limitations of the record, excellently performed as it is, lie in the reliance on melodic variation of songs that in some cases are fairly cut-and-dried and not really susceptible to this treatment. One suspects that Brecker probably has a pop and rock collection at home; he revels in the challenge and turns in some fresh-voiced and unhackneyed solos. Holland and Scofield (who switches to electric sitar for 'Norwegian Wood') are masterful, and only DeJohnette, normally the most adaptable of players, seems to strain at the leash.

 1 + 1 Verve 537564-2 Hancock; Wayne Shorter (ss). 96.
'The artists call upon the full palette of their musical resources to paint life's stories with all the texture of emotion and intensity of color – a process demanding the performance equivalent of a leap into the unknown.' Tosh. For a start, the palette is all too limited. Shorter's tenor remained in its case and there is a limit to how much of his eccentric soprano voice one wants to hear at a sitting. And there is no sense whatsoever that this is an exploratory, existential encounter. What one hears is two now middle-aged players of huge ability and scope conversing idly, eliding much of the middle ground, elevating slight ideas to spurious grandeur. Nothing wrong with that, but a mistake surely to make extravagant claims for such a lightweight session? 'The evanescent made eternal'? Don't think so.

(*) Gershwin's World Verve 557797-2 Hancock; Eddie Henderson (t, flhn); James Carter, Wayne Shorter (ss, ts); Kenny Garrett (as); Marlon Graves (g); Stevie Wonder (hca, v); Ron Carter, Stanley Clarke, Ira Coleman (b); Terri Lyne Carrington, Gene Jackson (d); Cyro Baptista, Massamba Diop (perc); Kathleen Battle, Joni Mitchell (v); Orpheus Chamber Orchestra. 98.
Hancock has not generally been thought of an interpreter of other composers' music, but the centenary of George Gershwin was too significant an occasion to miss. Herbie delivers one of the most elegant and thoughtful records of his career, some of it on the fringes of jazz proper, but all of it marked by a profound musicianship and a genuine empathy with Gershwin's world and music. There are some additional, non-Gershwin items: a revival of the old duo with Chick Corea for James P. Johnson's 'Blueberry Rhyme', Duke's 'Cottontail', Ravel's Piano Concerto and W. C. Handy's 'St Louis Blues'. It features the unmistakable voice of Stevie Wonder, whose equally unmissable harmonica accompanies Joni Mitchell on 'Summertime'; Shorter's soprano solo on the same track completely transforms the song into something delicate and otherworldly. From a younger generation, James Carter makes his presence felt in a style derived from Shorter's Blue Note period, but with a distinctly contemporary edge. Kenny Garrett and Eddie Henderson keep the blues very squarely on the agenda and block any risk of drifting off into 'classics-lite' mode. By blending together Gershwin originals and related material, Hancock has created a mini-musical that links the great man back and forward in time, and across the divide between 'popular' and 'classical' music.

 Directions In Music: Live At Massey Hall Verve 589654 Hancock; Roy Hargrove (t); Michael Brecker (ts); John Patitucci (b); Brian Blade (d). 11/01.
To mark the 75th anniversaries of both Miles Davis and John Coltrane, Hancock reconvened a latter-day version of his V.S.O.P. band. This date was recorded in the richly associative atmosphere of Massey Hall in Toronto, where, nearly 50 years before, Charlie Parker and Dizzy Gillespie had led another 'Quintet Of The Year'. This time out, the repertoire was chosen to honour both. The best pieces are associated with Coltrane, though. 'Impressions' is given a radical overhaul, its blues idiom thoroughly investigated and updated. Brecker plays 'Naima' unaccompanied, a magnificent tour de force that confirms his status as the most influential Coltrane disciple and arguably the most influential saxophone-player since Coltrane himself. Hancock's role is secondary to both the front-men (Hargrove has 'done' Miles Davis before), but he demonstrates anew that this kind of post-bop jazz is still in his blood.

 River – The Joni Letters Verve 1744826 Hancock; Wayne Shorter (ss, ts); Lionel Loueke (g); Dave Holland (b); Vinnie Colaiuta (d); Norah Jones, Corinne Bailey Rae, Leonard Cohen, Tiny Turner, Joni Mitchell (v). 9/07.
The core group is one of Hancock's best for 30 years; the material is wonderful; the guest singers are in exceptional form (certainly in Turner's case on 'Edith And The Kingpin'). So what's not to like? All that stands against this is the overall air of 'concept' and polish. It's so high-gloss that the glare actually deadens the musicianship, which is formidable. Even Mitchell's own Shine, released the same day, shows more improvisational looseness and adventure. Herbie got a Grammy nomination for his improvisation on 'Both Sides Now'; you sense that Grammy nominations are what make him tick now.

Also, in brief:

 Blow-Up Soundtracks 852280. 66.
A near-perfect correlative to the funky, ambiguous world of Antonioni's movie. Herbie's L'Ascenseur Pour L'Echafaud?

(*) Mwandishi: The Complete Warner Bros Recordings Warner 245732 2CD. 10/69–2/72.
It's still preferable to hear these albums individually. However, the box will appeal to those who aren't hung up on original packaging.

* The Herbie Hancock Box Columbia Legacy AC4K 64978 4CD. 73–87.
A supremely polished package and an ideal complement to the Blue Note retrospective: 34 tracks spread over a nearly 15-year period, spotty coverage of the Columbia years, but it does the job.

(*) Death Wish Sony International 491981. 74.
A terrific title-theme, worthy of a better film, but some fine cue writing all the way through.

(*) Secrets Columbia CK 34280. 76.
Hancock ceded some of his compositional duties for this one and it's no better for it. Crude funk, much of the way.

(*) An Evening With Herbie Hancock & Chick Corea Columbia C2K 65551 2CD. 2/78.
The most alarming thing here is what has gone wrong with 'Maiden Voyage'; that and the way Corea wipes the floor with him as far as technique and expression go.

 Magic Windows /  Lite Me Up Columbia 486572/48657381. 82, 82.
Close to rock bottom (and no pun intended). Hancock is incapable of producing a record without interest but wasn't quite ready for a return to jazz. A cameo from Michael Brecker on 'Help Yourself' points a way forward.

() Sound-System Columbia CK 39478. 84.
Unmistakably of its moment, this had limited shelf-life from the moment it was made. It's a lumbering, ungainly mess.

() Perfect Machine Sony International 65960. 88.
The dullest bit of 'product' Herbie has ever put his name to. The version of 'Maiden Voyage' is dire, which is enough to damn the rest of it for all eternity. Bill Laswell's hand is all over it, to the extent that it hardly seems like a Hancock project at all.

 Live /  Live In New York Jazz Door 1206 / 1210. 88, 92; 93.
We're not sure of the legitimacy of these releases, but, from Belgrade ('88) and NY ('92, '93), they find Hancock back playing small-group jazz and collectors will value them.

 Dis Is Da Drum Mercury 528 185. 95.
Call us old-fashioned, but a record that needs a 'sound designer' is in trouble. Just when it seemed like Hancock had realigned himself with jazz he came up with a confection that demonstrated that if he was just too young for bebop, he was too old for hip-hop.

() Future 2 Future Transparent Music 50011. 01.
He does try to keep himself open to influences, but this is another modish miscall.

() Possibilities Vector/Hancock 70013. 8/05.
A 'because he can' record, with parts for Christine Aguilera, Annie Lennox, the inevitable Sting, Carlos Santana, Paul Simon … and some jazz musicians.

Captain John Handy (1900–71)

ALTO SAXOPHONE, CLARINET

A New Orleans musician working in the city from the '30s, Handy started on clarinet but preferred alto; when he became internationally known as a touring hired-gun in the '60s, his broad-based style suggested a synthesis of revivalism and a down-home R&B.

() The Very First Recordings American Music AMCD-51 Handy; Jimmy Clayton (t); Dave Williams, Louis Gallaud (p); George Guesnon (g, bj); Sylvester Handy, McNeal Breaux (b); Alfred Williams, Josiah Frazier (d). 7/60.
(*) Capt. John Handy & His New Orleans Stompers Volumes 1 & 2 GHB BCD-41 / 42 Handy; Kid Thomas Valentine (t); Jim Robinson (tb); Sammy Rimington (cl); Bill Sinclair (p); Dick Griffith (bj); Dick McCarthy (b); Sammy Penn (d). 12/65.
 Very Handy! GHB BCD-325 Handy; Clive Wilson (t); Big Bill Bissonnette (tb); Sammy Rimington (cl, g); Bill Sinclair (p); Dick Griffith (bj); Dick McCarthy (b); Art Pulver (d). 5/66.
 John Handy With Barry Martyn's Band GHB BCD-377 Handy; Teddy Fullick (t); Pete Dyer (tb); Sammy Rimington (cl, ts); Graham Paterson (p); Brian Turnock (b); Barry Martyn (d). 3/68.
It still seems strange that John Handy should have had so much flak from New Orleans purists. He seldom worked far from the city and had been a fixture in local bands since 1919. But because he preferred to play alto over clarinet – just a single track of the smaller horn on the American Music CD – and his style anticipated such R&B players as Earl Bostic, he was virtually ostracized. Yet he is always the most interesting player on all these records, and the bounce and wit of his playing can sometimes be phenomenal in the strict channels of New Orleans playing.

Many listeners will be reminded of the alto-playing of Earl Fouche with Sam Morgan. One can't hear Handy that well on the First Recordings disc since he seems to be at the back of the band, but when he breaks through – as on the animated 'Panama' – he makes the music bristle. Most of the disc consists of previously unreleased music, but the band is clumsy and the final three tracks, with a different rhythm section, slightly disappointing. The two live shows from 1965 are much more like it and a strong document of the New Orleans movement at its most spirited. Valentine's jabbing trumpet spars with Handy's almost pirouetting lines, with Rimington the elegant voice in the middle. This is great stuff and, though raggedness sometimes takes over these are records to play if one wants to sample how vibrant this kind of jazz can be. Very Handy! has the Captain on board with Bill Bissonnette's band, and though the leader wasn't very happy with the results, as detailed in his curmudgeonly sleeve-note, the music has plenty of fizz. Handy plays with herculean abandon on such as 'Give Me Your Telephone Number', and the tempos tend to helter-skelter. The sound is thin and strangled but not hopeless, and five previously unissued tracks take the CD over 60 minutes.

The cover-photo on the last of these of six young Englishmen and the weatherbeaten New Orleans veteran seems redolent of an era of prehistory, but the music, driven along by Kid Martyn's unquenchable enthusiasm from the kit, has a gutsy excitement.

Craig Handy (born 1963)

TENOR, SOPRANO AND ALTO SAXOPHONES

A Messengers alumnus who's also explored freer territory.

 Introducing Three For All & One Arabesque 109 Handy; David Kikoski (p); Charles Fambrough (b); Ralph Peterson (d). 4/93.
 Reflections In Change Sirocco Jazz 1005 Handy; Chris Comer (t); Peck Almond (t, f); Robin Eubanks, Steve Slagle (tb); Mike Rabinowicz (bsn); Geri Allen, Stephen Scott (p); Dave Stryker (g); Rodney Whitaker (b); Ali Jackson (d); Tara Cruise (v). 6/99.
 Flow Sirocco Jazz 1010 Handy; Xavier Davis (p); Rodney Whitaker (b); Ali Jackson (d, v). 3/00.
The Arabesque album concludes with a fine unaccompanied piece, 'West Bank: Beyond The Berlin Wall', that confirms the sense of a player who has absorbed his influences. The basic trio of Handy, Fambrough and Peterson is augmented on some tracks by pianist Kikoski, who adds little beyond texture. The second album also tries to vary the sound, with the addition of Stephen Scott and some extra horns for a couple of tracks. Interestingly, much of the writing is by Jackson, but there is also a fine version of Mingus's 'Eclipse'. The bigger group shines on the closing 'Adona's Song', and elsewhere Stryker comes in to add his chiming sound. The vocals are dull; this isn't rap music and Cruise's recitation seems out of place. Flow is a very fine record indeed and a good place to start. The quartet format is deemed sufficient and there is no arguing with that. Handy's driving intro to 'Just One Of Those Things' is wonderfully poised and mature. Jackson is again very prominent, though his rap is hardly essential, and the rock-solid Whitaker offers reminders of his quality. It's all down to the leader, though.

George Handy (1920–97)

ARRANGER, PIANO

Studied under Aaron Copland and worked with Raymond Scott and Boyd Raeburn, giving the latter's band its reputation for adventurous charts.

 Pensive Fresh Sound FSRCD 438 Handy; Charlie Panelli, Dick Sherman (t); Gene Orloff (t, vn); Billy Byers, Frank Rehak (tb); Dave Schildkraut (as); Ray Beckenstein (f, as); Tommy Mace (ob, ts); Danny Bank (bs); Tony Aless (p); Buddy Jones (b); Osie Johnson (d). 4/55.

The slightly earlier Handyland U.S.A. has had some CD circulation on Cloud 9, but this is pretty much all that survives of Handy's own work away from the Raeburn band. Mostly these are impressionistic tone-poems, making use of classical influences (Stravinksy most obviously) and a high degree of harmonic and rhythmic complexity. To say that something like 'A Wooden Sail In A Wooden Wind' doesn't swing may be to miss the point. There are some fine soloists here: Schildkraut worked with Miles Davis and Ray Beckenstein was a deft, atmospheric flute-player. Handy's own piano embellishments are consistently effective.

John Handy (born 1933)

ALTO SAXOPHONE

Not to be confused with Captain John Handy, he was born in Dallas and moved to Oakland in his early teens. Recorded with Charles Mingus briefly, had a hit later with 'Hard Work' and keeps trying new crossovers.

 Recorded Live At The Monterey Jazz Festival Jazz Beat 502 Handy; Bobby Hutcherson (vib); Mike White (vn); Jerry Hahn, Pat Martino (g); Albert Stinson, Don Thompson (b); Terry Clarke, Doug Sides (d). 9/65, 6/67.

* New View! Koch CD 7811-2 Handy; Bobby Hutcherson (vib); Pat Martino (g); Albert Stinson (b); Doug Sides (d). 6/67.

(*) Live At Yoshi's Nightspot Boulevard 531 As for Monterey. 06.

 Musical Dreamland Boulevard 1515 Handy; David Friesen (b); Shivanath Mishra (sitar); Vikash Maharaj (sarod); Prakash Maharaj (tabla). 06.

Handy's career went through various incarnations, but his most celebrated group was the alto/violin/guitar/bass/drums that appeared at Monterey in 1965. Though the music is in some ways ahead of its time (Albert Ayler experimented with violin in a similar way) and has a folksy freshness about it, the disc, originally on Columbia and a Grammy winner, makes for slow listening now: long rubato intro, interminable bass solo from Thompson, not much motivic development. It's ironic that the most compelling performance on the record is the half-hour-long bonus track ('Tears Of Ole Miss (Anatomy of A Riot)') recorded at the Village Gate two years later, and probably redundant since the whole set is on New View!, which is Handy's masterpiece. The opening 'Naima', performed in the last month of composer John Coltrane's life, has a particular synchronicity, and a flavour that the unusual instrumentation hammers home. The real plus, though, is the restoration to full length of 'Tears Of Ole Miss (Anatomy Of A Riot)', which now comes in at an impressive half-hour. Also on the album, 'A Little Quiet', which shows John Hammond's gifts as a producer, the live mix balanced with genuine taste.

Handy's high, keening voice has rarely been heard to better advantage. Hutcherson's in good form and Martino is a more interesting guitarist at this stage than Hahn, who's much more prominent on the reunion date released on Boulevard. Here the cuts are shorter. 'The Night Has A Thousand Eyes' and 'Body And Soul' actually manage to yield up something new, and Handy's few originals, including 'Blues For A High Strung Guitar', have something to say. Only 'Spanish Lady' and 'If Only I Knew' outstay their welcome and the former gets by on energy alone.

The Indo-jazz formula works only occasionally. Friesen seems to know what it's about, and Handy's shawm-like sound is perfect for this, but the Indian players sound stiff and awkward, ironically.

David Haney (born 1955)

PIANO

A Canadian, born in Calgary, where he subsequently relocated after study in Portland and work elsewhere.

(*) Caramel Topped Terrier Cadence CJR 1136 Haney; Julian Priester (tb); Wilbert De Joode (b); Han Bennink (d). 6/00–4/01.

 For Sale: Five Million Cash Cadence CJR 1179 Haney; Julian Priester (tb). 1/04.

The first disc, a mixture of solos, duos and trios recorded at five different sessions, is annoyingly bitty. Some of the duet work between Haney and Priester has a melancholy appeal, but the solo and trio tracks sound curiously arbitrary, some of them seeming like edits from longer pieces. The duo disc is stronger, although they are an improbable match. Haney doesn't sound like a natural improviser, and while it might be unfair to dwell on his background in contemporary composition, a lot of his playing does sound like a composer doodling out possible ideas. Priester, as always, is his own man, playing with total sobriety, moulding a phrase until he thinks it's perfect, unshockable in his approach and rootling around the horn's lowest reaches to pluck out a bathyspheric note. Along the way, there's some memorable dialogue.

 The Music CIMP 338 As above, except add Adam Lane (b). 8/05.

 Blues Royale CIMP 345 As above, except omit Priester; add Michael Bisio (b). 05.

Cadence/CIMP are wonderfully loyal to their roster of artists. The first of these sets adds a convincing new voice to the now long-established duo. Lane has his own creative agenda, but he sounds in sympathy with Haney's concept of 'non-referential' music and the mix of sounds is deeply satisfying. The next set pretty much carries forward the same basic language – Bisio and Priester aren't as different in conception as might appear – and though the music sometimes goes on too long, it's convincing enough.

(*) Ota Benga Of The Batwa CIMP 357 Haney; Julian Priester (tb). 06.

Benga was a member of the Batwa tribe in Congo, a survivor of massacres by the Belgian colonizers. In the early years of the 20th century, he was displayed in the Bronx Zoo as proof that man had descended from the primates. However 'non-referential' Haney's music, it isn't unmixed with ideas or emotion and here it takes some additional force from the story behind the title. Priester's deep song is particularly impressive and Haney sounds more relaxed than usual. In 1916, having been sufficiently 'civilized' to work in a tobacco plant, Benga knocked the caps from his filed teeth – deemed too 'savage' for American society – and shot himself dead.

Jake Hanna (1932–2002)

DRUMS

The good-natured Bostonian worked with Woody Herman, Toshiko Akiyoshi, Maynard Ferguson and many others.

(*) The Joint Is Jumpin' Arbors ARCD 19148 Hanna; Jack Sheldon (t); John Allred (tb); Tommy Newsom (ts); Russ Tompkins (p); David Stone (b). 98.

Jake's Concord albums aren't on CD, so this is slim pickings for such a long and busy career. Unfortunately it lacks drama or any sense of surprise and danger and, while the playing by these veteran West Coasters is competent enough (Jack Sheldon is the surprise package, and Allred has a few good moments), there isn't much to entice anyone new to Hanna's work.

Roland Hanna (1932–2003)

PIANO

Bud Powell was the single most important influence, but the Detroit man also took careful note of Tommy Flanagan and Teddy Wilson. Sir Roland was knighted by the President of Liberia in 1970.

 Destry Rides Again Wounded Bird 108 Hanna; Kenny Burrell (g); George Duvivier (b); Roy Burness (d). 4/59.

 Easy To Love Koch 33121 Hanna; Ben Tucker (b); Roy Burness (d). 9/59.

Hanna's debut was a set of songs taken from Harold Rome's successful Broadway musical. Randy Weston also covered the material, which was presumably popular at the time. Burrell adds class to four tracks. Easy To Love finds the 27-year-old Hanna poised midway between bop orthodoxy ('A Night In Tunisia') and a Ducal vision. No Hanna originals, but the set does include three tracks by Tucker. The recording is nicely balanced and well remastered; the Porter title-track is the cut of choice.

 Impressions: The Definitive Black & Blue Sessions Black & Blue 880 Hanna; George Duvivier, Major Holley (b); Alan Dawson, Oliver Jackson (d). 7/78.

Apart from 'The Lonely Ones' and 'Drinkin' Wine Slowly', the tunes are all repertory pieces, but it's Hanna's flowing interpretation of Coltrane's blues 'Impressions' that grabs the attention here. Hard to gauge how important Trane's harmonics were to the pianist, but he shows an instinctive understanding here. Never an 'outside' player, Hanna tames the idiom somewhat, but it affects the other performances here, notably the bonus inclusion of Miles's 'All Blues'.

(*) Glove Storyville STCD 4148 Hanna; George Mraz (b); Motohiko Hino (d). 87.

(*) Round Midnight Town Crier 513 Hanna (p solo). 3/87.

(*) This Time It's Real Storyville STCD 4145 Hanna; Jesper Thilo (ts); Mads Vinding (b); Aage Tanggaard (d). 6/87.

 Persia My Dear DIW 8015 Hanna; Richard Davis (b); Freddie Waits (d). 8/87.

The solo album is the high-point of a vintage year. Mostly original material, and including 'Prelude' (originally for solo cello) and 'Century Rag', it's a sepia-hued session recorded in warm close-up.

Formerly on Black Hawk, Glove is a set of tunes with 'love' in the title. The sound is nothing like as exact as that on the DIW, also from Japan, and the drummer is all over the music, like a cheap suit. Surprisingly, perhaps, with Richard Davis, normally the most classically inclined of bassists, Hanna opts to groove. 'Persia My Dear' has a Monkish quality, but the standout tracks are 'Summer In Central Park' and 'Manhattan Safari', tributes to the city that has been Hanna's working home for many years.

Thilo gets equal billing on the Storyville and takes his full ration of solo space. It's a safe programme – 'Stella', 'Cherokee', 'Body And Soul', 'Star Eyes' – and the only really startling bit is Hanna's segue between the title-track and the last of these, a glimmer of pure invention on an overcast night.

 Everything I Love /  Tributaries: Reflections On Tommy Flanagan Ipo 1002 / 1004 Hanna (p solo). 02; 6/02.

 I've Got A Right To Sing The Blues Ipo 1005 Hanna; Carrie Smith (v). 02.

Though there are other late discs on Japanese imprints, these were among the last recordings of Hanna's life and they're very solid solo outings. Not for the first time, Miles's 'All Blues' is a signature cut on Everything I Love, with some clever modulation in the solo choruses. Hanna gives 'Send In The Clowns' almost operatic presence. The other delight is a tribute to the late Milt Jackson.

The Flanagan tribute opens with one of Tommy's own tunes, 'Sea Changes'; the mood of thoughtful intensity continues with 'A Child Is Born' and 'Body And Soul'. The pace slackens and the latter half of the album has an untypically formulaic cast.

The album with Carrie Smith is quite remarkable. Hanna's rich accompaniments are almost orchestral in places, setting off songs like 'It's Only A Paper Moon' and 'Let's Fall In Love' beautifully. A fine send-off.

Also, in brief:

 Swing Me No Waltzes Storyville 8309. 73, 5/79.

Reissued in 2000, this unaccompanied set has an almost folkish quality in places, typical of Hanna's ability to mix vernacular and abstract idiom without strain.

 Bird Tracks Progressive 7031. 2–3/78.

The Parker material fizzes and bounces in a convincing pianistic impersonation of the album's inspiration.

 Plays Gershwin Laserlight 17123. 93.

Budget price and very familiar material, but a good introduction to his work.

Finn Otto Hansen

TRUMPET

Best known for his work with Papa Bue's Viking band.

 Warm Breeze Storyville STCD 4231 Hansen; Niels Stuart (ts); Jacob Christoffersen (p); Jacob Fischer (g); Hugo Rasmussen (b); Bjørn Otto Hansen (d). 9/99.

Hansen's bright trumpet sound always conjures up good feelings and this rare appearance as leader is no exception. The group is slightly stodgy in places and we'd question whether Stuart's tenor is the right second horn for the style and repertoire.

Mads Hansen (born 1969)

TENOR SAXOPHONE, FLUTE

Studied in Aarhus and NY; lessons, too, with Garzone, Liebman and Lovano. 'New Name of the Year in Danish Jazz', 2000.

 My Standards Storyville STCD 4231 Hansen; Henrik Gunde Pedersen (p); Jesper Bodilsen (b); Morten Lund (d); Steen Råhauge (perc); string quartet. 99.
 Grooves Stunt STUCD 00222 As above, except omit Råhauge, strings; add Jesper Riis (t); Søren Lee (g); Gustav Ljunggren (pedal steel g). 00.
* Doorbell Cope CD 095 Hansen; Jeppe Kjellberg (g); Jeppe Skovbakke (b). 04.

What a fascinating career it's been so far. The debut album looks conventional enough, but listening to Hansen's attractively retro swing suggests he's interested in more than just another hard-bop date. There's a poppy feel to the record that is immediately appealing and refreshing. 'Blue In Green' is played the way a Miles group might have done it seven or eight years after Kind Of Blue. The second record moves sideways into an original style, drawing in a folksy simplicity of line, some groovy guitar-lines, and some unusual sonorities (pedal steel still a rarity in jazz). It all comes together beautifully on Doorbell. Kjellberg uses baritone guitar in addition to electric and gives the trio a rich sonority reminiscent of a Giuffre group, or Steve Swallow's.

Happy Apple

GROUP

Minneapolis trio, led by drummer David King from The Bad Plus.

(*) Youth Oriented Nato 066126-2 Michael Lewis (ss, as, ts, b); Erik Fratzke (b, g); David King (d, ky). 02.

A fiercely democratic trio. King's drums and particularly his booming floor tom are as hard and polyrhythmic as Shannon Jackson's but more pointed and delicate. Lewis is a multi-instrumentalist of some calibre, lucid and voluble on soprano, alto and tenor alike, and when he moves over to the double bass – when Fratzke plays guitar on 'The Landfall Planetarium' – that doesn't seem to give him any trouble either. Fratzke's bass guitar works in resonant waves, as if he were trying to be both Prime Time bassists at once, but he's melodious with it. The result is eight fertile compositions which nod knowledgeably at various fields of jazz, rock and funk endeavour but make their own space. Just occasionally, fusion threatens to take over. But what an electrifying sound!

Masashi Harada

PIANO, PERCUSSION, VOICE

... also a dancer, writer and painter, whose ideas on improvisation cross generic lines. Born in Hiroshima, studied Third Stream at the New England Conservatory, and now divides his teaching time between the US and his home city.

 Obliteration At The End Of Multiplication Leo CD LR 328 Harada; Mat Maneri (vn, vla); Philip Tomasic (g). 3/98.
 Voluminous Venture Cadence 1128 Harada; Barre Phillips (b). 5/99.
* Enter The Continent Emanem 4041 Harada; Greg Kelley (t); Tucker Dulin, Christian Pincock (tb); Earl Carlson (tba); Bhob Rainey (ss); Phil Tomasic (g); Aleta Cole (vn); Dan Levin (clo); Mike Bullock (b); percussion and vocals by the ensemble. 12/99.
(*) Seismic Plant CIMP 231 Harada; Bhob Rainey (ss); Mike Bullock (b). 8/00.
* Enterprising Mass Of Cilia Emanem 4108 Harada; Greg Kelley (t); Bhob Rainey (ss); Jonathan Vincent (acc); Aleta Cole (vn); Frederic Viger (vla); Glynis Lomon (clo); Vic Rawlings (clo, elec); James Coleman (theremin); Tatsuya Nakatani (perc). 3/01.
 The Soul With Longing For Dim Hills And Faint Horizons Leo CDLR 442 Harada; Mat Maneri (vn). 11/05.

Harada's interest in highly ephemeral processes – ice-painting and dance – have led him to an idea of 'generative improvisation' in which the artist creates a new context for his work with every new movement. This is reflected in Harada's signature device of 'condanction' where dance takes the place of a formal score or the more conventional gestures of 'conduction'.

Anyone who has seen Barre Phillips play will recognize his own dancer's grace, so the partnership seems logical. On Voluminous Venture, Harada sings, plays percussion, but mostly concentrates on piano, which he approaches not in the putative 'Cecil Taylor' style, but as if it really were a harp in a box. There's some lovely stuff, though the vocal tracks, 'Hanging Density' and the closing 'Return', are also very fine.

Emanem's Martin Davidson was quick to spot Harada's potential. Enter The Continent is a vivid sequence of condanctions featuring a brilliant young Boston ensemble. The highlights are 'Bells', a mournful chorale, and 'Kropotkin Vs Huxley', which seems to make play with ideas of utopics, or virtual space as a field of creative endeavour. The sounds are crisp, subtly microtonal ('Giacinto' presumably refers to the composer Scelsi) and unconventionally beautiful.

Seismic Plant is a deep disappointment, its sounds random rather than organic and often hard to hear, even if one does accept CIMP's injunction not to tinker with the volume. Bullock is lost and for once Rainey's bat-squeak is an irritant.

Harada's ensembles do seem to have the purpose-in-chaos of organic processes, though an adjective like 'enterprising' – the second Emanem – also hints at an inescapable human dimension. This is utterly humane music, healing and energizing. The later line-up of the Condanction Ensemble puts more emphasis on electronics, and with the wheezing accordion adding a contrast to the strings the feeling is of entering some primordial soup of sound that is quickened by electric sparks and beams. Very powerful indeed.

The Leo title sounds generically Japanese but comes from Yeats. The music's tougher than it sounds, as Maneri, who'd appeared on the fine 1998 session, always guarantees, but there isn't the same chemistry as with Phillips or the larger, string-heavy ensemble. Some lovely playing from both, but Harada's music doesn't entirely suit the conversational feel of duo improvisation.

John Hardee (1918–84)

TENOR SAXOPHONE

The album title Forgotten Texas Tenor says it all.

 John Hardee 1946–1948 Classics 1136 Hardee; Harold Baker (t); Trummy Young (tb); Russell Procope (as, cl); Ted Brannon, Billy Kyle, Billy Taylor (p); Tiny Grimes (g); Sid Catlett, Buddy Rich (d); and others. 46–48.
 Hardee's Partee: The Forgotten Texas Tenor Ocium 18 Similar to above. 2/46–10/49.

Influenced by Chu Berry and Coleman Hawkins, he had a big, heavy tone but a deft touch with a tune. Not the most exciting or barnstorming of the Texas tenors, he had a quality that is hard to forget and his Blue Note sides were once prized. His own material is pretty good, in a functional sort of way. 'Hardee's Partee' and 'Boppin' In B flat' are hardly classics (and certainly not the way they sound on Classics) but they have their place. The Ocium probably edges it for sound.

Alex Harding (born 1967)

BARITONE SAXOPHONE

A Detroit-born exponent of the big horn.

(*) Freeflow CIMP 246 Harding; Chris Dahlgren (b); Jimmy Weinstein (d). 5/01.

 Invocation For Pepper CIMP 270 Harding; Dominic Duval (b); Jay Rosen (d). 6/02.

Harding's boisterous post-bop baritone is a pleasure, but he doesn't stamp enough authority on things: the hands-off CIMP approach lets most tracks ramble, and the material doesn't focus the players. Nice to hear a strong baritone-led trio, but they need a firm hand on the tiller. The follow-up is rather better, especially when they get into the meat of Cedar Walton's 'Bolivia' and Jay Jay's 'Lament'. It's a pity that several of the pieces start out with 'avant-garde' rambling, since Harding sounds like a player who's best when he works to a structured vocabulary. He for sure gets a big sound here.

Also, in brief:

 The Calling Jazzaway 017. 2/06.

The Blutopia group; big sound but scarcely menacing.

Bill Hardman (1933–90)

TRUMPET

Born in Cleveland, he worked with both Charles Mingus and Art Blakey, and co-led small groups with Lou Donaldson and with Junior Cook.

 Jackie's Pal Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1714 Hardman; Jackie McLean (as); Mal Waldron (p); Paul Chambers (b); Philly Joe Jones (d). 8/56.

 What's Up Steeplechase SCCD 1254 Hardman; Robin Eubanks (tb); Junior Cook (ts); Mickey Tucker (p); Paul Brown (b); Leroy Williams (d). 7/89.

A tough, no-nonsense hard-bopper of the second division, Hardman usually raised the temperature. Jackie's Pal is often listed under McLean's name, but it was really Hardman's coming-out, and is something of a hard-bop collector's piece. Though he has a raw tone and a sometimes jittery delivery, he's moving away from bop cliché and into the more individual delivery that he later put to good use with Blakey and Mingus.

What's Up was made not long before his sudden death. It's a typically likeable statement, beautifully recorded. Eubanks fits in comfortably alongside Hardman's regular colleagues and, as well as the customary hard bop and blues there are a couple of sober ballads in 'I Should Care' and 'Like Someone In Love' which enact a poignant farewell.

Roy Hargrove (born 1970)

TRUMPET, FLUGELHORN

Raised in Dallas, he emerged as something of a Wunderkind at the end of the '80s, and has made an erratic way ever since.

(*) With The Tenors Of Our Time Verve 523019-2 Hargrove; Ron Blake (ss, ts); Johnny Griffin, Joe Henderson, Branford Marsalis, Joshua Redman, Stanley Turrentine (ts); Cyrus Chestnut (p); Rodney Whitaker (b); Gregory Hutchinson (d). 1/94.

After the sideways paths of fusion, so-called neo-classicism offered a dramatic refocusing, if not any particular radicalism. Hargrove is a highly gifted trumpeter whose facility and bright, sweet tone bring a sense of dancing fun to his music. But on his early records he was steadily working towards a gravitas that might place him in the trumpet lineage as surely as Marsalis or Faddis.

After five records for Novus – you might still find a copy of 1998's Collected – Hargrove departed for Verve. The debut was no masterwork, but the trumpeter rises to the challenge of having five grandmasters sit in – although Blake holds his own with real class on 'Once Forgotten' and with Redman on 'Mental Phrasing'. Branford gets off a good one on 'Valse Hot', and Hargrove and Turrentine enjoy themselves on 'Soppin' The Biscuit'. The trumpeter plays with fresh resolve throughout, and his flugelhorn solo on 'Never Let Me Go' is a quiet showstopper.

 Family Verve 527630-2 Hargrove; Wynton Marsalis (t); Jesse Davis (as); David 'Fathead' Newman (ts, f); Ron Blake (ts); Stephen Scott, John Hicks, Ronnie Mathews (p); Rodney Whitaker, Walter Booker, Christian McBride (b); Gregory Hutchinson, Lewis Nash, Karriem Riggins (d). 1/95.

(*) Parker's Mood Verve 527907-2 Hargrove; Stephen Scott (p); Christian McBride (b). 4/95.

Family is a sequence of dedications to personal and spiritual kin. Fats Navarro's 'Nostalgia' is delivered as a duet with Marsalis, parallel reflections on bebop tradition, and the ruminative pieces which open the disc include some of the trumpeter's most skilful and personalized playing. His regular band provides decisive support, but the line-up of guest stars rocks the record at some moments where it ought to be steady.

Recorded in Parker's 75th anniversary year, Parker's Mood is a delightful meeting of three young masters, improvising on 16 themes from Bird's repertoire. Hargrove's luminous treatment of 'Laura' again suggests he may be turning into one of the music's pre-eminent ballad players, but it's the inventive interplay between the three men that takes the session to its high level. Scott, sometimes burdened on his own records, plays as freely as he ever has, and McBride is simply terrific.

 Hard Groove Verve 065192-2 Hargrove; Steve Coleman (as); Keith Anderson, Jacques Schwarz-Bart (ts); Karl Denson (f); Marc Cary, James Poyser, Bobby Sparks, Bernard Palladino (ky); Chalmers Alford, Cornell Dupree (g); Pino Palladino, Reggie Washington, Meshell Ndegeocello (b); Willie Jones III, Jason Thomas, Gene Lake (d); Erykah Badu, Common, Q Tip, D'Angelo, Anthony Hamilton, Renee Neufville, Stephanie McKay, Shelby Johnson (v). 1–2/02.

 Strength Verve 986334-8 As above; omit Denson, Cary, Dupree, Ndegeocello, Lake and all vocalists. 04.

Roy's always playing catch-up. If he'd made this move five years earlier, it might have seemed a lot sharper, but it looks as if he's just searching for an elusive hit. In fact, the record's not bad at all. Funk and hip-hop rub up against Hargrove's tougher inclinations: he's still a trumpeter, not a soul singer, and of course he's going to make sure he gets good space and delivers on it. The record shifts back and forth between various popular bases and nothing on it sounds like either plastic soul or artificial fusion. 'Pastor T' might be one of Hargrove's best performances on record. In the end, though, this offering is like almost everything else of its type: not wholly committed to any one position, and at the mercy of its own eclecticism. Strength is a similar though more stripped-down continuation, minus the singing, and it again works well, though this time Hargrove could only manage a miserly five tracks and the record was issued as an EP!

(*) Distractions Verve 59870 Largely as for Hard Groove. 5/06.
(*) Nothing Serious Verve 621102 Hargrove; Slide Hampton (tb); Justin Robinson (as, f); Ronnie Mathews (p); Dwayne Burno (b); Willie Jones III (d). 5/06.

These are again reminiscent of one of those 'the two sides of ...' releases in the '60s when jazz artists paid their R&B or soul-jazz dues on one disc in order to record the jazz stuff on another. One wonders if the same principles still apply, and where these two albums, one by The RH Factor, the other by Hargrove's acoustic quintet, stand in his own thinking. Like Hard Groove, the first seems clotted with guest spots and vocals, but it's generally good and certainly still the work of a jazz musician rather than a soul star. Hampton's the only walk-up on Nothing Serious (the title comes from the opening Quintero salsa) and he's in good shape on all three of his tracks. So's Hargrove himself, though the killer moment is right at the top of the title-track, which kicks off the record, where Hargrove double-tracks himself on trumpet and flugelhorn and launches the theme in unison with Robinson. Nothing else quite matches that. Hampton's 'A Day In Vienna' is terrific, as are Burno's 'Devil Eyes' and Mathews's 'Salima's Dance'. Hargrove's themes are workmanlike rather than exciting and he certainly plays better on others' charts, saving one of his best statements for the closing 'Invitation', an afterthought, maybe, but well worth it.

Also, in brief:

 Habana Verve 537563-2. 1/97.

Although the packaging seems to suggest that this was cut on a long weekend in Cuba, Hargrove's Latin project emanates from an Italian concert, even if the idea was conceived by his visiting and playing with Cuban musicians. It's sketchy, uncommitted fare.

(*) Moment To Moment Verve 543540-2. 99.

Nothing doing here. A strings album is always appealing but at this point it simply suggests lack of purpose or direction.

Harlem Art Ensemble

GROUP

More mainstream than the Chicago one.

 Live In New York Explore 0027 Harold Ousley (sax); Lonnie Liston Smith (org); Jimmy Ponder (g); Bruno Carr (d). 8/90.

It's not clear why this music lay unreleased for 17 years, or indeed why it was deemed worth putting out when it was, other than as a contribution to current acid-jazz and soul-jazz revivalism. It's a perfectly entertaining set, mostly drawn from hard-bop material, but the obvious echo of the AEOC in the group name is misleading. The line-up is orthodox sax/organ/guitar/drums and but for Smith's outsize personality and Ponder's underrated gifts nothing out of the ordinary; top cuts are 'Strollin'', the guitarist's 'Blues For Beth' and 'Bumpin' On Sunset'.

Billy Harper (born 1943)

TENOR AND ALTO SAXOPHONES

Born in Houston, he moved to NY in 1965, working widely as a sideman and sometimes as a leader; a bold stylist, he's in command of most aspects of post-bop.

(*) Black Saint Black Saint 120001 Harper; Virgil Jones (t); Joe Bonner (p); David Friesen (b); Malcolm Pinson (d). 7/75.
 In Europe / (*) The Awakening Soul Note 121001 / Marge 15227 Harper; Everett Hollins (t); Fred Hersch (p); Louis Spears (b); Horace Arnold (d). 1/79.

Initially influenced by Sonny Rollins, but increasingly by Coltrane, Harper got his chops playing in church before going on to work with Art Blakey, Max Roach and Gil Evans, for whom he wrote 'Priestess' and 'Thoroughbred', two of the best modern-jazz compositions in the book. His gifts as a writer and his big saxophone sound should have made him a star, but the breakthrough never quite came and the majors stayed away, even when many of Harper's contemporaries were being rediscovered. Like many of his countrymen, Harper had to look to Europe for recognition, and to the Black Saint/Soul Note stable (he inaugurated both imprints) for recording opportunities. Black Saint is still the album people associate with Harper, a strong, eclectic blend of blues, hard-edged rock patterns and the by now familiar preaching style. Jones and Bonner are greatly admired in Europe, too, and the pianist makes his mark on the record from the very start with his tersely romantic approach and elastic chord-patterns.

The Soul Note is faintly disappointing, albeit full of potential and marked by pretty much the same strengths as Harper's other work. Hersch still hadn't quite come into his own at this point and he sounds a little acid here and there, but it's a good night's work for Hollins. 'Calvary' is superb.

The Awakening is a more interesting record, tinged with African harmonies and rhythms and featuring powerful solos from the leader, demonstrating he wasn't just a Coltrane copyist.

 Destiny Is Yours Steeplechase SCCD 31260 Harper; Eddie Henderson (t); Francesca Tanksley (p); Clarence Seay (b); Newman Baker (d). 12/89.

There is a gap in the discography at this point, a decade in which Harper was mainly involved in other projects, and other people's projects. This, though, unveils what was to be a working band. Henderson very nearly steals it, but it is the solid, melodic playing of Chessie Tanksley that holds the date together.

(*) Live On Tour In The Far East / * ... Volume 2 /  ... Volume 3 /  Somalia Steeplechase SCCD 31311 / 31321 / 31331 / Evidence ECD 22133 Harper; Eddie Henderson (t); Francesca Tanksley (p); Louis Spears (b); Newman Baker (d). 4/91; 10/93.

This documents a poised and confident band. Having Henderson and Tanksley on the strength must have made an enormous difference, and both horns and piano are playing at full stretch most of the way. The version of 'Priestess' on Volume 2 is definitive, and there is a wonderful cover of 'My Funny Valentine'. Somalia is consistently intense and beautifully recorded.

* Soul Of An Angel Metropolitan 1120 Harper; Eddie Henderson (t); Francesca Tanksley (p); Clarence Seay (b); Newman Baker (d). 01.

Henderson's mournful intro to 'Thine Is The Glory' is breathtakingly powerful and tees up one of Harper's best solos for years, thoughtful, well-structured and not a note too long. Tanksley has grown steadily in stature. 'Was It Here ... Is It There?' is relatively orthodox hard bop, but the title-track, with John Clark drafted in on french horn, is much more ambitious. Reminiscent of the classic 'Priestess', it weaves a waltz feel into something more complex, with each of the players hinting at a different time-frame.

Winard Harper (born 1962)

DRUMS

Born in Baltimore. He joined Dexter Gordon when only just out of his teens, spent four years with Betty Carter, then worked with his brother Philip in the Harper Brothers Band.

 Faith Savant SCD 2030 Harper; Patrick Rickman (t); Wycliffe Gordon (tb); Brian Horton (ts); George Cables (p); Brandon Owens (b); Alioune Faye (djembe); Abdou Mboup (perc); Carrie Smith (v). 99.

 A Time For The Soul Savant SCD 2048 Harper; Patrick Rickman (t); Brian Horton (ss, ts); Jeb Patton (p); Ameen Saleem (b); Kevin Jones, Scott Harper (perc). 1/03.

(*) Come Into The Light Savant SCD 2058 As above, except omit Jones, S. Harper; add Kevin Sholar (p). 12/03.

 Make It Happen Piadrum 602 Harper; Wycliffe Gordon (tb, didjeridu); Antonio Hart (as); Lawrence J. Clark (ts); Sean Higgins (p); Alioune Faye (djembe, sadar); Jeremy Jones, Kevin Jones (perc); Abdou M'Boup (v, perc). 1 & 4/06.

Harper is a strong and capable drummer, and the early records at least established a recognizable percussion style, not least a gift for bright, talkative work on cymbals. Faith is already much more promising than the debut discs (see below, 'in brief') and this time the inclusion of George Cables makes better sense. A collaboration with Carrie Smith, the record looks at faith in all its many dimensions, and there is a real sense of uplift on tracks like 'Lift Every Voice And Sing'. Smith delivers the line with conviction but without mawkishness and fellow guest Gordon confirms the trombone's standing as God's own instrument.

Big George is also effective on 'The Things We Did Last Summer' and Rickman is given plenty of room to manoeuvre on his own feature, 'Face Man'. Patrick also has a starring role on the later A Time For The Soul, on which the inspirational element is more in the intensity of the playing than in any lyrical content; 'All Praise To G-d' keeps it open-ended. 'About Face' is Rickman's spot and he tackles it with gusto. 'Dat Dere' is perfectly pitched and a nice vehicle for the ever-developing Horton. There are fewer 'ethnic' touches this time round, though there are important percussion parts for Jones and brother Scott.

They still aren't the Messengers, but the group on Come Into The Light has acquired a new authority, clinched on a sparkling version of Freddie Hubbard's 'Little Sunflower'. Much of the rest is written by group members, and they're well up to snuff. Harper's intro to the title-track is full of interest and the set as a whole has a satisfying coherence.

A new group on the latest disc, which in a way is a disappointment, but the playing is superb, if cluttered with percussion here and there, and the set-list is absolutely fascinating, kicking off with Parker's 'Segment' and mixing originals and repertory hard bop with deftness and energy.

Also, in brief:

(*) Trap Dancer /  Winard Savant SCD 2013 / 2021. 12/97; 12/98.

Harper's emergence as a leader might have been premature. These are full of short, taster pieces which never quite go anywhere.

Tom Harrell (born 1946)

TRUMPET, FLUGELHORN, PIANO

Born in Urbana, Illinois. He was influenced by Clifford Brown and, later, John Coltrane. After service with Woody Herman and Stan Kenton, he started playing bop with Horace Silver and Blue Mitchell. Despite often disabling illness, he has had a full career as sideman and leader.

 Moon Alley Criss Cross 1018 Harrell; Kenny Garrett (as, f); Kenny Barron (p); Ray Drummond (b); Ralph Peterson (d). 12/85.

(*) Open Air Steeplechase SCCD 31220 Harrell; Bob Rockwell (ts); Hal Galper (p); Steve Gilmore (b); Bill Goodwin (d). 5/86.

Harrell is one of the finest harmonic improvisers in jazz today, a player with a fierce tone who is also capable of playing the most delicate ballad with almost unbearable feeling.

There are two playing personalities. They are not yet dramatically separated on the two early records as leader. Moon Alley has its slightly morose side, but this has as much to do with the recording as with Harrell's temperament. He is hugely secure in technique, already a veteran, evoking everyone from Kenny Dorham when at full tilt, to Freddie Hubbard when doubling on flugelhorn, to Miles inevitably. Teamed with Kenny Garrett, one of Miles's last saxophone players, he sounds bred in the bone, slightly out of synch with the rapid progressions of 'Scrapple From The Apple'. Open Air is a little flat. Galper is too lush and fulsome, and the rest of the rhythm section hangs back. Rockwell is a liability in the ensembles, though a fresh and often provocative soloist.

(*) Stories Contemporary C 14043 Harrell; Bob Berg (ts); Niels Lan Doky (p); John Scofield (g); Ray Drummond (b); Billy Hart (d). 1/88.

(*) Sail Away Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1095 Harrell; Joe Lovano (ss, ts); David Liebman (ss); Cheryl Pyle (f); James Williams (p); John Abercrombie (g, g syn); Ray Drummond (b); Adam Nussbaum (d). 89.

(*) Form Contemporary C 14059 Harrell; Joe Lovano (ts); Danilo Perez (p); Charlie Haden (b); Paul Motian (d). 4/90.

* Visions Contemporary C 14063 Harrell; George Robert (as); Joe Lovano (ts, ss); Bob Berg, David Liebman (ss); Cheryl Pyle (f); Niels Lan Doky (p); John Abercrombie (g, g syn); Ray Drummond, Charlie Haden, Reggie Johnson (b); Bill Goodwin, Billy Hart, Paul Motian, Adam Nussbaum (d). 4/87–4/90.

A purple patch. Visions is a compilation of material recorded over a span of time during which Harrell recovered some of the snap and pointed delivery people noted during his sojourn with Horace Silver. Every now and then, as on 'Visions Of Gaudi' with Liebman and Abercrombie, he delivers something that is as hard-edged and as finely detailed as mosaic. He spends most of the album on flugelhorn, but 'Suspended View', with Berg on soprano, is a trumpet performance of magical skill, fleeting, ambiguous and endlessly replayable. Only 'April Mist' seems conventional.

Sail Away contains some of Harrell's sharpest writing – 'Eons', 'Dream In June', 'Visions Of Gaudi' – and a thoroughly sympathetic band help deliver a pointedly challenging statement that still sounds fresh and engaging.

* Passages Chesky JD 64 Harrell; Joe Lovano (as, ts, ss); Danilo Perez (p); Peter Washington (b); Paul Motian (d); Café (perc). 10/91.
(*) Upswing Chesky JD 103 As above, except omit Café, Motian; add Phil Woods (as); Bill Goodwin (d). 6/93.
These are marvellous records, polished, forceful, beautifully recorded and absolutely fresh. Harrell's ability to shift up through the changes without losing the momentum of a song borders on the uncanny and he always seems to have ideas to spare. On the second outing Motian is missed for the sheer subtlety with which he colours a phrase and for the ability to play free while sustaining a metronomic line underneath the horns. Harrell and Lovano enjoy teasing out each other's idiosyncrasies. Perez might quibble about the sound (and possibly the piano) he has been given, but he too is an integral part of the trumpeter's concept. Woods is there to return a compliment, another former employer who has publicly acknowledged Harrell's gifts, which are manifest here.

(*) Live At The Village Vanguard Bluebird 63910 Harrell; Jimmy Greene (ts); Xavier Davis (p); Ugonna Okegwo (b); Quincy Davis (d). 11/01.
This is Harrell's first official live record and it was worth the wait. He kicks off the set with the tough 'Asia Minor', which gets the band working up a sweat. What follows is more unorthodox. 'Manhattan 3 A.M.' has a misterioso feel that dramatically changes the temperature of the set. 'Blues In Una Sea' is one of his most original conceptions and a curiously estranging experience played at this length. 'A Child's Dream' and the closing 'Party Song' are lighter and more joyous. 'Where The Rain Begins', co-written with Angela Harrell, has an off-kilter bounce to the main section and a softly mournful quality to the quieter intermezzo.

Okegwo's solo on 'Manhattan 3 A.M.' is a highlight, but the remainder is dominated by Harrell himself, punching out notes or slurring together long patterns of tones in a way that is unique in modern jazz but rooted in the masters.

* Light On High Note HNCD 7171 Harrell; Wayne Escoffery (ts); Danny Grissett (p); Ugonna Okegwo (b); Johnathan Blake (d). 12/06.
Four years since the last, and worth the wait. Illumination may come rather slowly, because these are tough original compositions, with only 'The Gronk' (oblique though it is) and 'Bleu Caribe' sounding anything at all like blowing themes. Harrell works the band hard, particularly the piano-player, who has to negotiate some unexpected chord progressions. 'Va' bookends the set and is one of the trumpeter's most intriguing recorded pieces, a shifting, ambiguous idea that ends the record on a pleasingly mysterious note.

Also, in brief:

 Moon and Sand Jazz Aux Remparts 64007. 12/91.
A nice pairing with Jacky Terrasson (p) and some unashamedly romantic flugelhorn-playing.

* Labyrinth RCA Victor 09026 68512. 95.
We'd give this core collection status if it were still securely available, but we fear that the RCA catalogue is in disrepair. A masterpiece, none the less, and worth the hunt.

(*) The Art Of Rhythm RCA Victor 09026 68924. 5–7/97.
This isn't a soaraway south-of-the-border set. It might equally be subtitled The Art Of Colour or The Art Of Arrangement, a vivid orchestral essay that stands up with some, though certainly not the greatest, of Miles's records with Gil Evans.

 Time's Mirror RCA Victor 09026 63524-2. 3/99.
Slightly antiseptic big-band set, with charts that go back a ways. The title-track has a knockout flugelhorn solo, but not much of the rest catches fire.

 Paradise RCA 63738. 01.
Not your average with-strings format that attempts to incorporate classical practice into post-Coltrane jazz.

 Wise Children RCA 53016. 02.
The spirit of Gil Evans hangs over this lovely disc. The leader's horn never has any trouble breaking through dense textures, but a subtle mix gives the arrangements the fluidity and speed of a smaller group.

Joe Harriott (1928–73)

ALTO SAXOPHONE

A Jamaican who came to London in 1951, he played bop but formulated his own method of free jazz.

(*) Killer Joe Giant Steps GSCR 020 2CD Harriott; Kenny Baker, Stan Palmer, Pete Pitterson, Hank Shaw, Dave Usden, Jimmy Watson (t); Jack Botterill, Keith Christie, Robin Kaye, Bertie King, Mac Minshull, Ken Wray (tb); Bertie King, Dougie Robinson, Bruce Turner (as); Pete King, Ronnie Scott, Jimmy Skidmore (ts); Benny Green, Harry Klein (bs); Max Harris, Dill Jones, Oscar McKay, Norman Stenfalt, Johnny Weed (p); Cedric West, Denny Wright (g); Bill LeSage (vib, p); Maria Korchinska (hp); Frank Clarke, Eric Dawson, Jack Fallon, Major Holley, Eric Peter, Joe Sampson, Sammy Stokes (b); Eric Delaney, Tony Kinsey, Phil Seamen (d); Alf Hayward, Buddy Pipps (perc); strings. 2/54–7/56.
Anyone who's only heard of Harriott as one of the mythical leaders of free jazz in Britain will be surprised by much of this, though the dates tell their own story. A valuable enough set, this takes in material with the Ronnie Scott big band, a middling size group fronted by Kenny Baker (Turner and King the other featured altos) and, on 'Akee Blues', the Buddy Pipps Highlifers; the remainder is small groups, mainly led by Kinsey.

The initial impression is of a saxophonist in thrall to Charlie Parker, but Harriott doesn't do bop from the inside, but rather dresses up his own individual conception with a boppish costume and a few Bird feathers, ironically most noticeable on the with-strings tracks. His harmonic grasp isn't always rock-solid either, and it wouldn't take much cynicism to suggest that one of the forces that drove Joe towards abstraction was a less than confident grounding in the changes.

* Abstract Redial 538 183 2 Harriott; Shake Keane (t); Pat Smythe (p); Bobby Orr, Phil Seamen (d); Frank Holder (perc). 61.
 Live At Harry's 1963 Rare Music RM 029 Harriott; John Collins (as, bs); Colin White (p); Fred Barnsley (b); Tony Levin (d). 63.
 Swings High Cadillac SGC 1014 Harriott; Stu Hamer (t); Pat Smythe (p); Coleridge Goode (b); Phil Seamen (d). 67.
 Indo Jazz-Fusions I & II /  Indo-Jazz Suite Redial 538 048-2 / Koch KOC CD 8512 Harriott; Shake Keane, Kenny Wheeler (t, flhn); Chris Taylor (f); Pat Smythe (p); John Mayer (vn, hpd); Diwan Motihar (sitar); Coleridge Goode (b); Bobby Orr, Jackie Dougan, Allan Ganley (d); Chandrahas Paigankar (tambura); Keshav Sathe (tabla). 67, 68; 10/66.

(*) Joe Harriott Genius Jazz Academy JAZA 6 Harriott; Ian Carr, Les Condon, Shake Keane (t); Tony Coe, Don Rendell (ts); Michael Garrick, William Haig-Joyce, Pat Smythe (p); Coleridge Goode, Dave Green, Johnny Taylor (b); Alan Green, Phil Seamen, Trevor Tomkins (d). 60–63.

Harriott at his most typical is an effortless melodist. Swings High is a curiously conventional set, relative to what else he was doing at the time. 'Blues In C' is in the Parker mode, torrential, fiery, harmonic tightrope-walking. 'A Time For Love' is more delicate, but with a formidable line. As ever, the band is superb and responsive, with Seamen in ferociously good form.

The reissue of Abstract allowed many who had only heard Harriott's name and legend to experience the music for the first time. The obvious impression is that Joe's brand of abstraction is still deeply grounded in blues, calypso and bop. 'Shadows' might almost be a Parker line turned on its head and as with classic bebop it's the interplay of saxophone and trumpet that counts. Originals like 'Modal' are more schematic but it's Joe's revision of 'Oleo' that reveals his method most clearly.

As Michael Garrick suggests in his introduction to Genius, Keane is arguably even more talented than Joe. He unfortunately features only briefly on the Jazz Academy compilation, but the set covers some of Harriott's other important associations. On the opening cuts, the quintet, with Condon on trumpet, play relatively familiar bop material but with a break while Joe offers his take on freeform, a revealing nugget. Then there are some tracks recorded at home in duo with pianist William Haig-Joyce, to which the 84-year-old Coleridge Goode has added some overdubbed bass. 'Shiva' and 'Calypso Sketches' find Joe as featured soloist with the Garrick group on two different occasions, the latter as part of a jazz and poetry project.

For many years Indo-Jazz Fusions was a project more often cited than actually heard. It is more properly a John Mayer record, but Harriott is its defining presence. Performed by a double quintet of jazz and subcontinental players, somewhat on the model of Ornette's Free Jazz group, it's not so much a synthesis as an awkward juxtaposition. To be fair, the music sounds less exciting 40 years on largely because the scalar experiments Mayer was making, building jazz improvisations on raga forms and on unfamiliar nine- and ten-beat patterns, have since become part of an extended jazz syntax. Original liner-notes by Max Harrison and Ian Carr and a retrospective essay by Professor John Mayer establish a context for a historically significant record.

As Joe's 80th birthday neared, old associates went in search of old performance tapes. The Harry's date, recorded in Leicester under the auspices of Harry Flick's peripatetic club, has been issued under the drummer's Rare Music imprint and derives from his own tapes, which are of more than reasonable quality for the period. Harriott is playing pretty much straight bop – 'Sandu', 'Cherokee', 'I'll Remember April', 'Just Friends' – but with typical energy and verve and with a harmonic understanding that makes it easier to see the link between this and his more abstract work. Collins is a revelation, another British player of real quality, and Levin's drum work is exemplary as always. A nice addition to the picture.

Barry Harris (born 1929)

PIANO

One of the leading Detroit pianists, he arrived in NY in the late '50s. The preferred accompanist of both Coleman Hawkins and Sonny Stitt. His bebop methodology owes much to both Powell and Monk, while mining his own gentler persuasions. In the '80s and '90s he became revered as one of the great jazz teachers.

 Breakin' It Up Jazz Beat 507 Harris; Sonny Stitt (as, ts); William Austin (b); Frank Gant (d). 9/58.

 At The Jazz Workshop Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 208 Harris; Sam Jones (b); Louis Hayes (d). 5/60.

 Preminado Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 486 Harris; Joe Benjamin (b); Elvin Jones (d). 12/60–1/61.

(*) Listen To Barry Harris Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 999 Harris (p solo). 7/61.

(*) Chasin' The Bird Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 872 Harris; Bob Cranshaw (b); Clifford Jarvis (d). 5/62.

(*) Luminescence! Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 924 Harris; Slide Hampton (tb); Junior Cook (ts); Pepper Adams (bs); Bob Cranshaw (b); Lennie McBrowne (d). 4/67.

The career of Barry Harris suggests a self-effacing man for, although he is among the most accomplished and authentic of second-generation bebop pianists and an admired teacher, his name has rarely excited more than quiet respect. One of the Detroit school of pianists which includes Tommy Flanagan and Hank Jones, Harris's style suggests Bud Powell as an original mentor, yet a slowed-down, considered version of Powell's tumultuous manner. Despite the tempos, Harris gets the same dark timbres from the keyboard.

His records are unjustly little-known. There is no singleton masterpiece, just a sequence of graceful, satisfying sessions which suggest that Harris has been less interested in posterity via recordings and more in what he can give to jazz by example and study. Nevertheless, he cut several records for Prestige and Riverside in the '60s, and most are now back in the catalogue. The Jazz Beat issue is a valuable early find, two dates on consecutive days, with the trio joined by Stitt for a lively bop date originally issued under the saxophonist's name as Burnin'. The live date from 1960 finds him with the ebullient rhythm section of Cannonball Adderley, and the music is swinging if not especially absorbing. Rather better is the date with Elvin Jones, which features some fiery interplay between piano and drums, although the highlight is probably an uncommonly thoughtful solo reading of 'I Should Care'. Listen To Barry Harris is that rarity, a bebop pianist by himself, and while one sometimes misses the buzz of the rhythm section this is a thoughtful and focused example of Harris's music, from standards such as 'I Didn't Know What Time It Was' to characteristic excursions like 'Teenie'. Chasin' The Bird is a smart exercise in bebop piano: unfussy, unpretentious, but carried off with a distilled intensity that keeps the attention. Luminescence! brings together a fine group and reveals a thoroughgoing commitment which transcends the regulation professionalism of these players. Adams, Cook and Hampton solo with a taut assertiveness that makes a 1967 bebop date seem entirely relevant, despite its time and place.

[illegible]

* Magnificent!

Original Jazz Classics OJC 1026 Harris; Ron Carter (b); Leroy Williams (d). 11/69.

Hard to argue with the title on this immaculate recital. Turning 40, Harris is musing on his uncluttered bebop roots in 'Bean And The Boys' and seeing how far he can push the envelope in the ingenious fresh voicings of 'Ah-Leu-Cha', in which Carter is a willing partner. 'Just Open Your Heart' is a Monkian original that Harris subjects to a playful twist. 'Dexterity' takes us back to first-generation bebop, but again Harris casts it in a darker, more evasive setting. A neglected classic of its day.

 For The Moment Uptown UPCD 2747 Harris; Rufus Reid (b); Leroy Williams (d). 3/84.
An enjoyable souvenir of one of Harris's '80s gigs, at the Jazz Cultural Theater in New York. The JCT was organized by the pianist around his educational activities (it has since, alas, closed) and as a listening room it specialized in this kind of informal gig. As ever, the set's full of Monk, bebop and Harris originals in the classic manner, and while the date has its sloppy side – sound is only functional, and the music's ragged sometimes – it's in the spirit.

 Live From New York: Volume 1 Lineage 102 Harris; John Webber (b); Leroy Williams (d); unidentified (g). 5/04.
This is more like the thing: a (mostly) well-recorded and inventive bop-centred set. Harris's 'Nascimento' is always worth an outing, though there's obviously a tape problem at this point, since it's faded out briskly; somebody sits in on guitar unannounced – suggestions welcome. The piano sounds as if it needs a bit of work as well, but this is a night in a club and one doesn't expect studio quality sound. 'Star Eyes', 'It Could Happen To You' and 'A Night In Tunisia' stand out; hardly radical fare, but vigorously played.

Also, in brief:

(*) Newer Than New Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1062. 9/61.
A rare duffer; just one of those days when no one felt like saying much.

 Live In New York Reservoir RSR CD 173. 8/02.
Disappointing; Harris sounds fallible, with yet another 'Round Midnight' falling uneasily under the fingers.

Bill Harris (1916–73)

TROMBONE, VOICE

Born in Philadelphia. He had an anonymous time of it until 1944, when he joined Woody Herman, with whom he stayed on and off until 1959. He disappeared into Las Vegas bands in the '60s.

 Live At Birdland 1952 Baldwin Street Music BJG-501 Harris; Pete Candoli (t); John LaPorta, Salvatore Delegge (cl); Ted Wheeler (f); Mickey Folus (bcl); Eddie 'Lockjaw' Davis , Ray Abrams, Flip Phillips (ts); Don Abney, Horace Silver, Ralph Burns (p); Billy Bauer, George Burnes (g); Gene Ramey, Connie Henry, Chubby Jackson (b); Ed Shaughnessy, Alvin Burroughs, Barrett Deems (d). 4/45–5/52.
* Bill Harris And Friends Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 083 Harris; Ben Webster (ts); Jimmy Rowles (p); Red Mitchell (b); Stan Levey (d). 9/57.
 Complete Fifties Sessions Lone Hill LHJ 10252 As above, except add Eddie Bert, Ollie Wilson, Bart Varsolana (tb); Jack Greenberg, Sam Marowitz, Pete Mondello, Murray Williams (sax); Ralph Burns (p); Terry Gibbs (vib, v); Chubby Jackson (b); Bob Dorough (v); Ralph Burns Orchestra. 1/52, 9/57, 10/46.
Harris was always among the most distinctive and sometimes among the greatest of jazz trombonists. His style was based firmly on swing-era principles, yet he seemed to look both forward and back. His slurred notes and shouting phrases recalled a primitive jazz period, yet his knowing juxtapositions and almost macabre sense of humour were entirely modern. But he made few appearances on record away from Woody Herman's orchestra and is now a largely forgotten figure. Bill Harris And Friends should be known far more widely. Both Harris and Webster are in admirable form and make a surprisingly effective partnership, even kvelling good-naturedly at one point. Ben is at his ripest on 'I Surrender, Dear' and 'Where Are You', and Harris stops the show in solo after solo, whether playing short, bemused phrases or barking out high notes. An amusing reading of 'Just One More Chance' caps everything. The remastering favours the horns, but the sound is warmly effective.

It's included on the Lone Hill, which also has material from the Ex-Hermanites, with Gibbs to the fore on the long bizarre march of 'Blue Flame' and some eleven tracks by Harris's trombone-heavy (no trumpets) Herd. Fascinating stuff and in decent sound. A bonus version of 'Introspection' from 1946 with the Burns band is a welcome but unnecessary add-on.

Craig Harris (born 1954)

TROMBONE

Credits with Sun Ra, Abdullah Ibrahim, Henry Threadgill and David Murray, but his own work, bridging post-bop and funk, hasn't ever broken through.

(*) Black Bone Soul Note 121055 Harris; George Adams (ts); Donald Smith (p); Fred Hopkins (b); Charli Persip (d). 1/83.
Harris plays in a strong, highly vocalized style which draws directly on the innovations of former Mingus sideman Jimmy Knepper, and on players like Grachan Moncur III and Roswell Rudd, who, in reaction to the trombone's recent desuetude, have gone back to the New Orleans and Dixieland traditions in an attempt to restore and revise the instrument's 'natural' idiom. This early set finds him in genial post-bop company. Adams was the perfect partner in any modern/traditional synthesis, and the rhythm section is rock-solid on such pieces as 'Conjure Man' and 'Song For Psychedelic Souls', which could almost have been by Roland Kirk. Excellent.

(*) F-Stops Soul Note 121255 Harris; John Stubblefield (ts); Hamiet Bluiett (bs); Bill White (g); Darrell Grant (p, ky); Calvin Jones (b); Tony Lewis (d). 6/93.
A fascinating interconnected suite of themes and observations, realized by the best band Harris has had in a decade, if one leaves aside the more mainstream/crossover Tailgaters Tales. Using trombone and didjeridu, he conjures up dark, roiling shapes that confirm his growing interest in John Coltrane's music. Bluiett is the ideal partner in this enterprise and Stubblefield, having done some similar things as a dep with the World Saxophone Quartet and on his own account, seems absolutely across the music.

(*) Souls Within The Veil Aquastra 001 2CD Harris; Graham Haynes, Hugh Ragin (t); Don Byron (cl, bcl); Oliver Lake (as); Steve Coleman (ts); Hamiet Bluiett (bs); Cecil McBee (b); Billy Hart (d); Kahil el'Zahar (perc). 05.
Written to commemorate the centenary of W. E. B. DuBois's epochal Souls of Black Folk, this is a strong return for Harris, who hasn't made a commercial record under his own name for more than a decade. It's a fiery, testifyin' band and Harris's writing cleaves close to what DuBois called the 'sorrow songs'. There are strong elements of blues, gospel and spirituals woven into the ten 'veils' for ten strong players. The kind of 'double consciousness'

DuBois spoke of, a virtual genetic inheritance for the African-American, is also in the substance here – a simultaneous looking back and forward. a particularity that reaches out towards the universal, a profound individuality that strives to be part of the ensemble. Fierce solos from Coleman and Bluiett especially, but some great playing from the leader as well, who more than ever sounds like he has imbibed the trombone greats with his mother's milk.

Also, in brief:

 Shelter / (*) Blackout In The Square Root Of Soul Winter & Winter 834408 / 919015. 11–12/86; 87.
Originally on JMT, these Tailgaters Tales albums strive for a certain coherence of sound and theme but only succeed in parts.

Eddie Harris (1934–96)

TENOR SAXOPHONE, KEYBOARDS, TRUMPET, VOICE

A Chicagoan. He learned several instruments in his youth and finally settled on sax as the main one; he experimented with electronic sax, a reed trumpet and other quirks. A great crowd-pleaser who didn't please the critics, he remained a master technician, and in his final years proved his enduring toughness as an improviser.

 Exodus To Jazz / Mighty Like A Rose Vee Jay VJ-019 Harris; Willie Pickens (p); Joe Diorio (g); William Yancey (b); Harold Jones (d). 1–4/61.
 A Study In Jazz / Breakfast At Tiffany's Vee Jay VJ-020 As above, except add John Avant (tb); Charles Stepney (vib); Roland Faulkner (g); Donald Garrett, Richard Evans (b); Marshall Thompson, Earl Thomas (d). 61–62.
Harris got off to a tremendous start with his first album, Exodus To Jazz, with the title-theme selling a million in single form. It rather knocked his jazz credibility, but Harris was a complex talent anyway and his range of ideas was a peculiar mix of the ingenious and the bizarre. His tenor sound was high – so high that he once received votes in a 'Best Alto' poll – and his tonalities suggested a kinship with the avant-garde which he actually had nothing to do with, preferring soft hard-bop or boogaloo situations that drew on the blues and gospel strains of his native Chicago. The first four Vee Jay albums have been reissued as two-in-ones, and they're pleasing, if hardly immortal documents. 'Down' (A Study In Jazz) shows how useful a blues player he was, but the amusing 'Olifant Gesang' from the same album shows his wild side: blowing through the neckpiece, blowing without the neckpiece, using a trombone mouthpiece on the body of the sax. The earlier set is slightly preferred, since the Tiffany's disc is one of those jazz-at-the-movies albums that were fashionable at the time and is nothing special at all.

 The In Sound / Mean Greens Rhino / Atlantic 8122-71515-2 Harris; Ray Codrington (t, perc); Cedar Walton (p); Sonny Phillips (org); Ron Carter (b); Billy Higgins, Bucky Taylor (d); Ray Barretto (perc). 3–6/66.
 The Electrifying Eddie Harris / Plug Me In Rhino/Atlantic R2 71516 Harris; Melvin Lastie, Jimmy Owens, Joe Newman, James Bossy (t); Garnett Brown, Tom McIntosh (tb); King Curtis, David 'Fathead' Newman (ts); Haywood Henry (bs); Jodie Christian (p); Chuck Rainey, Ron Carter, Melvin Jackson (b); Richard Smith, Grady Tate (d); Ray Barretto, Joe Wohletz (perc). 4/67–3/68.

(*) Artist's Choice: The Eddie Harris Anthology Rhino/Atlantic R2 71514 2CD As above, except add Ray Codrington, Don Ellis, Benny Bailey (t); Willie Pickens, Cedar Walton, Muhal Richard Abrams, Milcho Leviev, Les McCann (p); Ronald Muldrow, Joe Diorio (g); Leroy Vinnegar, Rufus Reid, Bradley Bobo (b); Billy Higgins, Billy James, Billy Hart, Harold Jones, Donald Dean, Paul Humphrey (d); Felix Henry, Marshall Thompson (perc). 1/61–2/76.
When he moved to Atlantic, Harris continued experimenting with electric saxes, trumpets played with sax mouthpieces and other gimmicks, with varying levels of success. The Artist's Choice compilation picks tracks from 16 albums, the best of them making a good case for Harris's eminence: he's no genius improviser, and many a solo seems to get too pooped to continue, but he had a knack for making simple licks and phrases fit on shuffling rhythms and have it all sound great. There's the extravagant range which became his trademark: the straight-ahead post-bop of 'Freedom Jazz Dance'; pretty pop-jazz with 'The Shadow Of Your Smile'; a growling big-band chart in '1974 Blues'; the knockout funk of 'Is It In'; and the ragbag electric-sax treatment of 'Giant Steps'. Much of it sounds hopelessly dated in the age of digital keyboards, but that only adds to the charm of Harris's futurism. The individual albums from the period are a patchy lot, evidenced by the pair of two-in-one reissues. Whatever easy-listening niche Harris, Nesuhi Ertegun (first album) and Arif Mardin (the next two) may have been thinking about, the saxophonist's strange sound and compulsive drive keep turning it inside out. He plays 'Shadow Of Your Smile' almost entirely straight, then plugs his way through whistling high notes which might have defeated even David Murray. His sentimental streak lets him get away with the likes of 'It Was A Very Good Year', but nothing of the time gave up the funk better than 'Freedom Jazz Dance'; and the first version of 'Listen Here', which pairs Harris on electric piano with Sonny Phillips on organ, makes a neat match with the second, where Harris is literally plugged in – to his Varitone sax, which has the same pre-digital quaintness as the oldest Moog synthesizers. It helps, for sure, that the first two albums had Walton, Carter and Higgins as the principal rhythm section, and Ray Codrington makes up the numbers without disgracing himself. The tracks from The Electrifying Eddie Harris have some hot stuff too, especially the choogling 'Sham Time', but there are almost bizarre moments such as 'Theme In Search Of A Movie' (baroque slush) and even a farewell waltz, 'I Don't Want No One But You'. Those from Plug Me In are more like a downright mess, the sax hollering against the brass to little purpose.

(*) Live At Newport / Instant Death Collectables CD 6402 Harris; Muhal Richard Abrams, Jodie Christian (p); Louie Spears, Rufus Reid (b); Bob Crowder, Billy James (d); Henry Gibson (perc). 70–72.
 Instant Death Atlantic Masters 81227-6586-2 Largely as above. 72.
A couple more of the Atlantic sessions reissued here. Eddie's set at Newport begins with what sound like spirit voices talking, before going into funky fun of the order of 'Carry On Brother' and the erroneous prophecy 'Don't You Know The Future's In Space?'. A dated-sounding set. We were a bit hard on Instant Death in an earlier edition: a fresh listen to its new Atlantic Masters incarnation reveals that there is an attractive mix of Harris's interests in the programme, and 'Instant Death' (actually full of life), 'A Little Wes' and the nutty exotica of 'Zambezi Dance', which is more Martin Denny than roots music, are all worth hearing again.

() For You, For Me, For Evermore Steeplechase SCCD 31322 Harris (ts, p). 10/92.

The idea was to do a duo session, but when the second musician never turned up, Harris volunteered to set down and then overdub saxophone over his own piano parts first. While he's scarcely a dunce at the keyboard, having played professional piano in the past, the impromptu nature of the date forbade much preparation; too many of the pieces sound hesitant and the 'dialogue' is clumsily realized. There are some beguiling passages, and Harris's tenor tone was taking on a querulous, affecting frailty, but it's no masterwork.

(*) Vexatious Progressions Flying Heart FH-343D Harris; Thara Memory (t); Peter Boe, Janice Scroggins (p); Phil Baker (b); Ron Steen (d). 4/94.

This tough and uncompromising record is the last great Eddie Harris album. Jan Celt asked Harris to make a no-frills straight-ahead record (in Wilsonville, Oregon!), with mainly local players and few familiar names (Boe is recognizable from his work with Robert Cray). Harris came up with ten originals, and the band play the hell out of them. Whatever it may lack in finesse ('Memory' won't be challenging anyone's recollections of their favourite trumpet-playing), the music has a gutsiness which most of Harris's later records have had brushed away. It's a classic 'local' jazz record, of a sort which hardly ever comes to any prominence now, but which has a far more natural feel than most major-label dates.

Also, in brief:

() I Need Some Money Atlantic 7567-80781-2. 75.

One of the later Atlantics and an uninspiring selection for the label's 50th-anniversary release; also available coupled with David Newman's Bigger & Better on Collectables.

* The Last Concert ACT 9249. 3/96.

Harris's farewell date, live, makes moving listening, not for his weaknesses but for his strengths. It's not Harris's fault that the WDR Big Band only clump along in support or that the vocals are so inappropriate.

Gene Harris (1933–99)

PIANO

Played in army bands in the early '50s, then formed The Three Sounds with Andy Simpkins and Bill Dowdy, and enjoyed some success till 1974; then after a quiet spell reappeared as a small-group and big-band-featured performer.

 Gene Harris Trio Plus One Concord CCD 4303 Harris; Stanley Turrentine (ts); Ray Brown (b); Mickey Roker (d). 11–12/85.

 Listen Here! Concord CCD 4385 Harris; Ron Eschete (g); Ray Brown (b); Jeff Hamilton (d). 3/89.

Gene Harris finally assumed an 'own-name' reputation in the '80s and '90s via his work for Concord, specifically with big bands, but latterly with small groups as well. These small-band dates are good in their way – simply resolved light blues on the second record, a handful of standards on the first with Turrentine sitting in – but polish and good manners tend to stand in for genuine excitement. Brown, Roker and Hamilton can certainly cover their tasks here without having to try very hard. But it's agreeable enough to service those moments when the last thing one wants on the sound-system is some monumental masterwork.

 Tribute To Count Basie Concord CCD 4337 Harris; Jon Faddis, Snooky Young, Conte Candoli, Frank Szabo, Bobby Bryant (t); Charles Loper, Bill Watrous, Thurman Green, Garnett Brown (tb); Bill Reichenbach (btb); Marshal Royal, Bill Green, Jackie Kelso (as); Bob Cooper, Plas Johnson (ts); Jack Nimitz (bs); Herb Ellis (g); James Leary III, Ray Brown (b); Jeff Hamilton (d). 3–6/87.

 Live At Town Hall, N.Y.C. / World Tour 1990 Concord CCD-22143-2 2CD Harris; Johnny Morrison (t, flhn); Joe Mosello, Harry 'Sweets' Edison , Michael Philip Mossman, Johnny Coles, Glenn Drewes (t); Eddie Bert, Urbie Green, James Morrison, George Bohannon, Robin Eubanks (tb); Paul Faulise (btb); Jerry Dodgion, Frank Wess, Jeff Clayton (as, f); Plas Johnson, James Moody (ts, cl, f); Ralph Moore (ts); Herb Ellis, Kenny Burrell (g); Ray Brown (b); Jeff Hamilton, Harold Jones (d); Ernestine Anderson, Ernie Andrews (v). 9/89, 10/90.

Like the latter-day records of such bandleaders as Basie and Herman, these discs tend to be enjoyable more for their gold-plated class and precision than for any special inventiveness. The first session, credited to Gene Harris and The All Star Big Band, is, in those circumstances, a very truthful kind of tribute to Basie's band, the eight charts offering a fair approximation of the familiar sound. The two discs by the later bands – now known as The Philip Morris Superband – are, we find, rather more entertaining. The Town Hall set boasts a vast digital presence, the brass particularly bright and all the soloists well catered for, but some may find its showbiz atmosphere less than ingratiating. Andrews and Anderson have some enjoyable vehicles and there are appropriately outgoing solos from Edison, Ellis, Dodgion and others. World Tour 1990 reprises the situation, with a somewhat different cast but much the same atmosphere. The individual discs have now been combined as a twofer.

 At Last Concord CCD 4434 Harris; Scott Hamilton (ts); Herb Ellis (g); Ray Brown (b); Harold Jones (d). 5/90.

 Black & Blue / (*) Like A Lover Concord CCD 4482 / 4526 Harris; Ron Eschete (g); Luther Hughes (b); Harold Jones (d). 6/91; 1/92.

 At Maybeck Recital Hall Concord CCD 4536 Harris (p solo). 8/92.

 A Little Piece Of Heaven /  Funky Gene's /  Brotherhood Concord CCD 4578 / 4609 / 4640 Harris; Ron Eschete (g); Luther Hughes (b); Paul Humphrey (d). 7/93; 5/94; 8/92.

() It's The Real Soul Concord CCD-4692 As above, except add Frank Wess (ts, f). 3/95.

 Down Home Blues Concord CCD-4785 As above, except omit Wess; add Jack McDuff (org); Nikki Harris, Curtis Stigers (v). 12/96.

 Alley Cats Concord CCD-4859-2 Harris; Ernie Watts (ts, as); Red Holloway (ts); Jack McDuff (org); Frank Potenza (g); Luther Hughes (b); Paul Kreibich (d); Nikki Harris (v). 12/98.

Gene Harris continued making the same kind of funky, soulful, enjoyable music to the end of his life. It's a testament to the popularity of his discs that the entire catalogue is still in print. On At Last, Scott Hamilton joins in the fun and the quintet plays with great gusto. Black & Blue introduced a new Harris group: Eschete returns on guitar, but Hughes and Jones are first-timers, and they dig into the programme – dependent on traditional blues of the order of 'C C Rider' – with the same infectious enthusiasm as Harris. Like A Lover continues along the same path, but the ballads sound almost soppy in comparison with the upbeat tunes – Harris wasn't made to be tenderized. A Little Piece Of Heaven restores order by dropping the group into a live situation. This must be one of the most rollicking treatments of 'Take The "A" Train' on record, and there are somewhat bacchanalian (live at the winery!) treatments of 'Old Dog Blues' and 'Blues For Sainte Chapelle'.

Gene's entry in the Maybeck series is typically straight-ahead and without frills. There are four more blues in the programme, but this time the ballads don't seem quite so ponderously tender, and he is assuredly enjoying himself throughout. Funky Gene's is comfortably in the usual pocket and, although 'Children Of Sanchez' is a mistaken choice, most of the tunes fit Harris like his favourite tuxedo. Brotherhood is pretty much the same. Eschete's solo on 'I Remember You' makes one sit up and wish that perhaps he had more space than he usually gets; Harris, on the other hand, has never sounded more swinging than he does on Frank Loesser's 'The Brotherhood Of Man'.

It's The Real Soul simply reruns one of his concert sets and isn't that special. The band are as usual, but guest Wess coasts through a couple of blues and a couple of flute features to negligible effect. Gospel and blues make up the next one, recorded at the same sessions. McDuff had appeared on In His Hands (see below, 'in brief'), and he shares the billing with Harris on Down Home Blues, which is nearly all blues. Nikki Harris and Stigers have cameos, but the meat of it is in the interplay between piano and organ.

Alley Cats is yet another live one, and the hero this time is the failsafe Watts, who burns up the changes on 'Bird's Idea' and completely outclasses the razzle of Holloway. Gene himself does his usual yet again, though nobody could begrudge him: 'If you leave here with a smile on your face, remember that Gene Harris put it there.'

Also, in brief:

() Nexus Blue Note 581679-2. 5–6/75.
This is best left to oblivion, but Blue Note have perversely reissued Harris's worst album.

 All-Stars Live Concord CCD 4808-2. 4/95.
A sweet-natured reunion of old-timers: Sweets Edison (t), Stan Turrentine (ts) – excellent – and Kenny Burrell (g).

(*) In His Hands Concord CCD 4758. 12/96.
A bit Hallelujah-Hollywood, and what's Curtis Stigers (v) doing on it? Redeemed by Jack McDuff (org), though.

Jerome Harris (born 1953)

BASS, GUITAR

The Flushing, NY, man has worked with Sonny Rollins ('Don't Stop The Carnival'), as well as Bobby Previte and Wayne Horvitz. Favours an acoustic bass guitar, but has played other versions.

 Hidden In Plain View New World 80472 Harris; E. J. Allen (t); Ray Anderson (tb); Marty Ehrlich (as, bcl); Don Byron (cl); Bill Ware (vib); Bobby Previte (d). 1/95.
* Rendezvous Stereophile 13 Harris; Art Baron (tb); Marty Ehrlich (as); Steve Nelson (vib); Billy Drummond (d). 8/98.
Harris's earlier work on Minor Music and Muse is no longer available, but the Dolphy tribute on New World is excellent. He benefits from the presence of sometime employers Previte and Ehrlich; the latter knows the Dolphy canon pretty well and comes from a similar sound-world, using his bass clarinet (which he eschews on the second album) to great effect on three numbers. The set features eight Dolphy themes, including 'Out To Lunch', 'Iron Man', the estimable 'Miss Ann' and '245' and 'Les' medleyed into a single track, but, apart from a gloriously upbeat version of 'Mandrake' which takes the honours, the best things on the date are Harris's own two compositions. 'Emanation' is brief but fiery, with Ware in the Hutcherson role, while the title-track carves a more thoughtful path. Question: why can't Anderson play like this on his own projects?

Baron fits into the mix perfectly on the later quintet record and so does the excellent Nelson. Here, all but Duke Ellington's 'The Mooche' are Harris originals and his writing seems to have taken another step forward. It all starts rather slowly, with 'Decision Point' not much more than a warm-up piece that might have been excluded from the final roster – and would have been had this been an LP – but picking up pace after the repertory piece and culminating in the long closing 'Hand By Hand', on which Harris's warm, soft sound is sublime. Drummond is perhaps a more effective foil than Previte and the set has a more coherent feel than its predecessor. Great stuff from a little-remarked stylist.

Loston Harris

PIANO, VOICE

Latter-day mainstream artist who sings and plays with a smile.

 Comes Love N2K 10012 Harris; Mark Shim (ts); David Grossman (b); Clarence Penn (d). 11/97.
 Timeless Q&W 1013 Harris; Marcus Parsley (t); Chris Berger (b); Alvester Garnett (d). 9/03.
The Ahmad Jamal trio is the obvious model for the debut disc, though Harris's vocals also call to mind Harry Connick Jr. The approach is bright, unfussy jazz, mostly standards ('Moonlight In Vermont', 'Shall We Dance?'), but with some imaginative flourishes, like 'Stompin' Down Broadway' and the Marsalis opener, 'Swinging At The Haven'. There are touches of Oscar Peterson in Harris's keyboard work, but also the beginnings of something uniquely his own. Sadly, the follow-up date seems to bury that individuality somewhat. One finds oneself ticking off the influences and similarities – Jamal, Peterson, Connick, Nat Cole – rather than listening to what Loston has to say. On the other hand, the group is good and must have been exciting live.

Stefon Harris (born 1973)

VIBRAPHONE, MARIMBA

Young star at the forefront of new New York music.

(*) A Cloud Of Red Dust Blue Note 23487 2 Harris; Steve Turre (tb); Greg Osby (as); Steve Wilson (ss, as); Kaoru Watanabe (f); Mulgrew Miller, Jason Moran (p); Dwayne Burno (b); Alvester Garnett (d); Kimati Dinizulu (perc, 1-string hp); June Gardner (v). 10/97.
* BlackActionFigure Blue Note 99546 2 Harris; Steve Turre (tb); Greg Osby (as); Gary Thomas (ts, af); Jason Moran (p); Tarus Mateen (b); Eric Harland (d). 2/99.
Harris quickly showed a highly developed musical personality. His debut album is interestingly structured. Rather than a sequence of discrete tracks, Harris has woven them together with short interludes to create an almost continuous suite. It grips the attention from the very start and flags only very briefly, with June Gardner's vocal feature on 'In The Garden Of Thought'. Some of the shorter pieces, like 'One String Blues', co-written with Dinizulu, are quirky and playful, but Harris's most characteristic sound is a flowing lyricism, grafted onto a swinging shuffle beat, a combination of metres that is always threatening to fall apart but never quite does. There is something of Hutcherson's tightrope daring in his solo on 'Of Things To Come' on the second album.

The sequel builds on the strengths of its predecessor. As before, the writing is strong and archetypal, vindicating Harris's idealist belief that all exists and is merely transcribed. 'The Alchemist' and the stately 'Chorale' which follows are perfect illustrations of this: timeless-sounding compositions. This has the odd effect of making the album's two standards, 'There Is No Greater Love' and 'You Stepped Out Of A Dream', sound brand-new. The only other repertory piece is a version of Onaje Allan Gumbs's 'Collage'.

 Kindred Blue Note 31868 Harris; Jacky Terrasson (p); Tarus Mateen (b); Terreon Gully, Idris Muhammad (d). N.D.

Co-led with Terrasson, whose critical stock was failing just as Harris's soared. As it is, Harris pretty much dominates the record, playing some of his most incisive work on marimba, which is more easily differentiated from the piano. A lot of the tracks are standards: 'Summertime' is a curiosity, with a rewritten coda, but 'My Foolish Heart' and 'What Is This Thing Called Love?', the latter a duet, are both excellent. Harris's 'Shane' stands out among the originals, while Terrasson has his best moments right at the end on 'Body And Soul', which is a very idiosyncratic version.

(*) The Grand Unification Theory Blue Note 32498 Harris; Derrick Gardner (t); Steve Turre (tb, shells); Douglas Purviance (btb); Tim Warfield (ts); Mark Vinci (cl); Anne Drummond (f, af); Xavier Davis (p); Tarus Mateen (b, v); Terreon Gully (d); Khalil Kwame Bell, Myles Weinstein (perc). 11/02.

The concept album. Harris's is so clotted by his desire to put a spin on every dimension of human experience that the music is all over the place stylistically and overpacked with detail. 'The Birth Of Time' must be one of the most way-out tracks to appear under a Blue Note title in many a year; an intriguing failure. 'The Velvet Couch' is more straightforward, though the bout of therapy only softens the listener up for more craziness in the middle section of 'Corridor Of Elusive Dreams', 'Escape To Quiet Desperation' and 'Song Of The Whispering Banshee', the last of which is very odd indeed. Harris has rarely opened up the vibes so completely. His palette is very broad and his range of effects, from sharply struck chimes and runs to passages where it sounds as if the motors have been switched off, is impressive. Ignore the programme; listen to the music.

(*) Evolution Blue Note 97353 Harris; Casey Benjamin (as); Anne Drummond (f); Xavier Davis (p); Marc Cary (ky); Darryl Benjamin (b); Terreon Gully (d, perc). 11/03.

It sounds like another big-theme record, but this bright session by Harris's Blackout group gives no sign of that. Kicking off with Don Grolnick's 'Nothing Personal', it finds room for 'Summertime' again, Sting's 'Until' (with Davis in on piano) and, as a coda, Hutcherson's 'Montara', almost as if Harris is suggesting he's now fit to be mentioned in that august company. On the basis of his playing and writing here, he's almost there.

(*) African Tarantella: Dances With Duke Blue Note 41090 Harris; Steve Turre (tb); Greg Tardy (cl); Anne Drummond (f); Xavier Davis (p); Louise Dubin (clo); Derrick Hodge (b); Terreon Gully (d). 06.

Harris tackles a group of less well-known Ellington compositions, including pieces from the New Orleans Suite, Queens Suite and the 'Gardner Variations'. It's a fascinating programme, and an interesting instrumentation. The sound is light but as rich as whipped cream, with Turre, Tardy, Drummond and Dubin producing much of the harmonic base over which Harris dances. At moments, he sounds curiously restrained, even diffident, as if respect for the source precludes a more open improvisational approach, but when he cuts loose, it's just fine.

Steve Harris & Zaum (1948–2008; formed 2002)

DRUMS, GROUP

A background in pop and punk, he drummed in Pinski Zoo, worked in music education and in 2002 formed Europe's most exciting improvising ensemble. Liver cancer prematurely ended his life.

(*) Zaum Amazon AMAZCD15 Harris; Geoff Hearn (ss, ts); Karen Wimhurst (cl, bcl); Udo Dzierzanowski (g); Cathy Stevens (vla, violectra). 02.

 As Slow As Flowers ZM Product 01 Harris; Geoff Hearn (ss, ts). 03.

♛ * Above Our Heads The Sky Splits Open Slam CD258 As for Zaum, except add Matthew Olczak (g); Adrian Newton (live, found samples); Chrome Strings. 3/04.

* The Little Flash of Letting Go Spitz CD001 As above, except omit Chrome Strings; Wimhurst sampled only. 5/05.

* I Hope You Never Love Anything As Much As I Love You Amazon AMAZCD 14 As above, except add Andrea Parkins (acc, elec). 06.

If the Spontaneous Music Ensemble, ISKRA 1903, AMM and the various aggregations round Derek Bailey's Company established a basic discourse for British improvisation from the '60s onward, Steve Harris's Zaum took up the torch and moved that language on a step further. The ensemble takes its name from the Futurist notion of a new guttural language that might approximate the hard discontinuities of (post)modern life. The group's music does not follow a hard-line 'non-idiomatic' course but explores new sonorities within and against a recognizable instrumental discourse. A Zaum performance is always in flux, always trading warmly 'organic' sounds against tonalities that are not so much dissonant or alien as uncanny, in the strict and original sense. It is a profoundly humane music that communicates at a very deep level.

We make no apology for awarding Above Our Heads our highest accolade. At the time of release, it seemed like a remarkable disc. With growing hindsight and now remastered in addition, it has repositioned our listening to British improvised music. Even with an augmented ensemble, the group's main energy comes from Harris himself. He is constantly in motion, stoking insistent cross-rhythms and building the deep, slow pulses that give each of these remarkable records their shape. His rock background is shared to some degree with long-term associate Hearn and with Dzierzanowski, but that is tempered by Stevens's and Wimhurst's background in classical music, though both have also worked in other genres. It was a meeting with the Ganelin Trio that redirected Harris's career, and while the first three of these records were all recorded at home in Poole in a gallery space normally associated with fine arts (painters were literally at work around them when the first record was made) there is a sense of quiet, intimate theatre to a Zaum performance.

The first record sees the group finding its feet, having only come together immediately before the performance. The second is a masterpiece. Above Our Heads utilizes many instrumental permutations to create a vivid soundtrack whose abstractions are none the less rooted in palpable human dramas. The fourth date, from which Wimhurst was absent on family duties and on which she is only audible among Newton's samples, is a confident consolidation by what has been the most exciting group in Europe. The most recent inevitably lacks the sheer surprise and freshness of its predecessors, but it does find Harris confidently assimilating another new voice into the group. Parkins sounds as if she might have been a founder member; Harris plays more gently, as perhaps befits the title, but there are moments of real edge and danger to the playing throughout and the climactic 'Juarez' and 'Watt's Curve' are high-points in contemporary improvised music. Harris's early death was a tragedy; it isn't clear whether other performances await release.

Donald Harrison (born 1960)

ALTO AND SOPRANO SAXOPHONES, BASS CLARINET

Born in New Orleans, he studied with Ellis Marsalis and joined Art Blakey in 1982. Co-led a quintet with Terence Blanchard and has subsequently freelanced.

 For Art's Sake Candid CCD 79501 Harrison; Marlon Jordan (t); Cyrus Chestnut (p); Christian McBride (b); Carl Allen (d). 11/90.

Before Katrina struck, New Orleans had regained its centrality in American jazz. Much of the credit goes to Ellis Marsalis, who was one of Harrison's teachers at NOCA. Like many of the younger generation, Harrison has tried to fuse traditional idiom with a thoroughly contemporary style, and this early album (he was 30) reflects the instincts that gave the Messengers their most uncompromising period. For Art's Sake sees the leader upstaged by his sidemen. Harrison has assembled a powerful young band (McBride was only 18), well-grounded in the tradition, but brimming with their own ideas. The opening 'So What' helps settle the players and establish credentials. 'Nut' is the pianist's feature, elegantly sculpted, formal and unaffected. Harrison gives most of the opening statements to the 19-year-old Jordan, who emerges as a rawer version of Wynton Marsalis. The trumpeter comes into his own on a superb reading of 'In A Sentimental Mood', which he gradually cranks up from a melancholy ballad into a funky swinger.

 Indian Blues Candid CCD 79514 Harrison; Cyrus Chestnut, Mac Rebennack (Dr John) (p, v); Phil Bowler (b, v); Carl Allen (d, v); Bruce Cox, Howard Smiley Ricks (perc, v); Donald Harrison Sr (v). 5/91.

Hard bop is still the basic language here, but Harrison has also tried to combine the Blakey sound with that of his real father. Donald Harrison Sr has been leader of the Guardians Of The Flame, who also feature on the album. 'Hiko Hiko' and 'Two-Way-Pocky-Way' are traditional (the former is credited to the legendary Black Johnny); 'Ja-Ki-Mo-Fi-Na-Hay' and the opening 'Hu-Tan-nay' are credited to the Harrisons. Dr John sings and plays piano on the two originals, sings on Professor Longhair's 'Big Chief' and plays piano on 'Walkin' Home' and Big Chief Jolly's 'Shave 'Em Dry'.

There's no sense of a break between the densely rhythmic New Orleans numbers with their chattering percussion and the more orthodox jazz tracks. Harrison plays 'Indian Red' pretty much as a straight alto feature, but then adds a rhythmic line to the prototypical standard 'Cherokee' that gives it an entirely new dimension. His own 'Indian Blues' and 'Uptown Ruler' reflect a decision in 1989 to 'mask Indian' again and join the feathered throngs that march on Mardi Gras. In touching his roots, he's brought them right up to date.

(*) Heroes Nagel Heyer 2041 Harrison; Vicente Archer, Ron Carter (b); Billy Cobham, John Lamkin (d). 12/02.

 Free Style Nagel Heyer 2059 As above, except add Glen Patscha (p). 12/02.

(*) New York Cool: Live at the Blue Note Half Note 4525 Harrison; Ron Carter (b); Billy Cobham (d). 4/05.

Heroes lay on the shelf for nearly two years before it was released, which seems strange given the quality personnel. There are a couple of other puzzles. Harrison had worked as Art Of Four with Carter, Cobham and James Williams and it's not clear why the pianist didn't make this date. Also, it's not at all obvious why three 'bonus' tracks with Archer and Lamkin should be tacked on at the end, particularly with 'Well, You Needn't' incorrectly titled as 'Straight, No Chaser'. But Harrison's duets with Carter are worthy of comparison to Ron's famous work with Eric Dolphy and the (main) trio cuts have a real verve and energy. Good as Archer and Lamkin are, they're thoroughly shown up, and the record peters out after a brief, lovely version of 'Solar'.

One corner of the mystery is quickly explained when we turn to Free Style, which features a couple of bonus tracks with Carter and Cobham; essentially, these 'extras' work as fliers for the album. It's not an entirely successful strategy, because the alternate of 'Heroes' with the two seniors is very much better than anything else on the record.

The point obviously sank in. The live date from the Blue Note is a very solid and enjoyable piece of work. Mostly standard fare and inevitably a reasonable amount of featured space for both Carter and Cobham, the latter playing as well as ever. They open with 'Body And Soul', a fairly routine workout, and follow up with 'Harrisburg Address', 'Easy Living' and 'I Remember April'. Carter's fine 'Third Plane' is buried way down the set, which seems a pity, particularly when it then peters out with the drab 'Blues For Happy People'.

(*) The Survivor Nagel Heyer 2068 Harrison; Christian Scott (t); Zaccai Curtis, Mulgrew Miller (p); Luques Curtis (b); John Lamkin (d). 11/04.

Harrison has stuck to his last with impressive doggedness. If 'The Survivor', which opens the album, is intended to be autobiographical, it presents a man both defiant and quietly chastened. It's surprising how instantly recognizable the alto sound now is – he's recorded across three decades – and it has become a very compelling solo voice. He still tries to keep pace with recent trends. 'The Hook Up' has a hip-hop sensibility and the closing version of 'Caravan' also includes a James Brown sample. These are fine, but they're not what one buys a Harrison record to hear.

Also, in brief:

 Spirits of Congo Square Candid CCD 79759. 3/00.

Hard to see what this adds to Indian Blues, though the New Orleans Legacy Ensemble includes some worthy names (Nicholas Payton (t), Marlon Jordan (t), Delfeayo Marsalis (tb)) and the repertoire is mostly very strong.

 Real Life Stories Nagel Heyer 2022. 11/01.
In 18-year-old nephew Christian Scott (t), Harrison has unearthed a player with the power and excitement of the teenage Freddie Hubbard. A fine label debut.

 Kind of New Candid CCD 79768. 02.
A track-by-track homage to Kind Of Blue. It could be worse, but why listen to this and not the original?

Frank Harrison (born 1978)

PIANO

Born in Oxford. He won the soloist prize in the Daily Telegraph jazz competition (1994) and then placed in Young Musician of the Year. After that, Berklee and a berth in Gilad Atzmon's group.

 First Light Basho 152 Harrison; Aidan O'Donnell (b); Stephen Keogh (d). 5/06.
Good as this is, the abiding thought has to be that in a market crowded with similarly gifted trios, what's to highlight this one? The standards are played with some enterprise – some interesting variations on 'Nature Boy' – and the original material, often quite impressionistic ('Afternoon In Tromsø') but sometimes with a more abstract quality ('Maria's Planet Song'), has strong points. It's a hard furrow, even for guys as good as these.

Jackson Harrison (born 1981)

PIANO

Brought up in Sydney and first exposed to jazz via the Bill Evans trio, he subsequently studied at his home-town Conservatorium.

 Land Tides hatOLOGY 647 Harrison; Thomas Morgan (b); Dan Weiss (d). 12/05.
An auspicious debut by the young Australian, made all the more remarkable by the fact he didn't meet his bassist and drummer until just before the gig. Harrison's models would seem to be Evans and the Paul Bley trios of the '70s, but his most direct influences were Mike Nock, whom he met while studying in Sydney, and the perennially underrated Marc Copland, whose stamp can be detected on cuts like 'Music To Forget' and 'Dreamed Landscapes'. That said, there is already an individualism to Harrison's keyboard touch and an admirable musicality. The writing is strong, if not earth-shaking, and on cuts like 'Kinski', dedicated to the cracked actor and inspired by the highly unified vision of director Werner Herzog, signs of something very distinctive emerging. The sessions were conducted in New York, where Harrison can expect to find plentiful work.

Joel Harrison

GUITAR, VOICE

Harrison grew up in DC, and soaked up many kinds of music there – jazz alongside country, blues and rock.

 Free Country ACT 9419-2 Harrison; David Binney (ts, sampler); Rob Burger (ky); Uri Caine (p); Tony Cedras (acc); Rob Thomas (vn); Sean Conly (b); Alison Miller (d); Norah Jones, Raz Kennedy (v). 1/02–1/03.

 So Long 2nd Street ACT 9431-2 Harrison; David Binney (as); Gary Versace (p, org, acc); Uri Caine (p); Rob Burger (org); Stephen Crump (b); Dan Weiss (d); Todd Isler (perc); Emilie Cardinaux, Total Praise Gospel Choir (v). 02–04.

 Harrison On Harrison High Note HCD 7147 Harrison; David Liebman (ss, ts, f); David Binney (as); Uri Caine, Gary Versace (p); Rob Burger (org); Stephen Crump (b); Dan Weiss (d); Todd Isler (perc); Jen Chapin (v). N.D.

(*) Harbor High Note HCD 7167 Harrison; Marty Wehner (tb); David Binney (as); Henry Hey (p); Nguyên Lê (g); Stephen Crump (b); Jordan Perlson (d, perc); Jamey Haddad (perc). 11/06–1/07.

The first two records follow the same agenda: choosing nuggets from recent and historical fields of American country, Harrison and his ensemble reshape them into a setting which suggests (as he puts it) a feasible meeting place between Miles Davis and Johnny Cash. There seems to be rather more of Cash than Davis in his own playing, which tends towards the rockier endeavours of the Bill Frisell school, but these are undeniably entertaining records, which have the occasional surprise along the way: Norah Jones sings a thoroughly decentred 'I Walk The Line', Binney asserts his capacity to find space for jazz playing even in 'Twelve Gates To The City', and 'Galveston' and 'Wichita Lineman' don't sound as foolish as they might have done. Harrison's penchant for singing on the occasional piece is less encouraging: he sounds oddly like Nina Simone.

The first High Note record chooses George Harrison as its composer, but the approach is much the same, even if Liverpool is a long way from Folsom Prison. Again, Liebman and Binney provide much of the musical muscle, and Harrison sings, this time (sigh) on 'My Sweet Lord'.

Harbor is the first of the run (and there are some earlier things, long deleted) to strike us as completely original and inventive. The writing's terrifically strong on 'You Bring The Rain' and 'Blue Ghosts Of Bourbon Street', the two opening cuts, and it doesn't flag from there. Lê's always an asset and his atmospheric sound is one of the defining characteristics of the record. Harrison's more interested in an overall group sound, one suspects, and he achieves it here, impressively.

Paul Harrison

PIANO

Rising talent, voted Young Scottish Jazz Musician of the Year for 1998 and 1999.

 Nemesis Caber 013 Harrison; Mario Caribé (b); Paddy Flaherty (d). 12/99.
Rooted in the pianism of Chick Corea and the attractively splintered aesthetic of Bud Powell, Harrison is an exciting player who seems certain to go places. His debut is confident and packed with original ideas, of which 'Six Down', the insistent 'Foot In The Door' and the lovely 'Valse' are the most memorable. Sterling support from Caribé and Flaherty as well, and the kind of empathy that only comes from an established working line-up.

Antonio Hart (born 1969)

ALTO AND SOPRANO SAXOPHONES, FLUTE

Based in New York from 1991, notably as a Roy Hargrove sideman, he has been less visible in recent years.

 All We Need Downtown 1003 Hart; Michael Mossman (t); Jimmy Heath (ts); Sheldrick Mitchell (p, org); Lonnie Plaxico (b); Billy Kilson, Nasheet Waits (d); Renato Thomas (perc); Maya Azucena (v). 9/03.

Seemingly disillusioned with the music business – almost everything under his name is deleted – Hart took a four-year sabbatical and spent his time travelling and absorbing other musical traditions. He reappeared at the start of the new decade with an album for Enja (also gone) and then this fine set. He hasn't quite gone back to first principles and the sound's sometimes a bit over-egged, with too many electric instruments (including his own synth washes) in the mix. But Heath's in cracking form and brings in two tunes, Mossman blows strongly and Antonio himself has found renewed energy. Azucena sings on the first and last tracks, 'Love Is All You Need' (taken as a ballad) and 'God Is All You Need' (given a gospel spin); it's a slightly pointless gesture, but they're pleasant enough and it's good to have him back in the lists.

Billy Hart (born 1940)

DRUMS

He played with Wes Montgomery and his brothers and turned into one of the busiest drummers around, recording with Miles Davis, Stan Getz, Jimmy Smith and McCoy Tyner. A vast discography, but with disproportionately few credits as leader.

(*) Amethyst / * Oceans Of Time Arabesque 105 / 129 Hart; Chris Potter (ss, ts, bcl on Oceans only); John Stubblefield (ss, ts); David Kikoski (p); David Fiuczynski (g); Mark Feldman (vn); Santi Debriano (b). 5/93; 97.

(*) Quartet High Note HNCD 7158 Hart; Mark Turner (ts); Ethan Iverson (p); Ben Street (b). 8/06.

Though much of Hart's best work is for other leaders, these are still considerable discs. The earliest album opens mysteriously, somewhat reminiscent of his work with Dave Liebman and Richie Beirach in Quest. The juxtaposition of piano, guitar and violin gives the group a great many fresh textural devices. Fiuczynski is unfettered on his own 'Melanos'. Most of his colleagues get a composition credit as well, though it's Kikoski who takes the honours with the closing 'Dirty Dogs', a curious theme that bears repeated listening. Through it all, Hart is magisterial, alert, insistently beautiful.

Oceans Of Time affords a rare glimpse of Hart the composer: 'Teule's Redemption' is a Coltrane-inspired epic that provides the drummer with a springboard for some lovely, imaginative playing. For the most part, the writing is done by his colleagues, who convened four years earlier for the now-deleted Amethyst disc. In our view, this one is better. Stubblefield's 'One For Carter' is a great opener and Kikoski's 'Shadow' is further testimony to his skills. Debriano kicks in with 'Mind Reader' and the closing 'Offering', which gives Billy a chance to show his mettle in unorthodox counts.

He's well-featured again as composer on Quartet. Though it's Iverson who kicks off the record with the harmonically adventurous 'Mellow B', Billy's own pieces, the upbeat 'Lorca' for his son and the delightful ballad 'Charvez', are the date's outstanding cuts. Bright saxophone work from Turner and punchy, evocative piano from the Bad Plus pianist.

John Hart (born 1961)

GUITAR

A fluent stylist who bridges traditional jazz guitar and a more contemporary idiom.

 Scenes From A Song / (*) Indivisible Hep 2080 / 2088 Hart; Bill Moring (b); Tim Horner (d). 7/00; 7/03.

(*) Standards – Green And Blue Hep 2090 As above, except add Joe Locke (vib). 10/05.

Hart had made several earlier albums, but Scenes catches him entering a new phase of creative maturity. The opening 'Slacker's Hideaway' is vividly contemporary jazz guitar, and if later in the set he drops into generic bop mode from time to time, the overall impression is of fresh, inventive music-making. 'Passion Flower' is a lovely theme, but it feels like filler or a sop, and the interpretation of Joni Mitchell's 'Both Sides Now' doesn't add up to much. Indivisible as a title is a worthy reminder that this is a long-standing group and not just guitar-plus-rhythm. Moring and Horner are full participants and both are in strikingly responsive form on the second Hep disc. Again, the repertory pieces, 'A Nightingale Sang In Berkeley Square', 'Single Petal Of A Rose' and 'Blame It On My Youth', are something of a distraction from Hart's superb bop-to-modern lines, but they're despatched relatively briefly (apart from the Ellington) and so well done one hardly minds their inclusion. The next disc is almost all standards and Hart seems more conventional in technique as a result. Another sign of strength in the group is how readily it accommodates a further instrumental voice. Locke is an ideal guest (though his guest credits are so numerous they've somewhat eclipsed his own work) and always fits in seamlessly and with complete empathy. A refreshing variation on the usual trio sound: top picks – Hart's 'The E Tune' and, unbelievably, the old groaner 'Alone Together', fresh as paint.

Johnny Hartman (1923–83)

VOICE

His lustrous baritone was only suited to one tempo, slow enough for every syllable to be enunciated with loving attention. Oddly, having worked with Earl Hines, Errol Garner and Dizzy Gillespie, he is nowadays best remembered for an unlikely Impulse! pairing with John Coltrane.

 Just You, Just Me /  The Complete Regent Recordings Savoy 17097 / Jazz Factory JFCD22829 Hartman; various personnel. 11 & 12/47–61.

(*) All Of Me Rhino 79849 Hartman; Howard McGhee, Ernie Royal (t); Frank Rehak (tb); Anthony Ortega (as); Jerome Richardson (ts, f); Lucky Thompson (ts); Danny Bank (bs); Hank Jones (p); Milt Hinton (b); Osie Johnson (d). 11/56.

 The Complete Gus Wildi Recordings Lone Hill 10174 As above, except add Ralph Sharon (p); Jay Cave (b); Christy Febbo (d). 10/55, 11/56.

The Coltrane album has tended to obscure Hartman's own achievement. Sounding somewhat like Nat Cole and Al Hibbler, Hartman had the ability to caress even a banal lyric into shape, infusing it not so much with emotion as with a sort of intelligence. This is the quality most evident on All Of Me, reissued with four alternative takes which show how carefully, but also how instinctively, Hartman improvised on a melody. On this occasion, too, he had at his disposal a band of bop craftsmen who give him some challenging backgrounds to work against. The arrangements on 'I'll Follow You' and the much-reworked 'Blue Skies' (included as a bonus is take 13) allow him to do a good deal vocally, and he rises to the challenge every time. On the other hand, he gives take one of 'Birth Of The Blues' a resonant responsiveness which isn't quite there on the more polished issued take.

Lone Hill's habit of giving a record spurious cachet by attributing it to a (relatively) obscure producer is annoying, but it's nice to have All Of Me paired with another Bethlehem date, Songs From The Heart, a superior set with McGhee again and a trio led by Ralph Sharon. There are some excellent performances, though 'Moonlight In Vermont' stands out.

Jazz fan Clint Eastwood revived interest in Hartman when he used a number of songs in the soundtrack to his romantic movie version of The Bridges of Madison County. Many of them are included on the Complete Regent set. If Hartman is associated in the minds of modern jazz fans with John Coltrane, they'll be delighted to find him here with Andrew Hill's trio as well as an impressive range of other jazz stalwarts.

(*) I Just Stopped By To Say Hello Impulse! 051176-2 Hartman; Illinois Jacquet (ts); Hank Jones (p); Kenny Burrell, Jim Hall (g); Milt Hinton (b); Elvin Jones (d). 10/63.

 Unforgettable Impulse! 051152-2 Hartman; Bud Brisbois, Conte Candoli, Jules Chaikin, Freddie Hill, Ollie Mitchell, Melvin Moore, Al Porcino (t); Mike Barone, Billy Byers, John Ewing, Lester Robertson, Ernie Tack (tb); Gabe Baltazar, Anthony Ortega (as); Curtis Amy, Teddy Edwards, Bill Green, Plas Johnson, Harold Land (ts); Jack Nimitz (bs); Mike Melvoin (p); Dennis Budimir, Herb Ellis, John Gray, Howard Roberts (g); Jimmy Bond, Ray Brown, Joe Mondragon (b); Stan Levey, Shelly Manne (d); James Lockert (perc); strings. 2 & 9/66.

Hartman was a graceful interpreter of ballads, and the later Impulse! albums succeed in direct ratio to the success of the slower songs. The earliest is enhanced by the musicians, while on the second they fulfil a pretty workmanlike function. Listen to Jones's accompaniment on 'Stairway To The Stars' and the Sinatra-associated 'Wee Small Hours Of The Morning', both on I Just Stopped By, for a sense of how invaluable he could be to a singer. Unforgettable consists of 12 songs from the ABC Paramount release Unforgettable Songs By Johnny Hartman, and a further five from a set called I Love Everybody, which was taped in a studio but with an invited audience. It includes 'Girl Talk', one of Hartman's increasingly self-indulgent spoken monologues, but it's good to hear him work a room, even one as acoustically unresponsive as this. Technically, the better stuff comes from the three-day February session. Hartman seems to have been something of a perfectionist, but everything here sounds like a complete and integral performance, with no giveaway splices. All the songs are short and emphatic, with no room for instrumental embellishment or vocal gymnastics. He liked to let the song do the work, and mostly that's what happens.

 For Trane /  The Tokyo Albums Blue Note 35346 / Gambit 69216 Hartman; Terumasa Hino (t); Masabumi Masahiko Kikuchi, Mikio Masuda (p); Yoshio Ikeda, Yoshio Suzuki (b); Motohiko Hino, Hiroshi Murakami (d). 11–12/72.

Recorded in Tokyo, the Blue Note is very misleadingly titled, since most of the album consists of material with no Coltrane association at all and that comes from a separate session. 'Violets For Your Furs', 'Nature Boy' and 'My Favorite Things' betray not the slightest hint that the singer is aware of Trane's versions, but the singing is good, and Hartman's voice still has a melting intensity on ballads. One for collectors. The Gambit issue has more material, but nothing revelatory.

Also, in brief:

 There Goes My Heart: A Proper Introduction to Johnny Hartman Proper 2051. 47–65.

Pretty (and that's the operative word) much all the average jazz fan will ever need of Hartman's.

 I Love Everybody Gambit 69205. 58, 5/67.

One of the last really good Hartman records, split between romantic orchestral numbers and Oliver Nelson's emphatic big-band arrangements.

(*) And I Thought About You Blue Note 57456. 60.

He recorded little between the Bethlehem sessions and the Impulse! contract. This is skimpy and unaugmented.

 Hartman For Lovers Verve 0121402. 3/63–9/66.

There's also a Coltrane For Lovers. Guess which one makes more sense.

 Today / I've Been There Collectables 5619. 72, 73.

Despite the sterling line-up, these two LPs for Perception were pretty forgettable affairs, an attempt to put Johnny across a pop repertoire that in no way suited his voice.

(*) The Many Moods of Johnny Hartman American Music Group 910. 5/76.

A dull session with an electric band who sound utterly mismatched.

 Thank You For Everything / (*) This One's For Tedi Audiophile 165 / 181. 78, 8/80.

Thank You consists of live performances from Alec Wilder's regular radio programme, and they find an older-sounding Hartman in very good form indeed. Hartman's final recording came three years before his death. It's an attractive but low-key set.

Michael Hashim (born 1956)

ALTO AND SOPRANO SAXOPHONES

Made his reputation when he joined and later led the Widespread Depression Jazz Orchestra, working out of Rhode Island.

* Keep A Song In Your Soul Hep 2068 Hashim; Claudio Roditi (t); Richard Wyands (p); Dennis Irwin (b); Kenny Washington (d). 5/96.

Doing a Fats Waller repertory record in a contemporary idiom is about as tough a conceptual undertaking as one can imagine. Hashim's astonishing achievement is all the more praiseworthy in that he even gets new life out of the normally intractable 'Jitterbug Waltz' and the roasted 'Honeysuckle Rose'. This is the best band he's ever fronted in a studio; Roditi is his usual cavalier self, and he's a splendid foil for the leader. 'Get Some Cash For Your Trash' is improbably thoughtful and elegant, 'E Flat Blues' never stops cooking, and 'Two Sleepy People' is mildly gorgeous. The pinnacle comes on an extraordinarily dark and baleful 'Black And Blue', which Hashim does on soprano. The further back he looks for material, the more modern he seems to sound: and there are bits and pieces on the record that, say, Oliver Lake might have used. One of Hep's best-ever productions and catnip for Hashim's admirers, who've probably cherished the earlier Stash records.

(*) Multicoloured Blue Hep CD 2075 Hashim; Joe Temperley (bs); Mike LeDonne (p); Peter Washington, John Webber (b); Kenny Washington (d). 7–10/98.
Hashim continues to set a fine standard, the only quibble here being that he's done Strayhorn before, and with a similar personnel. But there are rarities of the order of 'Triple Play', 'Suite For The Duo' and 'Strange Feeling', alongside 'Chelsea Bridge', which may be getting a bit tired as everyone's piece of Strayhorn impressionism. Temperley trades phrases on the title-piece.

(*) Green Up Time Hep 2079 Hashim; Wayne Barker (toy p); Will Holshouser (acc); Eddy Davis (bj, mandola); Dennis Irwin (b); Kenny Washington (d); Axis String Quartet. 7–8/01.
An album of Kurt Weill music. Hashim manages to avoid most of the kitsch which is perhaps inherent in the idea, if not the material, through the sheer vigour of his playing. Some of the melodies have a slurping quality that Hashim actually turns to his advantage. If he can make 'Jitterbug Waltz' into something plausible, then 'Tango Ballad' and 'Love Song' are easy. The strings are on half of the tracks, and are infected with Hashim's own energy, but more important are the bedrock roles of Irwin and Washington. No piano: Holshouser's accordion, sometimes the only awkward note, is the substitute. Best taken a few tracks at a time, perhaps, but it's a worthy addition to Hashim's canon. It's all gone rather quiet. What's up?

George Haslam (born 1939)

BARITONE SAXOPHONE, TAROGATO, CLARINET

Emerged in the '80s as a can-do organizer, group leader and own-label boss, recording many venturesome players. His own work on baritone has taken him round the world in search of fellow spirits.

(*) Argentine Adventures Slam CD 304 Haslam; Enrique Norris (t); Sergio Paulucci (as, v); Daniel Harari (ts, ss); Ruben Ferrero (p); Quique Sinesi (g); Pablo Blasich, Mono Hurtado (b); Horacio López , Sergio Urtubei (d); Fernando Barragán , Tim Short, Horacio Straijer (perc); Mirta Insaurralde (v). 3/91–8/93.
* Duos East West Slam CD 309 Haslam; Ruben Ferrero, Vladimir Solyanik (p); Mono Hurtado (b). 6–8/97.
Haslam's enterprise and creative initiative are remarkable. He was the first British jazz musician to play in Argentina (and, earlier, in Cuba) and he has kept up contacts and a working association with musicians there. When plans to take his regular quintet in 1991 fell through, Haslam went as a single. The first track is an unaccompanied tarogato solo. Thereafter, Adventures consists of collaborations with Argentinian players, tracing Haslam's exploration of forms like the elegiac vidala – sung by Insaurralde – and rhythms like the malambo and carnavalito. The session ends with a remarkable trio performance of John Coltrane's 'Affirmation', for saxophones and bass, with Paulucci also adding a vocal component.

The association has continued and Duos East West finds him back in Buenos Aires, playing three numbers with pianist Ruben Ferrero and one trio with double bassist Mono Hurtado. Recorded against the stormy background of the Santa Rosa, heavy humidity, lightning and apocalyptic rain, they sound appropriately fiery and intense, in marked contrast to the folksier sound of Vladimir Solyanik. Recorded some weeks earlier on Haslam's second visit to the Ukraine, these improvised performances include a gloriously busked version of the English folksong 'Barbara Allen'. 'Bi-Bop' is a slightly breathless workout, apparently recorded at the very end of the session, but programmed first on the disc. Intriguing as these tracks are, it's the Latin American vector which seems to work best for George. His baritone is full-voiced on 'Rio De La Plata', a broad, weighty sound that seems to have no less buoyancy than Ferrero's. The pianist is a real discovery, capable of shifts from abstract sonics from inside the piano to the most elemental swing. Solyanik's common-time playing has a touch of the metronome about it – notably on 'Waltzes With Wolves' – but Ferrero has the loose-limbed grace of the tango dancer.

 Argentine Adventures, Part 3 Slam CD 311 Haslam; Pablo Ledesma (ss); Ruben Ferrero (p); Marcello Jeremiahs (p, ky); Mono Hurtado (b); Luis de la Torre (d); Fabian Tejada (udu d); Monito Vieira (perc). 12/98.
Another fruitful trip to Buenos Aires and some wonderful duo and small group encounters. It doesn't get much better than the opening track, a tarogato/bass duet with the wonderful Hurtado; but there are good things, too, on the collectively improvised 'Five Go Free In Buenos Aires' with Ledesma, Ferrero, Hurtado and de la Torre and, just to prove the vintage, a lovely closing piece with the bassist. A great record that, whatever else, proves Haslam's conviction that improvisation is a powerful lingua franca, but one that requires a bit of preparatory phrasebook work if it is to yield the highest dividends.

 Meltdown Slam CD 243 Haslam; Lloyd Payne, Steve Waterman (t); Andrew Claxton (tba); Julia Middleton (ss); Tim Hill, Pablo Ledesma (as); Ewen Baird, Geoff Hawkins (ts); Matthew F. Morris (bs); Richard Leigh Harris (p); Jez Cooke (g); Steve Kershaw, Jerry Soffe (b); Steve Harris (d); Adam Riley (d, perc); Robin Jones, Tim Turan (perc); Alison Bentley (v). 4 & 6/00, 1 & 3/01.
A fascinating large-scale project for different groups and composers, reflecting a rarely seen side of Haslam's musical practice. Indeed, this is only partly a Haslam album, featuring as it does compositions by the senior Graham Collier and by trumpeter Steve Waterman from a younger generation. Collier's piece 'Eggshell Summer' is a slice of fragile nostalgia, an evocation of something evanescent and on the point of vanishing, his characteristic harmonic subtlety put to quietly dramatic use. Waterman's 'Concerto For Congas' is a wonderful idea, pitched somewhere between Machito and Gunther Schuller. Pianist Harris's 'Our Days Were A Joy, And Our Paths Through Flowers' has the same fugitive pastoralism as the Collier piece, but with a strong spine. Haslam himself directs the opening 'Variations – Bop To Blues' and the brief, closing 'Automateric', which most blindfold listeners would guess was a Collier piece, though differently voiced from most of Graham's recent work. The focus here isn't on soloing per se but on the relation between individual parts and the overall ensemble. To that extent it marks an important step forward for Haslam, but also a re-engagement with composed structures and notated ideas.

(*) Pendle Hawk Carapace Slam CD 315 Haslam; Paul Hession (perc). 2/02.
Haslam and Hession seemed destined to work together. Their approaches are ruggedly complementary and united by the same awareness of how jazz language fits into a free idiom. Some of this came out on their trio collaboration with American piano titan Borah Bergman on The Mahout (also Slam), and it energizes this fine duo recording, made at Pendle Hawk studio in Colne. The architectural terms used for track titles – 'Corbels', 'Scantlings', 'Noggings', 'Jack Rafters' – make perfect sense of music so robust and artisanal, full of light and laughter, and poignancy too. Haslam's use of the tarogato is ever-more sophisticated, and it has almost turned into his main voice, as his baritone-playing becomes plainer-toned and less abrasive. There are moments on the big horn when Haslam sounds close to the West Coast figures who originally inspired him.

 Free Time Slam CD320 Haslam; Steve Waterman (t); Marcel Bárta (ss); Mark Aanderud, Tõnu Nassoo (p); Swetja (g, fujira, saw); Vojtech Havel (clo); Jozef Láska (b); Petr Zimak (d); Jarda Koøan (perc). 3 & 11/02.

Haslam's enterprise in setting up collaborative tours continues to impress. This documents two visits to the Czech Republic, with dates in Brno, Prague and Pardubice. The basic Freetime quartet of baritone and tarogato, guitar, bass and drums is augmented on a number of occasions and these larger groups offer much the best of the music. Láska, however, is a remarkable soloist and is heard on his own on a couple of occasions. George's tarogato sounds right in place in its heartland, but it's his baritone-playing – particularly on a duet with Aanderud – which dominates proceedings.

 Latin From The North Slam CD317 Haslam; Steve Waterman (t); Mads Kjølby Olesen (g); Steve Kershaw (b); Petter Svärd (d); Robin Jones (perc). 4/03.

Recorded on home soil this time, Haslam's Latin project highlights his West Coast sound but still with enough free elements and unexpected rhythmic flourishes to give the music considerable variety and interest. Waterman's contributions are key to the success of the recording. He's bright and clear on Cal Tjader's 'Mamblues', more enclosed and thoughtful elsewhere. Haslam's baritone – no tarogato this time, understandably – has a greater than usual touch of Mulligan. Our only quibble is with the percussion, which sounds stiff and unelastic.

 Cool Moon Slam CD319 Haslam; Mikko Pasanen (p); Jarmo Hiekkala (b); Paul Hession (d). 9/03.

The world tour continues. This time, it's an Anglo-Finnish quartet, recorded in the studios of the Kuopio Conservatory in Finland. Hession is again in fine form and Pasanen is a player worthy of wider notice. The lunar theme isn't always reflected in the music, which is warm and humane. The long 'White Moon', which closes the set, is outstanding. Nicely recorded, with a rich sound.

 SHaK Slam CD 321 Haslam; Esmond Selwyn (g); Steve Kershaw (b). 05.

A standards trio with a difference, bringing a curiously cool but rigorously focused approach to such chestnuts as 'Big Noise From Winnetka', 'Stella By Starlight' and even 'Alfie'. An unexpected record, though Haslam almost always manages to surprise.

Also, in brief:

 Solos East West Slam CD308. 90, 5/95.

Haslam and Lol Coxhill (ss) in the Ukraine and back home in London, respectively. Lol's long 'Incognitose' is the highlight.

 Harmonance Slam CD 310. 2/91, 1/99.

Eight years apart, but in the same wonderful acoustic of the Holywell Room in Oxford, these improvised duets with Laszlo Gardony (p) have an impressive consistency of tone.

 Soaring Slam CD 316. 6/02.

Attributed to the Plaza Jazz Trio, with Haslam, Steve Waterman (t, flhn) and Robin Jones (perc). The trumpeter's use of an electronic valve instrument makes for an interesting variation in this set from Havana.

 Cuban Meltdown Slam CD 515. 05.

Recordings in the UK and Cuba with an impressive array of talent from both countries.

(*) September Spring Slam CD322. 9/06.

Improvisations (on baritone, tarogato and bass clarinet) with friends in Argentina and NY.

Ake 'Stan' Hasselgård (1922–48)

CLARINET

Modestly recorded but widely recognized as a convincing bop clarinettist. After apprentice years in his native Sweden, he went to NY in the '40s and worked for a time with his idol, Benny Goodman, whom he outplayed in the modern style. Killed in a road accident en route to California.

 At Click 1948 Dragon DRCD 183 Hasselgård; Benny Goodman (cl); Wardell Gray (ts); Teddy Wilson (p); Billy Bauer (g); Arnold Fishkind (b); Mel Zelnick (d). 5–6/48.

 Cottontop 1946–1948 Dragon DRCD 332 Similar to above, except add Mary Lou Williams, Per-Erik Sperrings, Barbara Carroll (p), Chuck Wayne (g), Simon Brehm, Clyde Lombardi (b), Bertil Frylmark (d), Jackie Searle (v). 1/46–11/48.

His precocious talent and early death have made Hasselgård something of a folk hero in Swedish jazz circles, and the evidence of the surviving tracks is that he was an outstanding player. He worshipped Goodman and never tried to evade comparisons with his guru, but the traces of bebop in his playing hint at a stylistic truce which he never had the opportunity to develop further. The Goodman septet, which featured Hasselgård, is comprehensively covered on At Click, where the Swede worked with his idol in a two-week engagement. The contrast between the two players isn't as interesting as the similarity: often it's quite hard to tell them apart, and whatever Hasselgård is reputed to have taught Goodman about bop isn't clear from this music. In fact, Hasselgård often gets short shrift in these tracks, with Goodman getting the lion's share of the solos, and Gray and Wilson taking their share. But it's surprising to hear Goodman playing on the likes of 'Mary's Idea' and even 'Donna Lee'. The sound varies, but the meticulous remastering has done the best possible job.

Cottontop, the most recent retrieval work by Dragon (Lars Westin is clearly a concerned guardian of Hasselgård's spirit), is a hotch-potch. Some rare private recordings and acetates are in poor shape aurally, and on some tracks there's no more than a glimpse of Hasselgård. Yet the solos on two takes of 'Patsy's Idea', taken down only weeks before his death, and a few other passages, all point to his mastery. No further movement on the reissue front since our last edition.

Jimmy Hastings

TENOR SAXOPHONE, CLARINET, FLUTE

Scottish-born, he moved south, auditioned for Humphrey Lyttelton (eventually with success) and maintained a freelance career. 'Fifth member' of rock group Caravan.

 Children's Hour Mainstem MSTCD 002665 Hastings; John Horler (p). 01.

 JimJams Mainstem MSTCD 002854 Hastings; John Donaldson (p); Paul Morgan (b); Allen Ganley (d). 02.

A doughty trouper on the British scene, who turns up in all manner of situations, including recent dates with Stacey Kent as well as Humph. These are slim pickings for such a long career, but the Children's Hour date is exquisite, with '100 Acre Wood' and 'Blues For Uncle Mac' reaching straight for the nostalgia button, 'A Child Is Born' there to please the jazz purists. The quartet is good, too, with Donaldson in excellent shape and a fine group performance on 'Sermonette' and 'Sister Sadie'.

Hat

GROUP

Talented Catalonian eclectics.

 Hi Ha Fresh Sound New Talent FSNTCD 264 Sergi Sirvent (p, v); Jordi Matas (g); Marc Cuevas (b); Òscar Domènech (d). 2/05.

These guys listen to a lot of rock, ska and reggae, but the sensibility is all jazz and the improvisations on original themes are brisk and unselfindulgent. Sirvent will go places, with or without this group: listen out for his 'Major Unminor', though Cuevas and Matas have a couple of good themes as well.

Hampton Hawes (1928–77)

PIANO

Born and based in LA, he was a major West Coaster until imprisoned for narcotics offences but quickly revived on his release in 1963. Combined blues and bebop with rare energy and acumen but toyed with fusion-lite towards the end.

 Memorial Jazz Factory 220856 Hawes; Art Farmer (t); Wardell Gray (ts); Howard Roberts (g); Joe Mondragon (b); Shelly Manne (d). 9/52.

() Piano: East/West Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1705 Hawes; Larry Bunker (vib); Clarence Jones (b); Larance Marable (d). 12/52.

Hawes is still something of a coterie taste. Given the sheer exhilaration and lyrical intensity of his music, even given the remarkable story told in his classic autobiography, Raise Up Off Me, it is surprising that he is not better known.

An Angelean, Hawes worked with Charlie Parker and learned from him. The memorial set, originally released on Xanadu and also under Wardell Gray's name, is a good representation of the 24-year-old at work, still absorbing Parker's harmonic innovations, rhythmically callow but enterprising. The other set, shared with Freddie Redd representing the opposite seaboard, shows Hawes still not quite settled into a personal idiom. He gets off a good solo on 'Hamp's Paws' and on 'I'll Remember April', but he never quite blends convincingly with Bunker, and Jones is too understated a player to give the group sound much presence.

 The Trio / * The Trio / (*) Everybody Likes Hampton Hawes Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 316 / 318 / 421 Hawes; Red Mitchell (b); Chuck Thompson (d). 6/55; 12/55; 1/56.

These were Hawes's first serious statements as leader and they are still hugely impressive, combining long, demanding passages of locked-hands chording and fast, unpredictable melody lines. The bebop idiom is still firmly in place, but already Hawes is demonstrating an ability to construct elaborate out-of-tempo solo statements which seem detached from the theme while still drawn entirely from its chord structure. Mitchell is a wonderful accompanist, already experimenting with his trademark tuning and getting a huge sound out of the bass. Thompson is a resolute and often sophisticated partner.

 Trio And Quartet 1951–1956: Studio And Live Sessions Fresh Sound FSRCD 369 2CD Hawes; Harper Crosby, Red Mitchell, Joe Mondragon (b); Harry Babasin (b, clo); Clarence Jones, Shelly Manne, Larance Marable, Chuck Thompson (d); Larry Bunker (d, vib).

The earliest of the live shots on disc one is from the Haig Club in September 1951 with Crosby and Marable, a raw-sounding date on an average piano. The next few tracks are from the Surf the following year with Mondragon and Bunker. Manne takes over on drums for another Haig set a year on from the first, in September and December 1952. Disc two consists mostly of studio sessions. The December 1952 quartet date with Bunker on vibes is a welcome change of texture, as is Babasin's switch to cello on the spring 1952 one. It's a valuable trawl of material, though inevitably sound-quality is somewhat compromised on most of the live dates and Fresh Sound's transfer of studio recordings isn't pristine.

(*) All Night Session: Volumes 1–3 Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 638 / 639 / 640 / Definitive DRCD 11371 2CD Hawes; Jim Hall (g); Red Mitchell (b); Bruz Freeman (d). 11/56.

Hawes's recording of the night of 12/13 November 1956 remains one of his very best. The material was mainly familiar bop fare – 'Groovin' High', 'I'll Remember April', 'Woody'N'You' – but cuts like 'Hampton's Pulpit' are a reminder of the pianist's church background and the curious underswell of gospel, Bach and Rachmaninov that keeps refreshing the topwaters of his harmony. Hall is magnificent, picking out clear, uncluttered lines against the leader's brisk chords.

The pace has slackened by Volume 3, but this is a hugely enjoyable set, now affordable on the Definitive option, even if the sound is a bit dull.

 Bird Song Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1035 Hawes; Paul Chambers, Scott LaFaro (b); Frank Butler, Larance Marable (d). 1/56, 3/58.

Enhanced with three tracks from 1958 featuring LaFaro and Butler, this is an extended examination of Parker's approach to the blues, sometimes on originals like 'Bigfoot' and 'Cheryl', associated tunes like Dizzy's 'Blue'N'Boogie' and standards, with 'Stella By Starlight' outstanding. Chambers and Marable aren't players you associate with Hampton, but they provide predictably strong support. Not released until 1999.

(*) Four! Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 165 Hawes; Barney Kessel (g); Red Mitchell (b); Shelly Manne (d). 1/58.

This was a transitional record. Hawes sounds less like Bud and Monk than like some of the great swing pianists, and Teddy Wilson in particular. That might sound like a backward step, but Hawes was always trying to broker a style which combined the strengths of old and new, and this was one of the places where the synthesis both worked and showed the joins.

 For Real Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 713 Hawes; Harold Land (ts); Scott LaFaro (b); Frank Butler (d). 3/58.

A strong album from an exceptional band. LaFaro's short career had many spectacular moments, but few as sheerly joyous as this one. 'Wrap Your Troubles In Dreams' and 'Crazeology' use altered chords and passing notes to create a subtle harmonic environment in which piano and bass are equal front-line partners with the saxophone. Land is in cracking form and feeds exuberantly on cues in the leader's own solos. The closing 'I Love You' is one of Hawes's most completely satisfying recorded performances, every element balanced and communicative.

(*) The Sermon Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1067 Hawes; Leroy Vinnegar (b); Stan Levey (d). 11/58.
This was on Contemporary's shelf for many years before its original release. A group of spirituals given a hefty injection of the blues, and at the end Hawes drops the prayer book altogether and plays nine minutes of 'Blues N/C'. If it feels of a lighter weight than some of Hawes's albums from this time, there's still a lot of great piano from one of the masters of this period – and listen to Stan Levey's delicious work on that closing blues.

(*) The Green Leaves Of Summer Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 476 Hawes; Monk Montgomery (b); Steve Ellington (d). 2/64.
Hawes spent the early '60s in jail, which, as he explains in the autobiography, gave him a new philosophy. From here on, he seems devoted to a hard and chastened beauty; it became a mannerism towards the end, but it's still new at this stage: often opening a tune with a long rubato introduction, unaccompanied, and as yet uninvolved with the melody. Monk Montgomery is the elder brother of Wes, a solid, dependable player without much sparkle or brio but constant in his task and capable of surprise here and there.

 Here And Now Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 178 Hawes; Chuck Israels (b); Donald Bailey (d), 5/65.
 I'm All Smiles /  The Seance Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 796 / 455 Hawes; Red Mitchell (b); Donald Bailey (d). 4–5/66; 5/66.
The later of these, recorded in performance at Mitchell's Studio Club in LA, marked his last recordings with Red. 'The Shadow Of Your Smile' is quite exceptional, an elegantly crafted and intelligent response to the theme from The Sandpiper, which has often tempted even otherwise tasteful players into schmaltz. Here And Now, with the underrated Israels, still betrays some shades of the prison-house, a slight stiffness and irresolution, but it's difficult to make an absolute distinction between these records, which are pretty much form-guide performances from Hawes.

 High In The Sky Fresh Sound FSRCD059 Hawes; Leroy Vinnegar (b); Donald Bailey (d). 70.
A little-known album, originally released on Vault, and reissued on The Two Sides Of, this has an elemental freshness that suggests a personal or creative rejuvenation. Apart from the Bacharach–David 'Look Of Love', which opens the set, all the tunes are Hawes originals, including the ten-plus-minute title-cut. Unremarked even by Hawes fans, these are uplifting performances.

 Something Special Contemporary CCD 14072 Hawes; Denny Diaz (g); Leroy Vinnegar (b); Al Williams (d). 6/76.
 At The Piano Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 877 Hawes; Ray Brown (b); Shelly Manne (d). 8/76.
Hawes kept super-busy right to the end. There is certainly no deterioration in his work during the summer of 1976. Something Special is a particularly relaxed session, recorded almost on the beach at a club in Half Moon Bay, California. He had been working in commercial settings for some time and it was only on occasions like this that he could afford to slip back into straight jazz, though 'Fly Me To The Moon' has a quasi-pop feel to it. Also on the date was Denny Diaz, who had been working with Steely Dan and Al Williams and eventually gave up performance to manage Birdland West. Vinnegar, as ever, is poised and resourceful, and it is often he who provides the musical stimulus to the leader, prodding him on rhythmically and throwing in fresh melodic ideas. Not a classic, but a valuable document and meat and drink to Hawes fans.

Hawes seemed to find a measure of calm and contentment in the last year of his life, at least when there was a decent piano on offer. At The Piano is as good a place as any to take leave of him. The second round of duos with Charlie Haden was still ahead, but this is in effect the last session as leader and as generous a send-off as he could have organized. As so often over the last few years, Hampton relied on a powerful bass-player to reinforce the architecture of his changes playing. There are moments here, even on the relatively straight reading of 'Killing Me Softly With His Song', when the harmonic floor seems to drop out of the music. It's Brown who comes to the rescue every time. 'Blue In Green' and 'When I Grow Too Old To Dream' are sterling performances and the sound is balanced to perfection there and throughout.

Also, in brief:

 Blues The Most Prestige 11015. 58–76.
The emphasis falls entirely on the blues for this useful but one-dimensional selection; nothing new to entice the collector and the packaging doesn't yield up any fresh insights either.

 Plays Movie Musicals Fresh Sound FSRCD 063. 69.
A straightforward concept and some fine later-period trio playing.

(*) Northern Windows Plus Prestige 24278. 73, 74.
Two albums from the early '70s. Playin' In The Yard is a live trio from Montreux with Bob Cranshaw and Kenny Clarke, but you also have to sit through the whole unedifying span of Northern Windows, with orchestral arrangements by David Axelrod.

Coleman Hawkins (1901–69)

TENOR SAXOPHONE, VOICE

Born in St Joseph, Missouri, he played in Chicago as a teenager and joined singer Mamie Smith's band in 1921. His reputation took off after joining Fletcher Henderson in 1924, and he stayed for ten years, before a European sojourn which lasted until 1939. That same year he recorded one of the biggest of all jazz hits, 'Body And Soul'. Ran small groups in the '40s and also played with Jazz At The Philharmonic. Worked as a solo artist in the '50s and '60s and maintained an elder-statesman aplomb.

* Coleman Hawkins 1929–1934 Classics 587 Hawkins; Henry 'Red' Allen , Jack Purvis (t, v); Russell Smith, Bobby Stark (t); Muggsy Spanier (c); Glenn Miller, J. C. Higginbotham, Claude Jones, Dicky Wells (tb); Russell Procope, Hilton Jefferson, Jimmy Dorsey (cl, as); Pee Wee Russell (cl); Adrian Rollini (bsx); Red McKenzie (comb, v); Frank Froeba, Jack Russin, Horace Henderson, Buck Washington (p); Bernard Addison, Jack Bland, Will Johnson (g); George 'Pops' Foster , Al Morgan, John Kirby (b); Gene Krupa, Charles Kegley, Josh Billings, Walter Johnson (d). 11/29–3/34.
The first great role-model for all saxophonists began recording in 1922, but compilations of his earlier work usually start with his European sojourn in 1934. This valuable cross-section of the preceding five years shows Hawkins reaching a sudden maturity.

He was taking solos with Fletcher Henderson in 1923 and was already recognizably Hawkins, but the big sound and freewheeling rhythmic command weren't really evident until later. By 1929 he was one of the star soloists in the Henderson band – which he remained faithful to for over ten years – and the blazing improvisation on the first track here, 'Hello Lola' by Red McKenzie's Mound City Blue Blowers, indicates the extent of his confidence. But he still sounds tied to the underlying beat, and it isn't until the octet session of September 1933 that Hawkins establishes the gliding but muscular manner of his '30s music. The ensuing Horace Henderson date of October 1933 has a feast of great Hawkins, culminating in the astonishing extended solo on 'I've Got To Sing A Torch Song', with its baleful low honks and daring manipulation of the time. Three final duets with Buck Washington round out the disc, but an earlier session under the leadership of the trumpeter Jack Purvis must also be mentioned: in a curious line-up including Adrian Rollini and J. C. Higginbotham, Hawkins plays a dark, serious role.

 The Hawk In Europe ASV AJA 5054 Hawkins; Arthur Briggs, Noel Chiboust, Pierre Allier, Jack Bulterman, George Van Helvoirt (t); Benny Carter (t, as); Guy Paquinet, Marcel Thielemans, George Chisholm (tb); André Ekyan , Charles Lisée , Alix Combelle, Wim Poppink, Sal Doof, André Van der Ouderaa , Jimmy Williams (saxes); Stanley Black, Stéphane Grappelli , Nico De Rooy, Freddy Johnson (p); Albert Harris, Django Reinhardt, Jack Pet, Fritz Reinders, Ray Webb (g); Tiny Winters, Len Harrison, Eugène D'Hellemmes , Toon Diepenbroek (b); Maurice Chaillou, Kees Kranenburg, Tommy Benford, Robert Montmarche (d). 11/34–5/37.

(*) Coleman Hawkins 1934–1937 Classics 602 As above, except omit Carter, Williams, Johnson, Webb; add Henk Hinrichs (t); Ernst Hoellerhagen (cl, as); Omer De Cock, Hugo Peritz (ts); Ernest Berner, Theo Uden Masman (p); Billy Toffel (g); James Gobalet (b); Benny Peritz (d); Annie De Reuver (v). 11/34–37.

Hawkins arrived in England in March 1934 and stayed in the old world for five years. Most of his records from the period have him as featured soloist with otherwise strictly directed orchestras, and while this might have been occasionally discomforting – the routines on such as 'What Harlem Is To Me' with the Dutch group The Ramblers aren't much better than a suave variation on Armstrong's contemporary struggles – Hawkins was polishing a sophisticated, rhapsodic style into something as powerful as his more aggressive, earlier manner. Two sessions with Benny Carter, including the four tumultuous titles made by the All Star Jam Band, are included on the ASV set, while the Classics sticks to the chronology; but the ASV sound is much more mixed. Classics begin with four titles made in London with Stanley Black at the piano, continue with dates in The Hague, Paris and Laren, and add the little-known Zurich session which finds Hawkins singing on the fairly awful 'Love Cries'! A spirited 'Tiger Rag' makes amends, and there's a curiosity in an unidentified acetate (in very poor sound) to close the disc. 'I Wish I Were Twins', 'What A Difference A Day Made' and 'Netcha's Dream' are three examples of the lush but shrewdly handled and often risky solos which Hawkins creates on an instrument which had still only recently come of age.

* Coleman Hawkins 1937–1939 Classics 613 Hawkins; Jack Bulterman, George Van Helvoirt (t); Benny Carter (t, as); Maurice Thielemans (tb); Wim Poppink (cl, as); Alix Combelle, André Van der Ouderaa (cl, ts); Sal Doof (as); Nico De Rooy, Stephane Grappelli , Freddy Johnson (p); Fritz Reinders, Django Reinhardt (g); Jack Pet, Eugène D'Hellemmes (b); Tommy Benford, Kees Kranenburg, Maurice Van Cleef (d). 4/37–6/38.

* Coleman Hawkins In Europe Timeless CBC 1-006 As above discs. 11/34–5/39.

The last of Hawk's European recordings. The All Star Jam Band titles turn up here again, as well as a further session with The Ramblers, but otherwise the main interest is in ten titles with just Johnson (and van Cleef on the final six). 'Lamentation', 'Devotion' and 'Star Dust' are masterclasses in horn technique, Hawkins exploring the registers and feeling through the harmonies with complete control. The sound is good. The Timeless CD cherry-picks some of the best Hawkins of the '30s: the London quartet session of 1934, four tracks with The Berries, one with Reinhardt, five with The Ramblers, and a London pair with Jack Hylton from 1939. The very fine remastering is by John R. T. Davies.

(*) Coleman Hawkins 1939–1940 Classics 634 Hawkins; Tommy Lindsay, Joe Guy, Tommy Stevenson, Nelson Bryant (t); Benny Carter (t, as); Earl Hardy, J. C. Higginbotham, William Cato, Sandy Williams, Claude Jones (tb); Danny Polo (cl); Eustis Moore, Jackie Fields, Ernie Powell (as); Kermit Scott (ts); Gene Rodgers, Joe Sullivan (p); Ulysses Livingston (g, v); Lawrence Lucie, Bernard Addison, Gene Fields (g); William Oscar Smith, Artie Shapiro, Johnny Williams, Billy Taylor (b); Arthur Herbert, George Wettling, Walter Johnson, Big Sid Catlett, J. C. Heard (d); Thelma Carpenter, Jeanne Burns, Joe Turner, Gladys Madden (v). 10/39–8/40.

Hawkins didn't exactly return to the USA in triumph, but his eminence was almost immediately re-established with the astounding 'Body And Soul', which still sounds like the most spontaneously perfect of all jazz records. Fitted into the session as an afterthought (they had already cut 12 previous takes of 'Fine Dinner' and eight of 'Meet Doctor Foo'), this one-take, two-chorus improvisation is so completely realized, every note meaningful, the tempo ideal, the rhapsodic swing irresistible, and the sense of rising drama sustained to the final coda, that it still has the capacity to amaze new listeners, just like Armstrong's 'West End Blues' or Parker's 'Bird Gets The Worm'. A later track on the Classics CD, the little-known 'Dedication', revisits the same setting; although masterful in its way, it points up how genuinely immediate the greatest jazz is: it can't finally compare to the original. If the same holds good for the many later versions of the tune which Hawkins set down, his enduring variations on the structure (and it's intriguing to note that he only refers to the original melody in the opening bars of the 1939 reading – which didn't stop it from becoming a huge hit) say something about his own powers of renewal.

The Classics CD is let down by dubbing from some very surfacey originals, even though it includes some strong material – two Varsity Seven sessions with Carter and Polo, the aforementioned 'Dedication' and a 1940 date for OKeh which features some excellent tenor on 'Rocky Comfort' and 'Passin' It Around'.

(*) Rainbow Mist Delmark DD-459 Hawkins; Dizzy Gillespie, Vic Coulson, Ed Vandever (t); Leo Parker, Leonard Lowry (as); Georgie Auld, Ben Webster, Don Byas, Ray Abrams (ts); Budd Johnson (ts, bs); Clyde Hart, Bill Rowland (p); Hy White (g); Oscar Pettiford, Israel Crosby (b); Max Roach, Specs Powell (d). 2–5/44.

(*) Coleman Hawkins 1943–1944 Classics 807 As above, except add Cootie Williams, Roy Eldridge (t); Edmond Hall, Andy Fitzgerald (cl); Art Tatum, Ellis Larkins, Eddie Heywood (p); Al Casey, Jimmy Shirley (g); Shelly Manne, Max Roach (d). 12/43–2/44.

 Coleman Hawkins 1944 Classics 842 Similar to above discs. 2–5/44.

1944 was a busy year for Hawkins in the studios. His Keynote recordings have been reissued in various editions over the years, but the Mercury set which included the whole series has lately disappeared. The eight sessions have a number of all-star line-ups; particularly outstanding are two quartet dates with Wilson, the Sax Ensemble session with Smith, Carney and Byas, and a Cozy Cole group with Earl Hines. Hawkins plays on a consistently high level. The sessions now have to be located in the Classics series. Delmark's Rainbow Mist includes three sessions for Apollo. The first includes what's thought of as the first bop recording, 'Woody'N'You', which also features Gillespie's first modern solo, and 'Rainbow Mist' itself is a little-known but superb variation on the 'Body And Soul' chords. A sextet with Auld and Webster is the makeweight. Sound is quite good, though these weren't the liveliest of recordings.

Classics 807 includes some other excellent material: an Esquire All Stars date with Tatum in imperious form, and three sessions for Signature, with Hawk outstanding on 'The Man I Love', 'Sweet Lorraine' and 'Lover Come Back To Me'.

(*) Coleman Hawkins 1944–1945 Classics 863 Hawkins; Charlie Shavers, Jonah Jones, Buck Clayton, Howard McGhee (t); Eddie Barefield (cl, as); Edmond Hall (cl); Hilton Jefferson (as); Walter 'Foots' Thomas (ts); Clyde Hart, Thelonious Monk, Teddy Wilson, Sir Charles Thompson (p); Tiny Grimes (g); Billy Taylor, Edward Bass Robinson, Oscar Pettiford, Milt Hinton, Slam Stewart (b); Denzil Best, Cozy Cole (d). 7/44–1/45.

* Coleman Hawkins 1945 Classics 926 Hawkins; Howard McGhee, Dick Vance (t); Vic Dickenson, Tyree Glenn (tb); Hilton Jefferson (as); Sir Charles Thompson, Billy Taylor, Art Tatum (p); Allan Reuss, Al Casey (g); Oscar Pettiford, John Simmons (b); Denzil Best, Big Sid Catlett (d); Matthew Meredith (v). 1/44–10/45.

The merit of the Classics discs is the way they catch sessions that have been missed off other Hawkins collections. Classics 863 includes some of the final dates for Keynote but adds four tracks where Hawkins guested with a Walter Thomas group, a septet date with Shavers and Hall (lovely rhapsodizing on 'All The Things You Are'), four quartet tracks with Monk (though the pianist is disappointingly unexceptional) and a final date where Howard McGhee begins the fruitful association that would blossom on the Capitol sessions.

These form the bulk of Classics 926 and make it essential. The dozen titles were made on a recording trip to LA, with McGhee an ebullient and simpatico partner: 'Rifftide' and 'Stuffy' show the older man relishing the challenge of McGhee's almost-bop pyrotechnics, although the sly intrusions of Vic Dickenson on four other titles are just as effective, and Pettiford and Best are a crackling rhythm section. Excellent sound. Four titles with a Sid Catlett group are less valuable, but there are two intriguing bonuses: a two-part a cappella solo for the Selmer label, comprising some themeless variations (though 'Body And Soul' never seems far away), and a glimpse of Hawkins with Art Tatum on a V-Disc of 'My Ideal'.

(*) Coleman Hawkins 1946–1947 Classics 984 Hawkins; Charlie Shavers, Buck Clayton, Miles Davis (t); J. J. Johnson, Kai Winding (tb); Pete Brown, Porter Kilbert (as); Allen Eager (ts); Harry Carney (bs); Hank Jones, Jimmy Jones, Teddy Wilson (p); Milt Jackson (vib); Mary Osborne, John Collins, Chuck Wayne (g); Al McKibbon, Chubby Jackson, Curley Russell, Jack Lesberg (b); Shelly Manne, Shadow Wilson, Max Roach (d); Delores Martin, Leslie Scott (v). 2/46–10/47.

(*) Coleman Hawkins 1947–1950 Classics 1162 Hawkins; Fats Navarro, Erik 'Skippy' Hansen (t); J. J. Johnson, Benny Green, Nat Peck (tb); Budd Johnson, Hubert Fol (as); Frank Jensen (ts); Marion Di Veta (bs); Hank Jones, Al Haig, Jean-Paul Mangeon, Leo Mathisen, Billy Taylor (p); Chuck Wayne, John Collins (g); Jack Lesberg, Nelson Boyd, Pierre Michelot, Erik Kirschner, Percy Heath (b); Max Roach, Shadow Wilson, Kenny Clarke, Gorm Lertoft, Art Blakey (d). 12/47–8/50.

Again, the Classics sequence mixes up well-known material with interesting obscurities, making both of these musts for Hawkins specialists. Classics 984 starts with two fine sessions for Victor, one a boppish foray with Allen Eager spelling Hawk on two titles, the other an Esquire Award Winners group where Hawkins, Johnson and Clayton are terrific across four titles. Then a classic date with Navarro and Johnson featuring the debut of Monk's 'I Mean You', two obscure tracks with Delores Martin singing, four for Aladdin with Miles Davis and Kai Winding (Hawk superb on 'Isn't It Romantic') and four ballads by Leslie Scott, with the tenorman taking some beatific solos. Classics 1162 is almost as appealing a mix: it starts with the other top-notch date with Navarro and Johnson ('Half Step Down, Please' especially), then goes to the celebrated tenor solo on 'Picasso', a variation on his 'Body And Soul' matrix. Four almost R&B-ish titles for Mercury follow, before some dates in Paris, two tracks from a stopover in Copenhagen and four big-toned ballads cut for the Royal Roost label on his return to New York. No matter what the context, Hawkins plays with authority: the most striking thing to take away from all these various dates is the huge sound he made, even alongside the likes of Navarro.

(*) The Hawk In Hi-Fi Bluebird 63842-2 Hawkins; Billy Byers orchestra including Charlie Shavers (t); Zoot Sims, Al Cohn (ts); Hank Jones (p). 56.

A scrupulous reissue of a superficially slight Hawkins session, the excellent remastered sound brings the occasion vividly back to life (complete with a long string of discarded takes, some of them worth keeping). Byers's charts on a dozen tunes – mostly standards, but also a couple of blues and a reworking of 'Bean And The Boys' – are slightly more interesting than those for the easy-listening audience, and from the fresh take on 'Body And Soul' onwards, Hawkins sounds keen and interested. A fine sleeve-note by Jeff Sultanof sets the contemporary scene very nicely.

(*) The Genius Of Coleman Hawkins Verve 539065-2 Hawkins; Oscar Peterson (p); Herb Ellis (g); Ray Brown (b); Alvin Stoller (d). 57.

* Coleman Hawkins Encounters Ben Webster Verve 521427-2 As above, except add Ben Webster (ts). 3/59.

 Coleman Hawkins & Confreres Verve 835255-2 As above, except add Roy Eldridge (t); Hank Jones (p); George Duvivier (b); Mickey Sheen (d). 10/57–2/58.

 At The Opera House Verve 521641-2 Hawkins; Roy Eldridge (t); J. J. Johnson (tb); Stan Getz, Lester Young (ts); John Lewis, Oscar Peterson (p); Percy Heath (b); Connie Kay (d). 9–10/57.

(*) Coleman Hawkins: Verve Jazz Masters 34 Verve 521586-2 As above Verve discs, except add Cecil Payne (bs); Al Haig, Tommy Flanagan, Teddy Wilson (p); John Collins (g); Major Locke, John Kirby, Israel Crosby, Nelson Boyd (b); Big Sid Catlett, Buddy Rich, Eddie Locke, Shadow Wilson, Cozy Cole (d). 44–62.

Hawkins and Webster are incomparable together. On some of Encounters they seem to be vying to see who could sound, first, more nasty and, second, more charming. But there's an undercurrent of mutual feeling that makes 'It Never Entered My Mind' as moving as anything in Hawkins's discography. Ben is alternately respectful and keen to make his own points, and the rhythm section play up to their names. The new Master Edition of this session sounds very handsome. The Genius Of is only marginally less appealing: too many ballads, perhaps, when a couple of stompers would have put some more beef in the session, but the playing is very fine and, with a raft of extra material – three previously unissued tracks and various mono versions – that makes this Master Edition in Verve's series particularly attractive. And Confreres takes a couple of tracks off those sessions and puts them with a studio date with Eldridge: not a classic encounter, and Hawkins's tone sounds like solid granite on 'Hanid', but some agreeable music. Their Opera House meeting was recorded at two shows, one in stereo and one in mono, and the horns are in jousting mood, with the imperturbable MJQ rhythm section as a bonus. A 15-minute jam on 'Stuffy', with Getz and Young, comes from another JATP show.

The Jazz Masters disc rounds up Hawkins from various Verve and Keynote dates, with an especially valuable addition in the 'Picasso' a cappella solo from 1947.

* The Hawk Flies High Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 027 Hawkins; Idrees Sulieman (t); J. J. Johnson (tb); Hank Jones (p); Barry Galbraith (g); Oscar Pettiford (b); Jo Jones (d). 3/57.

(*) Soul Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 096 Hawkins; Ray Bryant (p); Kenny Burrell (g); Wendell Marshall (b); Osie Johnson (d). 1/58.

 Hawk Eyes Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 294 Hawkins; Charlie Shavers (t); Ray Bryant (p); Tiny Grimes (g); George Duvivier (b); Osie Johnson (d). 4/59.

(*) Coleman Hawkins With The Red Garland Trio Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 418 Hawkins; Red Garland (p); Doug Watkins (b); Specs Wright (d). N.D.

(*) At Ease With Coleman Hawkins Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 181 Hawkins; Tommy Flanagan (p); Wendell Marshall (b); Osie Johnson (d). 1/60.

 Night Hawk Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 420 Hawkins; Eddie 'Lockjaw' Davis (ts); Tommy Flanagan (p); Ron Carter (b); Gus Johnson (d). 12/60.

 The Hawk Relaxes Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 709 Hawkins; Ronnell Bright (p); Kenny Burrell (g); Ron Carter (b); Andrew Cyrille (d). 2/61.

 Jam Session In Swingville Prestige 24051 Hawkins; Joe Newman (t); Vic Dickenson, J. C. Higginbotham (tb); Jimmy Hamilton, Pee Wee Russell (cl); Hilton Jefferson (as); Al Sears, Buddy Tate (ts); Claude Hopkins, Cliff Jackson (p); Danny Barker, Tiny Grimes (g); Joe Benjamin, Wendell Marshall (b); Bill English, J. C. Heard (d). 4–5/61.

(*) In A Mellow Tone Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 6001 Variously as above. 58–61.

Hawkins's records for Riverside and Prestige revived a career in decline and reasserted his authority at a time when many of the older tenor voices – Lester Young, Don Byas – were dying or in eclipse. Hawkins could still feel at home with immediate contemporaries – the same year he made The Hawk Flies High, he cut tracks with Red Allen and a Fletcher Henderson reunion band – but the younger players represented by J. J. Johnson and Idrees Sulieman on Flies High were a greater challenge; the tenorman responds, not by updating his style, but by shaping it to fit the context. The rhythm sections on these records are crucial, particularly the drummers: Jo Jones, Osie Johnson and Gus Johnson were men after Hawk's own heart, and their bass drum accents underscore the saxophonist's own rhythmical language.

Hawkins keeps abreast of the times, but he doesn't really change to suit them. The Hawk Flies High was an astonishingly intense beginning, almost a comeback record and one in which Hawkins plays with ferocious spirit. The notes claim that he picked all his companions on the date, and Sulieman and Johnson were intriguing choices: it brings out the bluesman in each of them rather than the bopper, and both seldom played with this kind of bite. 'Laura' is a peerless ballad, but it's the blues on 'Juicy Fruit' and 'Blue Light' which really dig in. Soul, though sometimes rattling uneasily over prototypical soul-jazz grooves courtesy of Burrell and Bryant, isn't much less intense, and 'Soul Blues' and the bewilderingly harsh 'I Hadn't Anyone Till You' are classic set-pieces. Hawk Eyes brings in Grimes and Charlie Shavers, though to sometimes hysterical effect: Hawkins's opening solo on 'C'mon In' is carved out of solid rock, but Shavers's preposterous bawling soon takes the pith out of the music.

The trio sessions with Garland and Flanagan are hot and cool respectively, and they prove that Hawkins could fill all the front-line space a producer could give him. The force he puts into his phrasing in this period sometimes undoes the flawless grip he once had over vibrato and line, but these are living sessions of improvised jazz. Night Hawk is a good-natured five-round contest with Lockjaw Davis, who was virtually suckled on the sound of Hawkins's tenor, and there's plenty of fun if no great revelations and little of the intuitive empathy with Webster (see above). The Hawk Relaxes puts him back with Kenny Burrell on a more peaceable programme, and there are no problems here. As a sequence of tenor albums, there aren't many this strong, in any jazz style. Jam Session In Swingville is more lightweight and finds Hawkins in a situation which he had more or less given up. The two bands involved (Hawkins is the only common name) each have their share of mavericks and straight men and, if the results are patchy, Hawkins, Russell and Dickenson in particular all have moments worth savouring.

CORE COLLECTION

* The Stanley Dance Sessions

Lone Hill Jazz LHJ 10189 Hawkins; Buck Clayton, Roy Eldridge (t); Hank Jones (p); Ray Brown, George Duvivier, Wendell Marshall (b); Mickey Sheen, Shadow Wilson (d). 11/55–7/58.

The first six tracks here constitute one of the classic Hawkins LPs, The High And Mighty Hawk, once issued on Felsted. Hawkins and Clayton front a swinging quintet and they open with a monumental blues performance, 'Bird Of Prey Blues', that runs for 11 gripping minutes. Lone Hill have chosen to fill up the CD with four tracks cut a few days earlier, with Eldridge replacing Clayton, as well as two incongruous inclusions from a 1955 New York concert where the tenorman blows a minute or so of a cappella sax before a fine 'The Man I Love'. Bits and pieces, but hard to beat as a representation of Hawk in his best latter-day form.

 Perdido Uptown UPCD 2745 Hawkins; Ted Donnelly (tb); Norman Lester (p); Leon Spann (b); Jerry Potter (d). 4/58.

 Bean Stalkin' Pablo 2310-933 Hawkins; Roy Eldridge (t); Benny Carter (as); Don Byas (ts); Lou Levy, Lalo Schifrin (p); Herb Ellis (g); Max Bennett, Art Davis (b); Gus Johnson, Jo Jones (d). 10–11/60.

 Masters Of Jazz Vol. 12: Coleman Hawkins Storyville SL4112 Hawkins; Billy Taylor, Bud Powell, Kenny Drew (p); Oscar Pettiford, Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen (b); Kenny Clarke, Albert 'Tootie' Heath , Jo Jones (d). 11/54–2/68.

Live recordings from this period find Hawkins in variable but usually imposing form. His tone had hardened and much of his old fluency had been traded for a hard-bitten, irascible delivery which placed force over finesse. But he was still Hawkins, and still a great improviser, weatherbeaten but defiant. The meeting with Powell found him in flag-waving form (the rest is odds and ends), and the two European sets on Bean Stalkin' are strong.

The most remarkable of all these sets is the Uptown disc, Perdido. The music itself is average – Hawkins playing with an out-of-town group at a students' ball in Jamestown – but the documentation is absolutely fascinating. The producers have transcribed the (often barely audible) onstage talk between the musicians and run it in the booklet, like a playscript. As an insight into the working musician's lot it gets a priority mark: Hawkins was clearly unhappy about the six-hour drive to the gig, the band and the circumstances, but his kingly demeanour ensured that he still gave a great performance and refused to undersell his own work. Donnelly died only weeks after the gig and the rest of the band are obscure, but it's still a remarkable disc.

* Today And Now Impulse! 051184-2 Hawkins; Tommy Flanagan (p); Major Holley (b); Eddie Locke (d). 9/62.

 Desafinado Impulse! 051227-2 Hawkins; Tommy Flanagan (p); Barry Galbraith, Howard Collins (g); Major Holley (b); Eddie Locke (d); Willie Rodriguez (perc). 10/62.

Despite the unpromising material on Today And Now, Hawkins is at his most engaging. He seems to love 'Put On Your Old Grey Bonnet' and sounds as if he could play all night on it. 'Love Song From Apache' is distinguished by the loveliest of introductions by Tommy Flanagan, and Hawkins only has to breathe through the melody to make it work. There is little of the quaver in his tone that makes some of his later records bothersome, and nobody's coasting.

Desafinado is disappointing in its way. Hawkins gets a sympathetic setting and a sense of time passing at just the pace he wants; still, like most such records of the period, it's finally little more than an easy-listening set with the saxophonist adding a few characteristic doodles of his own.

 Supreme Enja 9009-2 Hawkins; Barry Harris (p); Gene Taylor (b); Roy Brooks (d). 9/66.

(*) Sirius Original Jazz Classics OJC 861 Hawkins; Barry Harris (p); Bob Cranshaw (b); Eddie Locke (d). 12/66.

There's no need to be sentimental about Hawkins's later recordings: it's not as if his life was a tragic spiral, the way Young's or Holiday's was, and if his playing was audibly impaired in his final years he was doing his best not to reveal it. Supreme, a live session released for the first time, finds him in Baltimore, still playing chorus after chorus on 'Lover Come Back To Me' to open with. If this 'Body And Soul' has only a halting majesty about it, the phrasing broken into pieces, majesty there still is. Harris comps with the utmost sensitivity, and by the time of the playful treatment of 'Ow!' at the close it sounds as though the players have enjoyed it. Sirius is more hesitant still, and perhaps this isn't the way to wind up a Hawkins discography; but that is what it currently does.

(*) The Centennial Collection Bluebird 82876 60087 2CD/DVD Hawkins, plus various line-ups, mostly as listed above. 29–63.

RCA Victor may not have had all of Hawkins's best work in their archives, but they were the only company to pay homage to the father of the jazz saxophone in his centenary years. This very enjoyable set offers 20 tracks that go as far back as 'Hello Lola' with the Mound City Blue Blowers and come into the modern era with Hawk trading licks with Sonny Rollins on 'Just Friends'. The DVD includes some rare footage of the master at work on '50s television, doing 'Wild Man Blues' with Henry Allen and a lovely 'Lover Man'. Even if you have most or all of the music this makes a very appealing buy.

Also, in brief:

 The Radio Days 1940 Jazz Unlimited 201 2075. 8/41.

Airshots by Hawkins's short-lived big band. There were some strong soloists in the band, but they're not heard to much advantage in what is really a vehicle for the leader and little else.

 1949 Lausanne TCB 02132. 12/49.

Alive and well in Switzerland. Hawkins strolls on stage for 'Rifftide' and quickly establishes his authority.

 At The Golden Circle 1963 Dragon DRCD 265. 1/50–2/63.

There are tracks from as far back as 1950 too. The material is mostly Hawkins favourites, played to varying degrees of interest.

(*) Bean And The Boys High Note HCD 7075. 5/50–9/58.

A ragged collection of bits and pieces from the '50s, with Hawk showing some frailties.

 The Complete Jazztone Recordings 1954 Fresh Sound FSR-CD 347. 11/54.

A dozen standards made for the small label, and it's all meat and drink to Hawkins, but the set's low voltage when he isn't playing.

 At Art Ford's Jazz Party J&M 8001. 9–10/58.

A selection of jams and party-pieces from a regular radio and television broadcast series, featuring Hawk getting together with old and new chums: and ailing Pres totters through 'Mean To Me' and Hawk shows him up with a blustery 'Indian Summer'. An inevitable 'Body And Soul' has conscientious intensity. Among new friends, Kai Winding, the Adderleys, even Rolf Kühn are in the mix.

(*) The Best Of Coleman Hawkins Prestige 5704-2. 7/58–1/62.

Tracks from 11 different albums.

Erskine Hawkins (1914–93)

TRUMPET

Alabama-born, he made his start as an Armstrong disciple, and he began fronting his own band in the mid-'30s. It survived the decline of the swing era and he switched to small groups only in the mid-'50s, working the 'society' end of jazz and the odd festival.

 Erskine Hawkins 1936–1938 Classics 653 Collective personnel for first five discs: Hawkins; Sammy Lowe, Wilbur Bascomb, Marcellus Green, James Harris, Charles Jones, Willie Moore, Robert Johnson (t); Edward Sims, Robert Range, Richard Harris, Norman Greene, David James, Donald Cole (tb); William Johnson, Jimmy Mitchell, Bobby Smith (cl, as); Julian Dash, Paul Bascomb, Aaron Maxwell (ts); Haywood Henry (cl, bs); Avery Parrish, Ace Harris (p); William McLemore, Leroy Kirkland (g); Leemie Stanfield (b); James Morrison, Edward McConney, Kelly Martin (d). 7/36–9/38.

 Erskine Hawkins 1938–1939 Classics 667 Similar to above. 9/38–10/39.

 Erskine Hawkins 1939–1940 Classics 678 Similar to above. 10/39–11/40.

 Erskine Hawkins 1940–1941 Classics 701 Similar to above. 11/40–12/41.

 Erskine Hawkins 1941–1945 Classics 868 Similar to above. 12/41–11/45.

 Erskine Hawkins 1946–1947 Classics 1008 Similar to above, except add Bill Flood, Reunald Jones (t); Matthew Gee, Bob Range, Ray Hogan (tb); Frank Derrick (as); Aaron Maxwell (bs, ts); Ace Harris, Don Michael (p); Joe Murphy (d); Ruth Christian, Laura Washington (v). 4/46–12/47.

 Erskine Hawkins 1947–1949 Classics 1148 Hawkins; Sammy Lowe, Willie Moore, Robert Johnson, Charles Jones, James Harris, Idrees Sulieman (t); Matthew Gee, Bob Range, David James, Edward Sims, Ray Hogan, Michael Wood, Rene Hall (tb); Frank Derrick, Bobby Smith (as); Jimmy Mitchell (as, v); Julian Dash, Stretch Ridley (ts); Haywood Henry (bs, ts, cl); Aaron Maxwell (bs, ts); Don Michael, Jimmy Phipps (p); Leroy Kirkland (g); Lennie Stanfield (b); Joe Murphy, Edward McConney (d); Laura Washington (v). 12/47–11/49.

 Erskine Hawkins 1950–1951 Classics 1257 Hawkins; Sammy Lowe, Idrees Sulieman, Bobby Johnson, James Harris (t); Bob Range, Booty Wood, Rene Hall, Matthew Gee, Andy Penn, Ted Donnelly, George Matthews (tb); Jimmy Mitchell (as, v); Bobby Smith, Rudy Powell (as); Julian Dash, Stretch Ridley, Robert Green (ts); Haywood Henry (bs); Ace Harris (p, v); Jimmy Phipps (p); Leroy Kirkland (g); Lee Stanfield (b); Edmund McConney, Sonny Payne (d). 1/50–2/51.

They called him the 'Twentieth-century Gabriel' and, although Erskine Hawkins was at heart only a Louis Armstrong disciple, his records stand up remarkably well. The band was popular with black audiences in the '30s and '40s, staying in residence at Harlem's Savoy Ballroom for close to ten years and delivering a smooth and gently swinging music ideal for dancing. Hawkins's rhapsodic high-note style has been criticized, but his was a strain of black romanticism which predates the work of later Romeos such as Billy Eckstine. Besides, the band had a number of good soloists, including Julian Dash, Paul Bascomb and Avery Parrish, who, with Sam Lowe, arranged most of the material.

Swing specialists may want to invest in the chronological series on Classics; the sound's OK. If the music is comparatively bland, it's absolutely reliable, a painless experience even over this length. The first CD documents Hawkins's sometimes uncertain but still swinging early sessions for Vocalion (as 'Erskine Hawkins And His 'Bama State Collegians') and goes up to his first session for Bluebird in 1938. There are many fine tracks to discover, including 'Hot Platter' (Classics 667), 'Baltimore Bounce' and 'Uptown Shuffle' (Classics 678) and 'No Use Squawkin'' (Classics 701); but it's the high professionalism of the section playing and the crisp, no-waste arrangements that make one wonder why Hawkins has been neglected in favour of Jimmie Lunceford or even Basie. Admittedly, his vocalists were never up to much. Classics 868 takes the sequence up to November 1945 and, although that includes the 30-month gap of the recording ban, Hawkins's style scarcely bothers to change. The outstanding tracks here are, as usual, the instrumentals: Sammy Lowe's excellent chart for 'Bear Mash Blues', one of the great Hawkins records, 'Tippin' In' and 'Drifting Along'. A Basie-like certitude is here in abundance. Classics 1008 shows that, even though its era was slipping away, the Hawkins band was far from finished. 'Sneakin' Out' and 'Feelin' Low' are Ellingtonian in their execution, Bobby Smith's alto adopting the Hodges style to his own ends, and though there are plenty of the inevitable vocal features, a couple of pleasing charts such as 'Coast To Coast' and 'Sammy's Nightmare' sneak by.

Classics 1148 takes Hawkins up to the end of the '40s: R&B set-pieces such as 'Corn Bread' are starting to creep into the band-book, and there are still notably hot instrumentals in 'Gabriel's Heater' and 'Fish Tail' with a ripe solo from old faithful, Haywood Henry. Laura Washington is very appealing on 'I'd Love To Make Love To You'. Classics 1257 takes him into the '50s: there were two final sessions for Victor, and then they began recording for Coral, where they began with remakes of 'Tuxedo Junction' and 'Bear Mash Blues'. The last Victors include material made for a set called W C Handy For Dancing and there's a curiously hipsterish update of Irvin Berlin's 'Always'. No new ground was broken here: Hawkins stuck by his swing-era principles.

Edgar Hayes (1904–79)

PIANO

He studied music at college and led his own bands in the South during the '20s, joining the Mills Blue Rhythm band in 1932. He led another orchestra in 1937–41. His late years were spent in California.

 Edgar Hayes 1937–1938 Classics 730 Hayes; Bernie Flood (t, v); Henry Goodwin, Shelton Hemphill, Leonard Davis (t); Robert Horton, Clyde Bernhardt, John 'Shorty' Haughton , David 'Jelly' James , Joe Britton (tb); Rudy Powell (cl, as); Roger Boyd, Stanley Palmer, Alfred Skerritt (as); Joe Garland (ts, bs); Crawford Wethington, William Mitchner (ts); Andy Jackson, Eddie Gibbs (g); Elmer James, Frank 'Coco' Darling (b); Kenny Clarke (d, vib); Orlando Roberson, Earlene Howell, Bill Darnell, Ruth Ellington (v). 3/37–1/38.

 Edgar Hayes 1938–1948 Classics 1053 Hayes; Bernard Flood, Henry Goodwin, Leonard Davis (t); Robert Horton, David James, Clyde Bernhardt (tb); Rudy Powell (cl, as); Roger Boyd (as); William 'Happy' Mitchner (ts); Joe Garland (bs, ts); Eddie Gibbs, Teddy Bunn (g); Frank 'Coco' Darling , Willie Price (b); Kenny Clarke (d, vib); Bryant Allen (d); James Clay Anderson (v). 2/38–48.

Hayes led a very good orchestra. They had a big hit in 1937 with 'Star Dust', not one of their best records. There were good soloists: trombonist Horton was exemplary on both muted and open horn, Garland could play tenor, baritone and bass sax and arrange with equal facility, and Goodwin's trumpet shines; the rhythm section could boast the young Kenny Clarke, already trying to swing his way out of conventional big-band drumming. There are too many indifferent vocals, and some of the material is glum, but much of the first volume stands up to a close listen. The second disc picks up the story with a final Decca, but that was more or less the end of the Hayes story as far as big-band records were concerned. There are four titles made in Stockholm a month later under Clarke's nominal leadership, a sextet date where Clarke plays only vibes and Goodwin and Powell sound fine. The rest are tracks by Hayes and rhythm section alone, for V-Disc, Exclusive and Modern, obscure pieces that depend heavily on the blues; they're features for Bunn as much as Hayes, but that's no bad thing.

Louis Hayes (born 1937)

DRUMS

Born in Detroit. He spent periods with several of the key hard-bop leaders: Yusef Lateef, Horace Silver and (for six years) Cannonball Adderley. In the '80s he emerged as a leader of considerable if unassuming stature.

 Light And Lively Steeplechase SCCD 31245 Hayes; Charles Tolliver (t); Bobby Watson (as); Kenny Barron (p); Clint Houston (b). 4/89.

(*) Una Max Steeplechase SCCD 31263 Hayes; Charles Tolliver (t); Gerald Hayes (as); John Stubblefield (ts); Kenny Barron (p); Clint Houston (b). 12/89.

(*) The Crawl Candid CCD 79045 Hayes; Charles Tolliver (t); Gary Bartz (as); John Stubblefield (ss, ts); Mickey Tucker (p); Clint Houston (b). 10/89.

(*) Nightfall Steeplechase SCCD 31285 Hayes; Eddie E. J. Allen (t); Gerald Hayes (as); Larry Willis (p); Clint Houston (b). 1/91.

(*) Blue Lou Steeplechase SCCD 31340 Hayes; Eddie E. J. Allen (t); Gerald Hayes (as); Javon Jackson (ts); Ronnie Mathews (p); Clint Houston (b). 4/93.

Louis Hayes remains one of the master hard-bop drummers, a key figure in the Detroit community and a player whose undemonstrative virtue of playing for the band has told against his wider reputation. The fine Steeplechase sequence found him making a serious mark as leader for the first time. Besides Hayes's own playing the first point of interest is the return of Tolliver to active duty after a number of years away. He sounds rusty on Light And Lively, but the two later records are better showcases for him. Watson is a shade too slick for the company on the first record, but Una Max is a record that grows in stature on repeated hearings: Stubblefield is in the mood for some grand oratory, Tolliver's spacious solos accumulate strength, and the rougher, unpredictable alto of the younger Hayes is an interesting wild card. The Candid set, recorded live and reissued in 2007, is an atmospheric occasion and although Bartz sounds a little sour, there is still some fiery hard bop in the programme. Back in the studio for Nightfall, Hayes assembles a fresh front line: Allen's trumpet is less immediately distinctive than Tolliver's, but he has a very impressive solo on 'I Waited For You', and Hayes and Willis are in buoyant form. Besides that, the drummer's evolving command seems to be inspiring his own playing to new heights.

Blue Lou continues the exceptional run at Steeplechase; all three horns make fine contributions, and what registers strongly is the bustle and impetus of Hayes's group – a Blakey trademark which Louis seems intent on following through. 'Quiet Fire' is a classic example of what Hayes's bands can do, the soloists brimming with fire and excitement. Mathews is a vital recruit.

(*) Louis At Large Sharp Nine 1003-2 Hayes; Riley Mullins (t); Javon Jackson (ts); David Hazeltine (p); Santi Debriano (b). 4/96.

 Quintessential Lou TCB 99652 As above, except omit Jackson; add Abraham Burton (ts). 3/99.

Louis At Large was Hayes's first American set as leader for many years. Mullins and Jackson are keen to please in the front line, but perhaps the most interesting performer here is Hazeltine, who builds on the good impression of his own records. The tunes offer some surprisingly strong originals from various hands – no simple hard-bop blues lines but genuine themes – and Hayes is clearly delighted at the shape the band's in.

Quintessential Lou is a shade less involving, though hard to say why – Burton is a characterful substitute for Jackson and the combo is on its mettle as standard-bearers of a hard-bop tradition. But there's a rote feel to some of this. Only two originals from within the ranks of the band and, although they choose such genre rarities as Sonny Rollins's 'Decision', the playing has settled into a measure of routine.

 The Candy Man TCB 20972 Hayes; Riley Mullins (t); Abraham Burton (ts); David Hazeltine (p); Santi Debriano (b). 11/99.

(*) Dreamin' Of Cannonball TCB 21222 Hayes; Jeremy Pelt (t); Vincent Herring (as); Rick Germanson (p); Vincent Archer (b). 5/01.

The Candy Man is another workmanlike performance which can't quite find a transforming spark of surprise. With this possibly in his mind, Hayes went on to form the all-new Cannonball Legacy Band. Nobody's better equipped than Hayes to boss such a concept, but he's helped no end by the horns. Herring is a natural for the alto role, tonally close to the great man and as easily adept with the licks, but he's been himself for long enough to make sure that this isn't just copycat playing. The real impact, though, is made by Pelt, a hot discovery and a soloist who pushes for the limit from bar one. His explosive attack on Victor Feldman's 'The Chant' really lifts the music up a notch, and that excitement percolates through the record.

Also, in brief:

 Ichi-Ban Timeless 102. 5/76.

Co-led with Junior Cook (ts) and with Woody Shaw (t) shining, it's another unassumingly fine set.

(*) Lausanne 1977: Swiss Radio Days TCB 02052. 77.

Stolen by co-leader Woody Shaw (t), but still a fine showing by the drummer.

 The Super Quartet Timeless 424. 2/94.

Perhaps not as vintage as the title promises, but a cracking neo-hard-bop date.

Tubby Hayes (1935–73)

TENOR, BARITONE AND ALTO SAXOPHONES, FLUTE, VIBES, PIANO

Born in London, he was a prodigy who took up saxophone at 11 and made his recording debut at 16 with Kenny Baker. He co-led the Jazz Couriers with Ronnie Scott in the '50s and visited New York in 1961. His eminence on the British scene was eclipsed by the pop boom and his final years were troubled by illness.

 The Swinging Giant Volume 1 Jasmine JASCD 610 Hayes; Jimmy Deuchar, Dickie Hawdon, Dave Usdon (t); Mike Senn (as, bs); Jackie Sharpe (ts, bs); Harry South (p); Pete Blannin (b); Lennie Breslow, Bill Eyden (d). 3–7/55.

(*) The Swinging Giant Volume 2 Jasmine JASCD 617 Hayes; Dickie Hawdon (t); Ronnie Scott (ts); Harry South, Terry Shannon (p); Pete Elderfield, Phil Bates (b); Bill Eyden (d). 7/56–8/57.

(*) The First And Last Words Jasmine JASCD 626 As above, except omit Hawdon, South, Elderfield; add Jimmy Deuchar (t); Kenny Napper (b); Phil Seamen (d). 8/57–7/59.

 Portrait Ember CD009 Hayes; Jimmy Deuchar (t); Alan Branscombe (as, ts, vib); Ronnie Scott (ts); Bill LeSage (p, vib); Terry Shannon (p); Phil Bates, Lennie Bush, Jack Fallon (b); Tony Crombie, Bill Eyden, Tony Kinsey (d). 57–61.

 Couriers of Jazz! – England's Greatest Combo Fresh Sound FSRCD 1620 Hayes; Ronnie Scott (ts); Terry Shannon (p); Jeff Clyne (b); Bill Eyden (d). 58.

* The Eighth Wonder Jasmine JASCD 611 Hayes; Terry Shannon (p); Phil Bates, Jeff Clyne (b); Bill Eyden, Phil Seamen (d). 3–12/59.

Tubby Hayes has often been lionized as the greatest saxophonist Britain ever produced. He is a fascinating but problematic player. With a big, rumbustious tone and flurries of 16th notes, Hayes often left a solo full of brilliant loose ends and ingenious runs that led nowhere in particular. Most of his recordings, while highly entertaining as exhibitions of sustained energy, tend to wobble on the axis of Hayes's creative impasse. His studio records consistently fall short of the masterpiece he originally seemed destined to make.

His '50s sessions for Tony Hall's Tempo label have at last made their way to CD via Jasmine, though remastering is no more than fair and the designs cheap-looking. Besides Hayes himself, there are glimpses of a whole school of players whose music, especially in this period, was scarcely documented at all away from mere studio work. But it's Hayes himself that most will want to hear. The first, Swinging Giant, is made up of tracks from five (very rare) EPs, and spotlights the 20-year-old Tubbs already going majestically through the gears on the likes of 'Peace Pipe', a whirling amalgam of Zoot Sims and some of the more individual hard-bop tenors. Following his paciest lines is particularly interesting, since though they're never quite 'resolved' they're outside mere pattern-playing too.

The second volume couples the quintet date, After Lights Out, with the first half of a Jazz Couriers album. Dickie Hawdon sounds almost excessively brassy on the quintet session, though that may be down to the original recording; but Hayes loves the setting and he is wonderful to hear on 'Message To The Messengers' and 'Hall Hears The Blues'. The Jazz Couriers were based around the tenor one-two of Scott and Hayes, which was often agreeably complementary, although Scott's bluesier sound and (at times) more circumspect phrasing could occasionally show up his younger colleague. The First And Last Words is often great fun in the manner of some of the Sims–Cohn sessions, although Hayes also picks up flute and vibes for contrast (he was an irrepressible multi-instrumentalist). Two bonus tracks, including Tubby's original 'Monk Was Here', are taken from an almost mythically rare cardboard 7-inch record.

The Ember disc hasn't a clinker on it and includes some important early Tubbs material, including much of the long-deleted London Jazz Quartet LP. This is a must for collectors who haven't much of the old vinyl and it's a very decent representation of the period for everyone else. There's a good smattering of Jazz Couriers material, but the Fresh Sound disc is also essential, with Tubbs and Ronnie Scott duking it out on 'Stop The World, I Want To Get Off' and 'The Monk'. Formerly on Carlton.

The Eighth Wonder gets top rating: most of it comes from the sessions for Tubby's Groove, perhaps Hayes's most ebullient showcase. It's true that the virtuosity of 'Tin Tin Deo' comes out of his horn all too easily, almost as if it were a routine he'd mastered without thinking, but it's hard not to enjoy the spectacle; and there is much tough-minded improvising on the date too, especially in the magnificent feast he makes out of 'Blue Hayes'. The other figure to listen to here is Terry Shannon, hardly recalled these days but one of Britain's most capable small-group pianists.

(*) Tubbs Impressed/Re-pressed 983 1887 Hayes; unidentified personnel. 61.

It surely wouldn't have strained Universal's resources to provide a full personnel for this, the first of Tubby's Fontana recordings. The reissue is a hugely welcome one, but the presentation – with a pointless liner retrospective by reissue 'consultant' Tony Higgins – is sloppy. On signing to the label, Hayes was allowed considerable leeway to put together his own project. The hand-picked brass and woodwind sections allowed him to indulge his skill for orchestral writing to the full. Even so, it's the playing that stands out. His tenor sound and line on 'The Late One' is jaw-dropping. It's one of a number of quartet cuts (with Terry Shannon, Jeff Clyne and Bill Eyden, though we're not supposed to know that). The best of the others is 'Wonderful, Wonderful', where Tubby goes into emotional territory deeper than any before or since. 'S'posing' and 'The Folks Who Live On The Hill' are big arrangements, with superb solos. His unaccompanied chorus at the end of 'Cherokee' should be part of everyone's saxophone primer. A wonderful record.

(*) Return Visit Impressed/Re-pressed 9831888 Hayes; 'James Gloomy' (ts); Roland Kirk (reeds); Walter Bishop Jr (p); Sam Jones (b); Louis Hayes (d). 62.

Tubby in company with some distinguished Americans on a visit to New York. This material was released in the States as Tubby's Back In Town. It's also been made available in Mercury's Roland Kirk box. Kirk was an admirer (and thought Ronnie Scott was the real thing, as well) and it's fascinating to hear the two hornmen side by side. The rhythm section plays with no great energy and there are some dull spots on 'Stitt's Tune' and 'I See You With My Third "I"' but there's good stuff from Tubby on almost every track, including another nicely acerbic statement on 'Alone Together'. No prizes for guessing who 'James Gloomy' is.

* Late Spot At Scott's / * Down In The Village Redial 558183 / 558184 Hayes; Jimmy Deuchar (t); Gordon Beck (p); Freddie Logan (b); Allan Ganley (d). 5/62.

 Night And Day Jazz House JHAS 602 As above, except add Terry Shannon, Mike Pyne (p); Jeff Clyne, Bruce Cale (b); Benny Goodman, Phil Seamen (d). 12/63–8/66.

(*) Tubbs – A Tribute Spotlite SPJ 902 Hayes; Jimmy Deuchar (t, mel); Terry Shannon (p); Freddy Logan (b); Allan Ganley (d). 12/63.

At their best, Tubby's live albums are still breathtaking in their impact and excitement. The most famous are the two Fontana discs now reissued on Redial, dating from a pair of nights at Ronnie's. On vibes, as in the title-track to Down In The Village, he is coolly melodic, but on tenor his playing is a rollercoaster of power and excitement. There is little to choose between the two records; perhaps we slightly prefer Down In The Village; exemplary support from Deuchar, Beck, Logan and Ganley in what was one of the strongest groups of its era. Night And Day offers material from five dates at Ronnie's over a period of three years: the tenor-playing on 'Night And Day' is unquenchably vivid, even electrifying, but the issue offers little more than bootleg sound.

For the avoidance of doubt (as the lawyers like to say) the live at the Dancing Slipper date on Spotlite, often identified as that but more correctly titled above, is an entirely different recording and band from the Harkit set listed below. This one offers a valuable glimpse of the man in exuberant form. The sheer ebullience of his solo on 'Don't Fall Off The Bridge' is breathtaking. Deuchar doesn't have quite such a good night, but his presence is always a bonus and his mellophone-playing here is fascinating – besides, there is little enough around of him in his pomp to make this a keeper. Tubbs perhaps isn't on his best night but it's a fine disc none the less.

 Live At The Hopbine Harkit HRKCD8195 2CD Hayes; Tommy Whittle (ts); Kenny Powell (p); Ron Mathewson (b); Dick Brennan (d). 11/65.

 Live At The Dancing Slipper Harkit HRKCD 8198 2CD Hayes; Mike Pyne (p); Danny Thompson (b); Tony Levin (d). 3/66.

(*) Addictive Tendencies Rare Music RM 028 Hayes; Mike Pyne (p); Ron Mathewson (b); Tony Levin (d). 66.

 Jazz Tête A Tête Harkit HRKCD 8114 Hayes; Les Condon (t); John Picard (tb); Tony Coe (ts); Mike Pyne, Colin Purbrook (p); Frank Evans (g); Ron Mathewson, Peter Ind (b); Jackie Dougan, Tony Levin (d). 11/66.

(*) For Members Only Miles Music MMCD 086 Hayes; Mick Pyne (p); Ron Mathewson (b); Tony Levin (d). 1–10/67.

 Live 1969 Harlequin HQ CD 05 As above, except omit Levin; add Spike Wells (d). 8–12/69.

Tubby's 70th birthday in 2005 had collectors all over Britain rooting around in old tape boxes for unreleased live material. In the mid-'60s Tubbs rarely played a bad date and his regular sidemen were paragons of reliability, so there's little dross in these issues, even when the sound isn't of professional quality.

The Dancing Slipper date from Nottingham has more crowd noise than usual, but there's nothing wrong with the sound beyond that. 'Alone Together', 'Here's That Rainy Day' and the old favourite 'A Taste Of Honey' all receive brisk, pungent treatment. Thompson isn't always clearly heard so it's difficult to compare his contributions with those of Mathewson and Ind elsewhere.

The Hopbine date from North London is a cooker, smoothed out here and there by Whittle's milder but no less swinging approach. Brennan is an interesting drummer, not much heard of now. Addictive Tendencies is taken from Levin's original analogue tapes. It's a nice discovery that helps to fill in the picture of an artist in his pomp, brimming with ideas and with flawless technique.

Jazz Tête A Tête will be nostalgic for many British readers as a souvenir of one of the concerts organized by promoter Peter Burman in the '60s, this one at Bristol University, with groups led by Les Condon (with Tubby sitting in), Tony Coe and Frank Evans. Hayes followers will welcome his rhapsodic ballad 'When My Baby Gets Mad'; the rest is more routine, although Coe's playing is a reminder that there was more than one great tenorman at work in Britain then. The recording quality – the original album was issued on Doug Dobell's 77 Records – is of documentary standard, but isn't too bad, and there is a previously unheard version of 'Tenderly' by Coe.

For Members Only has some 70 minutes of music drawn from three broadcasts, with a couple of rare excursions on flute and plenty of rousing tenor, as well as a nice glimpse of Hayes the composer. The CD suffers from some occasional blinks and drop-outs, but nothing too distracting. Live 1969 sounds pretty dusty, drawn from a couple of London gigs, and Hayes is too generous with everybody else's solo space. But the second date, with a tumbling reading of 'Where Am I Going?' and a couple of Hayes originals, is a degree more intense.

 Live In London: Volumes 1 & 2 Harkit HRKCD 8072 / 8109 Hayes; Jimmy Deuchar (t); Terry Shannon, Gordon Beck (p); Johnny Fourie (g); Freddie Logan, Kenny Napper, Jeff Clyne (b); Allan Ganley, Benny Goodman, Johnny Butts (d). 1/64–12/65.

Vintage Tubbs from four different gigs at Ronnie's during 1964–5. The tapes come from Les Tomkins's collection and the final track is an interview (not especially revealing) between Les and Tubby, dating from 1963. The emphasis here is on Hayes the virtuoso saxophonist: 'Opus Ocean' is done at a tempo so quick that even Jimmy Deuchar has problems, while Hayes simply sails through it, taking an unaccompanied passage which beggars belief. He's just as formidable on 'On Green Dolphin Street' and the 20-minute 'By Myself', yet what one often thinks of is the remark about his playing 'as easy as turning a tap on and off' – which suggests that, for all his facility, Hayes had a glibness about his playing which may have told against him in the end. As with Night And Day above, the sound is often unkind to other members of the band, although Tubby comes through loud and fairly clear. The second volume, also from Scott's, has a great version of 'Two Bass Hit'; otherwise, for collectors only.

(*) 100% Proof Impressed/Re-pressed 983 1885 Hayes; Kenny Baker, Greg Bowen, Les Condon, Ian Hamer, Kenny Wheeler (t); Keith Christie, Nat Peck, Johnny Marshall, Chris Smith (tb); Rox Willox (as, f, af); Ray Warleigh (as, f); Ronnie Scott (ts, cl); Bob Efford (ts, ob, af, bcl); Harry Klein (bs); Gordon Beck (p); Jeff Clyne (b); Johnny Butts, Ronnie Stephenson (d). 5/66.

 Mexican Green Impressed/Re-pressed 983 1983 Hayes; Mike Pyne (p); Ron Mathewson (b); Tony Levin (d). 67.

Another pair of Fontana reissues in the valuable Impressed/Re-pressed series. The earlier was intended as a set of musical homages to favourite musicians, but in the studio time left over Tubby decided to record a brand-new chart, the hair-raisingly difficult '100% Proof'. Having pulled it off, there was no alternative but to call the album that. It's a great piece, packed with strong, high horn writing and featuring some titanic work from Tubby himself. It also represents one of the last major recordings by drummer Johnny Butts, who was killed in a road accident not long after this recording; he's memorialized in 'Dear Johnny B' at the start of Mexican Green. 'A Night In Tunisia' was arranged by Ian Hamer as a flute feature. 'Milestones' is Tubby's own arrangement with a lot of detailed section work that recalls Benny Carter orchestras of the past. He's joined by Ronnie Scott on a great version of 'Sonnymoon For Two'. 'Bluesology' is his only vibes feature and Ronnie Scott again comes in with a perfectly weighted reply. The closing 'Nutty', arranged by Stan Tracey, gives the solo space to Ray Warleigh and Les Condon, while Tubbs's flute lurks in the ensemble.

Mexican Green isn't far behind and in some places surpasses its predecessor. Tubby gets off a feeling solo on 'Dear Johnny B'. 'Off The Wagon' suggests some of the directions Tubby might have taken had he lived longer. It's what someone writing a thesis might call a 'polystylistic' number, with everything but pibroch and gamelan thrown into the stew. Tubbs flies into a rapid Latinized tempo on 'Second City Steamer', a south-of-the-border tribute to Birmingham of all places; Brummie Tony Levin takes an appreciative solo. Skimpy presentation, though, with illegible original liner-notes and misspelt names. For shame.

 Quartet In Scandinavia Storyville STCD 8251 Hayes; Staffan Abeleen (p); Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen (b); Alex Riel (d). 2/72.

The Storyville disc comes from a Swedish broadcast. This is typical visiting soloist stuff with the local rhythm section, and Hayes – who had already suffered more than one serious illness – probably approaches this as just another gig. As a quartet, though, this is a class act and, if there are too many long solos shared around the band, the music has spirit as well as polish.

Also, in brief:

(*) Blue Hayes: The Tempo Anthology Jasmine 632 2CD. 55–69.
Tubbs in various contexts over almost a decade and a half. Nice work with Ronnie Scott and the Jazz Couriers and some rare big-band recordings from America.

 England's Late Jazz Great IAJRC CD 1019. 57–72.
Nicely judged tribute with big-band material, small groups and the Harry South Orchestra. Has 17 tracks and no filler.

(*) All Night Long Harkit HRKCD8095. 61.
Soundtrack to the British thriller, starring Richard Attenborough and Patrick McGoohan. Features Tubbs, John Dankworth, Charles Mingus, Dave Brubeck and more.

(*) Equation In Rhythm Impressed/Re-pressed 983 1977. 61.
Odd collaboration with bongo master Jack Costanzo, whose vigorous workouts leave the Hayes Orchestra's better tracks stranded.

 Tubbs' Tours Impressed/Re-pressed 9831886. 64.
Excellent range of live material with the orchestra with themed titles. Killer version of Jimmy Deuchar's 'Russian Roulette'.

 On The Air / (*) Commonwealth Blues Harkit HRKCD8156 / Art of Life 1016. 65.
The same transcriptions from a BBC overseas service broadcast to the Hispanic world, with the Gordon Beck trio. Different track order and On The Air omits the announcements and idents.

Phil Haynes (born 1961)

DRUMS

Born in Oregon and relation to the great Roy. He came to New York as a promising youngster and has fronted or co-fronted a series of enterprising bands.

(*) Live Insurgency: Set 1 Soul Note 121302 Haynes; Paul Smoker (t); Jeff Palmer (org). 98.
 Free Country Premonition 90744 Haynes; Jim Yanda (steel g); Hank Roberts (clo, jazzophone fiddle); Drew Gress (b). 00.
(*) Brooklyn–Berlin CIMP 2138 Haynes; Herb Robertson (c, t); Marty Ehrlich, Vinny Golia (cl, bcl); Ken Filiano (b). 2/00.
Haynes made his recording debut as leader as far back as 1991 with the intriguing Four Horns & What on Open Minds. It established an enterprising sideman as a writer of some promise. Live Insurgency consolidated that impression, but what an unusual 'organ trio'! Smoker comes back with his tight splintery sound. The opening 'Where's The Door?' is a deceptive overture to a quite advanced and thoughtful set. On 'Saeta' and 'So Miles' one listens in vain for explicit echoes of Kind Of Blue or Sketches Of Spain, largely because Smoker's debt to Miles Davis is so idiosyncratically deployed. Palmer is closer to Larry Young than Jimmy Smith but he doesn't really resemble any of the great Hammond-players. On tunes like 'Premonition', he develops a distinctive harmonic mood and attack. The closing 'Blues For Israel' is a sucker punch, superbly paced and distilled.

Free Country's an appealing Americana project, reminiscent in part of Bill Frisell, but mostly Steven Foster tunes and traditional material radically reinterpreted. It kicks off with a Bible Belt favourite, 'How Great Thou Art', and a delightfully paced interpretation of 'Oh Susannah'. 'Danny Boy (Londonderry Air)' might have been hideous, but Haynes and his colleagues handle it beautifully and Roberts's cello gives this and other melodies a tough-tender quality.

The third set reunites the drummer with Robertson. The CIMP disc is typical of the label's lack of fuss and embellishment, but in other ways, too, it goes back to the dense structure and carefully controlled freedom of the first record. Only three horns, but what a range of registers and timbres they conjure up. The clarinets consolidate the folkier side of Haynes's idiom while Robertson can do everything from circus barker to Angel Gabriel.

Roy Haynes (born 1926)

DRUMS

He worked with Charlie Parker, Miles Davis, Bud Powell, Sarah Vaughan, Thelonious Monk and Eric Dolphy, and in the John Coltrane Quartet. If power and swing were measured relative to physical size, the little man from Roxbury, Massachusetts, would be one of the major figures of the music.

 We Three Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 196 Haynes; Phineas Newborn Jr (p); Paul Chambers (b). 11/58.
(*) Out Of The Afternoon Impulse! 051180-2 Haynes; Roland Rahsaan Kirk (ts, manzello, stritch, f); Tommy Flanagan (p); Henry Grimes (b). 5/62.
 Cracklin' Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 818 Haynes; Booker Ervin (ts); Ronnie Mathews (p); Larry Ridley (b). 4/63.
What Haynes lacks in sheer power he gains in precision and clarity, playing long, open lines that are deceptively relaxed but full of small rhythmic tensions. In 1958 his work still clearly bears the mark of stints with Thelonious Monk and Miles Davis. Bar-lines shift confidently or else are dispensed with altogether, without violence to the underlying pulse. Phineas Newborn's recent association with Charles Mingus had helped pare down his slightly extravagant style. Haynes himself sounds wonderful on 'Sugar Ray' and the romping 'Our Delight', where he is almost tuneful.

The Impulse! record is a splendid one-off. After a big, dramatic opening on cymbals, Kirk blasts off on the Artie Shaw theme, 'Moon Ray', using both manzello and tenor (beautifully in tune), doubling his lines against a big reverb that makes him sound like a whole section. Haynes's solo is low, slow and dramatic, halving the basic tempo at one point. That is not Kirk's bent. On 'If I Should Lose You', he squalls his way through a magnificent stritch solo which pulls the standard apart. 'Snap Crackle' was an expression coined by bassist Al McKibbon to describe Haynes's sound. The drummer adopts it here as a song title and, coupled to Kirk's weird vocalized flute and nose-flute solo, it rather stands out from the rest of the album.

Cracklin' is more mainstream but the fizz and pop are still very much there, and Haynes's polyrhythms are all the more evident for not being eclipsed by such an idiosyncratic front-man. Which isn't to say that Ervin is less than exemplary. His solo on 'Under Paris Skies' is first rate and Mathews's accompaniment pushes a rather slight vehicle to the limit.

 Cymbalism Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1079 213030 Haynes; Frank Strozier (as, f); Ronnie Mathews (p); Larry Ridley (b). 9/63.
Roy's distinctive approach is best sampled on a brisk 'I'm Getting Sentimental Over You'. It follows the Frank Strozier-composed 'Modette', which also features the saxophonist on flute. Strozier has always been a marginal Jackie McLean disciple, but when he plays well, as he does on the final medley, and when he resists the temptation to play flute, he is an arresting if rather cursory soloist. Haynes is nicely registered, swinging and musical.

 Homecoming Evidence ECD 33432 Haynes; Ralph Moore (ts); David Kikoski (p); Ed Howard (b). 86.
 True Or False /  When It's Haynes, It Roars Evidence ECD 33437 / Dreyfus FDM 36504 As above, except omit Moore; add Craig Handy (ts). 92.
These are strong quartet dates with much to enjoy. Handy is a more committed soloist, with a stronger tone and sharper delivery, but there is something about Moore's more laid-back and thoughtful approach that eminently suits Haynes's delicate touch. The Dreyfus is also excellent, though Handy doesn't seem as prominent.

 The Island Explore 023 Haynes; Graham Haynes (c); Craig Handy (ss, ts); George Adams (ts); David Kikoski, Harry Whitaker (p, ky); Barry Finnerty, William Spaceman Paterson (g); Cecil McBee, Marcus Miller (b); Chuggy Carter, Jerry Gonzalez (perc). 4/90.
A funky and the smart critics might say polystylistic date that sees Haynes driving the kind of date Alphonse Mouzon, Billy Cobham and Lenny White had been doing half a generation earlier. The difference is that Roy always sounds like he's in a bebop situation. Even where there's a backbeat, it's springy and resilient, always shifting in unexpected directions. 'Waltz For Debby' and, ahem, 'The Anniversary Waltz' push him into an interesting variant on Max Roach's ¾-time experiments and there are hints of reggae and funk as well.

(*) Te Vou! Dreyfus FDM 36569 Haynes; Donald Harrison (as); Pat Metheny (g); David Kikoski (p); Christian McBride (b). 94.
Te Vou! is absolutely consistent with past form. Haynes dares to play quietly and delicately, and his solo on 'Trigonometry' is exquisite. He has some interesting companions here, not least Metheny, who revels in this setting. The guitarist features strongly on 'John McKee', a beautiful thing made out of perfectly balanced parts.

* Praise Dreyfus 36598 Haynes; Graham Haynes (c, flhn); Kenny Garrett (ss, as); David Sanchez (ts); David Kikoski (p); Dwayne Burno (b). 98.
Haynes plays one of his most persuasive recorded solos on the closing 'Shades Of Senegal', a performance that is as expressive as it is rhythmically astute. The album covers every possible permutation, from solo percussion to septet, and at every level it is Roy who dominates. Son Graham and the two saxophone-players each have interesting things to say, but it is the rhythm section, with Kikoski very much in the foreground, that makes things happen. Some of the selections, like John Carisi's 'Israel', are less than ideally suited to this personnel, but 'My Little Suede Shoes', the Charlie Parker classic, and the traditional 'Morning Has Broken' are both sterling performances, and Roy has rarely sounded more gleefully in charge.

 Fountain Of Youth Dreyfus 36663 Haynes; Marcus Strickland (ss, ts); Martin Bejerano (p); John Sullivan (b). 12/02.
Haynes has obviously discovered the elixir. This live Village Vanguard date begins with a fine, swinging version of 'Greensleeves' and then majors on Thelonious Monk tunes. The outstanding cut, though, is David Kikoski's 'Inner Thrust', which just squeaks it over the closing version of Pat Metheny's beautiful 'Question And Answer'. Strickland is a rising star but the real centre of attention is always the man behind the kit.

 Whereas Dreyfus FDM 36694 Haynes; Jaleel Shaw (as); Robert Xavier Rodriguez (p); John Carter Sullivan (b). 1/06.
A new version of the Fountain Of Youth band, recorded live in St Paul, Minnesota, and what a programme! Haynes books straight into Coltrane's 'Mr P.C.', sounding more like a fired-up Art Davis than Elvin. Shaw's Trane influence is generously aired. 'My Heart Belongs To Daddy' is a rather more orthodox bop idea, but then things start to get really interesting with Chick Corea's 'Like This', a spankingly musical drum solo called 'Hippidy Hop', and then a wonderful medley of 'Bemsha Swing' and Steve Swallow's 'True Or False'. They even programme a version of the Metheny–Mays 'James'. After that, it turns into more of a blowing session, but Joe Henderson's 'Inner Urge' isn't a tune you pick if you merely want to coast to an encore, certainly not at 11 minutes. 'Segment' rounds things out, and if the Charlie Parker line is more perfunctorily handled, it doesn't lack for energy and originality of interpretation. Haynes was coming up 80 when this was taped.

Also, in brief:

 The 1954 Paris Sessions Vogue 62291. 10/54.
A disc shared with sessions from the Rene Thomas Quintet and Frank Foster Quartet, so lots of quality right through.

(*) Quiet Fire Galaxy 95005. 7/77.
This reissues two Galaxy LPs – Vistalite and Thank You, Thank You – in a two-for-one package; mediocre and timelocked stuff.

 My Shining Hour Storyville 4199. 3/94.
Recorded with Thomas Clausen's Jazz Participants, this Jazzpar project is a disappointing one in comparison to other records from the prestigious event.

 The Roy Haynes Trio Verve 543534-2. 9–11/99.
The full title is Featuring Danilo Perez And John Patitucci but it's still the drummer's date.

 Birds Of A Feather Dreyfus 36625. 01.
The market is glutted with tribute albums but here's a good one. Looking back at Charlie Parker, Haynes makes it clear that he comes neither to praise nor to bury, but to rework subtly.

 Love Letters Columbia 87197. 5/02.
Originally released only in Japan, this is a run-of-the-mill set of standards enlivened by Horace Silver's 'Que Pasa' and a Coltrane-influenced 'Afro-Blue'.

Kevin Hays (born 1968)

PIANO

Born in NY, he has since moved to the South-West. Oscar Peterson and George Shearing were early influences.

(*) Sweet Ear Steeplechase SCCD 31282 Hays; Eddie Henderson (t); Vincent Herring (ss, as); James Genus (b); Joe Chambers (d). 1/91.
 Ugly Beauty Steeplechase SCCD 31297 Hays; Larry Grenadier (b); Jeff Williams (d). 8/91.
(*) Crossroad Steeplechase SCCD 31324 Hays; Scott Wendholt (t, flhn); Freddie Bryant (g); Dwayne Burno (b); Carl Allen (d). 11/92.
Hays's Steeplechase albums are probably his best calling-card. He's sometimes a demure performer, not making much impact on the keys, and he tends to organize solos around certain patterns – halving the tempo or working a sequence of arpeggios – which crop up often enough to hint at routine. But his writing offers some interesting situations and on, say, the trio reading of 'You And The Night And The Music' on the first album he manages to create a logical and inventive development far away from the melody.

The first album may be the best by dint of some excellent teamwork: Henderson takes some very fine solos, Herring manages to step out of his Adderley impersonation for most of the date, and Chambers is as eccentrically inventive as ever (sample his solo on 'Neptune'). The quintet with Wendholt is notable for the trumpeter's beautiful solos, expertly paced and tonally exquisite, as well as fine covers of Ray Bryant's 'P.S. The Blues' and Duke Pearson's 'Gaslight'. The trio record is inevitably less absorbing, given Hays's light grip, but is still worth hearing.

 Open Range ACT 9752-2 Hays (p, v solo). 3–4/04.
A period with Blue Note resulted in three deleted records. Hays has relocated to New Mexico and titles such as 'Desert Blues' seem to reflect on his new situation. This is a confident recital, the solos deliberately paced, with a folkish bent: he uses sampled Native American singers on 'Humming Bird Song', sings 'You Are My Sunshine' himself and plays a very strange piece in 'Meditation'. Accomplished, meditative, yet oddly insubstantial.

 For Heaven's Sake Jazz Eyes 001 Hays; Doug Weiss (b); Bill Stewart (d). 1/05.
He still sounds slightly becalmed, but Stewart eggs him along on a couple of tracks here and there is certainly less formula to the soloing. It's a nice, enterprising programme, with Wayne Shorter and Sam Rivers ('Beatrice', inevitably) both represented, but the closing 'Caravan' seems a soft option.

Also, in brief:

 El Matador Evidence ECD 22199. 8/90.
An early date that still has some circulation. He's outclassed by the group – Joe Henderson (ts) in magisterial form – but it didn't lack for promise.

David Hazeltine (born 1958)

PIANO

Born in Milwaukee and based there for many years, he's now enjoying a wider reputation.

 4 Flights Up Sharp Nine 1002-2 Hazeltine; Slide Hampton (tb); Peter Washington (b); Ray Appleton (d). 7/95.
(*) The Classic Trio Sharp Nine 1005-2 Hazeltine; Peter Washington (b); Louis Hayes (d). 8/96.
 How It Is Criss Cross 1142 Hazeltine; Jim Rotondi (t, flhn); Steve Wilson (as); Peter Washington (b); Joe Farnsworth (d). 10/97.
Hazeltine's list of influences includes Oscar Peterson, Barry Harris, Buddy Montgomery, Cedar Walton. He's a communicator in the Peterson manner, voicing melodies in a recognizable yet inventive way, adding just enough rhythmic nuance to take an interpretation out of the ordinary, and placing absolute trust in his rhythm section sidemen – Washington in particular, common to all three records. 4 Flights Up has Hampton as the sole horn but, though he performs likeably enough, his solos add a note of blandness and sometimes get in Hazeltine's way. The Classic Trio, with lovely, grooving work from Washington and Hayes, is a peach. Though Hazeltine says he prefers to work with more modern material ('Betcha By Golly Wow' is on the previous disc), he still does very well out of standards such as 'Sweet And Lovely' and 'These Foolish Things', an unerring sense of tempo helping to swing the melodies and set the pace for constructions that are intricate without seeming fussy or deliberately complex. 'My Stuff's On The Street' is a witty blues, Bud Powell's 'The Fruit' is bebop cooled off in a delightful setting, and 'One For Peter' is an adroit feature for Washington.

The Criss Cross date is disappointingly prosaic in comparison. Rotondi and Wilson play well enough, but they add little aside from extra weight to some of the tunes. The pianist's 'Nuit Noire' is a fine set-piece and his treatment of 'Pannonica' comes off with an expert flourish, but it's all a little ordinary.

 Blues Quarters Vol. 1 Criss Cross 1188 Hazeltine; Eric Alexander (ts); Dwayne Burno (b); Joe Farnsworth (d). 12/98.
(*) The Classic Trio Vol. 2 Sharp Nine 1019 Hazeltine; Peter Washington (b); Louis Hayes (d). 1/00.
 Good-Hearted People Criss Cross 1210 Hazeltine; Steve Davis (tb); Jim Snidero (as, f); Jesse van Ruller (g); Nat Reeves (b); Tony Reedus (d). 1/01.
(*) Manhattan Autumn Sharp Nine 1026-2 Hazeltine; Eric Alexander (ts); Peter Washington (b); Joe Farnsworth (d). 11/02.
For some reason, Hazeltine can't quite muster the same intensity at Criss Cross that he does at Sharp Nine. The second volume of trio music with Washington and Hayes is another winner, driving and swinging through quick tempos and ranging back in a positive way at a more amenable pace. Originals and standards alike receive an absorbing reading.

The quartet date with Alexander has the saxophonist burning a few barns along the way, though the music seems not too far from well-practised formulae. Good-Hearted People benefits from the extra horn, although a standard such as 'Imagination' is voiced so mildly that it sounds sleepy, and the expected bop blowout of 'Barbados' is as tame as a mouse.

Alexander shows up again on Manhattan Autumn and, again, everything works out just a shade better. 'Moon River' and 'The Look Of Love' are among several revisions which create a pleasurable prickle of surprise.

(*) Close To You Criss Cross 1247 Hazeltine; Peter Washington (b); Joe Farnsworth (d). 11/03.
* Modern Standards Sharp Nine 1032-2 As above, except omit Washington; add David Williams (b). 12/04.
Hazeltine's best Criss Cross so far is energized by his going back to a trio format: he might be a capable accompanist, but he's better as a trio-leader, and this set is up there with the Classic Trio albums. One of his particular strengths is his ease in, seemingly, any kind of time: the opening tilt at Burt Bacharach's 'Close To You' works smoothly between four, 6/8 and Latin time, and they glide into three for the immediately following 'Waltzing At Suite One'. Washington and Farnsworth work their admirable line between failsafe and adventurous, and really there's hardly a moment that doesn't offer pleasure. The only drawback might be the easeful consistency of Hazeltine's music, which always threatens to slip into the background.

The Sharp Nine is, if anything, even better, and there seems no reason to withhold a top rating from David this time. Impeccably produced by Marc Edelman, the trio gets a full, rounded sound which maximizes its virtues. The tunes are familiar but not hackneyed, and Hazeltine bites the bullet on pop material: 'Yesterday', 'How Deep Is Your Love' and 'For The Love Of You' are all shaped with logic and finesse.

(*) Perambulation Criss Cross 1276 Hazeltine; Peter Washington (b); Joe Farnsworth (d). 5/05.

The plan was to have made another quartet date with Eric Alexander, but the saxophonist dropped out. One can't say it was a lucky break, but certainly no one will feel sold short by these trios. As empathetic relationships go, they aren't quite in Bill Evans territory yet, but the shared understanding here is further evidence for the merits of established groups over phone-around ad-hoccery. Great stuff.

* Manhattan Chesky 310 SACD Hazeltine; George Mraz (b); Billy Drummond (d). 12/05.

(*) The Jobim Songbook in New York Chesky 328 Hazeltine; Nat Reeves (b); Joe Farnsworth (d). 11/06.

He's done the rounds of labels now but never before has been caught with such elegance and precision as on these. The set-list on Manhattan is very familiar indeed – 'Out Of This World', 'In Your Own Sweet Way', our particular bugbear 'Alone Together' – but there are a few interesting inclusions like the Cinema Paradiso theme and a couple of infrequently covered Cole Porters. Jobim songbooks are like pebbles on the shore, too, but this isn't really the issue; what one hears here is superb playing by two subtly different trios, immaculately registered, a benchmark for jazz recording.

(*) The Inspiration Suite Sharp Nine 1043 Hazeltine; Eric Alexander (ts); Joe Locke (vib); John Webber (b); Joe Farnsworth (d). 06.

Like many another American piano-player of this time, Hazeltine's done a flurry of recording for the Japanese Venus label, so his hyperactive burst is all the more impressive. This is an old association, considerably enlivened by Locke's involvement. Privately, we think Joe should be doing more as leader than as a guest, but he's central to his tracks here and attractively ruffles up what's become a settled routine between Hazeltine and Alexander.

Also, in brief:

 Blues Quarters: Volume 2 Criss Cross 1287. 3/06

Basically the same gang with extra percussion, but no fresh wrinkles.

Jon Hazilla

DRUMS

The Bostonian moves easily between bop and free forms.

 The Bitten Moon Cadence CJR 1058 Hazilla; James Williams (p); Ray Drummond (b). 3/94.

* Form And Function CIMP 142 Hazilla; John Pierce (tb); Jim Odgren (as); Greg Badolato (ts); Tim Mayer (b). 3/97.

Hazilla's ingenuity sets the tone. It must have been his idea to do a snappy, uptempo 'Naima' on the first record. He plays intrusively rather than domineeringly in the usual way of drummer-led records, but Williams and Drummond more than hold their own. There are a couple of solos: 'Pancakes From Meductiv' is actually a cymbals solo, and the result is a sharp, out-of-the-ordinary rhythm section disc.

Hazilla calls the second group Saxabone and the resonant, freshly peeled sound comes across wonderfully, a good example of CIMP's aesthetic working to the music's advantage. It's a sequence of drum solos with four chestnuts interspersed. The result is a compelling and wholly original meditation on hard-bop form; two takes of Sonny Stitt's 'Eternal Triangle' are astounding.

* Tiny Capers Double Time 180 Hazilla; Bruce Barth (p); John Lockwood (b). 11/00.

Who'd remember that the title-tune is a Clifford Brown line? Hazilla agains interrogates 'hard bop' (it increasingly needs the quotes) with these astonishingly fresh reworkings: Dexter's 'Tivoli', 'It's Only A Paper Moon', Shorter's 'Footprints', Benny Carter–Tadd Dameron, and a couple of originals. Barth and Lockwood seem to know what's what and the results are insistently refreshing.

Jimmy Heath (born 1926)

TENOR, ALTO AND SOPRANO SAXOPHONES

Born in Philadelphia, the middle Heath brother led big bands and bebop groups but did more writing than playing in the '50s. Since then, much more active as player-leader and a renowned teacher.

* The Thumper /  Blue Soul Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1828 / 765 Heath; Nat Adderley (cl); Curtis Fuller (tb); Wynton Kelly (p); Paul Chambers (b); Albert 'Tootie' Heath (d). 9/59; 9/59.

 The Riverside Collection: Nice People Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 6006 Heath; Donald Byrd, Freddie Hubbard, Clark Terry (t); Nat Adderley (c); Curtis Fuller, Tom McIntosh (tb); Dick Berg, Jimmy Buffington, Don Butterfield (tba); Julius Watkins (frhn); Julian 'Cannonball' Adderley (as); Pat Patrick (bs); Herbie Hancock, Wynton Kelly, Cedar Walton (p); Kenny Burrell (g); Paul Chambers, Percy Heath (b); Albert 'Tootie' Heath , Connie Kay (d). 12/59-64.

(*) Really Big! Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1799 Heath; Clark Terry, Nat Adderley (t); Tom McIntosh, Dick Berg (tb); Julian 'Cannonball' Adderley , Pat Patrick (sax); Tommy Flanagan, Cedar Walton (p); Percy Heath (b); Albert 'Tootie' Heath (d). 60.

Jimmy Heath's reputation as a player has been partly overshadowed by his gifts as a composer ('CTA', 'Gemini', 'Gingerbread Boy') and arranger. The Thumper was his debut recording. He was already in his 30s and writing with great maturity; the session kicks off with 'For Minors Only', the first of his tunes to achieve near-classic standing. He also includes 'Nice People'. The Riverside compilation which bears that name is a useful introduction to the man who was once known as 'Little Bird' but who later largely abandoned alto saxophone in favour of a bold, distinctive tenor style.

Also well worth looking out for is the big-band set from 1960. Built around the three Heath and the two Adderley brothers, it's a unit with a great deal of personality and presence. Sun Ra's favourite baritonist, Pat Patrick, is in the line-up and contributes handsomely to the ensembles. Bobby Timmons's 'Dat Dere', 'On Green Dolphin Street' and 'Picture Of Heath' are the outstanding tracks, and Orrin Keepnews's original sound is faithfully preserved.

Heath's arrangements often favour deep brass pedestals for the higher horns, which explains his emphasis on trombone and french horn parts. The earliest of these sessions, though, is a relatively stripped-down blowing session ('Nice People' and 'Who Needs It') for Nat Adderley, Curtis Fuller and a rhythm section anchored on youngest brother, Albert, who reappears with Percy Heath, the eldest of the three, on the ambitious 1960 'Picture Of Heath'. Like Connie Kay, who was to join Percy in the Modern Jazz Quartet, Albert is an unassuming player, combining Kay's subtlety with the drive of Kenny Clarke.

(*) The Quota Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1871 Heath; Freddie Hubbard (t); Julius Watkins (frhn); Cedar Walton (p); Percy Heath (b); Albert 'Tootie' Heath (d). 4/61.

(*) Triple Threat Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1909-2 Heath; Freddie Hubbard (t); Julius Watkins (frhn); Cedar Walton (p); Percy Heath (b); Albert 'Tootie' Heath (d). 1/62.

(*) Swamp Seed Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1904-2 Heath; Donald Byrd (t); Jimmy Buffington, Julius Watkins (frhn); Don Butterfield (tba); Herbie Hancock, Harold Mabern (p); Percy Heath (b); Albert 'Tootie' Heath , Connie Kay (d). 3/63.

 On The Trail Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1854 Heath; Wynton Kelly (p); Kenny Burrell (g); Paul Chambers (b); Albert 'Tootie' Heath (d). 64.

The Quota perfectly underlines Jimmy's ability to make three contrasting horns sound like a big band, or very nearly. This is a cleverly arranged session, and an agreeably fraternal one, with Percy and Tootie on hand as well. Hubbard was a killer at 23, soloing with fire and conviction, but it is Jimmy's own work, on his own title-track and on 'When Sonny Gets Blue', that stands out, arguably some of his best tenor-playing on record. Triple Threat was a dry run for the Heath Brothers project and another object lesson in how to give a relatively small unit an expansive sound. Jimmy takes a couple of numbers with just rhythm and even there manages to suggest a massive structure behind his elegantly linear melody lines. Watkins has an enhanced role and demonstrates once again what an exciting player he can be on an instrument usually consigned to a supportive role.

Heath's genius as an arranger is evident on Swamp Seed, where he again manages to make three brass sound like a whole orchestra. With no supplemental reeds to support his own muscular lines, Jimmy is the most prominent voice. On 'Six Steps', 'Nutty' and 'D Waltz', he creates solo statements of genuine originality, relying on the subtle voicings given to Butterfield, Buffington and Watkins to support his more adventurous harmonic shifts. As 'D Waltz' demonstrates, Heath learned a lot from listening to Charlie Parker, but also to the older bandleaders like Lunceford and Eckstine, who understood how to give relatively simple ideas maximum mileage.

On The Trail is less arresting; more of a straight blowing session, it doesn't play to Jimmy's real strengths and the production sounds as if everything has been taken down a notch to accommodate Burrell's soft and understated guitar-lines. 'All The Things You Are' has some moments of spectacular beauty, as when Jimmy floats across Wynton Kelly's line with a soft restatement of the melody and a tiny fragment of the 'Bird Of Paradise' contrafact patented by Charlie Parker.

 You've Changed Steeplechase SCCD 31292 Heath; Tony Purrone (g); Ben Brown (b); Albert 'Tootie' Heath (d). 8/91.

* You Or Me Steeplechase SCCD 31370 Heath; Tony Purrone (g); Kiyoshi Kitagawa (b); Albert 'Tootie' Heath (d). 4/95.

In the early '90s he was still playing with great character. The opening solo on You've Changed delivers 'Soul Eyes' at an easy lope that scarcely varies for the remainder of the set. Heath can now say more in half a dozen notes than most young players can in three choruses. He places accents so carefully that even straightforward theme statements become objects of considerable interest. The group is on the sluggish side, but Jimmy sails on regardless.

You Or Me was tinged with real sadness, after Jimmy and Albert learned of their elder sister's death just as they were about to record. Whether Elizabeth was on his mind when he set out to re-create the Ben Webster solo on Ellington's 'All Too Soon' isn't certain, but it's a performance of great gentleness and soft regret. There is a real bounce and bluster to the closing 'Hot House' and the workout on Blue Mitchell's 'Fungi Mama' is blazing. The album begins with three Heath originals, including 'The Quota', and thereafter sticks to repertory material and Duke Pearson's seldom-covered 'Is That So?'.The digital set-up is flattering to Jimmy's sound, highlighting its glacial harmonics and filling out its bass register. As before, the understanding with Tootie is sensitive and subtle and some of their exchanges are wickedly clever.

The Heath Brothers

GROUP

Among the first families of jazz: older brothers Percy and Jimmy left Philadelphia in 1949 to join Howard McGhee's band; Albert is almost a decade younger but quickly became one of the ablest and busiest drummers on the circuit.

 Expressions Of Life / In Motion Collectables COL 6896 Jimmy Heath (ts, ss); Percy Heath (b, clo); Stanley Cowell (p); Tony Purrone (g); Keith Copeland, Akira Tana (d); plus brass: Irwin Markowitz (t); Wayne Andre (tb); Paul Faulise (btb); Joseph DeAngelis (frhn); Howard Johnson (tba). 1–2/79, 80.

(*) As We Were Saying ... Concord CCD 4777-2 As above, except omit brass section, Copeland, Tana; add Albert 'Tootie' Heath (d); Jon Faddis (t, flhn); Slide Hampton (tb); Stanley Cowell, Sir Roland Hanna (p); Mark Elf (g); James Mtume (perc). 2/97.

* Jazz Family Concord CCD 4846-2 Jimmy Heath (ts, ss); Percy Heath (b, clo); Albert 'Tootie' Heath (d); Earl Gardner, Joe Wilder, Tom Wiliams (t, flhn); Benny Powell (tb); John Clark (frhn); Bob Stewart (tba); Jeb Patton (p); Tony Purrone (g). 5/98.

Albert had left the family group before the first of these was made, though he was to return later. That put the emphasis squarely on Jimmy's compositions and one of the main pieces on the Collectables set (actually from the 1979 In Motion date) is 'Voice Of The Saxophone' from Jimmy's 'Afro-American Suite Of Evolution'. There are other good tracks, notably Cowell's 'Equipoise' on the second album, but not much else to be excited about.

The Heath Brothers recorded several albums in the '80s, but As We Were Saying ... and Jazz Family are the first fraternal offerings since then. It would be nice to report that there are strong family traits in their playing. The fact is that all three brothers have very different styles and approaches, except when they play together, and then they seem to draw on a shared experience from the heyday of bebop. Jimmy's writing and playing have developed in many different directions since then, but as 'Bop Again' on As We Were Saying ... suggests, this is where their hearts lie. In Hanna and Cowell, they have two perfect rhythm section partners, players who mix the almost classical precision of Percy's bass and cello work with Tootie's African-tinged rhythms. Just to make the family gathering complete, Jimmy's son, James Mtume, adds percussion on 'South Filthy'. Faddis, as ever, sounds like Dizzy's twin, which makes renewed sense of Jimmy's Parker influence.

The follow-up album is better still, but it's hard to think of it as anything other than a Jimmy Heath project. Percy contributes one (rather weak) tune, 'Move To The Groove', but Jimmy's writing and arrangements are endlessly inventive. '13th House' is one of his best things, not a classic on a par with 'C.T.A.' or 'Gingerbread Boy', but a richly constructed tune none the less. 'A Harmonic Future' and 'Wind Print' are a little more schematic, the former an intriguing but slightly dry exercise in neo-bop, the latter more impressionistic. Yet, wedged as they are in between 'Easy Living', Otis René's 'I'm Lost' and Kenny Dorham's lovely 'None Shall Wander', they add to the texture of a wonderfully well-crafted album.

Spike Heatley (born 1933)

DOUBLE BASS

Dependable anchor-man and an inspiring leader.

 The Other Side Of The Coin Renella 001 Heatley; Roy Williams (tb); Danny Moss (ts); Dave Newton (p); Mick Hanson (g); Malcolm Mortimore (d). 03.

 One For Clifford ... And Another One For Tubby Renella 002 Heatley; Alan Barnes (as, cl); John Horler (p); Malcolm Mortimore (d). 04.

Spike's never been a flashy soloist, preferring to drive a band along with clean, deft lines. The first of these includes material by Bill LeSage, Brian Lemon, guitarist Hanson and Spike himself, along with some tasty standards. As ever, Williams plays with energy and fire, while Moss turns in some lovely, conversational saxophone solos. The second album reprises both 'Spike Island Special' and 'A Song For My Children', though in quite different versions. The Clifford and Tubby tributes are doubtless heartfelt, but sound a bit throwaway. Barnes plays with tricky energy and sly flair, though Horler always has some attention-grabbing moments on any session. Spike mans the engine room, but people will be listening to him afresh after these.

Dick Heckstall-Smith (1934–2004)

TENOR SAXOPHONE

A veteran of the British blues and R&B scene, he lent prog rockers Colosseum some jazz cachet and made some fine records on his own account, dabbling in everything from folk-jazz to free.

 Live 1990 L+R CDLR45028 Heckstall-Smith; John Etheridge (g); Rainer Glas (b); Joe Nay (d). 90.

 Obsession Fees Green Tree GTR 106 As above, except omit Nay; add Chris Beier (ky); Evert Jan Fraterman (d). 95.

Four live cuts with two compositions apiece by DHS and Etheridge. 'Venerable Bede' is the guitarist's and a very strong, lyrical starter. The highlight, though, is Dick's 'Woza Nasu', one of his best-loved tunes. The German rhythm is a bit galumphing but the sheer bravura of the two front-guys carries it along.

Etheridge is co-leader on Obsession Fees, which carries another good version of 'Venerable Bede' and of 'Baiere', also featured on the live record. The keyboard-player is a muddler, but there is an energy about the disc which is unfailingly attractive.

 Celtic Steppes 33 Records 33JAZZ027 Heckstall-Smith; Claude Deppa (t); Kevin Robinson (t, flhn); Derek Wadsworth (tb); Richard Henry (btb); Lee Goodall, Ray Warleigh (as, f); Ed Jones (ss, ts); Theo Travis, Don Weller (ts); Dave Moore (ky); Lucky Ranku (g); Dylan Fowler (g, eng hn, rec); Dave Brooks (bagpipes); Laurence Cottle (b); Kenrick Rowe (d); Pete Brown, Karl van den Bossche (perc). 95.

An ambitious three-part structure that touches on Celtic themes as well as straight-ahead big-band jazz, some rock elements and a typical touch of the indefinable. The brass is too weak for what it's asked to do; no fault to the individual players, but an extra trumpet and trombone would have helped. Dick solos strongly, but he's outclassed by the other reeds.

(*) This That Atonal CD3017 Heckstall-Smith; Glen Nightingale (g); Jack Bruce (b); John Stevens (d, c). 95.

Dick, Bruce and Stevens reconvened for the first time in many years at the Outside In Festival at Crawley some time before this and enjoyed the experience enough to extend the experiment; John even designed the cover. Dick's recent experience of freer playing was pretty slight and Bruce, who'd never given up on jazz, sounds awkward in places, favouring density of sound over line. Stevens is in combative form; Nightingale's only present for the opening track. The chemistry mostly works.

Also, in brief:

(*) ... A Story Ended Sequel NEM 641. 73.

The full title is Dust In The Air Suspended ... Marks The Place Where A Story Ended and it's not often you find a jazz-rock record named after a couplet from T. S. Eliot's Four Quartets. That was the DHS paradox: an extraordinary refinement of technique, taste and intelligence, but often expressed in self-consciously vulgar ways.

(*) On The Corner, Mingus In Newcastle 33 Records 33JAZZ046. 98.

A tribute to the Mingus band that never quite comes off, either as a homage or on its own terms.

Chuck Hedges

CLARINET

An underrated Chicagoan, who started out in the '50s and keeps to his Dixieland/mainstream last.

 Skylark Delmark DE 683 Hedges; Johnny Varro (p); Ray Leatherwood (b); Gene Estes (d). 6/83.

 Swingtet Live At Andy's Delmark DE 465 Hedges; Duane Thamm (vib); Dave Bany (g); John Bany (b); Charles Braugham (d). 3–5/93.

 No Greater Love Arbors ARCD 19121 Hedges; Eddie Higgins (p); Bob Haggart (b); Gene Estes (d). 92.

 Just For Fun Arbors ARCD 19239 Hedges; Eddie Higgins (p); Paul Keller (b); Ed Metz (d). 4/00.

 Just Jammin' Arbors ARCD 19273 Hedges; Henry Buckwalter (vib); Gary Meisner (p); Dave Sullivan (g); Mike Britz (b); Andy LoDuca (d). 10/01.

Skylark was originally released on a small label as The Square Roots Of Jazz. The new title's much more suitable as an expression of Chuck's agreeable swing and Varro is on hand to power things along. 'Round Midnight' is an unusual choice for a situation like this; perhaps the pianist brought it in. The album titles are charmingly deprecating, almost dismissive. In fact, there's something thoughtful and penetrating about Hedges' Goodman-inspired playing, and on 'I Don't Stand A Ghost Of A Chance With You' on Just Jammin', with the Milwaukee Connection group, he gets into some genuinely moving territory. Sometimes the clarinet plays a little sharp, but not unattractively so. Often dismissed as a genial but bland revivalist, he's worth a closer listen than that.

Neal Hefti (born 1922)

COMPOSER, ARRANGER, TRUMPET

He started writing arrangements in his teens but played trumpet with Charlie Barnet before working for Earl Hines, crucially for Woody Herman and for Basie. Ran his own orchestra for a time but later concentrated on soundtrack work, including music for the Batman series.

 Jazz Pops Reprise/Collectors Choice 08362 Hefti; Conte Candoli, Pete Candoli, Don Fagerquist, Al Porcino, Jack Sheldon, Gerald Wilson (t); Lew McCreary, Dick Nash, Dick Noel, Tommy Pederson, George Roberts, Tommy Shepard, Kenny Shroyer (tb); Bill Hinshaw, Alan Robinson, Gale Robinson (frhn); Louis Ciotti, Buddy Collette, Justin Gordon, Bill Hood, Plas Johnson, Charlie Kennedy, Harry Klee, Joe Maini, Willie Schwartz (reeds); Emil Richards (vib); Al McKibbon (b); Shelly Manne, Earl Palmer (d); Larry Bunker (vib, perc); Jazz Pops Orchestra. 10/62.

Hefti made a considerable impact on jazz in the '50s with the Herman orchestra, but his own recordings are not highly prized. The Jazz Pops disc is an interesting example of how he approached jazz material, including 'Take Five', 'One O'Clock Jump', 'Moanin'' and 'Petite Fleur', and his own 'Coral Reef', 'Cute' and 'Li'l Darlin''. The orchestra is packed with West Coast session-stars, if such a category exists, but the interest is all in Hefti's deft voicing and subtly interwoven section work. Good to have some of his work available on CD.

Also, in brief:

(*) Pardon My Doo-Wah / Hefti Hot'N'Hearty Collectables COL 6876. 3/55, 2/58.

Brings together two Epic LPs from 1958 and 1955 respectively. Couple of versions of 'Chug-A-Lug' and a nice 'Li'l Darlin'' and 'Splanky'.

 Sure Thing: The Art Of Arrangement Ocium 0027 CD/CD-Rom. 40s–50s

A nice selection, including 'Repetition', featuring C. Parker (as).

Duke Heitger (born 1968)

TRUMPET, VOICE

Originally from Toledo, he's worked on the New Orleans scene since the early '90s. Plays seven nights a week on the Natchez.

 Rhythm Is Our Business Fantasy 9684-2 Heitger; Dan Barrett (tb); Brian Ogilvie, Tom Fischer (reeds); David Boeddinghaus (p); Rebecca Kilgore (g, v); Hank Mackie (g); Kerry Lewis (b); Chris Tyle (d). 10/98–1/99.
(*) Prince Of Wails Stomp Off CD 1367 Heitger; Evan Christopher (cl, as); John Gill (bj, g, v); Tom Saunders (tba, b). 2/01.
 What Is This Thing Called Love? Jazzology 361 Heitger; Bob Havens (tb); Evan Christopher (cl, ss, as, ts); Steve Pistorius (p); Kerry Lewis (b). 1/05.

Rhythm Is Our Business cashed in on the brief fad for swing-styled groups in America, and since it was largely made by experienced pros in the style, it's more convincing than most such discs. That said, it feels a little more affected than if it had been made under Stomp Off's jurisdiction, and Heitger shouldn't have even thought about singing when Becky Kilgore was on hand.

The trumpeter is very much a Pops acolyte, and he gets a much better showing on Prince Of Wails. He has iron chops and he really does swing into some of these pieces like the young Armstrong. Gill and Saunders are old hands at this kind of gig and Christopher is nimble and bluesy, with a very ripe tone.

The act's a bit tired by the time of the recent one, but the Wanderers are committed players and the featured Havens is an apt foil for Duke.

Mark Helias (born 1950)

DOUBLE BASS, ELECTRIC BASS

New Jersey-born and Yale-educated, he combines a streetwise toughness with real musical intelligence. Recent years have seen him as busy as ever, but somewhat diverted towards production.

 Fictionary GMR 3037 Helias; Ellery Eskelin (ts); Tom Rainey, Michael Sarin (d). 98.
(*) New School /  Verbs of Will Enja 9413 / Radio Legs 011 As above, except omit Eskelin; add Tony Malaby (ts). 01; 11/02.
(*) Atomic Clock Radio Legs 012 As above, except add Ellery Eskelin (ts). 10/04.

Some early things, including the fine Enja Loopin' The Cool, are gone. In the later '90s, Helias started working with a group known as Open Loose. Come Ahead Back to Atomic Clock are the work of an increasingly settled, but by no means formulaic, group. Though Helias is the featured composer, his dependence on Rainey's rhythmic prowess is evident in every track and the interest in drum/bass combinations is evident from the unusual line-up on the live Fictionary. Malaby is a player worthy of serious attention.

As always, the writing is of a very high order. All these records require a measure of close attention and all repay it handsomely. We'd recommend you start with New School and scroll to the long, elaborate 'Mapa' and the lovely 'Gentle Ben' first. Atomic Clock benefits from the return of Eskelin for one track, the slow, almost menacing 'Modern Scag', but most casual listeners will already have been pulled in by the brash opening 'Subway', a highlight in the Helias canon.

Joel Helleny (born 1956)

TROMBONE

Talented New Yorker, yet to realize his full potential.

 Lip Service Arbors 19161 Helleny; Dan Barrett (tb); Richard Wyands (p); Ray Macchiarola (g); Murray Wall (b); Leroy Williams (d). 12/95.

Helleny is an able mainstream player. The debut contains few surprises but will appeal to those who like the sound of old-fashioned trombone-playing of a resolutely lyrical and conservative sort. The choice of material is interestingly varied, with a fun version of 'The Andy Griffith Theme' (starring guest Dan Barrett), a rare Manny Albam tune, 'Lullaby Of Jazzland', and a Ronell Bright tune which we've not often heard on a jazz record (Hal Galper likes it). Though the leader is the main solo voice, Wyands makes as significant a contribution as one would expect.

Bob Helm (born 1914)

CLARINET, ALTO CLARINET, ALTO SAXOPHONE, VOICE

A veteran Californian revivalist, he began playing with Lu Watters and with Turk Murphy.

(*) Hotter Than That Stomp Off CD1310 Helm; Leon Oakley (c, v); Charlie Sonnanstine (tb); Ted Des Plantes (p, v); Vince Saunders (bj, g); Bill Carroll (tba); Marty Eggers (b); Bob Raggio (wbd). 10/94–1/95.

 Ma 'N' Bessie's Greater Tent Show Acts 1 & 2 Stomp Off CD1331 / 1332 As above, except add Ray Skjelbred (p); John Gill (bj, g, d, tb, v); Craig Ventresco (bj, g); Mike Walbridge (tba); Pete Devine (wbd, jug); Carol Leigh (v). 10/94–9/97.

Bob Helm's matchless knowledge of traditional styles serves these records well, the first under his leadership since a Riverside session in 1954. Hotter Than That rounds up some of the best of the Stomp Off repertory company for a marathon 20-song session that almost bursts the CD's boundaries. Although the band goes easy on the leader, some of the slower tempos suit the material better: 'Everybody Loves My Baby' is taken at an almost menacing slow jog, and Natty Dominique's 'Too Tight' sounds less clockwork at this pace. In any case, the likes of 'Hotter Than That' itself steam along.

The other two records are culled from sessions meant to re-create the style and feel of the sort of tent shows which Ma Rainey and the young Bessie Smith would have toured with, with the various aggregations listed as The Rabbit Foot Hoppers, The Barbary Coasters, The Banjo Papas and so on. Excellent fun, although Carol Leigh's singing may not be to all tastes.

Also, in brief:

 Helm! Hot Classic Jazz Sessions Trad Jazz 1001. N.D.

Private recordings of Bob at work. Dusty sound for the most part, but fascinating content.

Gerry Hemingway (born 1955)

DRUMS, PERCUSSION

An important collaborator – with Anthony Braxton, Marilyn Crispell and others – but also a considerable leader and solo performer.

* Waltzes, Two-Steps And Other Matters Of The Heart GM Recordings Inc GM 3043 Hemingway; Walter Wierbos (tb); Michael Moore (as, cl, bcl); Mark Dresser (b). 11/96.

The Hemingway Quartet toured tirelessly during 1996, at one point playing 27 concerts in a 28-day period. Two of those dates are represented here. Hemingway had recently taken charge of his own management and distribution, an overload which might have been disastrous had happenstance not lightened his load. The electronic samples which were to have accompanied the tour were lost when a computer crashed. The mishap threw Hemingway back on the band's internal resources, and Waltzes is a superb representation of its improvisational versatility. There are duos and trios, solo spots and areas of near-silence as all five ponder decays in the markedly different acoustics of the Berlin Jazz Festival and Fasching in Sweden.

Hemingway had been writing a lot of material in waltz-time, though in practice the count is often 7/4 or 9/4 rather than a strict three-quarter. That is acknowledged on the opening 'Waltz In Seven', with its mournful rubato opening. The first of the long tracks is the slow, stately 'Gitar', which opens with Hemingway on harmonica, albeit an instrument so oddly pitched that he sounds like a consort of Tibetan Buddhists playing shawms. The main melody could almost be Aaron Copland in a melancholic mood, with Wierbos playing in the lower reaches of his register. By contrast to the open-form pieces, 'Gospel Waltz' is a relatively straight-ahead blowing piece, though each of the group approaches its changes and melodic form in a quite different way. 'XI' is an arrangement of a madrigal by Gesualdo, further evidence of how tirelessly Hemingway ranges for new inspiration. 'Ari' is a traditional German waltz and an ideal curtain-piece.

(*) Devil's Paradise Clean Feed CF 10 Hemingway; Ray Anderson (tb); Ellery Eskelin (ts); Mark Dresser (b). 2/99.

This is much more like the thing, an intriguingly retrospective reworking of pieces Hemingway has had in his bag for some years. 'Back Again Some Time' was on 1991's Down To The Wire, 'Johnny's Corner Song' anchored a 1998 album of that name, and 'Toombow' has been on two previous discs. No matter. This is as strong a showing from the drummer as there is in the current catalogue. The group is a familiar one and well-versed in the compositions. The tightness of arrangements is a big plus, especially on material like 'Devil's Paradise', which gets the album off to a roaring start. Anderson is at his clever, subversive best and Dresser is the perfect partner in the rhythm section, drawing on a long association to carve some superbly understated and inventive playing.

* Double Blues Crossing Between the Lines btl 71202 Hemingway; Wolter Wierbos (tb); Frank Gratkowski (reeds); Amit Sen (clo); Kermit Driscoll (b). 10/02, 6/03.

Hemingway hit another purple patch here. This line-up is strongly reminiscent of his old European group, but the writing is even sharper, the balance of ensemble and solo spots perfectly judged and the sampled effects – notably a scratchy old 78 of fiddle tunes at the start of the main sequence – expertly handled. 'Night Town/Tent' hovers somewhere between Charles Ives and European abstraction, with a superbly detailed line and some lovely counterpoint for the other instruments.

Wierbos is the only survivor of the earlier quintet and he does his thing beautifully, arguably more attuned to this music than Ray Anderson. Kermit Driscoll lays down some fat lines on electric and acoustic basses, often driving a solid riff through a star-field of initially random sounds that gradually reveal typically Hemingwayesque structures and informing ideas. Amit Sen is the least familiar newcomer, but he fits the bill perfectly. His simple, looped line on 'Slowly Rising', the final number, contrasts nicely with the bass.

Hemingway himself moves restlessly, often sounding as if he is going to break into a more conventional metre, but strictly keeping to his slightly austere avocation. His writing has to some degree long since overtaken his playing in importance, and here he excels himself. Engaging titles, too: 'Buddy Luckett's Dream By The Dry Grass' (in two parts, no less) and 'Joe Cracklin Left This Before The River Got Him'.

* The Whimbler Clean Feed CF040 Hemingway; Herb Robertson (t); Ellery Eskelin (ts); Mark Helias (b). 3–6/04.

Almost a supergroup, this tight quartet yields up Hemingway's most effective recording since 1996's Waltzes. Eskelin was on hand for that one as well, but the replacement of Mark Dresser with Helias has given a slightly more conventional solidity to the 'rhythm section' here. That's no bad thing. Robertson comes on like the inveterate joker, except on 'The Current Underneath', where he could almost be Art Farmer at his most romantic, although his wildness is subject to strict discipline. The saxophonist is on the whole fairly constrained, reserving his most exuberant stuff for the very last cut. It's left to Helias and Hemingway to float this one out, and Gerry delivers some of his brightest playing from the kit. We thought a spot of marimba might have leavened the mix a little, certainly on 'Kinkwella' and possibly the title-cut as well, but he's a drummer first and foremost and his attention to detail here is exemplary.

Also, in brief:

 Chamber Works Tzadik 7052. 99.
Not strictly within our purview, but fans will find it consistently intriguing and hugely satisfying. Gerry's melodism comes through even when the language is fairly sparse and modernistic.

 Songs Between The Lines btl 024. 3–12/01.
A surprise package and a considerable departure for Hemingway. His approach to pop still has a worthwhile improvisational component, largely down to the wonderful Walter Wierbos (tb), and despite Lisa Sokolov's voice.

Julius Hemphill (1940–95)

ALTO AND SOPRANO SAXOPHONES

His most obvious kinship is with fellow Texan Ornette Coleman, but the resemblance is superficial. The complex polyphony of the World Saxophone Quartet, of which he was a founding member, leaches into all his work, which is urgent and thoughtful.

(*) Live In New York Red RR 123138 Hemphill; Abdul Wadud (clo). 5/76.
(*) Roi Boyé & The Gotham Minstrels Sackville SK2CD 3014/15 Hemphill (ss, as, f, v). 3/77.
Hemphill was chief composer for the World Saxophone Quartet, and his signature style was lean – some said 'raw' when his Texas roots were showing – and often drastically pared down. Seemingly inspired by Dolphy's collaborations with Ron Carter, he favoured cello as an alternative harmony instrument, enjoying a fruitful relationship with Wadud. Like Dolphy, his alto sound was piercing and intensely vocalized, and always locked into very clear musical logics. Hemphill exerted a major influence on the following generation of American musicans – Tim Berne most obviously – and his premature death was a significant loss.

The vast 'audiorama' of Roi Boyé & The Gotham Minstrels is enough in itself to guarantee Hemphill a place among the major figures of the last 50 years. Carefully multitracked, with Julius playing all the parts, it is an aural evocation of New York City and more abstractly a brilliant exercise in the integration of reed voices. For some it is the precursor of his work for and with the World Saxophone Quartet, which was an attempt to realize some of the ideas encapsulated here in real time. Hemphill's three voices, the bird-like flute, wavering, sinuous soprano and solidly vocalized alto, weave together into a single musical personality. A classic.

The duos are not so well recorded, a little too loud and indistinct, but the long 'Echo 2 (Evening)' offers a clear sense of how Hemphill's ears worked, harmonically speaking. There are moments when his stark lines seem to be light years away from Wadud's chocolatey chords and faster, more rhythmic devices. Then suddenly the whole improvisation clicks into focus as a whole. Ironically, it is these four pieces which, despite the limited personnel, offer the best introduction to Hemphill the composer. Virtually all the later things, including his 'saxophone opera', Long Tongues, and his larger ensemble and big-band projects stem from this.

CORE COLLECTION

* Flat-Out Jump Suite
Black Saint 120040 Hemphill; Olu Dara (t); Abdul Wadud (clo); Warren Smith (perc). 6/80.
Initially a more abstract session than Hemphill's later output, the Flat-Out Jump Suite builds to a rousing funk climax on 'Body'. Hemphill intones the title to each part as it begins, starting with the soft, percussion-led figures of 'Ear', plunging into the complexities of 'Mind' (which is dominated by Wadud) and then picking up a more continuous rhythm with 'Heart', on which Hemphill begins to string together his light, slightly floating textures into a more continuous, jazz-based improvisation. On the original LP, 'Mind, Part 2' opened the second side with a brief coda to the long central piece. It makes more sense as an integral drum solo, typically understated. It is, until the very end, a remarkably quiet album that requires some concentration. Dara uses his mute a good deal and otherwise plays quite softly. Hemphill seems to play a wooden flute and gives his saxophone a soft-edged quality that is very attractive.

(*) Fat Man And The Hard Blues Black Saint 120115 Hemphill; Marty Ehrlich (as, ss, f); Carl Grubbs (as, ss); James Carter, Andrew White (ts); Sam Furnace (bs, f). 7/91.
* Five Chord Stud Black Saint 120140 Tim Berne, James Carter (as, ts); Marty Ehrlich, Andrew White (ss, as, ts); Fred Ho, Sam Furnace (ss, as, bs). 11/93.
'The Hard Blues', the last and longest track on Hemphill's first post-WSQ recording, is an old tune which seemed finally to have found its appropriate setting in Hemphill's all-horn groups of the early '90s. The sextets were an obvious extension of his work with the Quartet, with the emphasis on Hemphill's composition and arranging, and on a radical variation in the usual approach to theme-and-solo jazz. This has a bearing on the music for the larger, horn groups, with themes stated solo and then improvised by the group, rather than vice versa. Hemphill avoids extremes of pitch, often building long passages on minor seconds and quasi-microtonal ideas, scoring in such a way that small variations of register and timbre take on considerable significance. That stands out on the sinuous 'Tendrils', one of the more linear themes and written chiefly for the two flautists. The piece actually seems to unravel, in contrast to the melting, blurry quality of most of the other tracks. Fat Man And The Hard Blues was both an intelligent continuation of the last decade's work and a challenging new departure.

Unfortunately, Hemphill's health subsequently deteriorated to the extent that he was not able to perform on Five Chord Stud or subsequently. Even in his absence – convalescing from the heart surgery that failed to save his life – this is unmistakably Hemphill's group and Hemphill's music. The title-piece is fascinating not least for an apparent lack of interest in textural and timbral variation: two tenor solos, three alto solos, sopranos and baritones reserved for ensembles. 'Mr Critical' is a homage to Ornette's methods and there are frequent allusions to Ornette themes throughout the session. It isn't absolutely clear whether the composer/conductor is directing the two collective improvisations (in which Ehrlich for one cuts loose), but he certainly puts his stamp very firmly on the rest.

Also, in brief:

 Blue Boyé Screwgun 70008 2CD. 77.
Solo pieces, reissued on CD by disciple Tim Berne. Hard work, for the most part.

 Chile New York Black Saint 120146. 5/80.
Duets with vibist Warren Smith used as a sound environment for a sculpture and poetry installation by Jeff Schlanger (whose ceramics appeared on later Hemphill album covers).

Eddie Henderson (born 1940)

TRUMPET, FLUGELHORN

He studied trumpet at the San Francisco Conservatory before embarking on medical studies; he has combined the two disciplines ever since.

 Realization / Inside Out Soul Brother CD SBPJ 11 Henderson; Bennie Maupin (f, af, stritch, ts, bcl); Herbie Hancock (p, ky); Pat Gleeson (syn); Buster Williams (b); Billy Hart, Eric Gravátt , Lenny White III (d). 2/73.
Miles Davis was a Henderson house-guest during a residency at the Blackhawk and, while obviously impressed by the youngster's ability to play through Sketches Of Spain without a fluff, pointed out that Eddie was going to have to work out his own approach and voice. That he has certainly done.

Despite gigs with Miles, Herbie Hancock and Joe Henderson and with his own group, Henderson has remained essentially a part-time player, and has continued practising psychiatric medicine. After working with Hancock, he made two records for the Capricorn label now reissued on a single CD. The musicians are familiar from Herbie Hancock's group and the sound-world here is a modest version of Sextant.

The ensembles are busy, chaotic in places and packed with an excess of detail. The elements are familiar enough to seasoned listeners to this period in jazz: Williams's buoyant bass, Hancock's brief commitment to abstraction, Maupin's multi-instrumentalism and here and there the ferocious drumming of Eric Gravatt. None of the compositions are memorable enough to merit separate mention; the overall effect is of hyperactive soundscape, against which Henderson's horn sounds out bright and clear. Good to have these tracks back in circulation again, even if just as period pieces.

(*) Sunburst Blue Note 38698 Henderson; Bennie Maupin (ss, ts, bcl); George Duke (ky); Alphonso Johnson, Buster Williams (b); Billy Hart, Harvey Mason (d). 3 & 4/75.
This comes after the early Capricorn recordings and while Henderson was still working with the remains of the Herbie Hancock Septet. It's a tough, funky album with plenty of sophistication in the writing and playing. Henderson tightens the grooves and despite Duke's lumpy accompaniment has the listener constantly waiting for the next harmonic surprise. The Echoplex effects and other tweaks probably sound dated now, but in the idiom of its time this is a first-rate album.

 Phantoms SteepleChase SCCD 31250 Henderson; Joe Locke (vib); Kenny Barron (p); Wayne Dockery (b); Victor Lewis (d). 4/89.

 Think On Me SteepleChase SCCD 31264 As above, except omit Lewis; add Billy Hart (d). 12/89.
The association with Steeplechase has been a fruitful one, not least in throwing Henderson up against Joe Locke. The vibist dominates Think On Me with the extraordinary 'Seven Beauties' and with the long opening piece; as so often on his own records, Henderson seems perfectly content to remain in the background, listening, not judging or forcing a conclusion, the disinterest required of the practising psychiatrist. One is always impressed by Henderson's equanimity, which sits well beside Locke's often quite fulsome expressions, but it doesn't work as well on Phantoms, where he seems detached from an assertive rhythm section.

(*) Flight Of Mind Steeple Chase SSCD 31284 Henderson; Larry Willis (p); Ed Howard (b); Victor Lewis (d). 1/91.
Flight Of Mind came soon after the death of Henderson's son and conveys fragile grace and philosophical calm. The set includes a performance of Freddie Hubbard's 'Lament For Booker' (covered later on Dark Shadows) and a magnificent interpretation of 'Un bel dì vedremo' from Madama Butterfly, a solo worthy of Miles Davis: no overblown emotion, just simple and direct statement.

(*) Dark Shadows Milestone MCD 9254 Henderson; Joe Locke (vib); George Colligan, Kevin Hays (p); Ed Howard (b); Billy Hart, Lewis Nash (d); Steve Berrios (perc); Lee Menzies (v). 9/95.
Another Henderson family connection – a happier one – attaches to this album. During the making of the record, Henderson's daughter, Lee Menzies, turned up unexpectedly after not seeing him for 15 years. It was decided on the spot that they would record the spiritual 'The Water Is Wide', which she knew from her vocal-arts course. The result is a thing of delicate, almost glassy beauty.

Henderson has never sounded more like Woody Shaw, and the interplay of trumpet and vibes here unshakeably recalls Shaw's work with Bobby Hutcherson. The centrepieces of the disc are Gordon Jenkins's 'Goodbye' (also on Flight Of Mind), followed by Locke's glorious 'Cerulean Blue', on which Hays switches to Fender Rhodes, and then the big Henderson statement. 'Dark Shadows' is one of the finest things he has ever written, rhythmically and thematically complex, and calling on a second drummer in the shape of Billy Hart. Its juxtaposition with Joe Henderson's 'Punjab' was a brilliant pick.

* Reemergence /  Oasis Sharp Nine Records CD 1012-2 / Sirocco Jazz 1015 Henderson; Kevin Hays (p); Joe Locke (vib); Ed Howard (b); Billy Drummond (d). 3/98; 3/01.
Dominated by the long and graceful 'Gershwin Suite', Reemergence is a triumphant record, a near-perfect articulation of Henderson's skills as a leader. One of his gifts is to allow his players to complete the process of creation by leaving themes, notably his own composition 'Dreams', open-ended and only loosely arranged, so that performance actually completes the process of composition and arrangement.

This time around, there are only a couple of Henderson originals in the set, which ends with the brief 'Natsuko-san', played straight and without solos, a simple message of love to his wife. Joe Locke is a key element and he brings the epic sweep of 'Saturn's Child' to the date.

The Gershwin material is pitched just right: clever, warm, life-aware and sardonic without a hint of cynicism. 'Summertime' needs something a bit special these days, and the trumpeter gives it a soaring presence that blows the clichés away. 'Embraceable You' is equally good at the end of the sequence, expressive but disciplined. Everything on the album, from Wayne Shorter's 'This Is For Albert' to the close, seems perfectly placed. Oasis is an interesting themed project, with most of the tracks bearing dry and dusty titles. In contrast to the desert iconography, the music is warm and approachable and Eddie is playing with calm authority. At the heart of the set, which kicks off with Drummond's original 'Dubai', are Wayne Shorter's 'Lost', Lee Morgan's 'Melancholee' (a slightly surprising choice for Henderson) and, breaking the desert theme, a lovely reinterpretation of Herbie Hancock's 'Cantaloupe Island'. This is now a well-seasoned group and all participants sound comfortable with the material and the generous, open-textured arrangements. Unfortunately, the sound's inconsistent.

 Times & Spaces Sirocco Music SJL 1027 Henderson; Dave Kikoski (p, ky); Ed Howard (b); Victor Lewis (d). 9/03.

The music of Miles's '60s period robbed of much of its restless energy; unless, of course, one finds Henderson's stilled, reflective readings of 'Masqualero', 'Directions' and Wayne Shorter's fine 'Angola' more interesting in this form rather than the hectic original. Henderson's lip is in good shape.

 Precious Moment Kind Of Blue KOB10008 Henderson; Kevin Hays (p, syn); Ed Howard (b); Billy Hart (d). 3/05.

An interestingly eclectic date that mixes in some fine straight playing on open-ended themes (like 'Around The World In 3/4') with some passages that seem almost to pastiche the modal vamps of Miles and Herbie Hancock groups, albeit pre-fusion and pre-Henderson Hancock. It gives the set an unusually mediated air of nostalgia, as if Eddie isn't quite sure which period he misses most. Taken rather more literally and straightforwardly, it's a more than decent set, with some excellent open and muted playing from the leader. 'Blue In Green' and 'Dear Old Stockholm' both look back, as does the opening 'To Wisdom The Prize', which has Hays on Fender Rhodes, but there's nothing self-consciously retro here, just, one suspects, a musician settling into the kind of repertoire that suits his chops and temperament best.

Also, in brief:

 Comin' Through EMI 578788. 76.

Capitol pushed Henderson into disco-funk.

 Inspiration Milestone MCD 9240. 7/94.

With Grover Washington (ss) and Joe Locke (vib). The highlight is the Hutcherson composition 'Little B's Poem'.

 Jazz Brothers Mainstem MCD 0024. 97, 99.

A solid post-bop hour from a fine quartet; Allan Farnham (p) accompanies with wit and intelligence.

(*) Encontro Em Lisboa Groove Jazz 104/105. 01.

An oddity, Henderson guesting with a Portuguese group, of whom only Bernardo Sassetti (p) and Perico Sambeat (as), who wrote most of the material, are widely known.

 So What Columbia 87172. 3/02.

Yet another Miles Davis tribute, marked out by being one of the last recordings by Bob Berg (ts), who was killed later that year.

 Echoes: Live At The Sunrise Marge FUT804625. 3/03.

A strong backing group on this excellent date from the Paris club.

Fletcher Henderson (1897–1952)

PIANO, BANDLEADER

Born in Georgia, he arrived in New York in 1920, seeking scientific work but ending up as an A&R man in the fledgling black record industry. He accompanied blues singers and began leading an orchestra at the Roseland Ballroom, recruiting Louis Armstrong and Coleman Hawkins. A car crash in 1928 dissipated his energy, but he continued to write and arrange and run occasional bands.

(*) Fletcher Henderson 1921–1923 Classics 794 Henderson; Elmer Chambers, Russell Smith, Joe Smith (c); George Brashear (tb); William Grant Still, Edgar Campbell, Ernest Elliott, Don Redman, Billy Fowler (reeds); Leroy Vanderveer, Charlie Dixon (bj); plus various unknowns. 6/21–6/23.

 Fletcher Henderson 1923 Classics 697 Henderson; Elmer Chambers, Howard Scott (c); Teddy Nixon (tb); Don Redman (cl, as); Coleman Hawkins (ts, bsx, cl); Billy Fowler (bsx); Allie Ross (vn); Charlie Dixon (bj); Ralph Escudero (bb); Kaiser Marshall (d). 6/23–4/24.

 Fletcher Henderson 1923–1924 /  Fletcher Henderson 1924 Classics 683 / 673 As above, except omit Ross. 12/23–2/24; 2–5/24.

(*) Fletcher Henderson 1924 Vol. 2 Classics 657 As above, except add Charlie Green (tb); Lonnie Brown (as); Rosa Henderson (v). 5–8/24.

 Fletcher Henderson 1924 Vol. 3 Classics 647 As above, except omit Nixon, Brown, Rosa Henderson; add Louis Armstrong (c, v); Buster Bailey (cl, as). 9–11/24.

 Fletcher Henderson 1924–1925 Classics 633 Henderson; Louis Armstrong, Elmer Chambers, Howard Scott, Joe Smith, Russell Smith (t, c); Charlie Green (tb); Don Redman (cl, as, v); Buster Bailey (cl, as); Coleman Hawkins (cl, Cmel, ts, bsx); Charlie Dixon (bj); Ralph Escudero (bb); Kaiser Marshall (d); Billy Jones (v). 11/24–11/25.

Henderson drifted into bandleading after casually working for the Black Swan record label, and his first records as a leader are routine dance music. The arrival of Louis Armstrong – whom Henderson first heard in New Orleans at the turn of the decade – galvanized the band and, eventually, every musician in New York, but he already had Don Redman and Coleman Hawkins working for him prior to Armstrong's arrival, and there are many good records before Louis's first session of October 1924. The sequence of Classics CDs has now been expanded into a complete run of Henderson's recordings (minus a few blues accompaniments); transfers are inconsistent, but these are often the only available versions of this early material.

These were skilful, if not particularly outward-looking musicians, and some of the early solos – on 'Shake Your Feet' or '31st Street Blues' – actually work out. The first disc is of no more than historical interest, though there are three interesting early solos by Henderson himself. Classics 697 includes Hawkins's first session, where he played a solo – extraordinary for 1923 – on the Vocalion version of 'Dirty Blues'. The next three CDs are inevitably mixed. Henderson barely allowed the musicians any leeway on some songs and let them have their head on others. The weakest disc is probably Classics 657, which includes a preponderance of dull tracks, although even here there are Redman's interesting chart for 'The Gouge Of Armour Avenue', featuring Green's rasping trombone, and two good versions of 'Hard Hearted Hannah'. Classics 647 goes up several gears with Armstrong's arrival, and the music always catches fire when he takes a solo, even on an early piece like the Pathé version of 'Shanghai Shuffle'. He is present on most of Classics 633 and gets a solo on most of the tracks. His cornet improvisations – with Marshall hitting the off-beat to heighten the dramatic effect – are breathtaking, especially on what would otherwise be dreary tunes, such as 'I'll See You In My Dreams' or 'I Miss My Swiss'. Some of the other musicians were getting into their stride, too: Redman delivers some strong early arrangements, Hawkins and Bailey sneak through some breaks. The best of the material – 'TNT', 'Money Blues', 'Carolina Stomp' and, above all, their hit version of 'Sugar Foot Stomp' – lets the finest black band in New York play to its strengths.

 Fletcher Henderson 1925–1926 Classics 610 As above, except omit Armstrong, Scott, Chambers; add Rex Stewart (c). 11/25–4/26.

(*) Fletcher Henderson 1926–1927 Classics 597 As above, except add Tommy Ladnier (t); Jimmy Harrison (tb); Fats Waller (p, org); June Cole (bb, v); Evelyn Thompson (v). 4/26–1/27.

(*) Fletcher Henderson 1927 Classics 580 As above, except omit Escudero, Thompson; add Jerome Pasquall (cl, as). 1–5/27.

(*) Fletcher Henderson 1927–1931 Classics 572 Henderson; Bobby Stark, Tommy Ladnier, Russell Smith, Rex Stewart, Cootie Williams (t, c); Jimmy Harrison (tb, v); Charlie Green, Claude Jones, Benny Morton (tb); Jerome Pasquall, Benny Carter, Harvey Boone (cl, as); Coleman Hawkins (cl, ts); Charlie Dixon, Clarence Holiday (bj, g); John Kirby, June Cole (bb, b); Kaiser Marshall, Walter Thompson (d); Lois Deppe, Andy Razaf (v). 11/27–2/31.

(*) The Harmony & Vocalion Sessions Volumes 1 & 2 Timeless CBC 1-064 / 1-069 As appropriate discs above. 25–26; 12/26–9/28..

By the mid-'20s Henderson was leading the most consistently interesting big band around. That doesn't mean all the records are of equal calibre; the title of a famous retrospective – 'A Study In Frustration' – gives some idea of the inconsistencies and problems of a band that apparently never sounded as good on record as in person. Even so, Redman was coming into his own, and his scores assumed a quality which no other orchestral arranger was matching in 1926–7. 'The Stampede', 'The Chant', 'Henderson Stomp', the remarkable 'Tozo' and, above all, the truly astonishing 'Whiteman Stomp' find him using the colours of reeds and brass to complex yet swinging ends. Luckily Henderson had the players who could make the scores happen. Though Armstrong had departed, Hawkins, Ladnier, Joe Smith, Jimmy Harrison and Buster Bailey all had the stature of major soloists as well as good section players. The brass sections were the best any band in New York could boast – the softer focus of Smith contrasting with the bluesy attack of Ladnier, the rasp of Rex Stewart, the lithe lines of Harrison – and the group had Hawkins (loyal enough to stay for ten years), the man who created jazz saxophone. Henderson's own playing was capable rather than outstanding, and the rhythm section lumbered a bit, though string bass and guitar lightened up the feel from 1928 onwards. It took Henderson time to attain consistency; in 1925 he was still making sides like 'Pensacola' (for Columbia), which starts with a duet between Hawkins and Redman on bass sax and goofus! But there weren't many vocals, and this let the band drive through their three-minute allocation without interruption. If Henderson never figured out the best use of that time-span (unlike Ellington, his most serious rival among New York's black bands), his players made sure that something interesting happened on almost every record.

The 1926 and 1927 discs are the most important, but there are many fine moments scattered through even second-rate pieces. Remastering is again variable; the tracks made under the name The Dixie Stompers were made for Harmony, which continued to use acoustic recording even after most other companies had switched over to the electric process in 1925, and some may find these a little archaic in timbre. Most of the transfers are acceptable, though not up to the relentlessly high standards of John R. T. Davies. The 1927–1931 disc marks the departure of Redman and Henderson's first steps as arranger. Guest appearances by Fats Waller – who reportedly gave Henderson a dozen tunes in trade for a plate of hamburgers – and Benny Carter accompany the arrival of the fine and undervalued trumpeter Bobby Stark, whose solos on 'Blazin'' and 'Sweet And Hot' find a lyrical streak somewhere between Joe Smith and Rex Stewart. But the band was already in decline, especially following Henderson's car accident in 1928, after which he was never the same man; they cut only three record dates in 1929 and three in 1930, compared with 17 in 1927.

The two Timeless compilations complicate matters somewhat, since they focus on Henderson's output for two companies alone. (He also had records issued on Columbia, Paramount, Gennett, Banner and other labels during the period.) Sprucer packaging and superior remastering give these two strong claims, though at this point few other than specialists are likely to want such detailed coverage.

 Fletcher Henderson 1931 Classics 555 As above, except omit Ladnier, Green, Pasquall, Dixon, Cole, Marshall, Deppe, Razaf; add Sandy Williams (tb); Russell Procope (cl, as); Edgar Sampson (cl, as, vn); Horace Henderson (p); George Bias, Dick Robertson (v). 2–7/31.

(*) Fletcher Henderson 1931–1932 Classics 546 Henderson; Russell Smith, Bobby Stark (t); Rex Stewart (c); Sandy Williams, J. C. Higginbotham (tb); Russell Procope (cl, ss, as); Edgar Sampson (cl, as, vn); Coleman Hawkins (cl, ts); Clarence Holiday, Ikey Robinson (bj, g); John Kirby (bb, b); Walter Johnson (d); John Dickens, Harlan Lattimore, Baby Rose Marie, Les Reis, Dick Robertson (v). 7/31–3/32.

(*) Fletcher Henderson 1932–1934 Classics 535 As above, except omit Robinson, Holiday, Lattimore, Marie, Reis, Robertson; add Henry 'Red' Allen ; Joe Thomas, Irving Randolph (t); Keg Johnson, Claude Jones, Dicky Wells (tb); Buster Bailey (cl); Hilton Jefferson (cl, as); Ben Webster (ts); Horace Henderson (p); Bernard Addison, Lawrence Lucie (g); Elmer James (b); Vic Engle (d); Charles Holland (v). 12/32–9/34.

 Fletcher Henderson 1934–1937 Classics 527 Henderson; Russell Smith, Irving Randolph, Henry 'Red' Allen , Dick Vance, Roy Eldridge, Joe Thomas, Emmett Berry (t); Ed Cuffee (tb, v); Keg Johnson, Claude Jones, Fernando Arbello, George Washington, J. C. Higginbotham (tb); Omer Simeon (cl, as, bs); Jerry Blake (cl, as, v); Buster Bailey, Hilton Jefferson, Russell Procope, Jerome Pasquall (cl, as); Benny Carter, Scoops Carey (as); Ben Webster, Elmer Williams, Chu Berry (ts); Horace Henderson (p); Bob Lessey, Lawrence Lucie (g); Elmer James, John Kirby, Israel Crosby (b); Walter Johnson, Big Sid Catlett (d); Teddy Lewis, Georgia Boy Simpkins, Dorothy Derrick (v). 9/34–3/37.

 Fletcher Henderson 1937–1938 Classics 519 Henderson; Russell Smith, Emmett Berry, Dick Vance (t); George Washington, Ed Cuffee, Milt Robinson, George Hunt, J. C. Higginbotham, Albert Wynn, John McConnell (tb); Jerry Blake (cl, as, v); Eddie Barefield (cl, as); Hilton Jefferson (as); Chu Berry, Elmer Williams, Ben Webster (ts); Lawrence Lucie (g); Israel Crosby (b); Walter Johnson, Cozy Cole, Pete Suggs (d); Chuck Richards (v). 3/37–5/38.

Henderson's music was already in decline when the '30s began, and by the end of the decade the orchestra was a shadow of its glory days. Ironically, it was Henderson's own work as an arranger in this period which set off the swing era, via the charts he did for Benny Goodman. The 1931 and 1931–1932 discs offer bewildering juxtapositions of corn (Henderson employed some excruciating singers at this time) and real jazz. The extraordinary 'Strangers', on Classics 546, includes an amazing Coleman Hawkins solo in the middle of an otherwise feeble record, while some of the tunes which the Hendersonians might have been expected to handle well – 'Casa Loma Stomp' (Classics 546) and 'Radio Rhythm' (Classics 555) – turn out poorly. Yet the band was still full of fine ensemble players and soloists, and some of the Horace Henderson arrangements from this time – especially 'Queer Notions', 'Yeah Man' and 'Wrappin' It Up' (all on Classics 535) – are as well managed as any band of the period could do. Besides, while players of the calibre of Hawkins, Allen and (subsequently) Webster, Berry and Eldridge were on hand, there can't help but be fine moments on many of the records. Classics 535 is certainly the pick of these later discs. Classics 527 and 519, which were recorded mainly after Henderson temporarily disbanded in 1934 and worked with Goodman, show the vitality of the band sagging; the final dozen sides might have been played by any competent dance orchestra.

Horace Henderson (1904–88)

PIANO

Fletcher's brother never had a career of the same stature, but he was a gifted pianist and a fine arranger. He was still working as a musician in Denver in the late '60s.

* Horace Henderson 1940 Classics 648 Henderson; Emmett Berry, Harry 'Pee Wee' Jackson, Gail Brockman, Nat Bates (t); Harold 'Money' Johnson (t, v); Ray Nance (t, vn); Edward Fant, Nat Atkins, Joe McLewis, Leo Williams, Archie Brown (tb); Delbert Bright (cl, as); Willie Randall, Howard Johnson, Charles Q. Price (as); Elmer Williams, Dave Young, Mosey Gant, Bob Dorsey, Lee Pope (ts); Leonard Talley (bs); Hurley Ramey, Leroy Harris (g); Jesse Simpkins, Israel Crosby (b); Oliver Coleman, Debo Williams (d); Viola Jefferson (v). 2–10/40.

'One of the most talented yet most neglected and enigmatic figures in all of jazz' – Gunther Schuller's verdict sounds over-enthusiastic, but the 1940 tracks collected on this important CD (which include a few 'bonus' cuts from 1941 by Fletcher's band) go a long way towards bearing out his verdict. Fletcher's brother was a fine, Hines-like pianist, but it was his arranging that was outstanding: the 16 themes collected here include charts by both brothers, and the contrasts between Fletcher's stylized call-and-response figures and Horace's fluid, overlapping ideas are remarkable. Horace's band was full of fine soloists, who received sometimes unprecedented space: Nance has two full choruses of violin on the engaging 'Kitty On Toast' and Berry is generously featured throughout: his 'Ain't Misbehavin'' melody is beautifully sustained. But it's the section work, the saxes full and rich, the brass outstandingly punchy, which brings complex charts to life: 'Shufflin' Joe' is a little masterpiece of varied dynamics and interwoven tone-colours. The rhythm players – including the young Israel Crosby – are as good as their colleagues.

Joe Henderson (1937–2001)

TENOR AND SOPRANO SAXOPHONES

Born in Lima, Ohio, he arrived in New York in 1962 a fully formed stylist. Worked with Horace Silver, Freddie Hubbard and Herbie Hancock, as well as in Blood, Sweat And Tears. He moved to San Francisco in the '70s and recorded for Milestone, before re-emerging in the mid-'80s, first on Blue Note and then with an acclaimed sequence of albums for Verve. He was acknowledged as one of the last great tenormen of the original hard-bop generation.

* Page One Blue Note 98795 Henderson; Kenny Dorham (t); McCoy Tyner (p); Butch Warren (b); Pete Sims (d). 6/63.

Henderson was a thematic musician, working his way round the structure of a composition with methodical intensity, but he was also a masterful licks player, with a seemingly limitless stock of phrases that he could turn to advantage in any post-bop setting; this gave his best improvisations a balance of surprise, immediacy and coherence few other saxophonists could match. His lovely tone, which combines softness and a harsh plangency in a similar way, is another pleasing aspect of his music. Page One was his first date as a leader, and it still stands as one of the most popular Blue Notes of the early '60s. Henderson had not long since arrived in New York after being discharged from the army, and this six-theme set is very much the work of a new star on the scene. 'Recorda-Me', whose Latinate lilt has made it a staple blowing vehicle for hard-bop bands, had its debut here, and the very fine tenor solo on Dorham's 'Blue Bossa' explains much of why Henderson was creating excitement. Everything here, even the throwaway blues 'Homestretch' is impressively handled.

* Our Thing Blue Note 25647-2 Henderson; Kenny Dorham (t); Andrew Hill (p); Eddie Khan (b); Pete Sims (d). 9/63.
(*) In 'n Out Blue Note 96508 Henderson; Kenny Dorham (t); McCoy Tyner (p); Richard Davis (b); Elvin Jones (d). 4/64.
* Inner Urge Blue Note 78727 Henderson; McCoy Tyner (p); Bob Cranshaw (b); Elvin Jones (d). 11/64.
(*) Mode For Joe Blue Note 91894 Henderson; Lee Morgan (t); Curtis Fuller (tb); Bobby Hutcherson (vib, mar); Cedar Walton (p); Ron Carter (b); Louis Hayes, Joe Chambers (d). 1/66.

Our Thing has long been a Blue Note fans' favourite and is the centrepiece in the triptych of albums with Dorham which were issued under Henderson's nominal leadership. Dorham brought in three tunes, Henderson two, and, with no filler blues jam of any kind, this is an unusually consistent Blue Note date, with Hill's cryptic commentaries and superb work from Khan and LaRoca. While a serious collector wouldn't want to be without any of these sessions, the less committed could make do with this one on the shelf. The new RVG edition has a bonus alternative take of the opener, 'Teeter Totter'.

Inner Urge, which features Henderson as sole horn, is dark and intense music. The title-tune, commemorating Henderson's experiences of trying to make a living in New York, is a blistering effort at a medium tempo, and it's interesting to compare Tyner and Jones as they are with Henderson rather than with Coltrane. While the atmosphere isn't as teeth-grittingly intense, it's scarcely less visceral music. Even the sunny reading of 'Night And Day' musters a terrific urgency via Jones's continuously glittering cymbals.

Mode For Joe plants Henderson in a bigger environment, and at times he sounds to be forcing his way out: the solos on the title-track and 'A Shade Of Jade' make a baroque contrast with the otherwise tempered surroundings. Chambers drums with pile-driving intensity in places and, though the large number of players tends to constrict the soloists at a time when Henderson could handle all the stretching out he was given, it's still a fine record. The latest RVG edition includes an alternative take of Cedar Walton's tune 'Black'.

The earlier In 'N' Out is more of Henderson and Dorham together. Henderson's three tunes are the standout pieces, the quizzical title-track, the haunting theme of 'Punjab', the charming 'Serenity'. Dorham seems to be thinking through his solos rather than punching them out and, while in general the temperature seems rather lower than on Henderson's other Blue Notes, it's fascinating, profound music.

(*) The Kicker Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 465 Henderson; Mike Lawrence (t); Grachan Moncur III (tb); Kenny Barron (p); Ron Carter (b); Louis Hayes (d). 8/67.

(*) Tetragon / In Pursuit Of Blackness BGP CDBGPD 084 Henderson; Woody Shaw (t, flhn); Curtis Fuller (tb); Pete Yellin (as, f, bcl); Kenny Barron, Don Friedman, George Cables (p); Ron Carter, Ron McClure, Stanley Clarke (b); Louis Hayes, Jack DeJohnette, Lenny White (d). 9/67–5/71.

(*) At The Lighthouse Milestone 47104 Henderson; Woody Shaw (t, flhn); George Cables (p); Ron McClure (b); Lenny White (d); Tony Waters (perc). 9/70.

(*) Joe Henderson In Japan Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1040 Henderson; Hideo Ichikawa (p); Kunimitsu Inaba (b); Motohiko Hino (d). 8/71.

 Multiple Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 776 Henderson; Larry Willis (ky); James Blood Ulmer, John Thomas (g); Dave Holland (b); Jack DeJohnette (d); Arthur Jenkins (perc). 1/73.

 The Milestone Years Milestone 4413-2 8CD As above discs. 69–76.

A disheartening step after the Blue Note albums, The Kicker, Henderson's debut for Milestone, is respectable but prosaic stuff, with Lawrence and Moncur adding little of interest and the tracks sounding short and 'produced'. BGP's coupling of two later albums on a single CD is a much better choice: the sessions for Tetragon offer some very hard-edged playing by the leader, with a riveting dissection of 'Invitation', and the four Henderson originals from the Blackness date are blown open over polyrhythmic bases that the horns meet head-on. The sound and feel are sometimes a little more dated than the straight tenor-and-rhythm tracks – Cables uses a tinkly electric piano, and there are elements of fashionable freak-out in some of the ensembles – but it's a valuable CD. Some of it was recorded on the occasion which produced At The Lighthouse, which is an expanded edition of the LP known as If You're Not Part Of The Solution, You're Part Of The Problem. Henderson and Shaw play some of the leader's choicest compositions in a steaming live showcase, one of the most fondly remembered Henderson albums of the period. Multiple is another that has worn less well: Henderson doubles on soprano, flute and percussion (and even does some chanting), Willis plays electric keyboards, and the guitarists strum to no great purpose; yet the saxophonist still earns the stars for the surprising tenor solos. Tetragon is also now available by itself on Original Jazz Classics OJC 844.

Never mind that the in-concert sound on In Japan (recorded at Tokyo's Junk Club!) is no better than documentary quality – this is hard, vital Henderson. He opens 'Round Midnight' with a typically severe cadenza, and the three longish tracks which follow have as much of the band as they do of him. This was a difficult period for players of Henderson's gifts, but he clearly received hosannas when he went to Japan, and the trio play above themselves in splendid support. The big box of The Milestone Years is let down by having some of the worst and the best of Henderson, since it also includes such poor later efforts as Black Miracle, but it's at least a truthful portrait of how Joe made his way through the '70s.

(*) Relaxin' At Camarillo Original Jazz Classics OJC 776 Henderson; Chick Corea (p); Tony Dumas, Richard Davis (b); Peter Erskine; Tony Williams (d). 8–12/79.

(*) Mirror, Mirror MPS 519092-2 Henderson; Chick Corea (p); Ron Carter (b); Billy Higgins (d). 1/80.

Henderson and Corea made an improbable but productive team: Joe's doggedly unpredictable lines asked the pianist to concentrate, and a fundamentally lyrical bent is something they both share, even if Corea usually oversweetens his playing. The OJC reissue just has the edge for a long, firmly sustained treatment of 'Y Todavia La Quiero', one of the best of Henderson's Latin tunes – but there is excellent jazz on both discs.

CORE COLLECTION

* The State Of The Tenor Volumes One And Two Blue Note 828779-2 2CD Henderson; Ron Carter (b); Al Foster (d). 11/85.

Although they had a mixed reception on their release, these records now sound as authoritative as their titles suggest. Henderson hadn't recorded as a leader for some time, and this was his return to the label where he commenced his career, but there is nothing hesitant or routine about the playing here. Carter and Foster provide detailed support – the dates were carefully prepared, the themes meticulously chosen and rehearsed, before the recordings were made at New York's Village Vanguard – and the bassist in particular is as inventive as the nominal leader. Henderson takes an occasional wrong turning, noted perhaps in a recourse to a favourite lick or two, but he functions mainly at the highest level. The intelligent choice of themes – from Silver, Monk, Mingus, Parker and others, none of them over-familiar – prises a rare multiplicity of phrase-shapes and rhythmical variations out of the tenorman: as a single instance, listen to his manipulations of the beat on Mingus's 'Portrait' (on Volume Two), with their accompanying subtleties of tone and attack. Both volumes have now been coupled as a mid-price two-disc set.

(*) Lush Life Verve 511779-2 Henderson; Wynton Marsalis (t); Stephen Scott (p); Christian McBride (b); Gregory Hutchinson (d). 91.

This fine Verve debut is a programme of Billy Strayhorn compositions done as one solo ('Lush Life'), three duos (one with each member of the rhythm section), a lovely quartet reading of 'Blood Count' and three pieces with Marsalis joining the front line, of which 'Johnny Come Lately' is especially spirited. If Henderson's delivery sounds a fraction less assured than he does at his best, the quality of his thinking is as outstanding as always and, though there is the odd tiny blemish – Scott's treatment of 'Lotus Blossom' is irritatingly clever – it's a splendid record, which won wide acclaim and sales and brought Joe back to the forefront of jazz attention.

* So Near, So Far (Musings For Miles) Verve 517674-2 Henderson; John Scofield (g); Dave Holland (b); Al Foster (d). 10/92.

Henderson's virtual rebirth continued with a tribute to Miles Davis from four former sidemen (Henderson played with Davis briefly in the mid-'60s) that stands as a masterclass of top-flight improvising. Impeccably prepared charts for the likes of 'Miles Ahead', boiled down from the original Gil Evans arrangement to a setting for four-piece, directed the players to a particularly acute yet heartfelt memorial. Many of the tunes associated with Davis as composer have scarcely been covered by other players, which adds a note of unusual freshness, but the scope and calibre of the improvising by all four men is what one remembers. Scofield's runs of melody are a match for Henderson's own, and Holland and Foster – the latter in some of his finest playing – are a dream team.

(*) Shade Of Jade: Joe Henderson Big Band Verve 533451-2 Henderson; Lew Soloff, Marcus Belgrave, Freddie Hubbard, Idrees Sulieman, Jimmy Owens, Jon Faddis, Virgil Jones, Nicholas Payton, Byron Stirling (t); Robin Eubanks, Jimmy Knepper, Kiane Zawadi, Douglas Purviance, Conrad Herwig, Keith O'Quinn , Dave Taylor, Larry Farrell (tb); Craig Handy, Joe Temperley, Bob Porcelli, Pete Yellin, Dick Oatts, Steve Wilson, Tim Ries, Gary Smulyan (reeds); Chick Corea, Ronnie Mathews (p); Christian McBride (b); Louis Nash (d); Bob Belden (cond). 92–96.

A half-finished project in 1992, this was completed in 1996 and is almost Henderson's forgotten album. Yet it's one of his best. He did much of the scoring himself, in association with Belden, and his own solos have much of his old brio allied with the gravitas he has latterly assumed. The various orchestras involved offer a generational mix that doesn't seem to confound the continuity of the album, and in 'Shade Of Jade' and 'Without A Song' they frame the saxophonist with a sophistication that makes one wish that these expensive projects were less of a rarity.

 Porgy And Bess Verve 539048-2 Henderson; Conrad Herwig (tb); Stefon Harris (vib); Tommy Flanagan (p); John Scofield (g); Dave Holland (b); Jack DeJohnette (d); Sting, Chaka Khan (v). 5/97.

Gimcracked around Henderson as soloist, here is yet another jazz Porgy And Bess. Line by line there is much to enjoy, but the guest vocalists reek of bought-in stardom, the playing has an elephantine grace, and there is nothing here that Henderson didn't do better in other circumstances. A pity that this was his final bow: 'The Phantom', as his fellow musicians called him, slipped quietly away in 2001.

Also, in brief:

(*) The Elements Original Jazz Classics OJC 913. 10/73.

The kind of world music programme John Coltrane (Alice is on this session) might have been asked to do, had he lived.

(*) Canyon Lady Original Jazz Classics OJC 949. 10/73.

Latin-lite wasn't Joe's métier and he's thrown away on this.

 An Evening With Joe Henderson Red 123215-2. 7/87.

From the Genoa Festival, with Charlie Haden (b) and Al Foster (d).

(*) The Standard Joe Red RR 123248-2. 3/91.

An off-the-cuff trio blowing date, similar to the other Red, but with Rufus Reid (b) in for Haden.

 Double Rainbow Verve 527222-2. 95.

Intended as a collaboration with Antonio Carlos Jobim, it turned into a memorial. Everyone involved plays well, but one longs for a really outstanding solo or for something to break up the impression of sunlit lite-jazz.

Jon Hendricks (born 1921)

VOICE

Born in Newark, Ohio. He was spotted by Charlie Parker and advised to make music his career. With Dave Lambert and Annie Ross, he founded a stylish vocalese trio. After its final break-up, he spent some time in England and as a music critic but has continued to record.

 A Good Git-Together EMI 69812 Hendricks; Nat Adderley (c); Cannonball Adderley (as); Pony Poindexter (as, v); Gildo Mahones (p); Buddy Montgomery (vb); Wes Montgomery (g); Ike Isaacs, Monk Montgomery (b); Walter Bolden (d); Bill Perkins (perc). 59.

Hendricks's first album as a leader resurfaced on CD in 2006. Right from the opening 'I'm Gonna Shout (Everything Started In The House Of The Lord)', which also closes the record, it's a set full of bubbling energy. A few of the songs were co-written – with Mahones, Gigi Gryce, Randy Weston – and a couple were apparently written for Louis Jordan, whom Hendricks occasionally and remotely resembles. The backings are all good and some will be attracted to the record first for glimpses of the Adderleys and Montgomerys, but it's Jon's date and 'Minor Catastrophe', 'Social Call' and the exuberant title-track are all vintage vocal jazz.

 ¡Salud! João Gilberto: Originator Of The Bossa Nova Collectables COL 6197 Hendricks; Pete Candoli (t); Milt Bernhart (tb); Buddy Collette (f); Gildo Mahones (p); Ray Sherman (org); Frank Messin (acc); Jimmie Smith (d); strings. 63.

With scores coming out since, it's tempting to dismiss this as another bossa bandwagon date, but Hendricks was almost first in the frame, meeting Gilberto early on (they apparently improvised together before a word was spoken) and making this fine tribute record before the boom really took hold. Hendricks's words for 'Chega De Saudade (No More Blues)' have become standard, but his other lyrics here are less well-known. 'Trem De Ferro (Little Train Of Iron)' is a delightful miniature; 'Coisa Mais Linda (The Most Beautiful)' is charming and more substantial. Bossa remained a key component of Hendricks's vocal style and performance, but surprisingly this was his only full-scale essay in the form.

Also, in brief:

 In Person At The Trident Verve 010601-2. 64.

Reissued from the original Smash recording, this catches Hendricks near his best, scatting and singing with great authority.

 Boppin' At The Blue Note Telarc 83320. 12/93.

Nothing ever quite added up to the sheer esprit of Lambert, Hendricks and Ross, but there are flashes on the later records that allow one to gauge the size and scope of Hendricks's remarkable talent. The other plus here is the chance to hear Wynton Marsalis scatting like Dizzy Gillespie, which he does with great humour and some dexterity.

Ian Hendrickson-Smith (born 1973)

ALTO AND TENOR SAXOPHONES, FLUTE

Born in New Orleans, he's more in the New York line of smouldering hard/post-boppers.

 Up In Smoke Sharp Nine 1025 Hendrickson-Smith; David Hazeltine (p); Barak Mori (b); Joe Strasser (d). 9/02.

(*) Still Smokin' Sharp Nine 1031 As above, except omit Mori; add Peter Washington (b). 1/04.

 Blues In The Basement Cellar Live 1005 Hendrickson-Smith; Dave Guy (t); Rick Germanson (p); Neal Miner (b); Brian Floody (d); Bosco Mann (perc). 6/06.

He's an exciting player and the first of these is an edgy, enjoyable live set – from Smoke on New York's Upper West Side – that captures H-S's abrasive but accurate sound and deft touch with imaginative repertoire. No one much calls for 'The Best Things In Life Are Free' on a hard-bop date, and no one much is programming Cal Tjader tunes at all. His bop chops are best sampled on 'Segment', though it's McLean rather than Bird who's the obvious influence on alto. Hazeltine's a known quantity and always a reliable accompanist; he takes some terrific solos. The rest of the group perform well, but – no slight to Mori – the arrival of Peter Washington on the second record does give it a new dimension. The material's every bit as intriguing as before. H-S's two compositions are tucked away modestly in the middle of the set, workmanlike rather than exceptional (as is Hazeltine's 'Ian's Bossa'), but he does interesting things like play 'I Can't Get Started' (collective groans: not again!) on flute, which changes the rules a bit, and when he tackles the Jackie McLean-favoured 'Smile' he gives it a very individual spin. The most recent of the discs is the only one that sounds much like Blue Note revivalism. The group's fine, with Germanson an able replacement for the more lyrical Hazeltine, but there's something slightly programmed and self-conscious about the approach this time and Ian's heard on tenor, which isn't his strongest horn; still terrific, and very enjoyable, but lacking in that extra spark of originality.

Ernie Henry (1926–57)

ALTO SAXOPHONE

A Brooklynite, he was on the brink of a major career in bebop, having worked with Tadd Dameron, Gillespie, Monk and Mingus, when he died prematurely.

 Presenting Ernie Henry Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1920 Henry; Kenny Dorham (t); Kenny Drew (p); Wilbur Ware (b); Art Taylor (d). 8/56.

 Seven Standards And A Blues Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1722 Henry; Kenny Dorham (t); Wynton Kelly (p); Wilbur Ware (b); Philly Joe Jones (d). 9/57.

 Last Chorus Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1906 As above discs, except add Lee Morgan (t); Melba Liston (tb); Benny Golson (ts); Cecil Payne (bs); Thelonious Monk (p); Oscar Pettiford, Paul Chambers (b); Max Roach (d). 8/56–9/57.

Henry's few records reveal a limited but vividly creative post-Parker altoist. His intense tone points towards Jackie McLean, even as his phrasing mixes the wistfulness of Dameron and Parker's high drama. Presenting Ernie Henry is sloppy in its execution, with Dorham sounding unsure of himself and the rhythm section unfamiliar with the originals: the lingering power is in the leader's assertive and slightly off-centre improvising. Seven Standards And A Blues is arguably his best record: not quite fast enough to stand next to the best boppers, Henry instead makes a mark through the plangency of his phrases. On these show-tunes (and the Dameron-like blues 'Specific Gravity') he leaves a telling impression. Last Chorus was cobbled together from a four-tune session featuring Henry's 'All Stars', plus an alternative version of 'Cleo's Chant' from the debut and a track from Monk's Brilliant Corners session. Interesting bits and pieces.

Peter Herbert (born 1960)

DOUBLE BASS

Fine instrumentalist and composer, from whom much is expected.

(*) B-A-C-H A Chromatic Universe Between the Lines btl 013 Herbert; Ingrid Jensen (t, flhn); Carol Robinson (bcl); Marc Copland (p); Kenny Wollesen (d). 9/00.

In German notation, the letters of Bach's name yield the sequence B flat – A – C – B natural. It was a device known to the master himself, and many later composers have exploited it. Few jazz musicians have ventured into this territory, but Herbert has created an album of delicate beauty out of these materials. Most of these tracks are either instrumental exercises based on the B-A-C-H motif or else compositions inspired by moments in the composer's life: his father's role as Stadtpfeifer, the Divi Blasii church where Johann Sebastian served, and so on. The stroke of genius was in seeing that the ground bass of Baroque music – also an obsession of label boss Franz Koglmann – was similar to the chordal progression of jazz. Jensen, Copland and Robinson contribute delightfully improvised sections to the set, but the basic conception is Herbert's and the closing section consisting of 'Actus Tragicus' and 'Heavy Snow' will melt the hardest heart.

Peter Herborn

TROMBONE, BANDLEADER

Enterprising contemporary big-band leader who combines the sophisticated voicings of European composer-arrangers like Mike Gibbs with something of the boiling intensity of John Coltrane's large-scale projects.

 Acute Insights Winter & Winter 919017 Herborn; Kenny Wheeler (t, flhn); Wollie Kaiser (ss, ts, bcl, af, bf); Hugo Read (as, f); Tim Wells (b); Jo Thönes (d, perc). 11/87, 1/88.

(*) Something Personal Winter & Winter 919054 Herborn; Tim Berne (as); Django Bates (p); Marc Ducret (g); Lindsey Horner (b); Auryn String Quartet. 5/91.

* Traces Of Trane Winter & Winter 919059 Herborn; Rob Bruynen, Andy Haderer, Rick Kiefer, John Marshall, Klaus Osterloh (t, flhn); Robin Eubanks, Dave Horler, Bernt Laukamp, Ludwig Nuss, Edward Partyka (tb); Olivier Peters, Paul Peucker, Stefan Pfeifer, Rolf Römer , Gary Thomas, Heiner Wiberny (reeds); Frank Chastenier (p); Marc Ducret (g); Mark Helias (b); Tom Rainey (d). 2/92.

Herborn's music is still underrated, He writes big chunky charts, but with an aura of mystery. 'Free, Forward And Ahead', the opening chart on Acute Insights, is a marvellous thing, best summed up by the title of an earlier and deleted record: Subtle Wildness. It's topped by 'All Along The Sunstream' (worthy of Gil Evans) and only falters slightly on the overlong 'Life Force/ Living Yet', which ends the record. Wheeler is in magisterial form, but a word for Thönes, who drives things along superbly. The second of these, also originally on JMT, is more rarefied, but Bates plays with rare concentration and discipline and the strings have a crucial structural part. The writing is perhaps less compelling and the music requires a certain effort of attention, but it's stirring enough in its way. The Coltrane project is altogether remarkable. 'My Favorite Things' is arguably a soft-centred opening – the rackety 'Impressions', used as theme music to the BBC Radio 3 jazz programme of that name, might have been more effective – but there isn't a slack moment or dull track on the record, which includes an unsentimental 'Naima', a medley of 'Love/To Be/The Drum Thing' and the two opening parts of A Love Supreme. It's not clear whether the orchestra recorded the remainder; if so, it would be good to hear that restored. This is streets ahead of the familiar Trane-tribute genre. Herborn's arranging skills are unmistakable, but he always has a story to tell in addition.

Also, in brief:

 Large One Jazzline JL 1154. 5/97.
This, and its 2003 successor, Large Two, may still be in circulation, but we have not seen it for some time. Bold charts as ever, but inconsistently recorded.

Benjamin Herman (born 1968)

ALTO SAXOPHONE

Dutch post-bopper who started out on drums.

(*) Plays Jaki Byard Challenge CHR 75120 Herman; Pierre Christophe (p); Jos Machtel (b); Joost van Schalk (d). 12/01.
Byard is one of the neglected geniuses of modern music and this beautifully recorded disc pays fruitful homage. 'D.D.L.J.' (a family self-portrait of the Byards) is typical; shorn of sentiment, tough-minded and a hard ask for the saxophonist, who handles it consummately. We believe that Christophe may have been a pupil of Jaki's. He handles the charts with equal ease and is a full partner as far as soloing is concerned, but it's Herman's bright, plangent horn that dominates here. 'Aluminum Baby' is the other obvious pick.

 The Itch Dox 019 Herman; Anton Goudsmit (p); Ernst Glerum (b); Han Bennink (d). 2/06.

 The London Session Dox 032 Herman; Bart van Lier (tb); Stan Tracey (p); Andrew Cleyndert (b); Clark Tracey (d). 10/06.
Herman has an appealing delivery, somewhat reminiscent at moments of Peter King, which may have helped endear him to Stan Tracey. The London sessions are, to be honest, delightfully hijacked by the trombonist, who's in excellent spirits; that, plus the sterling work of the Tracey trio, doesn't give Benjamin much chance to stamp his personality on the set, though the pianist gives him every encouragement. On balance, we prefer the home-grown set, which, of course, benefits from two of the best inside/outside players in the business in Glerum and Bennink. There are a few more records – including some attributed to the New Cool Collective – on Herman's website, but they haven't come our way.

Also, in brief:

 Plays Misha Mengelberg A Records 73203. 01.
One of the great Dutch musicians of the older generation respectfully saluted by one of the younger guys.

() Campert Dox 040. 07.
Only received right at press-time, but it sounds a fine and solid set.

Woody Herman (1913–87)

CLARINET, ALTO AND SOPRANO SAXOPHONES, VOICE

Began as a child in vaudeville, took over the Isham Jones band in 1936 and kept it afloat until the mid-'40s. His Second (1947–9) and Third (1952–4) Herds were star-studded big bands, led with indomitable showmanship. He constantly updated his repertoire while never neglecting his library of swing-era hits and was still leading small groups and larger bands into his 70s, although his last years were troubled by tax problems.

 At The Woodchopper's Ball ASV AJA 5143 Herman; Clarence Willard, Kermit Simmons, Steady Nelson, Mac MacQuordale, Bob Price, John Owens, Ray Linn, Cappy Lewis, George Seaberg, Billy Rogers, Charles Peterson (t); Joe Bishop (flhn); Neal Reid, Toby Tyler, Buddy Smith, Vic Hamann, Tommy Farr, Walter Nimms (tb); Murray Williams, Don Watt, Joe Estrin, Ray Hopfner, Herb Tompkins, Joe Denton, Eddie Scalzi, Jimmy Horvath, Sam Rubinowich (as); Saxie Mansfield, Bruce Wilkins, Pete Johns, Ronnie Perry, Nick Caiazza, Sammy Armato, Mickey Folus, Herbie Haymer, Pete Mondello (ts); Skippy DeSair (bs); Horace Diaz, Tommy Linehan (p); Nick Hupfer (vn); Chick Reeves, Hy White (g); Walter Yoder (b); Frank Carlson (d). 3/36–1/42.

 Woody Herman 1936–1937 Classics 1042 Similar to above. 2/36–8/37.

 Woody Herman 1937–1938 Classics 1090 Similar to above. 10/37–12/38.
Woody Herman didn't secure his principal fame until after these early tracks were made, but as an instrumentalist and vocalist he was already a characterful performer, and the prewar sides were centred mainly on him. There was some light pop fodder in among them, and while the band is short on strong soloists – trombonist Reid and flugelhorn-player Bishop, who also contributed several of the charts, are about the best of them – the arrangements make the most of simple blues resources, one reason why the orchestra was called 'The Band That Plays The Blues'. By the '40s, though, Herman was seeking out superior material and hiring sharper musicians. Woody himself was a clarinettist whose easy-going playing lacked the brilliance of Goodman or Shaw but who made up in affable, on-the-beat timing. A few tracks on the ASV set are by the small band of The Four Chips and the immortal 'Woodchoppers' Ball' is here in its original version.

Classics have begun their usual chronological survey with two volumes that start with what was still the Isham Jones orchestra and get as far as the small-group 'River Bed Blues' on Classics 1090. Herman sounds undecided at times whether to go for a Crosby-like Dixieland feel or choose the smooth Dorsey route. Either way, he was still short on star soloists and took a lot of the weight himself. He sings on most of the early tracks, too, revealing an appealing mid-range voice that had to deal with songs such as 'I Wanna Be In Winchell's Column' and 'Broadway's Gone Hawaii'. Decent sound, although some of the very early tracks have a lot of surface noise.

(*) Woody Herman 1939 Classics 1128 Herman; Clarence Willard, Jerry Neary, Steady Nelson, Mac MacQuordale, Bob Price (t); Neal Reid, Toby Tyler (tb); Joe Bishop (flhn); Joe Estrin, Ray Hopfner, Joe Denton (as); Saxie Mansfield, Pete Johns (ts); Tommy Linehan (p); Hy White (g); Walter Yoder (b); Frank Carlson (d); Mary Martin, Mary Ann McCall, The Andrews Sisters (v). 1–8/39.

 Woody Herman 1939–1940 Classics 1163 As above, except omit Neary, Martin; add Cappy Lewis (t); Nick Caiazza (ts); Carol Kay (v). 1/39–9/40.

The key session on Classics 1128 took place on 4 April 1939, when the band cut five titles, including 'At The Woodchoppers' Ball', 'Big Wig In The Wigwam', 'Blues Upstairs' and 'Blues Downstairs'. Although the immortal 'Woodchoppers' Ball' was no more than Joe Bishop's head arrangement on the blues, it eventually became a huge hit, selling in the millions. Some of the later sessions on the disc feature music of similar quality, including 'Casbah Blues' and 'Midnight Echoes'; but Herman still lacked a major arranging presence, and Classics 1163 in some ways returns to the sweeter material of before, with novelties like 'Peace, Brother!' and 'The Rhumba Jumps' taking up too much studio time. Reasonable transfers, though every so often an inexplicably poor-sounding track turns up.

 Woody Herman 1940 Classics 1243 Herman; Steady Nelson (t, v); Bob Price, Cappy Lewis, Clarence Willard (t); Neal Reid, Toby Tyler, Buddy Smith (tb); Joe Bishop (fr hn); Herb Tompkins, Ray Hopfner, Bill Vitale, Joe Denton (as); Saxie Mansfield, Nick Caiazza, Sammy Armato, Ronnie Perry (ts); Tommy Linehan (p); Hy White (g); Walter Yoder (b); Frank Carlson (d); Dillagene (v). 11/39–9/40.

 Woody Herman 1940–1941 Classics 1304 As above, except omit Willard, Tyler, Hopfner, Denton, Perry; add John Owens (t); Vic Hamann (tb); Eddie Scalzi (as); Mickey Folus (ts); Muriel Lane (v). 9/40–1/41.

Herman's Decca sessions continue. Classics 1243 has three sessions which are mostly instrumental, and played with typical Herman punch, before – as if the label suddenly realized what was going on – they're back to average material and vocal features. Woody sings on no fewer than 17 tracks on Classics 1304, though it also includes the hit arrangement of 'Golden Wedding', the successful coupling of 'Chips' Boogie Woogie' and 'Chips' Blues' and four V-Disc titles, including Muriel Lane going wild on 'There'll Be Some Changes Made'.

* The V-Disc Years Vols. 1 & 2 Hep CD2/3435 2CD Herman; Sonny Berman, Shorty Rogers, Cappy Lewis, Billy Rogers, Pete Candoli, Conte Candoli, Chuck Frankhauser, Carl Warwick, Ray Wetzel, Neal Hefti, Irv Lewis, Ray Linn, Marky Markowitz (t); Bill Harris, Ed Kiefer, Ralph Pfeffner, Neal Reid, Bob Swift, Rodney Ogle, Tommy Pederson (tb); Sam Marowitz, John LaPorta, Les Robinson, Jimmy Horvath (as); Mickey Folus, Flip Phillips, Pete Mondello, Vido Musso, Ben Webster (ts); Sam Rubinowich, Skippy DeSair (bs); Ralph Burns, Fred Otis, Tony Aless (p); Margie Hyams, Red Norvo (vib); Chuck Wayne, Billy Bauer (g); Joe Mondragon, Chubby Jackson, Walt Yoder (b); Dave Tough, Don Lamond, Johnny Blowers (d); Martha Raye, Frances Wayne, Carolyn Grey (v). 2/45–12/47.

Impeccably restored by Jack Towers and John R. T. Davies, the music comes flag-waving through with most of its original punch intact. Showstoppers such as 'Red Top' and 'Apple Honey' still impress, and if the soloists don't always have the finesse of some of Woody's later section stars, there is still some superb playing from most hands, with rare glimpses of Berman, Burns, Bauer and others.

CORE COLLECTION

* Blowin' Up A Storm!

Columbia 503280-2 2CD Similar to above. 2/45–12/47.

A brilliant rhythm section, a brass team that could top any big-band section on either coast and arrangements that crackled with spontaneity and wit: Herman's 1945 band was both a commercial and an artistic triumph. With Burns, Bauer, Tough and Jackson spurring the horns on, the band handled head arrangements and slicker charts such as Neal Hefti's 'Wild Root' with the same mixture of innate enthusiasm and craft. There was a modern edge to the group that suggested something of the transition from swing to bop, even though it was the Second Herd that threw in its lot with bop spirit if not letter. Columbia have at last done their Herman recordings some justice in a full CD reissue of their best music from the period. Besides all the familiar material, there's the studio version of Stravinsky's 'Ebony Concerto' and a series of alternative takes of some of the best-known numbers – though even Ralph Burns, in his entertaining sleeve-note, says that most of these are clearly inferior to the masters. The remastering has been scrupulously done and, with 40 tracks at mid-price, this should rank as one of the great bargains in the area of big-band music on CD, with the likes of 'Northwest Passage', 'Your Father's Mustache', 'The Good Earth', 'Apple Honey' and 'Bijou' all sounding terrific.

 At Carnegie Hall, 1946 Verve 559833-2 2CD Herman; Sonny Berman, Pete Candoli, Conrad Gozzo, Marky Markowitz, Shorty Rogers (t); Bill Harris, Ed Kiefer, Ralph Pfeffner (tb); John Barrows (frhn); John LaPorta, Sam Marowitz (as); Mickey Folus, Flip Phillips (ts); Sam Rubinowich (bs, bcl); Red Norvo (vib); Tony Aless (p); Abe Rosen (hp); Billy Bauer (g); Chubby Jackson (b); Don Lamond (d). 3/46.

Not much jazz had been played at Carnegie Hall up to this point, and Herman's band were recorded on acetate transcriptions. There's a fair amount of scratch or distortion, but the sound isn't too bad. 'Ebony Concerto' appears only as a fragment, as does 'Summer Sequence', but there is some new music which differs from the various truncated LP issues of this material in the past. Don Lamond's bomb-dropping on 'Four Men On A Horse' still shakes the speakers after nearly 60 years and all the Herman favourites are played with great spirit.

(*) Keeper Of The Flame Capitol 984532-2 Herman; Ernie Royal, Bernie Glow, Stan Fishelson, Red Rodney, Shorty Rogers, Charlie Walp, Al Porcino (t); Earl Swope, Bill Harris, Ollie Wilson, Bob Swift, Bart Varsalona (tb); Sam Marowitz (as); Al Cohn, Zoot Sims, Stan Getz, Herman Marowitz, Gene Ammons, Buddy Savitt, Jimmy Giuffre (ts); Serge Chaloff (bs); Lou Levy (p); Terry Gibbs (vib); Chubby Jackson, Joe Mondragon, Oscar Pettiford (b); Don Lamond, Shelly Manne (d); Mary Anne McCall (v). 12/48–7/49.

(*) The Woody Herman Story Proper PROPERBOX 15 4CD As various discs above. 4/39–7/49.

Finally a CD reissue for some of the best tracks by Herman's Second Herd. A look through the personnel reveals a formidable roll-call, and the obvious stand-out is the famous reading of 'Early Autumn' with Getz's immortal tenor solo. Chaloff is memorable in his outings, especially 'Lollipop', and 'That's Right' and 'Lemon Drop' are minor Herman classics; but there is some commercial chaff too, which reminds that this was a band that was looking for an audience as well as trying to swing.

The Woody Herman Story covers the entire period to date, bar the pre-1939 sessions. Few arguments about any of the music or the documentation, although docked a notch for remastering which gives no clue as to sources.

(*) At Palladium Hollywood / Commodore Hotel New York 1948 Storyville STCD 8240 Similar to above. 3–5/48.

(*) The Road Band 1948 Vols. 1 & 2 Hep CD 18 2CD Similar to above. 2–12/48.
Herman's Second Herd in full flow in two broadcasts from early in its existence – actually before the arrival of Bill Harris and Lou Levy. To that extent the band is not quite as strong as it would be, but these are still performances full of interest and, with soloists like Getz, Cohn and Chaloff on some inventive charts, the music has genuine class. Also more than noteworthy is the overlooked but splendid Mary Ann McCall, one of the most gracious vocalists of the late swing era.

Hep's two-disc set gathers in four broadcasts from the same year. As usual with this source, the music has been transferred with care and packaged with a proper attention to detail. An excellent companion piece to the Columbia set of the studio sessions.

 The Great Soloists 1945–1958 Blue Flame BFCD-1003 Personnels unlisted. 45–58.
A scattering of mostly heated big-band workouts covering a 15-year period, this has scrappy documentation but is full of great music. There are starring moments for Getz, Sims, Berman, Chaloff and many more, with the extraordinary workout on Shorty Rogers's chart 'More Moon' hitting a pinnacle of big-band energy. Sound varies widely – several bright and clean tracks, but a lot suffer from hiss, surface noise or general wear and tear.

 The Third Herd Storyville STCD 8241 Herman; Don Fagerquist, Doug Mettome, Roy Caton, Shorty Rogers (t); Herb Randel, Urbie Green, Jerry Dorn (tb); Phil Urso, Bill Perkins, Jack Dulong, Kenny Pinson (ts); Sam Staff (bs); Dave McKenna (p); Red Wooten (b); Sonny Igoe (d); Dolly Houston (v). 5–6/51.
Herd number three still mustered a string of great names in the personnel and there were fine charts in the book by Al Cohn, Ralph Burns, Neal Hefti and more. These three broadcasts from the Palladium in Hollywood have their share of features for Dolly Houston and some dull pieces, but there are good spots for Perkins and Urso and young Dave McKenna gets a piece of the action on 'Leo The Lion'. In reasonable sound.

 Scene & Heard In 1952 Jazz Band 2125-2 Herman; Don Fagerquist, John Howell, Lee Fortier, Roy Caton, Stu Williamson, Phil Cook (t); Carl Fontana, Urbie Green, Jack Green (tb); Arno Marsh, Dick Hafer, Bill Perkins (ts); Sam Staff (bs, f); Nat Pierce (p); Frank Gallagher, Chubby Jackson (b); Sonny Igoe, Art Madigan (d). 7–10/52.
Two sessions here: a dance date in Washington and a Los Angeles TV show, the latter in the superior sound. The TV material is more ordinary and there's an awful routine on 'Holiday For Strings', as well as a surprise version (if somewhat cut down) of Artie Shaw's 'Concerto For Clarinet' starring Woody. The dance date has its share of easy-going tunes, but there's a terrific 'Moten Swing' and some good work from Stu Williamson and Urbie Green.

 Jantzen Beach Oregon 1954 Status DSTS 1020 Herman; Dick Collins, John Howell, Al Porcino, Reuben McFall, Bill Castagnino, Charlie Walp (t); Cy Touff (bt); Dick Kenney, Keith Moon (tb); Bill Perkins, Dick Hafer, Jerry Coker, Dave Madden (ts); Jack Nimitz (bs); Nat Pierce (p); Red Kelly (b); Chuck Flores, Joe McDonald (d); Dolly Houston (v). 1–8/54.
 1954 & 1959 Status DSTS 1021 As above, except omit McFall, Coker, McDonald, Houston; add Bill Chase, Larry Mosher, Paul Fontaine, Sam Scavone, Tony Phillatoni (t); Freddy Wood, Joe Clarvadone, Ray Winslow (tb); B. Boyd, Al Puccin, Don Lanphere (ts); Marv Holladay (bs); Jack Six (b); Jimmy Campbell (d). 8/54–6/59.
More dance dates rescued by the indefatigable Status label, a tribute to the work of the late Dave Kay. The Jantzen Beach sets (there are three leftover tracks on the second disc) show that while the Herman band may have lost some of its starrier soloists, it was still one of the best American bands of its day. The section playing offers some of the greatest pleasure: in the crisp delivery of the likes of Al Cohn's 'Cohn's Alley' and Nat Pierce's 'Mulligantawny', the Hermanites are at their best, and these certainly come across better than the bleary extended version of 'One O'Clock Jump'. Pierce in particular had come to be Herman's right-hand man (Woody calls him 'Basie's other brother, Nathaniel Pierce' at one point), and 'Like Some Blues Man, Like' from the 1959 date might also be a Basie homage. The earlier date is in decent mono, the later one in respectable stereo.

 Woody Herman And His Orchestra 1956 Storyville STCD 8247/48 2CD Herman; John Coppola, Dick Collins, Burt Collins, Dud Harvey, Bill Castagnino (t); Wayne Andre, Bill Harris, Bob Lamb (tb); Richie Kamuca, Bob Hardaway, Arno Marsh (ts); Jay Cameron (bs); Vince Guaraldi (p); Victor Feldman (vib, perc); Ray Biondi (g); Monty Budwig (b); Gus Gustafson (d). 7/56.
Live at The Lagoon in Salt Lake City, here's almost two and a half hours of music by The Third Herd. The balance is far from perfect, with some soloists sounding as if they're on another stage, the trombones sometimes louder than the trumpets. But there are still good moments for Harris and Kamuca among the soloists.

(*) Songs For Hip Lovers Verve 559872-2 Herman; Harry 'Sweets' Edison , Charlie Shavers (t); Bill Harris (tb); Hal McKusick (as); Jerry Cook, Bob Newman, Ben Webster (ts); Jack Nimitz, Sol Schlinger (bs); Jimmy Rowles, Lou Stein (p); Billy Bauer, Barney Kessel (g); Milt Hinton, Joe Mondragon (b); Larry Bunker, Jo Jones (d). 1–3/57.
This vocal album for Woody might seem a strange choice for Verve to reissue first, given that they have plenty of excellent big-band material which has yet to reappear. But it's a delightful set. Herman's singing was enduring and unpretentious, and he made a lyric line swing without manhandling it. Marty Paich wrote some decent charts and it's a great band, with handsome work from Webster, Edison, Kessel and the rest.

(*) Woody Herman – 1963 Philips 589490-2 Herman; Bill Chase, Paul Fontaine, Dave Gale, Ziggy Harrell, Gerry Lamy (t); Phil Wilson, Eddie Morgan, Jack Gale (tb); Sal Nistico, Larry Cavelli, Gordon Brisker (ts); Gene Allen (bs); Nat Pierce (p); Chuck Andrus (b); Jake Hanna (d). 10/62.
 1963 Summer Tour Jazz Hour JH-1006 Herman; Bill Hunt, Dave Gale, Bill Chase, Gerry Lamy, Paul Fontaine (t); Bob Rudolph, Phil Wilson, Henry Southall (tb); Sal Nistico, Carmen Leggio, Bobby Jones, Jack Stevens (ts); Frank Hittner (bs); Nat Pierce (p); Chuck Andrus (b); Jake Hanna (d). 63.
The Fourth Herd in action. The Philips album has a bold sound-mix which lets the Herman punch land on the button, and there are classic fast ones, including Sal Nistico's 'Sister Sadie' feature and 'Mo-Lasses' and 'Camel Walk'. On the Jazz Hour set, the swinging delivery of 'The Preacher' sets a notable tone from the start and, though sound is indifferently mixed and the programme is still reliant on some Herman warhorses, this confirms that this is a tough and hard-hitting edition of the band.

(*) The Jazz Swinger / Music For Tired Lovers Colllectables 6679 Herman; Bill Chase, Marv Stamm, Alex Rodriguez, Paul Fontaine, Bill Byrne, Dave Gale, Linn Biviano (t); Carl Fontana, Jerry Collins, Henry Southall (tb); Frank Vicari, Bob Pierson, Andy McGhee, Sal Nistico, Tom Anastas (sax); Nat Pierce, Erroll Garner (p); Mike Moore, Wyatt Ruther (b); Ronnie Zito, Eugene 'Fats' Heard (d). 7/54–6/66.

♛ * Woody's Winners / Jazz Hoot Collectables 6678 Herman; Gerry Lamy, Bill Chase, Dusko Goykovich, Bobby Shew, Don Rader, Lloyd Michaels, Linn Biviano (t); Henry Southall, Frank Tesinsky, Donald Doane, Jim Foy, Mel Wanzo, Bill Watrous (tb); Al Gibbons, Steve Marcus, Bob Pierson, Gary Klein, Sal Nistico, Andy McGhee (ts); Tom Anastas (bs); Nat Pierce, Mike Alterman (p); Charlie Byrd (g); Tony Leonard, Bob Daughery (b); Ronnie Zito (d). 6/65–3/67.

The first of the Collectables sets focuses on Herman the vocalist. The 1954 meeting with Erroll Garner is delightful, if somewhat off the cuff, with both men coming up with material on the spot. The Jazz Swinger put up the bizarre A&R man's notion of Woody-sings-Jolson, although there are actually many moments to relish: 'Sonny Boy' especially has long been a favourite of ours, and the band play the charts (Holman, Burns and Pierce) with real gusto.

Woody's Winners is one of the best big-band records of its time, and it still sounds terrific. For sheer excitement, none of Herman's contemporaries could have outgunned the team he had here. Live at San Francisco's Basin Street West, the band roar through the likes of '23 Red', Sal Nistico's burn-up of 'Northwest Passage', Woody's serene 'Poor Butterfly' and the climactic demolition of Horace Silver's 'Opus De Funk'. Here it's been coupled with Jazz Hoot, a vinyl set which was made up of out-takes from both Woody's Winners and the subsequent Live East And West. It might seem baffling that all this music is available only through the work of smaller labels licensing it from its owners, Columbia, but at least it's out there.

 Brand New Original Jazz Classics OJC 1044 Herman; Tom Harrell, Tony Klatzka, Buddy Powers, Bill Byrne, Forrest Buchtel (t); Bob Burgess, Ira Nepus, Don Switzer (tb); Sal Nistico, Frank Tiberi, Steve Lederer (ts); Gene Smookler (bs); Alan Broadbent (p); Michael Bloomfield (g); Alan Read (b); Ed Soph (d). 3/71.

(*) Woody Herman & The Thundering Herd Jazz Band EBCD 2146-2 Similar to above, except add Al Cohn, Zoot Sims, Stan Getz, Flip Phillips (ts), Chubby Jackson (b). 4–7/72.

 Feelin' So Blue Original Jazz Classics OJC 953 Herman; Dave Stahl, Nelson Hatt, Buddy Powers, Dennis Dotson, Bill Byrne, Larry Pyatt, Gil Rathel, Walt Blanton, Bill Stapleton, Tony Klatka (t, flhn); Jim Pugh, Steve Kohlbacher, Harold Garrett, Geoff Sharp, Dale Kirkland, Vaughn Webster (tb); Greg Herbert, Frank Tiberi, Steve Lederer, Harry Kleintank, Gary Anderson, Jan Konopasek (reeds); Andy LaVerne (p); Joe Beck (g); Chip Jackson, John Paley, Wayne Darling (b); Jeff Brillinger, Ron Davis, Ed Soph (d); John Rae, Ray Barretto, Kenneth Nash (perc). 4/73–1/75.

 King Cobra Original Jazz Classics OJC 1068 Herman; Tom Porrello, Dave Stahl, Nelson Hatt, Bill Byrne, Buddy Powers, Dennis Dotson (t, flhn); Jim Pugh, Dale Kirkland (tb); Vaughn Webster (btb); Greg Herbert (ts, f, picc); Gary Anderson (ts, f); John Oslawski (bs); Andy LaVerne (p); Ron Paley (b); Jeff Brillinger (d); Kenneth Nash (perc). 1/75.

Herman's '70s bands were still impressive outfits, but their studio records tended towards a fashionable eclecticism. Feelin' So Blue has some deeply unpromising material – 'Killing Me Softly With His Song', James Taylor's 'Don't Let Me Be Lonely Tonight' – yet turns out surprisingly well. The rock rhythms and modish figures don't completely undercut the strength of the band, which breaks through on 'Brotherhood Of Man', 'Evergreen' and 'Echano' to surprising effect, considering that the original album was patched together from three sessions over a two-year period. King Cobra is also more than listenable. They manage to make a plausible fist out of Stevie Wonder's 'Don't You Worry 'Bout A Thing', and Chick Corea's perky 'Spain' was the sort of chart that the latter-day Herds liked to flex their muscles on. Brand New, the earliest of these, is less appealing: guitarist Bloomfield is a pointless guest on four tracks. Even so, Alan Broadbent's charts have something to say, and Herman has an old-fashioned twist on 'Since I Fell For You'.

The Jazz Band set brings together a 1972 Newport appearance with the old Brothers team guesting and three tracks from a Roseland Ballroom broadcast. The Newport tracks are, alas, in very poor sound; the Roseland material is better, though this is for specialist Hermanites only.

Also, in brief:

(*) At The Hollywood Palladium 1942–1944 RST 91536-2. 8/42–11/44.

A couple of broadcast shows, the first in quite good sound, the second very scrappy; and the pity is that the latter features the really interesting band. '125th Street Prophet' is a glimmer of what the band could do. Too many vocals, but the playing remains swinging.

(*) The Woody Herman Shows 1940–1946 Jazz Unlimited 201 2085. 8/44–6/46.

The First Herd sounds terrific on these airshots. The 25 swingers (with a few vocal features) have been cherrypicked from numerous surviving shows and the inane chatter has been mostly eliminated.

(*) The Raven Speaks Original Jazz Classics OJC 663. 8/72.

A top-notch cast largely wasted on some dreary tunes and so-so charts which just occasionally flicker or burst into life.

(*) Live In Warsaw Storyville STCD 8207. 2/76.

A typical late-period Herman concert. The programme relies heavily on hits with an overblown 'MacArthur Park' there to test the stamina. Amazing that the band could attack very old charts with such spirit.

(*) From East To West Concord CCD2-2155-2. 8/81–9/82.

Herman's final years were capably documented by Concord, and although there are no truly outstanding records in this stint, there are sound standards of big-band playing on the orchestral records and plenty of characteristic Herman dudgeon on the small-group discs. The sole surviving entry at present is this two-disc reissue of Live At The Concord Jazz Festival and World Class, neither of which amounts to much more than reruns of Herman's golden years.

Vincent Herring (born 1964)

ALTO AND SOPRANO SAXOPHONES

A similarity to Cannonball Adderley was reinforced by a long and happy stay in brother Nat's band.

 Scene One Evidence ECD 22170 Herring; Darrell Grant (p); Robert Hurst (b); Kris de Foort, Jack DeJohnette (d, perc). 12/88.

No fish puns for the next few paragraphs. Vincent swam in some pretty stretching company as a youngster and, as he rises 40, is well established as a leader. This early disc has been in and out of catalogue. It's still quite callow and it takes the musicianship of DeJohnette to give the session a professional gloss. A promising start, though, and certainly more exciting than shoals of other contemporary post-bop dates.

(*) Simple Pleasure High Note HCD 7084 Herring; Wallace Roney (t); Mulgrew Miller (p); Richie Goods (b); E. J. Strickland (d). 3/01.

Vincent seems to want to get back to basics on this rollicking set. 'The Loop' gets things off to a fiery and freewheeling start, but the saxophonist then wisely takes the pace down and cranks the emotion up for 'Once In A Lifetime', a glorious ballad tune of Mal Waldron's. The title-track is by another great modern pianist, Cedar Walton, and here and elsewhere Miller demonstrates his thorough grounding in the lore and language of modern pianism. Strickland is the revelation, a brisk and effortlesly competent player who combines swing with power. 'Straight Street' is a homage to Coltrane, played with the same headlong strength as Trane's.

Herring shifts to soprano here and there, but it's the alto horn that cements his descent from Cannonball, and in combination with Wallace Roney on a couple of tracks he sounds absolutely in that company and of that distinguished ilk. 'There Is No Greater Love' would bring tears to a glass eye.

(*) Mr Wizard High Note HCD 7121 Herring; Jeremy Pelt (t); Danny Grissett (p); Richie Goods (b); E. J. Strickland (d). 12/03.
 Ends And Means High Note HCD 7149 As above, except omit Goods, Strickland; add Essiet Essiet (b); Joris Dudli (d). 7/05.

The High Note association has been good for Herring, who sounds like he's settled into a nice groove with the label. This is a very competent and enjoyable set, distinguished by what seems to be a debut appearance, as recording artist and composer, for young Grissett. Pelt has paid more substantial dues and his solos are rich and varied. Vincent's own soprano work has gone on a step and his statement on Goods's funky 'Citizen Of Zamuda' has touches of Wayne Shorter (WR-era) about it.

Ends And Means came in right on press-time for our last edition. In retrospect, there isn't much more to say about it than we did then. It's another strong set and, in Golson's 'Stable Mates' and an epic closing 'Caravan', has two of Herring's strongest statements for years.

Also, in brief:

 Sterling Place All-Stars Metropolitan 1117. 8/99.

Vince and Ronnie Mathews (p) hit it off instinctively, and though the record is somewhat formulaic in formal terms, sticking to theme–solos–recapitulation almost all the way through, the sheer drive and quality of playing lift it.

 All Too Real High Note HCD 7106. 12/02.

Very much a retread of the earlier High Note album, which isn't faint praise; Herring has hit a groove and found a formula that suits his quick-witted and soulful approach.

Fred Hersch (born 1955)

PIANO

Born in Cincinnati, Hersch worked in his local scene as a young man, went to the New England Conservatory, and subsequently gained a wide range of experience under different small-group leaders, including Stan Getz and Joe Henderson. He has recorded for numerous labels as both leader and sideman.

 Horizons Concord CCD 4267 Hersch; Marc Johnson (b); Joey Baron (d). 10/84.
(*) Etc Red 123233-2 Hersch; Steve LaSpina (b); Jeff Hirshfield (d). 5/88.
 Forward Motion Chesky JD 55 Hersch; Rich Perry (ts); Erik Friedlander (cl); Scott Colley (b); Tom Rainey (d). 7/91.
 Dancing In The Dark Chesky JD 90 Hersch; Drew Gress (b); Tom Rainey (d). 12/92.

In the past we routinely characterized Fred Hersch as a Bill Evans follower, but as his discography has grown it's clear that there's much more to him than that. He's actually a profoundly attentive scholar of many styles of jazz piano and a lucid and perceptive analyst of the forms that solo, trio and group playing can take for a pianist. His writing, which may be less important to him than his powers of interpretation, has something of Evans about it, as in originals such as 'Lullabye' (Heartsongs). But Hersch has an energy of his own, and all these records have something to commend them.

His first album, Horizons, is a confident and typically catholic programme, with standards, Ellington, Shorter and one tune of his own, the stormy 'Cloudless Sky'. Etc is a fine programme of jazz themes, with LaSpina and Hirshfield both constructive and challenging in support, the bassist in particular coming up with some quick ideas and agile lines. His two Chesky albums are also now back in circulation. Perry and Friedlander don't bring much of great value to Forward Motion but they do vary the group sound a little, even if we still prefer the trio music of Dancing In The Dark, which has a particularly attractive studio sound.

(*) At Maybeck Vol. 31 Concord CCD 4596 Hersch (p solo). 10/93.

Hersch's turn at Maybeck might not be his finest hour, but it sets up a near-perfect balance of his meditative and argumentative sides. The percussive, almost stabbing treatment of Coleman's 'Ramblin'' and the breezy lyricism of his own 'Heartsong' are set beside a glowing 'If I Loved You' and a very ambitious approach to 'Haunted Heart' which opens the song out into a long fantaisie. As usual, impeccable sound.

(*) Passion Flower: Fred Hersch Plays Billy Strayhorn Nonesuch 9395-2 Hersch; Nurit Tilles (p); Drew Gress (b); Tom Rainey (d); Chief Bey (v); strings. 7–8/95.
 Fred Hersch Plays Rodgers And Hammerstein Nonesuch 79414-2 Hersch (p solo). 1/96.
 Thelonious: Fred Hersch Plays Monk Nonesuch 79456-2 Hersch (p solo). 2/97.

The Strayhorn collection is limpidly beautiful and, while these are marginally less impressive features for the leader's piano than the discs listed below, it's difficult to carp at the lustre of Fred's string charts, even if 'Day Dream' and 'Lush Life' flirt with mush. The programme is a blend of solos, trios and three settings for the strings; Bey adds a lubricious vocal to 'Something To Live For', with the almost unknown verse an extra pleasure; Tilles joins Hersch for a duet on 'Tonk', which comes out sounding almost like ragtime.

Hersch's approach to Rodgers and Hammerstein is that of a recitalist. He doesn't try to 'swing' the tunes – and in any case many of them are vehicles which jazz musicians have seldom turned to. As familiar as they are, few improvisers have looked at 'A Cock-Eyed Optimist', 'Shall We Dance?', 'Getting To Know You' or 'I Have Dreamed'. The pianist plays them in a musing, respectful manner, rarely letting the melody drift too far from sight, and parading the structure of the song as he goes: one can almost see the choruses unfolding as he walks through them. Where he makes his mark is in the voicings and harmonies: with his immaculate touch and exacting delivery, the songs are recast as rich, graceful arias, parlour songs made modern by their fresh clothes. Fred's note tells of how he learned many of the tunes through Broadway cast albums played on the family gramophone, and that domestic memory is honoured by these wonderful treatments.

His Monk recital is more of the same, yet quite different. These are tunes which pianists have mulled over and covered until there's very little of the original flesh left. Hersch starts with 'Round Midnight', done first as a raindrop dance in the highest register, before the music thickens and grows dark. And then it's over – Hersch leaves no waste in these interpretations, and his judgement rarely fails him. The five choruses he takes on 'Misterioso', each a pristine investigation of that curious melody line, are a unique insight; but so is what happens to 'Let's Cool One' or 'Ask Me Now'. Rather than relying on Monk's rhythmic staggering for flavour, as so many pianists do, Hersch evens out the pulse and places the emphasis on the substance and colour of his chords. It's a fascinating essay on the master.

 Songs We Know Nonesuch 79468-2 Hersch; Bill Frisell (g). 98.

These days it's easy to find Frisell's eclecticism a little tiresome, and these 11 standards and jazz tunes might have been overpowered by his signature methods. But Hersch keeps him on planet Earth. The pianist's incisive parts curb the guitarist's taste for outrageous harmonics and there's some terrific interplay. But the record doesn't sustain its running-time. As with all of Frisell's records, there's a novelty element which turns either cute or folksy at points, and the shameless romanticism which Hersch is partial to is something that the guitarist can't commit to without a lick of irony.

(*) Let Yourself Go Nonesuch 79558-2 Hersch (p solo). 10/98.

A concert recording from Jordan Hall, Boston. Hersch enjoyed this gig and he is in fine form. As ever, it's his ballads which highlight the best of his style: 'Black Is The Colour/Love Theme From Spartacus' is an almost transcendent treatment of the two melodies, and when he gets to an encore of 'The Nearness Of You' his reading scarcely ruffles the feathers of the tune. One or two pieces seem a bit overly calculated, such as the awkward gait chosen for 'Speak Low', but Hersch's admirers shouldn't be disappointed.

(*) Songs Without Words Nonesuch 79612 3CD Hersch; Ralph Alessi (t); Rich Perry (ts); Reid Anderson, Drew Gress (b); Tom Rainey, Nasheet Waits (d). 00.

Everything you always wanted to know about Fred Hersch, but were … well, it can seem a little like that in this fairly massive three-disc set. While in the main it is still about Hersch as solo pianist, his trio with Gress and Rainey appears on one track, there are duets with Alessi and Rainey, and the other horns join in for a few quintet pieces. Show us a triple-CD and we'll show you a lot of filler, but it's hard to win any case on that point here: as ever, Hersch's pianism is rich, full and persistently pushing to expand his own horizons. Disc two, which features exclusively jazz material, includes a version of 'Caravan' in which he builds an imposing interpretation out of what sounds like an ongoing argument between each hand, and a 'Con Alma' where the endlessly recurring theme would be annoying but for his fastidious variations. The first disc presents originals, the third a Cole Porter songbook. It's a veritable feast, yet the sheer bulk of it (a smidgin over three hours) is finally a little wearing. Listeners have the option to sample at will, naturally, but some of the best moments get hidden in the grand design; and we felt that the Porter tunes weren't quite of the formidable standard which Fred had set with some of the previous recitals. All that said, he's some piano player.

(*) Live At The Village Vanguard Palmetto PM 2088 Hersch; Drew Gress (b); Nasheet Waits (d). 5/02.

A new label for Fred, though the trio carries over from his last Nonesuch session. Something of a test for him to do the Vanguard live record, given at least one illustrious predecessor in these shoes, but there's nothing self-conscious or restrained about the music. Nasheet Waits is a fine drummer for him (listen to Waits handle the rhythms of 'Phantom Of The Bopera') and he and Gress are pushily supportive, the kind of set-up that Hersch thrives on. Something like 'At The Close Of The Day' keeps the meditative side of the pianist's music intact, but uncommitted listeners are likely to respond positively to what is a vigorous session.

(*) Fred Hersch Trio + 2 Palmetto PM 2099 As above, except add Ralph Alessi (t, flhn), Tony Malaby (ts). 9/03.

Horns have sometimes tended to obscure or even cancel out the virtues in Hersch's playing, but even though Alessi and Malaby are scarcely shrinking violets they fit in well with a largely new, original programme (the exception is a graceful look at The Beatles's 'And I Love Her'). 'Marshall's Plan' in particular shows how the pianist can find a fresh way of making his signature lyricism fit with a more aggressive agenda; and if anything the core trio play more purposefully as a unit than on the previous records.

 Leaves Of Grass Palmetto PM 2107 As above, except add Mike Christianson (tb), Bruce Williamson (cl, as, bcl), Erik Friedlander (clo), John Hollenbeck (d), Kate McGarry, Kurt Elling (v); omit Waits. N.D.

Hersch has as much right as anyone else to set texts by Walt Whitman to music, but it's a formidable task and this one may have to go down as an interesting failure. Kurt Elling is one of the few singers who could carry off the likes of the central piece, 'Song Of Myself', which is about as close as jazz has come to transplanting the feel of German Lieder, but the overriding sense is of a Broadway skeleton that badly needs a book and a staging. The musicians play with commitment and feeling. We reserve judgement prior to a longer acquaintance.

 In Amsterdam: Live At The Bimhuis Palmetto PM 2116 Hersch (p solo). N.D.

Several years after his Jordan Hall recital, little has changed in Hersch's music: his impeccable touch and lacework finesse are present all through such tunes as 'The Nearness Of You', and perhaps only on Monk's 'Evidence' does he really ruffle his own feathers. Track by track it's hard to fault, but as an entire record, it does feel a little becalmed. The Bimhuis rarely gets such exquisite manners.

Conrad Herwig (born 1959)

TROMBONE

Born in Fort Sill, Oklahoma, he was a fast learner who was already in New York at the beginning of the '80s.

 Osteology Criss Cross 1176 Herwig; Steve Davis (tb); David Kikoski (p); James Genus (b); Jeff 'Tain' Watts (d). 12/98.

(*) Unseen Universe Criss Cross 1194 Herwig; Alex Sipiagin (t, flhn); Seamus Blake (ss, ts); David Kikoski (p); James Genus (b); Jeff 'Tain' Watts (d). 12/99.

 Hieroglyphica Criss Cross 1207 Herwig; Bill Charlap (p); James Genus (b); Gene Jackson (d). 1/01.

Herwig often talks about Coltrane in his sleeve-note quotes, and he often covers Trane too: 'Syeeda's Song Flute', 'Cousin Mary' and a rip-off of 'Giant Steps' called 'Watch Your Steps'. He's fast, he likes the higher register, he ducks out of expressionism, he only rarely sounds like Jay Jay, and he's so sure-footed that you can't imagine him knocking one over. Sounds like a recipe for clean, boring records, but that's not being fair. Osteology is a rare example of the two-trombone record. While Herwig and Davis might be seen as close kin, they're further apart than some may expect: Davis goes low, Herwig high, and both follow a closely argued, linear vocabulary which bypasses the sing-song Jay Jay and Kai model. Yet the record never really does anything to grab a listener who's not fascinated by trombones.

We are no more enthusiastic about Hieroglyphica, a code which the uncommitted will simply feel unexcited about cracking. Herwig does nothing to challenge the avant-garde masters of the trombone, but he's clearly keen about asserting the slide horn as a front-line instrument. Yet the impression here is, again, a great executant in search of a context.

The one disc to break out of this good-but-not-great mould is Unseen Universe, which is the most democratic and most densely voiced of the five discs. Sipiagin is a comparatively rough front-line partner, Blake can go inside or outside at will, and Kikoski knows how to play for everybody in the band. The result is as smart as the others, but with a few bumpier edges, which help no end.

 Que Viva Coltrane Criss Cross 1254 Herwig; Brian Lynch (t, flhn); Mario Rivera (bs, f); Edsel Gomez (p); John Benitez (b); Robby Ameen (d); Richie Flores (perc). 12/03.

(*) Obligation Criss Cross 1268 Herwig; Seamus Blake (ss, ts); Kyle Koehler (org); Mark Whitfield (g); Gene Jackson (d). 10/04.

Herwig and Lynch take co-credits for the Coltrane album, which Latinizes (not for the first time; there's an Astor Place disc with exactly the same concept) a batch of the saxophonist's most familiar hard-bop tunes. It's a cheerful, meaty record, energized by its solos and perhaps deflated a little by the ensembles, which here and there sound hasty, as if the record were a tad under-prepared. As so often, the polyrhythmic hustle of a Latin rhythm section tends to undercut rather than focus the jazz playing, but the brass-players blow with passionate conviction.

The line-up on Obligation largely lives up to its promise. Blake and Whitfield have both turned up on disappointing records recently, but this sideways take on the organ combo record suits them well and they play some terrific improvisations, as does the leader. The tunes are an attractive bunch, with 'Solid Ground' a handsome waltz and the burners 'Forget About Me' and 'Obligation' asking all hands to really dig in.

(*) A Jones For Bones Tones Criss Cross 1297 Herwig; Steve Davis (tb); Orrin Evans (p); Boris Kozlov (b); Donald Edwards (d). 4/07.

Surprising that he hasn't gone back to this format since Osteology. The title here amounts to much the same thing, but at least the Latinizing of Miles and Trane seems to be behind him for the moment. These are tributes to the great 'bone players – Mangelsdorff, Eje Thelin, Slide Hampton, Rosolino, Raul De Souza, Barry Rogers – and the writing, all by Herwig, is good, crisp and idiomatic. But it starts to sound repetitive and a bit gushing by the last quartet. Hard to know what to drop, but it needs an edit.

Also, in brief:

 New York Breed Double-Time DTRCD-108. 1/96.

A fairly awesome band – with Dave Liebman (ts) and Richie Beirach (p) – but a drably macho record for some reason.

 Heart Of Darkness Criss Cross 1155. 12/97.

A promising line-up – Walt Weiskopf (ts, ss), Stefon Harris (vib), Bill Charlap (p) – but it ends up a routine blow.

 Shades of Light Steeplechase SCCD 31520. 4/00.

Nice, lyrical duets with Andy LaVerne (p). 'Crystal Silence' and 'Bessie's Blues' are the improbable standouts.

 Sketches Of Spain Y Mas: The Latin Side Of Miles Davis Half Note HNCD 4530. 3/03.

It's an obvious sequel to the Coltrane record and no better or worse than that. A couple of nights at the Blue Note, perhaps unnecessarily stretched into posterity.

Fred Hess (born 1944)

TENOR SAXOPHONE

Working in and around the Rocky Mountains, Hess runs the Boulder Creative Music Ensemble and has associations with many improvisers and post-bop players in the region.

 Faith Cadence CJR 1112 Hess; Ron Miles (t); Glenn Nitta (ss, as); Mark Harris (as, bs); Kent McLagen (b); Tim Sullivan (d). 1/99.

(*) Exposed CIMP 249 Hess; Paul Smoker (t); Ken Filiano (b); Damon Short (d). 6/01.

The Boulder Creative Music Ensemble are responsible for the first disc. Hess seems most interested in the horns here, and he has them perform both trickily contrapuntal parts and conservative free playing, solos not really registering above the babble of brass and reed voices. It works best when there's a strong theme to start with, as in 'Lou-Bop' or (a nice choice) the Gary McFarland cover 'Why Are You Blue?'.

Exposed is a particularly effective use of CIMP's natural sound, which suits assertive players who prefer to keep within temperate boundaries of expression. Both Hess and Smoker fit that situation, and the quartet works through Hess's post-bop material with fine gusto, and some satisfying blows – Filiano, for instance, contributes a beautiful solo to 'JHM'.

(*) Extended Family Tapestry 76004-2 As above. 7/02.

() The Long And Short Of It / () Crossed Paths Tapestry 76006 / 76007 Hess; Ron Miles (t); Ken Filiano (b); Matt Wilson (d). 8/03; 9/04.

These records continue in the lively but amiable groove of Exposed. The more conventional studio sound of Extended Family may lend greater appeal than its predecessor (it was recorded on an awayday to Rochester, New York, which is actually Fred's home town). Short's swinging and unfussy time helps settle down the group, and Hess and Smoker clearly enjoy each other's company: they sound like a couple of Ellingtonians on 'High Street'.

A change in the quartet personnel for The Long And Short Of It. Good as Short was on the other discs, Wilson can dig into a groove with superb elan, and he and Filiano get excitingly funky straight away on the opening 'Norman Says'. Miles is a more outgoing trumpeter than Smoker, expressive in a different way, and he clearly has a fine rapport with Hess. This is literate, subtly modulated jazz, perhaps just a shade too self-effacing under Hess's shy leadership but really very satisfying. The follow-up confirms that impression; it's just hard to stretch to the extra half-star with music as thoughtful and unemphatic.

(*) In The Grotto Alison SR 114 As above, except add John Gunther (as, ts, f). 1/07.

It might sound strange to say it, but Filiano and Wilson make these records, which are very much an exercise of equals. The earlier pair, lacking a second woodwind, has a sparer sound, and Hess's Pres-tinged tenor muses thoughtfully through none original themes. Not that Gunther clogs things up: he brings some lovely textures, particularly on his flute. 'Alison's Dream' is quirky Monkish post-bop, but you find yourself listening to the bass and drums every bit as much as the horns and Filiano's wobbly solo is another high-point. Further exposure makes Hess sound more emphatic as a soloist, but he and Miles naturally hold back a bit, and it's a fascinating counter to the macho expressionism of most similar dates. The mournful bird-like sounds at the end of 'The Clefs – Final Chapter?' are quite extraordinary and so's the long, Miles-influenced 'Ninth House' that follows. It's quiet music, though, and hard to find enough excitement to justify the fourth star. Close, though.

Also, in brief:

 Right At Home Tapestry 76005-2. 8/02.

Duo versions – with Marc Sabatella (p) – of some of Fred's subtle themes. The pianist flounders a bit.

 Ninth Street Park Tapestry 76003. 4/03.

Another one from the Boulder Creative Music Ensemble, and well up to snuff.

Paul Hession (born 1956)

DRUMS, PERCUSSION

Born in Leeds. His first exposure to music was in church, but it was seeing Elvin Jones at Ronnie Scott's that first inspired him. A master musician.

 Bogey's / * foom! foom! / (*) St John's /  Registered Firm Bruce's Fingers BF CD 31 / 5 / Ecstatic Peace E#77 / Incus CD 33 Hession; Alan Wilkinson (ss, as, bs); Simon H. Fell (b). 6/91; 2/92; 7/94; 6/96.

(*) Improvabilly Bruce's Fingers BF44 Hession; Charles Wharf (ss, ts, bcl); Simon H. Fell (b). 4/00.

The natural heir to Tony Oxley and Eddie Prévost, Hession has the remarkable ability to balance completely free playing with a strong sense of time and pulse. The association with Wilkinson and Fell is a long and fruitful one. It should be said that this is a collaborative trio but, while Wilkinson could do with more intelligent critical exposure, it's Hession's remarkable work we'd want to highlight – and he does come first on the covers. The 1991 improvisations, recorded at the eponymous club in Huddersfield, are in places elongated unnecessarily. None of these players are guilty of playing to fill dead air, but there are definite longueurs on these performances, not repeated on the studio recording from early the next year. foom! foom! is iconic British improv and as close as one gets in this idiom to core collection material.

The Canadian material on Ecstatic Peace is almost equally good, though again it's the shorter tracks, even the opening 'Inn', which has a scene-setting feel, which make this one seem important. Hession's playing is light but vigorous and there are no superfluous gestures. His kit sounds different here, perhaps an unfamiliar set-up, though it doesn't seem to worry him. Registered Firm was made on home turf in Leeds. It's another cracking set, though Fell and Wilkinson deserve the extra portions for two sterling performances.

Wharf's been part of the picture for some time and his black-edged sound (notably on bass clarinet) works well in this setting. Hession seems to work more calmly with this saxophonist, and there's a stillness somewhere in the music one doesn't sense with Wilkinson (other than when he works with Prévost, interestingly). Some of Paul's work has to be sought on projects by other leaders, but he can claim his full share of the spotlight on these nuggets of British free.

Also, in brief:

 Giant Soft Drum Set Polkaville 0001. 9/86, 5/96.

Worth it for the eponymous Claes Oldenburg sculpture, but presumably relatively hard to find now.

 The Horrors Of Darmstadt Shock SFX25. 6/93.

Great title and fiery music from the HWF trio.

Eddie Heywood (1915–89)

PIANO

Born in Atlanta, he worked for various NY leaders in the '30s, before forming his own band. Despite spells of ill-health, which eventually obliged him to retire until the '60s, he found much popularity as a small-group leader.

 Eddie Heywood 1944 Classics 947 Heywood; Ray Nance (t, vn); Doc Cheatham (t); Vic Dickenson (tb); Aaron Sachs (cl); Lem Davis, Johnny Hodges (as); Don Byas (ts); Al Lucas, John Simmons (b); Jack Parker, Shelly Manne (d). 2–5/44.

 Eddie Heywood 1944–1946 Classics 1038 Heywood; Dick Vance, Parr Jones (t); Vic Dickenson, Henry Coker, Britt Woodman (tb); Lem Davis, Marshall Royal (as); Ernie Shepard, Al Lucas (b); Keg Purnell, Charlie Blackwell (d); Bing Crosby (v). 11/44–2/46.

(*) Eddie Heywood 1946–1947 Classics 1219 Heywood; Parr Jones, Leonard Hawkins (t); Vic Dickenson, Henry Coker, Ed Momate (tb); Marshall Royal, Jimmie Powell (as); Roy Ross (org); Ernie Shepard, Billy Taylor (b); Keg Purnell (d); The Andrews Sisters, Peggy Mann, Bob Eberly (v). 4/46–12/47.

Heywood sounded like Teddy Wilson's conservative brother. He hired some fine jazzmen for his dates but there is precious little music of any other than a sedate disposition, and Heywood made sure that his own adept but uniformly uneventful solos took centre-stage. Classics 947 is something of an exception, since there are some beautiful moments for the Ellingtonians: two sessions for Signature brought in Nance, Hodges, Sachs and Byas, all of whom make a mark. By the time of the second disc, Heywood's formula had taken over: but even here there's music to enjoy. Dick Vance gets off some fine solos on the first sessions, there are five vocals by Bing Crosby – who sounds like he's relishing the rare opportunity to play with a black small group rather than with John Scott Trotter – and only towards the end does the music start to really stiffen up. Classics 1219 is much less appealing, and by the end (when Heywood had signed to Victor) the horns have disappeared, and the Heywood trio might as well be competing for Frankie Carle's audience.

Al Hibbler (1915–2001)

VOICE

Born in Tyro, Missouri. Blind throughout his life, he sang with Ellington and recorded widely. A unique voice.

 Al Hibbler 1946–1949 Classics 1234 Hibbler; Harold 'Shorty' Baker , Dave Burns, Kenny Dorham, Taft Jordan, Benny Roy, William Scott (t); Ray Nance (t, c); Tyree Glenn, Charley Johnson, Candy Ross (tb); Jackie Fields, Johnny Hodges, Russell Procope, Tab Smith (as); Jimmy Hamilton (cl, as); Morris Lane, Alva Beau McCain, Bobby McCain, Jack McVea, Al Sears, Ben Webster (ts); Harry Carney (bs); Lady Will Carr, Luther Henderson (p); Ralph Hamilton (g); Joe Benjamin, Red Callender, Oscar Pettiford, Junior Raglin (b); Sonny Greer, Fletcher Jackson, Keywood Jackson, Harold 'Doc' West (d). 7/46-49.

 Al Hibbler 1950–1952 Classics 1300 Hibbler; Emmett Berry, Red Rodney, Charlie Shavers (t); Mercer Ellington (mel); Lawrence Brown (tb); Juan Tizol (vtb); Benny Carter, Johnny Hodges, Willie Smith (as); Jimmy Hamilton (cl, as); Al Sears (ts); Harry Carney (bs); Teddy Brannon, Billy Kyle, Billy Strayhorn, Billy Taylor (p); Dave Barbour (g); Oscar Pettiford (clo); Ray Brown (b); Louie Bellson, J. C. Heard, Charlie Smith (d). 4/50–4/52.

Long before Dick Van Dyke murdered London English in Mary Poppins, Al Hibbler was singing jazz in his own personalized Mockney. It was a delivery so eccentric as to seem positively surreal, an impression reinforced by a late collaboration with Rahsaan Roland Kirk for Atlantic. Hibbler was with Duke through the mid- to later '40s and often recorded with the Duke's men. The eccentricity sometimes prevents recognition of Hibbler's great talents, and these chronological surveys are an ideal place to catch up with him. It's hard to pick out classic tracks on the first of the Classics, though 'Poor Butterfly' and 'Tonight I Shall Sleep' are probably the best representation of Hibbler's more sophisticated talents. The second survey covers the period around his departure from the Ellington orchestra and working for Atlantic and Clef, as well as Mercer Ellington's imprint. There's surprisingly little overlap of personnel and the quality of the voice overshadows the accompaniments to a large degree. One does sense him becoming ever more mannered, though, to the point where it's tiresome.

Also, in brief:

 Starring Al Hibbler / Here's Hibbler Jasmine JAS 32. 56–57.

Two of the mid-'50s Decca recordings, brought together in a useful package.

John Hicks (1941–2006)

PIANO

Georgia-born and raised in California, the most urbane of modern pianists studied with his mother and then at Lincoln University in Missouri. Spent time with Art Blakey and with Betty Carter, and in the '70s explored the fringes of avant-garde jazz, while retaining his own essentially lyrical and melodic approach.

 Some Other Time Evidence ECD 22097 Hicks; Olympia Hicks (p); Walter Booker (b); Idris Muhammad (d). 4/81–8/84.

() In Concert / () John Hicks Evidence ECD 22084 / 22224 Hicks; Elise Wood (f on In Concert only); Bobby Hutcherson (vib); Walter Booker (b); Idris Muhammad (d). 8/84.

The renewed availability of work on Evidence helps to fill in a large gap in the discography. Some Other Time has extra tracks added to the original LP material, including a live cut that illustrates what a fine and underrated rhythm section this was. Hicks plays a couple of solo numbers – 'Ghosts Of Yesterday' and the title-track – right in the middle of the album, and what is striking about them is how immediately identifiable this understated soloist could be. There is also, intriguingly, a piano duet with his wife Olympia, who's no mean player herself. She appears once more on the eponymous disc, again on a single track, called 'After The Morning'.

There is some 1982 material on Some Other Time, taken from the same sessions that yielded the plainly titled John Hicks. Here, the main collaboration is not with Olympia but with Hutcherson, who is in great form, never in the pianist's way, constantly trying out difficult metrical transitions, but always absolutely on the money harmonically and in terms of solo ideas. Hicks sounds prosaic in this company, but Booker has such a gift for finding the right spots to lay in neat fills or more developed countermelodies that the result is seamless. The fudged rating reflects a rather indifferent studio sound.

The August 1984 concert is heard more fully on the live album, which features a fine Hutcherson guest spot on a long interpretation of a Sonny Rollins line, as well as a beautiful medley that revives 'Some Other Time' alongside 'Some Other Spring'. A duet with Wood, a staple of Hicks's later career, works pretty well here.

 Two Of A Kind Evidence ECD 22017 Hicks; Ray Drummond (b). 6/86–8/87.

A low-key set, almost literally so, with Drummond playing very softly in and around Hicks's left-hand parts on some tracks. They picked mostly familiar repertoire, the better, one suspects, to concentrate on a level of very precise and closely interwoven playing. With the exception of 'A Rose Without A Thorn' and Bill Evans's 'Very Early', none of the tracks play out at any great length, which is a pity. Some, and notably Bud Powell's 'Parisian Thoroughfare', which comes towards the end of the set with every sign of being an afterthought, aren't closely enough examined. Still, this was another important partnership for Hicks and the standards of musicianship are high.

(*) Beyond Expectations Reservoir RSR CD 130 Hicks; Ray Drummond (b); Marvin 'Smitty' Smith (d). 9/93.

Drummond's introduction to 'There Is No Greater Love' on the Reservoir disc captures in just a few bars what a valuable player he is. His statement of the Isham Jones theme tees Hicks up for a firmly unsentimental set of variations that gains in stature (despite an uncertain beginning) with virtually every bar. The piano is recorded with a lot of presence, and the recording as a whole has Rudy Van Gelder stamped all over it: lively, resonant, utterly musical. By this point in his career, Hicks records come with all sorts of expectations attached (the actual reference is to a composition with Elise Wood) and this one confounds none of them, an utterly professional performance from a seasoned performer.

 Single Petal Of A Rose Mapleshade 02532 Hicks; Jack Walrath (t); Elise Wood (f); Curtis Lundy (b). 94.
Wood is still an acquired taste, but she makes some pretty sounds here and there, and it might be that there's a bit more stuff to her playing by this point. She's strongly featured on the Mapleshade session (Walrath has a guest role only) and there is considerable lyric invention in her statement on the title-piece. Working without percussion gives it all a very light, chamber-jazz feel, but there is enough substance to keep the level of interest high. For further examples of Hicks in peak form, turn to the Keystone Trio entry.

 Trio & Strings Mapleshade 5532 Hicks; Elise Wood (f); Steve Novosel (b); Ronnie Burrage, Steve Williams (d); string quartet. 98.
Apart from Strayhorn's 'Passion Flower', a set of Hicks originals. 'Naima's Love Song' receives a rather bloodless reading, but 'West Side Winds' and 'Minor Collaboration' are both delicately and richly articulated and Pierre Sprey gets a lovely sound from trio and strings. Not our favourite Hicks record by any means but an accomplished and pleasing record.

 Nightwind: An Errol Garner Songbook / () Impressions Of Mary Lou /  Something To Live For: A Billy Strayhorn Songbook / () Music In The Key Of Clark /  Fatha's Day High Note 7035 / 7046 / 7019 / 7083 / 7110 Hicks; Dwayne Burno (b); Cecil Brooks III (d). 9/97; 6/98; 10/98; 01; 5/03.
Towards the end of the '90s, Hicks embarked on a set of piano trio tributes to fellow players from the Pittsburgh area. The Garner set established some important parameters. After a brief prelude, Hicks and the trio set about 'Misty', turning it into an uptempo swinger rather than the languid thing it has become. Blending solo and accompanied tracks, Nightwind is a genuinely thoughtful approach to a neglected composer: 'Paris Lover' and 'Something Happens' are terrific interpretations. The Strayhorn set is totally simpatico, a genuinely understanding reading of some classic jazz themes that avoids any temptation to crank up the romanticism. Instead, Hicks emphasizes the structure of each song, articulating 'A Flower Is A Lovesome Thing' with admirable simplicity and grace. To accuse the pianist of being unchallenging is beside the point. These are not radical reinterpretations, nor are they sycophantic homages, just delicately nuanced restatements.

Imagine doing an Ellington tribute album and including material only from the Sacred Concerts. That's roughly what Hicks has done on Impressions, another of his homages to great predecessors. Interspersed with five originals, he treats half a dozen Mary Lou Williams themes to robust inspection; the result isn't quite as laid-back and spiritual as the material might suggest, and both 'O. W.' (Williams) and 'Not Too Straight' (Hicks) are unexpectedly spiky and iconoclastic, the latter curiously redolent of Jaki Byard's work.

Dolphin creates a huge wrap-around sound and anchors the compositions admirably, allowing Hicks to play more freely than he's usually to be heard. The opening 'Lord Have Mercy' is firebrand preaching rather than gentle benediction, and there's a pretty stout injunction in the closing 'The Lord Says' as well. It couldn't be any other pianist than Hicks, but it does sound as though he's namechecking musicians other than the one explicitly honoured: hints of Bud Powell, Monk and Basie as well, and nods to swing and bop throughout. An intriguing record.

The Hines set is the most disappointing of the bunch, consisting largely of originals and lacking anything of the spirit of their intended subject. 'Monday Date' and 'Rosetta' have some nice moments, but the tone of the session is mystifying, perilously close to pastiche. By contrast, and unexpectedly, the Sonny Clark tribute is absolutely spot-on. Hicks knew his long-overlooked predecessor very well and obviously remembers him with great fondness. 'Angel With A Briefcase' – a reference to Clark's habit of rushing round with a stuffed portfolio of scores – is a tender and completely idiomatic musical portrait, kicking off a short sequence of originals inspired by Clark. The reworked material, though, is the best of the set. 'Minor Meeting' and 'My Conception' (the latter preceded by a beautiful solo cadenza) are given unexpected rhythmic treatments, while 'Sonny's Crib' drives along powerfully, marked by a strong gospel feel.

(*) Sweet Love Of Mine High Note HNCD 7142 Hicks; Javon Jackson (ts); Elise Wood (f); Curtis Lundy (b); Victor Jones (d); Ray Mantilla (d). 3/06.
There is an elegiac quality to this set that can't simply be explained by the closeness of Hicks's own end, even if he was aware of fading health. The closing 'Sunset Blues' is a moving original which seems to fade into ambiguity, all indigo and other twilit colours. His reading of 'I Remember Clifford' is immaculate, and while Jackson isn't the kind of player you'd expect to work well with Hicks (or with the redoubtable Lundy), the partnership scores highly.

 On The Wings Of An Eagle Chesky 318 Hicks; Buster Williams (b); Louis Hayes (d). 3/06.
A fine trio and a nice blend of material for what seems to have been the final studio date. Hicks picked out songs by Gigi Gryce ('Minority'), Donald Byrd ('Fly Little Bird Fly') and Tommy Flanagan ('Minor Mishap'), as well as some Monk and a couple of standards. His only original is a tribute to fellow pianist Cedar Walton. No hint of fading powers or any desire to coast, and Williams keeps the pace urgent enough to give each of these cuts an element of drama. Hicks died eight weeks after the recording, which lends it a certain poignancy, but even without that association it would be a cracking set.

Also, in brief:

 After The Morning West 54 WW 8004. 1/79.
A showcase performance at the Montreal Jazz Festival, blending together Strayhorn, Monk and bossa nova.

 Luminous Evidence ECD 22033. 7/85.
Attractive but disconcertingly low-key.

(*) Beautiful Friendship HiWood 46212. 2–11/00.
We're still mystified by this partnership. This time Elise Wood's (f) broad vibrato is heard front and centre in a set of sentimental ballads that rarely rises above easy listening.

Chris Higginbottom

DRUMS

Born in London, studied at the Royal Academy of Music and since 2002 has been making waves on the New York scene.

(*) One Basho SRCD 12-2 Higginbottom; Seamus Blake (ss, ts); Aaron Goldberg (p); Orlando Le Fleming (b). 8/04.

Higginbottom wisely balances his debut disc between familiar repertory and new material, uptempo swingers and more romantic fare. He's not the kind of drummer who only makes an impression at 90mph. His ballad work is even more impressive. He kicks off with Shorter's 'Blues A La Carte' and tackles Hancock's 'The Sorcerer' as well, but it's the older bop material which brings out the best in him. Blake's great, but one almost wishes this were a trio, just to hear more of the drummer.

Eddie Higgins (born 1932)

PIANO

Born in Cambridge, Massachusetts, but spent 20 years working in Chicago, recording with Lee Morgan and Wayne Shorter. Married to singer Meredith D'Ambrosio. He now bases himself in Fort Lauderdale, playing swing-to-bop mainstream, and has an interest in Brazilian music.

 Eddie Higgins Collectables COL-CD-7173 Higgins; Paul Serrano (t); Frank Foster (ts); Jimh Atlas, Richard Evans (b); Marshall Thompson (d). 61.

 In Chicago Solo Art SACD 102 Higgins; John Bany (b); Marshall Thompson (d). 78.

 By Request Solo Art SACD-104 Higgins; Milt Hinton (b); Bobby Rosengarden (d). 8/86.

Higgins has been making occasional visits to the studio since the '50s. The Vee-Jay album, now reissued by Collectables, was his name debut in 1961 (bar an extremely obscure date made for the local Replica label in 1958). Split between three quintet numbers and four trio pieces, the music follows a bluesy-boppish path very much in the idiom of that moment, although the playing has infectious enthusiasm, and there's a glimpse of another Chicagoan less often sighted on record, Paul Serrano. Even 'You Leave Me Breathless' goes off at a jaunty step.

The Chicago trio on Solo Art is a solid date and Eddie sounds enthusiastic and focused. His partners are little-known, but they aren't Uriah Heeps, and swing into the music with confidence. By Request sticks to well-trodden paths, so far as material is concerned, though the pianist's approach has a verve that takes it out of routine: he has some of the rocking ebullience of the great Chicago pianists, and touches of stride and boogie are integrated into a wide-ranging taste. Hinton and Rosengarden provide flexible support, and a couple of original Higgins rags round out the picture.

 Portrait In Black And White Sunnyside SSC 1069 Higgins; Don Wilner (b); James Martin (d). 96.

(*) Haunted Heart Sunnyside SSC 1080D Higgins; Ray Drummond (b); Ben Riley (d). 6/97.

The second's a meeting of masters – it shows up the previous one as very anonymous – and the fact that the material is so well-worn – the only remotely unusual choice is a medley of 'Stolen Moments' and 'Israel' – is the only hindrance to unqualified enjoyment. Measured but never outstaying their welcome, these nine interpretations are about as classic as a piano trio can be. Higgins exposes nothing new in these tunes: he simply reminds us why the likes of 'My Funny Valentine' and 'Isn't It Romantic?' have endured in the jazz canon, and why playing of this unassuming excellence will always be worth listening to.

 Speaking Of Jobim Sunnyside SSC 1092D Higgins; Jay Leonhart (b); Terry Clarke (d). 10/98.

 Time On My Hands Arbors ARCD 19236 Higgins (p solo). 12/99.

The Jobim interpretations on 1994's (now deleted) Zoot's Hymns paved the way for a full collection of that composer's work, and in the notes Higgins tells how he became infatuated with this music as far back as 1963. Perhaps he's come to know it a little too well, for the trio plays the music gracefully but without much particularity. Higgins's usual muscular style is an advantage, since the tendency to treat Jobim as a source for weepy or perfumed meditation is averted, but the record's no more than average. Ditto, unfortunately, for the solo record. As with most well-mannered recitals, this one is full of good things, short of great ones. Higgins continues to be insanely prolific on the Japanese Venus label, some 20 CDs in the last five years. He's good, but who's buying all this stuff?

Andrew Hill (1937–2007)

PIANO

Born in Chicago (and not Haiti as sometimes reported), he drew on a Caribbean ancestry and always sounds torn between cultures – on the one hand analytical, on the other powerfully visceral.

 So In Love Fresh Sound FSRCD 322 Hill; Malachi Favors (b); James Slaughter (d). 55–56.

Hill's discography is in better shape now than at any time in the last 40 years. The debut record was unfamiliar terrain, being mostly a standards set, but already his distinctive pianism is evident, even though the sound is muddy; Favors is largely inaudible. The minor key feel is intact on 'Penthouse Party', one of only two originals. Andrew is already making use of Caribbean rhythms in his accompaniment, working adventurously across Slaughter's double-time metre. 'Body And Soul' is pretty generic, though it would be interesting to play the recording to a piano jazz student and see if the right name popped up. The other Hill composition, 'Chilonga', is a fiery, island-flavoured cut, full of passion and fire.

(*) Black Fire Blue Note 84151 Hill; Joe Henderson (ts); Richard Davis (b); Roy Haynes (d). 11/63.

 Smoke Stack Blue Note 0946 3 55204 2 Hill; Richard Davis, Eddie Khan (b); Roy Haynes (d). 12/63.

(*) Judgment! Blue Note 7243 563 842 2 Hill; Bobby Hutcherson (vib); Richard Davis (b); Elvin Jones (d). 1/64.

Hill's Blue Note debut was a cracklingly good record. It's also quite difficult to place, neither orthodox bop nor hard bop, nor 'avant-garde'. The pianist's aim seems to be to find new ways of speaking within an understood language. He probes restlessly, as often as not looking for new tone colours as for a new approach to chord changes. On two takes each of 'Pumpkin' and the title-track, one hears him trying different configurations of very similar ideas, suggesting that some of his most exploratory ideas were partly worked out in advance. Henderson is always an asset and his edgy, probing solos are very much in keeping with Hill's own approach.

Smoke Stack marks neither a major advance nor a retrenchment. It's another fine record, though it obviously lacks the element of surprise. Hill often sounds as if he's noodling and it may be that even such a gifted and prolific composer hadn't time to produce enough top-quality material in the short interval between the two dates.

The key element makes a first appearance on Judgment! Hutcherson is the other neglected giant of modern jazz. It's still a low-key session, but the vibes provide a vivid source of counter-melodies, and while the overall impact isn't unduly percussive the rhythmic complexity suits Hill's writing perfectly. Like the other reissues, this has a valuable alternate take of 'Yokada Yokada', a clever reworking of the old 'yakety yak' figure. 'Alfred' is dedicated to the Blue Note man who spotted Hill's potential.

CORE COLLECTION

♛ * Point Of Departure
Blue Note 9364 Hill; Kenny Dorham (t); Eric Dolphy (as, f, bcl); Joe Henderson (ts); Richard Davis (b); Tony Williams (d). 3/64.

Point Of Departure* is one of the very great jazz albums of the '60s and is now available with bonus takes of three of its five compositions. Hill's writing and arranging skills matured dramatically with Point Of Departure. Nowhere is his determination to build on the example of Monk clearer than on the punningly titled 'New Monastery'. Hill's solo, like that on the long previous track, 'Refuge', is constructed out of literally dozens of subtle shifts in the time-signature, most of them too subliminal to be strictly counted. Typically, Hill is prepared to hold the basic beat himself and to allow Williams to range very freely. The rejected take is less secure rhythmically, and while Hill's solo is full of interesting material, the 'bonus' take adds little to the album's impact. Only the alternate take of 'Flight 19' contains much of moment.

Of the issued tracks, 'Spectrum' is the one disappointment, too self-conscious an attempt to run a gamut of emotions and instrumental colours; an extraordinary 5/4 passage for the horns almost saves the day. Henderson at first glance doesn't quite fit, but his solos on 'Spectrum' and 'Refuge' are exemplary and in the first case superior to Dolphy's rather insubstantial delivery. The mood of the session switches dramatically on the final 'Dedication', a dirge with a beautiful structure that represents the sharpest contrast to the rattling progress of the previous 'Flight 19' and brings the set full circle. Rightly revered, Point Of Departure isn't so far ahead of Hill's other work, but it has at least been consistently available.

(*) Andrew!!! Blue Note 0946 311438 2 Hill; John Gilmore (ts); Bobby Hutcherson (vib); Richard Davis (b); Joe Chambers (d). 6/64.

This could only be seen as a slight disappointment after its masterly predecessor, but again Hill has recruited a strikingly original horn-player in the eternally underrated John Gilmore and the reissue's bonus tracks underline just how fruitful a writer/improviser he was at the time. 'Le Serpent Qui Danse' is a typical Hill line, sinuous, ambiguous and sharp-toothed. 'The Griots' (another Caribbean-tinged line) and 'Symmetry' are represented in alternate takes on the reissue.

 Pax Blue Note 58296 Hill; Freddie Hubbard (c); Joe Henderson (ts); Richard Davis (b); Joe Chambers (d). 2/65.

Blue Note clearly didn't know what to make of or do with Hill after Andrew!!! This fine set lay in the vaults for nearly a decade before appearing in a cheap twofer called One For One. A couple of other tracks from the session only appeared on the Mosaic selection. Why the oversight? Obviously, Hill's off-kilter approach, evident even on the opening 'Eris' and the relatively lightweight 'Calliope', was never going to be hugely commercial. Even so, the set has a superstar quality, and one might have expected to see this emerge sooner. It casts Hill's recent work in a curious light, exposing its sententiousness and lack of new ideas. There's lots here, a pair of alternates and even a couple of trio tracks, minus Hubbard and the doughty Henderson, in 'Erato' and 'Roots'N'Herbs' which highlight his curious approach better than some of the band tracks, where it actually sounds as if he is playing 'wrong' chords behind the horns, and in unworkable metres.

 Compulsion Blue Note 74230 Hill; Freddie Hubbard (t, flhn); John Gilmore (ts, bcl); Cecil McBee, Richard Davis (b); Joe Chambers (d); Nadi Qamar, Renaud Simmons (perc). 65.

If this is played back to back with Point Of Departure the unavoidable conclusion is that Hill's ambitions had perhaps begun to outstrip his execution. This is a complex, but muddled record. As so often, Hubbard sounds barely at ease in an 'avant-garde' setting, though it's fascinating as ever to hear Gilmore away from an Arkestra situation. The addition of two percussionists, and Davis as second bassist on one track, does little more than add sound-colour. The reissue has restored the original session running order, though to no real dramatic purpose. Typical Hill of the period, which is to say endlessly fascinating, but a touch occluded.

(*) Change Blue Note 85190 Hill; Sam Rivers (ts); Walter Booker (b); J. C. Moses (d). 3/66.

It's a familiar enough story in the Hill discography. This wasn't released at the time but came out later as half of a double LP called Involution, compiled with a date under Rivers's leadership. Again, these are not 'free jazz' performances in the usual sense. Hill's iron control is evident when one listens to the alternates of 'Desire' and 'Violence'. The latter opens the album in a much longer form, full of jaggy, angular ideas and Monk-like percussive elements. As throughout the record, Booker is a powerful presence, eventually giving way to a curious episode from the leader on harpsichord. 'Pain' follows, logically enough, but with such an easy swing and buoyancy one wonders at the title. It's also a trio performance. Rivers reappears well into 'Illusion', sounding fugitive but commanding. 'Hope' features a line that could only be by Hill at this period and 'Lust', another trio, rounds out the original session with its most lyrical statement. The alternates really are of interest, suggesting how controlled this music actually was.

* Dance With Death Blue Note 73160 Hill; Charles Tolliver (t); Joe Farrell (ts); Victor Sproles (b); Billy Higgins (d). 10/68.

It is perhaps significant that when Hill recorded Time Lines for Blue Note in 2005, it was Tolliver he turned to for the brass part. This is music of real complexity, the themes wound tight as turk's-head knots and only a player of Tolliver's chops and intellectual sophistication could have coped with them. The late Farrell (and it would have been wonderful to hear this combination again 30-some years later) is no slouch either. The title-piece, also heard in a valuable alternate, is a vibrant dance with voodoo overtones, but Hill's own solo heads off in a different direction, reminiscent of McCoy Tyner in some aspects. 'Fish'N'Rice' is another modal line, its blues tonality suggestive of a North African or even Levantine melody. The opener, 'Yellow Violet' and 'Partitions' are more familiar in approach in the sense that they hark back to some of the work Hill was doing at Blue Note in the middle years of the decade. 'Partitions' is new and different again, though, a chart that makes 'Giant Steps' sound as straightforward as 'Chopsticks' and which calls on every resource of the band, especially the deceptively unsophisticated Sproles, to hold it on course. Predictable story: the material wasn't released at the time and only came out in 1980.

 Hommage Test Of Time 1 Hill (p solo). 5 & 7/75.

Like the item below, this was not a domestic release. It's not clear who was the object of the homage. Ellington's 'Sophisticated Lady' is the only theme not by Hill and it's curiously perfunctory, in approach if not duration. A lacklustre period.

 Nefertiti Test Of Time 7 Hill; Richard Davis (b); Roger Blank (d). 1/76.

He was in the wilderness, critically and commercially speaking, when this was recorded for the Japanese label East Wind. It had limited American distribution as well on Inner City, but has been missing pretty much since then. It's not the most innovative or rousing set, though Davis proves to be a strong and inventive partner. 'Relativity' is the best of an all-original set; even 'Nefertiti' itself is Hill's, not to be confused with the Wayne Shorter theme.

 Strange Serenade Soul Note 121013 Hill; Alan Silva (b); Freddie Waits (d). 6/80.

This is as dour and dark as anything Hill has committed to record. Silva and Waits are ideal partners in music that isn't so much minor-key as surpassingly ambiguous in its harmonic language. Hill seems on occasion to be exploring ideas that can be traced back to Bud Powell – not the straight bebop language so much as the more impressionistic things. There are curious little broken triplets and wide-interval phrases which seem to come straight from Bud's last recordings.

 Les Trinitaires Jazz Friends 2 Hill (p solo). 98.

 Dusk Palmetto 2057 Hill; Ron Horton (t); Marty Ehrlich, Gregory Tardy (reeds); Scott Colley (b); Billy Drummond (d). 10/99.

 A Beautiful Day Palmetto 2085 As above, except omit Drummond; add Dave Ballou (t), Mike Fahn, Joe Fielder, Charlie Gordon (tb), José Antonio Dávila (tba), John Savage (as, f), Aaron Stewart (ts), J. D. Parran (bs, bcl), Nasheet Waits (d). 1/02.

Dusk was warmly, even rapturously received on its release, less for its content than because a major African-American composer seemed at last able to come out of the shadows. We confess to finding it something of a disappointment. Hill's recording career was very sporadic indeed in the '90s. He sounds ring-rusty and a touch formulaic, even diffident in places. Some of the material had been worked out well in advance and on the live solo album, recorded in France at a small club and, we fear, hard to track down, he showcases a couple of pieces that would feature on the later ensemble session.

There's some solo material on Dusk as well. 'Tough Love' and 'Formulaic' feature the pianist on his own; both are quirky and idiosyncratic, but after repeated hearings one begins to wonder if that is all they are. 'Sept' and '15/8' (the latter worked through at Les Trinitaires) sound like exercises in metre; there's not much that is emotionally involving in either of them. The long opening 'Dusk' is about the best thing on the record, and there are two takes of it on the live CD as well, so detailed comparison is possible. There is also a heartfelt tribute to the late Thomas Chapin, 'T.C.', which features Ehrlich and Tardy on what sound like bass clarinets, though none are listed on the sleeve.

The apparent programme to the record is Jean Toomer's Harlem Renaissance classic Cane, but its enigmatic lyricism is replaced by something drier and more abstract here. That said, any new record by Hill is a cause for rejoicing.

The follow-up on Palmetto was always going to be the key disc and A Beautiful Day probably deserves two cheers. It's a live recording, made at Birdland. The arrangements by trumpeter Horton are precise and idiomatic, but again Hill doesn't seem to be playing with much fire and his thunder is stolen by the two tenors on a reorchestrated 'Divine Revelation' and by Savage (on flute) and Ehrlich (bass clarinet) on the long 'Faded Beauty'. The pianist is more central to the shorter tracks and one almost wishes some of these charts had been restricted to a small group. For some odd reason, there is not much action for the trombonists, who are the anchor of the ensemble passages, and it's Dávila's tuba which stands out, though it collides in some passages with the relatively inflexible rhythm patterns of Colley and Waits. Parran brings his own style of dry excitement to 'J Di', a baritone solo that must rank as one of the veteran multi-instrumentalist's best performances on record.

 Time Lines Blue Note 0946 55533 2 Hill; Charles Tolliver (t); Greg Tardy (ts, cl, bcl); John Hebert (b); Eric McPherson (d). 6 & 7/05.

This is Hill's third period at Blue Note, which is somewhat ironic given the label's past unwillingness to keep some of his best records in print, or to release them at all. Time Lines finds him older, quieter, doubtless wiser than on the classic records but, for all the loveliness, with much less to say. The opening 'Malachi' (a threnody for his bassist friend from Chicago) is also heard in solo piano version at the very end. The group version is organized like a wake, with Hill stating the theme and delivering a sermon, while others chip in with recollections. Tardy's lovely clarinet entry almost sounds like the opening of 'Footprints', but any resemblance is quickly forgotten when Tolliver's wonderful solo establishes a mournful reverie that floats over the bar-lines.

'Time Lines' itself has an African tinge and has reminded some listeners of Abdullah Ibrahim. It's actually even more Ellingtonian than that. 'For Emilio' features Tardy again with some lovely work on bass clarinet. 'Whitsuntide' is a gorgeous ballad, which again foregrounds the saxophonist, though Hill keeps a tight rein on things. It's not the greatest album of his life, but it has lovely moments that are well worth going back for.

Also, in brief:

* Lift Every Voice Blue Note 27546. 69.

It's a lovely, uplifting record, centred on the great African-American anthem, but it's not one that bears much repetition on the player.

 Passing Ships Blue Note 90417. 11/69.

These unissued tracks even fell outside Mosaic's compendious, 50-plus-track release of Hill's 1963–6 Blue Notes, but the reissue machine has been in overdrive over recent years and this is now one of the earlier and not necessarily the best of the revenants.

 Invitation Steeplechase SCCD 31026. 10/74.

A consistently good performance for the Danish label, with Chris White (b) and Art Lewis (d), but it seems a belittling shift for an artist who was making the iconic Point Of Departure a decade before.

 Blue Black Test Of Time 10. 2/75.

Originally Japan-only, this East Wind release has only recently become more widely available. The title-track and 'Remnants' are the top cuts. Jimmy Vass (ss, f) provides lovely textures.

 Divine Revelation Steeplechase SCCD 31044. 75.

The title-track of this quartet date is almost half an hour of concentrated Hill, a densely flowing, complex idea that doesn't quite pull off the transcendence it aims for.

() Faces Of Hope Soul Note 121010. 6/80.
Marked by forceful dissonance, and unsettling intervals, there is an introverted and brooding quality to this solo record that will not win over uncommitted listeners.

(*) Verona Rag Soul Note 121110. 7/86.
A gloriously joyous set full of romping vamps, gentle ballad interludes and Hill's characteristic harmonic ambiguities.

(*) Shades Soul Note 121113. 7/86.
Hill was more revered in Europe than the US at the time, and in its way this, with Clifford Jordan (ts), Rufus Reid (b) and Ben Riley (d), was as adventurous as anything he'd done since the Blue Note years.

 The Day The World Stood Still Stunt STU 20412. 4/03.
Hill was a worthy winner of the 2003 Jazzpar Prize, but this was a rather low-key affair, and it's bassist Scott Colley who takes much of the credit.

Teddy Hill (1909–78)

TENOR SAXOPHONE, BANDLEADER

A competent saxophonist, but better as a bandleader. His New York outfit of the mid-'30s was a fine one. It broke up in 1940 and Hill took over Minton's Playhouse, the bebop crucible.

 Uptown Rhapsody / (*) Teddy Hill 1935–1937 Hep CD 1033 / Classics 645 Hill; Bill Dillard, Bill Coleman, Shad Collins, Roy Eldridge, Dizzy Gillespie, Frankie Newton (t); Dicky Wells (tb); Russell Procope (cl, as); Howard Johnson (as); Chu Berry, Robert Carroll (ts); Cecil Scott (ts, bs); Sam Allen (p); John Smith (g); Richard Fulbright (b); Bill Beason (d); Beatrice Douglas (v). 2/35–5/37.
By the time he took over at Minton's, Hill's short musical career was pretty much over, but he had led a significant big band with the impressive line-up itemized above. These two items are in pretty direct competition, and the Hep, intelligently and faithfully remastered by John R. T. Davies, is the only one to consider. The 26 tracks in question, from 'Lookie, Lookie, Lookie, Here Comes Cookie' in February 1926 to 'Blue Rhythm Fantasy' a decade and a few months later, are the entire output of the orchestra. The first track is dominated by a blistering Eldridge solo; the last session marks Diz's first recorded solo, on 'King Porter Stomp'. A by way in the music's history, but worth exploring.

Tyrone Hill

TROMBONE

Former Arkestra member who's continued to explore the Sun Ra legacy.

(*) Out Of The Box CIMP 154 Hill; Marshall Allen (as, f); Jason Oettel (b); Samarai Celestial (d). 7/97.
According to Marshall Allen, 'out of the box' is how Sun Ra let his musicians play. They begin this with a version of 'Angels And Demons At Play', which the saxophonist wrote for the Arkestra. It's a long version, in asymmetrical time, tautly held together by the colourful Samarai Celestial, who was ill with heart problems during these sessions and died shortly afterwards. 'Interstellar Lowways' and 'Discipline 27' also come from Sun Ra's book, while 'Journey To Birmingham' is Hill's tribute to the boss. The trombonist has a big, dark tone, reminiscent of Julian Priester, that sits surprisingly well with Allen's keening alto. 'Your Guess Is As Good As Mine' is another excellent original, written for trombone and drums but here arranged for quartet. Surprisingly, they also do arrangements of 'My One And Only Love', a duo for trombone and bass, and 'Lush Life', arranged for the group by Celestial as a boozy waltz. The 'CIMP sound' is spot-on for this kind of project: it feels intimate, expansive, wild and lyrical all by turns.

Earl Hines (1905–89)

PIANO, VOCAL

Raised in Pittsburgh, then he began leading groups in Chicago and joined Louis Armstrong in the later Hot Five. From 1929 to 1941 he ran the band at the Grand Terrace Ballroom. Ran another big band, then joined the Armstrong All-Stars but left in 1951. More club work followed, but Hines was at a low ebb when a series of New York concerts made him a star all over again in 1964. Thereafter he worked constantly until his death.

(*) Earl Hines 1928–1932 Classics 545 Hines; Shirley Clay, George Mitchell, Charlie Allen, George Dixon, Walter Fuller (t); William Franklin (tb, v); Lester Boone, Omer Simeon (cl, as, bs); Darnell Howard (cl, as, vn); Toby Turner (cl, as); Cecil Irwin (cl, ts); Claude Roberts (bj, g); Lawrence Dixon (g); Quinn Wilson (bb, b); Hayes Alvis (bb); Wallace Bishop (d). 12/28–6/32.
(*) Earl Hines 1932–1934 Classics 514 As above, except omit Clay, Mitchell, Boone, Turner, Roberts, Alvis; add Louis Taylor, Trummy Young, Kenneth Stuart (tb); Jimmy Mundy (cl, ts); Herb Jeffries (v). 7/32–3/34.
(*) Earl Hines 1934–1937 Classics 528 As above, except omit Franklin; add Milton Fletcher (t); Budd Johnson (ts); The Palmer Brothers, Ida Mae James (v). 9/34–2/37.
 Earl Hines Collection: Piano Solos 1928–1940 Collectors Classics COCD 11 Hines (p solo). 12/28–2/40.
(*) Swingin' Down Hep CD 1003 As appropriate discs above. 6/32–3/34.
Earl Hines had already played on some of the greatest of all jazz records – with Louis Armstrong's Hot Five – before he made any sessions under his own name. The piano solos he made in Long Island and Chicago, one day apart in December 1928, are collected on the first Classics CD – a youthful display of brilliance that has seldom been surpassed. His ambidexterity, enabling him to finger runs and break up and supplant rhythms at will, is still breathtaking, and his range of pianistic devices is equalled only by Tatum and Taylor. But these dozen pieces were a preamble to a career which, in the '30s, was concerned primarily with bandleading. The remainder of the first Classics disc is filled with the first recordings by the orchestra which Hines led at Chicago's Grand Terrace Club for ten years. Their 1929 sessions struggle to find an identity, and only the leader cuts any impressive figures.

The sessions on the 1932–1934 record are better played, better organized and full of brilliant Hines. The surprising thing may be Hines's relatively subordinate role within the band: he had few aspirations to compose or arrange, entrusting those duties to Fuller, Mundy, Johnson, Crowder and Wilson and others; he revelled instead in the role of star soloist within what were increasingly inventive frameworks. By 1934 the band was at its first peak, with fine Mundy arrangements like 'Cavernism' (including a startling violin solo by Darnell Howard) and 'Fat Babes' and Wilson's vigorous revisions of older material such as 'Maple Leaf Rag' and 'Wolverine Blues'. It's a pity that the chronology has split the 1934 sessions between the second and third Classics volumes. Hines is a wonder throughout, both in solo and in the commentaries with which he counters the arrangements. The other principal soloist is Walter Fuller, a spare, cool-to-hot stylist whose occasional vocals are agreeable copies of Armstrong. The 1934–1937 disc shows an unfortunate decline in the consistency of the material, and their move to Vocalion to record coincided with a dissipation of the band's energy.

Transfers are respectable rather than notably effervescent, which is disappointing – the sound of the original recordings is excellent, as John R. T. Davies had shown on some earlier LP transfers for Hep, and these are on Swingin' Down, which would be our first choice for a Hines band disc from this period.

 Earl Hines 1937–1939 Classics 538 Hines; Walter Fuller (t, v); Milton Fletcher, Charlie Allen, Freddy Webster, George Dixon, Edward Sims (t); Louis Taylor, Trummy Young, Kenneth Stuart, Joe McLewis, Ed Burke, John Ewing (tb); Omer Simeon (cl, as, bs); Leroy Harris (cl, as, v); Darnell Howard (cl, as); Budd Johnson (cl, as, ts); William Randall, Leon Washington (cl, ts); Robert Crowder (ts); Lawrence Dixon, Claude Roberts (g); Quinn Wilson (b); Wallace Bishop, Alvin Burroughs, Oliver Coleman (d); Ida Mae James (v). 37–39.

 Earl Hines 1939–1940 Classics 567 As above, except omit Allen, Taylor, Young, Stuart, Howard, Randall, Washington, Dixon, Bishop, James; add Shirley Clay, Harry Jackson, Rostelle Reese, Leroy White (t); Edward Fant (tb); Scoops Carey (as); Franz Jackson, Jimmy Mundy (ts); Hurley Ramey (g); Truck Parham (b); Billy Eckstine, Laura Rucker, Madeline Green (v). 10/39–12/40.

 Earl Hines 1941 Classics 621 Hines; Harry Jackson, Tommy Enoch, Benny Harris, Freddy Webster, Jesse Miller (t); Joe McLewis, George Hunt, Edward Fant, John Ewing, Nat Atkinson, Gerald Valentine (tb); Leroy Harris (cl, as, v); Scoops Carey (cl, as); William Randall, Budd Johnson, Robert Crowder, Franz Jackson (ts); Hurley Ramey (g); Truck Parham (b); Rudolph Taylor (d); Billy Eckstine, Madeline Greene, The Three Varieties (v). 4–11/41.

 Piano Man! ASV AJA 5131 Similar to above. 28–40.

It wasn't until the emergence of Budd Johnson as an arranging force that the Hines band recovered some of its flair and spirit. The most renowned of the later pieces – 'Grand Terrace Shuffle' and 'G.T. Stomp' – are both on the 1937–1939 CD, which follows the band as it tries to recapture its earlier zip. Johnson himself is a significant soloist, and Hines softens into a more amiable version of his daredevil self. The important thing about the 1940 tracks, on Classics 567, is the arrival of Billy Eckstine, who would influence the band's move towards modernism and first provide it with a couple of major hits, starting with the 1940 'Jelly, Jelly'. He is featured further on the final Classics CD in the sequence, which also features arrangements from several hands – Johnson, Benny Harris, Jackson – and which includes a couple of imposing Hines features in 'The Father Jumps' and 'The Earl'. These tracks haven't been reissued very often, and they deserve to be better known.

Piano Man! sounds good for the most part, though some of the later Bluebird sides are inexplicably gritty, and the choice of tracks – including Armstrong Hot Fives and Bechet's 'Blues In Thirds' – concentrates more on Hines the soloist than on Hines the bandleader.

 Earl Hines And The Duke's Men Delmark DD-470 Hines; Rex Stewart (c); Cat Anderson, Lee Brown, Don Devilla, Archie Johnson, Joe Strand (t); Lawrence Brown, Joe Britton, Floyd Brady, LeRoy Hardison, George Stevenson (tb); Curby Alexander, Vince Royal, Johnny Hodges (as); Jimmy Hamilton (cl, ts); John Hartzfield, Vincent McCleary, Flip Phillips (ts); Harry Carney (bs); Marlowe Morris, Horatio Duran (p); Al Casey, Teddy Walters (g); Oscar Pettiford, Bob Paige (b); Sonny Greer, Big Sid Catlett, Bobby Donaldson (d); Betty Roche (v). 4/44–5/47.

Besides the sextet tracks with Hodges and Nance, the other groups are led by either Sonny Greer or Cat Anderson (Anderson's mysterious line-up of unknowns may actually be pseudonymously hiding more famous names). Some of these are minor mixtures of swing and jump band R&B, but there are many nice touches – from Hodges, Stewart, Nance and Hines himself, though Anderson's usual top notes are a bore – and it's a useful sweep through an otherwise obscure period for many of these players. Good transfers.

 Earl Hines 1945–1947 Classics 1041 Hines; Arthur Walker, Vernon Smith, Willie Cook, Palmer Davis, Geechie Smith, Charlie Anderson (t); Bennie Harris, Joe McLewis, Clifton Small, Druie Bess, Walter Harris, Gordon Alston (tb); Scoops Carry, Lloyd Smith, Thomas Crump (as); Wardell Gray, Kermit Scott, Ernie Wilkins, Budd Johnson (ts); John Williams, Wallace Brodis (bs); Bill Thompson (vib); Bill Dougherty (vn); Skeeter Best (g); Gene Thomas, Oscar Pettiford (b); Calvin Ponder (b); Chick Booth, Rudy Traylor, Gus Johnson (d); Lord Essex, Johnny Hartman, Dolores Parker, Arthur Walker, Melrose Colbert (v). 9/45–47.

Hines's 1947 big band isn't well-known for its records, and this is an interesting sweep through the surviving recordings. Wardell Gray gets some solos as well as the leader, but there's nothing very forward-looking in the arrangements, and the performances aren't so much lacking in spirit as directionless. Vocal admirers will enjoy the four handsome contributions from Johnny Hartman, very much in the Eckstine mould, and Hines himself remains inimitable.

(*) Earl Hines 1949–1952 Classics 1288 Hines; Jonah Jones (t); Bennie Green (tb); Aaron Sachs (cl, ts); Arvell Shaw, Al McKibbon, Tommy Potter (b); Wallace Bishop, J. C. Heard, Osie Johnson (d); Helen Merrill, Etta Jones, Lonnie Satin (v). 11/49–12/52.

Some scarce tracks here. One of the first appearances of the notorious 'Boogie Woogie On The St Louis Blues', with its endless right-hand tremolo (here kept within an acceptable three minutes), and Fatha giving us his command of the lingo in 'Singing For My French Brothers'. Thereafter it's back to New York for eight trio titles and a very obscure 1952 session for the D'Oro label, with vocals by Helen Merrill (her debut), Etta Jones and Lonnie Satin. The trio titles (made for Columbia, for their new series of 10-inch LP albums) are good, brisk fun. The D'Oro pieces, with Jones, Green and Sachs, are a very odd lot – considering that the label was supposedly set up by a Hines fan, why did he give the singers so much space and the piano so little?

 Earl Hines 1953–1954 SClassics 1440 Hines; Johnny Letman, Gene Red (t); Henderson Chambers, Dicky Wells (tb); Budd Johnson, Morris Lane, Willie Maiden (ts); Jerome Richardson (ts, f, v); Haywood Henry (bs); Paul Binnings, Carl Pruitt (b); Osie Johnson (d); Sugar Ray Robinson (v). 5/53–8/54.

'I Shoulda Been On My Merry Way' and 'Knock Me Down Whiskey' are sung by boxer Sugar Ray Robinson, proving that Joe Frazier wasn't the first fighter to double as a vocalist. There's some nice stuff from Johnny Hartman and saxophonist Jerome Richardson as well among these sides made for King and Nocturne in the main. Hines sings on 'Pennies From Heaven' and some others, but his piano-playing seems slightly at a premium at this awkward time, with rock'n'roll lurking in the wings. Cameo appearances by some good players, though, including the redoubtable Budd Johnson. A short interview with Fatha also makes this a desirable compilation.

(*) Another Monday Date Prestige 24043-2 Hines; Eddie Duran (g); Dean Riley (b); Earl Watkins (d). 55–56.
Hines entered the LP era cautiously, and the '50s weren't his greatest decade on record. After several years with the Louis Armstrong All-Stars, he found himself somewhat adrift as hard bop took over the jazz mainstream; but the mainstream itself was beginning a revival as swing-era musicians found their feet in the microgroove era, and in 1956 the pianist cut a pair of sessions for Fantasy which showed his old powers intact and unfettered by time constraints. One set of Waller interpretations is coupled with a collection of originals and, though the sidemen are almost a distraction from his own mercurial way with time, Hines sweeps through the music.

 Paris One Night Stand Emarcy 548207-2 Hines; Guy Pedersen (b); Gus Wallez (d). 11/57.
A studio set, not a concert, and there was controversy at the time that producer Boris Vian had forced this bass and drums pairing on Hines. In the event it's a rather strange, stop-start sort of session: some tunes are characteristic, full-flow Hines, such as 'Hallelujah', and others find him seemingly listless and bored.

 Grand Reunion Verve 528137-2 Hines; Roy Eldridge (t); Coleman Hawkins (ts); George Tucker (b); Oliver Jackson (d). 3/65.
Hines really came back into his own in the '60s. He was able to unleash all the rococo elements in his methods at whatever length he chose, and the so-called 'trumpet style' – using tremolo to suggest a horn-player's vibrato and taking a linear path even when playing an ensemble role – began to sound modern by dint of its individuality. Nobody else played like Hines. He was more or less rediscovered in 1964, following New York concerts that were greeted as a sensation, and thereafter embarked on regular tours and records. Grand Reunion effectively replaces an earlier issue on Xanadu. Eldridge and Hawkins play on eight of the 11 tracks, while Hines elaborates on a stack of tunes via three medleys. Recording is less than ideal, with Jackson's cymbals overloud, but it isn't too bad. There is better playing by all three masters on other records, but the meeting has plenty of charisma and some genuinely inspired playing.

 At Home Delmark DD-212 Hines (p solo). 69.
This is a mild disappointment. There are too many slow tunes and too much meditation, perhaps brought on by the relaxed surroundings and his own piano, and only when he gets to the marvellous finale of 'The Cannery Walk' does the best of Hines break through.

 Once Upon A Time Impulse! 654492-2 Hines; Cat Anderson, Billy Berry, Ray Nance, Clark Terry (t); Lawrence Brown, Buster Cooper (tb); Pee Wee Russell (cl); Johnny Hodges, Russell Procope (as); Jimmy Hamilton (ts, cl); Paul Gonsalves, Harold Ashby (ts); Richard Davis, Aaron Bell (b); Elvin Jones, Sonny Greer (d). 1/66.
If you ever wondered what the Ellington band would sound like with Hines at the piano – and Elvin Jones at the drums! – this unlikely session provides an answer. They don't shirk the comparison, since there are four Ellington or Hodges tunes, including 'Black And Tan Fantasy'. In the event, however, it's all rather unremarkable. Hines takes a relatively quiescent role as band pianist, perhaps being respectful for the absent Duke, and Elvin (who shares duties with Greer) behaves himself. The horns take the major honours, including Pee Wee on 'Blues In My Flat'.

 At The Party Delmark DE-535 Hines; Johnny Rae (vib); Jack Crowley (g); Larry Richardson (b); Kahlil Mahdee (d); Escovedo (perc). 5/70.
A San Francisco concert from the start of a new decade. The band isn't anything special and it's an odd instrumentation for a Hines group, but Earl's the perfect pro and the audience has plenty to enjoy.

(*) Four Jazz Giants Solo Art SACD 111/2 2CD Hines (p solo). 7/71.
Not quite on the exalted level of the Ellington set listed below, but this was still an unusually well-prepared and handsome set of sessions, one each in dedication to W. C. Handy, Hoagy Carmichael and Louis Armstrong – the last recorded only days after Pops's death. Hines chooses his favourite rocking mid-tempo for many of the tunes, but when he goes up a gear, as in the labyrinthine 'Struttin' With Some Barbecue', he's miraculous. There's a huge exploration of 'Star Dust', many of the Handy themes contain some of his most detailed examinations of the blues, and the Armstrong tunes find him at his most lyrical. In full and lifelike sound (though with a degree of tape hiss), this fine package is top-notch Hines.

 Live At The New School / () Masters Of Jazz Vol. 2 / () Plays Cole Porter Chiaroscuro CRD 157 / Storyville STCD 4102 / New World 80501-2 Hines (p solo). 3/73; 3/74; 4/74.
A spate of solo recording meant that, in his old age, Hines was being comprehensively documented at last, and he rose to the challenge with consistent inspirational force. The Storyville disc strings together six standards, and the playing is extravagantly strong and elaborate, with a couple of tunes that Hines seldom recorded ('As Long As I Live' and 'My Shining Hour') adding some spice. The 16-minute Fats Waller medley on New School and other flag-wavers let down the superior aspects of the set, but it has a share of Hines in regal form: he liked to play for people, and some of the pyrotechnics are echt-Hines.

[illegible]

* Earl Hines Plays Duke Ellington / (*) ... Vol. 2
New World NW 361/2 2CD / 80532 Hines (p solo). 12/71–4/75; 12/71–3/74.
Made over a period of four years, these are much more than casual one-giant-nods-to-another records. Hines was cajoled by Stanley Dance into looking into many unfamiliar Ellington tunes and creating a memorial (Ellington died around the time of the final sessions) which is surely among the best tributes to the composer on record. Since Hines's more aristocratic touches are close in feeling to Ellington's own, there is an immediate affinity in such pieces as 'Love You Madly' and 'Black And Tan Fantasy'. But Hines finds a wealth of new incident in warhorses such as 'Mood Indigo' and 'Sophisticated Lady' and he turns 'The Shepherd' and 'Black Butterfly' into extravagant fantasies which go far beyond any of Ellington's own revisionist approaches. Even a simple piece such as 'C Jam Blues' receives a fascinating, rhythmic treatment, and the voicings conjured up for 'I'm Beginning To See The Light' upset conventional wisdom about Ellingtonian interpretation. In his variety of resource, Hines also points up all the devices he passed on to Powell, Monk and virtually every other post-swing pianist. A memorable lesson, and a fine tribute to two great piano-players, spread over two hours of music. The second volume loses pace and interest, but Hines collectors will surely want both.

(*) Hot Sonatas Chiaroscuro CR(D) 145 Hines; Joe Venuti (vn). 10/75.

 In New Orleans Chiaroscuro CR(D) 200 Hines (p solo). 11/77.

Hines's final years offered fewer recording opportunities. In New Orleans would not be our first choice for one of his solo dates, but there are still felicities, such as the almost demure warmth of 'I'm A Little Brown Bird'. Hot Sonatas, though, is an invigorating display by two inveterate swingers. With no previous meetings and no rehearsals, the results are just occasionally scatty, but more often each man is swept along on the jubilation of the other's playing. 'C Jam Blues' becomes almost Byzantine in its ramifications. Bravo, Joe and Earl! Five extra rehearsals and alternatives are taken from a TV video track which was made at the sessions.

Also, in brief:

* Piano Man Definitive DRCD 11290. 10/39–1/45.

You can't argue with this: 27 tracks from a vintage period, including some of the V-Discs and closing on 'Boogie Woogie On St Louis Blues'.

(*) Earl Hines 1942–1945 Classics 876. 3/42–1/45.

A motley set on which Hines seems more sideman than leader.

 Earl Hines 1947–1949 Classics 1120. 12/47–11/49.

A thin period for Hines on record, since at the time he was in Louis Armstrong's All-Stars.

 The Chicago Dates Storyville STCD 6037. 54.

The pairing of Hines and Muggsy Spanier seems surprising on the face of it, but Muggsy was an amiable soul, content to work in a congenial situation, and the set-list offers some novelty for a Hines date.

(*) Earl Hines' Dixieland All-Stars Storyville STCD 6036. 9/55.

Three broadcasts, from The Hangover Club in San Francisco, which leave Hines very low in the balance.

(*) Live! Aalborg, Denmark, 1965 Storyville STCD 8222. 4/65.

Insubstantial and marred by a poor recording and some applause-hungry showboating from Hines.

Milt Hinton (1910–2000)

BASS

A great witness to most eras of the music, he was playing with Tiny Parham in Chicago in the '20s. He went on to play and record with thousands of others, from Eddie South to Branford Marsalis, and since he was a dedicated photographer there is a picture of most of the occasions too.

 Here Swings The Judge Progressive 7120 Hinton; John Faddis (t); Budd Johnson (ts, bs); Frank Wess (ts); Ben Webster (ts, p); John Bunch (p); Jo Jones (d). 64.

Hinton was a great entertainer, playing, singing and rapping about the good old days with undiminished vigour into his 80s. He was quite at ease working with players almost two generations below him and with such an accumulation of experience that he could pick – or, failing that, talk – his way out of almost any situation.

Here Swings The Judge was originally released on Harry Lim's Jazz Door label. It's one of Milt's earliest sessions as a leader, with an all-star cast and some fine soloing opportunities all round. A duo performance of 'Sophisticated Lady' with Ben Webster adds new dimensions to the song. A bonus take of 'Blues For The Judge' offers a further sample of Budd Johnson's baritone saxophone, but what wouldn't we give for extra takes of Ben and Milt together. Faddis does his Gillespie routine with typical conviction, sounding bright and breezy on 'Blue Skies' and more reserved on 'It Had To Be You' (two takes).

 Bassically With Blue Black & Blue 890 Hinton; Cliff Smalls (p); Sam Woodyard (d). 74.

Arguably the best of Milt's few available small-group sets, this French set covers some favourites (including his staple 'Joshua Fit De Battle Of Jericho') and some good originals, including the cleverly paced 'Walking Through The Woodyard'. There's a lot of prominent bass-playing, with Milt working at both extremes of his register, plucking high, fine notes one minute and going for low slapped rumbles the next.

 Back To Bass-ics Progressive 7084 Hinton; Jane Jarvis (p); Louie Bellson (d). 9/84.

A delightfully swinging trio set which gives Milt as much solo space as he's ever had on one of his own dates. Jarvis is a revelation, full of quirky and resonant ideas and their interplay (Bellson is relatively reserved throughout) on 'Fascinatin' Rhythm', 'Satin Doll', 'Prelude To A Kiss' and 'Joshua Fit De Battle Of Jericho' is varied and stylish. The sound isn't perfect by any means and some of Milt's solo spots are prone to rumble.

 Old Man Time Chiaroscuro CRD 310 2CD Hinton; Doc Cheatham (t); Eddie Barefield (as, ts); Buddy Tate (ts); Red Richards (p); Al Casey (g); Gus Johnson (d); Cab Calloway, Dizzy Gillespie, Joe Williams (v). 3/89–3/90.

 The Basement Tapes Chiaroscuro 222 Hinton; Warren Vaché (t); Frank Wess (ts, f); Kenny Davern (cl); Janice Friedman, James Williams (p); Howard Alden (g); Kenny Washington (b); Jackie Williams (d); Sylvia Sims (v). 89–90.

(*) The Trio: 1994 Chiaroscuro 322 Hinton; Derek Smith (p); Bobby Rosengarden (d). 1/94.

The slightly overcooked two-volume Old Man Time has to be seen as a This Is Your Life accolade, complete with all-star walk-on cast. The band, arranged and conducted by Buck Clayton, gives Milt plenty of room for his party pieces on the big bull fiddle, while the Mississippi voice spins its yarns; a special feature of the set is two long monologues, or 'Jazzspeaks'. Milt switches to bass guitar for a couple of numbers with Danny Barker. Joe Williams, Dizzy Gillespie and Cab Calloway all provide guest vocals and there is the intriguing sound of Flip Phillips on clarinet behind Joe on 'Four Or Five Times'. It's a fun set, entertaining but lightweight.

The Basement Tapes is another 'and friends' set compiled over a couple of years and with another big, albeit less stellar, cast. This time round, 'Old Man Time' is a feature for Kenny Davern backed by Howard Alden. It's a lovely, wry piece. The first three titles are played with Warren Vaché and the excellent Janice Friedman, another of the female players Milt backed; 'Raincheck' and 'Johnny Come Lately' are taken at unfamiliar metres but both are highly effective. 'Fascinating Rhythm' is a two-bass reading with one of the leading lights of the next generation, Kenny Washington, and a bit of a tour de force. The songs with Sylvia Sims are quite nice and there is some typically good saxophone and flute from Frank Wess.

On The Trio, Milt's attempts to jolly things along fall flat. A very bland and one-dimensional set by the great man's usual high standard, and little for any but the most devoted collector.

(*) The Judge At His Best Chiaroscuro 219 Hinton; Ruby Braff (c); Flip Phillips, Zoot Sims (ts); Kenny Davern, Bob Wilber (cl); Lionel Hampton (vib); John Bunch, Dick Hyman, Jay McShann, Derek Smith, Ralph Sutton (p); Bucky Pizzarelli (g); Danny Barker (g, v); Joe Venuti (vn); Dottie Dodgion, Gus Johnson, Cliff Leeman, Ray Mosca, Bobby Rosengarden (d). 73–79, 89–95.

Milt died in his 90th year and pretty soon the tributes started appearing. The Chiaroscuro compilation brings together 18 tracks from his two periods at the label. Given that there was a decade's break in his involvement with Chiaroscuro, there is some discontinuity of tone and material, but Milt's approach scarcely changed over the years and as a showcase The Judge At His Best is excellent. 'Milt's Rap' is an ideal introduction to the man himself, and joyous themes like 'Jumpin' At The Woodside' and 'Shine' (with fellow string man Joe Venuti) are classic performances.

Jutta Hipp (1925–2003)

PIANO

Born in Leipzig, she began her musical career in Munich, working with Hans Koller and others. Her piano style was somewhat influenced by Lennie Tristano and Horace Silver, but towards the end of her short recording career she seemed to be moving in a new direction. Originally trained as an artist, she returned to painting in 1956, and later worked as a dressmaker.

 Frankfurt Special Fresh Sound FSRCD 421 Hipp; Emil Mangelsdorff (as); Joki Freund (ts); Hans Kresse (b); Carl Sanner (d). 4, 6 & 7/54.

(*) With Zoot Sims Blue Note 6449 Hipp; Zoot Sims (ts); Ahmed Abdul-Malik (b); Ed Thigpen (d). 56.

She had the perfect surname for a jazz musician, but despite recording for Blue Note – who famously lost touch with her and weren't able to pay her any royalties until she was rediscovered in Queen's, New York, a few years before her death – Hipp dropped out of music altogether.

She's not as easy to pigeonhole as some accounts suggest. There are extra notes in many of the chords that give them a tense, slightly jangling quality, but Hipp was also capable of playing with delicate lyricism – try 'Violets For Your Furs' on the Blue Note date – and with a rugged, funky edge, which explains the comparison with Silver.

Some of the material on the Fresh Sound was originally released as a 10-inch LP on Blue Note under the subtitle New Faces, New Sounds From Germany, with a striking, expressionist portrait of Hipp on the cover. It's a more than workmanlike record, though stiffer and more abstract than she would be just a couple of years later. There's a light, almost West Coast feel to the music. Hipp's own 'Mon Petit' (derived from 'I Never Knew') is delicious, and there is a nice set of 'Variations' on the 'Tea For Two' chords. The record, which was recorded in Frankfurt, is doubly valuable for the glimpse it offers of Emil Mangelsdorff, elder brother of Albert and another stalwart of the underground wartime jazz scene in their home city. The original LP came in at less than half an hour, but Fresh Sound have dug out other material from the quintet recorded in Frankfurt ten days after the first session, together with four tracks recorded in Cologne in July, and two more – versions of 'Frankfurt Special' and 'Mon Petit' – taped at the German Jazz Festival in Frankfurt a month earlier. Together they make a fascinating document and underline Hipp's importance as an original and effective stylist.

The New York date with Sims has some delightful moments, too, and sees Hipp working in a more expansive and expressive idiom, certainly difficult to place in terms of influence, though we hear something similar to Mal Waldron's dark romanticism breaking through. The saxophonist responds strongly to it, and plays some exquisitely tender solos, with more than a hint of Lester Young about them. The sound is predictably much better than on the German recordings, which have a rather flat, utilitarian quality.

The reissue coincided with Hipp's death in 2003. She had lived alone and in obscurity for many years.

Al Hirt (1922–1999)

TRUMPET

Born in New Orleans, Hirt played trumpet in undistinguished surroundings before landing a contract with the Audio Fidelity label, which pushed him through hi-fi magazines and turned him into a star. During the '60s, he and Herb Alpert were the most popular trumpeters in America. He ran his own club in New Orleans for many years and played an uncomplicated, noisy but entertaining style of Dixieland.

(*) The Best Of Dixieland: Al Hirt Verve 549362-2 Hirt; Bob Havens (tb); Pete Fountain (cl, ts); Roy Zimmerman (p); Bob Coquille (b); Paul Edwards (d). 56.

This session actually predates Hirt's huge commercial success at Audio Fidelity and is prehistoric for him and his great sidekick Pete Fountain. They play a suitably rowdy bunch of chestnuts from the idiom. Hirt sold millions of records but, as with Liberace and Mantovani, it's now hard to remember what any of them were called. He was a very American, homegrown phenomenon: although he was perhaps his country's most popular trumpeter during the '60s, he made relatively little impact elsewhere. This is actually not a particularly flattering memorial to him: the music has a raw, almost furious momentum, but it's very different in spirit to the great black New Orleans groups and the sneering notion that this was 'Dixieland for tourists' seems not far from the truth, at least here. If someone compiles a strong best-of from the Audio Fidelity records, there will be a worthy record under his name.

Also, in brief:

 Cotton Candy / Sugar Kisses / () Honey In The Horn / That Honey Horn Sound / () The Legend At His Best Collectables COL 2750 / Collectables COL 2749 / Collectables COL 35 2CD. 62–65.

The titles pretty much say it all. A formidable talent, peddling corn.

Fred Ho (born 1957)

BARITONE SAXOPHONE, CHINESE INSTRUMENTS, BANDLEADER

Ho's brand of engaged and ebullient big-band jazz has obvious ties to Charles Mingus, but there are many other influences at work as well, not least a desire to synthesize modern jazz, Eastern influences and left-wing politics.

 Tomorrow Is Now Soul Note 121117 Ho; Sam Furnace (as, ts); Sayyd Abdul Al-Khabyyr, Al Givens (ss, ts, f); Richard Clements (p); Jon Jang (p); Kiyoto Fujiwara (b); Taru Alexander (d); Carleen Robinson (v). 85.

(*) We Refuse To Be Used And Abused Soul Note 1211167 Ho; Sam Furnace (as, ss, f); Hafez Modirzadeh (ts, f); Jon Jang (p); Kiyoto Fujiwara (b); Royal Hartigan (perc). 11/87.

 The Underground Railway To My Heart Soul Note 121267 Ho; Martin Wehner (tb); Sam Furnace, James Norton (as, ss); David Bindman, Hafez Modirzadeh, Allen Won (ts); Francis Wong (ts, f, picc); Peter Madsen (p); Kiyoto Fujiwara, John Shifflett (b); Royal Hartigan (d, perc); Pei Sheng Shen (sona, ob); You Qun Fu (erhu); Pauline Hong (san shuen); Cindy Zuoxin Wang (v). 90–93.

This is powerfully advocated music from a 'rainbow coalition' of fine young players, Afro- and Asian-Americans in the main. Houn, who has more recently phoneticized his name to Ho, has a big, powerful sound reminiscent of Harry Carney, and this sets the tone for ensembles with a strongly Ellingtonian cast. The title of the first album sets up all sorts of different expectations – from Ornette Coleman's Tomorrow Is The Question to Max Roach's Freedom Now suite – which are not so much confounded as skirted. There's little room for prettiness in music as aggressively programmatic as this, but the band plays with surprising delicacy and unfailing taste.

The second album is more bitty and has a much less coherent sound. There is also an unwonted and mostly unwelcome stridency. Unlike Charlie Haden and his Liberation Music Orchestra, Ho still hadn't quite found a way of synthesizing political urgency with lyricism. That's largely addressed in Underground Railway. It starts unpromisingly with a noodling ethnic jam featuring the double-reed sona over bass and drums. What follows is the title-piece: a long, elegantly communicated suite which Ho describes as 'anti-bourgeois boogie-woogie'. Here the Ellington (and Carney) influence is unmistakable and in character. Some of the remainder is bland chinoiserie: unfamiliar sonorities used for their own sake. There is, though, an interesting 'revisit' to Billie Holiday's 'Strange Fruit' and a glorious reading of Tizol's 'Caravan'. They make it possible to forgive the multilingual 'Auld Lang Syne', or the two closing selections from an 'epic' score called Journey Beyond The West: The New Adventures Of Monkey.

(*) Once Upon A Time In Chinese America ... Innova 550 Ho; Sam Furnace (as); David Bindman (ts); Diana Herold (mar, vib, perc); Aayodele Maakheru (b); uncredited (d, perc); Shyaporn Theerakulstit (narrator). 12/99.

Ho's more recent records haven't easily found their way to us, but this score for 'a martial arts ballet' is great fun. The musicians are upstaged by a marvellous performance by Shyaporn Theerakulstit as the fiery narrator, and without the visual element of the dancers there's a pretty huge gulf between CD and in-person performance. Cutting it in a single day in the studio, the musicians presumably felt that they'd performed the piece often enough to allow for limited recording time, although there are still points which might have used some tidying up. Still, a disc of enormous character – and, in passing, the latest Afro-Asian Ensemble, here no bigger than a sextet (though the drum and percussion roles mysteriously are uncredited), makes a powerful sound.

 All Power To The People: The Black Panther Suite Innova 585 DVD Ho; Sam Furnace (as); David Bindman (ts, perc); Diana Herold (vib, mar, perc); Michele Navazio (g); Wesley Brown (b, perc); Royal Hartigan (d, perc); Jayne Cortez, Andrea Lockett (v). 02.

The Panthers are presented as fallen American heroes, dancers in a world of locksteps and prison marches. Ho's music is, as ever, powerful and evocative, and more than ever reminiscent of past models, though Mingus more than Ellington or Sun Ra. The leader plays some of his best solos for some time on the disc, aided by Furnace and guitarist Navazio, who between them crank up the energy level considerably. Radical poet Jayne Cortez's texts are an important aspect of the whole, and impressively well integrated. The visual element, derived from what was intended as a ballet suite, uses old propaganda and information materials to create a parallel collage.

Also, in brief:

 Yes Means Yes, No Means No, Whatever She Wears, Wherever She Goes Koch 7897. 12/96.

You can't fault the message of this powerful anti-rape programme, and there's some stridently good playing from Ho to go with it.

 Warrior Sisters Koch 7899. 1/98.

'A new American opera': familiar themes; conventional form.

Jim Hobbs

ALTO SAXOPHONE

Fiery free-bopper somewhat reminiscent of the late Tom Chapin.

 Babadita /  Peace And Pig Grease Silkheart SHCD 133 / 136 Hobbs; Timo Shanko (b); Django Carranza (d). 1/93.

There's something delightfully unkempt about Hobbs's approach to improvisation. He's often unexpectedly lyrical, but in improbable places and at the moment you least expect it. These were recorded at the same time, though the second one is attributed to the Fully Celebrated Orchestra. The resemblance to Chapin, and sometimes to Yuri Honing, is quite striking, but it's individual enough to wonder where they went after this.

Steve Hobbs

VIBRAPHONE

A North Carolinan who studied at Berklee before forging a career as sideman to Tom Harrell, Joe Bonner and others.

 On The Lower East Side /  Second Encounter Candid CCD 79704 / 79760 Hobbs; Kenny Barron (p); Peter Washington (b); Victor Lewis (d). 93; 7/94.

 Spring Cycle Random Chance 21 Hobbs; Tom Harrell (t); Bob Malach (ts); Dave Valentine (f); Bill O'Connell (p); Peter Washington (b); John Riley (d); Steve Berrios (perc). 6–9/04.

Like many recent players on his instrument, he plays what often sound like horn-lines but is also capable of giving a line like 'Au Privave', one of the highlights on the second record, a distinct and idiomatic touch.

Barron almost steals the show at the first date. His delightful touch is a feature of almost every track, both the standards and the originals, but it is the strength of the writing that appeals most insistently here. Kicking off with a fast version of 'Amazing Grace' was a bold stroke, but Hobbs really hits home with his threnody to Chet Baker and with his intriguingly titled '18–35 (Together Again)', which seems to borrow a structure from 'Alone Together'. One or two of his originals sound like bebop contrefacts, but always with a sharply individual cast.

The same group reconvened in 1994 for a second, equally polished set, which didn't see the light of day for another six years. Hobbs presumably still isn't a sufficiently bankable name to be a release priority. A shame, because the follow-up record is every bit as good. Possibly a bit same-ish in places with less dynamic variation than On The Lower East Side, but with tracks like 'The Amazing Spider Man' and 'Blues For A Way Of Life' Hobbs is establishing himself as a bold and original composer. Again, he kicks off with a familiar theme, this time 'La Vie En Rose'. It's a nice touch, but we think one of his own things deserves to be up there.

Good to be able to report a new release after a substantial gap in studio activity. Spring Cycle is largely original material, by Hobbs in the first half, O'Connell towards the end, though a cover of Trane's 'Mr P.C.' does stand out somewhat. The guest spots are worthwhile and there's every sign of patient quality-control on every track, without making them unexciting.

Andre Hodeir (born 1921)

PIANO

Probably best respected as a composer, but the Frenchman was a formidable group leader in his day.

 The Vogue Sessions /  Jazz Et Jazz Vogue 10845 / Universal 18422 Hodeir; various personnels, including Bobby Jaspar (ts). 53–54; 52–60.

Hodeir didn't possess the most distinctive touch in jazz, but his small-group sessions have a sophisticated swing that still recommends them. Long experience of work with visiting Americans was sustained by his skill as a writer and some of his best melodies are included on the Vogue compilation, including 'Autour D'Un Récif' and 'Saint-Tropez', a theme he enjoyed embellishing and varying throughout his career.

Art Hodes (1904–93)

PIANO

Arrived in Chicago from his native Ukraine when he was only a few months old. As player, writer and broadcaster, he was a lifelong devotee and exponent of classic jazz, blues, stride and ragtime. Better known in later years as a solo performer, he began his career in groups run by Wingy Manone, Joe Marsala and Sidney Bechet.

 Vintage Art Hodes Solo Art Records SACD 20 Hodes; Benny Moylan (v). 30–50.

 Art For Art's Sake Jazzology JCD 46 Hodes; Freddie Greenleaf (t); Dave Remington (tb); Bill Reinhardt (cl); Truck Parham (b); Freddy Moore (d, v). 8/39, 6/57.

(*) The Jazz Record Story Jazzology JCD 82 Hodes; Duke DuVal (t); George Brunies (tb); Rod Cless, Cecil Scott (cl); George 'Pops' Foster (b); Joe Grauso, Baby Dodds (d). 43–46.

Until recently it was believed that, apart from a couple of cuts with Wingy Manone, Art didn't record on his own account before the summer of 1939, though it was known that he had used a Victor Home Recording machine to make half a dozen discs at a gig in Racine, Wisconsin. These were thought to be unplayable and incapable of being dubbed, but Barry Martyn has managed to reconstruct four of them here. 'Ain't Misbehavin'' and 'I Ain't Got Nobody' are indeed vintage Hodes, and no one will particularly mind the scrappy recordings of 'Tin Roof Blues' and 'Cherry', which is a vocal feature for saxophonist Benny Moylan. There is then a wonderful recording of Johnson's 'Snowy Morning Blues', recorded some time in the very early '40s, and a further array of solo sides cut in or around 1944, with two tracks at the end – 'Slow Boogie', 'Fast Boogie' – from 1949 or 1950. All dates are pretty uncertain, but there is no mistaking the importance of these tracks historically.

There are more early solo performances on Art For Art's Sake, though by far the best of the material comes later in the span. There is a notably good version of Duke Ellington's 'The Mooche' from 1957, and there are group tracks from the same date. Freddy Moore sings on 'None Of My Jelly Roll' and 'Blues And Booze' and Freddy also adds a touch of washboard to 'Tiger Rag'. Art's solo playing, though, is as ever the key element. His ballad touch is as sure as on faster tempos, and 'Someone To Watch Over Me' is a delight.

The Jazz Record material restores to circulation many of the sides Art cut and released with his own label. The very first tracks, '103rd Street Boogie' and 'Royal Garden Blues', appeared at the end of 1943, credited to the Columbia Quintet, which had played a residency at Childs' Restaurant in New Haven. The wonderful trio with Pops Foster and Baby Dodds is a little later, and there are further group recordings made by the band co-led by Art and three horns, including big Cecil Scott (who had 13 children, eating in shifts and sleeping in tiers); peppy and joyous, an unalloyed delight for anyone who loves traditional jazz.

() Apex Blues Jazzology JCD 104 Hodes; Mezz Mezzrow (cl); Danny Alvin (d). 12/44.

Interesting documentation of a World Broadcast Service transcription jam, but unfortunately Mezzrow's in more than usually off-the-wall form and the incomplete takes and breakdowns are dotted round the record in a very confusing way. Whatever effect they were aiming for is missed. But it's intriguing material.

 Parlor Social Solo Art Records SACD 50 Hodes; Fred Higginson (p); Russell Roth (d); Buddy Smith (perc). 51.

The first six numbers, with Art and percussionist Buddy Smith, were recorded during a supper party at Chadwick Hansen's house in Minneapolis. While playing some Jelly Roll Morton records, Smith, who was Art's drummer at the time, revealed that he was the nephew of Andrew Hilaire, who had drummed for Morton. Using a beer case with newspaper taped over the top and a pair of whisk brooms, he improvised a drum kit and sat down to jam with the pianist. Naturally, they began with Morton and 'Granpa's Spells'. There were also versions of Johnson's 'Carolina Shout', Art's 'Stuff And Nonsense' and 'Plain Old Blues'. As a document of musicians relaxing and playing for their own enjoyment and edification it is priceless. The remaining cuts are by Fred Higginson, a literature scholar and college professor who was an admirer and disciple of Art's. Most of the tunes he tackles are Hodes arrangements, though his own 'Sapient Sutlers' Stomp' bespeaks an intelligent composer in his own right.

 And His All-Star Stompers Jazzology JCD 20 Hodes; Larry Conger (t); Charlie Bornemann (tb); Tony Parenti (cl); Johnny Haynes (b); Cliff Leeman (d). 7/65.

This was a quiet time for Hodes, but he was playing well when he did visit the studios. Conger may well be an unfamiliar name. He didn't receive much attention, but he's an able Dixieland player, who hits notes without a wobble and has some interesting ideas to share. It's a relatively conventional programme, perhaps a sign that Hodes wasn't played-in as much as usual, but 'Willie The Weeper' sees it all go up a gear.

 Hodes' Art Delmark DE 213 Hodes; Nappy Trottier (t); George Brunis (tb, v); Raymond Burke, Volly DeFaut (cl); Pops Foster, Truck Parham (b); Barrett Deems (d). 10/68–4/72.
 Friar's Inn Revisited Delmark DE 215 As above, except add Barney Bigard (cl). 1/68–4/72.
Hodes didn't record much for a decade, proselytizing for jazz in other ways. These Delmarks are therefore relatively important. There's some good stuff on the first with Trottier, Brunis and DeFaut, but the best of the cuts are in trio form with Burke and Foster. The second of the pair obviously has the sterling bonus of Bigard, but it's Art one tends to listen to, relishing the opportunity and the occasion.

 Recollections From The Past Solo Art SACD 41/42 2CD Hodes (p, v). 7/71.
Unlike Jelly Roll Morton, Art never claimed to have invented jazz, or to have imported the music from his native Ukraine, but here he does something very similar to Ferdy's Library Of Congress recordings. Taking the part of Alan Lomax is Dr Van Velser of Wilmington, North Carolina. Art narrates the story of his engagement with jazz and some of its leading personalities: Sidney Bechet, Bunk Johnson, Eddie Condon and others. There are reminiscences aplenty: of being picked up for speeding, of meeting Hollywood stars, and of drinking with Condon. The playing is mostly illustrative and, though this isn't a set you'll play straight through that often, it's an irresistible self-portrait.

(*) Tribute To The Greats Delmark DE-238 Hodes (p solo). 76–78.
 Indianapolis Concert Solo Art SACD 20 Hodes; Herb Guy (b). 8/77.
At 70-plus, Art was in his pomp, utterly confident and articulate and capable of navigating an imaginative course through the repertoire. The Delmark album sets him to work on plenty of old warhorses, and every one is made distinctive by his timing, left-hand variation (blues, boogie, stride, whatever) and courtly sense of melodic propriety. The highlights in Indianapolis are 'C Jam Blues', 'I Can't Get Started' (unusually modernist in conception), 'Mood Indigo' and – an old favourite – Morton's 'Granpa's Spells'.

(*) Pagin' Mr Jelly / * Keepin' Out Of Mischief Now Candid CCD 79037 / 79717 Hodes (p solo). 11/88.
Hodes survived by not bending to the winds of fashion. Though over-represented as a solo performer in comparison with his group work, Hodes conjures some interesting variations on Jelly Roll Morton, his greatest single influence, on Pagin' Mr Jelly, and this, or the remaining material from that session on Mischief, is perhaps the place for fans of either to start. Hodes's only originals, the title-tune and the related 'Mr Jelly Blues', are virtually impossible to pick out from a session that sticks to only the most sanctified of early jazz tunes: the march 'High Society', 'Wolverine Blues', 'Mr Jelly Lord', 'Winin' Boy Blues', 'Buddy Bolden's Blues' and 'The Pearls'. What's wonderful about Hodes's approach to this material, the Morton stuff in particular, is how natural he sounds. There's no pressure or effort, no hint of pastiche, just straightforward playing of magnificent music on a decent piano.

 Art Hodes Jazz Trio Jazzology JCD 307 Hodes; Reimer Von Essen (cl, as); Trevor Richards (d). 86.
(*) Art Hodes Trio Jazzology JCD 237 Hodes; Trevor Whiting (reeds); John Petters (d); Dave Bennett (v). 9/87.
 Art Hodes Blue Five And Six /  Jazzology JCD 172 Hodes; Al Fairweather, Pat Halcox (t); Wally Fawkes (cl); Fapy Lafertin (g); Andy Brown (b); Dave Evans, Stan Greig (d); Johnny Mars (v). 9–10/87.
Hodes's trip to Britain in 1987 was a laying-on of hands, traditional jazz players of all sorts made their way to listen to and sit in with the great man. The results are pretty uniform, with most of the best music coming in solo performances by Hodes himself. There is no apparent stylistic distinction between the Trio and the Jazz Trio; the latter is simply better. The larger groups called on more seasoned and experienced musicians and the playing is better in proportion, with some excellent moments from that Chris Barber stalwart, Pat Halcox.

Also, in brief:

 The Duets Solo Art SACD 124. 69, 77.
With Truck Parham or Herb Guy on bass. So-so, and probably mainly for collectors.

 Echoes Of Chicago Jazzology JCD 79. 2/78.
Haunted by the Windy City, but recorded in the softer chill of Atlanta in February, this is a valuable addition to the roster of Hodes albums with full ensemble. And an interesting role for bass saxophone.

 And The Magnolia Jazz Band: Volumes 1 & 2 GHB 172 / 173. 78.
An engaging enough encounter, but it scarcely merited two CDs.

 Café Des Copains, Toronto Solo Art SACD 154. 83.
A happy hunting ground for Art, and they loved him there.

 Glad To Be Here Solo Art SACD 170. 86.
Worthwhile late solo date; just don't expect anything out of the ordinary.

Johnny Hodges (1907–70)

ALTO AND SOPRANO SAXOPHONES

Born in Massachusetts. He studied with Sidney Bechet and took his place in Willie 'The Lion' Smith's group. In 1928 he joined the Ellington orchestra and remained with Duke for the next four decades, despite occasional forays into leadership himself. Rabbit's intense, bluesy tone is one of the most distinctive instrumental voices in jazz.

 Classic Solos: 1928–1942 Topaz TPZ 1008 Hodges; Bunny Berigan, Freddy Jenkins, Bubber Miley, Ray Nance, Arthur Whetsol, Cootie Williams (t); Rex Stewart (c); Lawrence Brown, Joe 'Tricky Sam' Nanton , Juan Tizol (tb); Barney Bigard (cl, ts); Harry Carney (bs, as, cl); Otto Hardwick (as, bsx); Ben Webster (ts); Duke Ellington, Teddy Wilson (p); Fred Guy (bj); Lawrence Lucie, Allan Reuss (g); Hayes Alvis, Jimmy Blanton, Wellman Braud, John Kirby, Grachan Moncur, Billy Taylor (b); Cozy Cole, Sonny Greer (d); Mildred Bailey (v). 10/28–7/41.
 Jeep's Blues: His Greatest Recordings: 1928–1941 ASV CD AJA 5180 As above, except add Buck Clayton, Louis Metcalf (t); Buster Bailey (cl); Lester Young (ts); Edgar Sampson (bs); Jess Stacy (p); Lionel Hampton (vib); Artie Bernstein, Harry Goodman (b); Gene Krupa (d); Billie Holiday (v). 6/28–6/41.

There are probably no voices in jazz more purely sensuous than that of John Cornelius Hodge (the extra 's' was added later). Subtract Hodges' solos from Duke Ellington's recorded output and it shrinks disproportionately. He was a stalwart presence right from the Cotton Club Orchestra through the Webster–Blanton years and beyond. Sadly, perhaps, for all his pricklish dislike of sideman status in the Ellington orchestra, Hodges was a rather unassertive leader, and his own recordings under-represent his extraordinary qualities, which began to dim only with the onset of the '60s.

The ASV and the Topaz do a fairly good job of compiling a representative profile and doing so with very little overlap. Probably the best guide to these is not personnel but session dates. Topaz ignore things like the 1940 'Good Queen Bess' and the slightly earlier 'Warm Valley', but material from the 1929 Cotton Club Orchestra is included, filling in an important gap in the transition from blues and jump to the lyrical majesty of later years. Hodges' alto (and occasionally soprano) stand out strongly wherever featured. He switches to soprano again for 'Rent Party Blues' (Topaz) and 'Tired Socks' (ASV).

 Johnny Hodges 1945–1950 Classics 1189 Hodges; Joe Thomas, Taft Jordan, Harold 'Shorty' Baker (t); Sandy Williams, Lawrence Brown, Quentin Jackson (tb); Al Sears, Don Byas (ts); Harry Carney (bs); Jimmy Jones, Raymond Fol, Billy Strayhorn (p); Brick Fleagle (g); Sid Weiss, Billy Taylor, Oscar Pettiford, Wendell Marshall (b); Shelly Manne, Wilbur De Paris, Butch Ballard, Sonny Greer (d). 11/45–2/50.

Hodges had yet to undertake his ultimately brief sabbatical from the Ellington orchestra when these tracks were made, and Classics have basically put together a collection of bits and pieces here. Four titles for HRS under Sandy Williams's leadership are followed by four for the very obscure Wax label, then two sessions for Mercer (Ellington), one for Sunrise and one for Swing, cut in Paris in 1950. Reproduction is a mixed bag but the music's interesting enough. Hodges is cast as the major soloist on every track, and though the music's mostly variations on the blues, Rabbit does his usual supremely professional job, and there are occasional cameos from the likes of Quentin Jackson and Shorty Baker.

(*) Caravan Prestige PRCD 24103 Hodges; Taft Jordan, Cat Anderson, Harold 'Shorty' Baker (t); Lawrence Brown, Juan Tizol (tb); Willie Smith (as); Paul Gonsalves, Al Sears (ts); Jimmy Hamilton (ts, cl); Harry Carney (bs); Duke Ellington (p); Billy Strayhorn (p, org); Wendell Marshall, Oscar Pettiford (b); Wilbur De Paris, Louie Bellson, Sonny Greer (d). 6/47–6/51.

The sessions on Caravan were originally recorded for the short-lived Mercer label. Long unavailable, they include some classics, like 'Charlotte Russe' (aka 'Lotus Blossom'), for which Hodges, Duke and Strayhorn all claimed some credit at varying times. Recorded in 1947, it is one of the most graceful of Hodges' solos. 'Caravan' itself is performed by a band that includes Duke Ellington and the composer, Juan Tizol, himself. Hodges isn't featured on the later stages of what was originally a double LP, just in case anyone mistakes Willie Smith for him.

 Johnny Hodges 1950–1951 Classics 1248 As above, except add Nelson Williams (t); Quentin Jackson (tb); Don Byas, Al Sears (ts); Raymond Fol (p); Chubby Kemp (v). 50–51.

 Johnny Hodges 1951–1952 Classics 1389 Similar to above, except add Flip Phillips (ts); Red Callender (b). 2/51–7/52.

The 1950–1951 set covers recordings in Denmark and Paris and the beginning of Hodges' association with Norman Granz's labels. These aren't classic records (despite the label title) and one immediately recognizes that, despite being surrounded by Ellingtonians, albeit a reduced personnel, Johnny played his best work with Duke himself. Some of the tunes are more obviously commercial, depending on the beauty of Hodges' tone and his ability to carry a melody as if it were featherweight.

 Johnny Hodges 1952–1954 Classics 1421 Hodges; Harold 'Shorty' Baker , Emmett Berry (t); Lawrence Brown (tb); John Coltrane, Flip Phillips, Ben Webster, Rudy Williams (ts); Teddy Brannon, Call Cobbs, Leroy Lovett, Richie Powell (p); Ray Brown, Red Callender, Barney Richmond, Lloyd Trotman, John Williams (b); Louie Bellson, J. C. Heard, Osie Johnson, Al Walker (d); Al Hibbler (v). 7/52–7/54.

Hodges was out on his own at this point, taking a break from the Ellington orchestra and recording on his own account for Norman Granz. No need to get unreasonably excited by the presence of John Coltrane on the record. He's buried away in the ensemble on the closing 'Sweet As Bear Meat' from July 1954. Ben Webster, Shorty Baker and Emmett Berry are more important solo presences, though needless to say the main focus falls on Hodges, even if, as usual, he seems less assertive on his own dates than he was with Duke.

(*) Jazz Masters 35: Johnny Hodges Verve 521857-2 Very large personnel; much as for records above. 2/51–8/67.

(*) Johnny Hodges With Billy Strayhorn And The Orchestra Verve 557543-2 Hodges; Cat Anderson, Harold 'Shorty' Baker , Bill Berry, Howard McGhee, Ed Mullens (t); Lawrence Brown, Quentin Jackson, Chuck Connors (tb); Russell Procope (cl, as); Jimmy Hamilton (cl, ts); Paul Gonsalves (ts); Harry Carney (bs, cl); Jimmy Jones (p); Aaron Bell (b); Sam Woodyard (d). 11/61.

The Jazz Masters compilation is an ideal representation of later Hodges, at his most magisterial. Usually working with Ellingtonians, there is little to distinguish most of these settings from Ducal ones, except for the fact that Rabbit is even more generously featured than usual. It is wonderful to hear him in the company of a baritonist other than Carney on the 1959 session with Mulligan, and the compilation reprises the July 1952 Norman Granz jam which saw Hodges on stage with Benny Carter, Ben Webster and Charlie Parker.

A more recent arrival is the set arranged by Strayhorn and rather coyly credited to 'The Orchestra'; in other words, Ellington with the Duke on holiday. Rabbit could hardly have been in more familiar company for a concerto-like situation, and if he doesn't exactly put himself out to make the most of the opportunities, that isn't what such a hardened pro would have done anyway.

(*) Johnny Hodges At Sportpalast, Berlin Pablo 2620 102 2CD Hodges; Ray Nance (t); Lawrence Brown (tb); Harry Carney (bs); Al Williams (p); Aaron Bell (b); Sam Woodyard (d). 61.

Still associating largely with Ellingtonians, Hodges entered his final decade possessed of a magisterial voice which was like no other in jazz and which increasingly seemed the ancestor of everyone from John Coltrane to Bobby Watson. A surprising dearth of live material makes the return of the 1961 Sportpalast recording doubly welcome. Hodges was in magnificent voice on this occasion, playing with the moody grace that was his stock-in-trade. A few moments into 'Satin Doll' one realizes how wonderful it would have been to have seen this complex, rather difficult man perform as he does on these discs. Considering Hodges' popularity with mainstream followers, it is hard to understand why so many of the 30-odd albums under his own name have not yet been reissued.

 Everybody Knows Johnny Hodges Impulse A(S) 61 116 Hodges; Cat Anderson, Rolf Ericson, Herbie Jones, Ray Nance (t); Lawrence Brown, Buster Cooper, Britt Woodman (tb); Harold Ashby, Harry Carney, Paul Gonsalves, Jimmy Hamilton, Russell Procope (reeds); Jimmy Jones (p); Ernie Shepard (b); Grady Tate (d). 2/64, 3/65.

Billy Strayhorn composed '310 Blues' specially for the occasion and takes another credit with 'A Flower Is A Lovesome Thing'. From time to time, Hodges seems upstaged by both Paul Gonsalves (then in his pomp) and Lawrence Brown. The trombonist is actually the leader on the remaining tracks on the CD – Inspired Abandon, included in this reissue, was his album for Impulse!, with Rabbit as featured soloist. The material here isn't as good, certainly not a patch on the small-group cuts from the February 1964 dates; the big-band tracks – 'Main Stem', 'I Let A Song Go Out Of My Heart'/'Don't Get Around Much Anymore' – are equally good, but Hodges seems slightly overpowered by the arrangements. Essential all the same.

Also, in brief:

 Jeep Is Jumpin': A Proper Introduction Proper PROPERBOX58 4CD. 37–43.

A brilliant introduction to Hodges' early years, with the best jump material and some limpidly beautiful ballad solos. Almost 100 tracks with a 44-page booklet.

 Hodge Podge: The Best Of The Duke's Men – Volume 1 / * Who Struck John?: ... Volume 2 Definitive DRCD 11123 / 11124. 39–47.

Excellent compilation of some swing masterpieces, in pretty respectable sound.

 Wild Bill Is The Boss /  Joe's Blues / (*) Mess Of Blues /  Blue Hodge Lone Hill Jazz LHJ 10283–10286. 61–66.

These are presented as 'The Johnny Hodges/Wild Bill Davis Project', which adds a certain amount of grandeur to what were basically ear-pleasing sax/organ/guitar records, with Davis, Grant Green, Mundell Lowe, Kenny Burrell and others. There were eight LPs between 1961 and 1966, but Lone Hill are breaking the chronological sequence and grouping them according to various other criteria. As the first title suggests, volume one covers sessions where Davis's name came first. Hodges is magnificent, of course, but there's an excess of jazz-pop here. Just to complicate (or simplify) matters, some of this material, though not necessarily the best, is available on Camden as On The Way Up.

 With Lawrence Welk's Orchestra Ranwood 8246. 12/65.

Eh? One day you're working with Duke, the next with the Polka King. It works, though. A very beautiful record with enough top-flight guests to keep any jazz snob happy.

Amos Hoffman

GUITAR

Israeli-American guitarist, straight-ahead in essence.

 The Dreamer Fresh Sound New Talent FSNT 060 Hoffman; Duane Eubanks (t); Avishai Cohen (b); Jorge Rossy (d). 2/99.

Hoffman's clear, clean style abjures effects and mannerisms and relies on streams of melody. That makes this a likeable rather than an arresting record. Rossy and Cohen are an excellent team for this kind of thing, propulsive but not bossy, and Eubanks, though not on every track, is an interesting man to have on hand. The nine originals don't outstay their welcome, and 42 minutes is just the right length for the disc.

Jay Hoggard (born 1954)

VIBRAPHONE, MARIMBA

On the fringes of the New Haven new-music scene in the '70s, then moved to New York and played in more straight-ahead, post-bop surroundings. Some profile as a leader in the '80s but has rather slipped from sight of late.

 Solo Vibraphone India Navigation IN 1040 Hoggard (vib solo). 11/78.

() Rain Forest Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 800 Hoggard; Chico Freeman (ts); Kenny Kirkland (ky); John Koenig (clo, g); Roland Bautista (g); Francisco Centeno (b); Harvey Mason (d); Paulinho Da Costa, Jose Guico (perc); Maxayn Lewis, Patryce Banks, Sybil Thomas (v). 11/80.

There's a fierceness about Hoggard – 'the little tiger' seems a perfect description – that communicates itself through almost everything he does, not just the more avant-garde aspects. His exposure is currently thin owing to the disappearance of all his Muse albums, and this pair are merely worthwhile. The solo India Navigation set, now reissued with extra tracks, is one side of Hoggard's musical personality. Titles like 'May Those Who Love Apartheid Rot In Hell' give a sense of the burning intensity that fuels his work, but even here it's worth noting that such pieces sit alongside 'Toe Dance For A Baby' and a markedly jovial reading of 'Air Mail Special'. Recorded live, the disc doesn't give the best representation of Hoggard's clean, exact delivery. Technically, he sounds closer to Hamp than to Milt Jackson or Bobby Hutcherson. Rain Forest, a Contemporary date now reissued in the OJC series, is muddled by the Latin percussion and misguided vocals, and often seems inappropriately lightweight for such a dignified performer; but the sparkle of Hoggard's best playing glints through what looks suspiciously like a session he was talked into leading.

 The Right Place JHVM 0001 Hoggard; Dwight Andrews (ss, bcl, f); James Weidman (p, org); Hilton Ruiz (p); Belden Bullock (b); Pheeroan akLaff (d); Asher Delerme, Kwaakye Obeng (perc). 1/03.

 Songs Of Spiritual Love JHVM 0002 Hoggard; James Weidman (p). 05.

 Swing 'Em Gates: A Tribute to Lionel Hampton JHVM 0004 Hoggard; James Weidman, Dr Billy Taylor (p); Leon Lee Dorsey (b); Winard Harper (d); Willie Martinez (perc). 8/06.

Maybe the Latin tinge wasn't entirely foisted on him, for it returns on The Right Place, which is transparently an own-label release. Who could blame him? The industry has treated Hoggard with scant regard and it's a delight to welcome him back to the fold. He hasn't entirely mellowed with age. There's still plenty of fire in the playing; even on a slow tune, he has a blacksmith's ring. The mood's modern Afro-Cuban; the percussionists are intelligently integrated and Weidman and Andrews are inventive in their features to make this seem a group disc, rather than Hoggard and accompaniment. It's tempting to look at the title of the duo album and think 'Aha! He's got religion', meaning he's gone soft. Nothing could be further from it. These are all sacred songs ('Bridge Over Troubled Water' almost counts) and include traditional African-American anthems like 'Lift Every Voice And Sing', more widely resonant themes like 'His Eye Is On The Sparrow' and modern material like Coltrane's 'Dear Lord'. Hoggard may play with a lighter touch here and Weidman, a superb organ-player as well as pianist, can't quite avoid a churchy delivery (and presumably doesn't try to), but it's a tough jazz set as well as a spiritual statement.

Jay seems to alternate two- and four-mallet work, but Hampton is clearly his biggest influence and it's no surprise to hear him turn in a tribute record. They were friends and Hoggard seems to have depped for the great man on more than one occasion. He does the legacy proud on Swing 'Em Gates. The material's (over-)familiar, but 'Air Mail Special' probably couldn't be avoided and he manages to put a modern spin on it without deconstructing the old warhorse – no mean feat. Jay may wear a suit rather than a dashiki these days, but his playing is still as tigerish as ever. An underrated master.

Billie Holiday (1915–59)

VOCAL

Born in Baltimore, she had a wretched childhood but was singing early and made her first records in 1933. Her pre-war sessions with Teddy Wilson established her reputation, followed by stints with Basie and Artie Shaw. Drink and narcotics problems, which attended the rest of her life, held back her solo and film career, but she worked through the '40s, despite a spell in prison, began recording for Decca in 1944, and signed with Norman Granz in 1952. Her voice declined to a croak, but her musicianship stayed intact.

* The Billie Holiday Collection 1 Columbia 510721-2 Holiday; Roy Eldridge, Richard Clarke, Jonah Jones, Chris Griffin, Bunny Berigan, Irving Randolph (t); Benny Morton (tb); Tom Mace, Rudy Powell, Artie Shaw, Irving Fazola, Benny Goodman, Vido Musso (cl); Johnny Hodges (as); Ben Webster, Ted McRae, Chu Berry (ts); Harry Carney (bs, cl); Teddy Wilson, Joe Bushkin, Clyde Hart (p); Dave Barbour, John Truehart, Lawrence Lucie, Dick McDonough, Allan Reuss (g); John Kirby, Grachan Moncur, John Kirby, Pete Peterson, Artie Bernstein, Milt Hinton (b); Cozy Cole, Gene Krupa (d). 7/35–11/36.

* The Billie Holiday Collection 2 Columbia 510722-2 Holiday; Jonah Jones, Henry Allen, Buck Clayton, Cootie Williams, Eddie Tompkins (t); Benny Goodman, Edmond Hall, Buster Bailey (cl); Cecil Scott (cl, as, ts); Johnny Hodges (as); Lester Young, Prince Robinson, Joe Thomas, Ben Webster (ts); Harry Carney (bs, cl); Teddy Wilson, James Sherman, Claude Thornhill (p); Allan Reuss, Freddie Green, Jimmy McLin, Carmen Mastren (g); Walter Page, John Kirby, Artie Bernstein (b); Cozy Cole, Jo Jones, Alphonse Steele (d). 11/36–9/37.

* The Billie Holiday Collection 3 Columbia 510723-2 Holiday; Buck Clayton, Charlie Shavers, Hot Lips Page, Harry Edison (t); Benny Morton (tb); Prince Robinson, Buster Bailey (cl); Tab Smith (as, ss); Earl Warren, Jack Washington (as); Lester Young (ts, cl); Vido Musso, Babe Russin, Stanley Payne, Kenneth Hollon (ts); Claude Thornhill, Teddy Wilson, Margaret Johnson, Billy Kyle, Kenny Kersey, Sonny White, Joe Sullivan (p); Freddie Green, Jimmy McLin, Allan Reuss, Danny Barker, Bernard Addison (g); Walter Page, John Kirby, John Williams (b); Jo Jones, Cozy Cole, Eddie Dougherty (d). 9/37–12/39.

(*) The Billie Holiday Collection 4 Columbia 510724-2 Holiday; Buck Clayton, Harry Edison, Roy Eldridge, Bill Coleman, Shad Collins, Emmett Berry (t); Benny Morton, Jack Teagarden (tb); Jimmy Powell, Jimmy Hamilton, Barney Bigard (cl); Hymie Schertzer, Benny Carter (cl, as); Lester Boone, Jimmy Powell, Earle Warren, Jack Washington, Carl Frye, Leslie Johnakins, Eddie Barefield (as); Ernie Powell (cl, ts); Kermit Scott, Lester Young, Georgie Auld, Babe Russin (ts); Teddy Wilson, Joe Sullivan, Sonny White, Eddie Heywood, Art Tatum (p); Al Casey, Paul Chapman, Gene Fields, Freddie Green, Lawrence Lucie, John Collins, Ulysses Livingston (g); Walter Page, John Williams, Wilson Myers, Ted Sturgis, Grachan Moncur, Oscar Pettiford (b); Jo Jones, Hal West, Yank Porter, Sidney Catlett, Kenny Clarke, Herbert Cowens, J. C. Heard (d). 12/39–1/44.

* Lady Day: The Complete Billie Holiday On Columbia 1933–1944 / (*) Lady Day: The Best Of Billie Holiday CXK 85470 10CD / 504722-2 2CD As all above discs. 33–44; 36–42.

Billie Holiday remains among the most difficult of jazz artists to understand or study. Surrounded as she is by a disturbing legend, it is very difficult to hear her clearly. The legendary suffering and mythopoeic pain which countless admirers have actively sought out in her work make it difficult for the merely curious to warm to a singer who was a sometimes baffling performer. The later records place the listener in an almost voyeuristic role. Nevertheless, Holiday was a singular and unrepeatable talent whose finest hours are remarkably revealing and often surprisingly joyful.

Virtually all of her music is now available on CD. Columbia took their time about it, since their Holiday archive hadn't been remastered since the days of LPs, but the wait was worth it: their massive Lady Day edition offers the entire catalogue, 230 tracks including alternatives, airshots and a few V-Discs. The basic sequence starts with six and a half discs of the studio sessions in chronological order, then meanders through numerous alternative takes and a small amount of broadcast material for the remainder. There are also numerous essays and photos, as well as track-by-track analysis: all the familiar paraphernalia of the boxed-set age. The standard of these records – particularly considering how many tracks were made – is finally very high, and the best of them are as poised and finely crafted as any small-group jazz of the period. One of Holiday's innovations was to suggest a role for the singer which blended in with the rest of the musicians, improvising a line and taking a 'solo' which was as integrated as anything else on the record. On her earlier sides with Wilson as leader, she was still credited as responsible for the 'vocal refrain', but the later titles feature 'Billie Holiday And Her Orchestra'. She starts some records and slips into the middle of others, but always there's a feeling of a musician at ease with the rest of the band and aware of the importance of fitting into the performance as a whole.

Her tone, on the earliest sides, is still a little raw and unformed, and the trademark rasp at the edge of her voice – which she uses to canny effect on the later titles – is used less pointedly; but the unaffected styling is already present, and there are indications of her mastery of time even at the very beginning. While the most obvious characteristic of her singing is the lagging behind the beat, she seldom sounds tired or slow to respond, and the deeper impression is of a vocalist who knows exactly how much time she can take. She never scats, rarely drifts far from the melody, and respects structure and lyrical nuance, even where the material is less than blue-chip. But her best singing invests the words with shades of meaning which vocalists until that point had barely looked at: she creates an ambiguity between what the words say and what she might be thinking which is very hard to distil. And that is the core of Holiday's mystique. Coupled with the foggy, baleful, sombre quality of her tone, it creates a vocal jazz which is as absorbing as it is enduring.

Whatever one may think about the later albums, these sessions surrender nothing in gravitas and communicate a good humour which is all their own. The session producers – John Hammond or Bernie Hanighen – encouraged an atmosphere of mutual creativity which the singer seldom fails to respond to, and even on the less than immortal songs Holiday makes something of the situation: there is no sense of her fighting against the material, as there often is with Armstrong or Waller in the same period. On the many upbeat songs, she's irresistible. The informality starts to fade, though, and she becomes more like a singer with accompanists, but the blitheness of her youthful voice persists. On an airshot with the Basie orchestra, she does 'Swing, Brother, Swing', which is much more the sort of thing you'd expect to hear from Ella Fitzgerald in this period, and every phrase has light and lift in it, all the jive language made into something almost spiritual.

As a trove of songs, this is also enormously valuable. The chestnuts produce predictably fine performances, but it's on the lesser, and lesser-known, material that Billie really works wonders. 'Romance In The Dark', 'Back In Your Own Backyard', 'They Say', 'I'm Gonna Lock My Heart', 'Says My Heart' and even a trifle such as 'Under A Blue Jungle Moon' come up like splendid tunes even when they're not. It's not so much that she transforms or transcends these songs, more that at this point she seemed to breeze through lines with a delight in her own talent that, in an odd way, makes the matter of the lyrics almost irrelevant. Not so much in love with her own voice, but in love with what it could do.

The musicianship is, inevitably, hard to criticize. Although Lester Young's presence on many of these dates is usually the one that's singled out, the greater achievement lies with Teddy Wilson: his blend of elegance and vitality has out-faced 65 years, and will continue to do so. Luckily, we can also hear everything that was going on: the transfers are at last just as they should be. The original Vocalion masters weren't always wonderful, but the engineers haven't been shy about leaving some surface noise in if it meant getting the music to sound as it should. The many alternative takes don't tell us much that's new, and the handful of airshot titles are no more than a pleasing bonus.

If you don't want to spring for the full set, the two-disc Columbia best-of is a fine alternative, but even better are the four volumes of The Billie Holiday Collection, drawn from the complete edition. The Classics CDs cover all the material which isn't also included on their Teddy Wilson series: a useful way to fill gaps if the other discs are already in the collection, but splitting the music between Wilson and Holiday separates much of the best material.

[illegible]

 Lady Day Swings!

Columbia 508608-2 As various discs above. 7/35–7/39.

One could say that she swung whatever the tempo was, but this absolutely delightful collection focuses in on the most skipping and beautifully upbeat of her '30s performances. There's tenderness, too, in the likes of 'Easy To Love' and 'Romance In The Dark'. It's possible to complain that it's a one-sided look at Holiday's art. We prefer to see it as her most consistently enjoyable collection.

 The Commodore Master Takes Commodore 543272-2 Holiday; Frankie Newton, Doc Cheatham, Freddy Webster (t); Vic Dickenson (tb); Lem Davis, Tab Smith (as); Stan Payne, Kenneth Hollon (ts); Eddie Heywood, Sonny White (p); Jimmy McLin, Teddy Walters (g); John Williams, John Simmons (b); Eddie Dougherty, Big Sid Catlett (d). 4/39–8/44.

Holiday's Commodore sessions account for only 17 titles all told. A two-CD set with numerous multiple takes has now been deleted. This single CD version will suffice for what's regarded as a footnote to her most important music. It opens on her signature set-piece, 'Strange Fruit', which sets a sombre tone for the first session, and though there's then a jump of some five years, the rest of the tracks tend to follow the pattern of subdued tempos and rather severe interpretations. The ultra-slow speed of 'How Am I To Know' is startling in itself, and so in its way is the gently entreating 'Lover Come Back To Me'. The accompaniments include some excellent players, but Eddie Heywood's charts give them precious little chance to shine. A little-known period: most will regard it as a footnote to her more important music.

(*) The Complete Original American Decca Recordings GRP 052601-2 2CD Holiday; Russ Case, Joe Guy, Gordon Griffin, Rostelle Reese, Billy Butterfield, Jimmy Nottingham, Emmett Berry, Buck Clayton, Bernie Privin, Tony Faso, Dick Vance, Shad Collins, Bobby Williams, Bobby Hackett (t); Dicky Wells, George Matthews, Henderson Chambers, Mort Bullman, George Stevenson (tb); Milt Yaner, Bill Stegmeyer (cl, as); Hymie Schertzer, Jack Cressey, Lem Davis, Toots Mondello, Al Klink, Rudy Powell, George Dorsey, Johnny Mince, Pete Clark, Sid Cooper (as); John Fulton (ts, cl, f); Dick Eckles (ts, f); Larry Binyon, Paul Ricci, Dave Harris, Hank Ross, Armand Camgros, Bob Dorsey, Art Drelinger, Lester Young, Joe Thomas, Budd Johnson, Freddie Williams, Pat Nizza (ts); Eddie Barefield (bs, cl); Stan Webb, Sol Moore, Dave McRae (bs); Dave Bowman, Sammy Benskin, Joe Springer, Charles LaVere, Bobby Tucker, Billy Kyle, Horace Henderson, Bernie Leighton (p); Carl Kress, Tony Mottola, Everett Barksdale, Bob Bain, Mundell Lowe, Tiny Grimes, Jimmy Shirley, Dan Perry (g); Haig Stephens, Bob Haggart, Billy Taylor, John Simmons, Thomas Barney, George Duvivier, Joe Benjamin, Jack Lesberg, Lou Butterman (b); Johnny Blowers, George Wettling, Specs Powell, Big Sid Catlett, Kelly Martin, Denzil Best, Kenny Clarke, Norris 'Bunny' Shawker, Shadow Wilson, Cozy Cole, Wallace Bishop, Jimmy Crawford, Nick Fatool (d); Louis Armstrong (v); strings and choir. 10/44–3/50.

 Billie Holiday 1944 Classics 806 Similar to above, except add Roy Eldridge, Doc Cheatham, Freddy Webster (t); Vic Dickenson (tb); Barney Bigard (cl); Lem Davis (as); Al Casey, Teddy Walters (g); Oscar Pettiford (b). 3–11/44.

Holiday's Decca sessions have been impeccably presented here, in a double-CD set which has been remastered to make the music sound as big and clear as possible. Some may prefer a warmer and less boomy sound, but the overall timbre is impressively full and strong. These sessions were made when Holiday had established a wider reputation, and their feel is very different from the Columbia records: carefully orchestrated by a multitude of hands, including Sy Oliver and Gordon Jenkins, the best of them are as good as anything Holiday did. Many listeners may, indeed, find this the single most entertaining set of Holiday reissues on the market. Her own songs, 'Don't Explain' and 'God Bless The Child', are obvious highlights, even if they mark the beginning of Holiday's 'victim' image, and here is the original reading of the subsequently famous 'That Ole Devil Called Love', two duets with Louis Armstrong, slow and emotionally draining readings of 'Porgy' and 'My Man' (from the one session with the sole accompaniment of a rhythm section), and a lot of pleasing, brightly paced readings of superior standards. Few players stand out the way Young and Wilson do on the pre-war sides, but these aren't the same kind of records.

The Classics sequence usefully continues with various 1944 tracks. It starts with three numbers from a Metropolitan Opera House show, with Eldridge and Tatum in the band, then goes through material with Eddie Heywood's Orchestra and finally reaches the first of the sessions on the MCA set.

(*) Solitude Verve 519810-2 Holiday; Charlie Shavers (t); Flip Phillips (ts); Oscar Peterson (p); Barney Kessel (g); Ray Brown (b); Alvin Stoller (d). 52.

 Recital By Billie Holiday Verve 521868-2 Holiday; Harry 'Sweets' Edison , Joe Newman, Charlie Shavers (t); Willie Smith (as); Paul Quinichette (ts); Oscar Peterson (p, org); Bobby Tucker (p); Herb Ellis, Freddie Green, Barney Kessel (g); Ray Brown, Red Callender (b); Chico Hamilton, Gus Johnson, Ed Shaughnessy (d). 7/52–9/54.

 Lady Sings The Blues Verve 521429-2 Holiday; Charlie Shavers (t); Tony Scott (cl, p); Budd Johnson, Paul Quinichette (ts); Wynton Kelly, Billy Taylor (p); Billy Bauer, Kenny Burrell (g); Aaron Bell, Leonard Gaskin (b); Cozy Cole, Lennie McBrowne (d). 2/55–6/56.

(*) Music For Torching Verve 527455-2 Holiday; similar to above. 8/56.

* All Or Nothing At All Verve 529226-2 2CD Holiday; Harry 'Sweets' Edison (t); Ben Webster (ts); Jimmy Rowles (p); Barney Kessel (g); Joe Mondragon (b); Alvin Stoller (d). 8/56–1/57.

* Songs For Distingué Lovers Verve 539056-2 As above, except add Larry Bunker (d). 7/56.

(*) Body And Soul Verve 589308-2 As above, except omit Mondragon; add Red Mitchell (b). 57.

(*) The Billie Holiday Songbook Verve 823246-2 Holiday; Joe Newman, Charlie Shavers, Roy Eldridge, Buck Clayton, Harry 'Sweets' Edison (t); Tony Scott (cl); Willie Smith (as); Paul Quinichette, Al Cohn, Coleman Hawkins (ts); Wynton Kelly, Carl Drinkard, Mal Waldron, Oscar Peterson, Bobby Tucker (p); Kenny Burrell, Herb Ellis, Freddie Green, Barney Kessel (g); Aaron Bell, Ray Brown, Carson Smith, Milt Hinton, Red Callender (b); Gus Johnson, Chico Hamilton, Ed Shaughnessy, Don Lamond, Lennie McBrowne (d). 7/52–9/58.

(*) Verve Jazz Masters: Billie Holiday  Jazz Masters 47: Sings Standards Verve 519825-2 / 527650-2 Holiday; various groups. 52–8/56; 2/45–3/59.

(*) Lady In Autumn Verve 849434-2 2CD Holiday; Buck Clayton, Joe Guy, Charlie Shavers, Joe Newman, Harry 'Sweets' Edison , Roy Eldridge (t); Tommy Turk (tb); Tony Scott (cl); Romeo Penque (as, bcl); Willie Smith, Gene Quill, Benny Carter (as); Ben Webster, Lester Young, Coleman Hawkins, Al Cohn, Paul Quinichette, Budd Johnson (ts); Oscar Peterson (p, org); Milt Raskin, Bobby Tucker, Mal Waldron, Carl Drinkard, Jimmy Rowles, Hank Jones, Wynton Kelly (p); Irving Ashby, Barney Kessel, Kenny Burrell, Barry Galbraith, Freddie Green (g); Janet Putnam (hp); Milt Hinton, Carson Smith, Joe Mondragon, Red Mitchell, Red Callender, Aaron Bell, Leonard Gaskin, John Simmons, Ray Brown (b); Dave Coleman, Alvin Stoller, J. C. Heard, Ed Shaughnessy, Chico Hamilton, Larry Bunker, Lennie McBrowne, Osie Johnson (d); strings. 4/46–3/59.

* First Issue: The Great American Songbook Verve 523003-2 2CD Similar to above. 52–59.

Holiday's last significant period in the studios was with Verve in the '50s, and this is the best-known and most problematical music she made. Her voice has already lost most of its youthful shine and ebullience: on 'What A Little Moonlight Can Do', Oscar Peterson does his best to rouse the singer, but she only has the energy to glide. Whether this makes her music more revealing or affecting or profound is something listeners will have to decide for themselves. Sometimes the voice is funereal; then it takes on a persuasive inner lilt which insists that her greatness has endured. And the best of the interpretations, scattered as they are through all these records, show how compelling Holiday could still be.

Although there is a complete edition available, Verve have now released Holiday's output in seven separate sets. Preference among the discs depends mainly on song selection and accompanists: Granz always made sure there were top-flight bands behind her. Solitude has some lovely things: a classic 'These Foolish Things', a marvellous 'Moonglow'. Recital has some happy work, including 'What A Little Moonlight Can Do' and 'Too Marvelous For Words', but there are some sloppy pieces too. Lady Sings The Blues (replacing a previous disc under that title) has three or four of her best-known heartache songs and includes the rehearsal tape with Tony Scott where they work up 'God Bless The Child' – intriguing, but probably for scholars only. Music For Torching is small-hours music of a high, troubling calibre. All Or Nothing At All rounds up seven long sessions across two discs and includes some magnificent work from Edison and Webster (there is even a warm-up instrumental cut while they were waiting for her to arrive at the studio), as well as what is probably Holiday's most regal, instinctual late work. It all seems to come to a peak on the very last track on disc two, the definitive version of 'Gee Baby, Ain't I Good To You?'. Body And Soul is another edition of some of the same material.

Songs For Distingué Lovers has been made available by Verve in their Master Edition series and, with the original programme expanded to 12 tracks, putting the entire session in one place, this is another front-rank recommendation, the music in its latest remastering sounding particularly handsome. In comparison, the compilations seem superfluous, except for those who prefer just the odd Holiday record in their collection. Both discs in the Jazz Masters series would do fine for that, though the Standards selection rather inevitably comes off second best. The First Issue two-disc set is, though, a beautifully chosen retrospective which eschews Holiday's tortured epics and lines up the choicest examples of Tin Pan Alley instead.

 Billie's Blues Blue Note 748786-2 Holiday; Monty Kelly, Larry Neill, Don Waddilove (t); Skip Layton, Murray McEachern (tb); Buddy DeFranco (cl); Alvy West, Dan D'Andrea , Lennie Hartman (reeds); Haywood Henry (ts, bs); Carl Drinkard, Bobby Tucker, Buddy Weed, Sonny Clark, Beryl Booker (p); Jimmy Raney, Mike Pingitore, Tiny Grimes (g); Red Mitchell, Artie Shapiro (b); Elaine Leighton, Willie Rodriguez (d). 42–54.

 Jazz At The Philharmonic Verve 521642-2 Holiday; Buck Clayton, Roy Eldridge, Howard McGhee (t); Tony Scott (cl); Illinois Jacquet, Wardell Gray, Al Cohn, Coleman Hawkins, Lester Young (ts); Carl Drinkard (p); Kenny Burrell (g); Charles Mingus, Carson Smith (b); Dave Coleman, J. C. Heard, Chico Hamilton (d). 2/45–11/56.

 1949–52 Radio and TV Broadcasts ESP 3002 Holiday; other personnel uncertain, but includes Mal Waldron (p); Milt Hinton (b); Osie Johnson (d). 49–52.

 1953–56 Radio and TV Broadcasts ESP 3003 As above. 53–56.

 At Carnegie Hall Verve 527777-2 Holiday; Buck Clayton, Roy Eldridge (t); Al Cohn, Coleman Hawkins (ts); Tony Scott (cl, p); Carl Drinkard (p); Kenny Burrell (g); Carson Smith (b); Chico Hamilton (d). 11/56.

Holiday left a fair number of live recordings, most of them unauthorized at the time, and they're a fairly depressing lot. Unlike, say, Charlie Parker's live music, this presents a less than fascinating portrait, often of a musician in adversity. Club recordings find her in wildly varying voice, almost from song to song: truly affecting performances may sit next to ragged, throwaway ones. Billie's Blues is an interesting cross-section of tracks: several from a European tour which was a mixed success, including three with Buddy DeFranco's group that feature some fine clarinet by the leader, and four from an obscure session for Aladdin with a group that puts the singer into a jump-band blues situation. She handles it unexpectedly well.

The ESP discs make an interesting pair, but we are still waiting for the new issue of what was the third volume in this series, which includes the famous 'Fine And Mellow' from the 1957 Sound Of Jazz telecast, as well as an excellent 'Porgy' from 1956. Her JATP appearances are collected on the Verve album, plus material from other less inspiring appearances from the '50s. At Carnegie Hall is the record of one of her last great live shows. The notes reveal she was not in a fit state to perform, and with the music interspersed with readings from her book there is a macabre quality which her artistry somehow rises above.

* The Complete Billie Holiday On Verve 1945–1959 / (*) Billie's Best Verve 517658-2 10CD / 513943-2 Holiday; various groups as above. 45–59.

The circle is now closed on Holiday's career: the various multi-disc packages allow anyone to follow her from the beginning to the end. There are rarities in this major collection, which includes what are often wryly funny rehearsal tapes with Jimmy Rowles (strange to hear this famously tormented woman laugh and tell jokes), but its main purpose is to provide first-to-last coverage of her major studio years. There is splendid documentation to go with the records. Billie's Best is a useful pocket edition that samples the big box. There are no fewer than 11 other compilations listed in the Verve catalogue, and of course countless others of less impeccable provenance. The best of the work there is a pointless piece of duplication: the Jazz Masters discs listed above remain good enough.

Also, in brief:

(*) Masters Of Jazz Vol. 3: Billie Holiday Storyville 4103. 44–49.

Respectable live material from the '40s.

(*) Billie Holiday 1945–1948 Classics 1040. 8/45–12/48.

An unhappy period, during which Holiday served time for narcotics possession, but there were nevertheless some fine records.

(*) Lady In Satin / () Last Recordings Columbia CK 65144 / Verve 835370-2. 58; 3/59.

No one seriously wants to remember her like this, though the terminal croak does still exert a grim fascination.

Joe Holiday (born 1925)

TENOR SAXOPHONE

Born in Sicily, he came to New Jersey as a child. Once successful, but his reputation's pretty much eclipsed.

 Holiday For Jazz Fresh Sound FSRCD 439 Holiday; Idrees Sulieman, Joe Newman, Blue Mitchell, Thad Jones, Art Farmer (t); Eddie Bert (tb); Earl Warren (as); Cecil Payne (bs); Duke Jordan, Johnny Acea (p); Franklin Skeete, Wendell Marshall, Addison Farmer (b); Max Roach, Osie Johnson, Carmen Pepe, Art Taylor (d). 3/53, 2/57.

If Fresh Sound existed for no other purpose than to recover figures as forgotten as Holiday, it would still be valuable. Joe's likeable, uncomplicated swing is fairly derivative – Wardell Gray and Stan Getz were his main influences, allegedly, though he sounds more like Charlie Ventura – but not so much that he deserved oblivion. The early stuff with Sulieman, Bert, Warren and Payne (a Prestige EP) is like reduced big-band swing, but Holiday stuck with the little big-band or big little-band formula over the next four years and the octet personnels alone should be some guarantee of quality. The results were all on a Decca 12-inch. Hard to pick out particular tracks; Joe's writing was individual but mostly uncomplicated and it was the arrangements, by Hal Mitchell and Ernie Wilkins, that gave these cuts their individuality: 'Curtain Call', with Art Farmer and Thad Jones, and 'Study in Turquoise', with Thad and Joe Newman, are our favourites.

Dave Holland (born 1946)

DOUBLE BASS, CELLO

Studied in London in the '60s, then joined Miles Davis, 1968–70. Has been constantly in demand ever since and has built a huge discography. Teaches and leads his own quintet when other demands allow. Occasional work on cello or electric bass, but basically a stand-up man with a peerless sound.

[illegible]

* Conference Of The Birds
ECM 829373-2 Holland; Anthony Braxton, Sam Rivers (reeds, f); Barry Altschul (d, perc). 11/72.

In 1968, the 22-year-old Holland recorded Karyobin with the Spontaneous Music Ensemble and Filles De Kilimanjaro with Miles Davis. Even given that most bassists have a wide and varied CV, this is a pretty broad musical spectrum to pack into a few months. Holland has been spoken of in the same breath as the legendary Scott LaFaro: he shares the American's bright, exact intonation, incredible hand-speed and utter musicality. If he had never made another record as leader, Conference Of The Birds would still stand out as a quiet masterpiece. The title-piece, marked out by Altschul's marimba figures and the two reedmen interweaving basket-tight, was inspired by the morning chorus outside Holland's London flat, not the Persian mystical poem. But mystical much of the music is; indivisible and remarkably hard to render verbally. On flutes, Rivers and Braxton are hard to separate; on saxophones, much easier. Altschul is at his very best and Holland's own part is subtly nuanced.

 Emerald Tears ECM 529087-2 Holland (b solo). 8/77.
 Life Cycle ECM 829200-2 Holland (clo solo). 11/82.

Though solo bass (and cello) performances were to become something of an ECM staple (see 'in brief', below), Holland's two early solo discs stand out. Emerald Tears is a quiet and meditative album, that in a few isolated moments starts to sound like a set of exercises. The eight tracks are more or less the same length, even when some, like the opening 'Spheres' or the beautiful 'Under Redwoods', call out for further development, while others – the arco 'Combination' and 'Flurries' – linger unnecessarily. One

Miles Davis tune is included: 'Solar' sits comfortably for a bass-player and it brings out Holland's singing tone. There is also a piece by Anthony Braxton. The cello record is not quite such a tough listen, perhaps because it has an internal consistency Emerald Tears largely lacks. It is difficult to separate real echoes from simple association of ideas, but much of the language seems to be classical rather than jazz-based; some moments will suggest Bach, others Kodály, though there are also parallels with Oscar Pettiford and Ron Carter. For sheer musicianship, these records probably merit higher ratings; for most listeners, they demand a pretty substantial loyalty.

(*) Jumpin' In ECM 817437-2 Holland; Kenny Wheeler (t, pkt-t, c, flhn); Robin Eubanks, Julian Priester (tb); Steve Coleman (as); Steve Ellington (d). 10/83.
 Seeds Of Time ECM 825322-2 As above, except omit Ellington; add Marvin 'Smitty' Smith (d). 11/84.
 The Razor's Edge ECM 833048-2 As above, except omit Priester. 2/87.
Holland's '80s bands were the antithesis of what he had been doing 15 years before, whether with the SME or with Miles. Tightly arranged, with much of the drama enacted between bass and brass, they manage to steer a path between freedom and fixity of detail. Holland also seemed to be much concerned with texture, and Kenny Wheeler's range of horns on Jumpin' In suggests a desire for subtle colouration that was to be developed, albeit less obviously, over the next couple of albums.

One obvious influence at this time was the Mingus Jazz Workshop. 'Blues For C.M.' on Razor's Edge is the only fully explicit reference, and while it's difficult to reconcile the quiet and unassuming Holland with the volcanic American, the voicings and the interplay of structure and freedom come from the same root. The sound has paled a little by 1987, but these are all strong statements none the less.

* Points Of View ECM 557020-2 Holland; Robin Eubanks (tb); Steve Wilson (ss, as); Steven Nelson (vib, mar); Billy Kilson (d). 9/97.
(*) Not For Nothin' ECM 014004-2 As above, except omit Wilson; add Chris Potter (ss, as, ts). 9/00.
From the faintly mournful opening of 'The Balance' to the soaring delight of 'Herbaceous', a dedication to Herbie Hancock, Points Of View is an altogether more even and generous record than its predecessor. Once again, Holland floats comfortably on top of the implicit pulse established by Nelson and secured by the new drummer. Kilson won't be to every taste and his solo on the Ray Brown tribute, 'Mr B', is lacking in substance, but he has a very secure time-feel, even when everything around seems to be drifting off-line.

The strongest compositions are by Eubanks and Wilson. The trombonist's 'Metamorphos' stands as a dark, ambiguous tail-piece to Holland's own 'Bedouin Trail'. Wilson creates his own mysteries on 'The Benevolent One', an idea which seems to draw on the same harmonic language as Coltrane's 'Alabama' and 'Wise One'. Nelson's feature comes right at the end, his own faux-Latin 'Serenade', which relegates the horns in favour of a gently swinging trio that cues up Holland's most relaxed playing of the set; unwary listeners might think they'd stumbled across one of Charlie Haden's romantic song projects.

The quintet continued to evolve with the arrival of Chris Potter, who contributes the excellent 'Lost And Found'. All five men have writing credits and Eubanks catches the attention immediately with 'Global Citizen', a long, modulated suite of themes which triggers fine solos from Nelson, Holland and Eubanks himself. Engineer James Farber gives the group a nicely rounded ensemble sound, and here the balance of voices is just about spot-on. The loping title-track, led off by Nelson, is one of Holland's most good-natured compositions, with a gruff maturity that characterizes the whole of another strong record.

(*) What Goes Around ECM 014002 Holland; Earl Gardner, Alex Sipiagin (t, flhn); Robin Eubanks, Andre Hayward, Josh Roseman (tb); Mark Gross (as); Antonio Hart (as, f); Chris Potter (ts); Steve Nelson (vib); Billy Kilson (d). 1/01.
Apart from 'Upswing', these are all fairly familiar charts, giving a certain impression of scaled-up small-group work. This isn't entirely fair because Holland has clearly thought through the implications of big-band performance very carefully indeed. He has some very strong soloists in his line-up, but more importantly he has devised a powerful ensemble sound that carries tunes like 'Temple Dance', 'The Razor's Edge' and the title-track into a new dimension.

* Extended Play ECM 038505-2 2CD Holland; Robin Eubanks (tb); Chris Potter (ss, ts); Steve Nelson (vib); Billy Kilson (d). 11/01.
This is the first time ECM have released a live Holland disc. A pity, because this seasoning band is better in a live situation – Birdland here – than in the studio. Eubanks always sounds more unfettered and Nelson and Kilson vie with each other to keep up the pace. Some of the tracks are very long indeed: the opener lasts more than 20 minutes, though so rich in ideas is this performance of 'The Balance' that it could have been stretched to half as much again. 'Free For All' is the only makeweight, but 'Claressence' and the long closing 'Metamorphos' offer ample testimony to Dave's continuing creativity and strong instincts as a leader. Potter was a valuable addition. A generous span of music.

 Overtime Verve 982714-2 Holland; big band. 11/02.
Dave's big band is packed with familiar names from his past career, but what's unfamiliar is the light-heartedness and richness of the 'Monterey Suite' commission that is the set's main action. This is a bursting, delighted work that clinches Holland's place as an adventurous and successful big-band leader. If only economics allowed this band to work, say, three months of the year, it would be a killer. As it is, the joins show here and there.

(*) Critical Mass Emarcy 9842216 Holland; Robin Eubanks (tb); Chris Potter (sax); Steve Nelson (vib, mar); Nate Smith (d). 12/05.
This is now one of the great modern small groups. Holland's still the main composer, and he's palpably in command in the studio, steering each piece with an unflappably steady hand, but he has to share credit with his men, each of whom claim a writing credit; given there are only eight tracks, that's hardly a token representation. There's no title-piece, which may be a small recognition that with this group Holland has at least found a collective voice commensurate with his vision. His own finest moment, as player and writer, comes on 'Secret Garden', but Eubanks's long 'Full Circle' is the most striking single conception on the disc, a really major statement from a player who's maturing into impressive wisdom, the Jay Jay of his day.

Also, in brief:

 Music From Two Basses ECM 987176-6. 11/71.
A set shared with Barre Phillips. Solo bass has rarely sounded so compelling.

 :rarum: Selected Recordings ECM 8010. 72–00.
A nice range of self-selected material documenting some of the most important relationships of his post-Miles career.

 Triplicate / (*) Extensions ECM 837113-2 / 941778-2. 3/88, 9/89.
With Steve Coleman (as) on both, and Jack DeJohnette and Smitty Smith (d), these were tamer than they promised.

 Ones All Intuition 2148. 5/93.
A solo recital: the highlights are an emotional 'Goodbye Pork Pie Hat', 'Mr P.C.' and 'God Bless The Child'.

(*) Dream Of The Elders ECM 529084-2. 95.
The first ECM record as leader for eight years and the work of a group that was striving for a unified sound, and falling just inches short.

John Hollenbeck

DRUMMER

Probably best known as leader of the witty and eclectic Claudia Quintet, but sometimes to be found working on his own account.

(*) A Blessing Omnitone 15209 Hollenbeck; Dave Ballou, Laurie Frink, Tony Kadleck, Jon Owens (t); Alan Ferber, Jacob Garchik, Rob Hudson, Kurtis Pivert (tb); Ben Kono (ss, as, bc, f); Tom Christensen, Dan Willis (ss, ts, eng hn); Alan Won (bs, bcl); Chris Speed (cl); Gary Versace (p); Matt Moran (vib); Kermit Driscoll (b); Theo Bleckmann (v). 8/03.
This is a big group, packed with excellent players, but the real star isn't the drummer or the ensemble but Bleckmann, whose amazing voice is deployed as another instrument, chanting and gargling wordlessly and then delivering the prayer and blessing that give the project its shape and tone. Hollenbeck has taken great pains not to let his Large Ensemble fall into comfortable generic patterns. The band sounds put together for the music, rather than vice versa. There is some fine Dave Holland-like writing for the horns, particularly the trombones, and some bold open-form sections. It's clear that as well as figures like Gil Evans and contemporaries like Maria Schneider, he is influenced by people outside jazz altogether. Some passages suggest contemporary European classical music, with fields of tones taking on a unique colouration from Hollenbeck's highly original voicings. Recommended; but sample the Claudias as well.

* Joys And Desires Intuition 33862 Hollenbeck; Jazz Bigband Graz; Theo Bleckmann (v). 4/04.
This is remarkable. To open with a setting of a Wallace Stevens poem, 'The Bird With The Coppery, Keen Claws', and to build a Blake lyric into a jazz (though Mike Westbrook has already gone down that route) might seem like a bid for 'seriousness'. In reality, this is another vivid jazz record, the Austrian ensemble (who really deserved individual credits here) again deployed with the nimbleness and reaction-rate of a small group. Hollenbeck's writing is superb and 'Abstinence' is a great – let the word stand – contemporary composition. Bleckmann's involved again and keeps things attractively weird.

Red Holloway (born 1927)

ALTO AND TENOR SAXOPHONE, VOICE

Originally from Arkansas, he got his start in Chicago blues and R&B; later worked in sax/organ combos format and has lately turned up in big-band and mainstream situations.

 Brother Red Prestige 24141-2 Holloway; Alvin Red Tyler (ts); Brother Jack McDuff (org); George Benson (g); Wilfred Middlebrooks (b); Joe Dukes (d). 2/64.
 Legends Of Acid Jazz Prestige 24199-2 Holloway; John Patton, Lonnie Liston Smith (org); Norman Simmons (p); Eric Gale, George Benson (g); Leonard Gaskin, Charles Rainey, Paul Breslin (b); Herbie Lovelle, Ray Lucas, Frank Severino (d). 10/63–12/65.
 Nica's Dream Steeplechase SCCD 31192 Holloway; Horace Parlan (p); Jesper Lundgaard (b); Aage Tanggaard (d). 7/84.
 Live At the 1995 Floating Jazz Festival Chiaroscuro CR(D) 348 Holloway; Harry 'Sweets' Edison (t); Dwight Dickerson (p); Richard Reid (b); Paul Humphrey (d). 11/95.
 Keep That Groove Going! Milestone 9319-2 Holloway; Plas Johnson (ts); Gene Ludwig (org); Melvin Sparks (b); Kenny Washington (d). 4/01.
 Coast To Coast Milestone 9335 Holloway; Frank Wess (ts); Dr Lonnie Smith (org); Melvin Sparks (b); Paul Humphrey (d). 2/03.
Brother Red is basically the Cookin' Together collaboration with Jack McDuff, and a sturdy if unexceptional example of the sax/organ genre of the time. Legends Of Acid Jazz doubles up the original sets, The Burner (with Patton and Gale) and Red Soul (with Smith and Benson). Nothing ambitious, just sound, beefy playing by all hands.

More recent records have been mixed. The Steeplechase session reissues a mid-'80s date, and here Holloway hits a groove that hardly lets up for 40-odd minutes: since he likes the high parts of the tenor and the middle range of the alto, it often sounds like he's playing a hybrid of the two horns, lean, many-noted and decidedly cheerful – he plays blues as if they were fun, and ballads tend to be amiable rather than deeply felt. Parlan and the Scandinavians do well for him.

Red's stint on board the SS Norway is captured on the Chiaroscuro CD. Sweets Edison sits in on three leisurely standards, and Red is in good enough spirits to sing one somewhat dubious love song.

More of a tenor skirmish than a battle, since both veterans are taking it rather easier these days, even if 'Go Red Go' gets things hot and bothered. Red probably edges ahead of Plas, given that he paces himself rather better, and it's the mutual joshing on the likes of the title-piece and 'Jammin' For Mr Lee', along with the blues balladry of 'Serenade In Blue', that works best.

The most recent restores him to a favoured setting. Wess is magisterial and plays with a depth Red can only dream of. Smith has a Buddha's calm and substance, and it all goes by agreeably.

Bill Holman (born 1927)

TENOR SAXOPHONE, ARRANGER

One of the most gifted of big-band arrangers, he studied music in California and then scored music for Stan Kenton in the early '50s. Though much of his work from the '60s onwards was in TV and session situations, he kept his hand in as a jazz writer and formed an 'occasional' big band to play his own charts, beginning in 1975.

 The Fabulous Bill Holman, His Octet And Orchestra Fresh Sound FSRCD 2219 Holman; Conte Candoli, Don Fagerquist, Ray Lynn, Al Porcino, Nick Travis (t); Harry Betts, Bob Fitzpatrick, Lew McCreary, Ray Sims (tb); Bob Enevoldsen, Stu Williamson (vtb); Herb Geller, Charlie Mariano (as); Richie Kamuca, Charlie Kennedy (ts); Bob Gordon, Steve Perlow (bs); Lou Levy (p); Max Bennett, Curtis Counce (b); Stan Levey, Mel Lewis (d). 5 & 8/54, 4/57.

 In A Jazz Orbit VSOP 25 Holman; Ed Leddy, Al Porcino, Jack Sheldon (t); Stu Williamson (vtb); Frank Rosolino, Carl Fontana, Ray Sims (tb); Herb Geller, Charlie Mariano (as); Richie Kamuca, Charlie Kennedy (ts); Bill Hood (bs); Victor Feldman (p); Buddy Clark (b); Mel Lewis (d). 2/58.

 Jive For Five VSOP 19 Holman; Lee Katzman (t); Jimmy Rowles (p); Wilfred Middlebrooks (b); Mel Lewis (d). 6/58.

Holman is known these days as a grandmaster arranger. He has also been a more than useful saxophonist, tonally similar to the red-wine sound of Al Cohn. The Fresh Sound dates cover some very good octet recordings from 1954, with the two valve trombonists anchoring Holman's sinewy pianoless arrangements. The big band material from later is equally good, if less immediately arresting. These sessions were issued as The Fabulous, which is also available on the Lone Hill complete (obviously) and as a single CD on Sackville, but the compilation – or the Lone Hill set below – should do fine for most non-specialists. In A Jazz Orbit was originally released on Andex. It's an interesting set that starts off with some warm-up (and slightly show-off) repertory arrangements, before setting down to deliver Bill's meaty compositions in the second half. It's a valid strategy, neither arrogant nor diffident; it maximizes the impact of some very good music. The other relic from his West Coast vintage has some particularly sinewy playing from the co-leader. Rowles is his customary splendid self and the almost-forgotten Katzman holds his place without turning a hair, in the manner of the California movement. Lewis, who co-led the group, is discreet.

(*) Live Jazzed Media JM 1007 Holman; Carl Saunders, Pete DiSiena, Ron Stout, Bob Summers (t); Jack Redmond, Bob Enevoldsen, Andy Martin, Craig Gosnell (tb); Lanny Morgan, Bruce Babad, Doug Webb, Ray Hermann, Bob Efford (reeds); Christian Jacob (p); Joel Hamilton (b); Kevin Kanner (d). 9/04.

(*) Hommage Jazzed Media 1024 Holman; Jonathan Dane, Ron Stout, Larry Lunetta, Carl Saunders, Ron Stout (t); Bob Enevoldsen, John Grab, Andy Martin, Jack Redmond, Dave Ryan (tb); Craig Gosnell (btb); Bruce Babad, Bob Efford, Peter Christlieb, Lanny Morgan, Ray Heremann, Doug Webb (reeds); Christian Jacob (p); Joel Hamilton (b); Kevin Kanner (d). 5/05.

Holman's big-band music of the '80s and '90s has only been sparsely recorded and the discs are now hard to find indeed. So welcome to this new session, which was recorded at a Los Angeles hotel and finds the craftsmanship of West Coast big-band music still very much up to the mark. Holman's treatment of the Beatles's 'A Day In The Life' is as inventive as is the writing on his own originals, and the band is a mix of old friends such as Enevoldsen (these are among his final appearances on record) and younger stalwarts. Sound isn't as pristine as it was on Holman's JVC studio discs, but the skill and excitement of the music come through easily enough.

Hommage picked up a Grammy nomination, which is no more or less than its due. Much of the record is devoted to the titular tribute to Woody Herman, including an almost unrecognizable rearrangement of 'Woodchoppers' Ball'; Bob Efford plays Woody. The soloists are crisp and effective and Holman's charts are inch-perfect. It's slightly soulless stuff, but if you like tight formation-playing it's state of the art. It's a live recording, but some post-production has ironed out any glitches.

Also, in brief:

(*) Big Band Complete Recordings Lone Hill Jazz LHJ 10298. 54–60.

Suddenly a rather crowded market. The transfers are a bit dour, but all the stuff is there. Only real fans will want it all rather than the smaller selections above.

 In Concert Hanssler 93409. 7/93.

With the SWR Big Band, whose muscle suits the charts. There's also a similar recording with a Norwegian big band, available on Taurus, but this one's better.

Richard 'Groove' Holmes (1931–91)

ORGAN

Discovered in Pittsburgh by Les McCann, he played organ in an old-fashioned swing style.

 Soul Message Original Jazz Classics OJC 329 Holmes; Gene Edwards (g); Jimmie Smith (d). 10/66.

 On Basie's Bandstand Prestige PRCD-11028-2 Holmes; Gene Edwards (g); George Randall (d). 4/66.

(*) Blues Groove Prestige PRCD-24133-2 Holmes; Blue Mitchell (t); Harold Vick, Teddy Edwards (ts); Pat Martino, Gene Edwards (g); Paul Chambers (b); George Randle, Freddie Waits, Billy Higgins (d). 3/66–5/67.

Holmes always sounded massive and implacable. A sometime bassist, he liked earthy, elemental lines, and he decorated melodies with something like reluctance. He recorded most prolifically in the '60s, and he still has a fair showing on CD. Soul Message is a fat, funky album which opens on the blues workout 'Groove's Groove', seven minutes that just about sum up Holmes's entire style. A better choice is Blues Groove, which doubles up two Prestige albums, Get Up And Get It! and Soul Mist! The first offers Edwards a guest role which he makes the most of: there's a long, expansive treatment of the tenorman's set-piece, 'Body And Soul'. Mitchell and the unimpressive Vick sit in on two tracks of the second set, but this is Groove's show, and he's at his best on the light touch of 'Up Jumped Spring'. On Basie's Bandstand is a previously unissued set from Count Basie's Lounge, a Harlem club which lasted through most of the '60s and offered work to combos like Holmes's. It's rollicking, high-energy stuff all the way. On his studio albums Groove liked to settle back and roll out a ballad in his own time, but everything here is cooked at a tempo which is as close to frantic as the big man ever got. The nine-minute charge through 'Indiana' which opens the disc lays out almost everything the group has to say, even though there are six further tracks, with three minutes of 'Night Train' offering a poignant ending.

Also, in brief:

 Misty Original Jazz Classics OJC 724. 4–7/66.

For lovers. On its terms, it's OK, but the formula quickly palls.

 Legends Of Acid Jazz Prestige PRCD 24188-2. 2–8/68.
A modish package for two '68 Prestige dates, The Groover and That Healin' Feelin'.

() Comin' On Home Blue Note 538701-2. 5/71.
A blue-chip label, but hardly a vintage for Groove.

Mike Holober

PIANO

Lyrical stylist who admits to a liking for pop and for classical composers like Copland and Ravel.

(*) Thought Trains Sons Of Sound 20 Holober; Tony Kadleck, Joe Magnarelli (t, flhn); Scott Wendholt (t); Leise Anschuetz (frhn); Bruce Eidem, Pat Hallaran, Pete McGuinness (tb); Nathan Durham (btb); Tim Ries (ss, ts, cl); Jon Gordon (as, cl, f); Dave Pietro (ss, as, f, pic); Charles Pillow (ts, cl, f, ob); Steve Kenyon (bs, bcl); Dave Gilmore (g); Ron Carter (b); John Riley. 11/96.
 Canyon Sons Of Sound 16 Holober; Tom Ries (ss, ts); Wolfgang Muthspiel (g); Scott Colley (b); Brian Blade (d). 4/01.
 Wish List Sons Of Sound 24 As above, except omit Colley; add John Patitucci (b). 5/04.
Canyon is almost entirely original material. Holober writes bright, songful melodies, slightly reminiscent in places of Chick Corea, but with not a trace of romantic agony of the Bud Powell sort. Ironically, it's the other participants who sometimes make it all sound a bit lightweight. Ries is not in his best form and Muthspiel sounds woolly; even Blade seems to have put on a cardigan for the date.

It's all better on Wish List where even some wishy-washy-looking picks – the Beatles' 'Blackbird', 'Nancy (With the Laughing Face)' – are transformed by vivid group playing and some genuinely stretching solos. Holober's 'Bumphs' and 'Tulainyo' are strong, unexpected compositions, and Ries's soprano spot on the latter is a highpoint (of his career as well as the disc).

The big-band record is credited to the Gotham Jazz Orchestra and it seems to have waited on the shelf for almost a decade before release. Holober's solo input is fairly limited, though he has a lovely duo feature with Carter on 'Waltz Medium'. It's Wendholt, Ries (in more assertive form this time) and Hallaran (on the opening 'Jump Down, Spin Around', arranged from a traditional song) who take the chief honours.

Will Holshouser

ACCORDION

A vividly effective player with a strong folk influence, he worked with Dave Douglas, Klezmer Madness and others before embarking on a solo career.

 Reed Song / (*) Singing To A Bee Clean Feed CF005 / CF054 Holshouser; Ron Horton (t); David Phillips (b); Kevin Norton (d on Reed Song only). 4/00, 10/01; 06.
Though the instrumentation is rather different, Holshouser's trio might well be the successor to Jimmy Giuffre's classic '50s group. There is the same folkish tinge, the same harmonic and melodic dexterity, and a similar air of wry humour. Holshouser was an early signing to the enterprising Portuguese label and his debut album is a bright, affecting set, not untinged with darker elements on tracks like 'Tang'. The opening 'Nocturnal' is more lyrical than it perhaps sounds, but 'Sparkle Of Never' is the outstanding cut. Horton is an ideal partner on music like this, with a soft-edged, plangent attack that gives way to something more emphatic at appropriate points. Norton guests on just two tracks and isn't missed elsewhere, fine though he is.

The trio seems better balanced on the fine follow-up. The opening 'North Star' might almost be from the soundtrack of some bittersweet European movie, but 'Far Away Home', 'Fish Head Stomp' and 'Nameless' are more idiosyncratic and affecting. 'La Esperanza' is a traditional melody, intriguingly reworked, and 'Uma Bica' seems to have been spontaneously improvised. A most impressive disc from a player who has proved his quality elsewhere but until now hasn't had much chance to show off his formidable technique in appropriate settings.

Yuri Honing (born 1965)

TENOR SAXOPHONE

Dutch saxman, trying out unusual material in a post-bop vernacular.

(*) Sequel Jazz In Motion JIM 75045 Honing; Tony Overwater (b); Joost Lybaart(d). 3/99.
Honing could quite legitimately trade on his looks (a striking resemblance to Harry Connick Jr), but he is also a talented player and composer. Sequel makes some strange choices of material, but in the end they work out very well: closing on Gilbert O'Sullivan's 'Nothing Rhymed' was a master-stroke. Honing plays with steely confidence, and so, in their deferential way, do the other two.

 Seven Challenge 75086 Honing; Paul Bley (p); Gary Peacock (b); Paul Motian (d). 01.
This one just builds and builds, and by the time you reach the two closing numbers – 'Once Is Twice' and 'Vertical' – you're a more than willing convert. Honing still doesn't yet have the sly and wise maturity of his playing partners, but he stands up to the challenge well and plays some fine solos on the shorter opening tracks, reaffirming his ability to compress a lot of ideas into a short span. The senior players may not have had long to familiarize themselves with some of the material, for there is a faint impression that Bley in particular is following his own agenda, irrespective of the written theme, but the quality of musicianship on things like 'Yasutani' and 'Bley Away' is so considerable that such quibbles seem meaningless.

(*) Memory Lane Turtle TRSA 0010 Honing; Emily Beynon (f); Maarten Ornstein (cl, bcl); Jacob Slagter (frhn); Achim Kaufman (p); Keiko Iwate (vn); Fred Pot (clo); Frans van der Hoeven (b); Joost Lijbaart (d). 3/02.
A fascinating new project that gives Honing a subtler palette than the small groups. Even so, the playing is still spiky enough – on 'New York State Of Mind', for instance – to sustain interest. There's a moving tribute to Alice Coltrane ('For Turiya') and a lovely 'Chan's Song'. More than one might like of Honing's soprano, which seems to be recorded sharp, but otherwise a lovely record.

 Alive Jazz in Motion JIM 75213 Honing; Tony Overwater (b); Joost Lijbaart (d). 5/04.
(*) Temptation Jazz In Motion JIM 75228 2CD As above; add Frank Mobus (g). 05.
The trio has now been a constant for some years and they sound very comfortable with each other, comfortable enough to throw some curve balls as on 'Myst' (named after the cult game?) and 'Atras Porta' on Alive. The augmented line-up is the group he calls Wired Paradise, but this time the serpent has got in. Mobus's guitar adds a dark chime to these brisk and often intense tracks. The chemistry with Overwater (on electric bass) and Lijbaart is as good as ever but at least some of the inspiration here comes from Miles's darker electric groups. There's some pretty abstract stuff going on, in amongst the pop-tinged material.

 Symphonic Jazz in Motion JIM 75227 Honing; Metropole Orchestra; Vince Mendoza (cond). 05.
A bold step for a man normally associated with stripped-down trios and other small groups. His sound is certainly big enough to front the well-drilled Metropole, and in the circumstances he doesn't seem inclined to trade in his usual imaginative material. Radiohead's 'Paranoid Android' receives an intelligent reading, alongside the Wayne Shorter material and 'In A Silent Way'.

Also, in brief:

(*) Playing /  Lively Jazz In Motion JIM 75044 / Buzz 76015. 3/98; 7/00.
Playing's a duo with Misha Mengelberg (p), who goes his own sweet way until Honing's self-confidence suddenly ebbs. The other adds Ernst Reijseger (clo) to the mix, and very effectively.

 Orient Express Jazz in Motion JIM 75213. 10/02.
Interesting transcultural project pitching the trio up against singer Rima Khcheich, as well as oud and djose.

Tristan Honsinger (born 1949)

CELLO

After a classical education at the Peabody, the New Englander moved to Amsterdam and co-founded the Instant Composers Pool. Now a steady presence on the European free scene.

(*) Double Indemnity / Imitation Of Life: 1980–1981 Atavistic Unheard Music 224 Honsinger; Toshinori Kondo (t, perc, v); Steve Beresford (p, org, syn, b, flhn, euph, vn, perc); David Toop (f, af, g, b, perc). 80, 81.
This reissue brings together two important albums originally issued on the Y label. The CD begins with two out-takes from the duo record with Beresford Double Indemnity. Beresford is one of the unsung geniuses of modern European music, a constant presence whose contribution is usually unremarked. These duos are among the best of his recorded efforts, witty, shrewd and often touching. The group tracks are less successful, largely because the two sides of The Imitation Of Life seem to outstay their welcome at the same time as being artificially truncated for LP length.

 Map Of Moods FMP 76 Honsinger; Alex Kolkowski, Stephano Lunardi (vn); Ernst Glerum (b); Louis Moholo (d). 96.
The group manipulates a predetermined sequence of themes within what Honsinger describes as 'areas'. This seems similar to Anthony Braxton's practice of overlaid and superimposed compositions, except that here the players are required to keep pretty much to the original conception of the piece unless they feel they can improve it. Moholo directs proceedings and provides trig points and map references for the others. Honsinger's love of string instruments is well evidenced and the sound of the group is lusciously 'classical', even when the attacks are quite extreme.

* A Camel's Kiss ICO 036 Honsinger (clo, v solo). 98.
This superb solo recording sees Honsinger negotiate the entire range of his musical heritage, from Bach-like solo sonatas to Berliner Ensemble cabaret songs to free-form improvisations which camouflage a strong inner structure. It's a completely exhilarating 50-odd minutes of music, with not a dull spot. It's also beautifully recorded, bringing out the resonant woodiness of the cello, but also its percussive potential and its ability to set off ringing harmonics in the space around the performer.

William Hooker

DRUMS, PIANO, VOICE

Uncompromising improviser, who includes spoken word in his performances.

 Lifeline Silkheart SHCD 119 Hooker; Masahiko Kono (tb); Alan Michael (as); Charles Compo (ts); Mark Hennen (p); William Parker (b). 8 & 12/88.
(*) Joy (Within)! Silkheart SHCD 147 Hooker; Billy Bang (vn, f). 6/94.
Hooker's appetite for recitation is the stumbling block on some of these. The first Silkheart begins with a long suite that will have many listeners reaching for the skip button, but the interplay of instrumental voices is fascinating and Hooker has a deep empathy with Parker which merits close attention.

The duos with Bang are taken from two concerts of intriguingly different cast. Both players take solo spots and Bang plays flute on the second occasion – albeit not for long and without much impact – but one hears them gel much more successfully on the earlier of the two June dates. Even where they are palpably searching for common ground and valid points of contention on the opening 'Sweating Brain', it's more effective than anything on the second gig. Perhaps they'd simply exhausted much of what they had to say together.

(*) Black Mask Knitting Factory KFCD 305 Hooker; Roy Nathanson (sax); Jason Hwang (vn); Andrea Parkins (acc, etc). 4/00.
This revives and extends the language of the Hooker–Bang duets. Partnering Hwang offers new challenges, but these are by far the best of the duets, though Parkins does some fascinating work, without much response from the leader. It's inevitably a bitty set, Nathanson doesn't really impress, and the sound is erratic, but it merits high marks for the best of the material.

(*) Monsoon Atavistic 146 Hooker; Lee Ranaldo (g); Roger Miller (b, elec). 4/03.
Part of an experimental series called 'Out Trios', this pitches Hooker in with Sonic Youth man Ranaldo and the less well-known but equally fascinating Miller, whose electronic touches are magnificently well deployed in what could have been a chaotic situation. The set's one continuous 50-minute improvisation, but it obeys such a natural trajectory that it sounds far more carefully planned than can have been the case. Hooker also works with Ranaldo on Celestial Answer (Table Of The Elements) and on Gift Of Tongues (Knitting Factory), but these move even further in a rock direction.

Also, in brief:

 The Firmament Fury Silkheart SHCD 123. 4/89.
A similar ensemble to the first record for the label but a denser sound.

 Squealer Squealer 026. 8/94, 12/95.
Many of Hooker's later dates, including a number on Knitting Factory, have been omitted, quite simply because they're in a form of heavy avant-rock. Still exciting, but not quite our bag. This one just squeezes in.

Bertha Hope (born 1936)

PIANO

Wife and sometimes playing partner of Elmo Hope, she's an intriguing performer in her own right.

(*) In Search Of ... Hope Steeplechase SCCD 31276 Hope; Walter Booker (b); Billy Higgins (d). 10/90.

 Elmo's Fire Steeplechase SCCD 31289 Hope; Eddie Henderson (t); Junior Cook, Dave Riekenberg (ts); Walter Booker (b); Leroy Williams (d). 1/91.

 Nothin' But Love Reservoir RSR CD 161 Hope; Walter Booker (b); Jimmy Cobb (d). 10/99.

Elmo's widow makes no secret of her fealty to his music: there are two of his tunes on the first album, four on the second, and Bertha's own style is a gentle extrapolation of Elmo's off-centre lyricism. She is no great executant, happiest at a steady mid-tempo and unwilling to risk any flourishes in a solo, but her improvisations have a patient and rather beguiling beauty about them, a bebop vocabulary fragmented into very small pieces which she seems to turn over and over in her phrases. In Search Of ... Hope is a little too tasteful and laid-back, Higgins as solid as ever, Booker quiescent, and it bows before the superior quintet date (Riekenberg appears on only one tune). Eddie Henderson walks a measured line between elegance and real fire, with a remarkable improvisation on the blues 'Bai Tai'. Junior Cook is patchy, but Hope herself sounds convincing, and her treatment of Sonny Fortune's wistful 'For Duke And Cannon' is splendid.

Her album for Reservoir is also her first American record. No standards and nothing remotely hackneyed in the tune selection and, with Booker and Cobb offering sympathetic time, this is another charming session. Celia Reggiani's 'Mia' features in a long, musing treatment. The boppish feel of George Braith's 'Leslie' suits her less well than Elmo's 'Stars Over Marrakesh' or her own 'Gone To See T', a reflection on Monk. Thin on virtuosity, but better than many a flashier record.

Elmo Hope (1923–67)

PIANO

A career fraught with predictable problems, but St Elmo (as he was christened) was a strong and unique bop voice.

* Trio And Quintet Blue Note 784438 2 Hope; Freeman Lee, Stu Williamson (t); Frank Foster, Harold Land (ts); Percy Heath, Leroy Vinnegar (b); Frank Butler, Philly Joe Jones (d). 6/53–10/57.

(*) Meditations Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1751 Hope; John Ore (b); Willie Jones (d). 6/55.

Hope managed to sound sufficiently different from both his main influences, Bud Powell (with whom he went to school) and Thelonious Monk, to retain a highly individual sound. His reputation as a composer is now surprisingly slight, but he had a strong gift for melody, enunciating themes very clearly, and was comfortable enough with classical and modern concert music to introduce elements of fugue and canon, though always with a firm blues underpinning. Like a good many pianists of his generation, he seems to have been uneasy about solo performance (though he duetted regularly with his wife Bertha) and is heard to greatest effect in trio settings. The early Meditations sounds remarkably Monk-like in places and John Ore's slightly limping lines confirm the resemblance. '(St) Elmo's Fire' and 'Blue Mo' are deft originals.

The Blue Note sessions are taut and well disciplined, though the trio tracks are better than the quintets, where the sequence of solos becomes mechanical and Hope progressively loses interest in varying his accompaniments. Originals like 'Freffie' and 'Hot Sauce' come across well, and the sound stands up down the years.

 Hope Meets Foster Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1703 Hope; Freeman Lee (t); Frank Foster (ts); John Ore (b); Art Taylor (d). 10/55.

 The All Star Sessions Milestone M 47037 Hope; Donald Byrd, Blue Mitchell (t); John Coltrane, Jimmy Heath, Hank Mobley, Frank Wess (ts); Paul Chambers, Percy Heath (b); Philly Joe Jones (d). 5/56–6/61.

Hope responded well to the challenge of Coltrane's developing harmonic language and the Milestone sessions contain provocative indications of Trane's early willingness to deconstruct standard material, in this case a bold reading of 'Polka Dots And Moonbeams'. The sessions with Foster are more conventional, but 'Georgia On My Mind' demonstrates Hope's original and uncompromising ballad approach, and Foster is only able to embellish a very strong conception.

 So Nice Fresh Sound FSRCD 194 Hope; Rolf Ericson, Stu Williamson (t); Harold Land (ts); Curtis Counce, Leroy Vinnegar (b); Frank Butler (d). 10/57, 4/58.

If ever an artist stoked the East/West controversy it was Elmo Hope, fiercely impatient of Californian slacking and unadventurous technique. He might have overstated the case, for these 1957 and 1958 sessions from LA find him teamed with players who aren't having any difficulty with his charts. The earliest dates, from October 1957, are quintet cuts with Williamson, Land, Vinnegar and Butler; Counce and Ericson are in for the later dates, though two of the best tracks from April are trios. These are actually one and the same theme though given on the masters as 'Headgear' and 'The Countdown' and so attributed here. The April tracks were more developed: the sweetly swinging title-track, the eponymous 'St Elmo's Fire' and 'Vaun Ex', which is a forgotten masterpiece of bebop. The later session reprises 'So Nice' with the more pungent Ericson in the line-up, but here much of the material is repertory bop and ballad swing: Denzil Best's 'Move', 'Angel Eyes', 'Someone To Watch Over Me' and Land's nicely conceived 'Exploring The Future'.

 Elmo Hope Trio Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 477 Hope; Jimmy Bond (b); Frank Butler (d). 2/59.

(*) Plays His Original Compositions Fresh Sound FSR CD 181 Hope; Paul Chambers, Butch Warren (b); Granville Hogan, Philly Joe Jones (d). 61.

(*) Homecoming Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1810 Hope; Blue Mitchell (t); Jimmy Heath, Frank Foster (ts); Percy Heath (b); Philly Joe Jones (d). 6/61.

 Hope-Full Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1872 Hope; Bertha Hope (p). 11/61.

The 1959 trio for Contemporary is disappointing, but Hope had by this stage moved to the West Coast and had become further involved in drugs, for which he was eventually jailed. His fortunes were on a roller-coaster from then until his untimely death, aged only 43. The Fresh Sound restores the fine (but short) High Hope!, though the Blue Note Trio And Quintet album remains the item of first choice.

Homecoming restores material from the trio and sextet dates in June 1961 and unveils another batch of intelligent arrangements. Another return is the hitherto very rare Hope-Full, which includes three duets with Bertha and five solos. It would have been more interesting to hear the pianist improvising alone on some of his own themes: these are mainly standards, with the odd choice of 'When Johnny Comes Marching Home' the only real surprise.

* Sound From Rikers Island Fresh Sound FSRCD 338 Hope; Lawrence Jackson (t); Fred Douglas (ss, as); John Gilmore (ts); Ronnie Boykins (b); Philly Joe Jones (d); Earl Coleman, Marcelle Daniels (v). 8/63.

These sessions were put together by Elmo, composer Sid Frey and vibraharpist Walt Dickerson, who does not figure on the album. The anti-drug message – Rikers Island is the jail where many addicts ended up – is quite thin but what comes across is some stunning music. 'Ecstasy' and 'Trippin'' are as vivid an account of the drug experience as there is in modern jazz; the latter is a staccato, uneasy line with lots of harmonic variation, a good collaboration with Frey. The set also includes versions of bop classics 'Groovin' High' (Marcelle Daniels scats) and 'A Night In Tunisia'. The line-up is exceptional. Gilmore is thinly documented away from the Arkestra. He sounds full-toned and pungent here, but with a mournfulness appropriate to the project. Philly Joe is also in great heart, driving the time on 'Trippin'' and the fierce opening 'Ode For Joe'. Coleman's vocals are surprisingly affecting.

(*) The Final Sessions Evidence ECD 22147-2 2CD Hope; John Ore (b); Clifford Jarvis, Philly Joe Jones (d). 3–5/66.

It was thought that he had made his last recordings as far back as 1963, but these tapes see him back in the company of Philly Joe, with whom he had worked in Joe Morris's R&B band, and with Ore. Jarvis was also a sensitive collaborator, and he is the drummer on two thirds of these cuts.

At the end, Hope sounds thoughtful and technically sound, recording long takes (now unedited) that are jam-packed with ideas. His ability to reshape a standard like 'I Love You' and the bebop classic 'A Night In Tunisia', is undiminished by time; but the real meat of the two discs comes in originals: a long version of 'Elmo's Blues', with altered changes and a curious long-form structure, the terse 'Vi-Ann', and the excellent 'Toothsome Threesome' and 'Punch'. The recordings are somewhat rough and ready. Though a certain degree of electronic sweetening has taken place, an appropriate texture of the original has been preserved.

(*) Complete Studio Recordings Gambit G9262 4CD As for discs above. 6/53–3/66.

Arguably all the Hope a casual collector would ever need and perhaps more than a newcomer would need. The sound's been lazily transferred and the dynamics aren't consistent, but no one's likely to listen to these four 80-minute slabs of music (five hours of music!) right through. Pretty much everything is out there already, but if you're still replacing LPs, this is a decent budget option.

Stan Hope

PIANO

Hugely experienced, he's recorded little on his own account.

(*) Pastels /  Put On A Happy Face Savant 2020 / 2063 Hope; Houston Person (ts); Ray Drummond (b); Kenny Washington (d). 99; 12/04.

Stan was inspired to play jazz by seeing the Basie band and by an aunt's gift of a record of Errol Garner playing 'Be Anything' and his own 'Pastels'. Both of those songs are included on what is only Stan's third album as leader. Given the range of experience with most of the major figures of jazz, it's a slim haul. The self-titled 1972 debut on Mainstream hasn't reappeared. Person guests on a few cuts, but his solo on 'Indiana' sets the first album alight. Stan's touch is not so much Garnerish as garnished Basie and sometimes you hope for a little more detail in the solos, but the timing and humour are infectious. The high-point is 'A Flower Is A Lovesome thing', built into a nicely crafted medley; the later record seems tired.

Chris Hopkins (born 1972)

PIANO

Born in New Jersey, he grew up in Germany, leading bands since his teens.

(*) Daybreak Arbors ARCD 19235 Hopkins (p solo). 2/00.

Recorded in Switzerland, this exceptionally playable disc is a delightful surprise. Hopkins was still in his 20s, but his affections lie with the piano jazz of the early Harlem stride masters and their elegant successors in the '30s. The material goes back to Willie 'The Lion' Smith and creeps as far forward as the Ellington of 'Dancers In Love'. It's far from antiquarian in feel. Hopkins manages to make it sound lively and well-informed without getting too knowing or resorting to a pasticheur's suit. His take on Earl Hines's 'Caution Blues', for instance, hints at Fatha's 'West End Blues' appearance, as well as the 1928 solo. Teddy Wilson's 'Sunny Morning' may never have been touched by another pianist, and Hopkins makes you wonder why. If stride is his favourite rhythmic language, it's often present more by implication than in the figures themselves. He gets a crisp but not clattery touch out of the keyboard. Where's the sequel?

Claude Hopkins (1903–84)

PIANO

Bandleading by the early '20s, a success in New York from 1930 onwards and a touring attraction from 1937. Hopkins did staff arranging for CBS and switched to small-band work from 1947.

 Claude Hopkins 1932–1934 Classics 699 Hopkins; Ovie Alston (t, v); Albert Snaer, Sylvester Lewis (t); Fred Norman (tb, v); Fernando Arbello, Henry Wells (tb); Edmond Hall (cl, as, bs); Gene Johnson (as); Bobby Sands (ts); Walter Jones (bj, g); Henry Turner (b); Pete Jacobs (d); Orlando Roberson (v). 5/32–12/34.

 Claude Hopkins 1934–1935 Classics 716 As above, except omit Wells; add Snub Mosley (tb), Hilton Jefferson (cl, as). 1/34–2/35.

(*) Claude Hopkins 1937–1940 Classics 733 Hopkins; Shirley Clay, Jabbo Smith, Lincoln Mills, Sylvester Lewis, Robert Cheek, Albert Snaer, Russell Jones, Herman Autrey (t); Floyd Brady, Fred

Norman, Vic Dickenson, Ray Hogan, Norman Greene, Bernard Archer (tb); Gene Johnson, Chauncey Haughton, Ben Smith, Floyd Blakemore, Ben Richardson, Howard Johnson, Norman Thornton (as); Bobby Sands, Cliff Glover, Benny Waters (ts); Walter Jones, Rudolph Williams (g); Abe Bolar, Elmer James (b); Pete Jacobs, George 'Pops' Foster , Walter Johnson (d); Beverley White, Froshine Stewart, Orlando Roberson (v). 2/37–3/40.

(*) The Transcription Performances 1935 Hep 1049 Hopkins; Albert Snaer, Sylvester Lewis (t); Ovie Alston (t, v); Henry Wells, Fred Norman (tb); Edmond Hall (cl, as, bs); Hilton Jefferson (cl, as); Gene Johnson (as); Bobby Sands (ts); Walter Jones (g); Henry Turner (b); Pete Jacobs (d). 35.

Hopkins was a skilful pianist and liked to get a lot of solos with his band; the demands of arranging around him may have told against the ambitions of the group. It certainly never worked as well as the Earl Hines orchestra, and though Hopkins had fewer imposing soloists – brief stays by Smith and Dickenson in 1937 were wasted – the group's ensemble sound lacked character and the arrangements were often second rate. Classics tell the story in decent if unexceptional transfers. Some of the music on the early disc promises more than it delivers: 'Mad Moments', 'Shake Your Ashes', 'Hopkins Scream' and especially Jimmy Mundy's arrangement of 'Mush Mouth' are exciting and surprising pieces. But the two later discs never break very far out of swing-era clichés. Hep's set of transcription performances is nicely presented, but the music is very slight and the blackface-style vocals on tracks such as 'The Preacher And The Bear' show how quickly Hopkins and his band were outdated.

Glenn Horiuchi (1955–2000)

PIANO, SHAMISEN

Influenced to some degree by Cecil Taylor, this West Coast pianist attempted to synthesize jazz, Oriental and classical forms.

 Oxnard Beet Soul Note 121228 2 Horiuchi; Francis Wong (ts, f); Taiji Miyagawa (b); Leon Alexander (d, vib). 88.

 Calling Is It And Now Soul Note 121268 Horiuchi; Francis Wong (ts); Anders Swanson (b); Jeanette Wrate (d). 95.

Horiuchi's interest in the common ground between his various musical traditions is evident on Oxnard Beet, where hints of Asian ritual and rice-pounding rhythms are interwoven with jazz. It's not always a successful amalgam: both traditions make it difficult to abstract elements without destroying the whole. He's a fiery and pugnacious player who is sometimes inclined to soft pedal too self-consciously when exploring softer dynamics. The upshot is that his quieter passages can sound underpowered. Wong was a long-term collaborator. His tenor-playing is agile and harmonically complex, sometimes reminiscent of the late Joe Farrell, but it is as a flautist that he most completely fits into the Horiuchi aesthetic.

() Dewdrop / () Elegy For Sarajevo AsianImprov 31 / 35 Horiuchi; William Roper (tba, v); Francis Wong (ts, cl, f, v); Joseph Mitchell (perc). 94, 95; 95.

The programme of the title-piece is self-explanatory, the mood of Elegy For Sarajevo more wistful than tragic, but the harmonies reflect lost connections and sundered relationships. Here, the quiet dynamic works perfectly and the balance of Western instruments with the quiet vocalizations and mournful whispers of the Japanese instruments seems to come from a different sonic dimension, almost as if ghosts were speaking. It seems perverse to start such a powerful album with its weakest track; 'Watercolours #1' is a picture postcard.

Dewdrop makes a similar mistake, but here the title-piece doesn't have quite the same emotional resonance and works perfectly well at the end. Wong's playing and narration is very powerful here and Roper continues to amaze with a technique all his own. There are earlier sets on AsianImprov, including the very good Issei Spirit, but these may be deleted.

(*) Fair Play Soul Note 121328 Horiuchi; William Roper (tba, v); Francis Wong (ts, f, v); Jeanette Wrate (d, v). 99.

Horiuchi's final recording before his untimely death is also one of his best. The Unit(a) group is now so well-settled that they speak with an absolutely common language and an absolute unity of purpose. Some of the forced classicism has gone from Horiuchi's own playing and his long lines are now much more symmetrical and evenly paced. All four pieces are long, but it's 'Angel Tears' that stands out, a gloriously evocative and harmonically complex piece, equal with Glenn's best. The others don't quite come up to that level, but the closing 'Manzanar Voices Part II', which recalls the similarly titled 1989 AsianImprov album, rounds out the career well and poignantly.

Also, in brief:

 Poston Sonata AsianImprov 008. 12/91.

Inspired by the Arizona wartime internment camp for Japanese-Americans, this features Lillian Nakano on shamisen.

 Kenzo's Vision AsianImprov 22. 8/94, 4/95.

A nakedly personal record. Wong's Trane-ish tenor has power but much of the playing sounds disembodied.

 Hilltop View Music & Arts 935. 8–9/95.

A demanding listen that draws heavily on a classical background, but with plenty of energy.

 Mercy Music & Arts 062. 5–9/96.

Joseph Jarman (as) is in with Wong on this one, but it remains quite impenetrable.

Johan Hörlén (born 1967)

ALTO AND SOPRANO SAXOPHONES, BASS CLARINET, ALTO FLUTE

Swedish saxophonist with a couple of dates in a post-bop style.

 Dance Of Resistance Dragon DRCD 260 Hörlén; Torbjörn Gulz (p); Christian Spering (b); Jukkis Uotila (d). 6/94.

 Chills Dragon DRCD 5/00. Hörlén; Peter Nylander (g); Christian Spering (b); Bengt Stark (d). 5/00.

Playing alto on all but one of the seven themes on Dance, the Swede is equal parts lyricism and passion. The title-piece exemplifies this tightrope walk: continually skirling up towards a false note, he keeps pulling himself back in line before matters get out of hand. That reserve makes the still waters of 'To Miss', a lovely duet for soprano and piano, and the contrary position of 'The Best Things In Life Are Free', an argument for alto and drums, the more effective. But some of his ideas go nowhere, and the closing blow-out on 'Everything I Love' is a step too far. Chills introduces bass clarinet and alto flute, and with Nylander in on only half the tracks he's got more space to work in. That said, this feels like little more than an easy-going continuation of the previous set: rounded and harmonious playing, the odd touch of tartness, but more inclined to pacify than make war.

John Horler (born 1947)

PIANO

A regular with John Dankworth and Cleo Laine.

(*) Gentle Piece Spotlite SPJ-CD 542 Horler; Phil Lee (g); Dave Green (b); Spike Wells (d). 93.
 Unity Hi Hat HHR 005 Horler; Phil Lee (g). 5/00.
 Sorry It's Been So Long Woodville WVCD 108 Horler; Jeff Clyne (b); Trevor Tomkins (d). 10/03.
Horler's amiable playing owes much to his acknowledged mentor, Bill Evans, though encouragingly it's Evans's tougher side that he comes closest to, and while some of this music is a bit wispy, as on Kenny Wheeler's title-track, there's an underlying assertiveness too. This comes out most effectively in a fast version of 'My Funny Valentine', done as a hard-bitten duet for piano and guitar, the formula that works so well on Unity. Not much else makes a great impression, though, and the date is let down by splashy drumming and a particularly ungracious studio sound.

The good-natured new trio recording actually follows up an album made a long time ago, which explains the title. Interesting that this otherwise mainstream-modern set can accommodate 'Even Stevens', a free improvisation dedicated to drummer John, which evolves as logically and gracefully as the rest of the music.

Also, in brief:

 The Key To It All Diving Duck DDRCD 006. 06.
Strictly credited to the Modern Jazz Trio with Sam Burgess (b) and Mike Smith (d), but John's record all the way.

Shirley Horn (1934–2005)

PIANO, VOICE

She studied piano at college and was leading her own small groups from 1954 but remained a local DC secret until the '80s, when she began touring Europe; a Verve contract was a belated coming-out.

 Loads Of Love / Shirley Horn With Horns Mercury 843454-2 Horn; Jimmy Cleveland (tb); Hank Jones, Bobby Scott (p); Kenny Burrell (g); Milt Hinton (b); Osie Johnson (d); rest unknown. 63.
These are modest, pleasing records, much like many another light-jazz vocal record of the period, and, while Horn's voice is transparent and warm, she was used to accompanying herself; placed in the studios with a stellar but unfamiliar band, she occasionally sounds stilted. Nor was she allowed to work at her favourite dead-slow tempos on ballads.

(*) A Lazy Afternoon Steeplechase SCCD 1111 Horn; Buster Williams (b); Billy Hart (d). 7/78.
 At Northsea /  Violets For Your Furs Steeplechase SCCD 37015/16 2CD / 31164 Horn; Charles Ables (b); Billy Hart (d). 7/81.
 The Garden Of The Blues Steeplechase SCCD 1203 Horn; Charles Ables (b); Steve Williams (d). 11/84.
Horn's first Steeplechase set was effectively a debut album. The manner here, and throughout these three fine and under-recognized records, is reflective and sparsely evocative. Horn establishes her liking for intensely slow tempos with a compelling treatment of 'There's No You', but she feels able to contrast that immediately with the hipsterish reading of 'New York's My Home', and the long trio instrumental on 'Gentle Rain' displays a piano method that works with the simplest materials and makes something distinctive. Williams and Hart – the latter an old friend who understood Horn's music better than anyone – play with complete empathy. If anything, the remaining discs are a letdown, since Horn had already made a nearly definitive statement in this context; but At Northsea, which catches the best from several sets at the 1981 Northsea Jazz Festival, is an attractive souvenir of Horn on stage and blends together many of her favourite set-pieces. Violets For Your Furs is still available separately.

 Softly /  I Thought About You Audiophile 224 / Verve 833235-2 Horn; Charles Ables (b); Steve Williams (d). 10/87; 87.
(*) Close Enough For Love Verve 837933-2 Horn; Buck Hill (ts); Charles Ables (b); Steve Williams (d). 11/88.
(*) You Won't Forget Me Verve 847482-2 Horn; Miles Davis, Wynton Marsalis (t); Buck Hill, Branford Marsalis (ts); Toots Thielemans (hca, g); Charles Ables (b, g); Buster Williams (b); Billy Hart, Steve Williams (d). 6–8/90.
 Here's To Life Verve 511879-2 Horn; Wynton Marsalis (t); Steve Kujala, James Walker (f); Alan Broadbent (p); John Chiodini (g); Charles Ables, Chuck Domanico (b); Steve Williams, Harvey Mason (d); strings. 91.
(*) Light Out Of Darkness Verve 519703-2 Horn; Gary Bartz (as); Charles Ables (g, b); Tyler Mitchell (b); Steve Williams (d). 4–5/93.
 I Love You, Paris Verve 523486-2 As above, except omit Bartz, Mitchell. 3/92.
(*) The Main Ingredient Verve 529555-2 As above, except add Roy Hargrove (flhn); Joe Henderson, Buck Hill (ts); Steve Novosel (b); Elvin Jones (d). 5–9/95.
What amounted to Horn's second comeback was distinguished by a perfect touch and luxury-class production values. Actually, in terms of her own performances or those of another supportive trio there's no special advance on the Steeplechases, or on the single Audiophile set, which is an especially slow and thoughtful disc. The first two Verves continue to work at favourite standards, and Hill's presence adds a useful touch of salt to proceedings. But You Won't Forget Me is a step forward in its pristine attention to detail, awesome array of guest star soloists – Davis was a great Horn admirer, but is well below his best – and the faithfulness with which Horn's voice is recorded. Marsalis turns up again on two tracks on Here's To Life, which is otherwise dedicated to arrangements by Johnny Mandel, and again there's a hint of overdoing the sentiment. But the particular qualities of Horn's singing – the eschewal of vibrato, the even dynamic weight – get full rein. Light Out Of Darkness is pitched as a tribute to Ray Charles, and after the heavyweight emoting of the previous record Horn sounds almost carefree on the likes of 'Hit The Road Jack' and 'I Got A Man'. Bartz lends a few swinging obbligatos, but the emphasis here is on Horn's understanding of the beat, her dry, almost elemental phrasing, and the intuitive touch of her regular group..

I Love You, Paris comes from a French concert. Shirley makes no attempt to turn up the tempos, and 'It's Easy To Remember' is about as slow as it will ever get. But she has the art of making the time move, even at this kind of tempo: 'Wouldn't It Be Luvverly' is luvverly indeed. The disc is perhaps overlong at almost 75 minutes, but the best of it is top-flight Horn. Same applies to The Main Ingredient, cut mainly at her home, with famous names sitting in to add variety to what's now a long string of similarly inclined dates. Buck Hill outdoes Joe Henderson, and Hargrove is untypically laid-back on his flugelhorn feature. Yet the highlight is surely her gorgeous version of 'The Look Of Love', done alone with her regular team of Ables and Williams.

(*) Loving You Verve 537022-2 Horn; George Mesterhazy (ky, g); Steve Novosel (b); Steve Williams (d); Alex Acuña (perc). 11/96.

(*) I Remember Miles Verve 557199-2 Horn; Roy Hargrove (t); Toots Thielemans (hca); Charles Ables, Ron Carter (b); Al Foster, Steve Williams (d). 97.

The inevitable complaint is that Horn went on making the same record, and nine albums into her Verve contract little seemed ready to change. Yet nobody grumbled much about the sameness of Ella, Billie or Sarah. Shirley's difficulty was that her preference for achingly slow tempos and sung-spoken lyrics doesn't chime very easily with the modern attention-span. Loving You may be no masterpiece, but it's probably as good as any record she's made: the tunes impeccably chosen, the delivery perfectly judged. Of course, Lil Green never meant 'In The Dark' to sound like this; but it's just as sexy, maybe more so. The title-tune is bathos made bearable by the refinement of her methods, and 'It Amazes Me' might even amaze you..

Miles Davis was always a Shirley Horn fan, and the singer repays the compliment with a homage album that sounds a lot more genuine than most. Whether doing Gershwin, other standards or 'Blue In Green', this is a smoke-filled reminiscence that has the feel and weight of something real, and the spare charts (Hargrove plays the obvious role on four tracks and Thielemans is inspiring on 'Summertime') replicate something of the skeletal intensity of Davis in his golden age.

(*) You're My Thrill Verve 549417-2 Horn; Carl Saunders (t); Alan Broadbent (p); Dori Caymmi, Russell Malone (g); Charles Ables, Brian Bromberg, Chuck Domanico (b); Steve Williams (d); strings. 00.

Johnny Mandel provides some more unspeakably gorgeous backgrounds, while Shirley and trio do their usual thing. 'You're My Thrill' and 'I Got Lost In His Arms' go at the patented Horn crawl, and when Mandel's violins creep into the picture, it always provokes a shiver of pleasure. Nobody else makes records like this, and it's hard to see anyone else getting away with it: yet the voice, the piano and the Ables–Williams support remain inimitable.

 May The Music Never End Verve 7602829 Horn; Roy Hargrove (flhn); George Mesterhazy, Ahmad Jamal (p); Ed Howard (b); Steve Williams (d). 2/03.

Shirley's final album is now poignant on three counts: the absence of the late Charles Ables, her decision to turn over piano duties to other hands, and the fact of her death in 2005. Mesterhazy sets up an improbably fast groove on the opening 'Forget Me', but once into the heartbreaking reading of Jacques Brel's 'If You Go Away' it's obvious that not that much has changed. Jamal sits in on two tunes, Hargrove is on two others, but the mistress of slow-slow-slow is otherwise in command without too many distractions. Close to perfect are 'Yesterday', 'Never Let Me Go' and 'This Is All I Ask'. She was more frail than before, but if anything it only adds to the record's capacity to move, and by the closing valedictory title-track you're in bits. She went out on a masterpiece.

Also, in brief:

 Ultimate Verve 547162-2. 62–97.
Chosen by Diana Krall. The irony!

 Marian McPartland's Piano Jazz Concord CCD 12053. 12/84.
Two great ladies of the music, in conversation and playing together.

 But Beautiful Verve 4068. 87–03.
The best of the Verve years but with three unissued bonus tracks.

Pug Horton (born 1932)

VOICE

Joanne Horton is Bob Wilber's life partner; a sassy, sophisticated singer.

 Don't Go Away Audiophile ACD 212 Horton; Bob Wilber (cl, ss); Sir Roland Hanna (p); Milt Hinton (b). 5/79, 3/93.

Her Royal Pugship in fine form with a Judge, a knight and the old man in respectful, and sometimes less than respectful, support. You have to buy in to this kind of thing to appreciate it fully, and then suspend expectations still further. Of its kind – classy, retro entertainment – it's hard to beat.

Ron Horton (born 1960)

TRUMPET

Raised in Baltimore, he's been in NY since the early '80s, working with Andrew Hill and others and in the Jazz Composers Collective.

 Genius Envy Omnitone 11902 Horton; Jane Ira Bloom (ss); John McKenna (ts); Frank Kimbrough (p); Ben Allison (b); Rich Rosenzweig (d). 3/99.

 Subtextures Fresh Sound New Talent FSNTCD 175 Horton; Frank Kimbrough (p); Ben Allison (b); Matt Wilson (d). 11 & 12/02.

(*) Everything In A Dream Fresh Sounds FSNT 243 Horton; John O'Gallagher (as); Tony Malaby (ts); Frank Kimbrough (p); Masa Kamaguchi, John Hebert (b); Mike Sarin (d). 6–8/05.

Horton's music is colourful, exuberant, funny and often poignant. The Omnitone debut touches on all those feelings in ten originals which play out modestly but in fascinating ways. He has a fine ear for the sonorities which horns can create together: the passage in 'Thumbnail Sketch', for instance, where trumpet, soprano and tenor improvise a beautiful counterpoint, is achingly lovely. A memorial to Thomas Chapin is touchingly effective, there are musings on the apparent failure of his ability to remember names and faces, and there is a Lee Morgan stomp which has a lick of surf music in it too. Horton's own playing takes in Roy Eldridge growls and softly lyrical passage-work and he gets a terrific set of performances out of an exemplary band: Bloom can seldom have set down a better solo than the one she does on the Chapin tune.

In comparison, the Fresh Sounds feel like bigger, more serious records. The freshness isn't entirely gone, though, and given that he's playing without a second horn on Subtextures his own vivid voice comes over strongly. He does an Andrew Hill piece, but also Messiaen and Chopin! The second of the CDs seems like a more familiar routine, but there's no denying the tough skill in the playing and the impact of pieces such as 'Bring It On', actually combined with a treatment of the Jimmy Giuffre tune 'Phoenix', the Andrew Hill melody 'Yellow Violet' and the remarkable 'Did-It, Did-It, Did-It', which rests a pretty melody over a furious rhythmic underlay. The use of two basses is especially memorable here. Tracks such as this suggest that Horton has a rare gift making something work as an ensemble piece and as a soloist's vehicle.

Wayne Horvitz (born 1955)

PIANO, KEYBOARDS

One of the leading personalities of the New York downtown circle but now based in Seattle. A strong, even idiosyncratic, player and composer who has roved back and forth between situationist improvisation and more generic grooves.

 Some Order, Long Understood Black Saint 121159 Horvitz; Butch Morris (c); William Parker (b). 2/82.
(*) Miracle Mile Elektra Nonesuch 7559 79278 2 Horvitz; J. A. Deane (tb, elec); Denny Goodhew (sax); Doug Wieselman (ts, cl); Stew Cutler, Bill Frisell, Elliott Sharp (g); Ben Steele (g syn); Kermit Driscoll (b); Bobby Previte (d). 91.

Horvitz got off to a brisk start with a clattery sound that exploited user-friendly electronics and pop-punk dynamics. Some Order, Long Understood consists of just two long tracks, spun out of nothing by a surprisingly lyrical trio. Morris is revelatory in his use of classic-jazz shapes and modernist accents, and Parker's arco work is superb. It's possible to hear in this session embryonic intimation of everything that was to follow.

Miracle Mile offers moody and slightly threatening music from Horvitz's band, The President. He's an impressive melodist, but tunes are constantly set in front of sinister guitar and synth backgrounds as if to suggest that the 'kinder, gentler America' of George Bush Sr, apostrophized in an interesting 'Open Letter', merely caps the kind of violence implied by the dramatic smoke-pall on the cover. The horns don't do much of interest, but Previte is absolutely superb.

* 4 + 1 Ensemble Intuition INT 3224-2 Horvitz; Julian Priester (tb); Eyvind Kang (vn); Tucker Martine (processing). 98.

Martine has been Horvitz's éminence grise for some time, as co-producer and effects man. Here, he's very much part of a group project, transforming a well-balanced instrumentation into something surreal and delightful. Priester is a thoughtful and atmospheric presence, playing low and slow in a tonality that often recalls french horn. The revelation is Kang, shadowing and bridging trombone and piano and often repeating the same melody higher in register, as he does on the mournful, penultimate 'Take Me Home'. Horvitz sticks to steam piano throughout, revealing himself again as a player of slightly limited dexterity but nimbler in thought than he is at the keyboard.

 Forever /  Sweeter Than The Day /  Live In Seattle / () Farewell Shows, Seattle, WA / () Live At The Rendezvous, Seattle Songlines SGL 1528-2 / SA1536-2 / Liquid City 36477 / Kufala 61 / 103 Horvitz; Timothy Young (g); Keith Lowe (b); Andy Roth (d). 7/99; 1/01; 5 & 6/01; 12/03; 04.

Thinning down his range all the time, these revisit the same group's earlier music, ever more moody, ever more 'cool', and by the time of Sweeter Than The Day they could almost be studio guys reading the dots, even if just once or twice – notably in a groove piece perhaps ironically called 'In The Lounge' – they nearly get up and go. Sweeter Than The Day is managed in a trim and focused manner, and the music's dependably smart, but it does feel as if Horvitz is hung up on textures. The hometown live dates pack more oomph, especially the 'farewell' set. Farewell to what isn't quite clear, since the group's back the following year. Horvitz has gone back to acoustic piano, though, and on a long set of originals (with just the Grateful Dead's 'Casey Jones' for variation) turns in some of his best playing for years.

* Way Out East Songlines 1558 Horvitz; Ron Miles (t); Sarah Schoenbeck (bsn); Peggy Lee (clo). 8/05.

Exquisitely conceived and executed, this is by no means the 'chamber-jazz' date the instrumentation might lead you to believe. Horvitz is still in swinging form, especially when he takes to Hammond organ and when he throws elements of boogie and ragtime into the mix. The sequence that contains 'Between Here And There' and the long 'Berlin 1914' around the middle of the album is classic contemporary music, lyrical, uncategorizable, but with a tough improvisatory edge.

Also, in brief:

 Film Music: 1998–2001 Tzadik 7514 2CD. 98–01.

A vivid sound collage; 47 tracks, easily re-sequenced and packed with musical interest.

 Intersection Poems Spool 125. 3/03.

Fine project with new associates Peggy Lee (clo), Dylan van der Schyff (d), etc., but it's hard to call it characterful.

 Whispers, Hymns And A Murmur Tzadik 8021. 2/06.

Last edition, we promised more on this, but there isn't much more to say. Beautiful, but slightly vapid.

Gregor Hotz (born 1966)

REEDS

Swiss improviser who explores the wilder reaches of the reed family.

 8 Pieces For Single Listeners & You Never Give Me Your Pillow FMP 90012 Hotz; Nicholas Bussmann (clo). 4/97, 3/98.

As the title implies, this is two discs in one, the first a set of solo improvisations on which Hotz struggles to make convincing music on the bass saxophone and alto clarinet – soprano saxophone is his other favoured instrument – the other a sequence of duos with Bussmann. It's possible to argue that Anthony Braxton, Evan Parker, Roscoe Mitchell and others have already claimed this turf. Hotz does offer something different, though, an immensely detailed language that can only be described as nuanced or textured microtonality. He sounds much more conventional working with Bussmann and some of these pieces imply predetermination at some level. However, that's a description, not a criticism. Surprising not to hear more from him. It's been a decade.

François Houle (born 1961)

CLARINET, SOPRANO SAXOPHONE

Vancouver-based improviser.

 Nancali Songlines SGL 1519-2 Houle; Benoît Delbecq (p). 4/96–5/97.
 In The Vernacular Songlines SGL 1522-2 Houle; Dave Douglas (t); Peggy Lee (clo); Mark Dresser (b); Dylan van der Schyff (d). 10/97.

Houle is a classically trained Canadian who was turned on to improvised music by Evan Parker and Steve Lacy. The duo with Delbecq revisits a format the clarinettist had tried previously with Marilyn Crispell. Here, the rattle and twang of 'Early Dance' is one example of using the piano's innards But the duo wire in strands from other disciplines too, such as the title-piece, where Delbecq turns his instrument into a simple thumb-piano, and the result feels like a Bedouin dance. Houle is sometimes outshone by his partner, but his beautiful tone keeps taking the ear, no matter how much he disfigures it in the line of duty.

Two brief interludes apart, In The Vernacular is a set of interpretations of John Carter's music – including, in 'Three Dances In The Vernacular', a debut recording. But Carter's music without Carter proves at times to be a surprisingly dour and difficult undertaking. Deprived of the composer's own gravitas, the more taxing pieces cry out for something more inspiring than this quintet provides. Yet they compensate with the fleet rush of 'Sticks And Stones', a marvellous collective throw of the dice, and the 'Juba's Run' section of 'Fields Medley'.

 La Lumière De Pierres Psi 07.02 Houle; Evan Parker (ts); Benoît Delbecq (prepared p). 10/05.

This is, of course, a trio record and very much the work of equal partners, but one can't help feeling that Parker (whose label it is) sounds slightly marginal at moments. His language is now so long- and so confidently established that dates like this rarely resonate with risk and danger. Houle and Delbecq have astonishing empathy; it allows them to make very beautiful music, but also to take chances, and much of the interest of the date comes in the interaction between clarinets and (minimally) prepared piano.

(*) 9 Moments Red Toucan RT9333 Houle; Joëlle Léandre (b, v); Raymond Strid (perc). 11/06.

A fine mix of live and studio recordings catching three outside-edge players ('Moment A Deux' is a bass/percussion duet) working at the farthest reaches of their shared language. That isn't to say this is the most 'outside' of recordings, but simply that the horn/bass/drums formula is stretched to the extreme. Léandre's vocalizations, uncredited on the sleeve, are a key component of 'Moment Grave', which along with '... Tendu' is the longest piece on the record. The latter has some astonishing bass clarinet effects, recorded live but so extraordinary in tonality they sound as if they have been post-produced. One of Houle's finest moments, even if the set as a whole runs out of steam over the final ten minutes.

Also, in brief:

 Cryptology Between The Lines BTL 012/EFA 10182-2. 10/00.

The sleeve-notes are encrypted, too. Very helpful, though this offers no striking departure from his other work.

() Dice Thrown Songlines SGL SA 1538-2. 5/01.

A disappointing return to duo work with Delbecq. Glorious sound, though.

Karsten Houmark (born 1951)

GUITAR

The Dane works in a light style of modal fusion.

() Four Storyville STCD 4197 Houmark; Thomas Clausen (ky); Lennart Ginman (b); Jonas Johansen (d). 9/94.

(*) Dawn Storyville STCD 4211 As above, except omit Clausen; add John Taylor (p). 10/96.

Houmark is a nimble improviser and unselfish enough to let his accomplished team have plenty of space, with the reliable Clausen in thoughtful form on Four. In the end, though, the music doesn't make much impact. None of the originals are memorable and the faceless production closes off the music. If Dawn's a huge step forward, that's largely due to Taylor's empathetic playing. Houmark came up with some strong themes for the date, with 'Serenity' and 'Sirens Song' outstanding; the improvised 'A Drop Of The Ocean' duet with Taylor is unaffected freedom. In the end, it all sounds like a good John Abercrombie date, and if that suggests Houmark's slightly derivative of the American, no harm in that.

Avery 'Kid' Howard (1908–66)

TRUMPET, VOICE

He began as a drummer but played brass with George Lewis in the '40s. A much-loved regular at Preservation Hall.

() Prelude To The Revival: Volume 1 American Music AMCD-40 Howard; Andrew Anderson, Punch Miller (t, v); Duke Derbigny (t); Joe 'Brother Cornbread' Thomas (cl, v); Martin Cole (ts); ? Harris (p, v); Joe Robertson (p); Leonard Mitchell (g, bj, v); Frank Murray (g); Chester Zardis (b); Charles Sylvester, Junious Wilson, Clifford 'Snag' Jones (d); Matie Murray (v). 37–41.

So little jazz was recorded in New Orleans during the '30s that any archive material from the period is valuable. Sam Charters, perhaps not the most reliable judge, reckoned that Kid Howard would have been the next King of New Orleans trumpet after Joe Oliver. He is only on the first four tracks here, in barely passable sound, but they show a mature, hard-hitting musician displaying the inevitable debt to Armstrong but resolutely going his own way. Anderson and Derbigny are less individual but they bridge the older and younger New Orleans traditions unselfconsciously enough. The sleeve-notes detail the detective work that went into finding and restoring the original acetates; ears unused to prehistoric sound, beware. The five tracks by Miller are discussed under his name.

() Kid Howard's La Vida Band American Music AMCD-54 Howard; Eddie Sommers (tb); Israel Gorman (cl); Homer Eugene (bj); Louis James (b); Josiah Frazier (d). 8–9/61.

Recorded on the cusp of a new revival, this date went some way to re-establishing Howard's standing. It's a pity, though, that there's some rustiness, not only in his playing but with most of the band too: fluffs and sloppiness are a distraction, even in the name of authenticity. But there are great moments, such as the tribute to Chris Kelly, Howard's early idol, in 'The Three Sixes', or the opening ensemble of 'Nelly Gray', and New Orleans scholars will welcome an important record on CD.

() Kid Howard's Olympia Band & Sam Morgan Revisited American Music AMCD-58 Howard; George 'Kid Sheik' Cola (t); Jim Robinson (tb); Albert Burbank (cl); John Handy (as); Andrew Morgan (ts, cl, v); George Guesnon (bj, v); Eddie Dawson, John Joseph (b); Alex Bigard, Alfred Williams (d). 8/62.

If this were better recorded, it would probably be the great Kid Howard record. Cut over two consecutive days by two bands (Howard, Robinson and Guesnon are common to both), one set is typical New Orleans, the other a tribute to the Sam Morgan band – Guesnon's vocal on 'Everybody's Talkin' 'Bout Sammy' is curiously poignant. The groups play with uproarious abandon, but the 'authentic' recording – sounding like an aircraft hangar – doesn't help.

Earl Howard

SAXOPHONES, ELECTRONICS

LA-born blind composer/improviser of astonishing gifts.

 Pele's Tears Random Acoustics 4 Howard; Melvyn Poore (tba); Frank Gratkowski (sax); Hans Schneider (b). 10/93.
(*) Strong Force Mutable Music 17511 Howard; Anthony Davis (p); Anne LeBaron (hp); Ernst Reijseger (clo); Gerry Hemingway (d). 11/99.
(*) 5 Saxophone Solos Mutable Music 17521 Howard (sax solo). 04.
 Clepton New World NW 80670 Howard; Georg Graewe (p); Ernst Reijseger (clo); Gerry Hemingway (d). 2/08.

A remarkable story. Howard was born very prematurely and almost miraculously survived, though he lost his sight in babyhood. He studied composition at Cal Arts but has diversified into improvised situations. The more abstract side of Howard's work is in evidence on Pele's Tears, especially the long opening electro-acoustic 'Hell'. There are a couple more pieces in that vein before he calls in his three guests for two collective improvisations.

Much of Strong Force is just dull. Written for and performed by Howard's Parabola Arts Ensemble, it marshals some fascinating contemporary improvisers but then seems to handcuff them with free-music clichés. Howard himself does little more than embellish the edges with synthesizer sounds.

The saxophone solos are, by contrast, wonderful. They find Howard navigating his way through dreamlike territory which sometimes resembles that of Roscoe Mitchell's solo recitals but is otherwise sui generis. The group on Clepton is better integrated than the earlier encounter and suggests that Howard may be moving into an intriguing new phase, destination still unknown.

Noah Howard (born 1943)

ALTO SAXOPHONE

Grew up in New Orleans as a chorister. Moving to California in his late teens exposed him to the avant-garde, but he never quite shook away his soulful, churchy quality. Now based in Brussels.

 Noah Howard Quartet ESP 1031 Howard; Ric Colbeck (t); Scotty Holt (b); Dave Grant (d). 66.
(*) At Judson Hall ESP 1064 Howard; Ric Colbeck (t); Dave Burrell (p); Catherine Norris (clo); Sirone (b); Bobby Kapp (d). 66.

Howard's brushfire sound has never quite caught on. The avant-garde of the '60s was over-populated with saxophonists, and Noah seems to parade his influences somewhat like his Biblical namesake, two-by-two. There's a hint of Dolphy-and-Ornette, then Trane tempered with Marion Brown's wavery pitching: all of it adding up to something different and idiosyncratic, but not yet fully realized. Working without harmony back-up lends the music a certain nervous energy, most obviously on the boppish 'Henry's Street'. The Coleman–Cherry axis is obviously the influence on 'Apotheosis' and the unrelated 'Apotheosis: Extension I', but it's the gentler 'And About Love' which catches the attention on the studio record.

One of the iconic recordings of its period, the Judson Hall concert showcased Howard in the company of British trumpeter Colbeck and the polystylistic Burrell. The saxophonist plays with fire and attitude on a long tribute to John Coltrane, here and there verging on bitterness and spleen. The other track, 'This Place Called Earth', is lighter, more sanguine and almost folksy in places, an effect very much influenced by the interplay of piano and cello. Colbeck's soaring lines could also be better registered, but, apart from his solitary LP as leader, this is the best place to sample his rich but fleeting talent.

CORE COLLECTION

* The Black Ark
Bo'Weavil 24CD Howard; Earl Cross (t); Arthur Doyle (ts); Leslie Waldron (p); Norris Hones (Sirone) (b); Mohammed Ali (d); Juma (perc). 69.

This has long been a collector's item, originally released on the Freedom label and only briefly as a Japanese CD reissue. Its omission from the discography is more puzzling than scandalous because The Black Ark has always enjoyed cult status among free-jazz fans. That sometimes means the reality is far less impressive than the prospect, but this nice repackaging (with no extra material) confirms the record's longevity.

The playing is very much in a late-'60s free idiom, with the ostensible theme – Latin on 'Ole Negro', playful on 'Queen Anne', oriental on 'Mount Fuji' – quickly abandoned in pursuit of some fine balance between flat-out soloing and free ensemble playing. Doyle, as so often, pushes the boat out a shade too far, most irritatingly on the opening 'Domiabra', where his statement cuts across Howard's own excellent solo.

As so often, the key to work of this kind lies in the rhythm section. There is a hint of phasing on drums and percussion which gives the music a curiously spacey quality, a not unknown device at the time, but given the title inevitably reminiscent of Sun Ra and the Arkestra. This is perhaps too scorched-earth an aesthetic to align comfortably in that direction, but it's an interesting reference point.

 Red Star Boxholder BXH 014 Howard; Bobby Few (p); Guy Pederson (b); Kenny Clarke (d). 5/77.

A fascinating meeting of styles as the saxophonist hooks up with bebop pioneer Kenny Clarke. The sound is excellent, despite the tapes having lain unissued, and the empathy within the group is deeply impressive. Few is a much underrated player, better known for his association with Steve Lacy, but well-adjusted to Howard's more incendiary approach. The long title-track is one of the saxophonist's best recorded performances, only released in 2001.

(*) Patterns / Message To South Africa Eremite MTE 019 Howard; Chris McGregor, Misha Mengelberg (p); Jaap Schoonhoven (g); Earl Freeman, Johnny Mbizo Dyani (b); Noel McGee (d); Han Bennink (d, perc, Tibetan hn); Steve Boston (perc); Zusaan Kali Fasteau (v, sheng). 10/71, 79.

Message To South Africa was written in the week that Steven Biko was killed and it features two of the Cape's most powerful and evocative exiles. It's a stunning performance, laden with passionate vocals from Howard, the magnificent Dyani and Zusaan Kali Fasteau. Howard is always sensitive to the yin aspects of the music, its feminine side, and even in the midst of violence and despair it sings.

The earlier material was originally released on Howard's own AltSax label; it's now his main imprint, both as leader and with the singer Eve Packer and poet J. Emanuel. It was commissioned by Dutch Radio. As with Eric Dolphy back in 1964, Bennink is magnificent: swinging, dark and funny. Mengelberg is more uncomfortable in the context, and at moments he treats the African material almost dismissively.

McGregor quotes the African National Congress anthem, 'Nkosi Sikeleli Afrika', once explicitly and once in inverted form on Message To South Africa. It's a tiny reminder of the political context against which this music is created.

(*) In Concert Cadence CJR 1084 Howard; Bobby Few (p); James Lewis (b); Calyer Duncan (d). 9/97.
The saxophonist likes to introduce himself with the words 'I'm Noah Howard – of the world', and much of his travelling is compressed into this performance, with European and African elements blended into the mix. Mongo Santamaria might be surprised to see 'Afro-Blue' credited to John Coltrane, but he'd certainly be gratified by what has been done with his most famous theme. 'We Remember John' is presumably also for Coltrane, a long, clattering performance that throws into focus how good a drummer Duncan is. Bobby Few always responds well to gigs like this, his natural bluesiness mediating his rather dry attack.

 Live At Unity Temple Ayler AYL 001 Howard; Bobby Few (p); Wilber Morris (b); Calyer Duncan (d). 9/97.
Recorded in Chicago, this is a strong set of mostly familiar material, including 'The Blessing' and 'Schizophrenic Blues'. Few and the leader have a strong and empathic relationship and 'Lightning Rod: Part 1' sees them get out into some adventurous territory, reminiscent of Howard's with Dave Burrell back in the '60s.

 Dreamtime Altsax ALT 90022 Howard; Loed Gassen (t). 02.
This is essentially a solo recording, with Gassen adding some Bill Dixon-influenced trumpet to just one track. Howard's saxophone tone is clearer and more emphatic than in years gone by and he sustains interest throughout these powerful performances. 'Brother Ju Ju' and 'Voodoo Queen' are familiar ideas from his back catalogue, but these are fresh and alert pieces that set up a powerful momentum for the rest of the set.

Also, in brief:

(*) The Eye Of The Improviser Altsax ALTSAX 2030. 70s–00s.
A compilation of recordings scattered across a 30-year period. Howard remains consistent throughout, but the accompaniments are patchy to say the least.

(*) Migration Altsax ALT 9009. 90.
Reminiscent of one of Miles's electronic groups, though trumpeter Loed Gassen scarcely recalls the master. Lots of guitar, crude bass and extra percussion clinch the comparison.

 At Documenta IX Boxholder BXH 025. 91. A fine, if flawed and heavily edited, example of Howard's small-group work in the early '90s, reissued in 2002. Some doubts about the provenance.

(*) Between Two Eternities Cadence Jazz 1114. 10/99.
Howard and Bobby Kapp (d) hadn't worked together for many years and there are hints of ring-rust in this reunion duo.

 Live In Paris Altsax ALT 90017 01
A brisk and very acceptable club set with a nice Latin feel thanks to drummer Armando and the delightful Boulou Ferret (g). Joe Lee Wilson (v) also guests.

Norman Howard (born 1944)

TRUMPET

Avant-gardist, best known for his association with Albert Ayler.

 Burn, Baby, Burn ESP 4033 Howard; Joe Phillips (as); Walter Cliff (b); Corney Millsap (d). 68.
Another Cleveland boy, Howard appeared on Albert Ayler's Witches And Devils and Spirits records and then pretty much vanished off the radar. Partly because he retired from music, his own LP, scheduled for ESP in 1968, wasn't issued for nearly 40 years, though bootlegs have been available for some time. The tunes are mainly by the saxophonist and, sad though the verdict is, Phillips is the more interesting rediscovery here, a player of real individuality who could turn in a challenging theme, 'Sad Miss Holiday' the best of them. It's a period piece, from an incendiary year, but not without interest.

Owen Howard

DRUMS

Respected Canadian – but NY-based – sideman who's toured extensively with Tom Harrell, Joe Lovano and others.

 Time Cycles Fresh Sound New Talent FSNTCD 272 Howard; Andrew Rathbun (ss, ts); John O'Gallagher (ss, as); Gary Versace (p); John Hebert (b). 8/05.
Howard has appeared on the FSNT imprint before, in collaboration with Rathbun, who's the other chief solo voice here. The album seems (very) loosely themed, with its bicycle-gear cover image and interspersed sequence of pieces called 'Kalimba'. These are mainly features for the leader, but he knows how to play for the group and if there's any hint that he's modelling his unit on an Elvin Jones Jazz Machine, then 'Giant Steps' (not originally from Elvin's Coltrane period, we know) helps to confirm that descent. Howard's an exciting player but he knows that long drum features don't excite anyone any more. It's tight, terse music, and in Versace and Hebert he has near-ideal 'section' partners.

Freddie Hubbard (born 1938)

TRUMPET, FLUGELHORN

Born in Indianapolis, he first worked with the Montgomery brothers and arrived in New York in 1959. He joined the Jazz Messengers in 1961 and was involved in important recordings with Ornette Coleman and Oliver Nelson, as well as leading his own dates. Uncertain of his direction in the '70s, and unable to play at all in the later '90s because of lip trouble.

[illegible]

* Open Sesame
Blue Note 95341-2 Hubbard; Tina Brooks (ts); McCoy Tyner (p); Sam Jones (b); Clifford Jarvis (d). 6/60.
Hubbard was one of the liveliest of the young hard-bop lions of the late '50s and early '60s. As a Jazz Messenger, and with his own early albums for Blue Note, he set down so many great solos that trumpeters have made studies of him to this day, the burnished tone, bravura phrasing and rhythmical subtleties still enduringly modern. He never quite had the quickfire genius of Lee Morgan, but he had a greater all-round strength, and he is an essential player in the theatre of hard bop. His several Blue Note dates seem to come and go in the catalogue. Open Sesame and Goin' Up were his first two records for the label and their youthful ebullience is still exhilarating, the trumpeter throwing off dazzling phrases almost for the sheer fun of it. The brio of the debut is paired with the sense that this was the important coming-out of a major talent, and Hubbard's solo on the title-track is a remarkable piece of brinkmanship: in the bonus alternative take, he's a shade cooler, but that more tempered effort is less exciting, too. This was an early appearance for Tyner, and a valuable glimpse of Tina Brooks, who contributes two tunes and plays with his particular mix of elegance and fractious temper. A great Blue Note set.

 Hub-Cap Blue Note Hubbard; Julian Priester (tb); Jimmy Heath (ts); Cedar Walton (p); Larry Ridley (b); Philly Joe Jones (d). 4/61.
(*) Here To Stay Blue Note 62661 As above, except add Wayne Shorter (ts); Reggie Workman (b). 12/62.
For a time Hub Cap was available on a double LP compiled with one of Blue Note's previously unreleased archive recordings as Here To Stay. They're now available in something like original form as RVG editions. The later date – and it's not clear why it wouldn't have passed muster at the time – was effectively a Jazz Messengers line-up, minus Blakey. 'Philly Mignon' is a cracking original, and the other soloists are easily up to Freddie's calibre. There are also two fine Cal Massey compositions and a markedly personal 'Body And Soul'. Not maybe in the very first rank of Hubbard albums but well worth hearing. By contrast, Hub Cap is pretty much orthodox hard bop with not much originality and no really iconic solos. But that's with the benefit of considerable hindsight.

* Ready For Freddie Blue Note 95970 Hubbard; Wayne Shorter (ts); McCoy Tyner (p); Bernard McKinney (Kiane Zawadi) (euph); Art Davis (b); Elvin Jones (d). 8/61.
* Hub-Tones Blue Note 99008 Hubbard; James Spaulding (as, f); Herbie Hancock (p); Reggie Workman (b); Clifford Jarvis (d). 10/62.
The latest RVG editions of these classic records restore their eminence. Hubbard's playing is simply marvellous; try his opening solo on 'Arietis' from Ready For Freddie, so poised and free of needless effort, yet sparkling in its casual urgency, the playing flowing like a stream. Both this and Shorter's 'Marie Antoinette' would make splendid revivals for any players looking to find unexposed hard-bop nuggets, and Hubbard's 'Birdlike' blues is a classic of its kind. On 'Weaver Of Dreams' he turns in a luscious ballad treatment. Hub-Tones includes one of Hubbard's most affecting performances in the tribute to Booker Little, as well as his first jousting with James Spaulding (repeated in Breaking Point, listed below). Another scintillating blow in the grand Blue Note manner.

 The Body And The Soul Impulse! 051183-2 Hubbard; Clark Terry, Ed Armour, Richard Williams (t); Melba Liston, Curtis Fuller (tb); Bob Northern, Julius Watkins (frhn); Eric Dolphy (as, f); Seldon Powell, Wayne Shorter (ts); Jerome Richardson (ts, bs); Charles Davis (bs); Cedar Walton (p); Reggie Workman (b); Philly Joe Jones, Louis Hayes (d); strings. 3–5/63.
Hubbard made two appearances as a leader for Impulse!. The Body And The Soul is the quirkier offering of the two, thanks mostly to Wayne Shorter's sometimes peculiar arrangements, for septet, big band and strings. Hubbard plays with beautiful alacrity, his quicker solos dancing over the charts, his slower ones underscoring what melody he can find; but Shorter's arrangements have their problems: audible fluffs betray a lack of rehearsal, some of the tunes seem cut off before they're properly developed, and moments like Eric Dolphy's alto squiggle on 'Clarence's Place' seem to have strayed in from another situation altogether.

(*) Breaking Point Blue Note 78728 Hubbard; James Spaulding (as); Ronnie Mathews (p); Eddie Khan (b); Joe Chambers (d). 5/64.
One of the most 'out' of Hubbard's Blue Notes, but not so far out that it gives the trumpeter any real problems in sounding convincing when improvising on the material. 'Far Way', for instance, is a complex piece but not so difficult that it undercuts his natural virtuosity. 'D Minor Mint' is the kind of bebop swinger which he eats up. Spaulding is exemplary, and the unusual rhythm section do nothing amiss.

 Jam Gems: Live At The Left Bank, Baltimore Hyena 9240 Hubbard; Jimmy Heath (ts); Gus Simms (p); Wilbur Little (b); Bertell Knox (d). 6/65.
Compared to a later Left Bank session from 1967, also originally released on Label M and on which Kenny Barron has to battle with a plainly out-of-tune piano, this is a pretty good live CD. Hub and Heath (and a not too well-known section) dig into 'All Members', 'Bluesville', 'Lover Man', 'What Is This Thing Called Love?' and 'Autumn Leaves' with a will, and there's not a dead spot on it. The sound still isn't perfect, but as on-the-hoof recordings go, it's good.

 Blue Spirits Blue Note 94318 Hubbard; James Spaulding (as, f); Hosea Taylor (as, bsn); Joe Henderson, Hank Mobley (ts); Harold Mabern, Herbie Hancock (p); Kiane Zawadi (euph); Reggie Workman, Larry Ridley, Bob Cranshaw (b); Pete La Roca, Clifford Jarvis, Elvin Jones (d); Big Black (perc). 65–66.
* The Artist Selects Blue Note 31431 As Blue Note albums above. 11/60–3/66.
Hubbard's later Blue Notes suggest he was searching awkwardly for a context. Having played on pathfinding dates with Coltrane, Dolphy and Coleman, perhaps he thought the way forward was the kind of chart-based playing which Blue Spirits, cobbled together from three different sessions, represented. The four-horn writing is competent but this wasn't really Freddie's thing. His solo on 'Mirrors' is the best thing he contributes to the date, although the all-star line-ups have their own reward.

Hubbard is no mug when it comes to choosing his own work. The Artist Selects compilation is full of plums from his own albums, plus three originals which he contributed to the Messengers' book. Exceedingly playable.

(*) Red Clay CTI/Epic 5051722 Hubbard; Joe Henderson, Stanley Turrentine (ts); Herbie Hancock (p); Johnny 'Hammond' Smith (org, p); George Benson (g); Ron Carter (b); Lenny White, Billy Cobham (d); Airto Moreira (perc). 1/70.
 Straight Life CTI EPC ZK 65125 Hubbard; Joe Henderson (ts, f); Herbie Hancock (p); George Benson (g); Ron Carter (b); Jack DeJohnette (d); Weldon Irvine, Richie Landrum (perc). 11/70.
Hubbard's CTI catalogue helped establish him as a commercial force, after the Atlantic sets had largely failed. It was an erratic period for him, and for many of his generation, trying to come to terms with jazz's commercial eclipse, and though these albums owe something to the contemporary work of Miles Davis, this is really a simpler, far less formidable equation the band is working on, and more a response to a prevailing wind of 'funkiness' which suddenly – rightly or wrongly – seemed a lot cooler than hard bop's 4/4. Red Clay has always been held in high esteem for the simple reason that it has a lot of great playing: rather than whatever contemporary trappings Hubbard and producer Creed Taylor were trying to graft onto the situation, it was exactly those verities that saw Freddie through the first half of the '60s which made the record work. There's a bonus live version of 'Red Clay' itself by a different septet (including Turrentine and Benson, and with Cobham whacking the back beats), not very eventful but fun. This is certainly the disc to have if you want Hubbard in this vein and this period.

On Straight Life, the title-piece and 'Mr Clean' are almost themeless blow-outs for the players, and in most hands this would be a complete mess, especially with DeJohnette crashing around the mix and the two percussionists adding little but further noise. But the soloists are Hubbard, Henderson, Hancock and Benson, not a bad band in anybody's book, and they take vociferous but plausible routes to some kind of catharsis. The disc is completed with a sweetly handled 'Here's That Rainy Day' on flugelhorn. What may dismay listeners used to hearing Hubbard in a Van Gelder mix is Creed Taylor's signature softcore production, which eventually bleeds a lot of the life out of the playing, and sounds no better in the new remastering.

 Born To Be Blue Original Jazz Classics OJC 734 Hubbard; Harold Land (ts); Billy Childs (ky); Larry Klein (b); Steve Houghton (d); Buck Clark (perc). 12/81.

(*) Face To Face Original Jazz Classics OJC 937 Hubbard; Oscar Peterson (p); Joe Pass (g); Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen (b); Martin Drew (d). 5/82.

Most of Hubbard's later '70s albums are still out of print. These are disappointing. Born To Be Blue was recorded live on a European tour, and while the leader plays with much of his old energy, the group musters little distinction: Land sounds largely uninterested and Childs adds nothing special. While there is the usual quota of virtuoso fireworks on the meeting with Pedersen, the session is, like so many involving Pedersen's group, built on technical bravura rather than specific communication. Interesting to hear Hubbard tackling 'All Blues', but this version is about a hundred degrees hotter than any Milesian treatment and the tune wilts in the furnace.

 Keystone Bop: Sunday Night / ... Volume 2: Friday & Saturday Prestige 24146-2 / 24163-2 Hubbard; Joe Henderson (ts); Bobby Hutcherson (vib); Billy Childs (p); Larry Klein (b); Steve Houghton (d). 11/81.

A smoking live date. Hubbard sets a cracking pace on the Sunday show with his own blues, 'Birdlike', which leads to inspired solos from Henderson and Hutcherson too. Thereafter the pressure drops a little and the rest is merely very good, but it's a pleasure to hear three great improvisers on resolute form, and this time Hubbard's intensity actually counts for something. The second volume has a less-than-immortal 'Round Midnight', but there's enough headstrong blowing to keep the spirits up.

 Sweet Return Collectables COL 6182 Hubbard; Lew Tabackin (ts, f); JoAnne Brackeen (p); Eddie Gomez (b); Roy Haynes (d). 6/83.

It's quite well named, since this Atlantic date is one of his best and most straight-ahead for some time. Brackeen (who had a stint with the Messengers, remember) is utterly solid and Tabackin turns in some nicely weighted solos to go along with Freddie's. The closing 'Night Has A Thousand Eyes' is a highlight.

(*) The Freddie Hubbard And Woody Shaw Sessions Blue Note 32747-2 2CD Hubbard; Woody Shaw (t); Kenny Garrett (as); Mulgrew Miller (p); Cecil McBee, Ray Drummond (b); Carl Allen (d). 85–87.

A comeback of sorts for both men: Shaw had to endure personal fallibilities which always stood in the way of his career, and Hubbard was still trying to shake off the aftermath of years of nonsense. They cut two albums for the 'new' Blue Note which found each man if not at his best – Hubbard has never recaptured his youthful sparkle, and Shaw's inconsistencies are palpable – at least in keen and lucid voice. There is some merriment in the various jousts they put together, and with Garrett kibitzing very effectively there is enough here to overcome any awkwardness of delivery. Hubbard also reminds us of his talents as a balladeer in 'Lament For Booker'.

 Topsy Enja 7025-2 Hubbard; Kenny Garrett (as); Benny Green (p); Rufus Reid (b); Carl Allen (d). 12/89.

(*) New Colors Hip Bop 8026 Hubbard; David Weiss (t); Steve Davis, Luis Bonilla (tb); Myron Walden, Kenny Garrett, Ted Nash (as); Craig Handy (ss, ts); Javon Jackson (ts); Chris Karlic (bs); Xavier Davis (p); Dwayne Burno (b); Joe Chambers, Idris Muhammad (perc). 10/00.

Hubbard sessions dating from the last 15 years or so have been hit and miss, but there's often something interesting going on, even when the leader isn't at his peak. Topsy is a batch of standards, beautifully recorded: Kenny Garrett comes in for three tracks, there is a 'Cherokee' which must be one of the fastest on record, and Hubbard keeps the mute in for the whole session, often a sign that he's a bit unsure about his tone.

Most of his '90s albums have been deleted, and recurring difficulties have kept him away from bandstands. New Colors was a comeback of sorts. Buttressed by a formidable list of sidemen, he works through a few of his greatest hits. Weiss comes up with arrangements that keep the other players busy and ensure that Freddie isn't too exposed, but it's sad to hear him struggling through even brief solos.

Also, in brief:

 The Night Of The Cookers Blue Note 94326. 4/65.

Paired with Lee Morgan in a Brooklyn club setting, but the four extended tunes fall flat and the playing seems empty.

(*) Backlash Atlantic 7567-90466-2. 10/66.

Good enough, but the emphasis on backbeats, riff tunes and squared-off solos is a broad hint at a new lighter direction.

 A Soul Experiment / (*) The Black Angel Atlantic 75679 3067-2 / 7567-80782-2. 5/69.

Hubbard's Atlantics are a rum lot, and these two are the nadir. 'The only difference between jazz and modern rock is the drum patterns and moving bass-lines', Freddie opined at the time, which suggested that certain marbles had already gone astray.

 Sing Me A Song Of Songmy / Echoes Of Blue Atlantic 81227 3669-2 / Collectables COL 6821. 1/71; 76.

Hubbard went back to Atlantic to make this mildly notorious set, in the middle of his CTI run.Written, composed and produced by Ilhan Mimaroglu, the result is an unsettling mix of pop-culture protest, doomy, deadpan poetry, synthesized sound and the incongruously straight-ahead playing of Hubbard's quintet. The Collectables option also includes Echoes, but they make an unlikely pair.

 First Light CTI 40687. 9/71.
Not bad, if you don't mind the Creed Taylor glitter, the guitars and the Paul & Linda cover version.

 Live In Warsaw Past Perfect 205776. 10/91. With the quintet, including Ronnie Mathews (p), at the Jazz Jamboree.

Peanuts Hucko (1918–2003)

CLARINET

Started out on tenor but switched to Goodman-like clarinet. In the '70s, he ran the Navarre club in his adopted Denver.

 Jam With Peanuts Sounds of Yesteryear 698 Hucko; Buck Clayton, Roy Eldridge, Chris Griffin, Max Kaminsky (t); Bill Stegmeyer (cl); Toots Mondello (as); Art Drelinger, Bill Vitale (ts); Ernie Caceres (bs); Joe Bushkin, Stan Freeman, Lou Stein (p); Mundell Lowe, Danny Perri, Guy Smith (g); Bob Haggart, Jack Lesberg, Sid Weiss (b); Johnny Blowers, Morey Feld, Bunny Shawker (d). 47–48.
Peanuts had an easy swing and a pleasant tone, but he's scarcely the most exciting clarinettist of his period. These live cuts are wildly variable in quality, but Peanuts always seemed to be surrounded by the best players, and if he goes his happy, untroubled way on all of them, there's enough interest from the others to keep this from easy listening.

 With Alex Welsh & His Band: Volume 1 / (*) ... Volume 2 Lake LACD 171/175 Hucko; Alex Welsh (c); Roy Williams (tb); John Barnes (as); Fred Hunt (p); Jim Douglas (g); Ronnie Rae (b); Lennie Hastings (d). 67.
 Stairway To Paradise Arizona Classic Jazz 02 Hucko; Pied Piper Quintet; Sine Qua Non Sextet. 79, 04.
 Swing That Music Star Line 9005 Hucko; All Stars, including Randy Sandke (t); Roy Williams (tb); Johnny Varro (p); Lars Erstrand (vib); Louise Tobin (v). 92.
His favourite setting was the relaxed guest spot, like his appearance with the Welsh band in the glamorous surroundings of Manchester Sports Guild. He's outclassed by most of the guys around him, even on 'Stealing Apples' and 'Royal Garden Blues'. The Arizona disc is shared between Peanuts's Pied Piper group with Peter Appleyard and Ross Tompkins, and a posthumous tribute played by fellow clarinettist Ron Hockett and the Sine Qua Nons. Peanuts's last record borrows a title from a Pops disc on which he played many years before. He's joined for much of it by his wife Louise Tobin (who used to be married to Harry James), but Peanuts puts aside his clarinet for a rare vocal on 'When You're Smiling'. The band is a strong one, and both Sandke and Williams contribute strong solos, stronger arguably than the leader's.

Also, in brief:

 Complete Big Band Recordings Jazz Connections 1009. 56–57.
Resolutely unexciting stuff from the RCA archive.

Spike Hughes (1908–87)

BASS, PIANO, CELESTE, REED ORGAN

A Londoner, he taught himself bass and worked as an arranger and composer in British dance music in the late '20s and early '30s, but he quit jazz for classical music in 1934.

* Spike Hughes & Benny Carter 1933 Retrieval RTR 79005 Hughes; Henry 'Red' Allen , Leonard Davis, Shad Collins, Bill Dillard, Howard Scott (t); Dicky Wells, Wilbur De Paris, George Washington (tb); Benny Carter (as, ss, cl); Howard Johnson (as, cl); Wayman Carver (as, cl, f); Coleman Hawkins (ts); Chu Berry (ts); Luis Russell, Nicholas Rodriguez (p); Lawrence Lucie (g); Ernest 'Bass' Hill (b); Big Sid Catlett, Kaiser Marshall (d). 11/31–5/33.
It was a brief affair: 'I left jazz behind me at the moment when I was enjoying it most, the moment when all true love-affairs should end.' It was just after the sessions with the all-star American line-up which features on Retrieval. But he had already made an extraordinary mark on the music in Britain. His early 78s are intensely sought after and contain some of the best British music of the period. However, the two double-disc sets which collected these sides are now out of print, which leaves the Retrieval disc, containing all the American recordings that Hughes made on a visit to New York. It's still indispensable. Though the band was really the Benny Carter orchestra, Hughes did the writing and arranging, and in pieces such as 'Donegal Cradle Song', a luminous feature for Hawkins, and 'Sweet Sorrow Blues', with superb Henry Allen, Hughes closed his jazz career on an amazing high note.

Daniel Humair (born 1938)

DRUMS

Born in Geneva and moved to Paris at 20. His most important association was with Martial Solal, but he also became a respected sideman for visiting Americans and regular drummer of the George Gruntz band.

(*) Humair–Louiss–Ponty: Volume 1 /  ... Volume 2 Dreyfus 191018-2 / 191028-2 Humair; Eddy Louiss (org); Jean-Luc Ponty (vn). 67.
Fascinating as much as anything for a glimpse of the 25-year-old Ponty, who takes the lead on a good few of these picturesque but undeniably swinging sessions. Louiss has an emphatic touch, with a lot of dissonance thrown in for colour. Humair keeps things neat, except on 'Bags' Groove' (Volume 2), which is a mess. The outstanding performances are all on the first set, with 'You've Changed', a shameless 'Summertime', 'Round About Midnight' and a chipper 'So What' that manages to hang on to a thread of pure romance.

 Triple Hip Trip Owl/Universal 982459 Humair; David Friedman (vib); Harvie Swartz (b). 1/79.
 Humair/Jeanneau/Texier Owl 982487 Humair; François Jeanneau (p); Henri Texier (b). 79.
Humair's essential modesty as a 'leader' is reflected in some of these early titles, which give equal weight to his colleagues. Truth is, he pretty much dominates the sessions. Texier, as might be expected, gets in his share on the latter but it's the big drummer who stamps his authority. He and Friedman get in one another's way on occasion, but mostly it's a nicely put-together session with few surprises but fewer longueurs.

* 9–11 P.M. Town Hall Label Bleu LBLC 6517 Humair; Michel Portal (sax, bcl, bandoneon); Joachim Kühn , Martial Solal (p); Jean-François Jenny-Clark (b). 6/88.
Humair's own records have the same thoroughgoing musicality that he brings to work with artists as different as Anthony Braxton, Stéphane Grappelli and Lee Konitz. Town Hall is a superb introduction to all the participants, and if the veteran Solal's part isn't as large as one might wish for, it's none the less significant as an exercise in the genealogy of the 'new' French jazz, whose roots actually strike a lot deeper than first appears. That is nowhere more evident than here and on …

 Up Date 3.3 Label Bleu LBLC 6530 Humair; François Jeanneau (as, ss, ts, f); Henri Texier (b). 2/90.
… where Humair teams up with Texier in an album of looser compositions and improvisations. Jeanneau more than makes up for any technical shortcomings by an intelligent disposition of his four horns, but the real foundation of the music is the interaction in the bass and drums.

(*) Edges Label Bleu LBLC 6545 Humair; Jerry Bergonzi (sax); Aydin Esen (p); Miroslav Vitous (b). 5/91.
Much of the interest here settles again on the interplay between Humair and another great European bassist. Vitous's own 'Monitor' is a strange stop-start theme that downplays Esen's rippling accompaniments and Bergonzi's full-ahead Coltrane-ism to explore complex times and sonorities. Something of the same goes on throughout the very long 'Genevamalgame' (co-written by Joachim Kühn). The title suggests a much more exploratory, risk-taking endeavour. Humair's out-of-tempo sequences and dramatic rallentando passages must be extremely challenging to his players. There may be a hint of compromise to the market in Bergonzi's and Esen's dramatic soloing, but the net effect of their more obvious strategies is to concentrate attention on the drummer and bassist. The mix is nicely horizontal, though Vitous could have done with a slight lift.

(*) Quatre Fois Trois Label Bleu LBLC 6619/20 Humair; Hal Crook (tb); George Garzone (ts); David Liebman (ss); Michel Portal (bcl); Joachim Kühn (p); Marc Ducret (g); Bruno Chevillon, Jean-François Jenny-Clark (b). 4/96–3/97.
 Humair Urtreger Michelot Sketch 333006 Humair; René Urtreger (p); Pierre Michelot (b). 99.
After experimenting with larger-scale units for some time, Humair came to believe that the trio was still the most satisfying equation for his music. The title is then explained easily enough: four improvising trios playing a repertoire dominated by Humair material. The best of the groups is the one with Liebman and Jenny-Clark. They open with a segue from Humair's 'Casseroles' to the Joachim Kühn tune 'More Tuna', and pick up the story later with Daniel's 'Bas De Lou'. Then there is a string-based group with Chevillon and Ducret, an intriguing association with Kühn and Portal, and last – and least satisfactory – the enigmatic Garzone and Crook. Humair plays very differently in each of these contexts. His fertile imagination can be gauged from his arrangement of the famous Massenet 'Méditation' from Thaïs, deeply felt and well thought-out. Garzone might have been more comfortable with his own material. He sounds ill at ease on the almost folksy theme of 'La Galinette', though he turns in a brisk and powerful performance on Franco Ambrosetti's 'For Flying Out Proud', which makes the most of the unusual instrumentation.

The trio with Michelot and Urtreger is mostly devoted to standards and repertoire material. 'Airegin' is brief, terse and absolutely to the point. 'Bye Bye Blackbird' is more developed and whistles by exuberantly. 'Hum Calshum' is a tribute to the great Egyptian singer and has some of the great lady's charismatic presence.

Urtreger has a nice touch and Michelot is a giant on his instrument, worthy of much more solo space than he gets here. Nice sound throughout, though the dynamic is a bit skew-whiff on some of the more upbeat numbers, with too much tizz on the cymbals.

(*) Liberté Surveillée Sketch 333018/19 Humair; Ellery Eskelin (ts); Marc Ducret (g); Bruno Chevillon (b). 1/02.
This is one of the toughest-minded sets the drummer has ever put his name to. Some of the credit has to go to the fiery Eskelin and to Ducret – who manages to make his guitar sound like an entire orchestra – but it is Humair who leads from the back throughout.

* Ear Mix Sketch SKE 333031 Humair; Marvin Stamm (t, flhn); David Friedman (vib); Sébastien Boisseau (b). 1/03.
The bassist is back in excellent form for this superlative record. The two Americans, Stamm and Friedman, have a huge range of experience between them, the former from the Jones–Lewis band and other jazz orchestras, Friedman from a remarkable range of rock and jazz recordings. They combine wonderfully to complete this unusual instrumentation. As with previous Sketch discs, there's no danger anyone will mistake this for a club recording. It's very cleanly recorded with a lot of detail from the drums and vibraphone. Listening to the stunning 'Huchedu' and 'I Never Had My Second Breakfast', one longs for a live version, or even a glimpse of rehearsals. Slightly too pat on the release versions, but unmistakably powerful modern jazz.

Also, in brief:

 Pépites CELP C3. 4/87.
A nice duo with reedman André Jaume, with Humair doing much of the driving. Intriguing version of 'Naima'.

 Baby Boom Sketch 333034. 5/02.
Less incendiary than Liberté Surveillée but very much the same concept and a really powerful record. Christophe Monniot's sopranino adds a fascinating colour and tonality.

Carolyn Hume

PIANO

Limpid minimalist.

 Zero / () By Lakes Abandoned / () Flames Undressed By Water / (*) Wet Map Leo Lab CD 066 / 077 / Leo CD LR 350 / 385 Hume; Paul May (d, perc); Duke Garwood (cl on Zero only); Neil May (b on Zero only); Marcus Cummins (ss on Flames only); Bernd Rest (g on Flames and Wet Map); Sonja Galsworthy (v on Flames and Wet Map). 10/99; 4/01; 5/02; 11/03.
It would be unkind to point to all the aquatic references and suggest that these stilled, almost eventless duos are a bit wet. Certainly, they're strange fare to find on the Leo label, even in its more eclectic recent incarnation. Spend some time with Hume and May, though, and it becomes clear that there is formidably disciplined musicianship behind the soft water-drops and gentle rattles. The guest artists are cleverly deployed and there is some sign that on the later discs Hume and May are moving beyond a New Age-ish impressionism and towards something that might just sneak into the outer circles of the ECM catalogue. One should be sufficient for most collections.

 Solo Piano Works Leo CD LR 478 Hume (p solo). N.D.
The title implies that these are composed pieces, which may not be the case. There is a more obvious jazz resonance here than to the earlier duo records, notably on the opening 'Edge Of Restraint', where a steady tolling chord in the right hand underpins a restless, almost haunted idea. Unfortunately, the second track begins in almost exactly the same way – think of very slowed-down '70s Paul Bley – and the formula is reworked on 'Solitude And Madness', to the extent that it's probably best to think of this as a single undifferentiated performance. Not for every taste, but lovely in its understated way, as is she.

Helen Humes (1913–81)

VOICE

Sang in Chicago while still a teenager and worked with various bands in the '30s before joining Basie in 1938. Stayed until 1941, then sang as soloist. Moved to Australia in 1964 but returned home three years later. Began singing again and was a grande dame of the '70s.

 Helen Humes 1927–1945 Classics 892 Humes; Dizzy Gillespie, Bobby Stark, Ross Butler (t); Jimmy Hamilton (cl); Herbie Fields (cl, as); Pete Brown, John Brown (as); Prince Robinson, Wild Bill Moore (ts); J. C. Johnson, De Loise Searcy, Sam Price, Leonard Feather, Bill Doggett (p); Lonnie Johnson, Sylvester Weaver, Walyer Beasley, Chuck Wayne, Elmer Warner (g); Charlie Drayton, Oscar Pettiford, Alfred Moore (b); Ray Nathan, Denzil Best, Charles Harris (d). 4/27–45.

Helen Humes made her first records in the 'classic' blues idiom when she was only 13. That OKeh coupling, and two sessions a few months later, open this fascinating CD. She sounds amazingly confident for her age, and tracks such as 'Garlic Blues' and 'Alligator Blues' are handled with assurance and a degree of adventure. A 15-year jump leads to a fine session with a Pete Brown band (including Gillespie, who unfortunately gets little space), before a rather extraordinary date with a Leonard Feather group, pairing old-timers Stark and Robinson with what is almost a bebop rhythm section! Five titles with a chunkily swinging Bill Doggett jump band round off the disc. Helen sounds a bit prosaic here and there, but the sweetness of her voice and her gift for swing enliven what would otherwise be ordinary sides.

(*) Helen Humes 1945–1947 Classics 1036 Humes; Snooky Young, Buck Clayton (t); George Matthews (tb); Scoville Brown (cl); Edward Hale, Willie Smith (as); Wild Bill Moore, Maxwell Davis, Lester Young, William Woodman, John Hardee, Rudy Williams (ts); Arnold Ross, Jimmy Bunn, Meade Lux Lewis, Eddie Beal, Roger 'Ram' Ramirez , Teddy Wilson (p); Allen Reuss, Dave Barbour, Irving Ashby, Mundell Lowe (g); Red Callender, Jimmy Rudd, Walter Page, Jimmy Butts (b); Henry Tucker Green, Chico Hamilton, Jo Jones, Denzil Best (d). 45–12/47.

Some excellent line-ups behind Helen on this scattering of LA and New York dates for Philo, Black & White and Mercury. The material is mostly a workable mix of blues, jump tunes and the odd novelty piece, with only the dreary 'Please Let Me Forget' coming out of the ballad bag. Snooky Young gets some great moments, Lester Young ambles slowly through a solo, and Buck Clayton is in charge of the last three dates. The trumpeter on 'Married Man Blues' is unidentified but he's useful. Helen is mistress of all this material, and she sounds terrific on the Mercury dates in particular.

(*) Helen Humes 1948–1950 Classics 1333 Humes; John Anderson, Pete Candoli, Jack Trainor, Charles Gillum, Geechie Smith (t); Britt Woodman (tb); Marshall Royal, Jackie Kelso (as); Henry Bridges, Maxwell Davis, Jimmy Jackson, Dexter Gordon (ts); Jack McVea, Freddie Simon (bs); Eddie Beal, Camille Howard, Ernie Freeman (p); Johnny Rogers (g); Leonard Bibb, Lawrence Kato, Dallas Bartley, Red Callender (b); Oscar Bradley, Roy Milton, J. C. Heard (d). 5/48–11/50.

Opening with six more titles for Mercury, including the superb 'Married Man Blues', there is more excellent Humes on this collection of 24 tracks. She is in fine voice for four titles made for Discovery in May 1950, but the real highlights here are the several belting blues numbers she made at a Gene Norman concert later that year, issued as singles and featuring an uproarious 'Million Dollar Secret', which became a bestseller on 78 (the later studio remake is also here).The last two sessions place her squarely in the new R&B idiom (complete with reverb on the vocals!), although the last four sides feature a fine sextet including Dexter Gordon – they're out to misbehave, and the closing 'Airplane Blues' is pure hot sauce. Great stuff.

* 'Tain't Nobody's Biz-ness If I Do Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 453 Humes; Benny Carter (t); Frank Rosolino (tb); Teddy Edwards (ts); André Previn (p); Leroy Vinnegar (b); Shelly Manne, Mel Lewis (d). 1–2/59.

* Songs I Like To Sing Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 171 Humes; Al Porcino, Ray Triscari, Stu Williamson, Jack Sheldon (t); Harry Betts, Bob Fitzpatrick (tb); Art Pepper (cl, as); Ben Webster, Teddy Edwards (ts); Bill Hood (bs); André Previn (p); Barney Kessel (g); Leroy Vinnegar (b); Shelly Manne (d). 9/60.

(*) Swingin' With Helen Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 608 Humes; Joe Gordon (t); Teddy Edwards (ts); Wynton Kelly (p); Al Viola (g); Leroy Vinnegar (b); Frank Butler (d). 7/61.

Helen's sessions with Count Basie in the '30s established her career. Her three albums for Contemporary have all been reissued, and they make a powerful argument for her standing as one of the finest (and most overlooked) jazz vocalists of the swing era and after. Recorded in stereo for the first time, her voice's natural mix of light, girlish timbre and hard-hitting attack is exhilarating. She's like a less matronly Ella Fitzgerald, yet she can phrase and change dynamics with more inventiveness than Ella. The 1959 jam, organized by Benny Carter, has a rare grip and immediacy; although almost everything on it is fine, special mention should be made of a superbly structured 'Stardust' and 'I Got It Bad And That Ain't Good' and a perfectly paced 'You Can Depend On Me'. The motley grouping works unexpectedly well, with the rhythm section's modern grooving offsetting terrific solos by Carter, Rosolino and Edwards.

Swingin' With Helen is a shade less impressive, but the 12 standards here are all delivered with great charm and aplomb. The pick of the three is Songs I Like To Sing, which arranger Marty Paich built specifically around Humes's talents. The singer has no problem dealing with scores which would have taxed such a modernist as Mel Tormé, and these eight tracks define a modern approach to swing singing. But the other four, with Humes set against a rhythm section and the sole horn of Ben Webster, are equally beautiful, particularly a glorious reading of 'Imagination'.

(*) Sneakin' Around Black & Blue 950.2 Humes; Gérard Badini (ts); Gerald Wiggins (p); Major Holley (b); Ed Thigpen (d). 2/74.

 'Deed I Do Contemporary 14071-2 Humes; Don Abney (p); Dean Reilly (b); Benny Barth (d). 4/76.

A couple of late entries for Helen, cut during her '70s comeback. 'Deed I Do has a plain old rhythm section for company and the material is too familiar, but the intimacy is nice and she sounds like she enjoyed it. Sneakin' Around is a better bet all round. The singer is in fine voice, the band is swinging (and includes local lad Badini), and though she'd already sung these tunes many times, it doesn't hurt. 'Tribute To Jimmy Rushing' is a sweet medley of her old pal's hits. Five alternative takes fill up space.

Percy Humphrey (1905–95)

TRUMPET

The middle Humphrey brother started out as a drummer, worked with George Lewis in the '50s, and led the Eureka Brass Band and others. He seldom played outside the city and also had a day job selling insurance.

 Percy Humphrey's Sympathy Five American Music AMCD-88 Humphrey; Waldron Joseph, Jack Delany (tb); Willie Humphrey, Raymond Burke (cl); Stanley Mendelson, Lester Santiago (p); Johnny St Cyr (g, bj, v); Blind Gilbert (g, v); Richard McLean, Sherwood Mangiapane (b); Paul Barbarin (d). 1/51–6/54.

() Sounds Of New Orleans Vol. 1: Paul Barbarin & His Band / Percy Humphrey's Jam Session Storyville STCD 6008 Humphrey; Joe Avery (tb); Ray Burke (cl); Sweet Emma Barrett (p); Billy Huntington (bj); Ricard Alexis (b); Cie Frazier (d). 5/54.

 New Orleans The Living Legends: Percy Humphrey's Crescent City Joymakers Original Jazz Classics OJC 1834-2 Humphrey; Louis Nelson (tb); Albert Burbank (cl); Emanuel Sayles (g, bj); Louis James (b); Josiah Frazier (d). 1/61.

 Climax Rag Delmark DE-233 Humphrey; Jim Robinson (tb); Albert Burbank (cl); George Guesnon (bj); Alcide 'Slow Drag' Pavageau (b); Cie Frazier (d). 2/65.

 Percy Humphrey's Hot Six GHB BCD-85 Humphrey; Louis Nelson (tb); Albert Burbank (cl); Lars Edegran (p); Chester Zardis (b); Barry Martyn (d). 11/66.

Humphrey's most significant playing was usually done with the city's brass bands, and he became leader of the Eureka Brass Band in the early '50s until its disbandment some 20 years later. The 1954 jam session, one half of a disc shared with a Paul Barbarin set, is relatively slight, but Humphrey plays with the characteristically short-breathed phrasing of the New Orleans brassman and makes all his notes count: his solo on 'Everybody Loves My Baby', decorated with the familiar New Orleans vibrato, sums up his style, a mixture of abrasiveness and raw melody. The sound is quite good, although Sweet Emma Barrett, a minor legend who wore bells on her hat and round her ankles, is almost inaudible at the piano.

The Sympathy Five (the name derives solely from the handwritten title on a discovered reel of tape) offer six 1954 titles on the American Music CD. Humphrey sounds in good spirits and his solos have a lean, almost wiry quality; but he is if anything outshone by Burke and the splendid Delany. The remainder of the disc is filled out with four strong Barbarin titles (with both Humphrey brothers) and three odd pieces by a trio with Burke, Mangiapane and the mysterious Blind Gilbert, who sings and strums a guitar in questionable tune.

Most of Humphrey's later records are hard to locate, but this 1961 date in Riverside's Living Legends series is worth remembering, recorded in far superior sound to that often granted this kind of jazz. Humphrey himself is rather overpowered by Albert Burbank, whose clarinet predominates with an eagerness that recalls Boyd Senter, and Frazier's drumming is crashingly resonant; but the band live up to their name at many points.

Climax Rag is good if somewhat uneventful, recorded at San Jacinto Hall on the day after Cie Frazier's birthday (they play a brief 'Happy Birthday' for him). Tight, rigorous playing, and for once Burbank sounds recessed. No fewer than eight alternative takes on CD dilute the impact of the original LP.

The 1966 date is a memento of one of Barry Martyn's trips to New Orleans – though Humphrey is the nominal leader, the date was organized by the drummer. The front line may have been a little tired (Jim Asman's notes record that they'd been playing the previous night till 7 a.m.) and the playing is ragged, though ably policed by Martyn's beat. The rough, open-hall ambience reeks of vintage New Orleans music and it's a charismatic disc.

Willie Humphrey (1900–1994)

CLARINET

A New Orleans forefather, he took up clarinet at 14 and five years later was playing in Chicago with Joe Oliver and Freddie Keppard. He drifted around through the '20s and '30s but returned to his home town in time for the revival.

() In New Orleans GHB BCD-248 Humphrey; Norbert Susemihl (t, v); Mari Watanabe (p); Emile Martyn (d). 4/88.

 Two Clarinets On The Porch GHB BCD-308 Humphrey; Brian O'Connell (cl); Les Muscutt (g, bj); Frank Fields (b); Ernie Elly (d). 8/91.

* A Kiss To Build A Dream On GHB BCD-428 Humphrey; Joris De Cock (t, v); Gerhard 'Doggy' Hund (tb); Klaus-Dieter George (cl); Rowan Smith (p); Büli Schöning (bj, g); Peter Wechlin (d). 10/92.

A few months younger than George Lewis, Willie Humphrey harked back to an ancient New Orleans tradition. He didn't start recording until 1926, but these all come from over six decades later. In New Orleans puts him up with a German trumpeter, a Japanese-American pianist and a British drummer, and the youngsters play with an affectionate energy that Willie seems to enjoy. It's let down, though, by a sense that these are keen amateurs keeping the old man company, and some errors of judgement (such as Susemihl's four vocal performances) tarnish the date.

Three years later, Humphrey palled up with another clarinet man 60 years his junior. His phrasing and gargled tone persuade the other players to walk a little gingerly round him: the seven trio pieces, which Willie and Ernie Elly sit out, probably account for the best music, deftly sprung round Muscutt's deferential banjo and O'Connell's sweet-toned clarinet. But 'I Want To Be Happy' or 'China Boy' feature some amusing interplay, and it's pleasant to hear an unalloyed New Orleans legend raising his voice in the '90s.

It wasn't quite his farewell. That distinction goes to A Kiss To Build A Dream On, released by GHB in 2000, 100 years after Willie was born. It features him guesting with the Maryland Jazz Band of Cologne. Willie sounds like he's having fun, and one has to make allowances for some ramshackle music.

Charlie Hunter (born 1968)

8-STRING GUITAR

Part of a community of jamming musicians who emerged from the Bay Area in the early '90s, he is a virtuoso guitarist playing an eight-string model, with bass and lead lines combined.

 Bing ... Bing ... Bing Blue Note 31809-2 Hunter; Jeff Cressman (tb); Dave Ellis (ts); Bing Goldberg (cl); David Phillips (pedal steel g); Jay Lane (d); Scott Roberts (perc). 95.

 Ready ... Set ... Shango! Blue Note 37101-2 Hunter; Calder Spanier (as); Dave Ellis (ts); Scott Amendola (d). 96.
Hunter's ability to make his eight-string guitar sound like – and occasionally remarkably like – a Hammond B-3 ties him into Blue Note history. The earliest of these is probably the most guitaristic, if we may be forgiven the term, a brisk, bright session with more external input than the latter pair. Hunter sounds good with brass, and it's a shame that Cressman's contribution (and Goldberg's, for that matter) is so limited. Some of Hunter's own best songs are on the debut: 'Greasy Granny' and 'Scrabbling For Purchase' are excellent, but the outstanding track is a wholly unexpected cover of Nirvana's 'Come As You Are'.

The second album sounds great, a thick, swampy performance which ironically is diluted only by the crispness and clarity of Lee Townsend's production. Inevitably, the two saxophone-players occupy much of the foreground, interestingly trading their differences of approach, Ellis's dark, raw-edged tone and Spanier's lighter, bop-orientated delivery most effectively juxtaposed on 'Let's Get Medieval', less so on the not-quite-urgent '911'.

(*) Return Of The Candyman Blue Note 23108-2 Hunter; Stefon Harris (vib); Scott Amendola (d); John Santos (perc). 98.
The big bonus here is Harris. His tight, ringing sound and long, pattering runs give the line-up – known as Pound For Pound – a heavily percussive emphasis which provides the perfect launch-pad for Hunter's idiosyncratic eight-string work.

Punctuated by five short interludes which serve no very obvious purpose beyond punctuation, the tunes are tough and funky and hit the mark every time. The title-track, 'Pound For Pound' and 'Enter The Dragon' are the ones to sample.

(*) Duo Blue Note 99187-2 Hunter; Leon Parker (d, perc). 99.
Our earlier comments about the Beach Boys have come back to haunt us because Hunter includes a Brian Wilson song here. Most of the material is self-written, though, including the swinging 'Belief' by Parker, and the guitarist has never sounded jazzier, using his thick low strings to generate simple bass-lines against those now familiar 'organ' chords and single-note lines, so that this almost sounds like a trio recording.

Wilson's 'Don't Talk (Put Your Head On My Shoulder)' is a lovely thing, laden with shimmering reverb and every bit as tender as the original. The pair also tackle one standard, 'You Don't Know What Love Is'. Parker's roots are more firmly in classic jazz than Hunter's, but he has a solid rock backbeat at his disposal as well.

(*) Songs From The Analog Playground Blue Note 33550 2 Hunter; John Ellis (sax); Stephen Chopek (d); Chris Lovejoy (perc); Mos Def, Theryl de Clouet, Kurt Elling, Norah Jones (v). 9/01.
There are some sublime moments here. The band sounds seasoned and strong, and has the flexibility to push these songs – stray memories from Charlie's youth – out into new territory. That's nowhere more evident than on things like 'Mighty Mighty', the old Earth, Wind & Fire tune, reworked by de Clouet, who also does a chillingly beautiful version of Willie Dixon's 'Spoonful'. Elling is more obviously a jazz singer. His vocal line on 'Desert Way' and 'Close Your Eyes' is exemplary. Mos Def is streetier but less convincing, and the real heartbreaker is Norah Jones's delightful alto on the Roxy Music swoon 'More Than This', which becomes quite majestic, with Charlie strumming like a string section underneath. She tops that with Nick Drake's 'Day Is Done', which is near-perfect. A gorgeous record.

(*) Right Now Move Rope A Dope 93137 Hunter; Curtis Fowlkes (tb); John Ellis (ts); Grégoire Maret (hca); Derrek Phillips (d). 03.
The move away from Blue Note after seven albums and some apparent uncertainty as to where he sits in the market has done Hunter some good already. It uses the same trombone/tenor front line as some of the tracks on that record, but the addition of Grégoire Maret's chromatic harmonica is a stroke of genius. He is the key to tracks like 'Mali' and the equally beautiful 'Try', which is the most substantial track of the set. Fowlkes is an agreeably eclectic player, with a considerable track record; Ellis isn't so well-known, but together they create a vivid funk.

Hunter's own role is interesting. Increasingly, he shapes the music from behind the horns, rather than playing strong lead lines himself. He's still the dominant voice, but in a supportive and structural role. Only on the closing track, 'Le Bateau Ivre', does he engage in swapping lines and licks.

(*) Come In, Red Dog, This Is Tango Leader Rope A Dope 502 Hunter; Bobby Previte (d, elec). 2/03.
 Latitude Thirsty Ear 57054 As above; add Greg Osby (as). 04.
 Longitude Thirsty Ear 57160 As above, except omit Osby; add DJ Logic (elec, samples). 9/04.
In 2003, Hunter hooked up with Previte for some duo sessions that quickly turned into a regular project called Groundtruther. Listening to these records, it's hard not to get sucked into technical awe. The guitarist's simultaneous bass-lines have always been impressive, but Previte's electronic devices and triggered samples afford him a whole orchestra of real-time effects. It's difficult to credit that these albums were recorded basically live. Get beyond that understandable surprise and there's even more to admire. The level of musicianship is consistently impressive, though it does become repetitive.

Latitude is a series of meditations named as if on a journey from North Pole through the Tropics and Equator to South. The concept doesn't much matter and there isn't always an obvious connection between title and music; nothing unduly chilly about the polar numbers or overheated at the Equator. Hunter's lines seem less rock-influenced in Previte's company, though ironically it's the drummer who imparts a strong regular beat to some passages.

He's back in a more familiar role on Longitude. Logic's battery of sounds is so subtly inflected that Previte's triggered samples are not needed to the same extent, restoring him to his acoustic kit to a large degree. Again the titles – 'Prime Meridian', 'Dead Reckoning' – don't have a particular programmatic function and this time the pattern is slightly different, with driving, rhythmically complex numbers interspersed with more impressionistic ambient interludes, largely courtesy of Logic.

(*) Friends Seen And Unseen Rope A Dope 51539 Hunter; John Ellis (sax, f); Derrek Phillips (d). 7/04.
Hunter has kept a trio going in parallel with Groundtruther and the new line-up is the best yet. Ellis is a fine writer as well as a workmanlike player and his three compositions here (there are a couple more jointly credited) are the best on the record. Not much change as far as technique is concerned. Hunter is a victim of his own technique, which now seems quite ordinary, but is saved by unfailing musicianship and great ears. The choice of Abdullah Ibrahim's 'Soweto's Where It's At' as a cover was a master-stroke.

(*) Earth Tones Breadfruit 704 Hunter; Ernest Ranglin, Chinna Smith (g); Shawn Pelton (d); Manolo Badrena (perc). 11/05.

There's a tiny whiff of self-indulgence here, but who'd deny him? Working with reggae/jazz guitarists Ranglin and Smith, he sticks mainly to cover versions, some as obvious as 'Island In The Sun', others like Peter Tosh's 'One Foundation' more of a musician's choice rather than a fan's. Smith contributes a few numbers and he's the more prominent of the two guests, sticking to a clean-picked acoustic and leaving Ranglin to do his regular laid-back thing. A great one-off.

 Mistico Fantasy 30265 Hunter; Erik Deutsch (p, ky); Simon Lott (d). 2/07.

This is the new trio, but the key member is producer Scott Harding (Scotty Hard), who's worked with critical darlings Sex Mob and with former Hunter associate DJ Logic and who brings a taut contemporary sound to this. The guitarist rocks out on some of the cuts and notably 'Balls' and 'Special Shirt' (using every pedal he owns on the latter, it sounds like), but there are some subtler things as well, and Deutsch sticks largely to piano (electric and acoustic) to keep the jazz component up. Lott is a fascinating player, somewhat in the Leon Parker mould, but with a more varied approach.

Also, in brief:

(*) Natty Dread Blue Note 52420-2. 97.

An oddity, offering a track-by-track gloss on Bob Marley and the Wailers' classic reggae record but only seldom anything as moving or inflammatory as the original.

 Charlie Hunter Blue Note 25450 2. 00.

The plainest of titles for a record maybe intended to reposition him in the jazz market, as the music also suggests. Just one solo track, though, the closing 'Someday We'll All Be Free'.

 Copperopolis Rope A Dope 060. 2/06.

Another strong trio set. Ellis and this time Derrek Phillips (d) only have one track apiece, which seems slightly odd, given their obvious strengths.

Per Husby

PIANO, ARRANGER

Gifted Norwegian with a fascination for larger-scale bop situations.

 Peacemaker Gemini GMCD 72 Husby; Bernt Anker Steen (t, flhn); Bjorn Johansen (ss, ts, bs); Harald Bergersen (as, ts); Knut Riisnaes (ts); Morten Iversen (b); Svein-Erik Gaardvik (d). 76.

A rare chance to hear Husby the pianist at the helm of one of his boppish mid-size groups, which gave some rein to his arranging skills but also offer the flexibility of a small group. There's a nice Parker medley at the outset and it closes with 'Confirmation' and then 'Lush Life'. None of these are charismatic soloists, but the music swings.

 If You Could See Me Now Gemini GMCD 89 Husby; Earl Gardner, Michael Leonhart (t); Jim Pugh (tb); Peter Gordon (frhn); Howard Johnson (tba); Jerome Richardson (ss); Chris Potter (as, ts); Frank Wess (ts); Ted Rosenthal (p); Bucky Pizzarelli (g); Jay Leonhart (b); Grady Tate (d); Karin Krog, Georgie Fame (d). 11/95.

An intriguing set of Tadd Dameron themes and Husby originals, the latter with lyrics by Chan Parker. The quality of the band is self-evident, but there's a so-whattish cast to much of it, a sense that this kind of material has been done better before.

Bobby Hutcherson (born 1941)

VIBRAPHONE, MARIMBA, PERCUSSION

Born in California; he was inspired by Milt Jackson and took up vibraphone in preference to piano. His distinctive style is intensely rhythmic and harmonically subtle. A major artist.

 The Al Grey & Dave Burns Sessions Lone Hill Jazz LHJR 10137 Hutcherson; Dave Burns (t); Al Grey (tb); Blue Mitchell (ts); Hugh Lawson, Floyd Morris, Earl Washington (p); Calvin Newborn (g); Herman Wright (b); Otis Finch, Eddie Williams Jr (d); Philip Thomas (perc). 1 & 11/62; 1/63.

The precocious Hutcherson was working with the Burns–Grey group when these sides were made. They were released on three Argo discs: Night Song, Snap Your Fingers and Having A Ball, all but the last of which are released entire. The material isn't presented chronologically; the earliest tracks coming from the live Snap Your Fingers which was taped at Birdland in January 1962. It contains some of the best of the set, with Hutcherson daring things that he might have hesitated to try in the studio. They don't always come off – there are some fudged passages on 'Nothing But The Truth' and 'Three Quarters Blues', but he generates an excitement which isn't so much in evidence on the other, aurally superior dates. As so often with Lone Hill releases, the historical interest somewhat outweighs the musical quality, but any fan of Hutcherson's will need to have this early glimpse of his burgeoning talent.

(*) The Kicker Blue Note 21437 Hutcherson; Joe Henderson (ts); Grant Green (g); Bob Cranshaw (b); Al Harewood (d). 12/63.

(*) Dialogue Blue Note 35586 Hutcherson; Freddie Hubbard (t); Sam Rivers (ss, ts, f); Andrew Hill (p); Richard Davis (b); Joe Chambers (d). 4/65.

Few have developed such a consistently challenging language for the instrument as Hutcherson. In the '60s he made a series of superb albums for Blue Note, the equal of any of the classic dates from that label. Their availability has been very intermittent, although some have recently returned fleetingly as limited editions. His first issued date for the label, Dialogue, returned to the catalogue in early 2002. It is arguably the most adventurous thing Bobby ever did, though he had not yet found his confidence as a composer as well as soloist. Three of the group assembled – Hutcherson, Hubbard and Davis – had been involved in Dolphy's epochal Out To Lunch! sessions, and they carry over some of the energy and excitement of that great record.

Virtually all the writing on Dialogue is by Hill, though there are two tracks by the shrewd and very effective Chambers, who whirls his way through a rhythmically challenging set. Andrew's 'Ghetto Lights' was to become a staple of his own sets in the next couple of years, but the really astonishing piece here is 'Les Noirs Marchant', an ungrammatical but evocative title for a somewhat surreal composition. Bobby's articulation is bright, fast and supremely confident, and his ability to move in the spaces between Chambers and Hill is consistently impressive.

The drummer's two pieces are very different one from the other. The title-track is a long, open-formed idea which sees Bobby switch to the softer-sounding marimba, while 'Idle While' is almost a lullaby, weirdly pitched but unexpectedly elegant. For a debut disc, Dialogue is impressively disciplined and reined-in.

There is very little grandstanding from a leader who in future occasionally indulged himself in high-wire escapades, and his colleagues seem right behind him. In the final analysis, though, this could also have been released as an Andrew Hill record. Whatever the attribution, good to have it back.

The Kicker wasn't made available until 1999. Even if Hutcherson's standing were thought to be marginal, the presence of Joe Henderson should have been enough to see this fine, imaginative session into the light of day. The saxophonist is the main composer and Bobby is represented only by the rather slight 'For Duke P.', a tribute to Blue Note's musical director. Joe's 'Kicker' and 'Step Lightly' are cracking tunes and blistering performances from all concerned. Hutcherson's fleet, ringing lines have rarely sounded more buoyant and persuasive, and it remains a mystery that this record should have been lain unreleased for 30 years.

(*) Components Blue Note 29027 Hutcherson; Freddie Hubbard (t); James Spaulding (as, f); Herbie Hancock (p, org); Ron Carter (b); Joe Chambers (d). 6/65.
 Happenings Blue Note 246530 Hutcherson; Herbie Hancock (p); Bob Cranshaw (b); Joe Chambers (d). 2/66.
* Stick Up! Blue Note 59378 Hutcherson; Joe Henderson (ts); McCoy Tyner (p); Herbie Lewis (b); Billy Higgins (d). 7/66.
 Oblique Blue Note 63833 As for Happenings, except omit Cranshaw; add Albert Stinson (b). 7/67.

Components continues the purple patch with a set of short lyrical themes. The title-track is a cracker, and 'Little B's Poem' was to become a modern classic, a softly articulated but totally convincing modern ballad. Anyone who hasn't encountered Hutcherson before might do well to start with this one, but just to get into training for the glories of Dialogue. Stick Up! opens with Ornette's 'Una Muy Bonita', demonstrating how much of Bobby's conception came from that source. The remainder of the set is closer to the harmonic experimentation that was shortly to become an orthodoxy. 'Verse' is masterly and 'Summer Nights' a lusciously coloured and textured tone-poem, shaded (as Hutcherson compositions almost always are) with obliquely related tonalities.

Happenings was Hutcherson's first quartet date and the balance of emphasis possibly favours Hancock, who brought in his own 'Maiden Voyage' and solos extensively elsewhere. It is, though, a great place to sample the vibist's art without the distraction of horns and Bobby plays thoughtfully as well as with fire on just about every cut. The next quartet reconvened the same line-up with the slightly anonymous Stinson in for Cranshaw. It's a likeable enough set, but doesn't really add anything to the language of the first. Hancock is more reserved, which gives Bobby extra room, but he doesn't exploit it to the full.

 Total Eclipse Blue Note 84291 Hutcherson; Harold Land (ts, f); Chick Corea (p); Reggie Johnson (b); Joe Chambers (d). 7/69.

Long one of our favourite Hutchersons, this marks the beginnings of his association with Harold Land, who brings a cool intelligence to the session, a quality that also brought him to the notice of Miles Davis. It also marks Bobby's real emergence as a composer; only Corea's 'Matrix' is a non-original. Pace the title, the mood is generally as bright as Hutcherson's shit-eating grin on the cover, though 'Pompeian' has some appropriately dark moments, as has, more obviously, the title-piece. Chambers is again a key component of the sound, but the pianist, making a name for himself at this point, is superb, if sometimes working at an angle to the charts. He certainly relishes the Latin feel of some of the tracks and brings his own open-hearted swing to proceedings.

* Now Blue Note 84333 Hutcherson; Harold Land (ts); Kenny Barron (p); Wally Richardson (g); Herbie Lewis (b); Joe Chambers (d); Rev Eugene McDaniels (v); LA Philharmonic. 10 & 11/69.

Now is an unusual item in the Hutcherson discography and overlooked for too long. The Rev. McDaniels (later plain Gene) is a charismatic vocalist who was also a formidable musician, but it's the interplay between Bobby and Land that really makes this set. Lewis and McDaniels collaborated on 'Hello To The Wind', and Land brought in the fine 'Black Heroes', which closes the set, but the real killer track is Lewis's 'The Creators', which every hard-bop/Blue Note fan, indeed every modern jazz fan, should sample. The Connoisseur reissue also includes Hutcherson's set from Blue Note Meets The LA Philharmonic.

 Solos / Quartet Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 425 Hutcherson solo and with McCoy Tyner (p); Herbie Lewis (b); Billy Higgins (d); John Koenig (bells). 9–10/81, 3/82.

The '80s saw something of a revival in Hutcherson's fortunes: uncompromised recording opportunities, sympathetic collaborators and, one suspects, a consequently renewed faith in his own abilities.

The quartet sessions, which include a sparkling 'Old Devil Moon' and 'My Foolish Heart', simply underline Tyner's astonishing eclecticism and adaptability. Those with longer memories will automatically track back to Hampton's interplay with Teddy Wilson in the classic Benny Goodman Quartets of 1936 and 1937. That good.

 For Sentimental Reasons Kind Of Blue 10020 Hutcherson; Renee Rosnes (p); Dwayne Burno (b); Al Foster (d). 11/06.

With most of Hutcherson's Landmark sessions of the '90s are currently hard to find or unavailable, there is another substantial gap in the discography. This is a mostly standards set which bespeaks fading powers. The quartet could hardly be more simpatico and together they reach into some interesting places on the two jazz pieces, Harold Land's 'Ode To Angela' and Benny Golson's 'Along Came Betty'. There are some nice flourishes on 'Jitterbug Waltz' as well, but for the most part this is a soft-centred and undemanding date that scarcely does justice to a great artist.

Also, in brief:

 Patterns Blue Note 33583. 3/68.

Blue Note didn't release this until 1980 and then made a mess of the notes on the reissue, so that the LP sides are now reversed. It's a relatively adventurous set, but not a classic.

 San Francisco Blue Note 28268. 7/70.

Better sessions were left gathering dust while this funky stuff (albeit with Harold Land on tenor) was being put out. It's OK.

(*) Montara Blue Note 84190. 4/75.

This is a delightful record, a sign that funky fusion jazz was possible without artistic compromise. Recording back home in LA and with a clutch of fine Latin players, the leader sounds easy and in high spirits.

 Un Poco Loco Koch 7868. 79.

Uncomfortably time-locked and awkwardly registered relative to Bobby's earlier records. The rock rhythms, bass guitar and electric piano shimmers are only superficially distracting, though, and B's take on the Bud Powell title-piece is a revelation.

 Little B's Poem EJ. 614. 8/80.

Generously proportioned two-CD live set with some fine playing, but slim pickings from Hutcherson's later period.

Ken Hyder (born 1946)

DRUMS, VOICE, OTHER INSTRUMENTS

The Scottish-born percussionist formerly led the pioneering folk-jazz group Talisker and more recently the Bardo State Orchestra. He studies shamanism in Siberia.

(*) Bear Bones Slam CD 247 Hyder; Tim Hodgkinson (lap steel, as, elec); Gendos Chamzyryn (v, p, perc, doshpulur). 96–00.
This is the project Hyder calls K-Space, a bold confrontation between his own remarkable spiritual improvisation and the Tuvan throat-singing of Chamzyryn. This is now a long-standing association and these amazing tracks are the result of what are effectively field recordings in a number of locations over nearly a five-year period. 'Nine-Eyed Horse-Alcohol' is a long improvisation, though most of the pieces are somewhat shorter and more precisely focused. They do not derive so much from harmonic or rhythmic ideas as from moods and feelings which are more particular than abstract. Hodgkinson's range of sounds and effects is an important component here, though one feels Hyder's controlling hand throughout. This music is completely sui generis. It requires time and patience and a state of evenly suspended attention to do it justice. Who knows but that here we may be catching glimpses of a whole new direction – not just cultural but philosophical – for improvisation?

Dick Hyman (born 1927)

PIANO, ORGAN, VOICE

He studied with Teddy Wilson but became a staff player at NBC in the '50s and was an early student/historian of classic jazz repertory.

(*) Stridemonster! Sackville SKCD2-2064 Hyman; Dick Wellstood (p). 86–87.
 Plays Fats Waller Reference RR-33 Hyman (p solo). 8/89.
 Plays Duke Ellington Reference RR-50 Hyman (p solo). 90.
Dick Hyman has had a pretty paradoxical career. In the '40s he was playing with both Charlie Parker and Benny Goodman. Working as a studio musician through much of the '50s and '60s, he also recorded novelty tunes, under various pseudonyms, as well as Scott Joplin's complete works. He loves early jazz, is an expert on the jazz piano tradition, can re-create pit-band orchestrations or ragtime arrangements to order – yet he was also one of the first to record an album of tunes played on prototype synthesizers.

His composer-dedicated records are unfailingly entertaining, if mixed in their profundities. Unfortunately, several have recently been lost to the deletions office. The Waller set wasn't one of his best: Hyman loves this music, but sometimes even he must feel that it sounds a little dated and, since he has little of Waller's genial uproar in his bones, he can't always bring it to life. Ellington also eludes him to some extent, since Duke's intimacies are just as personal to himself; but both records still have a degree of sophistication and elegance that set them some way above everybody's routine tribute record.

The Sackville disc restores a session which was previously issued on a Unisson LP and adds three tracks from a Toronto concert that took place only weeks before Wellstood's sudden death. Wellstood wasn't really a piano duet player, but Hyman is so clever at finding constructive ways around his partner's idiosyncrasies that the two of them make some marvellous music.

(*) Cheek To Cheek Arbors ARCD 19155 Hyman; Howard Alden (g); Bob Haggart (b). 6/95.
Hyman is not in the business of making grand statements and, for all his virtuosity and insuperable accomplishment, his records are cast as almost modest affairs – conversations with good friends or with like-minded masters. Cheek To Cheek is an enchanting mix of material: Thelonious Monk, John Lewis, Irving Berlin, Flip Phillips and more. The triologue with Alden and Haggart is delightfully underplayed, so a test-piece like 'Misterioso' (and who would ever have thought they'd hear Bob Haggart playing on this?) becomes charmingly restrained – it seems to glow, putting a new shine on Monk. Sometimes the bass parts aren't so helpful to the splendid guitar/piano interplay, but there's really nothing here to dislike.

(*) Just You, Just Me Sackville SKCD2-2054 Hyman; Ralph Sutton (p). 96.
Two of the greatest exponents of repertory around, on a set that includes gems by Waller, Willie the Lion, W. C. Handy and the Broadway composers. The two friends sound in great form and the to and fro of quotes and allusions is more fun than irritatingly knowing.

CORE COLLECTION

* Forgotten Dreams
Arbors ARCD 19248 Hyman; John Sheridan (p). 1/01.
At last, the Hyman album the world's been waiting for – Dick and John Sheridan tackle the buried legacy of novelty piano, one of the last undiscovered corners of the jazz tradition. Now that everyone from Reginald Robinson to Morten Gunnar Larsen has worked over the ragtime tradition, where next but the vast and almost untapped resources of the likes of Zez Confrey, Rube Bloom, Billy Mayerl and Willie Eckstein? Those last two don't figure here, but surely this one's crying out for a sequel already. Instead, they focus on Willie 'The Lion' Smith, Confrey, Bloom and Bob Zurke, with Bix's 'In A Mist' and W. C. Polla's 'Dancing Tambourine' to fill the gaps.This set works better than Hyman's other two-piano dates because it's less about improvising (which scarcely plays a role here) and more about the graceful juxtaposition of complementary parts. These are, rhythmically, carefully honed essays on very early swing and syncopation; harmonically, they're dense with detail; but the melodies are so direct and wholesome, naïve in a pre-modern way, that some ideal balance is created which makes the results neither too knowing nor too gauche. Handsomely recorded, these forgotten dreams are, in their way, a daring revival.

(*) If Bix Played Gershwin Arbors ARCD 19283 Hyman; Tom Pletcher (c); David Sager (tb); Dan Levinson (cl, Cmel); Vince Giordano (bsx); Bob Leary (g, bj, v); Ed Metz Jr (d). 1–3/03.
... since he never actually did, leave it to Hyman to create a situation where the Bix sound-alike cornet of Tom Pletcher (a good likeness, at least) is put to work on Gershwin tunes, in an instrumentation which follows that of the Bix & His Gang titles. Dan Levinson also invites the ghost of Frankie Trumbauer via use of the C-melody sax. As a one-off piece of repertory, it all works handsomely well – not a record to return to often, but a refreshing pause in more 'serious' listening.

Also, in brief:

() An Evening At The Cookery JRB 3007. 6/73.
Self-recorded on a cassette machine, an out-of-tune piano, and the usual pell-mell display of styles. What's not to like?

 The Piano Giants At Bob Haggart's 80th Birthday Party Arbors ARCD 19266. 3/94.
With Derek Smith and Ralph Sutton (p) and the new octogenarian bassist. Great fun but drummer Bobby Rosengarden is way too loud. Even for a party.

 Elegies, Mostly Gemini GMCD90. 95.
Beautiful duets with NHØP.

 Dick & Derek At The Movies Arbors ARCD 19197. 4/98.
Duets with Mr Smith and a chance to show off more piano styles than you knew existed.

Ole Jacob Hystad (born 1960)

TENOR SAXOPHONE

Norwegian bop-modernist.

 Touch Of Time Taurus TRCD 837 Hystad; Ben Besiakov (p); Sigurd Ulveseth (b); Stein Inge Brækhus (d). 3/97.
 Tune In, Take Out Taurus TRCD 854 Hystad; Ben Besiakov (p); Sigurd Ulveseth (b); Alex Riel (d). 02.
It's hard to pin down Hystad's bag. At times, in his higher register, he sounds not unlike Jackie McLean, but like so many Scandinavians of his generation he probably has stronger models closer to home. There's an attractive boppish swing to the earlier record, with Besiakov enjoying his comping and solo role to the full; the OJH quartet runs on fairly democratic lines and everyone gets to contribute. 'Joy Spring' and 'Prelude To A Kiss' are high-points on the first one. Second time round you find yourself listening for the veteran Riel, who's in great shape.

Susie Ibarra (born 1970)

DRUMS

This gifted Filipina has a distinctive freestyle.

(*) Home Cookin' Hopscotch HOP 1 Ibarra; Assif Tsahar (ts). 2 & 7/98.
* Radiance Hopscotch HOP 2 Ibarra; Charles Burnham (vn); Cooper-Moore (p, hp). 7/99.
 Flower After Flower Tzadik 7057 Ibarra; Wadada Leo Smith (t); Chris Speed (cl) Assif Tsahar (bcl); Cooper-Moore (p, f); Charles Burnham (vn): Pauline Oliveros (acc); John Lindberg (b). 99.
 Songbird Suite Tzadik 7702 Ibarra; Craig Taborn (p, elec); Ikue Mori (elec). 01.
Her roots would seem to be in the avant-garde of the '60s, but she already plays with a highly distinctive voice: a light, pattering articulation which often disguises its punch; a musicianly ability to play or imply melody on the kit; and an unerring ear for subtle pulses.

The duos with Assif are interleaved with eight 'Dream Songs', played at home on a recently acquired array of Afro-Asian 'little instruments'. Nine times out of ten, such pieces would be an annoying distraction, but these work very well, and in intriguing ways they anticipate the language of Radiance. An unusually constituted trio, it offers an even richer harmonic background for Ibarra's complex percussion. Burnham has long been an undervalued talent, and in tandem with the less familiar Cooper-Moore he creates an intriguing dialogue. The inclusion of alternative versions of 'Dreams' and 'Laughter', two sections of the opening suite, 'Radiance', suggests how inventive and responsive a player Ibarra is.

The next two unveil a quieter and more lyrical side. Flower After Flower consists of four substantial compositions, interspersed with short solo 'fractals' from Ibarra. The ensemble works best on 'Illuminations', dedicated to Smith, who dominates proceedings with his extraordinary tone and presence. 'The Ancients' pits the two clarinettists against one another, with Tsahar's brooding, melancholic sound steadily rising against Speed's more characteristic 'jazz clarinet'. Songbird Suite makes imaginative and tasteful use of electronics, though Ibarra's slightly wasted.

* Folkloriko Tzadik 7098 Ibarra; Wadada Leo Smith (t); Craig Taborn (p); Jennifer Choi (vn); Robert Rodriguez (perc). 04.
Very much in keeping with Tzadik's world/roots philosophy, this is Ibarra's attempt to explore the musical legacy of her Filipino upbringing. Musicologically, it's fascinating as she explores the ways in which different rhythmic philosophies generate the surface detail of her music, but it's also a deeply felt and emotionally satisfying musical performance that conjures up a cultural experience. The long suite 'Lakbay' is beautifully nuanced, with perfectly judged guest appearances by Smith, Taborn and Choi. 'Anitos' is a duet with Rodriguez, rawer in conception but a key work in understanding her sources.

 Drum Sketches Innova 677 Ibarra (d solo). 10/07.
This is always challenging territory, for listeners and players alike, but Ibarra sets about her programme with a will and for the most part takes all but the most impatient along with her. She's becoming more nuanced with each passing record so this also counts as an impressive step forward.

Also, in brief:

 Drum Talk Wobbly Rail 5. 1/98.
A valuable introduction to Ibarra, her Filipino roots and her teacher Denis Charles, who guides, steers and accompanies generously.

 Tone Time Wobbly Rail 14. 7/03.
Set of demanding but mostly very beautiful duos with bassist Mark Dresser.

Abdullah Ibrahim (born 1934)

PIANO, SOPRANO SAXOPHONE, CELLO, VOICE

He left South Africa after Sharpeville, settling first in Europe, then the US; converted to Islam in 1968. As Dollar Brand, he had been a member of the pioneering Jazz Epistles. Influenced by Ellington and Thelonious Monk, he has an utterly distinctive percussive style: rocking bass tone ostinati, stabbing right-hand figures.

 Duke Ellington Presents The Dollar Brand Trio Warners/Reprise 6111 Ibrahim; Johnny Gertze (b); Makaya Ntshoko (d). 2/63.

There is not yet any clear evidence of African roots and the abiding impression is of a forceful Monk disciple, clinched by 'Brilliant Corner', but edging towards a personal style, evolved out of Ellington. Duke went to hear him play at the insistence of Sathima Bea Benjamin, Brand's partner at the time. Duke was impressed enough to recommend him to Reprise. The set begins with 'Dollar's Dance', a richly textured idea over a rather thick rhythmic base. 'The Stride' and 'Jumping Rope' are the most Monkian tracks, while 'Kippie' and 'Uku Suku' point somewhat in the direction of future developments, with repeated patterns built over a firm bass vamp.

 African Sketchbook Enja ENJ 2026 Ibrahim (p, f solo). 5/69.
Much of the material here, including 'The Dream', 'The Aloe And The Wildrose' and 'Hamba Khale' (the last of these reprised at the end of the session), is familiar enough from the period. The playing is notably dark and chastened, but the engineers at Radio Bern have given him a big rich sound, with a lot of resonance round the flute part. Brand seems to be known as Xahur at this period, perhaps a transitional stage in his conversion.

(*) African Space Program Enja ENJ 2032 Ibrahim; Enrico Rava, Cecil Bridgewater, Ira Sullivan (t); Kiane Zawadi (tb); John Stubblefield (ts); Carlos Ward, Sonny Fortune (as, f); Roland Alexander (ts, hca); Hamiet Bluiett (bs); Cecil McBee (b); Roy Brooks (d). 11/73.
'Tintiyana' is magnificent, one of the finest of his compositions, and it's terrific to hear it presented with a larger ensemble like this. Brand had few opportunities in earlier years to perform with anything like a big band; sadly, when he did later, the results were very mixed. This, though, is an early classic and a welcome addition to the catalogue.

 Good News From Africa Enja ENJ 2048 Ibrahim; Johnny Mbizo Dyani (b, bells). 12/73.
This survives, though the later Echoes From Africa by the same duo seems to have gone for the moment. This was a fine collaboration, and Dyani is alternately monumental and fleet-footed. Sound-quality isn't as good as on the direct-to-disc Echoes, but it captures the essence of the set.

 The Journey Downtown 1002 Ibrahim; Don Cherry (t); Carlos Ward (as); Talib Rhynie (as, ob); Hamiet Bluiett (bs, cl); Johnny Mbizo Dyani (b); Ed Blackwell, Roy Brooks (d); John Betsch, Claude Jones (perc). 9/77.
This is a very valuable reissue of a record originally on Chiaroscuro and unusual in that it teams Brand with forward-looking Americans. Good luck or empathy put him across the path of Don Cherry and Hamiet Bluiett, both of whom moved in the direction of world jazz later as their careers advanced. It's striking how much the top end of Bluiett's baritone, a register he's often favoured, sounds like Ibrahim's own work on soprano. It's also striking how much like the younger Keith Jarrett the pianist is on this date; nothing to do with occasional forays on the straight saxophone but in the rolling vamps and swaying rhythms that were part of Jarrett's vocabulary at the time. Brand's long-form improvisations work in a very different way, relying more on repetition than Jarrett's, but the cross-fertilization would be interesting to track back to source. The set is valuable, too, for Ibrahim's work with Johnny Dyani and Carlos Ward, both of whom played an important role in his duos and groups.

The opening 'Sister Rosie' (Ibrahim on soprano) is rollicking good fun and one of the high-points of a slightly inconsistent set. 'Hajj' is Afro-misterioso, with the little-known Rhynie's oboe very prominent. The middle piece, 'Jabulani', had been better done before; this is a very muddy and congested piece. Indeed, the whole set reflects why Ibrahim has generally preferred to work alone or with a trio, at best a small group.

(*) Autobiography Elephant 1267 Ibrahim (p solo, f). 6/78.
It isn't quite true that Ibrahim cut himself free of his Monk and Ellington roots as soon as he came into his own voice. This live set from 1978, recently reissued, finds him revisiting 'Take The "A" Train' and 'Coming On The Hudson' and performing both of them unexpectedly straight. There are newer pieces on the set as well, and at one point Ibrahim switches to flute, which he plays with a quavery poignancy.

 Dollar Brand At Montreux Enja ENJ 3079 Ibrahim; Craig Harris (tb); Carlos Ward (as, f); Alonzo Gardner (b); Andre Strobert (d). 7/80.
Both his names are given on the cover, which is slightly strange. This is otherwise a very orthodox festival set of the period. Harris enlivens things considerably and one either loves Ward's plangent sound or is repelled by it. 'Tsakve' and 'The Homecoming Song' are morning-fresh but tinged with melancholy. Ibrahim's Enja catalogue has been much reduced, but this survives for the moment.

 Duke's Memories: The Definitive Black & Blue Sessions Black & Blue 945 Ibrahim; Carlos Ward (as, f); Rachim Ausur Sahu (b); Andre Strobert (d). 6–7/81.
Recorded live and in studios in Berlin and Stuttgart, this tour saw Ibrahim dive back into the Ducal catalogue for some fine performances of 'Star-Crossed Lovers', 'In A Sentimental Mood', 'Virgin Jungle', and 'Angelica' and 'Purple Gazelle', the latter pair beautifully medleyed. The working band of the time fitted Ibrahim's conception very well indeed, though it's questionable how well bassist and drummer knew Duke's charts. They seem more familiar with Abdullah's 'The Wedding' (the first and best of the live tracks), 'For Coltrane' and the Ellingtonian 'Black And Brown Cherries'. As often, Ibrahim doesn't prominently feature himself but steers the whole, much as his mentor did.

* Water From An Ancient Well Tiptoe 88812 Ibrahim; Dick Griffin (tb); Carlos Ward (as, f); Ricky Ford (ts); Charles Davis (bs); David Williams (b); Ben Riley (d). 10/85.
The association with Carlos Ward has been the most productive and sympathetic of Ibrahim's career. The saxophonist has a high, exotic tone that is ideally suited to his leader's conception. Working with Ward has reinforced Ibrahim's preference for song-like forms built over harmonically unvarying ostinati but has allowed him to develop a more abstract, improvisational feel, which reaches its peak here. This was made by Ibrahim's band Ekaya (the word means 'home'); an earlier, eponymous disc on Black Hawk has disappeared. Water is a carefully structured album with something of the feel of Ellington's Far East Suite, and most of the drama comes from the interplay between Ibrahim and the horns. It includes another heartfelt tribute to Sathima Bea Benjamin, 'Daughter Of Cape Town'.

(*) Knysna Blue Tiptoe 888816 Ibrahim (p solo). 9 & 10/93.
Frankly celebratory, and intended as a mystical reconsecration of post-apartheid South Africa as a country at the world's apex, between two great oceans and focusing the cultural energies of four continents. All this is probably too much freight for one piano album, and sometimes one feels Ibrahim is trying too hard to express the inexpressible, to catch the ineffable in a combination of heavy chords and floating melody lines. There is, though, no mistaking the joy with which it comes and the total identification in Ibrahim's mind of personal and political/cultural liberation. It is, very simply, an extended love song, and the closing Monk cover, 'Ask Me Now', is as nakedly personal and unguarded as Ibrahim has ever been.

CORE COLLECTION

 Yarona
Tiptoe 888820 Ibrahim; Marcus McLaurine (b); George Johnson (d). 1/95.
A truly magisterial performance by the 60-year-old, bringing the house down at Sweet Basil in New York City. He still hits the piano very hard, using the bass almost as a drone, alternating narrow intervals and often allowing the drummer considerable licence to range outside the metre. The left hand is relentless and, in the other sense, timeless, the melody lines stripped down and ritualized. 'Duke 88' once again acknowledges a personal debt. 'Nisa' is an exclamatory hymn to another, the womenfolk of South Africa. There is a reworking of 'African Marketplace' and a concert outing for 'Stardance', one of the lovelier themes from the Chocolat soundtrack. The love song 'Cherry' (not, as one critic assumed, a tribute to the trumpeter) shows his more lyrical side.

(*) Cape Town Flowers Tiptoe 888 826 Ibrahim; Marcus McLaurine (b); George Gray (d). 97.
As Hans-Jürgen Schaal perceptively points out in his liner-note, Ibrahim is above all a great storyteller. These 11 narratives in jazz take the story on a step in time and in the context of a free country. Few artists have been as relentlessly consistent in style as Ibrahim and yet as endlessly changing. What's obvious here is that some of the anger and some of the sense of loss have already faded from his music. This, on something like 'Joan – Cape Town Flower' in particular, is the work of a man reconciled to his world, not complacent, still questioning, but certainly not in the throes of alienation. It is arguably Ibrahim's most peaceful album.

(*) Cape Town Revisited Enja/Tiptoe TIP 888 836 2 Ibrahim; Feya Faku (t); Marcus McLaurine (b); George Gray (d). 12/97.
Dominated by stunning performances of 'Tintinyanna', 'Water From An Ancient Well' and the jazz suite 'Cape Town To Congo Square', this is a summation of much of Ibrahim's musical experience and exploration over the last 20 years. Playing at Spier Estate in Cape Town and with Feya Faku on three tracks echoing the sound of Hugh Masekela all those years before, it is both the most backward-looking and one of the most sanguinely optimistic and exploratory of Ibrahim's recent discs. The sound is very good for a live recording, very present and alert.

 Ekapa Lodumo Tiptoe 888 840 Ibrahim; NDR Big Band; Dieter Glawischnig (cond). 6/00.
The orchestra is well-drilled and contains some excellent soloists, but the playing is somewhat barren, and Ibrahim's own contribution sounds ever-flatter on subsequent hearings. 'African Market' has some fine moments, largely because it's allowed to breathe a little, but the rest has a stifled quality.

Also, in brief:

(*) Ancient Africa /  Fats, Duke & The Monk Sackville SKCD 3048 / 3049. 2/73.
Recorded in one long session and originally released as Sangoma and African Portraits, with no obvious reason for the reordering of tracks here. The suite 'Fats, Duke & The Monk' helps show how far he's moved away from their sphere and into his own language. 'Bra Joe From Kilimanjaro' reappears, as do 'Aloe And The Wild Rose', 'Kippie' and 'Xamba Khale'.

 Recorded Live 1978 Elephant 3308. 78.
Exactly what it says on the tin.

* Best Of Abdullah Ibrahim /  Cape Town Songs: The Very Best Of Abdullah Ibrahim Masingita 5839 / Nascente 414. 76–90, 63–91.
It's pretty clear where our recommendation lies here. Misleading datelines aside, Best Of puts the emphasis on the early classics and, while the sound isn't always pristine, there isn't a single dud track. The other album is misleading in that it merely trawls the Enja output, which doesn't mean it's not worthy, just not quite a rounded picture.

 Zimbabwe Enja ENJ 4056. 5/83.
Zimbabwe is a curious set, unusually low-key and laid-back.

 African Symphony Enja ENJ 9410. 98–01.
Reprises material from African Suite, but with a new prelude written by Daniel Schnyder. Not remotely symphonic and, despite some lovely playing, torpedoed by its own pretentious premise.

 Re:Brahim: Abdullah Ibrahim Remixed Enja/Justin Time 3319. 63–91.
Not the dance/club album you might have feared, but rather another useful career survey. Great cover, fine sound.

ICP Orchestra

GROUP

Instant Composers Pool is the name common to a regularly convened Dutch-based improvising ensemble and the label established in 1967 by Misha Mengelberg and Han Bennink.

 Herbie Nichols/Thelonious Monk Bvhaast 026 Toon De Gouw (t); Wolter Wierbos, George E. Lewis (tb); Steve Lacy (ss); Michael Moore (cl, as); Paul Termos (as); Ab Baars (ts, ss, cl); Sean Bergin (ts); Misha Mengelberg (p); Ernst Reijseger (clo); Maurice Horsthuis (vla); Larry Fishkind (tba); Han Bennink (d). 84–87.
A larger-scale version of the tributes which Mengelberg, Lacy and others recorded for Soul Note at much the same time, this highly coloured and generous programme makes light of the difficulties in both composers' work. Monk tributes have become commonplace, but Baars, Moore and Wierbos are soloists with an idiosyncratic accent, and Lewis appears on a few tracks for an extra brassiness. Mengelberg and Bennink, the most practised of in-to-out rhythm sections, make Monk's rhythmic eccentricities their own property, too. But the Nichols tracks are more interesting, since his tunes are less familiar, and the larger group – which includes Termos, Horsthuis, Bergin and Lacy – lends a firmer substance to music which is difficult to characterize.

 Bospaadje Konijnehol 1 + 2 ICP 028/029 Evert Hekkema (t); Wolter Wierbos (tb); Ab Baars (ts, cl); Michael Moore (as, cl); Misha Mengelberg (p); Tristan Honsinger, Ernst Reijseger (clo); Ernst Glerum (b); Han Bennink (d). 11/90, 11/91.
A fascinating pair of sets, now available together, that sees the ICP Orchestra exploring a range of vernacular musics – polka, folk song, marches – in the context of improvisation. Much of what one hears sounds quite orderly, but there is an underlying freedom and no sign of constraint. Mengelberg, as always, is a big influence and it is he who seems to steer the most precarious line between freedom and strict control.

 Jubilee Varia hatOLOGY 528 Thomas Heberer (t); Wolter Wierbos (tb); Ab Baars (cl, ts); Michael Moore (cl, as); Misha Mengelberg (p); Ernst Reijseger, Tristan Honsinger (clo); Ernst Glerum (b); Han Bennink (d). 11/97.
* Oh, My Dog! ICP 040 As above, except omit Reijseger; add Mary Oliver (vn, vla). 6/01.
Not quite a 'new generation' of the orchestra, but a few new faces, and plenty of new ideas to go with them. The hatOLOGY record suffers a bit from the first half, comprising the title-suite: while the Mengelberg–Bennink duo which opens it is a delight, the rest seems a bit strained and ordinary. Mengelberg's 'Jealousy' suite is much more engaging. Everything this group does is going to be fragmented, and here it works slightly against them overall.

No such problem with the subsequent Oh, My Dog! The opening four-minute improvisation, 'Write Down Exactly', is a little miracle of nine people making a seemly racket without getting in each other's way. Baars pays peculiar homage to Charles Ives with 'A Close Encounter With Charles's Country Band', while Mengelberg's 'A La Russe' starts as a stately Russian folk tune before gradually curdling into the mildest of dissonance. Michael Moore, whose piped, astringent delivery is a neat counter to Baars, brings in 'Ham On Air', which pirouettes between horn-lines of trenchant melancholy and string and drum parts that savagely undermine the equilibrium of the music. The string-players are, indeed, crucial to the Orchestra's sound, scurrying around the edges or howling antiphonal responses to the horns. For once, Bennink is given superb studio sound, which affirms what a master he is – in complete control, even as he tinkers at the edge of chaos.

(*) Aan & Uit ICP 042 As above. 11–12/03.
Nearly all Mengelberg pieces this time. 'Picnic', in six parts, is a day out in the country which works his customary magic, alternating between what sound like random acts of chaos and detailed chamber music without a perceptible stagger. 'Tijd Voor De Quadrille' is a solemn dance. Hoagy Carmichael's 'Barbaric' (how did they think of doing this?) is the Orchestra's take on the end of the first Jazz Age, and it's brusque and melancholy. Heberer's 'Let's Climb A Hill' is in the spirit.

 Weer Is Een Dag Voorbij ICP 043 As above, except omit Wierbos. 6/05.
Another resolutely original and thoughtful set, with some of the most interesting solo work for years. There is, however, something of a sameness to the material, in the sense that even a seasoned ICP fan mightn't know which record this was of the last two or three. A minor quibble in the circumstances. The smaller-group things, notably 'Mistrimar', which gives new gal Oliver a starring role, are more engaging than the rest.

Klaus Ignatzek (born 1954)

PIANO

German-born, he works a conventional post-bop idiom.

(*) The Answer! Candid CCD 79534 Ignatzek; Claudio Roditi, Gustavo Bergalli (t); Jean-Louis Rassinfosse (b); Jorge Rossy (d). 12/92.
Ignatzek has immersed himself so completely in the idioms of Horace Silver, Bill Evans, Sonny Clark and Wynton Kelly as to claim almost apostolic understanding of the roots of hard bop. For three decades, he has produced a steady stream of rather unconvincing pastiche that may sound good in a club setting but which seems a dull option when set against a random sample of late-'50s Blue Notes. That said, The Answer! is a tight, well-disciplined set with a minimum of fuss. It has some sharp arrangements that make maximum use of the two horns and exploit the more percussive side of this saxophoneless band.

 Return Voyage Candid CCD 79716 As above, except omit Rossy; add Jay Ashby (tb); Adam Cruz (d). 10/93.
 All Systems Go Candid CCD 79738 As above, except omit Ashby, Cruz; add Chip White (d). 94.
There's an air of dogged seriousness about these records. The group sets about playing Ignatzek's themes with admirable concentration and exactness. The results are, as ever, impressive rather than moving. Ashby adds a looser, more anarchic edge to Return Voyage but no sign that he's to be a permanent member of the line-up. The first album's the stronger as a result and 'An Oscar For Gigi' and 'Calling Mr Gillespie' (which anticipates Silent Horns) are among the best things in Klaus's catalogue.

 Silent Horns Candid CCD 79729 Ignatzek; Claudio Roditi, Gustavo Bergalli (t); Jean-Louis Rassinfosse (b); Jorge Rossy (d). 94.
Ignatzek seems to like this curious instrumentation, and there's certainly some élan about this homage to deceased bebop trumpeters. If only Bergalli and Roditi were more individual than proficient, the music might be genuinely challenging, but what tends to emerge is a series of skilful set-pieces rather than an absorbing record.

 Live Acoustic Music 319.1097.21 Ignatzek; Claudio Roditi, Gustavo Bergalli (t); Jean-Louis Rassinfosse (b); Chip White (d). 10/95.
Now on a new label, Ignatzek continues to work prolifically. The live album by the quintet goes off at a furious pace with 'Quasi-Modal', and though it rarely stirs the blood beyond the expected muscle-flexing, it's a group which here makes the most of its collective chops, even if the material offered by the leader isn't very inspiring.

 In-Tandem Nagel Heyer 2062 Ignatzek; Peter Weniger (sax); Martin Wind (b); Hans Dekker (d); Susanne Menzel (v). 2 & 3/05.
An admirable professional, Ignatzek just keeps on keeping on. There are other things in intervening years but mostly they came and went again with barely a splash. There's nothing here that will surprise unduly and the machine-like precision does pall after a while, but lovers of orthodox hard bop delivered without frills will enjoy these records for what they have in them. A subsequent Nagel Heyer called Seasons is attributed to Menzel first. She's a pleasant enough performer but scarcely one to rewrite the history books. Ignatzek has also recorded for the label with Claudio Roditi.

Also, in brief:

(*) Primal Sound Acoustic Music 319.1209.2. 4/99.
Anca Parghel puts a bit of blood into Ignatzek's often mechanical situations, although she's not the most immediately appealing of singers.

 Reunion /  Springdale Acoustic Music 319.1084.2 / 319.1166.2. 6/95; 6 & 7/98.
Duos with Dorian Poser (vib); neat, dovetailed interplay; any pleasure comes not from surprise but from professional inevitability.

() Obrigado Acoustic Music 319.1113.2. 6/96.
A duo with Martin Wind (b). It benefits from his big tone, but the whole thing is too long and only appealing in a lightweight way.

Nikki Iles (born 1963)

PIANO

British composer: yet to deliver a definitive statement.

 Veils Symbol SR 2002020201 Iles; Stan Sulzmann (ss, ts); Mike Outram (g); Mick Hutton (b); Anthony Michelli (d). 2/02.
(*) Everything I Love Basho SRCD 5-2 Iles; Duncan Hopkins (b); Anthony Michelli (d). 1/02.
The quintet record is a good but slightly diffident showcase for Iles's writing. All bar one are her originals, and they're marked by episodic melodies, chord sequences which suggest the term 'writerly' and structures which set specific if not exactly insurmountable challenges for the players. Sulzmann is a regular duet partner with the pianist and he can get inside her ideas without sullying his essentially soft tone. Outram sounds as if he's going to get nasty on the opening 'Beauteous Beast', but it never really happens. That may be the weakness of the record – everyone behaves a little too politely.

The trio record is the more recent issue, although it was actually recorded a month earlier, in Montreal. It's a piano fan's programme, with compositions by John Taylor, Bill Evans and Enrico Pieranunzi in the set-list, and Nikki modestly offering only two of her own tunes. Michelli plays a lot more aggressively, oddly enough, than he does on the quintet date, at times too much so, but it puts a useful kick into the music. Iles likes to play melodies, but they do sometimes come out in paragraphs as if she has a problem with continuous flow.

Ilmiliekki Quartet

GROUP

An eclectic mix of free jazz and other forms.

(*) March Of The Alpha Males TUM CD 005 Verneri Pohjola (t, melodica); Tuomo Prättälä (p); Antti Lötjönen (b); Olavi Louhivuori (d); Jaska Lukkarinen (perc). 6/03.
Grounded in strong melodic ideas, this young group never seems to stretch for effect and never allows its undoubted energy to get in the way of intelligent playing. Their aim is to offer a place where all styles seem to coincide in fruitful tension, a thoroughly romantic notion. The opening 'ICO' by the pianist and the title-track are the two representative cuts.

Chie Imaizumi (born 1979)

COMPOSER, ARRANGER

Made a reputation as a pianist/organist in her native Japan but has more recently turned to arranging, encouraged by her friend Greg Gisbert.

(*) Unfailing Kindness Capri 74081 Greg Gisbert, Ron Miles (t, flhn); Alex Heitlinger (tb); John Gunther (ss, as, f, didjeridu); Peter Sommer (ss, ts, f, cl); Gary Smulyan (bs, bcl); Jeff Jenkins (p, org); Mike Abbott (g); Mark Simon (b); Paul Romaine (d); Mimy Fiaindratovo (perc); Jeremy Ragsdale (v). 2/06.
Is she the new Toshiko Akiyoshi? They're pretty different as musical personalities, but the comparison is bound to stick, given Chie's background. It's not clear whether she intends to give up performing in favour of composition and arrangement, but it's a pity that we don't even get a flavour of her keyboard work on this superb Western debut. All the charts are originals and they range widely from the buoyant, Caribbean-tinged 'A Change For The Better', to the funky 'The More The Merrier', to the breezy strut of 'Round And Round' and the rhythmic subtlety of the title-track. There's a strong autobiographical streak to these charts, with the long 'Adversity' seeming to make a clear personal statement, while 'Lonely ...', the solitary ballad and arguably the weakest cut, is inspired by the rigours of touring. Soft-centred though the latter track and the closing vocal 'Another Day' are, they do also suggest a musician who is going to mature quickly and find ways of marrying technique – which she has by the bucket – to a more expressive idiom.

IMI Kollektief

GROUP

Multi-national outfit which comes on like a latter-day version of Blue Note's avant-garde heyday.

 Snug As A Gun Clean Feed CF059 Jean-Marc Charmier (t, flhn); Alipio Cavalho Neto (ts); Els Vandeweyer (vib); João Hasselberg (b); Rui Gonçalves (d); Paulo Matricó (zabumba, v). 06.
It's projects like this that might lead you to conclude that modern jazz, or certainly that line that led out of the '60s explorations of Dolphy, Hill, Hutcherson and others, is in very good shape indeed and far from exhausted. There's a fresh-minted, raucous quality to these superb tracks that would confirm almost at once that you weren't listening to some lost masterpiece from the famous jazz marque of all. Rudy Van Gelder would be delighted with the sound, which is crisp, in your face and nicely detailed. The charts sometimes betray something of de facto leader Neto's Brazilian background – the other members are French and Belgian with a Portuguese rhythm section – but he offers a very modern interpretation of those dancing rhythms. The opening 'Prof Boum Boum', by the trumpeter, is a bright and bouncy thing, slightly reminiscent of some of Louis Sclavis's folklore imaginaire themes, which combine jazz, folk, circus and bal musette.

By far the most interesting player on the set, Vandeweyer also emerges as the most interesting composer, with the oddly melancholy 'Fucked Up' and the genre-shuffling 'Hole In My Sole'. The title-piece comes from a line of Nobel prizewinner Seamus Heaney. The 8/4 feel is intriguing and the interplay of horns excellent. Neto's 'Thierry Na Caatinga' (the only track to feature Matricó) sounds a little fettered in the studio environment but must be a cooker live.

Implicate Order

GROUP

American free trio take on various guests.

(*) Sound Quest Cadence CJR 1140 Steve Swell (tb); Martin Speicher (as); Ursel Schlicht (p); Ken Filiano (b); Lou Grassi (d). 3/01.
 At Seixal Clean Feed CF001 As above, except omit Schlicht, Speicher; add Paulo Curado (as, ss); Rodrigo Amado (bs). 3/01.
Swell says that 'the whole point of naming this group after physicist David Bohm's theory of the same name was to ...' – but if you want to know the rest, you'll have to get the CD and read the notes. Less conceptually minded souls should know that the music is unfettered, leaderless, ego-free improvisation. Since both discs are built up into a quintet by 'local' guests, circumstances tend to dictate how they're going to sound from place to place. The Cadence set (recorded in Germany) is slightly taken over by Schlicht, since she had the temerity to require the group to play one of her compositions, although it does open with a five-minute bass solo. Nevertheless, the two Germans are the most impressive performers on the disc, bringing a rigour (and, in Speicher's case, a fury) which the Americans aren't quite privy to. The Portuguese session is mostly by the trio, although Amado and Curado arrive for the final two pieces. It sounds like a characteristic festival set, plenty of free showmanship, lots of bravado, though missing a degree of restraint which might have taken matters a step further.

Improvisors Pool

GROUP

A relatively ad hoc ensemble with a familiar personnel.

 Backgrounds For Improvisers FMP CD 75 Axel Dörner (t); Sam Rivers (ss, ts, f); Tina Wrase (ss); Tilmann Dehnhard (ts, f); Felix Wahnschaffe (as); Claas Willecke (bs); Alexander von Schlippenbach (p); Horst Nonnenmacher (b); Johannes Bockholt-Dams (d). 4/95.
The intention here seems to have been to provide Rivers with an open-ended improvising opportunity. Schlippenbach is co-featured, but it's very much the saxophonist's day. He plays with rare majesty and if the 'backgrounds' are stark rather than inviting, he doesn't let it staunch his unique lyricism.

Peter Ind (born 1928)

DOUBLE BASS

Born in Middlesex, he studied bass in the '40s and was a Tristano pupil in NY before moving to California. A clubowner in London in the '80s and '90s.

 Looking Out / Jazz Bass Baroque Wave CD 111 Ind; Ronnie Ball, Sal Mosca (p); Joe Puma, Al Schackman, Martin Taylor, Tony Barnard (g); Dick Scott, John Richardson (d); Sheila Jordan (v). 4/58–8/98.
 Alone Together Wave CD 036 Ind; Rufus Reid (b). 11/98.
 Live At The 606 Club, London Wave CD 042 Ind; Michel Goldberg (ss); Tony Barnard (g); Rod Youngs (d). 01.
The earliest disc is a curious hybrid of home-made New York recordings and much later pieces with British players. It has a scrapbook element which feels like something important to its maker but is difficult for outsiders to get involved with; that said, there are a few exceptional performances, such as Mosca's take on 'Love Me Or Leave Me' and an outstanding Sheila Jordan vocal on 'Yesterdays'. The bass-duet album will also be of greater interest to bassists than to anyone else, but in its way it is beautifully done. In what was designed as a nod of affection to Milt Hinton, the two men take a conservative but sonorous path through standards, bebop tunes and – in an acknowledgement of Ind's own roots – '317 East 32nd Street'. The fine Club 606 date was organized under the auspices of Peter's Bass Clef International. It has an appropriately 'summit conference' feel, relaxed but serious and businesslike.

Independence Hall Jazz Band

GROUP

Repertory trad under the leadership of Doug Finke.

 Chicago Rhythm Stomp Off CD 1371 Jon-Erik Kellso, Duke Heitger (t); Doug Finke, Jim Beebe (tb); Paul Reichlin (tba); Orange Kellin (cl); Paul Asaro (p); Paul Scavarda (bj, g, uke, v); Vince Giordano (b, tba); Rob Garcia (d). 11/00–1/01.
(*) Louis: The Oliver Years Stomp Off CD 1384 As above except omit Scavarda, Garcia, Giordano, Beebe; add Bob Sundstrum (bj); Mike DeMonte (d). 8/02.
 Favorites Stomp Off CD 1386 Dan Barrett (c); Jon-Erik Kellso (t); Doug Finke (tb); Pete Reichlin (tba); Dan Levinson (cl, Cmel, v); Paul Asaro (p); Scott Anthony (bj, g); Chris Tyle (d, c, cl, v). 11/02.
Another repertory band from Stomp Off, and not one of our favourites. The pick of the three is the middle set, dedicated to the kind of material which Louis Armstrong played during his King Oliver years, with particularly fine versions of 'Chattanooga Stomp' and others. The other two are very well done, but so many of these kinds of sessions have been undertaken – involving the same musicians, too – that, good as they are, the music is starting to sound like routine.

Indo-British Ensemble

GROUP

Intriguing one-off project devised by record producer Mark Sutton and Victor Graham with the intention of blending jazz and ragas.

 Curried Jazz Harkit CD 8235 Leon Calvert (t); Kenny Wheeler (flhn); Ray Swinfield (f); Dev Kumar (sitar); Jeff Clyne (b); Bill Eyden, Art Morgan (d); Chris Karan (tabla); Sitara Kumar (tamboura). 69.
Basic principle of English cuisine: if you don't know what to do with it ... curry it. Roughly contemporary with John Mayer's Indo-Jazz Fusion, this actually takes the crossover idea a step or two further, with just four slowly unfolding tracks that manage to find some middle ground between jazz and Indian classical improvisation. There are some lovely moments, one of them courtesy of Wheeler's flugelhorn, but the masala is too raw and varied to work at every level. Originally released on the Australian-based Music For Pleasure label.

Keith Ingham (born 1942)

PIANO

Born in London, he was a familiar face in British mainstream in the '60s and early '70s but moved to NY in 1978, originally as an accompanist to Susannah McCorkle.

 The Music Of Victor Young Jump JCD12-16 Ingham; Bob Reitmeier (p); Frank Tate (b); Vernell Fournier (d). 3/89.
 Out Of The Past Sackville SKCD 2-3047 Ingham (p solo). 11–12/90.
(*) Donaldson Redux Stomp Off CD 1237 Ingham; Peter Ecklund (c); Dan Barrett (tb); Bobby Gordon, Billy Novick (cl); Loren Schoenberg (ts); Vince Giordano (bsx, tba, b); Marty Grosz (g, bj, v); Greg Cohen (b); Hall Smith, Arnie Kinsella (d). 6–11/91.
Ingham is the archetypal Englishman in New York (though the solo album was cut mainly in Toronto). He plays a history of jazz piano with unflinching finesse, taste and skill, and unearths tunes that few would think of trying. The 18 tracks on Out Of The Past cover composers from Richard M. Jones to Barry Harris, and resuscitate such cadavers as 'Just Like A Butterfly' and Rube Bloom's 'Truckin''. It is all beautifully played, the variations improvised with rag-like precision, but the unobtrusive nature of Ingham's talent is eventually frustrating. After a dozen tracks one wonders if there ought to be greater difference between such diverse sources than Ingham allows, and his version of, say, Jimmy Yancey's 'At The Window' is very pale next to the composer's own. The Jump CD is also all politesse, one of a series of composer-dedicated sessions: everyone sticks very closely to the melodies and it seldom seems like more than mood music. Very gracefully done, though, and musicians may like to hear some neglected melodies ('Golden Earrings', 'A Love Like This', 'Got The South In My Soul') played straight.

The Stomp Off album is another matter, since it documents the further adventures of Marty Grosz in hot dance music. The songs are all by Walter Donaldson, and some of this archaeology is almost preposterously rarefied. Grosz does his usual update of Ukulele Ike at the microphone, and the band play a lilting approximation of old-time hot music with a few knowing modern licks. Ingham is co-credited as leader and no doubt approves of all the fun.

 Music From The Mauve Decades Sackville SKCD2-2033 Ingham; Bobby Gordon (cl); Hal Smith (d). 4/93.
 Just Imagine ... Stomp Off CD1285 Ingham; Peter Ecklund (c, t); Dan Barrett (tb); Dan Levinson (cl, Cmel); Scott Robinson (cl, ts, bs, bsx); Marty Grosz (g, v); Greg Cohen (b); Joe Hanchrow (tba); Arnie Kinsella (d). 4/94.
 New York Nine: Volumes 1 & 2 Jump JCD12-18 / 19 Ingham; Randy Reinhart (c, tb); Dan Barrett (t, tb); Phil Bodner (cl, as); Scott Robinson (ss, ts, bs); James Chirillo (g); Vince Giordano (bsx, b); Murray Wall (b); Arnie Kinsella (d). 5/94.
(*) The Back Room Romp Sackville SKCD2-3059 Ingham; Peter Ecklund (t); Scott Robinson (cl, ss, bs); Harry Allen (ts); James Chirillo (g); Murray Wall (b); Jackie Williams (d). 1/95.
Music From The Mauve Decades covers 1900–1920 in terms of material. Some of it is a little too musty, and the normally reliable Smith doesn't always sound appropriate in some of the tunes: a simple duet between Gordon and Ingham might have worked better. But there are still some exquisite moments, such as the lulling 'Just A-Wearyin' For You'. The remaining discs are all by bigger ensembles, and they whistle in several of the top repertory players in the field. Just Imagine ... is mostly infectious fun, though a shade below the Walter Donaldson set listed above. The two New York Nine albums slip between the '20s and '30s without any pain, and though the band could still use a little more heat on the fiercer tunes, the playing is impeccably crafted. Best of them is perhaps The Back Room Romp, which concentrates on the small-band swing repertory of the '30s. They rescue a couple of Rex Stewart rarities in the title-piece and 'San Juan Hill', and Allen continues his progress from Ben Webster and Paul Gonsalves to something approaching an individual style. Ecklund is irreproachable. Ingham is often content to stay in the shadows on these records, with a calm hand on the arranging tiller.

(*) Going Hollywood Stomp Off CD1323 Ingham; Peter Ecklund (c, t); Joel Helleny (tb); Vince Giordano (tba); Scott Robinson (cl, ss, as, ts, bs, bsx); Dan Block (cl, ss); Andy Stein (vn); Marty Grosz (g, bj, v); Brian Nalepka, Greg Cohen (b); Arnie Kinsella (d). 5–9/96.
 A Star Dust Melody Sackville SKCD 2-2051 Ingham; Randy Reinhart (t); Bobby Gordon (cl); Scott Robinson (reeds); James Chirillo (g); Greg Cohen (b); Arnie Kinsella (d). 8–11/97.
 We're In The Money Sackville SKCD2-2055 Ingham; Peter Ecklund (t); Bobby Gordon (cl); Chris Flory (g); Murray Wall (b); Steve Little (d). 10/99.
Going Hollywood sees Ingham and Grosz pal up with their 'Hot Cosmopolites' to excellent, if by now familiar, effect. Grosz digs up spectacular forget-me-nots such as 'The Wedding Of The Painted Doll' and 'The Woman In The Shoe', and the ensemble hit the right note of reverent irreverence.

The earlier Sackville album is a more respectful saunter through the Hoagy Carmichael songbook. Gordon gets a starring role, and although some of it is rather plain-spoken, the quality of the melodies endures. Ingham says in his note to We're In The Money that he 'wanted to get away from the contemporary stereotype where jazz is promoted either as "mood music" or "raw authenticity"', although that pretty much sums up his approach to every record listed under his name. So it's a lightly swinging rhythm section, a couple of horns that are good at old-fashioned melodies, and material that mixes the slightly familiar with the obscure. It's a little sedate.

 Music Music Everywhere Spotlite SPJ 577 Ingham; Jim Richardson (b); Bobby Worth (d). 5/03.
Some solos, mostly trio. The concept is, again, anti-concept, and that gives Ingham free rein on the tunes: Quincy Jones's 'For Lena And Lenny', 'Moon And Sand', 'Monk's Mood'. In its way, impeccable.

International Sweethearts Of Rhythm

GROUP

All-female group (plus Julian Dash), founded in Mississippi in 1939 and starred for the following decade.

 Hot Licks Sounds Of Yesteryear 692 Ray Carter, Tiny Davis, Johnny Mae Stansbury (t); Ina Belle Byrd, Helen Jones Wood (tb); Grace Bayron, Violet Burnside, Rosalind Cron, Julian Dash, Helen Saine, Willie Mae Wong (reeds); Anna Mae Winburn (p, g, v); Carline Ray (b); Pauline Braddy (d); and others. 5/44–6/46.
The Sweethearts always attract Some Like It Hot and lesbian jokes, but the group's first importance was as one of the first racially integrated ensembles to achieve acceptance in the South. It may also have had a role in breaking down taboos about female homosexuality, though that's more questionable. They were a terrific ensemble, formed as the Swinging Rays Of Rhythm at Piney Woods Country Life School, where poor children were given an education and training. They recorded very little in the studio, but these rare live dates give a good sense, albeit in shaky sound, of what an exciting live proposition they could be. A footnote, sure, but a fascinating slice of Americana.

Aaron Irwin (born 1978)

ALTO SAXOPHONE

Teaches and performs in New York.

 Into The Light Fresh Sound New Talent FSNTCD 245 Irwin; Rich Perry (ts); Ryan Scott (g); Matt Clohesy (b); Greg Ritchie (d). 8/05.

Those who argue that the traditional standards repertory is worn out and needs to be replaced with contemporary pop might listen to the interplay between Irwin and Perry on 'All The Things You Are', which opens Into The Light. With Scott cleverly unpeeling the structure behind them, they make it sound fresh as paint. To be frank, the album's best when Perry's around, though Aaron does well as sole horn on the closing 'Ugly Beauty'. Another successful FSNT date.

Iskra 1903/1912

GROUP

Improvisation trio founded in the late '60s and named after Lenin's newspaper The Spark. Paul Rutherford was the guiding light, but Philipp Wachsmann replaced Derek Bailey after the group's first phase.

* Chapter One: 1970–1972 /  Buzz Soundtrack Emanem 4301 3CD / 4066 Rutherford; Derek Bailey (g); Barry Guy (b). 70–72; 71.

The early performances documented on Chapter One are typical of the group's highly concentrated output. More intensely focused and, residually at least, more jazz-inflected than either AMM or the more radical excursions of the Spontaneous Music Ensemble, Iskra 1903 represent a wonderfully challenging auditory experience. So densely interwoven are the lines and so convincingly vocalized is Rutherford's tone that one almost feels one is listening to a passionate discourse, perhaps one of those unrecorded speeches Lenin made from the back of a truck in the months before the Bolshevik Revolution. The sound is mostly very clear and faithful, though there are a couple of tracks which sound muddied and uncertain. Buzz Soundtrack is a less essential purchase and not at all typical of the group's output. The music was written for a film by Michael Grigsby and once again underlines Rutherford's affection for blues and jazz, though there is very little overt jazz phrasing to be heard.

(*) Sequences 72 & 73 Emanem 4018 Kenny Wheeler (t, flhn); Paul Rutherford (tb, cond); Malcolm Griffiths, Paul Nieman, Geoff Perkins (tb); Dick Hart (tba); Trevor Watts (ss, as); Evan Parker (ss, ts); Dave White (as, bs, bcl); Howard Riley (p); Derek Bailey (g); Barry Guy (b); Tony Oxley (live elec); Norma Winstone (v). 9/72, 10/73, 5/74.

An ambitious large-scale version of the ensemble known as Iskra 1912 (the respective 'dates' also refer to numbers of personnel). Rutherford conducts the ensemble on the first and last pieces and plays unaccompanied on the short bridge. These were presumably not intended to be heard or released together, but there is a curious continuity to the performance as heard on CD. The ensemble sound is rich and strange. Bailey's separately recorded guitar sometimes sounds detached from the other parts (not untypically so, even given the circumstances), but the remainder is remarkably of a piece. A much underrated recording.

* Chapter Two: 1981–3 Emanem 4303 Paul Rutherford (tb, euph, perc, elec); Evan Parker (ts); Philipp Wachsmann (vn, elec); Barry Guy (b, elec). 8/81–3/83.

The second edition of Iskra 1903 was already some four years old when these previously unissued recordings were made. New member Wachsmann had been working on his own electronics system and it seems beautifully integrated into the group sound, with pedal controls allowing the string-players to adapt their sound in real time. Guy and Rutherford also used specially made boxes. Rutherford varies his sound as well by using a tambourine as a mute on his trombone.

Interestingly, the use of electronics is less overt, arguably more subtle on two additional cuts from March 1983, programmed out of sequence with three pieces from a tour in December of that year. The other curiosity is that Evan Parker appears on the final track, 'Epis', credited to Iskra 1904. He had appeared with the first version of the group some years before, but the music, as with so much that the saxophonist made with Derek Bailey, has subsequently disappeared.

There's a remarkable consistency to the performances of this period, six of the pieces coming in just under the half-hour mark, with 'Stoleri' from December 1983 about ten minutes longer and 'Eiverl' (which features tambourine-mute, eight minutes-odd), 'Marib' (almost skimpy at just over six minutes) and 'Epis' (16 minutes). There's a strong, internal logic to this duration, a sense of process rather than span, as if there were a clear dialectical course to each piece, whatever its actual content. A rich vein of music, available at last and, at more than three and a half hours, generously proportioned as well.

 Frankfurt 1991 Emanem 4051 Paul Rutherford (tb); Philipp Wachsmann (vn); Barry Guy (b). 10/91.

(*) ISKRA / NCKA 1903 Maya MCD 9502 As above. 10/92.

The Frankfurt date moves the story on a further decade. It's a curiously bitty and unsettling date. Were the opening, 33-minute improv to comprise two sides of an LP, we'd find it completely satisfying, albeit with the distraction of flipping the disc halfway through. It would, of course, have made an equally satisfying short CD, but such is the pressure to pack compact discs to their maximum capacity that Emanem have also included a second trio piece recorded 'After The Interval', followed by three curiously uninvolving solos identified by each of the players' names '... am Main', followed by a dismayingly slack final piece, which never gets anywhere and eventually leaves Rutherford pretty much on his own 'To The End Of The Tape'. The 'edit' isn't inelegant, but one wonders whether the lost portion had anything more to say.

The other set was recorded live in Vancouver. It once again underlines Rutherford's genius for creating contexts in which fellow musicians thrive. His own playing is calm, positive and completely tuneful, if by that one means a basic musicality that goes beyond mere melodism. The sound is quite crisp, for a concert recording, and though Wachsmann's amplified violin tends to dominate, the basic unity of the trio is always evident.

A later session, recorded under Rutherford's name but entitled Iskra3, develops the language further in an electro-acoustic direction. It is covered under the trombonist's own entry.

Isotope

GROUP

Fusion outfit with an impressively high jazz content.

 Live At The BBC Hux 48 Gary Boyle (g); Geoff Downes, Brian Miller (ky); Jeff Clyne (b); Nigel Morris (d). 10/73–8/77.
The truly wonderful thing about Isotope was that they managed to make jazz-rock sound fun and considerably lighter on its feet than most similar outfits of the time. Though the most common comparisons were with Soft Machine (which shared a Canterbury lineage) and the Mahavishnu Orchestra, in reality Isotope had more of the joyful dance feel, if not the instrumental virtuosity, of Chick Corea's Return To Forever. There's some great stuff in these two BBC live sessions, including different versions of 'Upward Curve' and a great reading of Boyle's 'Honky Donkey'. The guitarist claims the final three tracks on his own, in the company of keyboard-player Downes, but it's lightweight stuff in comparison to the group tracks from earlier in the decade. Nostalgia, perhaps, but impressive nostalgia.

Yoron Israel

DRUMS

In-demand Chicagoan who has explored organ-fuelled soul-jazz and funk.

 Chicago Double Time 145 Israel; Joe Lovano (ss, ts); Larry Goldings (org); Marvin Sewell (g). 99.
 Live At The Blue Note Half Note 4901 Israel; Steve Turre (tb); Eric Alexander (ts); Ed Cherry (g); Bryan Carrott (vib); Sean Conly (b). 99.
(*) Basic Traneing Ronja 8297 57307 02 Israel; Billy Pierce (ss, ts); Kyle Koehler (org); Ed Cherry (g); Jay Hoggard (vib, mar). 10/03.
These records are marked by strong playing from all concerned, but almost more intriguing is Israel's eclectic choice of material, which includes compositions by, among others, Julian Priester, Jack DeJohnette, Jimmy Heath, John Coltrane and Earth, Wind & Fire. His own writing is strong but not yet strikingly personal.

The organ trio format suits Israel's playing style very well. He is happy to work off a backbeat, but also gets down to some powerful bop-derived drumming. Johnny Griffin's 'Nice And Easy' demonstrates how well he plays even at a gentler metre, while Clifford Jordan's 'Down Through The Years', one of Lovano's guest spots, is a deceptive burner. Joe also turns up, on soprano this time, on EW&F's 'That's The Way Of The World', a clever reworking of a funk classic. For us, though, Priester's 'Battery Blues' is the standout track – a nice example of Chicagoans sticking together and speaking the same tough-tender language.

The live date is full of good things as well, though the sound is often quite disappointing. Carrott and Cherry tend to trip over one another in the ensembles and Bryan isn't always as audible as he ought to be. Again, the horns stand out. Alexander (a dep in this band) plays an absolute blinder, reminiscent of Cliff Jordan, and Turre's briefer appearance adds a whole new dimension to the band. Again, Yoron has chosen unusual material that taxes his own chops and the solo skills of his band members, but without scaring off the paying guests, who must have warmed immediately even to lesser-known material like Jimmy Heath's too rarely covered 'Mellowdrama' and Mulgrew Miller's beautiful 'The Eleventh Hour'.

Trane tributes are ten a penny, but Israel's has real strengths. Unusual to hear these revered themes given a funkier reading, but 'Sayeeda's Song Flute', 'Like Sonny', 'Mr. JC' and even 'Lonnie's Lament' all stand up well, and it isn't as if they desecrate A Love Supreme. Koehler's OK, but having the Little Tiger in as a guest on vibes is a huge boost for anyone's record. Great stuff; hunt it down.

Italian Instabile Orchestra

ENSEMBLE

Founded in 1990 by trumpeter Pino Minafra and the poet Vittorino Curci, but functioning as a co-operative.

(*) Italian Instabile Orchestra / * Skies Of Europe Leo CD LR 182 / ECM 527181-2 Pino Minafra (t, flhn, didjeridu); Guido Mazzon (t, flhn); Alberto Mandarini (t); Giancarlo Schiaffini (tb, tba); Sebi Tramontana (tb, v); Lauro Rossi (tb); Martin Mayes (frhn); Mario Schiano (as, v); Eugenio Colombo (as, ss, f); Carlo Actis Dato (ts, bs, bcl); Daniele Cavallanti (ts, bs); Gianluigi Trovesi (as, cl in A, bcl); Renato Geremia (vn); Paolo Damiani (clo, b, v); Bruno Tommaso (b); Giorgio Gaslini (p); Vincenzo Mazzone, Tiziano Tononi (d, perc). 6/91, 1/92; 5/94.
 Festival: Pisa Teatro Verdi December 1997 Leo CDLR 292/293 2CD As above, except add Luca Calabrese (t). 12/97.
* Litania Sibilante Enja 9405 As above, except; add Enrico Rava (t); Antonello Salis (acc). 99.
The Italian Instabile Orchestra is uncategorizable. Like ARFI in France, the Orchestra seeks to articulate an 'imaginary folklore', an improbable common ground between popular forms, formal composition and free improvisation. All but one of the pieces on the first disc were recorded at Radio France's international jazz festival at Rive-de-Gier. The exception is Giorgio Gaslini's 'Pierrot Solaire', which proposes a sunshine cure for the moonstruck icon of musical modernism. Relaxed, funny, joyous, and a long way from Schoenberg, except, of course, he's in there too. The set opens with Damiani's 'Detriti', a Noah's ark of musical and textual specimens rescued from the latter-day flood of genres and styles. It ends with 'I Virtuosi De Noci', a free-jazz piece reminiscent of Globe Unity.

The orchestra benefits more than a little from the ministrations of ECM, and Steve Lake's meticulous production opens up dimensions which simply aren't accessible on the Leo. The CD is divided into two long suites, 'Il Maestro Muratore', by Tomasso, which is inspired by the great Sard sculptor Constantino Nivola. The opening portrait features a powerful solo statement from Minafra and Dato, and a superb string duet between the composer and Damiani. Most of the other movements are short ensembles, but 'Meru Lo Snob' is another free-blowing track, with Gaslini bracketed by Schiano and Cavallanti.

The pianist is also the composer of 'Skies Of Europe', an extended meditation on some of the great outsiders of European culture – Duchamp, Satie, Antonioni and Fellini – and is also intended to echo the orchestral ambitions of Ornette Coleman's Skies Of America. As ever, Gaslini's ideas are simultaneously rooted in jazz and orthodox composition, and the texture of his orchestrations is very detailed.

Later discs attempted to make festival records sound like anything but. The usual running order – small groups and solo spots first, then the full orchestra – makes logistic sense on the ground but none on disc, so the material is generously redistributed. Equally, unless a particularly wonderful solo was likely to be lost, technically suspect recordings were excluded. It isn't as pristine as the ECM disc, but it suffices. More judicious editing and the quiet disappearance of a couple of less than riveting tracks might have yielded one powerful CD rather than dissipating the attention across two. Schiaffini and Tramontana's trombone duet with electronics is fascinating, and Dato's concluding 'AEIO' is powerful enough for many spins, but the second half definitely loses pace.

Litania Sibilante makes it all good again. 'Scarlattina' is a wonderfully powerful theme, and the soloing throughout the album, from regular members and from guests Salis and Rava, is out of this world. For a change, the set also includes a standard, a brief, intense reading of 'Lover Man' that will rend your heart.

Einar Iversen (born 1930)

PIANO

The leading Norwegian pianist of the bop and mainstream era, 'The Parson' (his dad was a clergyman) also played in dance and pit bands; active again in the '90s.

 Portrait Of A Norwegian Jazz Artist Gemini GMOJCD 9503 Iversen; Ragnar Robertsen (cl); Erik Amundsen, Håkon Nilsen , Knut Ljungh, Terje Venaas (b); Egil Johansen, Arnulf Neste, Jon Christensen, Svein Christiansen, Tom Olstad (d). 9/60–12/94.

A decent cross-section of the work of this fine player, hardly known outside his native Norway but a resourceful and thinking musician who seems able to work as easily in the midstream clarinet quartet tracks as in the 'purer' bebop tracks: there's a very good workout on 'Our Delight', part of a 1963 session which also featured two charming pieces by composer Finn Ludt. The final session comes from 1994, where a beautiful treatment of 'Nardis' lines up alongside a poignant reading of Phil Woods's ballad line 'Randi'.

Ethan Iverson

PIANO

Born in Wisconsin – 'like my great compatriot, Liberace'. He has since achieved wider fame as part of The Bad Plus.

(*) Construction Zone (Originals) / * Deconstruction Zone (Standards) Fresh Sound FSNT 046 / 047 Iverson; Reid Anderson (b); Jorge Rossy (d). 4/98.
* The Minor Passions Fresh Sound FSNT 064 As above, except omit Rossy; add Billy Hart (d). 5/99.

Iverson seemed implacably opposed to anything predictable, conventional or previously done in the over-subscribed area of the piano trio. He has swinging rhythm sections but doesn't want them to swing in the expected ways. His own material seems cryptic, even baffling, but what he does to standards can be even more unsettling. He plays melodically, uses harmonies that are rarely outlandish, yet is always pushing a new, untried sound in the listener's direction. The first two records were made at the same sessions, but they have been deliberately divided between the pianist's own compositions and a group of very familiar standards. If the latter set gets the nod as the more striking portrayal of Iverson's methods, it's only because, with a familiar framework to start from, the originality of the playing is the more apparent. There are so many ingenuities that one is at a loss to catalogue them all. 'The Song Is You' is cast as a furious swinger, but Iverson teasingly holds back from stating the melody until he's turned the opening phrase into a tattoo. 'This Nearly Was Mine' is refashioned as a sepulchral waltz. 'All Of Me' hovers mischievously between metres. 'I'll Remember April' is anointed with a stunningly virtuosic intro before a deceptively constrained treatment that gets darker and more oblique as it progresses. Rossy is superb, but the key dialogue in all these pieces is between piano and bass: Iverson and Anderson have worked together for a long time, and it shows. The 'originals' record repeats the prestidigitation of the other disc, with all sorts of fascinating twists on perceived piano trio routines in the likes of 'New Chimes Blues' and 'The Inevitable Wall'.

The Minor Passions is a snapshot of 'the state of our art, 28 and 29 May 1999' (the recordings are drawn from a couple of gigs at Greenwich House Music School in New York). In his notes, he likens his intro on an enigmatic version of 'Milestones' to Herbie Nichols, and that is one shade who does seem to be manifest in an otherwise unclassifiable bag of influences. Iverson also cites the incomparable blues master Jimmy Yancey, 'my hero', with 'Blues For The Groundskeeper'. One can easily pick out extraordinary things, but that would be an unnecessarily piecemeal analysis of a performer who needs to be heard at length and in the luxury of repeated listening to let his merits break through fully.

Also, in brief:

 Live At Smalls Fresh Sound FSNT 091. 2/00.

Six standards, the Mr Bean theme, Ornette's 'Chronology' and a blues to finish: just another night or two's work at Smalls in New York.

Vijay Iyer (born 1973)

PIANO, KEYBOARDS

An Asian-American with musical experience on both West and East Coasts, Iyer has made a considerable impact with a few records.

(*) Architextures Asian Improv AIR 0034 Iyer; Rudresh Mahanthappa (as); Aaron Stewart (ts); Eric Crystal (ss, ts); Liberty Ellman (g); Jeff Brock, Kevin Ellington Mingus (b); Brad Hargreaves (d). 8–9/96.
* Panoptic Modes Red Giant RG011 Iyer; Rudresh Mahanthappa (as); Stephan Crump (b); Derek Phillips (d). 6/00.
(*) Your Life Flashes PI 05 Iyer; Aaron Stewart (ts); Elliot Humberto Kavee (d). N.D.
* Blood Sutra PI 901 Iyer; Rudresh Mahanthappa (as); Stephan Crump (b); Tyshawn Storey (d). 2/03.
* In What Language? PI 109 Iyer; Ambrose Akinmusire (t); Rudresh Mahanthappa (as); Dana Leong (clo, tb); Liberty Ellman (g); Stephan Crump (b); Trevor Holder (d), Mike Ladd, Latasha N. Nevada Diggs (v, elec); Allison Easter, Ajay Naidu (v). 5/03.
(*) Simulated Progress PI 116 Iyer; Steve Lehmann (sno, as); Elliot Humberto Kavee (d). 9/04.

Iyer's debut, good though it is, made little impact on its release. Divided between solo, trio and octet tracks, the music's strikingly individual. Iyer uses repetition and cyclical themes very effectively, with both the trio and the bigger groups, and a noted influence, Andrew Hill, often looms through these settings.

Panoptic Modes introduces his regular quartet and points up his close musical relationship with Mahanthappa. Iyer's Indian heritage comes through more strongly here than on the Asian Improv disc: the opening 'Invocation', a 'ritual for Rishi Maharaj', uses the echo of a Vedic chant; 'Configurations' includes South Indian rhythmic techniques (but learned, Iyer insists, via Bud Powell). These are comprehensively integrated into jazz and other forms: a vivid synthesis. 'Invocation' is a quite electrifying start to the record, and from there the quartet power through a matrix of rhythms and melodic cells which create a tinglingly powerful whole. As tumultuously as the players improvise at various points, the record impresses as a rigorous entity.

Your Life Flashes is by his 'other' trio, Fieldwork. Minus a bass-player this is still all about rhythm, even as Stewart spins dizzyingly long lines over piano and drums. One difference between this and the kind of unfettered free playing offered by, say, the CIMP axis, is a complexity of tone displacing conventional ideas of 'freedom' in jazz. Transcribing this music would reveal clear, patterned, nuanced structures which titles such as 'Accumulated Gestures' and 'Mosaic' hint at. Yet its spirited performance, purged of obvious cliché, seems more profoundly in keeping with free-jazz doctrine than many a supposedly improvised situation.

Blood Sutra reconvenes the quartet with the astonishing young drummer Tyshawn Storey arriving at the kit. Mahanthappa plays ever tougher, harsher lines, while Storey has jazz and funk rhythms conjoined with dazzling intricacy. Iyer's own playing gets a brilliant solo set-piece in 'That Much Music', but he's master of what he surveys here, letting his tunes absorb an unsentimental impressionism. That may be the crucial advance from the M-Base school which Iyer has clearly learned much from: he resists the neutral melodic feel which has often seemed to ice over Steve Coleman's groove.

Political art doesn't come much more direct or shattering than In What Language? The title is drawn from the complaint of Iranian film-maker Jafer Panahi, detained for hours at JFK airport while passing through New York – 'I am just an Iranian, a film-maker. But how could I tell this, in what language?' The deeper irony is that this incident took place prior to 9/11. Speech and rap is integrated into music which, in fact, sounds much closer to the M-Base system than Iyer's other music. But this is clearly a different situation. It is uncomfortable listening, but as a piece of sonic collage it's been created with formidable skill and clarity.

Simulated Progress reconvenes Fieldwork with a new recruit in Steve Lehmann. To some extent the saxophonist seems like the outsider in the music: the interplay between Iyer's left hand and the amazing rhythmical variety of Kavee's work is still the core of this trio. Still, there are compositional credits shared among all the players and the dark, complex improvising which results is entirely compelling.

 Reimagining Pl 902 Iyer; Rudresh Mahanthappa (as); Stephan Crump (b); Marcus Gilmore (d). 11/04.

 Raw Materials Pl 903 As above, except omit Crump, Gilmore. 10/05.

 Still Life With Commentator Pl 904 Iyer; Liberty Ellman (g); Okkyung Lee (clo); Guillermo E. Brown (perc, v); Mike Ladd, Pálina Jónsdóttir , Pamela Z (v). 3–6/06.

With Reimagining, Iyer seems to break through to the new language, unburdened by cultural specificities, he seems to have been working towards. Why the relatively low marking? It's a patient and slightly tentative record, comparable in its positioning to one of those quietly 'transitional' works one finds in the Blue Note back-catalogue. There are some lovely things. The sequence 'Song For Midwod' and 'Immforgee's Cakewalk' is as good as anything he has ever done; same applies to Mahanthappa. However, the magazine tails off subsequently and the version of Lennon's 'Imagine' at the end is rather lame, irrespective of its provenance. The duo album, which confirms the closeness of the relationship between saxophonist and pianist, derives largely from a suite of 'collaborative fables' commissioned by the Jazz Gallery with Rockefeller money. It's a delightful sequence, but not even these guys can stop the album as a whole from drifting the way all sax/piano records go and into a lullingly conversational mode. The new collaboration with Ladd is a disappointment; either that, or Iyer is producing work so quickly now that we are not able to keep pace with its evolving idiom. Ironically, the best cuts on Still Life are the instrumentals, and particularly the cracking 'Blog Mom's Anthem', which one longs to hear in a live setting.

Chubby Jackson (1918–2003)

DOUBLE BASS

The first to use an amplifier on his bass, he had a long career, and became a minor star, with his own kids' TV show and senior citizens' projects.

 The Happy Monster Blue Moon CB 109 Jackson; Conte Candoli, Neal Hefti (t); Bill Harris (tb); Tony Aless (frhn); Frank Socolow (as, ts); Flip Phillips (ts); Woody Herman (cl); Lou Levy (p); Terry Gibbs (vib); Shelly Manne, Dave Tough (d); some other personnel. 44–47.

 Chubby's Back Jazz Beat 512 Jackson; Don Gerace, John Howell, Don Jacoby, Porky Panico, John Silva (t); Cy Touff (b-t); Bill Harris, George Jean, Paul Krum, Tom Shepard (tb); Howard Davis, Sandy Mosse, Vito Prince (ts); Bill Calkins (bs); Marty Rubinstein (p); Remo Biondi, Jimmy Gourley (g); Don Lamond (d); Jackie Paris (v). 3 & 11/57.

 Chubby Takes Over Fresh Sound FSRCD 324 Jackson; Nick Travis, Ernie Royal (t); Bob Brookmeyer, Frank Rehak (tb); Sam Marowitz (as); Sam Most (as, cl, f); Al Cohn (ts); Danny Bank (bs); Marty Napoleon (p); Don Lamond (d). 58.

 Live At The Swiss Chalet Jazz Band 2141 Jackson; Nat Adderley (c); Pete Minger, Vinnie Tanno (t); Frank Rosolino (tb); Danny Turner (as); Arnett Cobb, Jay Corre (ts); Duffy Jackson (d). 62.

Chubby never stopped working and never stopped thinking about music. He was never the most virtuosic of players and when he worked opposite Oscar Pettiford it was only his sunnier personality that got him noticed. However, he led bands most of his life and these survivals are enough to leave a mark now that he is no longer around. The small-group dates gathered on the Blue Moon compilation are mostly entertaining. Herman returns the compliment, as do other players and leaders who'd possibly asked Chubby to turn down his bass in years gone by. The Jazz Beat reissue brings together the title-album with I'm Entitled To You, both of them bright and entertaining, with just a hint of rock'n'roll in the mix. The Fresh Sound, formerly on Everest, is entertaining enough, and there are some fine solos from the sections, but it's on the live disc that his real strength comes through, an undentable enthusiasm that overcomes any technical flaws and a ragged approach to ensembles.

D. D. Jackson (born 1967)

PIANO, ORGAN

A student of Don Pullen and now seems his creative heir.

(*) Paired Down: Volume 1 Justin Time JUST 99-2 Jackson; Hugh Ragin (t); James Carter (ts, Cmel); David Murray (ts);

Hamiet Bluiett (bs); Billy Bang (vn); Santi Debriano (b). 11 & 12/96.

(*) Paired Down: Volume 2 Justin Time JUST 104-2 Jackson; Ray Anderson (tb); David Murray (ts); Don Byron (cl); Jane Bunnett (f); Santi Debriano (b). 97.

Jackson is a Canadian of mixed race and unadulterated gifts. A regular associate of Billy Bang, David Murray and Kip Hanrahan, he brings a performing style which is both classically aware and uninterruptably swinging, and a writing concept which is eclectic and unforced.

Some of his earlier discs are deleted. There are moments on the first volume of Paired Down when Jackson seems at some risk of disappearing into a private conversation with former employers, either over-respectful or too eager to please. Highlights are a pair of tunes with Bluiett (including a wonderful tribute to the late Don Pullen), a trio of tracks with Ragin (high skittering figures pitched against the busy action of the piano) and two with Carter, who opens the disc on C melody saxophone, a harmonically awkward sound that nevertheless works. As ever, Jackson sounds aware and responsive, already individual.

A second volume of duets reprises the association with Murray and also puts Jackson in the company of another former leader saxophonist (and here flautist), Jane Bunnett. Perhaps the best track of all, though, is a duet with bassist Debriano, who brings his own rich heritage to the music.

(*) Sigame Justin Time 177 Jackson; Christian Howes (vn); Ugonna Okegwo (b). 6–7/01.

Again, there is some wonderfully funky and varied stuff on this homegrown set. The title-track, 'Sigame (Follow Me)', is a winner and Jackson takes two ears and a tail for the way he teases, lures and draws the listener on before delivering the coup de grâce of the oddly positioned 'Prologue'. The relationship with Howes is developing nicely.

 Suite For New York Justin Time 188 Jackson; Brad Turner (t); Tom Walsh (tb); James Spaulding (as, f); David Mott (bs); Christian Howes (vn); Ugonna Okegwo (b); Dafnis Prieto (d, perc). 12/02.

Shadowed inevitably by the WTC attacks, but in no way an explicit response, this is more of a celebration of a city which has fulfilled the melting-pot dream. Jackson's writing, from the opening 'Invocation' to the closing 'Towers Of Light', is uniformly strong. His playing is less virtuosic than, say, Craig Taborn's or Matthew Shipp's, closer perhaps to Dave Burrell's polycultural approach. No denying its power and authority on any front and his marshalling of this large group suggests that Jackson's musical ambitions may finally be taking wing. The veteran Spaulding, often a Cinderella figure, shines here, but no one has a bad day.

(*) Serenity Song Justin Time 222 As above, except omit Turner, Walsh, Spaulding; add Dana Leong (tb, clo); Sam Newsome (ss). 12/05–1/06.

Jackson's progress seems steady, patient and doggedly applied. There's nothing on this that shakes the paradigms, but there's nothing hackneyed or bland, either. The record's essentially a trio date with guests: Howes, the remarkable Leong and the effervescent Newsome pop up here and there, sometimes as a distraction from the main action, mostly adding new flavours. Jackson's pianism is now mature and utterly secure in delivery, his writing – 11 thoughtful new tracks of which the title-piece, 'Chi-Pin's Song' and 'Lushly' are the most characterful – is exquisitely personal, and if he's not on anyone's hype list, so much the better.

Also, in brief:

(*) ... So Far RCA 63549. 5/99.

Jackson's brief sojourn at RCA yielded two great records that may now be hard to find. This solo recital has him mix sanguine originals with 'Come Sunday', 'I Mean You' and even a delicious revisit to 'Goodbye Pork Pie Hat'.

(*) Anthem RCA 63606. 8/99.

A warm and rousing record, full of life and energy. Nice organ on 'Showcase Blues'.

Dewey Jackson (1900–1966)

TRUMPET

Legendary St Louis figure, who worked on the riverboats until the start of the war. Also performed with Fate Marable, Charlie Creath and others.

 Live At The Barrel 1952 Delmark DE 246 Jackson; Sid Dawson (tb); Frank Chace (cl); Don Ewell (p); Booker T. Washington (d). 52.

Jackson isn't as obvious an exponent of the so-called 'St Louis sound' as someone like Harold 'Shorty' Baker, or even the young Miles Davis. There's a raw, declamatory quality to his playing and more use of vibrato towards the end of phrases than most of his fellow Missourians. Despite his status, Jackson is barely represented on CD and this live recording substantially increases the discography. Bob Koester of Delmark (under-age at the time) made the tape by standing in the aisle between bandstand and bar and pointing his mic at the musicians. The results are rough, with a lot of audience noise, but perfectly acceptable.

Jackson and trombonist Sid Dawson were regulars at Mel Shapiro's Barrel club, though it appears Lee Collins was the intended trumpeter on this date. They open with a brisk 'That's A Plenty', following up with 'Bucket's Got A Hole In It', a mutinous 'Bugle Call Rag' and a wonderfully mournful 'St James Infirmary'. Jackson's slightly yelping delivery manages to hit notes pretty much dead-centre and there's some lovely interplay with Dawson and the low-toned Chace. In the absence of a bass, Ewell and the trombonist between them take care of the lower-register stuff. Ewell's accompaniment on 'Tishamingo' is further testimony to his great skills, but the focus here has to fall on the still little-known Jackson, who emerges from the shadows with personality and some moments of fire. An atmospheric set.

Franz Jackson (born 1912)

CLARINET, SOPRANO AND TENOR SAXOPHONES, VOICE

A Chicago veteran when he formed his Original Jazz All Stars in 1957.

 No Saints GHB 30 Jackson; Bob Shoffner (t); Al Wynn (tb); Ralph Tervalon (p, org); Lawrence Dixon (bj); Bill Oldham (tba); Richard Curry (d). 6 & 7/57.

 Chicago Living Legends: Franz Jackson's Original Jass All Stars Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1824 Jackson; Bob Shoffner (t); John Thomas (tb); Rozelle Claxton (p); Lawrence Dixon (bj); Bill Oldham (tba); Bill Curry (d). 9/61.

The second of these is one of the best of these revivals from the Riverside catalogue. Jackson was something of a modernist compared to the others and he approaches the warhorses in the programme with gusto, thick-toned and hard-hitting. Shoffner and Thomas, much older hands, play with comparative reserve, but while Jackson is right in the centre of the mix, they seem to be at the back of the room. They all kick up their feet on 'King Porter Stomp'.

The earlier disc, released on Replica, has recently reappeared on GHB. It's very much in the same vein, of course, though if anything the group is better balanced: all of them sound recessed on this. It's rousing Dixieland, with enough subtlety to beguile the longhairs.

 Snag It Delmark DE 223 Jackson; Bob Neighbor (t); Jim Beebe (tb); Max Hooke, Joe Johnson (p); Jack Meilahn (bj, g); Jimmy Johnson (b); Greg Sergo (d). 8/90.

 Yellow Fire Delmark DE 237 Jackson; Lew Green (c); Tom Bartlett (tb); Kim Cusack (cl); John Cooper (p); Jack Kuncl (bj); Mike Walbridge (tba); Wayne Jones (d). 10/00.

Jackson just kept on and on. He was touring Europe in the '80s. This is closer to home and the set-list – with Ellington well featured alongside 'Oh! Didn't He Ramble' and the others – is designed to appeal to Franz's modernist side. Beebe's group offers solid support, but the oldtimer doesn't exactly need propping up. His tenor sound is warmer than the clarinet, interestingly, and he manages to play soprano without sounding at all like Bechet. On Yellow Fire, he's teamed with the Salty Dogs, veterans themselves, but babes in arms compared to Franz. It's a good-natured Chicago Dixieland date, though some of the material has a slight by-the-numbers feel, Jackson excepted. At 88, he was playing with all his old authority and a tone that still doesn't waver much.

Javon Jackson (born 1965)

TENOR SAXOPHONE

A later member of the Jazz Messengers, he's now one of NY's hired-gun tenormen. Joe Henderson was an influence but the recent style is funkier.

 Me And Mr. Jones Criss Cross 1053 Jackson; James Williams (p); Christian McBride (b); Elvin Jones (d). 12/91.

 Burnin' Criss Cross CRISS 1139 Jackson; Billie Pierce (ts); Kirk Lightsey (p); Christian McBride (b); Louis Hayes (d). 12/91.

Mr Jones is, of course, Elvin, to whom Jackson gravitated after the Messengers. Jackson emerged as a leader of great resourcefulness and confidence, even if his soloing didn't sound completely mature. The first disc leans on a restricted range of ideas and tempos and sounds formulaic compared to the later (inevitably deleted) Blue Notes. The writing is blunt and overassertive, typical young man's work.

Burnin' is co-led by Pierce, but it is Jackson who commands attention, opening and closing the record with two strong originals, 'So The Story Goes' and 'Not Yet'. The rhythm section is impeccable and, though the studio sound is rather dry, Jackson has a warmth and fullness of sound, as well as his trademark responsiveness, which put Pierce in the shade. The album needs a good trumpet voice.

 Easy Does It Palmetto 2093 Jackson; Fred Wesley (tb, v); Lonnie Liston Smith (org); Mark Whitfield (g); Eve Cornelious (v). 10/02.

After nearly four years, Jackson returned with a much funkier sound. The leader's thunder is very nearly stolen by Fred Wesley, who mugs irritatingly on 'House Party', but otherwise delivers his usual spot-on trombone. Plenty of soul on tracks like 'Right On', 'Wake Up Everybody' and Smith's 'If You See Kay' (sic), but the Jackson originals are in the same line. 'Kiss' and 'J.Soul' are outstanding soul-jazz. Jackson's tone is rawer and more abrasive than of yore, but he can still string together a sophisticated harmonic solo amid the barwalking stuff.

(*) Have You Heard Palmetto 2110 Jackson; Lonnie Liston Smith (org); Mark Whitfield (g); Kenny Davis (b); Terreon Gully (d); Lisa Fisher (v). 10/04.

 Now Palmetto 2121 As above, except omit Whitfield, Gully; add David Gilmore (g); Gregory Hutchinson (d). 2/06.

These keep pretty much to the formula of the previous record, and while Wesley is missed, it gives Javon more of a chance to shine. On the first, he keeps it simple and pointed, and there is some great, funky writing on the disc as well. Lisa Fisher is a more engaging vocalist than Eve Cornelious and it's easy to see why she's a favourite of Luther Vandross and the Rolling Stones. She tears her way through 'Dance Floor' and the fine 'Breaking Up Somebody's Home'. There's a nice tribute to the Hammond man on 'Dr Smith', but probably the best cut is the first 'In This Corner'. It all ends with a crisp reprise of 'Funky In There'. The more recent one feels a bit like a retread, but it's fine. 'Richard's R.A.P.' and 'South Side Eddie' clinch it. 'Where Is The Love' strains confidence a little.

Milt Jackson (1923–99)

VIBES, PIANO, VOICE

Born in Detroit, he moved to New York after his studies and joined Dizzy Gillespie at the start of recorded bebop in 1945. He was with various leaders before rejoining Gillespie in 1950, then with his own quartet, which became the MJQ in 1954. Played with that group throughout its career but also made many records of his own.

* Wizard Of The Vibes Blue Note 32140-2 Jackson; Lou Donaldson (as); Thelonious Monk, John Lewis (p); Percy Heath, John Simmons, Al McKibbon (b); Shadow Wilson, Kenny Clarke (d), Kenny Hagood (v). 7/48–4/52.

Eight of these tracks can also be found on records under Monk's name, while a quintet date with Donaldson and what was to become the MJQ was first issued as a 10-inch LP. The tracks with Monk are classics, rising to their greatest height with the riveting version of 'I Mean You'. The other date, though at a less exalted level, finds Jackson quite at home with Donaldson's uncomplicated, bluesy bop, and 'Lillie' is a handsome ballad feature for the vibesman. The new RVG edition adds five alternative takes.

 MJQ Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 125 Jackson; Henry Boozier (t); Horace Silver (p); Percy Heath (b); Kenny Clarke (d). 6/54.

 Milt Jackson Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 001 Jackson; Horace Silver (p); Percy Heath (b); Connie Kay (d). 5/55.

MJQ features four titles by the personnel listed. Though no more than a pick-up date, all concerned play well. Milt Jackson is more substantial, but the preponderance of slow tempos lends a rather sleepy air to the date. The exception is 'Stonewall', a blues with a 13-chorus vibes solo that effectively defines the principles of Jackson's art.

(*) Ballads And Blues / Bags And Flutes Collectables COL-CD-6257 Jackson; Lucky Thompson (ts); Frank Wess, Bobby Jaspar (f); John Lewis, Hank Jones, Tommy Flanagan (p); Skeeter

Best, Kenny Burrell, Barry Galbraith (g); Oscar Pettiford, Percy Heath (b); Kenny Clarke, Larance Marable, Art Taylor (d); woodwinds. 1/56–5/57.

A pair of Atlantic albums which sound as clean as a whistle in these remasterings. Ballads And Blues is near-perfect Jackson fare. The others mostly keep out of his way and let him blow, although Lucky Thompson is on the final three tracks and in excellent fettle. The Flutes date shares duties between Wess and Jaspar and is slighter stuff, even though it ends on the textbook slow blues of 'Connie's Blues'.

(*) Bags Meets Trane Atlantic 81227-3685-2 Jackson; John Coltrane (ts); Hank Jones (p); Paul Chambers (b); Connie Kay (d). 1/59.

A genial if relatively unambitious meeting of giants. Always the most unprejudiced of collaborators, Milt simply goes ahead and blows, and though Coltrane is on the verge of his first great breakthroughs he responds to the less fearsome blues situations with his usual majestic command. A neglected record in the career of both men, and in this new mastering the music comes up uncommonly fresh and vibrant.

* Bags Meets Wes Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 240 Jackson; Wynton Kelly (p); Wes Montgomery (g); Sam Jones (b); Philly Joe Jones (d). 12/61.

(*) Invitation Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 260 Jackson; Kenny Dorham, Virgil Jones (t); Jimmy Heath (ts); Tommy Flanagan (p); Ron Carter (b); Connie Kay (d). 8–11/62.

 Big Bags Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 366 Jackson; Clark Terry (t, flhn); Bernie Glow, Ernie Royal, Snooky Young, Doc Severinsen, Dave Burns (t); Jimmy Cleveland, Melba Liston, Paul Faulise, Tom McIntosh (tb); Willie Ruff (frhn); James Moody (as, ts, f); Earl Warren, George Dorsey, Jerome Richardson (as); Jimmy Heath (ts); Tate Houston, Arthur Clarke (bs); Hank Jones (p); Ron Carter (b); Connie Kay, Philly Joe Jones (d). 6–7/62.

 At The Village Gate Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 309 Jackson; Jimmy Heath (ts); Hank Jones (p); Bob Cranshaw (b); Albert 'Tootie' Heath (d). 12/63.

 For Someone I Love Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 404 Jackson; Clark Terry, Thad Jones, Dave Burns, Snooky Young, Bill Berry, Elmon Wright (t); Quentin Jackson, Jimmy Cleveland, Jack Rains, Tom McIntosh (tb); Bob Northern, Julius Watkins, Ray Alonge, Willie Ruff, Paul Ingraham (frhn); Hank Jones, Jimmy Jones (p); Major Holley (tba); Richard Davis (b); Connie Kay, Charli Persip (d). 3–8/63.

Jackson was firmly ensconced in the MJQ by this time, but occasional blowing dates were something he obviously enjoyed, and his association with Riverside led to some more challenging situations. Invitation is disappointing, given the personnel. Some of the tunes are cut off short, and Dorham and Heath never quite get into it as they might. Heath fares better on the live date from the Village Gate, which works mostly from a blues base. Big Bags puts Jackson to work in some Ernie Wilkins arrangements for orchestra, and there is a puissant 'Round Midnight' among the charts, although the vibraphonist's impassive assurance isn't ideal for this situation. For Someone I Love is another try at the same sort of thing, though here the front lines are all brass, working from charts by Melba Liston. Jackson approaches it in just the same way, digging in hard on 'Extraordinary Blues', rhapsodic on 'Days Of Wine And Roses'. The best of this group is the meeting with Wes Montgomery. This time the tunes seem just the right length, even on a miniature like the ballad 'Stairway To The Stars', and the quintet locks into an irresistible groove on the uptempo themes.

 The Big Three Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 805 Jackson; Joe Pass (g); Ray Brown (b). 8/75.

(*) Centerpiece – At The Kosei Nenkin, Vol. 2 Pablo 2620-120-2 Jackson; Teddy Edwards (ts); Cedar Walton (p); Ray Brown (b); Billy Higgins (d). 3/76.

 Soul Fusion Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 731 Jackson; Monty Alexander (p); John Clayton (b); Jeff Hamilton (d). 6/77.

 Montreux '77 Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 375 Jackson; Clark Terry (t); Eddie 'Lockjaw' Davis (ts); Monty Alexander (p); Ray Brown (b); Jimmie Smith (d). 7/77.

(*) Bags' Bag Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 935 Jackson; Cedar Walton (p); Vaughan Andre, John Collins (g); Ray Brown (b); Billy Higgins, Frank Severino (d). 12/77.

(*) Milt Jackson + Count Basie + The Big Band Vols. 1 & 2 Original Jazz Classics OJC 740 / 741 Jackson; Waymon Reed, Lyn Biviano, Sonny Cohn, Pete Minger (t); Bill Hughes, Mel Wanzo, Fred Wesley, Dennis Wilson (tb); Danny Turner, Bobby Plater (as); Eric Dixon (ts, f); Kenny Hing (ts); Charlie Fowlkes (bs); Count Basie (p); Freddie Green (g); John Clayton (b); Butch Miller (d). 1/78.

() Soul Believer Original Jazz Classics OJC 686 Jackson; Plas Johnson (ts); Cedar Walton (p); Dennis Budimir (g); Ray Brown (b); Billy Higgins (d). 9/78.

 All Too Soon Original Jazz Classics OJC 450 Jackson; Joe Pass (g); Ray Brown (b); Mickey Roker (d). 1/80.

 Night Mist Original Jazz Classics OJC 827 Jackson; Harry 'Sweets' Edison (t); Eddie 'Cleanhead' Vinson (as); Eddie 'Lockjaw' Davis (ts); Art Hillery (p); Ray Brown (b); Larance Marable (d). 4/80.

(*) Ain't But A Few Of Us Left Original Jazz Classics OJC 785 Jackson; Oscar Peterson (p); Ray Brown (b); Grady Tate (d). 11/81.

 A London Bridge /  Mostly Duke /  Memories Of Thelonious Sphere Monk Pablo 2310-932 / Original Jazz Classics OJC 968 / 851 Jackson; Monty Alexander (p); Ray Brown (b); Mickey Roker (d). 4/82.

 The Best Of Milt Jackson Pablo 2405-405 Compilation from the above. 77–82.

 Jackson, Johnson, Brown And Company Original Jazz Classics OJC 907 Jackson; J. J. Johnson (tb); Tom Rainier (p); John Collins (g); Ray Brown (b); Roy McCurdy (d). 5/83.

 Soul Route Original Jazz Classics OJC 1059 Jackson; Gene Harris (p); Ray Brown (b); Mickey Roker (d). 11–12/83.

(*) It Don't Mean A Thing If You Can't Tap Your Foot To It Original Jazz Classics OJC 601 Jackson; Cedar Walton (p); Ray Brown (b); Mickey Roker (d). 7/84.

Jackson's signing to Pablo brought forth a flood of albums. Just as he did with Count Basie, Granz basically set Milt up in the studio and let him go, which means that all these records are solidly entertaining without ever quite going the extra distance and becoming a classic.

However, the two albums cut with Count Basie, at a single session in 1978, proved to be a winner. Here are two kindred spirits, both in love with playing the blues, giving it their best shot, and with the orchestra in towering form behind them. There are a few small-group tracks, but it's mainly the big band with Jackson taking most of the solos, Basie restricting himself to the occasional rejoinder. The only disappointment must be that the material is nearly all Basie warhorses; nevertheless it gives Jackson the unshakeable platform which his previous records with a big band never finally secured. On 'Lil' Darlin'' he sounds gorgeous, and on a stomper like Ernie Wilkins's 'Basie' the studio nearly goes up in smoke, even if it's always a controlled explosion with this band.

Most of the other records keep to a high standard. The Big Three, a typical Granz set-up, works pretty well; there is a lovely 'Nuages', and Pass digs in unusually strongly on a fast 'Blue Bossa'. Gene Harris was a natural sideman for Bags, and Soul Route finds all hands in very good spirits. The Montreux jam session is slightly above par for this kind of course. Of the remainder, another standout is the quartet date on It Don't Mean A Thing. Cedar Walton and Jackson inspire each other to their best form, and an intensely swinging 'If I Were A Bell' and the Ellington near-title-track, taken at a daringly relaxed tempo, are marvels. Ain't But A Few Of Us Left is as swinging as the best Peterson records can be, and Jackson seems to have enjoyed his meeting with the great man; 'Body And Soul', set off with a bossa feel, is impressive, and they take luxurious time over 'If I Should Lose You'. All Too Soon is a little too laid-back as an Ellington tribute. Jackson, Johnson, Brown And Company has some lovely moments between Milt and J.J., although the record feels a bit stilted at points where they might have really stretched out. The rest of the band sometimes get in Jackson's way on Night Mist, an all-blues programme, but – pro that he is – Bags settles into the situation and takes some typically collected solos. A London Bridge and Mostly Duke were cut at the same engagement at Ronnie Scott's in London, and Alexander's carousing piano parts are an interesting foil for Jackson's imperturbable solos. Memories Of Thelonious Sphere Monk, from the same occasion, is also good, but in a sense a wasted opportunity: three of the four themes are tossed to the other members of the quartet, and Bags tackles only the comparatively straightforward 'In Walked Bud'.

Centerpiece deserves a special commendation. Edwards was moving through a very quiet phase of a generally neglected career, and the stock of this kind of jazz was at a very low ebb in 1976. That didn't stop a superb band from turning in a superb performance, before a very appreciative crowd. Jackson sounds as good as at any point in his career here.

Also, in brief:

(*) In The Beginning Original Jazz Classics OJC-1771. 47–48.
Obscure beginnings, but nothing primitive about these proto-MJQ tracks and Milt's ballad playing is exquisite.

 The Ballad Artistry Of Milt Jackson / Vibrations Collectables COL-CD-6258. 5/59–2/60.
Two more Atlantics, although neither is really among the best of Bags. Quincy Jones swathes him in strings on the first; the second has him encumbered by a curious set of R&B charts.

 Feelings Original Jazz Classics OJC 448. 4/76.
With strings. Pretty, but disposable.

() Soul Believer Original Jazz Classics OJC 686. 9/78.
He sings. Eminently avoidable.

Oliver Jackson (1933–94)

DRUMS

Born in Detroit, he worked in his local bebop scene in the '40s and '50s and also in a drums-and-dance variety duo with Eddie Locke, Bop And Locke.

 The Last Great Concert Nagel Heyer CD 063 Jackson; Randy Sandke (t); Jerry Tilitz (tb); Antti Sarpila (cl, ts); Harry Allen, Danny Moss (ts); Brian Dee (p); Len Skeat (b); Jeanie Lambe (v). 11/93.
A pleasing gesture by the Nagel Heyer operation to dedicate this set to Oliver Jackson, giving this doughty and much-liked musician at least one CD under his own name. It's really nothing more or less than another unpretentious and good-value concert set by the familiar Nagel Heyer gang.

Ronald Shannon Jackson (born 1940)

DRUMS, PERCUSSION, OTHER INSTRUMENTS

Born in Fort Worth, he studied history before receiving a music scholarship to New York. Played for Ayler, Mingus and Betty Carter; then for Ornette Coleman and Cecil Taylor in the late '70s.

(*) Montreux Jazz Festival Knitting Factory 3031 Jackson; Henry Scott (t); Zane Massey (ss, as); Vernon Reid (g, steel g, bj); Bruce Johnson (b). 83.

(*) Live At Greenwich House Knitting Factory 3030 Jackson; Henry Scott (t); Eric Person (ss, as); Cary DeNigris, Vernon Reid (g); Akbar Ali (vn); Melvin Gibbs, Reggie Washington (b); Twins Seven Seven (perc, v). 1/86.
The Decoding Society made a huge sound that, decoded, pointed back to the work of Jackson's early employers. It was James Blood Ulmer's brutal funk Are You Glad To Be In America? that helped establish the drummer's reputation in Europe, but Jackson spent much of the '70s in obscurity and his early albums have been overlooked in the CD era. The Montreux set is a good representation of the band, and in hi-fi. 'Alice In The Congo' clocks in at a quarter of an hour and touches on virtually all the trademark Jackson devices: harmolodic complexity, straight blues, funk and bebop. Reid takes a number of passages on banjo, spiky and raw. The Greenwich House date was a New Year's Day gig by the reconvened Society; Reid and Gibbs had been doing their own thing for a while, but they are present here and seem to enjoy trading lines with their playing partners, DeNigris and Washington. The tracks are mostly long and rhythmically involved, reflecting Jackson's growing interest in African musics. Though Ornette Coleman is the presumptive ancestor, this set is perhaps closest to Miles Davis's experimental electronic groups, especially on tracks like 'Erri Moments' (where Henry Scott echoes the master on muted trumpet) and 'Chocolate Envy'. But the sound-quality is pretty shocking and the set merits release only on historical grounds.

 When Colors Play Knitting Factory 2037 Jackson; Zane Massey (ss, ts); Eric Person (ss, as); Masujaa, Cary DeNigris (g); John Moody (b). 86.
Free-form funk, with saxophones and guitars running rings round one another in Jackson's idiosyncratic version of harmolodics. 'Sweet Orange' and the somewhat more reflective 'Listening To A Mirror' are the most extended and also the most interesting performances. Again, the sound is rather unforgiving, but Jackson is better balanced than on some of his records.

 Taikeye Knitting Factory 3028 Jackson; Zane Massey (ss, ts); Eric Person (ss, as, f); Masujaa, Cary DeNigris (g); John Moody (b). N.D.
Bill Laswell-produced and every bit as thunderous and compelling as Bill's work usually is. The two saxophonists seem a little flummoxed by Jackson's concept, but it is good to hear Ronald in a more obviously jazz-based line-up again. 'Starhawk' and 'Gandhi' are outstanding tracks, but for sheer, effusive delight sample 'Jax's Dance' and 'Psychic Greeting': they bring the set to a climax which is firmly capped by the closing 'Sheep In Wolf's Clothing'. Good stuff.

 Puttin' On Dog Knitting Factory 3033 Jackson; Onaje Allan Gumbs (p); Michael Harper (v). 11/00.
Previously available as Pulse, this is effectively a drum and vocal work, with just a minimal contribution from Gumbs, heard solo on 'Lullaby For The Mothers'. Poet Harper also contributes an unaccompanied piece on 'Those Winter Sundays' and duets with Jackson on 'Bessie's Last Affair'. Jackson talks and sings across several of the tracks, struggling to be audible above his own thrashing percussion. The set opens well with the title-track (given as 'Puttin' On The Dog') and there is lots of excellent drumming to savour, especially on 'The Raven', which draws heavily on Edgar Allan Poe.

Also, in brief:

(*) Beast In The Spider Bush: Live At The Caravan Of Dreams Knitting Factory 3029. 85.
Dreadful, distorted sound.

(*) Red Warrior Knitting Factory 3032. 91.
Originally a Mango LP, then on Axiom, this guitar-heavy date might have more kindly been allowed to fade away.

 Live In Warsaw Knitting Factory 3035. 94.
A heavy R&B session, though worth it for the Prince-inspired version of Parker's 'Now's The Time'.

Willis Jackson (1928–87)

TENOR SAXOPHONE

Born in Miami, he made his name with the Cootie Williams small group and thereafter worked mostly in small-combo R&B.

 Call Of The Gators Delmark DD-460 Jackson; Andrew 'Fats' Ford, Bobby Johnson (t); Booty Wood, Bobby Range (tb); Haywood Henry, Ben Kynard, Reuben Phillips (bs); Bill Doggett, Arnold Jarvis, Duke Anderson (p); Leonard Swain, Leemie Stanfield (b); Joe Murphy, Panama Francis (d). 1–5/50.
 Please Mr Jackson Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 321 Jackson; Jack McDuff (org); Bill Jennings (g); Tommy Potter (b); Alvin Johnson (d). 5/59.
 Legends Of Acid Jazz Prestige 24198-2 Jackson; Jack McDuff (org); Bill Jennings (g); Wendell Marshall, Tommy Potter, Milt Hinton (b); Alvin Johnson, Bill Elliot (d); Buck Clarke (perc). 5/59–8/60.
 Legends Of Acid Jazz – Keep On A Blowin' Prestige 24218-2 Jackson; Jack McDuff, Freddie Roach (org); Bill Jennings (g); Tommy Potter, Wendell Marshall, Milt Hinton (b); Alvin Johnson, Frank Shea (d); Buck Clarke, Ray Barretto (perc). 5/59–3/62.
 Gravy Prestige 24254 Jackson; Frank Robinson (t); Carl Wilson (org); Pat Martino (g); Leonard Gaskin (b); Joe Hadrick (d). 5/63.
 Nuther'n Like Thuther'n Prestige 24265-2 As above, except omit Gaskin; add Sam Jones, George Tucker (b). 10/63–1/64.
 Willis Jackson With Pat Martino /  Soul Night Live! Prestige 24161-2 / 24273-2 Jackson; Frank Robinson (p); Pat Martino (g); Carl Wilson (b); Joe Hadrick (d). 3/64.
 The Definitive Black And Blue Sessions: Live On Stage Black & Blue 957 Jackson; Richard 'Groove' Holmes (org); Steve Giordano (g); Roger Lee Humphrey (d). 1/80.

'Gator' made a lot of records for Prestige and Muse, most of them in the tenor-and-organ format. Delmark have reminded us of where he began, with a compilation of ancient R&B sides: leathery, honking solos coughed out over sloppy-joe rhythms, good fun provided you don't have to hear more than a couple of tracks at a time. His long stint as a soul-sax man at Prestige has been rewarded with a bunch of reissues: reliably gritty playing by all hands, but don't expect a CD to have staying power. His first entry in the Acid Jazz series couples the Prestige originals Blue Gator and Cookin' Sherry, and the second gathers in Keep On A Blowin' and Thunderbird. The 1963 sets on Gravy were first issued as Grease 'N' Gravy and The Good Life, while Nuther'n Like Thuther'n couples More Gravy and Boss Shoutin'. The personnels don't change very much and the music certainly doesn't. Old favourites like McDuff and Jennings do their duty, and Willis blows hard. Difficult to pick a winner, but track for track we prefer the first Acid Jazz set as the record to get if you want a single Jackson in your house: too bad about the silly psychedelic cover-art, though.

Soul Night Live! couples the set of that name with Tell It ..., although both of them were actually recorded on the same night at the Allegro in New York. The main point of interest here may be the chance to hear the 19-year-old Pat Martino, who burns through his solos like a young man in a big hurry, and it's always the guitarist you wait to hear. Jackson's penchant for throwing dopey quotes into his solos is tiresome after two tracks, and Robinson really isn't much of a trumpeter, but it's not music that asks to be examined too closely.

The live Black & Blue date with Groove Holmes is worth having for a later taste of Gator's style. The sound's big, artisanal and uncomplicated, but 'Body And Soul' has something going for it.

Also, in brief:

(*) Gentle Gator Prestige 24158-2. 1/61–12/62.
Ballads. Lockjaw does this better.

 Plays With Feeling / The Way We Were Collectables COL 6823. 75, 76.
He also recorded for Atlantic, in more of a pop-jazz mode.

C. W. Jacobi's Bottomland Orchestra

GROUP

A tribute band dedicated to the music of Clarence Williams, led by German arranger-saxophonist.

 A Tribute To Clarence Williams: Volumes 1 & 2 Stomp Off CD1266 Roland Pilz (c, v); René Hagmann (tb); Matthias Seuffert (cl, as); Claus Jacobi (cl, as, ts); Rurik van Heys, Norbert Kemper (p); Gunter Russel (bj); Dietrich Kleine-Horst (tba); Gunter Andernach (wbd, perc); Gaby 'Ottilie' Schulz (v). 3/93; 11/97.
Despite Williams's widespread influence on early jazz, only three of the 18 tunes on the first disc – 'Baby Won't You Please Come Home', 'I Wish I Could Shimmy Like My Sister Kate' and 'Old Folks' Shuffle' – could be called standards. Yet the entire programme is played with easy panache and fluency by this splendid outfit of German connoisseurs. The remarkable Hagmann is on loan from The Dry Throat Fellows, playing trombone this time, and the reed-players get very close to the warbling style of their '20s counterparts; Pilz, too, makes a good fist of the Ed Allen cornet parts. The result is a bright, happy session which flirts with the novelty flavour that Williams himself traded on without succumbing to it: symbolic in this regard is the ferocious trashing of 'Anywhere Sweetie Goes (I'll Be There)', but almost anything here would have sounded just fine on an original Vocalion of 65 years earlier. Volume 2 continues where they left off and with a superior studio sound; this one may edge out the earlier disc. Unencumbered by any American affiliation – they never sound as if they're following the Murphy–Watters line, which many an American traditionalist does – they make this stuff sound very fresh. Perfection: the loco feel of 'Railroad Rhythm'.

Martin Jacobsen

TENOR SAXOPHONE

Newcomer with a strong traditional streak in his playing.

 Current State Steeplechase SCCD 31548 Jacobsen; Doug Raney (g); Gilles Naturel (b); Rick Hollander (d). 11/02.

Jacobsen has a complex lineage, with Rollins, hints of Coltrane, and a lot of Dexter Gordon in his make-up. That said, he's already a completely original voice and his approach to 'Stairway To The Stars', Charles Lloyd's 'Forest Flower' and Hank Mobley's 'Funk In Deep Freeze' is alluringly fresh. Raney provides a subtle but nudging accompaniment and the other two are cliché-free, too.

Peter Jacobsen (1950–2002)

PIANO, KEYBOARDS

Born in Newcastle, trained at the RAM, and a stalwart of London's East End. Blind from early childhood, but suffered more from the myopia of the jazz establishment.

 Ever Onward FMR CD012 Jacobsen (p solo). 10 & 12/94.

 On Your Marks Global Jazz 102 Jacobsen; Simon Woolf (b); Nic France (d). 01.

Peter Jacobsen admired the two Hancocks: Herbie and Tony. If he had some of the former's innate skill and willingness to bend genre, he certainly had much of the latter's lugubrious charm. A consistently underrated player, other than among fellow musicians, Jacobsen worked with Bobby Wellins, Tim Whitehead and others, but was often trapped on a treadmill of commercial gigs.

The long 'Ever Onward' might stand both as personal motto and a convenient summing up of his skills. The FMR disc, a belated debut as a leader/solo artist, ranges from boppish things to free, and from there to funkier settings. The tiny 'Microcosmo' pieces may suggest a knowledge of Bartók's piano music, but they're all Jacobsen in the execution.

The trio date, recorded at Peterborough Jazz Club, is more workmanlike. There's less obvious experiment, but Jacobsen's touch is both searching and profoundly expressive. His premature death was a bitter loss to British jazz.

Illinois Jacquet (1922–2004)

TENOR SAXOPHONE, BASSOON, VOICE

He made his reputation with a solo on Lionel Hampton's 'Flying Home'. A stalwart of the Basie orchestra and later of Jazz At The Philharmonic, the quintessential Texas tenor was capable of subtler stuff as well.

 Illinois Jacquet, 1945–1946 Classics 948 Jacquet; Emmett Berry, Russell Jacquet (t); Henry Coker (tb); John Brown (as); Tom Archia (ts); Arthur Dennis (bs); Bill Doggett, Sir Charles Thompson (p); Freddie Green, Ulysses Livingston (g); Billy Hadnott, Charles Mingus, John Simmons (b); Johnny Otis, Shadow Wilson (d). 7/45–1/46.

* Illinois Jacquet, 1946–1947 Classics 1019 Jacquet; Miles Davis, Marion Hazel, Russell Jacquet, Fats Navarro, Joe Newman (t); Gus Chappell, J. J. Johnson, Ted Kelly, Fred Robinson, Trummy Young, Dicky Wells (tb); Porter Kilbert, Ray Perry (as); Leo Parker (bs); Bill Doggett, Leonard Feather, Sir Charles Thompson (p); John Collins, Freddie Green (g); Al Lucas, John Simmons (b); Denzil Best, Shadow Wilson (d). 8/46–11/47.

(*) Jumpin' At The Apollo Delmark 538 As for the above. 8/45–5/47.

 Illinois Jacquet, 1947–1951 Classics 1254 Jacquet; Russell Jacquet (t, v); Joe Newman (t); Henry Coker, J. J. Johnson (tb); Ray Perry (as); Leo Parker, Maurice Simon (bs); Milt Buckner, Cedric Haywood, Sir Charles Thompson (p); Lionel Hampton (vib); John Collins (g); Red Callender, George Duvivier, Al Lucas (b); Lee Abrams, J. C. Heard, Alan Dawson, Jo Jones, Shadow Wilson (d). 12/47–1/51.

* Illinois Jacquet: 1951–1952 Classics 1376 Jacquet; Carl Perkins (p); Hank Jones (p, cel, org); Count Basie (org); John Collins, Freddie Green, Joe Sinacore (g); Ray Brown, Red Callender, Al Lucas, Gene Ramey (b); Art Blakey, Jimmy Crawford, J. C. Heard, Shadow Wilson (d); Count Basie Orchestra. 1/51–12/52.

 Jacquet A La Carte Ocium 25 Similar to above; some additional personnel. 48–52.

(*) The Illinois Jacquet Story Properbox 49 4CD Similar to above; some additional personnel. 45–51.

Born in Broussard, Louisiana, and raised in Houston, Texas – you somehow know how Illinois Jacquet is going to sound. It's a big, blues tone, tinged with loneliness that somehow underlines Jacquet's status as a permanent guest star. He learned his showmanship in the Hampton band of the early '40s, trading on his remarkable facility in the 'false' upper register and on sheer energy.

Jacquet seems permanently saddled with the 'Texas tenor' tag. In fact, his playing can show remarkable sensitivity and he was one of the fastest thinkers in the business. His ability to take care of his own business was obvious from the shrewd self-management that kept him in the forefront of Norman Granz's Jazz At The Philharmonic. Just a few days after his triumphant debut with JATP, Jacquet cut the first of the sides included on the Classics compilation. Inevitably, he includes another version of 'Flying Home', accompanied this time by brother Russell (who takes the vocal on 'Throw It Out Of Your Mind, Baby'), trombonist Henry Coker and Sir Charles Thompson. The four July sides for Philo are pretty forgettable, and there isn't a chance to hear what Jacquet is really made of until he starts recording for Apollo in August. 'Jacquet Mood' and 'Bottoms Up' are both impressive uptempo numbers, and there is an early sighting of Jacquet the balladeer, an exquisite performance of 'Ghost Of A Chance'. He's back in the same mood early the following year, recording for Savoy in a band with Emmett Berry, who was credited as leader on half the releases. This time, it's 'Don't Blame Me' that reveals the romantic in him. The only other items are a couple of obscurities recorded in August 1945 for ARA. The sharp-eyed will have noted a credit for the 23-year-old Charles Mingus, playing bass on the Apollo sessions. They're collected on the excellent Delmark compilation.

Classics move in their typically dogged way, hoovering up everything that has been done under the artist's name. Jacquet was still with Basie in the summer of 1946, and used many of his day job colleagues for his recordings for Apollo. These and what followed make the next Classics volume a near-essential buy for Jacquet fans. A measure of the excitement generated by his newly configured studio big band of January 1947 can be judged by the quickest scan of the personnel. Four outstanding cuts, with Leonard Feather sitting in as pianist on 'Big Dog'. Illinois with big-toned, confident solos and the ensembles, on 'For Europeans Only' in particular, can't be faulted.

The spring of 1947 saw the saxophonist back working with a smaller group, with Russell Jacquet, Newman, J.J., Leo Parker, Sir Charles Thompson and Freddie Green on board to record just one rather scanty idea; the other cut, from April Fool's Day, is for saxophone and rhythm only. Jacquet is the only lead woodwind, with Parker used largely to fill out the mid-end of the ensembles. Jacquet worked with larger and smaller versions of the All Stars for the rest of the year, and there are excellent things from May ('Robbins' Nest' and 'Jumpin' At The Woodside'), September (another sax-and-rhythm track, 'It's Wild', with one of his most intense solos on disc) and November ('I Surrender Dear', issued only in France).

The 1947–1951 Classics volume begins with the outrageous 'Jet Propulsion', famous for its obsessively repeated one-note finale. 'King Jacquet' goes off at rocket speed, with J.J.'s fleet, saxophone-like counter-phrase shadowing the leader on the introduction. Illinois's power and raw, slightly out-of-tune delivery are insistently attractive. Most of these sides were cut for Victor, though there are some Clef and Mercury recordings made in California in January 1951.

The story picks up there on the fourth and best of the sequence; two years of high-quality work. The first few sides with Perkins, Moore, Callender and Heard are already a notch up, with 'Lazy Blues' and 'All Of Me' superb. He crossed the continent for the next session in New York with Hank Jones at the keyboard. Hank reappears later in the year, but the real highlights of the disc are the dates with Basie-ites, including at one point the Count himself on organ. Hard to list all the highlights of a first-rate set, but we'd single out 'Weary Blues' and a snappy 'Groovin''.

The Ocium disc has some excellent features, not least the enhanced CD format, but given the range of options for this material it's hard to see why anyone would want this rather flat transfer even over the Classics option, or the Proper box, which does the usual cheap-and-cheerful job and offers 79 honking tracks for less than the price of a good bottle of wine.

 Illinois Jacquet 1953–1955 Classics 1451 Jacquet; Harry 'Sweets' Edison, Russell Jacquet (t); Matthew Gee (tb); Ben Webster (ts); Leo Parker, Cecil Payne (bs); Johnny Acea (p); Gerald Wiggins (org); Irving Ashby (g); Curtis Counce (b); Al Bartee, Osie Johnson, Shadow Wilson (d); Chano Pozo (perc). 53–55.

Issued in 2008. The best of the 1953 material is the end-of-year date with Webster formerly available in a Verve limited edition as The Kid And The Brute. 'I Wrote This For The Kid' is a long, collaborative blues, free-flowing but with a strong internal logic. The title-tune is another Jacquet–Webster composition, presumably got up for the session. There's not that much later stuff, which skews the chronology slightly, but it brings together the original LP with an earlier 10-inch, consists entirely of co-written originals, apart from 'September Song' (lovely) and 'It's The Talk Of The Town'. A good buy if you were too slow off the mark for one of those scarce Verves.

(*) Illinois Jacquet Columbia CK 64654 Jacquet; Roy Eldridge, Ernie Royal (t); Matthew Gee (tb); Charlie Davies, Leo Parker, Cecil Payne (bs); Sir Charles Thompson (p); Kenny Burrell (g); George Duvivier, Jimmy Rowser (b); Jimmy Crawford, Jo Jones (d). 2–5/62.

Recording for Epic, Jacquet called together old friends and created perhaps the best music of his career. It was a period not unmarked by sadness, because the session of 5 February 1962 was the last before the death of Leo Parker, who'd been a kingpin of the group. From the opening 'Frantic Fanny' to the superb 'Stella By Starlight', which is played by saxophone and rhythm, Jacquet doesn't put a foot wrong. A large-scale arrangement by Ernie Wilkins of 'Satin Doll' puts the saxophonist in the midst of a fuller, brassier sound. It's very close to the original Ellington version, but both Jacquet and Eldridge rework significant elements of it. Thompson plays some killer choruses. One intriguing element of the work for Epic is Jacquet's return to the alto saxophone. He roars through an upbeat 'Indiana' on the smaller horn and returns to it for an exquisite arrangement of Debussy's 'Reverie'.

 Bottoms Up Original Jazz Classics OJC 417 Jacquet; Barry Harris (p); Ben Tucker (b); Alan Dawson (d). 68.

 The King! Original Jazz Classics OJC 849 Jacquet; Joe Newman, Ernie Royal (t); Milt Buckner (org); Billy Butler (g); Al Lucas (b); Jo Jones (d); Montego Joe (perc). 68–69.

 The Soul Explosion Original Jazz Classics OJC 674 Jacquet; Russell Jacquet, Joe Newman, Ernie Royal (t); Matthew Gee (tb); Frank Foster (ts); Cecil Payne (bs); Milt Buckner (org); Wally Richardson (g); Al Lucas (b); Al Foster (d). 3/69.

 The Blues, That's Me! Original Jazz Classics OJC 614 Jacquet; Wynton Kelly (p); Tiny Grimes (g); Buster Williams (b); Oliver Jackson (d). 9/69.

Jacquet seldom played the blues better than on these good Prestige sets which gave his career a boost. Not much to be said about the music, except that the large-group material on The Soul Explosion is more sophisticated than might be supposed. There are fine versions of 'Still King' and 'Round About Midnight' on The Blues, That's Me!, both of which demonstrate the delicacy of Jacquet's touch. The King! is a ragbag, but it has some strong work from Newman and Royal and the doubled-up CD bonuses, extra takes of 'A Haunting Melody' and 'Blue And Sentimental', are well worth having.

 The Man I Love Black & Blue 865 Jacquet; Wild Bill Davis (org); Albert Bartee (d). 73.

 Jacquet's Street Black & Blue 972 Jacquet; Francis Williams (t); Al Cobbs (tb); Milt Buckner (p); George Duvivier (b); Oliver Jackson (d). 7/76.

 God Bless My Solo /  Live At Schaffhausen Black & Blue 941 / Storyville 8357 Jacquet; Hank Jones (p); George Duvivier (b); J. C. Heard (d). 3/78.

Jacquet never sounded quite as effective in small-group situations. Nevertheless these French dates are vigorously appealing. Buckner was a steady presence in the B&B studio and his rather crude piano style was ideal for Jacquet's approach. Check them both out on two takes of 'Don't Blame Me' and a fine 'Taps Miller'. Jones is a naturally bluesy player and his occasional solos are always effective. By contrast, Davis tries to drown him in sound and the result is a clotted, messy mix. The live album is an interesting point of comparison. Jacquet dominates from the start and explores his upper register as often as he gets the chance, though there is also a brief, quiet 'In A Sentimental Mood'.

 Swingin' Live With Illinois Jacquet Jacquet Records 001 2CD Jacquet; big band; Rhonda Hamilton (mc). 7/04.
The Lincoln Center season of summer dances always finishes with a night of old-fashioned swing and in July 2004 Jacquet's big band closed the celebration with what turned out to be his final performance. It's by no means a classic and the band sounds slightly ragged in places, but for swing lovers it's a perfectly enjoyable set with nice versions of 'Stompin' At The Savoy' and, surprise, surprise, 'Flying Home'.

Also, in brief:

 Swing's The Thing Lone Hill Jazz LHJ 10228. 56, 58.
Paired with a later Verve session. The original S'sTT is still available as a single disc in Japan.

 Illinois Jacquet & His Orchestra Lone Hill Jazz LHJ 10229. 57, 59.
Paired with Flies Again from a couple of years later.

 Go Power Lone Hill Jazz LHJ 10232. 62, 66.
Nice stuff with Kenny Burrell (g), Milt Buckner (org, p) and others; plus five extra takes from & His Orchestra.

 Desert Winds Argo/Verve 000202602. 2/64.
The man who built that booting R&B solo on 'Flying Home' is hard to detect in this elegant and laid-back set with Tommy Flanagan (p) and Kenny Burrell (g).

 Message / Desert Winds Lone Hill Jazz LHJ 10230. 63, 64.
Nice pairing.

 Bosses of the Ballad Lone Hill Jazz LHJ 10231. 64, 65.
Brings together Plays Cole Porter and Spectrum, both originally on Argo. Working with Benny Golson.

 Birthday Party Groove Note 1003. 72.
An all-star cast, assembled to celebrate Illinois's 50th birthday. A grand night for swingin'.

 The JSP Jazz Sessions: Volume 1 – New York JSP 402. 6/80.
Shared with some Junior Mance trio material but a must for alternative takes of 'Bow Jest' and 'Limehouse Blues'.

Russell Jacquet (1917–90)

TRUMPET, VOICE

Illinois's older brother had a modest career, mostly in California. After the dates below, he worked for other leaders, but ran his own label, Town Hall, for a time in the '70s.

 Russell Jacquet 1945–1949 Classics 1145 Jacquet; Snooky Young, Harry 'Sweets' Edison, Gerald Wilson, Harry Parr Jones, Joe Newman, John Anderson, Calvin Boze (t); Eli Robinson, Ted Donelly, J. J. Johnson, Henry Coker (tb); Teddy Edwards, Preston Love, Willie Smith, Sonny Stitt, Gus Evans (as); Maurice Simon, Dexter Gordon, Illinois Jacquet, Lucky Thompson, Bumps Myers (ts); Arthur Dennis, Rudy Rutherford, Leo Parker (bs); Bill Davis, Jimmy Bunn, Bill Doggett, Sir Charles Thompson, Gerald Wiggins (p); Freddie Greene, Leo Blevins (g); Charles Mingus, Billy Hadnott, Herman Washington, Al Lucas, Charlie Drayton (b); Chico Hamilton, Albert Wichard, Shadow Wilson (d); Numa Lee Davis (v). 45–3/49.
Russell Jacquet turned out to be a footnote in jazz history, but he could call on some impressive sidemen for the 20 sides that appeared under his own name. The groups range from eight to 17 in size and were made for Globe, Modern Music, Jewel, Sensation and King. The earlier pieces are in a swing/R&B mould, but the final dozen are more boppish (and include Stitt and J. J. Johnson in the line-ups), even if they keep an eye on the jump-band jukebox music of the day. Jacquet's own style is cast in a pleasingly unpretentious sound which outshines several of the other soloists here, although brother Illinois gets a notably impressive turn on a track simply called 'Blues'.

Bent Jaedig

TENOR SAXOPHONE

Danish follower of Dexter Gordon.

 From Jaedig's Galaxy Storyville STCD 8218 Jaedig; Allan Botschinsky (t); Niels Neergaard (tb); Richard Boone (tb, v); Niels Husum (ts); Ben Besiakov, Atli Bjørn , Thomas Clausen, Tete Montoliu (p); Torben Munk (g); Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen , Bo Stief, Mads Vinding (b); Bjarne Rostvold (d). 66–76.
He's not well-known outside Denmark and this collection of private recordings (mostly in good quality) offers a useful snapshot of the saxophonist in a variety of contexts and over a decade's activity. He's perhaps most effective in the smaller groups and particularly a pianoless trio, where the Dex influence is most evident. However, 'Wait A Second' with Montoliu makes for an arresting opener. Worth dipping into.

Ahmad Jamal (born 1930)

PIANO

Originally Fritz Jones of Pittsburgh, Jamal may well have adopted a more exotic name, but stylistically he went in the opposite direction, carving out a spare, spacious piano style, characterized by a subtle use of silence.

* The Legendary Okeh & Epic Recordings Epic/Legacy 93580 2CD Jamal; Ray Crawford (g); Eddie Calhoun, Israel Crosby (b). 10/51–10/55.
 Chamber Music of the New Jazz /  Complete Recordings /  Pavane For Ahmad GRP 000268202 / Definitive DRCD 11292 / FiveFour 16 Jamal; Ray Crawford (g); Israel Crosby (b). 5/55; 10/51–10/56; 10/51–10/55.
As Brian Priestley has pointed out, pianists who achieve a modicum of commercial success tend to move closer to the entertainment mainstream than any other musicians, except possibly singers, who are often thought to belong there anyway. For many years, Jamal gave much of his attention to running a chi-chi club, the Alhambra, rather than to playing, but his influence on Miles Davis and the aura of his wildly successful 1958 trio has kept him in prominence.

The Epic/Legacy set brings together the work of the first trio. Hard to see how anything other than the Pershing date can be regarded as 'legendary', but there are great and forgotten things here, like an epic 'Love For Sale', with Cole-ish touches. Crosby quickly replaced Calhoun, but the key figure is Crawford, whose tapped guitar strings give a unique sound. Much of the material is repeated on the Definitive set and sampled on the FiveFour disc. Now that these early recordings are out of copyright, it's open season and other versions may become available. Chamber Music is still available separately. It's a title guaranteed to put off some jazz purists. In reality, Jamal's sure, intelligently swinging touch and Crawford's surprisingly hard, ringing tone keep this well away from any hint of Third Stream abstraction. 'New Rhumba' was to have an impact on Miles and Gil Evans; all the other cuts are standards.

CORE COLLECTION

* At The Pershing / (*) Complete Live At The Pershing Lounge

Chess MCD 09108 / Gambit 69624 2CD Jamal; Israel Crosby (b); Vernell Fournier (d). 1/58.

Jamal almost always sounds better caught live. The Pershing record is something of an industry phenomenon, climbing to number three on the Billboard 'Hot 100' on its release and staying in the chart for more than two years. Now impeccably remastered, it demonstrates how and why Jamal was able to negotiate mainstream success. 'Poinciana' was a single, edited from the live performance. Both versions are given on the Gambit, which has 72 minutes of music to Chess's 32, though in far less delightful sound.

Jamal's technique has scarcely changed over the years and remains closer to Erroll Garner than to anyone else, concentrating on fragile textures and calligraphic melodic statements (the qualities that attracted Miles Davis) rather than the propulsive logic of bebop piano. His reinterpretations of 'Woody'N'You' and 'There Is No Greater Love' are cool and subtle.

(*) Complete Live At The Spotlite Gambit 69265 2CD As above. 9/58.

The Washington, DC, tapes are much more complete than those from the Pershing earlier in the year and afford a chance to hear the group in full and over two September nights. The Gambit reissue brings together material that previously could only be found scattered across LPs and CD reissues like (albeit excellent though they are) Cross Country Tour and Ahmad's Blues below. 'Ahmad's Blues' is familiar enough fare, but the performances of 'Stompin' At The Savoy' and 'Squatty Roo' here might fox an unwary listener first time round. Across 25 cuts – the remaining three on the second disc were studio recordings issued as 45s – Jamal steadily reveals himself to be a highly subtle player whose harmonic grasp is matched by a clever modulation of metre and dynamics. How satisfying these performances must have been to those present.

* Cross Country Tour: 1958–1961 Chess GRP 18132 2CD Jamal; Israel Crosby (b); Vernell Fournier (d). 1/58, 9/58, 6/61.

 Ahmad's Blues Chess 051803-2 As above. 9/58.

These have been demoted since our last edition, simply because the availability of full documentations from the Pershing and Spotlite does change the rules of the game. Cross Country Tour is still a very good sampling and in fine sound, but Ahmad's Blues fails to deliver the full impact of the Spotlite material.

(*) The Awakening Impulse! 051226-2 Jamal; Jamil Nasser (b); Frank Gant (d). 2/70.

This more or less rounds out the picture of Jamal as a polished stylist, highly pianistic but disinclined to emote. What is once again clear, though, is how integrated and even-handed a Jamal group is: Nasser and Gant are no mere accompanists but significant performers in their own right, and the drummer brings a depth of focus to the music, a touch of darkness and danger even to a joyous theme like 'Dolphin Dance'. Apart from the title-track, with its dramatic four-note cell, and the more abstract 'Patterns', everything is by other hands. Oliver Nelson's 'Stolen Moments' is the outstanding item.

 Live At The Montreal Jazz Festival 1985 Collectables COL 7718 Jamal; James Cammack (b); Herlin Riley (d); Seldon Newton (perc). 85.

'Yellow Fellow' makes for a long and unusual opening, but the rest of the set is more familiar, with a lovely version of Shorter's 'Footprints', 'Round Midnight' and an unexpected read of Jack DeJohnette's 'Ebony' in amongst the Jamal originals. The sound is pretty superior and this reissue is transferred well.

* Chicago Revisited Telarc CD 83327 Jamal; John Heard (b); Yoron Israel (d). 11/92.

 The Essence: Part 1 Dreyfus FDM 37007 2 Jamal; George Coleman (ts); James Cammack, Jamil Nasser (b); Idris Muhammad (d); Manolo Badrena (perc). 94–95.

 Big Byrd: The Essence: Part 2 Dreyfus 37008 2 As above, except omit Coleman; add Donald Byrd (t); Joe Kennedy Jr (vn). 10/94, 2/95.

The '90s saw a startling renaissance. Jazz piano became fashionable again, and Jamal started to play with something like the poise and brilliance of the '50s.

Chicago Revisited could hardly be bettered as an example of contemporary jazz piano. The elegance of his line on 'All The Things You Are', with which the set opens, is such that it could be balanced on a pin. Clifford Brown's 'Daahoud' recalls a whole era in just a few bars. The remainder of the set is typically eclectic, tunes by Irving Ashby, Harold Adamson and Jimmy McHugh, Nick Brodszky and Sammy Cahn, and John Handy, closing with a 'Lullaby Of Birdland' that is concentrated songfulness.

These days, he has the wise, thoughtful look of an African parliamentarian, and a measured, slightly unrevealing delivery, well represented on The Essence. Difficult to pick between the two volumes, though our suspicion is that one really cracking album might have been distilled from the sessions. In present form, they don't quite happen. Coleman's contribution is as substantial and thoughtful as always, but it's the appearance of the back-to-form Byrd which makes the second set swing. He's the featured soloist on the title-track. All three albums, now available in new editions, run counter to the prevailing expectation that Jamal can still easily be dismissed as shallow and clinical, unemotional and even unexpressive. Nonsense. Jamal has chosen to refract a misunderstood band of the jazz spectrum, and the music would be poorer without him. This is wise and measured music, which requires a certain effort of attention, not because it is hypersubtle or 'difficult' but because it makes its points quietly and without histrionics.

(*) I Remember Duke, Hoagy & Strayhorn Telarc 83339 Jamal; Ephraim Wolfolk (b); Arti Dixson (d). 6/94.

A slow and stately performance, though Jamal often experiments in double-time improvisations over very stately rhythm tracks. The mood is almost bizarrely even and elegiac. This works less well, perversely, on material like 'Prelude To A Kiss', which sounds enervated rather than swooningly passionate, than on 'Skylark' and 'I Got It Bad ...' The Carmichael material is the scantest, though 'I Remember Hoagy', derived from the changes to 'Stardust', is a delightful conceit and a perfect showcase for Jamal's cool and playful approach. We know little about Wolfolk or Dixson, but they sound like competent and uncomplicatedly expressive players; and the trio sound, with Jamal pitched well to the forefront, is nicely recorded.

(*) Nature: The Essence, Part 3 Dreyfus FDM 37018 2 Jamal; Stanley Turrentine (ts); James Cammack (b); Idris Muhammad (d); Othello Molineaux (perc). 6/98.
For us the best of the Essence sequence, this shifts between dense, rhetorical piano solos – 'Chaperon', 'And We Were Lovers' – and quartet tracks like 'Devil's In My Den', which features a walk-on from the rejuvenated Stanley Turrentine. 'If I Find You Again', the opening track of Nature, is definitive, but there's also a wonderful version of the theme from The Sand Pebbles, testimony to Jamal's interest in unusual repertoire. He also does a delightful 'Cabin In The Sky'.

There is also an intriguing role for the steel-drum player, Othello Molineaux. The rhythm section is well up to form and Cammack, as the junior partner, seems to have come on in leaps and bounds. Time, surely, for an Essence package.

 Live in Paris 1996 Dreyfus FDM 37020 Jamal; George Coleman (ts); Calvin Keys (g); Joe Kennedy Jr (vn); Jeff Chambers (b); Yoron Israel (d); Manolo Badrena (perc). 96.
 A L'Olympia Dreyfus FDM 36629 2 Jamal; George Coleman (ts); James Cammack (b); Idris Muhammad (d). 11/00.
Jamal was an honoured figure in Europe through the '90s, playing a sophisticated jazz that went down particularly well in France. The first of these is elegance itself and Coleman's harmonic wisdom comes through in every phrase. Check out the original 'Bellows' and the closing 'There's A Lull In My Life'. Sheer class.

The second one is also an absolutely cracking record. Marking his 70th birthday with another concert in Paris, Jamal doesn't lie back and enjoy the occasion but seems bent on delivering a performance to rival the celebrated At The Pershing. That he does so – and royally – is, we're afraid, largely down to the magisterial presence of big George Coleman, whose solo on 'How Deep Is The Ocean' is one of the finest of his distinguished career, solidly engineered and delicately crafted. Jamal responds with one of several toughly lyrical solos.

The set gives early notice of intent with a long, pungent performance of 'The Night Has A Thousand Eyes' and Jamal astonishes with a brilliantly inventive uptempo introduction to 'Autumn Leaves'; a classic reinvented. Coleman creeps in slyly from off-mic and together they no more than tag the familiar melody before taking it off in new directions. Muhammad's drumming, which elsewhere is businesslike and orderly, makes a substantial contribution. 'My Foolish Heart' is more straightforwardly melodic, but Coleman brings a gentle stridency to his solo, popping his pads softly here and there, which gives the tune a new poignancy.

'Appreciation' and the encore 'Aftermath' are showpieces for piano and rhythm. The latter, unusually, is the only Jamal composition on the set, though recent years have seen him concentrate ever more fixedly on reinvented standards and less on original fare. It would have been good to get George back on for one last hurrah, but it was Jamal's night and it would be hard to better A L'Olympia.

 In Search Of ... Momentum (1–10) Birdology FDM 36644 2 Jamal; James Cammack (b); Idris Muhammad (d). 8/02.
There is every indication that Jamal is moving into one of the busiest phases of his writing career. These are mainly new tunes, none of them instant standards but all thoughtful and well-balanced. He mentions a desire to be moving on to the next project, which might well be a full recording of a piece called 'I'll Take The 20', which is briefly excerpted here, enough to suggest that it might be an interesting experience. Cammack and Muhammad give him everything he needs in support and the chops are still very fleet and elegant.

 After Fajr Birdology FDM 36676 2 Jamal; James Cammack (b); Idris Muhammad (d); Donna McElroy, Vox One (v). 7/04.
The title-track is the only vocal piece on what is otherwise a steady-as-you-go Jamal live set. 'Topsy Turvy', though, demonstrates once again his insistence that the basic piano/bass/drums format can still function like a much larger unit. The sheer density of sound here is extraordinary, throwing into focus some of the Tatum-influenced lines on some of the other tracks. 'Time On My Hands' and 'My Heart Stood Still' are both big, two-handed affairs, with lots of busy octave work and a rumbling bass that increases in intensity through the solos. Cammack has become an indispensable component of the Jamal sound, but it's the leader's pianism that impresses.

Also, in brief:

 Encore – Live At Bubba's /  Live At Midem Magnum 2104 / 2106. 80, 81.
Two good live sets from an otherwise poorly documented period. Gary Burton (vib) guests on the second. OK sound, but availability might be erratic.

 Live In Paris, 1992 Dreyfus FDM 37019 2. 4/92.
These were taped over two nights with two different trios. A wonderful medley of 'Alone Together', 'Laura' and 'Wild Is The Wind' is the highlight.

() And The Assai Quartet Roesch 42. 1/98.
Pleasant enough, but so mild and modulated as to be almost subliminal in impact. Four live pieces with a string quartet, plus a short suite entitled 'Pots En Verre'.

 Picture Perfect Birdology 85268. 4/01.
Trio recordings – James Cammack or Jamil Nasser (b), Idris Muhammad (d) – to which Marc Cargill's violin adds some extra interest.

 Live In Baalbeck Dreyfus FDM 36667 DVD. 02.
Jamal's quiet presence doesn't make for the most dramatic visuals, but this is a pleasing concert set, sensitively and unpretentiously filmed.

Khan Jamal (born 1946)

VIBRAPHONE, MARIMBA, CLARINET

Began playing vibes in the middle '60s and since then his various associations – with Byard Lancaster, Sunny Murray, Charles Tyler and others – suggest a restless but accommodating spirit.

 Drumdance To The Motherland Eremite MTE 050 Jamal; Dwight James (cl, glock, d); Monnette Sudler (g, perc); Billy Mills (b); Alex Ellison (d). 10/72.
Still very much a marginal figure in modern jazz, Jamal merits attention. This recovery from the '70s, reissued on CD in 2006 from the original Dogtown LP, is inevitably time-lined by its murky sound, but these are none the less adventurous and mostly successful tracks. Engineer Mario Falana has turned Jamal's old-fashioned instrumentation into a shadowy soundscape that still fascinates after more than 30 years. The track titles – 'Cosmic Echoes', 'Drum Dance', 'Inner Peace', 'Breath Of Life' – are pretty much what you'd expect from the time and the fusion aesthetic, but Jamal (who doubles here on clarinet) is subtle enough to overcome any reservations.

(*) Dark Warrior Steeplechase SCCD 31196 Jamal; Charles Tyler (as, bs); Johnny Mbizo Dyani (b); Leroy Lowe (d). 9/84.

 Three Steeplechase SCCD 31201 Jamal; Pierre Dørge (g); Johnny Mbizo Dyani (d). 10/84.

 The Traveller Steeplechase SCCD 31217 Jamal; Johnny Mbizo Dyani (b); Leroy Lowe (d). 10/85.

The dedication to Cal Tjader on Three suggests one source for Jamal's firmly rhythmic but freely pulsed vibraphone style. The partnership with Dyani was an immensely fruitful one, and on Dark Warrior the additional presence of Tyler's sour-sweet alto and bossy baritone delivers some fascinating music, which isn't quite matched on the two later Steeplechases. There is just a hint of Tjader's pattering approach, and vibes fans may hear echoes of just about everyone from Bobby Hutcherson to Steeplechase stablemate Walt Dickerson, to Karl Berger, and it may be that the lack of a settled identity and idiolect is the main problem with Jamal's work. Though his approach to a standard, like the usually saxophonic 'Body And Soul' on The Traveller, is reminiscent of Hutcherson's free counterpoint, in terms of diction it is even less horn-like, closer to Dickerson's abstract theme formulations..

(*) Percussion And Strings CIMP 143 Jamal; Dylan Taylor (clo); Ed Crockett (b); Craig McIver (d, mar); Pete Vinson (d, perc). 3/97.

This is probably the sound Jamal has heard in his head for years but only now been able to evoke in real time. The combination of instruments is effective, with strings acting as rhythmic accompaniment to the percussion-players. Vinson is involved on only a couple of tracks, playing cowbell on 'Return From Exile' and switching to drums for 'Round About Midnight', allowing McIver to switch to marimba. Monk and Johnny Dyani are the presiding presences, with 'Blue Monk' and 'Witch Doctor's Son' the outstanding tracks.

 Balafon Dance CIMP 267 Jamal; Roy Campbell (t); Jemeel Moondoc (as); Dylan Taylor (b); Dwight James (d). 3/02.

The hurt, raw sound of Moondoc and Campbell in consort with the leader gives this fine session its distinctive cast. As with previous albums, Jamal explores elements of African rhythm and James proves to be an able collaborator. The title-piece is probably the best example so far of the vibist's rhythmic concerns to make it onto a record, but 'African Rhythm Tongues' is a clearer exposition of the same ideas. There is a lot of shared experience lying behind these improvisations and the group sound is tight and coherent.

 Black Awareness CIMP 322 Jamal; Grachan Moncur III (tb, v); Byard Lancaster (as); Dylan Taylor (b); Dwight James (d). 1/05.

Forty years ago, that would have looked quite an inflammatory title, but this is a markedly laid-back, old-pals session, so relaxed in fact that Moncur, often thought to be a lugubrious presence, busks a vocal on the final cut, 'Sonny's Back'. Jamal's technique hasn't throttled back at all, but technique is less what he's about than feeling, and there's a lovely instinctive quality to this session, one that suits CIMP's recording philosophy very well indeed.

Also, in brief:

(*) Speak Easy Gazell 4001. 88.

With Dave Burrell (p), William Parker (b) and Sunny Murray (d) completing the group, this is a rare opportunity for Jamal to play with peers. A fine record.

 Cubano Chant /  Cool Jambrio 1002 / 1008. 01; 02.

More than a touch of Afro-Cuban about this obscure pair. Tjader is invoked again, but in new contexts. Byard Lancaster (as) features on the first, John F. Rodgers (clo) on the second.

Bob James (born 1939)

PIANO

Started out as a bopper with avant-garde leanings, but switched to R&B, fusion and other styles.

 Explosions ESP 1009 James; Barre Phillips (b); Robert Pozar (d). 5/65.

A massively prolific player, and his career took some strange stylistic turns. This is an intriguing period piece, which has considerable staying power, now in its fourth or fifth reincarnation. It's important for the integration of electronics into a basic piano trio, and while it's callow in its way it continues to intrigue. Valued, too, for containing compositions by Robert Ashley and Gordon Mumma, two major figures of American new music.

Harry James (1916–83)

TRUMPET

Born into a family of circus musicians, he joined Ben Pollack in 1935, switching to Benny Goodman as star soloist in 1937, then leading his own band from 1939, with Sinatra as vocalist. His taste for show-off virtuosity brought him million-selling records but the derision of many jazz followers. Married Betty Grable.

(*) Harry James 1937–1939 Classics 903 James; Jack Palmer (t, v); Tom Gonsoulin, Claude Bowen, Buck Clayton (t); Eddie Durham, Vernon Brown, Russell Brown, Truett Jones (tb); Earl Warren, Dave Matthews, Claude Lakey (as); Jack Washington (as, bs); Herschel Evans, Arthur Rollini, Drew Page, Bill Luther (ts); Harry Carney (bs); Jess Stacy, Pete Johnson, Albert Ammons, Jack Gardner (p); Bryan Kent (g); Walter Page, Thurman Teague, Johnny Williams (b); Jo Jones, Dave Tough, Eddie Dougherty, Ralph Hawkins (d); Helen Humes, Bernice Byers (v). 12/37–3/39.

 Harry James 1939 Classics 936 James; Jack Schaeffer, Tom Gonsoulin, Claude Bowen, Jack Palmer (t); Russell Brown, Truett Jones (tb); Dave Matthews, Claude Lakey (as); Drew Page, Al Sears, Bill Luther (ts); Jack Gardner (p); Bryan Kent (g); Thurman Teague (b); Ralph Hawkins (d); Frank Sinatra, Fran Haines, Bernice Byers (v). 4–10/39.

 Harry James 1939–1940 Classics 970 As above, except omit Gonsoulin, Palmer, Sears, Hawkins, Byers; add Dalton Rizzotto (tb); Mickey Scrima (d); Dick Haymes (v). 11/39–4/40.

(*) Harry James 1940–1941 Classics 1014 James; Claude Bowen, Nick Buono, Jack Palmer, Al Stearns (t); Truett Jones, Dalton Rizzotto, Bruce Squires, Hoyt Bohannon, Harry Rodgers (tb); Dave Matthews, Claude Lakey, Johnny Mezey (as); Vido Musso (ts); Chuck Gentry (bs); Jack Gardner, Al Lerner (p); Ben Heller (g); Thurman Teague (b); Mickey Scrima (d); Fran Haines, Dick Haymes (v). 5/40–1/41.

 Harry James 1941 Classics 1052 Similar to above, except add Sam Rosenblum, Stan Stanchfield, William Schumann, George Koch (vn). 1–4/41.

(*) Harry James 1941 Vol. 2 Classics 1092 James; Claude Bowen, Al Stearns (t); Dalton Rizzotto, Hoyt Bohannon, Harry Rodgers (tb); Claude Lakey, Sam Marowitz (as); Vido Musso, Johnny Fresco (ts); Chuck Gentry, Clint Davis (bs); Al Lerner (p); Sam Rosenblum, Glenn Herzer, Leo Zorn, Alex Pevsner, Al Friede, Paul Lowenkron, Lou Horvarth, Bill Spears (vn); Ben Heller (g); Thurman Teague (b); Mickey Scrima (d); Helen Ward, Dick Haymes, Lynn Richards (v). 5–8/41.

 Harry James And His Orchestra Featuring Frank Sinatra Columbia CK 66377-2 James; Jack Schaeffer, Claude Bowen, Tom Gonsoulin, Jack Palmer, Claude Lakey (t); Russell Brown, Truett Jones, Dalton Rizzotto, Bruce Squires (tb); Dave Matthews, Claude Lakey, Bill Luther, Drew Page (sax); Jack Gardner (p); Brian Kent (g); Thurman Teague (b); Ralph Hawkins, Mickey Scrima (d); Frank Sinatra (v). 7–10/39.

James's early period is well represented on CD and there is plenty for admirers to choose from. The Classics discs start him off with three terrific sessions, two in which he fronts a small group drawn from the Basie band, one where he repeats the trick using Goodman sidemen (plus Harry Carney!). Unabashed by the heavy company, James often blows the roof off. Four tracks with Albert Ammons and Pete Johnson spotlight his tersest, hottest playing before the sessions with his proper big band close the disc, opening on his theme-tune, 'Ciribiribin', which exemplifies what James was about: no better trumpet technician, a great capacity to swing, but with a penchant for schmaltz mixed with bravado. Classics 936 follows the band through six sessions in six months. Sinatra arrives for eight vocals, and though the band are impressive on the likes of 'King Porter Stomp', James is the only soloist of any consequence and the arrangements are workmanlike. One is reminded of the Bunny Berigan big band, except that James has all of Berigan's technique and little of his judgement. Featuring Frank Sinatra is a good set of the young crooner's vocals with James, and though jazz followers will be disappointed at the low temperature, it remains a classy edition of smooth playing and singing.

Those searching for hot music will be disappointed by these discs. Vocals by Sinatra and subsequently Haymes tend to dominate the band's output (James considered singers a 'necessary evil') and Classics 903 introduces such infamous showpiece hits as 'Concerto For Trumpet' and 'Carnival Of Venice'. With hindsight, these are entertaining enough, but it's disappointing that the leader didn't see fit to balance such music out with tunes that could show off the chops of the band. Classics 1014 starts with 'Flight Of The Bumble Bee' and, unless one enjoys the Haymes features, pickings here are pretty slim. Classics 1052 at least has the likes of 'Duke's Mixture' and 'Jeffries' Blues', but the addition of a violin section allowed little but extra schmaltz and James recut new versions of 'Carnival Of Venice' and 'Trumpet Rhapsody'. Classics 1092 again has little to offer beyond the vocal features.

 Harry James 1941–1942 Classics 1132 James; Claude Bowen, Nick Buono, Al Stearns, Al Cuozzo (t); Dalton Rizzotto (tb, v); Hoyt Bohannon, Harry Rodgers (tb); Claude Lakey, Sam Marowitz (as); Dave Matthews (as, ts); Corky Corcoran (ts); Clint Davis (bs); Al Lerner (p); Ben Heller (g); Thurman Teague (b); Mickey Scrima (d); Dick Haymes, Helen Forrest, Jimmy Saunders (v); strings. 10/41–1/42.

 Harry James 1942 Classics 1178 As above, except add Willard Culley (frhn); George Davis (bs); Johnny McAfee (bs, as, v). 2–7/42.

(*) Record Session '39–'42 Hep 1068 As various discs above. 2/39–7/42.

An interesting period. As usual, there's a sprinkling of schmaltz, along with some genuinely effective, sweet performances and superior instrumentals. The Classics approach means that one has to take the interestingly rough with the very smooth, but both discs have some fine sides: 'The Mole', 'The Clipper' and 'I Remember You' (Classics 1132) and 'James Session', 'Let Me Up' and 'Jump Town' (Classics 1178). The strings were being integrated into the orchestra's sound with increasing effectiveness, and with Helen Forrest (joining from Benny Goodman) James could boast a top-line singer, even though Sinatra (subsequently Haymes) had departed.

Hep's set picks out some of the plums from the period and is, naturally, in excellent sound.

 Feet Draggin' Blues Hep CD 62 James; Jimmy Campbell, Al Ramsey, Uan Rasey, Red Berken, Jim Troutman, Jimmy Grimes, Lenny Corris, Hal Moe, Darl Berken, Zeke Zarchy, Paul Geil, Mannie Klein, Pinky Savitt, Nick Buono, Gene Komer, Ralph Osborn (t); Vic Hamann, Charlie Preble, Ray Heath, Dalton Rizzotto, Ed Kusby, Ziggy Elmer (tb); Juan Tizol (vtb); Willie Smith (cl, as, v); Eddie Rosa (cl, as); Claude Lakey, Les Robinson (as); Polly Polifroni (cl, ts); Corky Corcoran, Clint Davis, Herbie Haymer, Babe Russin, Sam Sachelle (ts); Stuart Bruner, Bob Poland (bs); Arnold Ross, Stan Wrightsmann, Bruce MacDonald (p); Allan Reuss, Hayden Causey, Tiny Timbrell (g); Ed Mihelich, Artie Bernstein (b); Carl Maus, Nick Fatool, Buddy Combine, Lou Fromm (d); Ginnie Powell (v); strings. 11/44–11/47.

 There They Go Fresh Sound FSRCD 2014 James; Nick Buono, Pinky Savitt, Ralph Osbourne, Gene Komer, Everett Macdonald, Neal Hefti (t); Juan Tizol, Ziggy Elmer, Charlie Preble, Dave Robbins (tb); Eddie Rosa, Al Pellegrini, Willie Smith, Bob Walters (c, as); Jimmy Cook, Sam Sachelle, Corky Corcoran (ts); Bob Poland (bs); Bruce McDonald (p); Tiny Timbrell (g); Joe Mondragon (b); Don Lamond, Frank Bode, Louie Bellson (d). 48.

 Big John Special '49 Hep CD 24 Similar to above, except add Phil Cook (t); Tommy Greco (tb); Musky Ruffo (as); Bob Bain (g); Norman Seelig (b). 6/49–11/50.

 Trumpet Blues Sounds Of Yesteryear DSOY 617 Basically as above. 49–50.

(*) Bandstand Memories 1938–1948 Hindsight HBCD503 3CD As all discs above, probably with numerous others! 38–48.

The easiest way to get a feel for James's better music is to sample the numerous aircheck recordings. James remained popular on radio throughout the '40s, and plenty of material has survived in pro-am recordings. There They Go is a better bet for swing followers. James seemed to get more adventurous as the big-band era wore down, and there are some fine charts here from Neal Hefti in particular. The programme is exhaustingly fast and sometimes it seems the other soloists have caught James's showstopping infection to their detriment, but the music's exciting.

The Hindsight box covers ten years of material and is as good a summary of James as we're likely to get. The earliest material has many rough spots, but the next two discs range from good to excellent, and the third in particular is a strong manifesto for the band. James himself remained the main soloist; some part of the young firebrand who started with Goodman remains, but the broad tone and sometimes broader taste of his later work is there too.

It has some stiff competition from the two Hep discs, which are in excellent sound and between them cover most of James's stylings from 1944 onwards. Big John Special duplicates much of There They Go, but in a superior edition. James's modernism was always going to be cautious, and he valued precision as much as heat in his players. But these will confound listeners who expect the dreary routines of his hit records. Trumpet Blues is more of the same.

 And His New Swingin' Band Jazz Beat 515 James; Nick Buono, Mike Conn, John Audino, Ollie Mitchell, Bob Rolfe, Rob Turk (t); Ray Sims, Joe Cadena, Bob Edmondson (tb); Juan Tizol (vtb); Ernie Tack (btb); Willie Smith (as, v); Joe Riggs (as); Herb Lorden (cl, as); Sam Firmature (ts); Bob Poland (ts); Dave Madden (ts, bs); Ernie Small (bs, f, tb); Jack Perciful (p); Dave Koonse, Terry Rosen (g); Joe Comfort, Red Kelly, Marvin Shore (b); Jake Hanna, Jackie Mills (d). 4/59, 9/61.
 Today! Jazz Beat 516 Similar to above, except add Harold Billings, Joe Hambrick, Larry McGuire, Vern Guertin (t); Vince Diaz, Dick Hyde (tb); Dick McQuardy, Dick Leith (btb); Pat Chartrand (as); Modesto Bresano (t, bs). 2/60, 1 & 3/61.
Stereo recording did the James band proud and the new arrangements by Ernie Wilkins, Neal Hefti (a whole LP's worth compiled with Today!), Quincy Jones and others provided a rich platform for Harry's incorrigible showmanship. There are some contemporary pop flourishes, like 'Back Beat Boogie' on New Swingin' Band, but they work fine in context and there's enough hot playing to satisfy jazz purists. The first one compiles the title LP with Requests On The Road.

Also, in brief:

 James With Haymes – 1941 Circle CCD-5. 41.
Haymes went extraordinarily deep for a young man of 21 and it's nice to luxuriate in the voice. Not much else here, though.

 Hotel Astor Roof Storyville STCD 2067. 8 & 9/42.
Another fine radio show. This is the sound of a man who's wooing the most desired woman in America.

* Eight Bar Riff Hep 83. 11/43–6/50.
A sparkling compilation that brings together some of the best of the wartime stuff and after, including the item below.

 Meadowbrook Memories Jasmine 2566. 44.
Two shows from the Meadowbrook Ballroom in New Jersey. Nice work from Smith, Corcoran, Kitty Kallen and others.

 Harry James 1945–1946 Classics 1313. 7/45–5/46.
Though big bands were in decline, James still had more than 30 men on his payroll. Kitty Kallen takes some appealing vocals, and the playing's handsome, but it's mostly dance band music.

 In Person/Hi-Fi Sounds Avid 918. 10/52–12/55.
Two solid LP-era sets in good sound.

(*) Trumpet Blues Capitol 521224-2. 7/55–7/58.
A compilation from the Capitol originals Harry James In Hi-Fi and More Harry James In Hi-Fi, part of the label's initiative in asking swing-era bandleaders to redo their hits for LP.

(*) Jazz Masters 55: Harry James Verve 529902-2. 59–3/64. The best of the MGM tracks will be a revelation to any who thought James a swing-era relic.

 Harry's Delight Sounds Of Yesteryear DSOY 607. 4/61–8/62.
A pair of shows featuring familiar stuff from the book of the day.
… and countless others on Collectables, Dutton, Past Perfect, Sounds Of Yesteryear, Swing Factory and more.

Jon Jang (born 1954)

PIANO

Originally Jang Jian Liang, he is a Chinese-American who took up piano late and came to prominence in Fred Ho's Afro-Asian Ensemble.

(*) Self Defense! Soul Note 121203 Jang; John Worley Jr (t, flhn); Jeff Cressman (tb, perc); Melecio Magdaluyo (as, ss, f, perc); Jim Norton (bcl, ss, f, dizi); Mark Izu (b, sheng); Anthony Brown (d, perc); Susan Hayase, James Frank Holder (perc). 6/91.
(*) Tiananmen! Soul Note 121223 Jang; Liu Qi-Chao (suona, erhu, sheng, v); Zhang Yan (guzheng); John Worley Jr (t, flhn); Jeff Cressman (tb); James Newton (f); Melecio Magdaluyo (as, ss, f); Francis Wong (ts, f); Jim Norton (cl, bcl, af); Mark Izu (b); Anthony Brown (perc). 2/93.
(*) Two Flowers On A Stem Soul Note 121253 Jang; James Newton (f); David Murray (ts, bcl); Chen Jiebing (erhu); Santi Debriano (b, Chinese gong); Billy Hart (d). 6/95.
Jang's Arkestra takes its name from Horace Tapscott's Pan African People's Arkestra rather than Sun Ra's. Like Tapscott, Jang is an activist. The pieces on Self Defense! relate to issues such as anti-Japanese violence in America, the demand for reparations for Japanese-Americans interned during the war, and Jesse Jackson's pan-ethnic Rainbow Coalition. Even 'A Night In Tunisia' has a political resonance; Dizzy Gillespie was once put forward as a write-in candidate for the presidency. Jang gives it a huge programme that links it to 'The Butterfly Lovers Song' and Jang's own 'Never Give Up!'. The original pieces may depend too heavily on exclamation marks, but 'Concerto For Jazz Ensemble And Taiko' demonstrates Jang's ability to give large-scale structures a directness that doesn't depend on either volume or a ready-to-wear outfit of worthy slogans. Even in live performance (in Seattle), there is no tendency to hector. There are fewer actual references to Asian music on Self Defense! than on Tiananmen!, a magnificent suite of pieces dedicated to the martyrs of the Chinese democracy movement. Jang repeats the 'Butterfly Lovers Song' and calls repeatedly on Chinese folk tunes, but the main influences are Charles Mingus and Duke Ellington (the later 'world music' suites); 'Come Sunday, June 4, 1989' contains an explicit homage, when Ellington's tune is played in counterpoint to Jang's theme by James Newton, a long-time supporter of the Asian jazz movement.

The presence of Murray and Newton on Two Flowers And A Stem gives the music both gravity and a wonderful lightness of spirit, and there can rarely have been such a sanguine interpretation of Mingus's 'Meditation On Integration'. Most of the material is Jang's own, a suite of pieces dedicated to family members and friends, but there is also a closing reprise of the 'Butterfly Lovers Song', which is as exquisitely beautiful as the title-piece, dedicated to his mother.

 Beijing Trio Asian Improv 0044 Jang; Chen Jiebing (erhu); Max Roach (d). 98.
 River Of Life Asian Improv 0062 Jang; David Murray (ts, bcl). 9/98–2/01.
The idea of mixing American jazz with oriental sounds wasn't new when the Beijing Trio was founded. Coltrane had done it, and Asian-Americans like Toshiko Akiyoshi had imported new sonorities and rhythms into bebop. Jang's instrument guarantees that he remains solidly allied to Western harmony, and the inclusion of Chen's two-stringed erhu in place of contrabass adds no more than an unusual sound-colour to what is essentially a conventional piano trio. The key player is Roach, a deep student of other rhythmic languages.

River Of Life is a fascinating East–West encounter that reveals more common ground than differences. The saxophonist is most convincing when he explores the lower reaches of his main horn and when he switches to bass clarinet. Jang's declamatory style alternates with a more delicate and impressionistic sound. There are two versions of 'Eleanor Bumpurs' (one live), passionate portraits of the late Johnny Dyani and Julius Hemphill, and a two-part meditation on capital punishment.

Also, in brief:

 Immigrant Suite No. 1 Soul Note 121303. 97.
Stoical rather than angry, this has an impressive grandeur.

 Self-Portrait Asian Improv 0050. 99.
A surprisingly modest solo performance, with few apparent agendas and most couched in conventional jazz idiom.

Peter Janson

DOUBLE BASS

Outstanding Swedish free/avant-garde player.

* Live At Glenn Miller Café, Volume 1 Ayler AYL CD 012 Janson; Jonas Kullhammar (sax); Paal Nilssen-Love (d). 9/01.
Volume 1 on an improvised set can prompt a groan. Here, one wishes more of this date had been included. Janson is only alphabetically the leader of a collaborative trio, curated by Kullhammar. The three had not played together before; so much more impressive, then, the understanding between them. These are all improvised pieces, and Janson often takes a lead, suggesting a strong pulse, as on the very long closing 'Blow Out', and putting much-needed steam behind the occasionally labouring 'Smash And Grab'; the titles tell you a lot about the music, but where's Volume 2?

Kjell Jansson (born 1950)

DOUBLE BASS

Born in Gothenburg, he came up through rock and is now a stalwart of the Swedish jazz scene.

 Back Where We Came From Touché Music TMcCD 009 Jansson; Gilbert Holmström, Gunnar Lindgren (ts); Åke Johansson (p); Leroy Lowe (d). 6/98.
(*) True Swede /  Zonk Dragon DRCD 355 / 384 Jansson; Gilbert Holmström (ts); Tommy Kotter (p); Rune Carlsson (d). 7/00; 8/02.
 Endless Dragon DRCD 398 As above, except add Annika Skoglund (v). 11/04.
Sadly, one of Jansson's very best records, an imaginative reworking of the Strayhorn book on Chelsea Bridge, is now in Dragon's deleted list. We hope it comes back. The earlier of the survivors is actually a tribute to someone who played on the debut. Leroy Lowe wasn't a 'true Swede' at all, but a Pennsylvanian who moved to Finland and then Stockholm and became a much-liked and well-regarded player on the expat scene there till he died in 1999. It's a strong disc, and the Coltrane-influenced Holmström proves to be a key figure; Lindgren's only in for one track. Kotter's Monkish stylings work well with the group and Carlsson is another failsafe player. Jansson takes some effective features, sounding arrestingly individual.

Piano and bass take two duo spots on the live Zonk, a less immediately compelling record, but one which grows on repeated hearings. 'I Can't Get Started' is the better of the two duets, though the group tracks are generally more upbeat and affirmative. The album with vocalist Annika Skoglund has some fine moments – she's a more than respectable singer – but again it seems more diffuse than those earlier discs. Find Chelsea Bridge if you can.

Lars Jansson (born 1951)

PIANO, KEYBOARDS

A charter member of the contemporary Swedish movement, though currently he spends more time teaching than recording.

(*) Trio 84 / The Eternal Now Dragon DRCD 301 Jansson; Lars Danielsson (b, clo); Anders Jormin (b); Anders Kjellberg (d). 84–87.
 A Window Towards Being Imogena IGCD 019 Jansson; Brynjar Hoff (ob); Lars Danielsson (b); Anders Kjellberg (d). 2/91.
 Invisible Friends Imogena IGCD 055 As above, except omit Hoff. 1/95.
Jansson's affection for Bill Evans is wedded to an attractive way with melody in his writing: it means that his music comes out more brightly than that of the typical Evans disciple. The fine Trio 84 is attractively coupled with the subsequent The Eternal Now. Far from willowy impressionism, this was a vital and attacking trio (Danielsson subs for Jormin on the second set), lighting up all the instinctive lyricism of the leader by playing with unaffected brio on the likes of 'Långtans Berg' and 'Yanina'. 'To Bill Evans' is a muscular workout, not a weepy requiem, with Jansson carrying the improvisation on a Moog synthesizer. At the same time, Jansson isn't afraid to darken the harmonic substance of pieces such as 'At Once Always' and 'After The Storm'.

A Window Towards Being picks up where the earlier set left off. Hoff is used for instrumental colour on three atypically lightweight tracks; but the main interest is in the piano improvisations on Jansson's own originals. Invisible Friends is four years on and in the same impeccable vein. Jansson drifts a little, but his partners pilot a firm rhythmic course that admits of no rambling. The portentousness of some of the titles seems to be nicely deflated by the penultimate one: 'I Have Nothing To Say And I Am Saying It'.

(*) The Time We Have Imogena IGCD 069 Jansson; Lars Danielsson (b); Anders Kjellberg (d). 3/96.
Jansson's note muses on the human lifespan, before getting on to the facts about the recording: as he dryly notes, it refers to 'the short amount of time we had to complete the recording', a studio booked only three hours before a flight to the next gig. Most of this is improvised from the germ of an idea. The trio is a long-standing unit at this point and can read each other's moves with no little skill. The result is a surprisingly focused session, relaxed yet free of time-wasting or noodling.

(*) Ballads Imogena IGCD 092 Jansson; Paolo Fresu (t); Johan Borgström (ts, f); Paul McCandless (cor); Brynjar Hoff (ob); Lars Danielsson, Christian Spering (b); Anders Kjellberg, Morten Lund (d). 91–97.

This compilation of lyric pieces, culled from Jansson's various sessions for Imogena, is surely the best place to make his initial acquaintance. It points up his firm touch and fastidious manner and gathers in some of his most memorable tunes: 'More Human', 'Why Was I Left Under The Sky' and 'To The Mothers In Brazil' among them. With horn-players guesting on six out of 18 tracks, there's an attractive variation in delivery too.

(*) The Blue Pearl Phono Suecia PSCD 97 Jansson; Lars Lindgren, Lennart Grahn, Hildegunn Öiseth , Jan Eliasson, Fredrik Norén (t); Bengt Åke Andersson , Christer Olofsson, Ralph Soovik (tb); Niclas Rydh (btb); Claes Lindqvist (ss, as); Niklas Robertsson (as); Ove Ingmarsson (ts, ss); Mikael Karlsson (ts, f); Erik Norström (ts); Jan Forslund (bs); Ulf Wakenius (g); Yasuhito Mori (b); Anders Kjellberg (d); Jacob Andersen (perc). 6/96.

(*) One Poem, One Painting Imogena IGCD 074 As above, except omit Lindqvist, Wakenius, Andersen; add Steen Raahauge (perc). 6/98.

(*) Temenos Spice Of Life SOL SC-0005 Jansson; Paolo Fresu (t); Lennart Grahn, Samuel Olsson, Jan Eliasson, Morten Lundgren (t, flhn); Björn Samuelsson , Christer Olofsson, Ralph Soovik (tb); Niclas Rydh (btb, tba); Niklas Robertsson (ss, as, bcl); Johan Borgstrom (as, cl, f); Ove Ingmarsson (ts, cl, rec); Mikael Karlsson (ts, ss, f); Jan Forslund (bs, af); Yasuhito Mori (b); Morten Lund (d); Lisbeth Diers (perc). 5/03.

Beautifully played by the Bohuslän Big Band, these scores by Jansson smoothly translate his trio style to the bigger context. Good tunes, lively voicings, crisp rhythms that go against what has become something of a cliché of Scandinavian brooding and gloom. If anything, the composer's pieces have the heft and swing of American big-band writing, and a piece such as 'A Cup Of Mintzer-Tea', on the first record, is a clever take on Bob Mintzer's methods in the idiom. Naturally, he has a crack team of soloists on hand, many familiar from their own records. The second set is a collection of pieces in dedication to the 500th aniversary of Uddevalla, home town to both Jansson and the Big Band. Either disc will give much pleasure.

Five years on, and with several new names in the line-up, the BBB still sound in fine shape, though if there's a complaint it might be that they have drifted even closer to a transatlantic copy-band. Fresu guest stars and gets a dedication in 'Cosmic Sleepwalker'.

 I Am That Imogena IGCD 115 Jansson; Lars Danielsson (b); Anders Kjellberg (d). 9/04.

Our verdict might seem generous for what is Jansson's most reserved and inward-looking record. The trio have been at it for 20 years, yet instead of growing in stature they seem to be turning inward: there are some absolutely lovely moments, but they're scattered, and many will lose patience waiting for their arrival.

Joseph Jarman (born 1937)

SAXOPHONES, OTHER REEDS, FLUTE

He grew up in Arkansas, but found himself serendipitously in Chicago when the foundations of jazz were being rethought. He worked with Muhal Richard Abrams, met Anthony Braxton and played with Roscoe Mitchell in what became the Art Ensemble Of Chicago.

 Song For Delmark DE-410 Jarman; Bill Brimfield (t); Fred Anderson (ts); Christopher Gaddy (p, mar); Charles Clark (b); Thurman Barker, Steve McCall (d). 10–12/66.

 As If It Were The Seasons Delmark DE-417 Jarman; John Jackson (t); Fred Anderson, John Stubblefield (ts); Lester Lashley, Joel Brandon (f); Richard Abram (p, ob); Charles Clark (b, clo, koto); Thurman Barker (perc); Sherri Scott (v). 68.

Jarman was either the quintessential voice of the AEOC or odd man out. He was the first to leave the Ensemble in the '90s, but his work since is scattered and often under other leaders. Song For is relatively standard AACM fare, intercut with neo-Dada recitations and characterized by a lack of formal shape. The supporting performers, with the exception of the drummers, are not always up to scratch, though Clark produces some wonderfully sonorous bass on 'Adam's Rib'. The long tracks – 'Non-Cognitive Aspects Of The City', 'Song For' and a second and longer unissued take of Fred Anderson's 'Little Fox Run' with its skittering marimba patterns – pall slightly on repeated hearings.

As If It Were The Seasons was made some 18 months later: involving many of the same musicians, it feels like a direct continuation, and the title-piece exemplifies Jarman's blending of lyricism, free space, drifting time and occasional bursts of intensity. At this distance, the records feel like inadequate episodes from what should have been a comprehensive setting-down of this ensemble's work, but on their own terms they retain an elusive attraction.

 Together Alone Delmark DE 428 Jarman; Anthony Braxton (as, cbcl, f, perc, v). 12/71.

A disappointing showing from two reed masters. Braxton's compositions seem mysterious to Jarman, while Braxton seems deaf to context. There are some fine moments on the opening title-track (which recalls the standard 'Alone Together') and on the tiny 'Morning', which is redeemed by its freshness and immediacy of language.

Also, in brief:

 Connecting Spirits Music & Arts 964. 1/96.

A live encounter with Marilyn Crispell (p), which combines modest artistry and some daring.

 Pachinko Dream Track 10 Music & Arts 1040. 5/96.

Recorded at the annual Asian American Jazz Festival in San Francisco, with well-known figures – Glen Horiuchi (p), Francis Wong (sax), Elliot Kavee (perc) – from that orbit. Music & Arts discs can now be hard to find.

Keith Jarrett (born 1945)

PIANO, ORGAN, SOPRANO SAXOPHONE, OTHER INSTRUMENTS

A child prodigy, he learned his craft in the Boston area and with the Jazz Messengers before joining Charles Lloyd's crossover quartet. A restless experimenter who pioneered long-form solo improvisation but also, with his Standards Trio, rewrote the American songbook.

 Life Between The Exit Signs / El Juicio Collectables COL CD 6254 Jarrett; Dewey Redman (ts); Charlie Haden (b); Paul Motian (d). 5/67, 7/71.

 Restoration Ruin Collectables COL CD 6274 Jarrett (all instruments); string quartet. 3/68.

(*) Somewhere Before Atlantic 7567 81455 Jarrett; Charlie Haden (b); Paul Motian (d). 8/68.
* El Juicio (The Judgement) Atlantic 7567 80783-3 Jarrett; Dewey Redman (ts, cl, Chinese musette); Charlie Haden (b, perc); Paul Motian (d). 7/71.
 The Mourning Of A Star /  Birth Atlantic 8122 75355-2 / Wounded Bird 1612 As above. 71; 7/71.
* Foundations: The Keith Jarrett Anthology Rhino R2 71593 Jarrett; Chuck Mangione (t); Joe Farrell, Hubert Laws, Charles Lloyd (f); Frank Mitchell, Jim Pepper, Dewey Redman (ts); George Benson, Sam Brown (g); Gary Burton (vib); Ron Carter, Charlie Haden, Reggie Johnson, Cecil McBee, Steve Swallow (b); Art Blakey, Bill Goodwin, Bob Moses, Paul Motian (d); Airto Moreira (perc). 66–75.
 Somewhere Between Rhino 8122799467 Much as above. 68–75.

Jarrett divides critical opinion wildly. The sheer momentum of early success has allowed him to experiment freely, but it has also generated an unfeasibly large discography, often in multi-disc sets.

It's a long history now and it's useful to be reminded of where it began. In modest span Foundations covers the seven years from his tough New York apprenticeship to El Juicio.

Collectables like unexpected juxtapositions. Pairing Jarrett's early Restoration Ruin (reminiscent of the later Spirits) with the Art Ensemble Of Chicago's Bap-Tizum is a little strange, but it is good to have this early example of multi-instrumentalism back. The pieces are all very short, sometimes almost perfunctory, but it's fascinating in its musing way.

The other Collectables set brings together El Juicio with the fine early trio Life Between The Exit Signs. Interesting to compare this unit with the later Standards Trio. It is immediately apparent how much more straightforwardly rhythmic Jarrett sounds in 1967, but as yet how uncomfortably co-ordinated he is with the group. 'Lisbon Stomp' is a cracking opener. The two tunes called 'Love No. 1' and 'No. 2' are extremely individual and 'Life …' itself has the distinctive jazz/pop/country feel one associates with Jarrett. What is as yet unformed is his ability to shape a group as if it were a single instrument compounded of different personalities.

Somewhere Before reunites the line-up that made Life Between The Exit Signs. Rock-influenced and still reminiscent of the methodology of the Charles Lloyd Quartet and the Miles Davis group, it includes a version of Bob Dylan's 'My Back Pages' and two delightfully cadenced rags. Recorded live and slightly rough in texture, it has a freshness of approach that Jarrett was slow to regain.

In a series of intensive sessions in the first two weeks of July 1971, Jarrett taped enough material for El Juicio, The Mourning Of A Star and Birth. The group sound is expanded by his own use of soprano saxophone, notably on El Juicio and on Birth's 'Mortgage On My Soul (Wah Wah)', Redman's clarinet and musette and occasional use of steel pans and other percussion. It remains a high-point. The joyous countrified swing of 'Gypsy Moth' and 'Toll Road' could hardly be more infectious, at the opposite remove to the dour atmosphere of 'El Juicio' itself, a strange, brooding tone-poem, or indeed to the experimental melodism of 'Piece For Ornette'. It exists in two forms, one at nine and a quarter minutes, the other at 12 seconds!

The Mourning Of A Star is an odd, elusive record. The bitty content never quite coheres. For many purchasers the compilation set will be sufficient for this early period. What is immediately striking, listening to Jarrett play a standard, 'Smoke Gets In Your Eyes', behind Jim Pepper in Bob Moses' group, is how fully formed he already sounds. 'Love No. 3', nominally a Charles Lloyd Quartet cut, is actually a Jarrett solo, played in front of a first-house crowd at the Fillmore West; again, it's the same voice, not even in embryo, but already working out its own priorities. Go back a further year and listen to the 21-year-old hold his own with Art Blakey, albeit in a non-vintage Messengers. It all reinforces the impression of a young man who came of age with his artistic and creative agenda already in place and who has spent the last 40 years or so working through their ramifications and byways.

Somewhere Between is yet another slideshow of the period, but useful in its way.

* Expectations Columbia/Legacy C2K 65900 2CD Jarrett; Dewey Redman (ts, perc); Sam Brown (g); Charlie Haden (b); Paul Motian (d); Airto Moreira (perc); brass; strings. 9 & 10/71.

Jarrett was dropped by Columbia less than a month after this record was released, even though they still claim it as his breakthrough disc. Now restored to its full length over two CDs and with accurate track-listing, there are few better places to sample Jarrett's uncanny ability to make disparate musical ideas work together. It's possible to argue for Expectations' breakthrough status rather more disinterestedly by pointing to the pianist's increasingly confident synthesis of jazz ('Circular Letter'), rock ('Sundance'), gospel ('There Is A Road') and Latin ('Common Mama') themes into a passionate, occasionally ecstatic mix. Some of the more extravagant freedoms relate closely to his work with a man who stayed with Columbia a while longer. Jarrett learned – or allowed himself – to play free on Miles Davis's Live–Evil and there is ample evidence of that here. Redman plays on only half the tracks, Brown on six; Jarrett plays soprano saxophone in addition to piano, but also (and despite Columbia's silence on the matter) organ and percussion. The new issue restores the strings piece, 'Visions', and revises the running order to its original form, ending on 'There Is A Road (God's River)', which makes better sense. Everything else now leads up to it. The logic of the session is impeccable. 'Nomads' is the only really long track and it meanders, its climaxes hollow. The best of the session lies in well-crafted tunes and textures. The addition of guitar changes the feel, though Brown's style was also evolving and not yet completely distinctive.

[illegible]

* The Köln Concert
ECM 810067-2 2CD As above. 1/75.

An epoch in modern jazz. Made in conditions of exceptional difficulty – not least an audibly unsatisfactory piano – Jarrett not for the first time makes a virtue of adversity, carving out huge slabs of music with a rare intensity. His instrument does sound off-puttingly bad-tempered, but his concentration on the middle register throughout the performance creates a hypnotic effect that is still entrancing listeners more than 30 years later.

() Facing You / () Solo Concerts / () Staircase /  Sun Bear Concerts /  Concerts /  Paris Concert / () Vienna Concert ECM 827132-2 / 827747-2 2CD / 827337-2 2CD / 843028-2 6CD / 827286-2 / 839173-2 / 513437 2 Jarrett (p solo). 11/71; 3 & 7/73; 11/76; 3/80; 5 & 6/81; 10/88; 7/91.

There was an uneasy giantism in Jarrett's work of the later '70s, culminating in the release of the infamous Sun Bear Concerts, hours of densely personal piano improvisations, originally in a 10-LP box. Scale alone doesn't make for interesting music. It's fascinating, but one often feels overwhelmed by quantity rather than charmed by quality. One wonders how much critical excitement was simply a reaction to size.

The Bremen and Lausanne sets on Solo Concerts are both very strong. The first multi-volume set was well received on its release and stands up particularly well now; by contrast, Facing You seems slightly dated. These are friendlier, less intense performances than the Köln sides, but no less inventive for that, exploring Jarrett's characteristic blend of popular and 'high' forms. The 1981 Concerts was also recorded in Germany and in slightly easier circumstances (Jarrett suffered agonizing back pain throughout the Bremen Solo Concert); there's far less tension in the music. Facing You may seem a period piece, but it's a good place to get a feel of Jarrett's characteristic method before tackling the multi-volume sets, and Staircase, where he seems to range across idioms with no apparent urgency.

Much has been made of the cohesion and unity of Jarrett's solo performances. They are often likened to multi-movement suites rather than collections of discontinuous tunes or numbers. This is certainly true of Facing You, which shares with the Köln Concert a satisfying roundness; it certainly isn't true of Staircase or of the Paris Concert. The latter is lively but also predictable. The idiomatic shifts have become mannered almost to the point of self-parody, and Jarrett's histrionics can seem manipulative. The notorious grunting and vocalizing are unpleasantly intrusive.

By the turn of the '90s Jarrett's solo concerts had their own terms of reference and it's hard to find a critical language larger than the music itself. One falls back on specious comparison. The Vienna Concert is at once more formal and more coherent than the disappointing Paris Concert. Bach and Shostakovich are both in the atmosphere. It opens with a quiet, almost hymnic theme which develops very slowly over sombre pedals for just over 20 minutes, before opening out into a broken-tempo country theme that still preserves the original material in inverted form. The second and third pieces develop material from the first, but in such a way that one wonders if they have been released in the order of the original concert. Long-standing Jarrett fans will find all the required elements in place; newcomers may find this more approachable than Köln or Sun Bear.

 Fort Yawuh Impulse! 547 966-2 Jarrett; Dewey Redman (ts, perc); Charlie Haden (b); Paul Motian (d); Danny Johnson (perc). 2/73.

(*) The Survivor's Suite / () Eyes Of The Heart ECM 827131-2 / 825476-2 As above, except omit Johnson. 4/76; 5/76.

Jarrett's American quartet probably never reached the heights or achieved the almost telepathic understanding of the European group responsible for the classic Belonging (see below). The addition of Dewey Redman to the basic trio on Fort Yawuh gives that album a dark power; the CD includes unedited performances of all tracks and the addition of one more from the session, the long 'Roads Travelled, Roads Veiled'.

Survivor's Suite is a masterpiece, with the quartet pulling together on an ambitiously large-scale piece, each member contributing whole-heartedly and passionately. By the sharpest of contrasts, Eyes Of The Heart, a live exploration of much the same material, is a near-disaster. The original release was as a double LP with one blank side, which symbolizes the break-up of an always fissile band. Dewey Redman contributes scarcely anything, and the album ends with Jarrett playing alone.

* Belonging / (*) My Song /  Personal Mountains /  Nude Ants ECM 829115-2 / 821406-2 / 837361-2 / 829119-2 2CD Jarrett; Jan Garbarek (ts, ss); Palle Danielsson (b); Jon Christensen (d). 4/74; 1/77; 4/79; 5/79.

The European Quartet was probably the most sympathetic grouping Jarrett had assembled to date. Belonging is a superb album, characterized by some of the pianist's most open and joyous playing; his double-time solo on 'The Windup' is almost Tatum-like in its exuberance and fluency. The country-blues feel of 'Long As You Know You're Living Yours' is a confident reflection of his music roots. The ballads 'Blossom', 'Solstice' and the title-piece are remarkable by any standards; Garbarek's slightly out-of-tune opening statement on 'Solstice' and Danielsson's subsequent solo are masterful, while Jarrett's own split chords accentuate the mystery and ambiguity of the piece.

Nude Ants (from 'New Dance') is a live set from New York. It's a valuable documentation of the European Quartet outside the studio, but the performances are below par and Garbarek (who admits dissatisfaction) sounds alternately forced and diffident. Recording quality is below ECM's usual standard. Personal Mountains sounds very much better, but the playing has a sleepy, jet-lagged quality (taped in Tokyo) that blurs the impact of the title-piece and the momentarily beautiful 'Prism', 'Oasis' and 'Innocence'.

* Setting Standards – New York Sessions /  Standards Live / () Still Live / () Standards In Norway / () Tribute / () Changeless / * The Cure ECM 1737344 / 827827-2 / 835008-2 2CD / 521717-2 / 847135-2 2CD / 839618-2 / 849650-2 Jarrett; Gary Peacock (b); Jack DeJohnette (d). 1/83; 7/86; 10/86; 10/89; 10/89; 4/90; 4/90.

In January 1983, at New York's Power Station studio, Jarrett, Peacock and DeJohnette set down 14 tracks, the majority of them based on show tune standards, which significantly redefined contemporary piano trio jazz and began a process of documentation that has continued to this day, to an almost unfollowable extent. The Standards Trio is one of the music's iconic groupings, and now the first convocation of the group – which yielded Standards: Volume 1, Volume 2 and Changes is available in a handsome card box. The individual records may also still be available but this is the way to experience the music; it also allows us to correct a mistake in our dating in the last edition.

Jarrett's approach to standards is nothing if not individual; for all his obvious respect and affection for the material, he consistently goes his own way. These are trio dates, though; Peacock's firmly harmonic bass and DeJohnette's imaginative drumming centre every track. It doesn't always come off. There are moments on Standards: Volume 1 which are simply flat and uninspired, as on 'God Bless The Child'. Volume 2 is more even in quality. There's little repetition of themes on Standards Live and Still Live, so direct comparison is difficult. The only occasion where this is possible is on the strangely patchy Tribute, which repeats 'All The Things You Are' from Standards: Volume 1. The later version is more oblique, but also simpler. Like the rest of the tracks, it is intended as an hommage, in this case to Sonny Rollins. Jarrett adds two of his own compositions to the set, inscribing himself ever more legibly into the tradition he is exploring and rediscovering.

In that same vein, the Standards Trio hasn't limited itself to existing repertoire. Changes and Changeless contain original material which is deeply subversive of jazz as a system of improvisation on 'the changes'. Typically, Jarrett invests the term with quite new aesthetic and philosophical considerations. On Changeless, there are no chord progressions at all; the trio improvises each section in a single key, somewhat in the manner of an Indian raga. The results are impressive and thought-provoking.

(*) Bye Bye Blackbird ECM 513074-2 Jarrett; Gary Peacock (b); Jack DeJohnette (d). 10/91.

(*) At The Deer Head Inn ECM 517720-2 Jarrett; Gary Peacock (b); Paul Motian (d). 9/92.

Bye Bye Blackbird is Jarrett's tribute to the late Miles Davis, with whom he worked in the '60s. It's startling to hear him talk in a rare ECM liner-note about Miles's 'purity of desire' (the phrase, or a version of it, is repeated) when the burden of on- and off-stage comments in the '80s had been that Miles had seriously compromised the music – to electricity, to mere fashion, and so on.

Taken on its own merits, Bye Bye Blackbird is a wonderful record. The choice of material is refreshingly unobvious (how often is Oliver Nelson's 'Butch And Butch' covered?) and immaculately played. The two originals, 'For Miles' and a coda, 'Blackbird, Bye Bye', are intensely felt, and the level of abstraction that has crept back into the music is well judged and unobtrusive. DeJohnette performs wonders, changing metre subtly with almost every bar on 'Straight No Chaser'.

It's a recurrent craving of superstars that they should turn their backs on the big halls and all the paraphernalia of stardom and play small venues again. The Dear Head Inn in Allentown, Pennsylvania, was the scene of Keith Jarrett's first serious gig on piano. It has now sustained a jazz policy for more than 40 years, a dedication passed on by the original owners to their daughter and son-in-law. In order to relaunch the club in 1992, Jarrett agreed to play a gig there, taking along Paul Motian, with whom he had not worked since the time of Silence. Motian brings a lighter and more flowing pulse to the music than DeJohnette. The obvious point of comparison is 'Bye Bye Blackbird', which glides along without wires or other obvious support for more than ten minutes, a beautiful, airborne performance. This might almost be a second tribute to Miles. It opens with a superb reading of 'Solar', but then follows with skilful readings of 'Basin Street Blues' and Jaki Byard's 'Chandra'. Outside the studio, Peacock is more forceful and less complex. He gives 'You And The Night And The Music' a pugnacious edge. It seems unlikely that Jarrett will ever need to go back to bar-room gigs, but here he demonstrated his ability to work a small audience with powerful, unpretentious jazz.

* At The Blue Note: The Complete Recordings ECM 527638-2 6CD As above. 6/94.

Another remarkable documentation: two sets from each of three consecutive nights at the New York club. It might be considered warts-and-all, but there are no warts, and no slack. It's fascinating, given sufficient time and attention, to hear Jarrett import ideas – harmonic resolutions, phrases, improbable interval jumps like 11ths and 13ths – from one piece to another on different nights. As an insight into how spontaneously creative he can be, it is unparalleled even in this extraordinary discography.

It was played, one suspects, with the recording very much in mind. One might almost prefer more repetition of tunes, but he goes his individual way, leaning a little more than previously on top-ten standards – 'Autumn Leaves', 'Alone Together', 'On Green Dolphin Street' – and on jazz repertory pieces like Rollins's 'Oleo'. An essential set.

(*) La Scala ECM 537268-2 Jarrett (p solo). 2/95.

Jarrett's health caused deep concern in the '90s. A chastened simplicity creeps in. Jarrett's improvisations are as long and as densely textured as ever, but there is a modesty and philosophical calm which seems new. The second part of 'La Scala', the generic title for the two main pieces, has outbreaks of quiet violence, but all of it logically resolved. The instrument is immaculate, warm and full-voiced. As so often, Jarrett encores with 'Over The Rainbow', a featherlight performance.

* The Melody At Night, With You ECM 547949-2 Jarrett (p solo). 98.

And just when you thought the story would simply run '... and so on', Jarrett pops up with a record of fragile magnificence, a sequence of filigreed songs from a common musical past. Hearing him do 'My Wild Irish Rose' and 'Someone To Watch Over Me' back to back is to hear a musician who recognizes no tension between improvisation and 'tradition', between the recalled and the intuitive. It is a quite simply magnificent record, swinging in a way that Jarrett has rarely before been swinging ('I Got It Bad And That Ain't Good'), and sweetly melodic ('Shenandoah').

 Whisper Not ECM 543816 Jarrett; Gary Peacock (b); Jack DeJohnette (d). 7/99.

The trio was about to take a fresh turning, but this was a celebratory occasion, taped live in Paris and one of the first times when Jarrett seemed clear of the chronic fatigue that had afflicted him over the previous two years, a condition that might have ended his playing career. Listening to him on 'Bouncing With Bud', the title-track and 'Groovin' High', one is struck more by the renewed interest in bebop than concerned that there seems to be a slight dulling of articulation and phrasing. The notes don't seem to run along as cleanly now, though perhaps this is down to the piano.

Even so, Peacock and DeJohnette are both in magisterial form, though the former would also suffer serious ill-health, and both seem ever more prominent. Our nominations for immortality from this set would be 'What Is This Thing Called Love?' and a magnificent 'Poinciana'.

 Inside Out / (*) Always Let Me Go ECM 1780 / 1800/01 2CD As above. 7/00; 4/01.

Jarrett's interest in free playing has always been evident but has rarely been as explicit as here, which takes a further step on from the Changeless project.

Drummer and bassist don't sound entirely convinced at the start of 'From The Body'. This surely wasn't sprung on them without notice? The blues are the basic idiom, but Peacock seems to toy with edgy melodic shapes which don't come from that tradition until the whole thing unfurls in ever-longer lines that suggest there is a rubbed-out architectural drawing behind the piece. 'Inside Out' and 'Free Fade 341' are less immediately satisfying, but then the trio hits its stride with 'Riot' and another major statement is complete. Irritatingly, ECM saw fit to include an encore of 'When I Fall In Love', a favourite of these guys, but an intruder in this context.

Always Let Me Go was recorded live in Japan, where Jarrett has played to rapt attention throughout his career. The philosophy is the same as on Inside Out, a free programme without standards or predetermined structures. The opening 'Hearts In Space' is a full half-hour of intense trio improvisation, ranging from taut blues and boogie passages to more abstract shapes. 'Waves' is longer still and eclectic in terms of stylistic reference. Jarrett even seems to impersonate Bud Powell at one point. Interspersed are much shorter tracks, like the roistering 'Paradox', which touches on similar areas, and the tiny 'The River', which Jarrett plays solo. 'Facing East', 'Tsunami' and 'Relay' round out the set, but one wonders if this were any other artist and any other group whether these tracks would have been first-choice inclusions. As a document of Jarrett's almost 150th performance in Japan, it's impeccable, but there's some unevenness towards the end and only dedicated fans will play this often.

* The Out-Of-Towners ECM 1900 As above. 7/01.
This was a special gig, recorded near ECM's home base and thriving on the acoustic of the Munich State Opera. The blues structure of the title-track is gloriously upbeat, and there's a stunning version of Mulligan's 'Five Brothers'. Indeed, an album which begins relatively slowly takes off with 'I Love You' before kicking into the superb sequence above. There is, though, a final twist, for as an encore Jarrett returns to the stage alone for a beautiful reading of 'It's All In The Game', ballad playing at its absolute finest and worthy of Bill Evans at his greatest.

* My Foolish Heart: Live At Montreux ECM 1737 326 2CD As above. 7/01.
It's hard to exaggerate the outpouring of musical creativity at this period. Any cynicism about the amount of live Jarrett – even just with this trio – retreats in the face of the music itself. Health issues aside, it's a very buoyant-sounding Jarrett who bounces through 'Ain't Misbehavin'' and a very boppish 'Oleo' on the first volume. The second set begins with 'Honeysuckle Rose' and there's a further version of 'Five Brothers'. DeJohnette seems more prominent as a soloist than usual, an impression confirmed in Jarrett's liner-note. Once again, a situation fraught with problems – heat, lighting, audience noise – seems to have sparked an exceptional performance.

* Radiance ECM 1960/61 Jarrett (p solo). 10/02.
Jarrett began dabbling in solo performance again as his health problems improved and this superb Osaka set is one of the highlights of his career. Having looked again at free playing alongside his standards repertoire, Jarrett had the confidence to sit down at the piano (and it sounds beautiful) and simply let the music flow through him. Though the parts are differentiated – and there is sometimes applause between them – these two discs create a strong impression of two performances that develop out of tiny germs of ideas: sometimes an interval, sometimes a phrase, sometimes what sounds like a half-remembered segment of a song. It's what Jarrett does with these that is remarkable. He develops grand or simpler song-like forms, always with a strong emphasis on left-hand figures and chords that add up to considerably more than the parts.

 Up For It: Live In Juans Les Pins ECM 004602 Jarrett; Gary Peacock (b); Jack DeJohnette (d). 5/03.
The title is cheerfully defiant, the album cover as sunstruck blue as the Mediterranean, the material all somehow associated with Miles Davis and his formidable appearances in the south of France with a classic quintet 40 years earlier. Having momentarily set aside free playing, the trio reverts to standard material, or rather to material from the Miles songbook: 'If I Were A Bell', wonderfully conceived and played, the bopper 'Scrapple From The Apple', 'My Funny Valentine', 'Autumn Leaves' and 'Someday My Prince Will Come' in gentle swing tempo. There's also a fresh run-out for 'Butch And Butch'. His touch is immaculate and if anything it's Peacock and DeJohnette who wilt a bit as the set progresses; Jarrett's energy is remarkable.

* The Carnegie Hall Concert ECM 07362 2CD Jarrett (p solo). 9/05.
Amazing to say it at this stage in his career and given the problems he has suffered, but here is another new direction. This magnificent recital, given in the Isaac Stern auditorium at Carnegie Hall, shows Jarrett breaking down his familiar long-form improvisation into shorter pieces that reflect both his experience with the Standards Trio and their exploration of freer material. The main concert is divided into ten shorter 'parts' which last between ten and three and a half minutes. Within each of these, Jarrett seems to explore a number of the parameters that might be said to make up a song. He experiments with melody, pushes the metre almost to breaking point, reharmonizes or moves outside recognizable tonalities at will, adjusts dynamics subtly or dramatically, introduces silences and suspended chords. The effect is dazzling and prompts the inevitable, though hackneyed, reaction that everything Jarrett has done to date seems to point to this moment. The five encore pieces on the second disc – including 'Time On My Hands' and his own almost canonical 'My Song', which was first recorded in the '70s – are nice to have, but slightly distracting after the magnificence of the main performance.

Also, in brief:

 Rutya And Daitya ECM 513776. 5/71.
Recorded just before the trio of strong Atlantics, this is a curious disc, beset by Jarrett's obsessive multi-instrumentalism and a much better showcase for duo partner Jack DeJohnette.

() In The Light / () Luminessence / (*) Arbour Zena / () The Celestial Hawk ECM 835011-2 2CD / 839307-2 / 825592-2 / 829370-2. 73; 4/74; 10/75; 3/80.
Hugely ambitious with-strings projects, elevated by Garbarek's presence here and there, but horribly time-locked now.

() The Impulse Years: 1973–1974 / () Mysteries: The Impulse Years 1975–1976 Impulse! 237 5CD / IMPD 4 149 4CD. 73, 74; 12/75, 10/76.
When Jarrett went on to ECM, Impulse! continued to milk their investment with these compilations. They're useful catch-ups for those who cottoned on after the Köln Concert, but they don't give much clear sense of development.

 Spheres /  Invocations ECM 827463 / 1201/2 2CD. 9/76; 7–10/80.
Parts of the latter were recorded on the same organ as Spheres but lack its intensity and focus.

 Sacred Hymns Of G. I. Gurdjieff /  Dark Intervals ECM 829122-2 / 847342-2. 11/79; 10/88.
By far the dreariest of the solo piano records.

 Book Of Ways ECM 931396-2 2CD. 7/86.
The clavichord album.

(*) Spirits ECM 829467-2 2CD. 4/87.
Its supporters include biographer Ian Carr, but these multi-instrumental doodles are thin fare.

 :rarum: Selected Recordings Volume 1 ECM 014168-2 2CD. 74–94.
Jarrett seems wilfully perverse opening the compilation with stuff from The Book Of Ways, then five selections from Spirits and a movement from the pipe organ Spheres (which isn't available on CD). He even includes a highly percussive section from the Munich concert, which out of context makes little sense.

 Tokyo '96 ECM 539955-2. 3/96.
The story continues, unstaunchable, maddeningly indulgent and selflessly brilliant by turns. There are moments of pure genius, but the overall impression is of low-key predictability.

Robert Jarvis

TROMBONE

Formerly with the Hugh Hopper band, he extends the boundaries of free jazz with extended techniques.

 Carving Up Time Slam CD 242 Jarvis; Frank van der Kooij (sax); Henk de Laat, Alan Niblock (b); Jean-Victor de Boer, Oscar Schultz (d). 00.
Jarvis makes the trombone sound delightfully forlorn rather than declamatory, and his use of effects and field recordings adds a dimension to this debut record that might not be there were it down to the group – or rather groups – alone. The 'Global Village' seems to emphasize isolation and individuality rather than community; in fact, it was written for a festival of that name in Northern Ireland. Jarvis's technique is finely tuned, and allows him to range from strong and emphatic blowing to softer dynamics that verge towards tonelessness and silence.

Bobby Jaspar (1926–63)

TENOR SAXOPHONE, FLUTE

Born in Liège, he made his name in Paris in the '50s, and moved to the USA when he marrried Blossom Dearie. Had a brief spell with Miles Davis in 1957. He died in 1963 following heart surgery.

 Modern Jazz Au Club St-Germain Emarcy 159941-2 Jaspar; René Urtreger (p); Sacha Distel (g); Benoît Quersin (b); Jean-Louis Viale (d). 55.
(*) Clarinescapade Fresh Sound FSRCD449 Jaspar; Eddie Costa, Tommy Flanagan (p); Barry Galbraith (g); Nabil Totah, Milt Hinton (b); Elvin Jones, Osie Johnson (d). 56.
 Bobby Jaspar With George Wallington, Idrees Sulieman Original Jazz Classics OJC 1788 Jaspar; Idrees Sulieman (t); George Wallington (p); Wilbur Little (b); Elvin Jones (d). 5/57.
 Jeux De Quartes Emarcy 18423 Jaspar; Sadi Lallemand (vib); Michel Hausser (vib, xyl); Paul Rovere, Jymie Merritt (b); Kenny Clarke (d); Humberto Canto (perc). 12/58.
 Bobby Jaspar With Friends Fresh Sound FSRCD-166 Jaspar; Mundell Lowe, René Thomas (g); George Duvivier, Monty Budwig, Jean Marie Ingrand (b); Ed Shaughnessy, Jean-Louis Viale (d). 58–62.
Jaspar sounded like Lester Young might have done if Lester had been Belgian. Bobby's pale tone and amorphous phrasing on tenor were matched with an agile and exceptionally pointed flute style, abjuring the mere prettiness which normally attends that instrument. His last studio recording, previously reissued as Phenil Isopropil Amine (it refers to an amphetamine drug) but now as Jeux De Quartes in the Jazz In Paris series, is all-flute, and with a light-sounding band it's as fugitive a set as any in this small canon. The picture was significantly improved in 2008 by the appearance of Clarinescapade, made while Jaspar was working with J. J. Johnson in the US and being fêted as a rising star. As the title suggests, he adds clarinet to his armoury, quite effectively, too, even if the instrument was generally out of favour at the time. Jaspar also has two flute features on the agreeable if unexceptional 1957 session; Sulieman sits out on four of the seven numbers, but Jaspar is quite confident enough to handle the front line by himself. Also in Emarcy's excellent series is the St-Germain date: Jaspar and Urtreger work through a programme which is set up as obvious cool-bebop copy, but Jaspar puts in enough to individualize the likes of 'You Stepped Out Of A Dream'. The rhythm section is very plain.

With Friends is a motley but absorbing collection of mainly live tracks, most with a small group under Mundell Lowe's leadership, but two were cut in Paris with René Thomas – excellent, sinuous bebop workouts. The tracks with Lowe are a mixed lot: Jaspar has a gorgeous flute feature on 'It Could Happen To You' and generally uses this horn over the tenor. Lowe's own work shouldn't be discounted: he has a fine improvisation on 'Gal In Calico'. Still not much Jaspar around at present: he is becoming very much a forgotten figure.

André Jaume (born 1940)

TENOR SAXOPHONE, FLUTE, CLARINET, BASS CLARINET

Began in Dixieland, then turned to more modern situations. Projects have included solo and duo work (Joe McPhee and Jimmy Giuffre are both associates) as well as larger-scale groups. Gamelan music is a significant interest.

(*) Pour Django CELP C1 Jaume; Raymond Boni (g). 6/85.
 Songs And Dances CELP C4 As above, except add Joe McPhee (t, ss). 5/87.
* Cinoche CELP C7 Jaume; Rémi Charmasson (g); François Méchali , Claude Tchamitchian (b); Daniel Humair (d). 1/84–3/88.
 Standards CELP 12 Jaume; Jean-Sébastien Simonoviez (p); François Méchali (b); Olivier Clerc (d). 4/89.
(*) Peace/Pace/Paix CELP 19 Jaume; Charlie Haden (b); Olivier Clerc (d). 5/90.
(*) Abbaye De L'Epau CELP 20 Jaume; Charlie Mariano (as, f). 3/91.
* Giacobazzi, Autour De La Rade CELP 25 Jaume; Barre Phillips (b); Barry Altschul (d). 6/92.
Jaume's CELP records are uniformly good, as well as his only representation in the catalogue, since his old hatART albums have now gone. The tenor is still his primary instrument, and he gets a granitic, almost Gothic tone out of it when he wishes, though he's as likely to play quietly, almost deferentially. The alto he picks up only occasionally, but his bass clarinet and flute work are also distinctive: lyrical, but with a dark, sometimes misshapen side to them. His tribute to Django casts only a sidelong look at Reinhardt's material: he and Boni play 'Mélodie Pour Julie' relatively straight, but there are also abstract originals here that honour the guitarist's spirit as well as the letter of his music. Boni's effects colour much of the festival set recorded on Songs And Dances, where they play Coleman's 'Blues Connotation' as well as Otis Redding's 'Dock Of The Bay' and do three solos in tribute to Jimmy Lyons. Cinoche is masterful music for 'un film policier qui n'existe pas': split between one group with Humair and Méchali and another with Charmasson and Tchamitchian, Jaume's playing has a Rollins-like authority on tenor, with the superb 'Ballade A Perdre Le Temps' outstanding.

The Standards collection seems to set Jaume off on a new midstream course. Aside from a single original, 'Escapade', the programme offers nine familiar songs to work with, and Jaume's querulous tone and tortuous phrasing make deliberately unsettled work of the music. He takes out the bass clarinet as often as the tenor and soprano, and it lends a mooching air to 'Nancy'. On the next two records Jaume sounds as if he's growing ever more quiet and introspective. He seldom raises his saxophone voice on either one, yet both make a firmer impression than some of the earlier discs. The trio session establishes a line of descent from Ornette Coleman, which 'Peace' and 'Blue Connotation' make manifest, but Jaume's playing has little of Coleman in it: he's too quirkily himself, and the steady-rolling pulses devised by Haden and Clerc support a very personal kind of melodic improvisation. Abbaye De L'Epau is more soberly reflective, and the very even pacing of the music makes this sequence all of a piece, with Mariano turning his own light down a little to remain in keeping with the occasion. Both discs are well-recorded (the second is from a concert session) and gently absorbing.

The trio tribute to painter Jean-Pierre Giacobazzi calls on the sombre, earth-solid bass of Phillips and the magnificent Altschul, whose exacting, intensely detailed playing is remarkable by itself. Jaume makes the most of all his horns, with the soprano and bass clarinet finding new depth; but his tenor continues to impress the most, and the best music here is as absorbing as Coleman's great Golden Circle sessions.

(*) Team Games CELP 31 Jaume; John Medeski (p). 5/94.
A very improbable meeting, with the keyboardist of Medeski, Martin & Wood producing some inspired playing. Steve Lacy's 'Blues For Aida' is a favourite of Jaume's (it appears on Borobodur Suite, see below, 'in brief') and the alternately harsh and gentle treatment it gets here is memorably invigorating. Otherwise it's Monk and Coltrane on the set-list, and unhackneyed choices at that, with a beautifully irreverent 'Ba-Lue Bolivar Ba-Lues Are' to highlight what they can do.

(*) Clarinet Sessions CELP 40 Jaume; Rémi Charmasson (g); Bruno Chevillon, Alain Soler (b); Randy Kaye, Barry Altschul (d). 1–6/96.
(*) A Portrait Of Jimmy Giuffre CELP 39 Jaume; Jean-François Canape (t, bugle); Rémi Charmasson (g); Bob Harrsion (b); Randy Kaye (d). 6/98.
Jaume's fascination with the clarinet and with Jimmy Giuffre gets full rein on these two. Clarinet Sessions has its misfires, such as the misjudged duets with Altschul which open the disc, but there are also some sublime moments: 'Mountain By The Sea', a fine mood-piece, and the three duets with Chevillon. The conventionally swinging 'Bonne Course' and the feathery duet with Kaye, 'West Stockbridge Impression', round out a quietly provocative set.

The set in dedication to Giuffre finds a ground common both to its dedicatee and to Jaume's more abstract side. 'Apes', for instance, is taken further out than the composer himself would probably sanction, but Harrison and Kaye (himself a former Giuffre sideman) know just how far to push their roles without surrendering the chamberish feel of the group, and the three principal soloists make any journeys from inside to out entirely logical within what is a carefully designed group framework. Cut live at two Avignon concerts, this was a splendid event.

(*) Jaisalmer CELP 43 Jaume; Bernard Santacruz (b); Marc Mazzillo (d). 2/00.
(*) Pour Théo... CELP 44 Jaume; Alain Soler (g). 6/00.
Working in seeming isolation from the main European currents, Jaume continues to make very good records. The trio record starts out with Rollinsian authority on 'Lenox Avenue', walks through a spirited mood-piece with 'Ratuboko', wrangles past the abstractions of 'Errance', and so on. As an introduction to Jaume's colourful kind of post-bop, it works superbly. The duo record is, surprisingly, a lot tougher than the instrumentation might suggest. The record was inspired by the playfulness of a friend's infant son, and instead of pastoral musings there's an argumentative, almost a barking quality to the dialogue, with both men in high spirits.

Also, in brief:

(*) Piazza Di Luna CELP 10. 8–9/89.
Made with Tavagna, an ensemble of Corsican polyphonic singers. Beautiful, but specialized.

(*) Something ... CELP 15. 4/90.
With multi-instrumentalist Joe McPhee and an American rhythm section, but disappointing.

 Borobodur Suite /  Merapi CELP 30 / 34. 2/95; 4/96.
These explore an interest in gamelan music: moonlight on water? Perhaps less lulling than that. However, saxophones and clarinets don't sit well with gamelan instruments.

Stefan Jaworzyn

GUITAR

British noise-guitar specialist who bars no holds.

 In A Sentimental Mood Incus CD 25 Jaworzyn; Alan Wilkinson (as, bs). 96.
How many picked this up expecting a set of gentle Ellington covers only to be confronted with 'My Psychotic Valentine' instead? What's not clear about Jaworzyn and his partner is whether their sense of humour stretches past the album- and track-titles, which sound like the titles to Dadaist exhibits and are too long to reproduce here. On balance, it probably does, even though parts of these five extended improvs sound grimly serious rather than light-hearted. Jaworzyn explores the whole gamut of effects on his guitar, but beneath it all there is still the jazz player's emphasis on line and structure. Wilkinson, likewise, sounds free but with ties to something undefined. It's exhilarating, slightly wearying music that maybe works better still when you can see the guys at work.

Shanti Paul Jayasinha

TRUMPET

Young Latin jazz maestro in search of a world music synthesis.

 Round Trip Candid CCD 79848 Jayasinha; Paul Booth, Tim Garland, Patrick Clahar (sax); John Crawford (p); Andy Lafone (g); Davide Giovannini (d); Alex Wilson (perc). 07.
Jayasinha has worked with John Etheridge, Michael Garrick and others. This, though, is a project close to his musical heart, an attempt to create an idiom that transcends easy stylistic demarcations and to shape a world jazz that doesn't merely consist of exotic flavourings. It's a lovely, elegant set, with effective guest parts for Booth, Garland and Wilson, but anchored on Clahar's increasingly individual voice and on a rhythm section that settles round Lafone's rubbery but accurate bass guitar lines. 'The Gatekeeper' and 'Round Trip' are the picks.

Jazz At The Philharmonic

SUPERGROUP

Instigated by Norman Granz, it took its name from a single concert at the Philharmonic Theater in Los Angeles in 1944 but became a generic title for shows or tours from then till the '80s, promoted by Granz and featuring an evolving repertory cast.

 The Beginning /  The First Concert / Body And Soul Charly 41 / Verve 521646-2 / Jasmine 2569 Joe Guy, Howard McGhee (t on Beginning only); Shorty Sherock (t); J. J. Johnson (tb); Willie Smith (as on Beginning only); Illinois Jacquet (ts); Jack McVea, Charlie Ventura (ts on Beginning only); Nat Cole (p); Les Paul (g); Red Callender (b); Johnny Miller (b on Beginning only); Gene Krupa (d on Beginning only); Lee Young (d). 7/44.

* Carnegie Hall 1949 Pablo 5311-2 Fats Navarro (t); Tommy Turk (tb); Charlie Parker, Sonny Criss (as); Flip Phillips, Coleman Hawkins (ts); Hank Jones (p); Ray Brown (b); Shelly Manne (d). 11/49.

(*) Frankfurt 1952 Pablo 235305 Roy Eldridge (t); Flip Phillips, Lester Young (ts); Hank Jones (p); Irving Ashby (g); Ray Brown (b); Max Roach (d). 11/52.

 Norman Granz's Jazz At The Philharmonic, Hartford, 1953 Pablo 2308240 Charlie Shavers, Roy Eldridge (t); Bill Harris (tb); Benny Carter, Willie Smith (as); Flip Phillips, Ben Webster (ts); Oscar Peterson (p); Herb Ellis (g); Ray Brown (b); Gene Krupa (d). 5/53.

(*) JATP In Tokyo Pablo PACD 2620 104 2CD As above, except add Raymond Tunia (p); J. C. Heard (d); Ella Fitzgerald (v). 11/53.

 The Exciting Battle: JATP, Stockholm '55 Pablo 2310713 Roy Eldridge, Dizzy Gillespie (t); Bill Harris (tb); Flip Phillips (ts); Oscar Peterson (p); Herb Ellis (g); Ray Brown (b); Louie Bellson (d). 2/55.

 Hamburg, Germany, February 29 1956 Fresh Sound FSRCD 441 2CD As above, except omit Harris, Bellson; add Illinois Jacquet (ts); Gene Krupa (d); Ella Fitzgerald (v). 2/56.

The JATP event on 2 July 1944 at the Philharmonic Auditorium in Los Angeles was headlined by Nat Cole, Illinois Jacquet, Meade Lux Lewis and other slightly unfamiliar names in this context. The Charly offers a bit more than the Verve First Concert set, and is cheap as chips, though inelegantly mastered. There's now a Jasmine option as well.

A decade later, at JATP's peak of international celebrity, there was a relatively fixed roster of stars, all from within Norman Granz's recording empire. Granz actively promoted the racial integration of jazz. He was also shrewd enough to recognize that more very definitely meant more. There is often a sense of 'never mind the quality, check the personnel' on a JATP record, and finesse and expressive sophistication were sometimes lost in polite cutting sessions which put high-note playing and amicably fiery exchanges at a premium. Given the variety of acts under the umbrella the JATP discography used to be a shambles, the records issued and reissued in all manner of combinations, other Verve material left unissued on CD. A box set (see below, 'in brief') dealt with that to some extent, but it's unwieldy and costly, though listening disc by disc to what were essentially institutionalized jam sessions or platforms for showmanship is unexpectedly rewarding.

That high standard persisted through later JATP survivals but it's difficult to identify highs and lows. The earlier Japanese session recommends itself on grounds of sheer length and also because there is a winning freshness to everybody's playing; but that might be said of any of them.

The 1949 session is quite exceptional, and something which goes beyond the JATP legacy and into the realm of important jazz recordings. There are three long jams featuring a front line of Navarro, Parker, Criss, Turk and Phillips, with the Jones–Brown–Manne rhythm section: the solos are remarkably cogent and exciting in a tough, unforgiving way, with Parker and Criss striking memorable sparks off each other, Phillips keeping matters under control, and Navarro – only months away from his death – simply riveting. Then Coleman Hawkins comes on, and shares the front line with Navarro and the rhythm section for an exceptional set. This is the first official release of this music and – apart from Granz's announcement – nicely recorded.

The Frankfurt date also has some astonishing music. Lester Young's solo on 'I Cover The Waterfront' is certain proof that he wasn't finished as a performer, and there's huge excitement in the closing 'Dre's Blues', which is driven along ferociously by Roach. The opening 'How High The Moon' is less special, but that's how JATP concerts tended to go.

The Hamburg date is the latest to resurface. It's a three-part set, with an All-Stars jam on volume one and sets by Oscar Peterson and Ella on the second. Just about everyone is featured at some point or another, but Roy Eldridge's solo spot on 'Rockin' Chair' stands out of a programme largely dominated by Dizzy, and even Krupa's well-trodden 'Drum Boogie' seems fresh and alive. Nicely remastered, this is a great find for JATP enthusiasts.

 The Greatest Jazz Concert In The World Pablo 2625-704-2 3CD Clark Terry, Cat Anderson, Mercer Ellington, Herbie Jones, Cootie Williams (t); Buster Cooper, Chuck Connors, Lawrence Brown (tb); Benny Carter, Johnny Hodges, Russell Procope (as); Jimmy Hamilton (cl, ts); Coleman Hawkins, Zoot Sims, Paul Gonsalves (ts); Harry Carney (bs); Duke Ellington, Oscar Peterson, Jimmy Jones (p); T-Bone Walker (g, v); Sam Jones, Bob Cranshaw, John Lamb (b); Louis Hayes, Bobby Durham, Rufus Jones, Sam Woodyard (d); Ella Fitzgerald (v). 6–7/67.

(*) JATP In London, 1969 Pablo 2620119 Dizzy Gillespie, Clark Terry (t); Benny Carter (as); Coleman Hawkins, Zoot Sims (ts); James Moody (ts, f); Teddy Wilson (p); T-Bone Walker (g); Bob Cranshaw (b); Louie Bellson (d). 3/69.

(*) JATP At The Montreux Festival, 1975 Pablo 2310748 Clark Terry (t, flhn); Benny Carter (as); Zoot Sims (ts); Joe Pass (g); Tommy Flanagan (p); Keter Betts (b); Bobby Durham (d). 7/75.

* The Montreux Collection Pablo 235306 As above, except add Roy Eldridge, Dizzy Gillespie (t); Eddie Lockjaw Davis, Johnny Griffin (ts); Toots Thielemans (hca); Milt Jackson (vib); Count Basie, Oscar Peterson (p); Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen (b); Louie Bellson, Mickey Roker (d); Ella Fitzgerald (v). 7/75.

 Return To Happiness: JATP At Yoyogi National Stadium, Tokyo Pablo 2620117 Harry 'Sweets' Edison, Clark Terry (t); J. J. Johnson, Al Grey (tb); Zoot Sims, Eddie 'Lockjaw' Davis (ts); Joe Pass (g); Oscar Peterson, Paul Smith (p); Keter Betts, Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen (b); Louie Bellson, Bobby Durham (d); Ella Fitzgerald (v). 10/83.

JATP marched on through the later '60s and '70s, otherwise not good years for jazz. Anything calling itself The Greatest Jazz Concert In The World is asking for trouble, although the title is merely a flag of convenience: it's drawn from concerts in three different locations, involving everyone from Oscar's trio to Duke's orchestra. Zoot and Benny Carter sit in with the Ellington band, T-Bone Walker plays the blues, and Ella and Duke wind things up with 'Cotton Tail'. Plenty of fun.

Nice things from London and from Tokyo and it's quite entertaining to gauge the difference in audience reaction between the two. In Britain, JATP was greeted with polite enthusiasm; in Japan, with unrestrained excitement bordering on religious delirium.

In 1975 Granz turned the Montreux festival into a JATP event. The single CD tells part of the story, but not the whole of it. The highlight is Ella singing 'The Man I Love', but there's hardly a dead spot anywhere on the set, a perfect representation of what Granz and JATP were all about.

Also, in brief:

 The Complete Jazz At The Philharmonic On Verve 1944–1949 / * The First Ten Years Verve 523893-2 10CD / Proper 1428 4CD. 44–49; 44–54.

The compendious — and expensive – Verve box pretty much covers the waterfront as far as the classic period is concerned, though it's hard to find now. The Proper compilation does the job cheaper, albeit in graceless sound.

Jazz Composers Alliance Orchestra

ENSEMBLE

Adventurous big band working on the Boston scene since 1985.

 Flux Northeastern NR 5010 John Carlson, Bob Levy, Mike Peipman, Walter Platt (t); David Harris, Russell Jewell, Bob Pilkington (tb); W. Marshall Sealy, Mark Taylor (frhn); Jim O'Dell (tba); Sam Rivers (ss); Ron Scheps (ss, ts); Julius Hemphill (as); Jay Brandford, Doug Yates (as, cl); Joel Springer (ts); Kathy Halvorsen (bs, ob); Susan Calkins (f); John Medeski (p, syn); Duane Johnson (syn); John Dirac, Andrew Hurlbut, James Kelly (g); Diana Herold (vib); Howard Britz (b); Grisha Alexiev (d); Jerry Leake (perc). 92.

 In, Thru And Out Cadence CJR 1153 Mike Peipman, Keiichi Hashimoto (t); David Harris, Bob Pilkington (tb); Jim Mosher (frhn); Jim Gray (tba); Jim Hobbs, Jeff Hudgins (as); Phil Scarff (ts); Hans Indigo (bs); Hiro Honshuku (f); Art Bailey (p); Norma Zocher (g); Rick McLaughlin (b); Rich Greenblatt (vib); Harvey Wirht (d); Taki Masuko (perc); Rebecca Shrimpton (v). 5/01.

 Celebration of the Spirit CIMP 298 Keiichi Hashimoto, Mike Peipman (t); David Harris, Bob Pilkington (tb); Jim Gray (tba); Jim Mosher (frhn); Hiro Honshuku (f); Jim Hobbs, Jeremy Udden (as); Phil Scarff (ss, ts); Hans Indigo (bs); Soo-Jung Kae (p); Winnie Dahlgren (vib); Norma Zocher (g); Rick McLaughlin (b); Richie Barshay (d); Taki Masuko (perc). 10/03.

One feels an immediate admiration for outfits like the JCAO for the sheer moxie required to put together an operation like this, and particularly when they're bound to be confused with Michael Mantler's Jazz Composers Orchestra, who pioneered this kind of thing in the late '60s.

The first album is attractive largely because of the presence of John Medeski of Medeski, Martin & Wood (albeit on piano rather than trademark organ) and guest stars Rivers and Hemphill, who each contribute a significant composition. In addition, there are compositions by Calkins, Ken Schaphorst, Hurlbut and Johnson. These are competent and interesting enough, but one feels that the performances are constrained by the rigours of the material, especially on Schaphorst's 'Loggerhead Blues', which could have been a lot looser in execution. It also suffers from following Katz's fine 'Variations On A Theme By Jimi Hendrix', which is distinguished by some unexpected sonorities, not least Kathy Halvorsen's delightful oboe part. It's a piece that firmly underscores JCAO's lineage from the Gil Evans orchestra of the previous decade. Hemphill's 'Hard Blues' was an important component of his live set for a while and it is distinguished here by a tense, mournful solo from the composer. His impact on JCAO is acknowledged in a tribute piece on the second album. The Rivers piece, 'Flux', is typical of his later interest in concerto grosso structures, with the main ensemble broken down into small combos.

The later, live date for Cadence is a more sober beast and less immediately likeable, though to go out without guest support speaks volumes for JCAO's confidence. Nearly a decade on, the personnel is almost entirely different. The featured composers include Warren Senders, the Argentinian Laura Andel, trombonist David Harris and JCAO founder Darrell Katz, who contributes the blues-based Hemphill suite. The soloing is committed, intelligent and inventive, even when the basic structures are gruelling. Andel's 'El Tiempo – To My Mother' and 'Caruara' also stand out.

The personnel has continued to evolve and the concept to develop. Celebration is arguably closer in feel to the first album, but again without benefit of stellar guests. The five compositions come from the same axis within the group, but with the addition of Ken Schaphorst, who always turns in something interesting. Again live – the odds against a studio visit for an ensemble like this are hefty – the recording was made in the Tsai Performance Center at Boston University, and the sound CIMP get away from home base is testimony to the technical skill on hand at a label often decried (by us) for cheerless literalism.

Jazz Composers Orchestra (founded 1967)

GROUP

Formed by Michael Mantler to commission and perform new large-scale jazz compositions.

(*) Communications JCOA 841124-2 Michael Mantler (dir); Don Cherry (c); Randy Brecker, Stephen Furtado, Lloyd Michels (flhn); Bob Northern, Julius Watkins (frhn); Jimmy Knepper, Roswell Rudd (tb); Jack Jeffers (btb); Howard Johnson (tba); Al Gibbons, Steve Lacy, Steve Marcus (ss); Bob Donovan, Gene Hull, Frank Wess (as); Gato Barbieri, George Barrow, Pharoah Sanders, Lew Tabackin (ts); Charles Davis (bs); Carla Bley, Cecil Taylor (p); Larry Coryell (g); Kent Carter, Ron Carter, Bob Cunningham, Richard Davis, Eddie Gomez, Charlie Haden, Reggie Johnson, Alan Silva, Steve Swallow, Reggie Workman (b); Andrew Cyrille, Beaver Harris (d). 1–6/68.

JCO's best-known product is still the massive 'chronotransduction' Escalator Over The Hill. From the same period came the equally ambitious Communications. It consists of four enormous slabs of orchestrated sound and a brief 'Preview', each with a featured soloist. Or, in the case of the opening 'Communications No. 8', two soloists: Don Cherry and Gato Barbieri. Mantler's scoring is unique. Cherry's squeaky cornet is the only high-pitched brass instrument; the sections are weighted towards french horns and trombones, with flugelhorn accents generally located in the middle register and the higher-pitched parts assigned to soprano saxophones. In addition, Mantler scores for five double basses on each track, which gives each piece a complex tonal rootedness for the soloists' (mostly) unrestrained excursions.

Roswell Rudd's playing on 'No. 10' is some of his best on record; Steve Swallow's bass introduction establishes its parameters with great exactness, and again the dark scoring works superbly. The final two-part section fully justifies Cecil Taylor's top billing. His solo part is full of huge, keyboard-long runs and pounded chords and arpeggios that leave Andrew Cyrille sounding winded and concussed. Very much of its time, Communications is still an important historical document.

Jazz Couriers

GROUP

Modernist combo fronted by Ronnie Scott and Tubby Hayes.

 Some Of My Best Friends Acrobat 4265 Jimmy Deuchar (t); Ronnie Scott, Tubby Hayes (ts); Terry Shannon (p); Phil Bates (b); Bill Eyden (d). 8/57, 2/58.

(*) The First And Last Words Jasmine JAS626 As above, except add Kenny Napper (b); Phil Seaman (d). 8/57, 7/59.

Ronnie and Tubbs met up at just the right moment and brokered a combination of recent success and some frustration into one of the legendary groups of British jazz. There's a certain overlap between these dates, with the August 1958 recordings, including Tubbs's 'Through The Night Roared The Overland Expression' and a nice arrangement of Dameron's 'On A Misty Night', included on both. Hard to say which is the better option after that, since all British collectors without the relevant vinyl will want the whole available run. Jasmine have done a nice crisp job with the mastering and the presence of the other British jazz legend (we'd like to elevate Deuchar to that company as well as Seaman) gives the nod to the latter disc.

The Jazz Five

GROUP

London-based modernists, circa 1960.

 The Five Of Us Jasmine JASCD 623 Vic Ash (ts, cl); Harry Klein (bs); Brian Dee (p); Malcolm Cecil (b); Bill Eyden (d). 10–11/60.

Originally one of Tony Hall's Tempo series (and very collectable in that form), this catches a hot quintet in enthusiastic form. The main point at this distance is to hear the playing of Ash and Klein, accomplished saxophonists who rarely enjoyed much time in the limelight. Ash's mobile, heavy-toned tenor (and clarinet, for a nice change) is the punchy lead voice, but Klein's gruffly assertive playing is perhaps even more listenable. The music is in an easy-going Messengers/Couriers mould, and though the originals are nothing special they are, at least, originals rather than mere hard-bop covers. Dee gets as much solo space as the horns but at this stage at least was rather less interesting in that role.

Jazz Jamaica

GROUP

Attempting a synthesis of Caribbean musics – ska, calypso, reggae, mento – and jazz. De facto leader Gary Crosby is guitar legend Ernest Ranglin's nephew.

 Skaravan Skazz Records SKACD 001 Eddie Thornton (t); Rico Rodriguez (tb); Michael Rose (ts, f); Cedric Brooks (ts); Clifton Morrison (ky, hca); Alan Weekes (g); Gary Crosby (b); Kenrick Rowe (d). 93.

 Double Barrel Hannibal 1421 Eddie Thornton (t); Dennis Rollins (tb); Brian Edwards (as); Michael Rose (ts, f); Clifton Morrison (p, org, ky); Alan Weekes (g); Gary Crosby (b); Kenrick Rowe (d); Tony Uter (perc). 98.

 Massive Dune Records 06 Kevin Robinson, Guy Barker, Edward Thornton, Claude Deppa, Sean Corby, Colin Graham (t); Harry Brown, Ashley Slater, Annie Whitehead, Barnaby Dickinson, Fayyaz Virji, Winston Rollins, Dennis Rollins (tb); Andy Grappy (tba); Denys Baptiste, Andy Sheppard; Michael Rose, Patrick Clahar, Adam Bishop, Jason Yarde, Soweto Kinch, Tony Kofi; Ray Carless (saxes); Alex Wilson (p); Orphy Robinson (vib); Alan Weekes (g); Gary Crosby (b); Kenrick Rowe (d) Tony Uter (perc); Juliet Roberts (v). 01.

 Motorcity Roots Dune 012 Abram Wilson (t, v); Harry Brown (tb); Soweto Kinch, Jason Yarde (as); Denys Baptiste (ss, ts); Alex Wilson (p, org); Andrew McCormack (p); Robin Bannerjee (g); Gary Crosby (b); Rod Youngs (d); Pete Eckford, Satin Singh (perc); Wesley Lewis, Zara McFarlane, Sir Bill Morris, Omar, Mary Pearce, Juliet Roberts (v). 03.

Jazz Jamaica's 'skazz' sounds as if it might have been around for ever. The best testimony to its naturalness is the title-arrangement of the Juan Tizol–Duke Ellington tune, which joins Charlie Parker's 'Barbados' and a couple of Skatalites songs in a joyous programme of blowing tunes. The rhythms may be a little unvaried and the solos lacking somewhat in subtlety, but the impact of players like Rico Rodriguez, the legendary trombonist of the Skatalites, and of Clifton 'Bigga' Morrison is unmistakable, and Crosby and Rowe hold the rhythm section together with great poise. Rico's solo on his own 'Ramblin'' is definitive. Hard to dislike, any of it, but possibly a bit one-dimensional for repeated hearings on CD.

The second album points to staying power and an ambition to push into new musical territory. The inclusion of Bird's 'Dewey Square' alongside the Bacharach–David 'Walk On By', 'I Heard It Through The Grapevine', the theme from Exodus and Wayne Shorter's 'Night Dreamer' suggests a group prepared to cast its net wide. Crosby is still the driving force, though it is Rollins who does the excellent horn arrangements, and his big blatting sound is consistently attractive.

The All Stars big band on Massive brings together a remarkable array of British musicians from two generations, from young cats in their mid-20s to seniors of 70-plus. The sound is joyous and strong. They're back again on Motorcity Roots with a fantastic tribute to Motown. The vocals are sometimes an intrusion, even on these familiar songs. Denys Baptiste's solo on 'I Heard It Through The Grapevine' is superb, but the improbable highlight is senior trade unionist Bill Morris's narration of 'What's Going On', alongside a passionate Soweto Kinch solo. New guy Abram Wilson shines on a couple of tracks and there's a fine guest spot from Nu-Soul star Omar, who tackles 'Just My Imagination' as if he heard it in his cradle.

Jazz Messengers

GROUP

The Blakey 'ghost band', convened by Benny Golson.

 The Legacy of Art Blakey Telarc 83407 Terence Blanchard (t); Curtis Fuller (tb); Benny Golson (ts); Geoff Keezer (p); Peter Washington (b); Lewis Nash (d). 11/97.

As a one-off hard-bop band (recorded at Iridium) this line-up is hard to beat, but it doesn't sound like the Messengers and the comparison does it little service. Golson's 'Blues March' and 'Whisper Not' are both cracking reads, and there's a nice examination of Wayne Shorter's 'One By One' to kick things off, but there's no real sense of celebration or legacy.

The Jazz Passengers

GROUP

The name was supposed to sound like the Jazz Messengers. They once toured with Deborah Harry!

(*) Implement Yourself New World 80398 Curtis Fowlkes (tb); Roy Nathanson (as, ts, cl); Marc Ribot (g, hn); Bill Ware (vib); Jim Nolet (vn); Brad Jones (b); E. J. Rodriguez (d, perc); Waldwick High School Marching Band. 3/90.

 Live At The Knitting Factory KFWCD 107 As above, except omit Ribot, band; add Marcus Roja (tba); Dave Fiuczynski (g); Dougie Bourne (d); Yuka Honda (samples). 1/91.

 Plain Old Joe Knitting Factory KFWCD 139 As above, except omit Fiuczynski, Roja, Bourne, Honda; add Michael Dorf (hca); Helen Wood (v). 92.

The original idea was a trombone/saxophone duo, consisting of Fowlkes and Nathanson, but it has steadily expanded into a flexible ensemble that does what can only be described as jazz cabaret. The vocal arrangements are reminiscent, weirdly, of Escalator Over The Hill, or one of Frank Zappa's jazzier projects. If one could imagine an avant-garde or post-modern Crusaders, that might be even nearer the mark. The drill is not to expect anything too much like the last track or album. Fortunately, it's all done with too much wit and intelligence to risk the charge of mere perversity, and the playing, from Fowlkes and Nathanson especially, is so good that one seldom pauses to wonder why? Or even what?

At the turn of the '90s, the group had a fairly regular berth at the Knitting Factory, but the live album is the weakest of the available records and the only one to which the charge of self-indulgence sticks. Though they seem on the surface to be the quintessential live act, the Passengers are brilliant exponents of studio performance and Implement Yourself manages to combine a relaxed live feel with astonishing discipline and exactness. As befits a group that has grown organically, there is no obviously dominating voice, though the two founders are clearly the guiding personalities. Even so, Jones, the remarkable Ware and Rodriguez add their two cents and the group functions as a unit. That being so, guests are absorbed quite seamlessly, rarely sticking out or intruding. Implement Yourself has less vocal material than usual, but Ribot's vocalized guitar-line intercutting with the vibes on the Dolphyish 'Peace In The Valley' takes the place of a conventional lyric. As a whole, it's a bruising but constantly fascinating listen.

Plain Old Joe is somewhat close to the group's music theatre vein and doesn't come across so well on disc.

Jack Jeffers

BASS TROMBONE, TUBA

A first-call man for brass sections, and as an arranger.

 New York Dances Mapleshade 3632 Jeffers; Don McIntosh, Junior Vega, James Zoller (t); Alfred Patterson (tb); Pablo Calogero (bs); Enrique Fernandez (as); Bill Easley, Mark Shim (ts); Sonelius Smith (p); Steve Novosel (b); Warren Smith (d). 96.

Hamiet Bluiett's Explorations series offers overlooked musicians their 15 minutes. Even so, Jack remains pretty much with the other foot-soldiers throughout this nicely crafted big-band set. Unlike, say, Howard Johnson, who proselytizes for the tuba as a solo instrument, he prefers to work on the orchestral textures and leave the soloing to others. The forces are small enough for the subtleties of these arrangements to shine through, but with a low, throbbing power that reflects where Jack's been sitting for years.

The main event is a New York suite which maximizes the ensemble's unusual sound, but there are also cuts like Nat Adderley's 'Sweet Emma', Jobim's 'Corcovado', Duke's 'Mood Indigo' and 'Caravan' (which is actually trombonist Tizol's), and, as a closer, Mingus's 'Goodbye, Pork Pie Hat'. A nice buy for anyone who follows the quiet, heroic progress of contemporary big bands.

Eddie Jefferson (1918–79)

VOICE

A pioneer of vocals, putting lyrics to famous jazz solos, he was originally a dancer.

 Letter From Home Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 307 Jefferson; Ernie Royal, Clark Terry (t); Jimmy Cleveland (tb); James Moody (as, f); Johnny Griffin (ts); Arthur Clarke (bs); Junior Mance, Joe Zawinul (p); Barry Galbraith (b); Louis Hayes, Osie Johnson, Sam Jones (d). 12/61.

(*) Body And Soul Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 396 Jefferson; Dave Burns (t); James Moody (ts, f); Barry Harris (p); Steve Davis (b); Bill English (d). 9/68.

(*) Come Along With Me Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 613 Jefferson; Bill Hardman (t); Charles McPherson (as); Barry Harris (p); Gene Taylor (b); Bill English (d). 8/69.

Jefferson is little known among younger jazz fans, and various attempts to revive interest in 'The Godfather Of Vocalese' in recent years have fallen flat. There is a widespread belief that King Pleasure wrote the lyrics to 'Moody's Mood For Love', a vocalized transcription of James Moody's alto saxophone solo on 'I'm In The Mood For Love'; Pleasure certainly made it a monster hit, but the song was Jefferson's, as was the lyric for Hawkins's 'Body And Soul'.

Letter boasts a heavyweight line-up and some sure-footed vocal arrangements. Four of the tracks are for sextet, but the better pieces use the full breadth of the band, with Jefferson high-wiring it over Zawinul's spry comping; check out Jefferson's version of the pianist's 'Mercy, Mercy, Mercy' on the 1968 Body And Soul. The singer's longest-standing partnership, with saxophonist Moody, is reflected in a dozen cuts, one of the best of which is a lively 'So What' (again on Body And Soul). Their relationship had rekindled in the '60s when Jefferson, who had been eclipsed by smoother talents like Jon Hendricks, staged something of a comeback; the later sessions (Come Along With Me) with Bill Hardman and Charles McPherson on staples like 'Yardbird Suite' and 'Dexter Digs In' are well worth catching, though the voice has lost some of its elasticity and bounce. Because they worked such similar turf, there was always potential for copyright wrangles with Pleasure, which explains why 'Body And Soul' is sometimes retitled 'I Feel So Good' and 'Bless My Soul'.

Jens Jefsen (born 1946)

DOUBLE BASS

Hails from Bov in Denmark and is now based in Aarhus. He originally trained as a piano-tuner.

(*) Kiss My Jazz Stunt STUCD 19815 Jefsen; Uffe Steen (g); Alex Riel (d).
 BeJazzled Stunt STUCD 2022 As above, except add David Wilczewski (sax); Jonas Johansen (d). 9 & 10/01.
 Don't Quit Music Mecca 5003 As above, except omit Riel, Johansen; add Jukkis Uotila (d, perc). 11/05.

Though he served his apprenticeship tweaking pianos into shape, Jefsen preferred to work with a guitar-player in his trio. Steen's the ideal man for the job, and heard to even better advantage on a duo record, String Time, which came out in 1997. On both Kiss My Jazz and BeJazzled, though, he's in crisp, authoritative form, and his solo on 'Melody November' on the former (it's posted on Jefsen's website, too) is a real token of quality.

The leader himself is one of a cohort of Scandinavian bassist-leaders. He's brawny, witty and impeccably musical in everything he does. The writing sometimes has a folksy quality that recalls what was going on in Swedish jazz in Lars Gullin/Arne Domnérus days, but it's more individual than that. Wilczewski adds to that impression, and if he sometimes overpowers the trio on his appearances, he's always of interest. Start with the earliest of these, if you can't find any of Jefsen's earlier discs, that is.

Erik Jekabson

TRUMPET

Berkeley native, now on the West Coast again after a sojourn in New York.

(*) Intersection Fresh Sound New Talent FSNT 165 Jekabson; Matt Otto (ts); John Ellis (ts, bcl, oc); Ben Monder (g); Alexis Cuadrado (b); Mark Ferber (d, perc). 12/02.

Jekabson's background in big bands is reflected in the elegance of this relatively straight-ahead small-group date. He's worked with the Woody Herman and Illinois Jacquet orchestras, but there are hints more of Gil Evans on 'Farewell' and 'You Go To My Head', which end the date. These also clinch the importance to the session of Monder's unusually orthodox guitar. It's intriguing to hear him in the role of bop accompanist but, not surprisingly, there's nothing generic in his contribution. Jekabson has a lovely bright tone and his opening statements on 'On The Move', blended with Otto's tenor (reminiscent in some phases of Hank Mobley), promise much. 'Invigoration' is another outstanding track, with Monder again prominent. A polished, highly attractive record that suggests there's still plenty of life in hard bop.

Clay Jenkins

TRUMPET

Jenkins writes thoughtful and often challenging modern jazz that builds on tradition.

 Yellow Flowers After Chase Music 8051 Jenkins; Reggie Thomas (p); Tom Warrington (b); Steve Houghton (d). 99.
 Azure Eyes Jazz Compass JC1003 As above, except omit Houghton; add Larry Koonse (g); Joe LaBarbera (d). 11/99.
(*) Matters Of Time Jazz Compass JC1008 Jenkins; Rich Perry (ts); Harold Danko (p); Bob Bowman (b); Steve Houghton (d); Karrin Allyson (v). 8/03.
 Blues State Jazz Compass JC1015 As for Azure Eyes. 06

Jenkins seems interested in the more highly structured and orchestrated end of bebop. Tadd Dameron tunes appear on the first two records – 'Soultrane' on Yellow Flowers After and 'Hot House' on its rather better successor – and his own impressive writing is thirled to harmonic ideas that have their origins in Tadd's still under-exploited charts. As a horn-player, Jenkins has a clear, rather bleak sound that is not the most attractive you'll hear. Nevertheless, it is the quality of his thought that impresses and his colleagues on both albums are clearly responsive to his idiom. On the first record – not his debut, but the first to come our way – he mixes up originals with challenging repertory pieces: 'Brilliant Corners', an unaccompanied 'Don't Get Around Much Any More' and an unexpectedly beautiful 'Let's Fall In Love'.

The integration is more accomplished on the second album, though it seems to have lost some of the freshness and spontaneity. LaBarbera is a powerful drummer and brings a robust architecture to the original songs, anchoring them more securely than Houghton did on the earlier record. 'It Never Entered My Mind' is a showcase for Jenkins and he uses the opportunity to the full, with a lovely, developed solo. This is the band Jenkins reconvened for Blues State; all his own themes, apart from Danko's 'Sizzle', and pretty much on a par with the earlier disc.

Matters Of Time is cracking, with some superb playing from Danko and crisp solos from Jenkins himself on 'Trinkle Tinkle' and the original 'Rail Trails'. Allyson's contribution is surprisingly good.

Leroy Jenkins (1932–2007)

VIOLIN, VIOLA

He taught in the South before returning to his native Chicago and joining AACM. His work embraces classical technique and the avant-garde. A member of the Revolutionary Ensemble and Sting.

 Lifelong Ambitions Black Saint 120033 Jenkins; Muhal Richard Abrams (p). 3/77.
 The Legend Of Ai Glatson Black Saint 120022 Jenkins; Anthony Davis (p); Andrew Cyrille (d, perc). 7/78.
(*) Mixed Quintet Black Saint 120060 Jenkins; John Clark (frhn); James Newton (f); J. D. Parran (cl); Marty Ehrlich (bcl). 3/79.
(*) Urban Blues Black Saint 120083 Jenkins; Terry Jenoure (vn, v); James Emery, Brandon Ross (g); Alonzo Gardner (b); Kamal Sabir (d). 1/84.
(*) Live! Black Saint 120122 Jenkins; Brandon Ross (g); Eric Johnson (syn); Hill Greene (b); Reggie Nicholson (d). 3/92.
* Solo Lovely Music 134 Jenkins (vn solo). 10/92.

Jenkins's percussive, rasping delivery rarely departed from an identifiable tonal centre or melodic logic and, like Anthony Davis's work, had an almost classical sense of form. His preference is for looping statements, punctuated by abrupt rhythmic snaps; the most obvious influence is Stuff Smith, but there are also parallels with the way saxophonist Anthony Braxton used to deliver improvised lines. Davis is present on The Legend Of Ai Glatson, which was recorded shortly after the Revolutionary Ensemble disbanded. It is one of the few places in contemporary jazz where the direct influence of Cecil Taylor can be detected, and it remains strongly reminiscent of Cecil's Café Montmartre sessions. Jenkins is in stunningly good form, and his solo play on tributes to two modern saxophone-players, 'Brax Stone' and 'Albert Ayler (His Life Was Too Short)' is impeccable, even if Legend isn't the prettiest of recordings.

The Mixed Quintet session is a foretaste of the classical configurations that were to follow. Some of the titles might sound restrainedly formal – 'Quintet #3', 'Shapes, Textures, Rhythms, Moods' – but none of these is a merely abstract étude or exercise, and all of them have Jenkins's trademark blend of intense expression and firm control. The four wind-players who join him are all masters in their own right, and Ehrlich is revelatory, a player as strongly rooted in classic jazz as he is in European art music.

Jenkins released no commercial recordings between 1984 and 1992, and his back catalogue is still threadbare. Jenkins's working band, Sting, were capable of great things in a live setting, but they're nothing compared to the later Computer Minds. The live session completely merits the exclamation mark. It's a fierce, urgent session, recorded in a New York public school, and sounds appropriately in contact with what's going on in the streets. To an extent, Jenkins is a traditionalist rather than a radical. His interests, though, have always reached well beyond jazz, and his band tackles a whole range of black musics.

The duos with Abrams are also both traditionally minded and innovative. All the compositions are from the violinist, even the closing 'The Father, The Son, The Holy Ghost', which clearly isn't the same as the Albert Ayler piece. Like their titles – 'The Blues', 'Meditation', 'Happiness' – the pieces are mainly abstract. There's a patient, almost schoolmasterly side to Abrams's playing. Jenkins moves off into pan-tonality a few times, but he stays firmly anchored in an identifiable key for most of the set, even when his partner has dissolved the normal ties of melody and accompaniment.

Urban Blues is a less than representative account of a band that on its night could be wildly exciting. Recorded live in Sweet Basil in New York City, it comes across as muddled rather than waspish. Terry Jenoure's vocals were a luxury that Sting could have dispensed with, and the twinned guitars (great players when on their own turf) are often repetitive and unilluminating.

There is a grizzled majesty to the unaccompanied set, a confident conflation of traditions. Tackling 'Giant Steps' and Dizzy's 'Wouldn't You' on solo fiddle and viola bespeaks some courage, but Jenkins skates across those familiar harmonics with breathtaking ease. The recording is in close-up, an intimate glimpse of a master at work but, sadly, on his last surviving record.

Lillette Jenkins

PIANO

Talented pianist/vocalist making a belated debut as leader.

 The Music of Lil Hardin Armstrong Chiaroscuro 302 Jenkins; Doc Cheatham, Glenn Zottola (t); Dan Barrett (tb); Bob Wilber (cl); Antti Sarpila (as, cl); Buddy Tate (ts); Chris Flory, Howard Alden (g); Jack Lesberg (b); Jackie Williams (d). 1–11/88.

Listen to Lillette's concluding 'Jazz Speak', where she speaks warmly about the still underrated Lil Hardin and establishes a context for these warm sessions. The strength of Lil's writing – 'Hotter Than That', 'Lil's Boogie', 'Just For A Thrill' – is immediately evident. Some numbers are for smaller groups, with Wilber playing superbly on a couple of quartet tracks, while others, particularly the later songs, are interpreted by a larger group with Cheatham and Tate. By no means a special-pleading project: Lillette's big personality carries the day.

Jack Jenney (1910–45)

TROMBONE

An impeccable technician, he was in demand on the New York scene during the '30s and led his own band at the end of the decade, but it was a financial disaster.

 Stardust Hep CD 1045 Jenney; Charlie Spivak, Red Solomon, Charlie Zimmerman, Don Sprague, Oliver Suderman, Nick Galetta, Tom Gonsoulin, Rudy Novak, Joe DePaul, Don Stevens (t); Bob Jenney, Jack Bigelow, Henry Singer, Ray Noonan (tb); Eddie Brown (cl); Toots Mondello, Frank Myers, Hugo Winterhalter, Larry Gordon, Steve Madrick, Victor Garber (as); Johnny Pepper, Art Drelinger, Peanuts Hucko, Buddy Bardach, Edwin Keeghan, Maurice Kogan, Babe Russin (ts); Claude Thornhill, Frank Cohen, Arnold Ross, Gill Bowers (p); Chick Reeves, Al Costi, Morris Crossin (g); Fred Whiting, Lou Shoobe, Iggy Shevak (b); Johnny Williams, Gene Krupa, Sid Jacobs, Paul Richter, Frank Bond (d); Adelaide Moffat, Louise Tobin, Meredith Blake, Frank Bond, Kirby Walker (v). 6/37–1/40.

Jenney's entire jazz legacy is bound up in Hoagy Carmichael's tune. His eight bars on Artie Shaw's 1940 record of 'Stardust' remain indelible, and the version he recorded with his own band – where he takes a musing journey through the tune, hardly referring to the original melody as he goes – is extraordinary. He played as smoothly as Dorsey, as sonorously as Teagarden – but he was a disaster as a bandleader, going broke in the process, and ruining himself with alcohol.

The 18 surviving titles by Jenney's various big-band line-ups are collected here. Lacking as they are in outstanding soloists or compelling arrangements, it's easy to see why the outfit made no significant impact, and this set is really for big-band specialists only. Jenney's own playing, though, remains haunting in its unblemished beauty, and the two takes of 'Stardust' included here should really rank among the great examples of trombone-playing on record.

Ingrid Jensen (born 1969)

TRUMPET, FLUGELHORN

At 25, she became the youngest faculty member at the Bruckner Conservatory in Linz, adding academic honours to an impressive list of performing and recording credits.

(*) Here On Earth Enja ENJ 9313-2 Jensen; Gary Bartz (as, ss); George Colligan (p); Dwayne Burno (b); Bill Stewart (d); Jill Seifers (v). 9/96.

Jensen is a Canadian propelled onto an international stage. Early recognition came from Europe, when she studied in Vienna with Hal Galper. In terms of sound, she resembles a cross between Woody Shaw (an acknowledged hero) and Art Farmer, with whom she has also taken classes. The latter debt is predictably most evident when she switches to flugelhorn; when she does so on the title-track of Here On Earth, it is immediately evident that she intends to do things her own way. Though 'Here On Earth' is pianist George Colligan's composition and though Jensen is sharing the front line with the veteran Bartz, she stamps her personality even on this rather slight, Latinized waltz. On 'Woodcarvings', the other debt is made explicit, a dense but curiously floating theme that one might imagine Woody playing himself. This time Bartz is on soprano, masterfully negotiating a theme that sits awkwardly for the horns. Stewart is a calm and steady presence.

It's a beautifully judged set: just the one original, and this time one by sister Christine Jensen; alongside this, themes by Cole Porter, Hank Mobley, Kenny Wheeler and Miles Davis, and Gil Evans's 'The Time Of The Barracudas' and Mercedes Rossi's 'Ninety-One', the last an unexpectedly lyrical gem. Jill Seifers's two vocals offer a change of pace and colour. One simply basks in Gary Bartz's warm-hearted wisdom, and in Jensen's own poise and confidence.

* At Sea Artist Share AS0039 Jensen; Geoff Keezer (p, ky); Lage Lund (g); Matt Clohesy (b); Jon Wikan (d, perc); Hugo Alcazar (perc). 4/05.
An altogether more impressionistic record than its predecessors. The opening is a moody soundscape with the trumpet heavily reverbed over piano, keys and cymbals. Keezer's 'Captain Jon' and 'Tea And Watercolours' are driven along more familiar grooves. 'There Is No Greater Love' has a mournful, elegiac quality. Then the tracks suddenly become much longer and more exploratory, with 'Everything I Love' coming in over nine minutes, the original 'Swotterings' and 'KD Lang' (with wah-wah Rhodes from Keezer (!) and Ingrid double-tracked) at ten and 12 respectively. It's a powerful final section. Jensen's trumpet has the richness of a flugelhorn or tenor horn throughout, partly, one suspects, thanks to Wikan's production and Eric Troyer's deft engineering. She's coming up trumps all the same.

(*) Flurry Artist Share 0062 Jensen; Christine Jensen (ss, as); Maggi Olin (ky); Mattias Welin (b); Jon Wikan (d). 7/05.
This is a collaborative group called Nordic Connect, and the writing is shared with Christine and Olin, but it still feels very much Jensen's project. Her 'Seascape' and 'Seafever' obviously relate in some way to the previous album (and may indeed be hangovers from that), but the rest of the writing is forward-looking and attractively nuanced. Jensen sounds ever more like Woody Shaw and her soloing has the probing, oblique quality Shaw had at his greatest. A fine record, whatever its exact attribution.

Also, in brief:

 Vernal Fields Enja ENJ 9013. 10/94.
A great debut, which finds the trumpeter breathing fire but also surrounded by subtle collaborators (George Garzone (ts), Steve Wilson (as, ss), Bruce Barth (p)) who help steer her in some unexpected directions.

 Higher Grounds Enja ENJ 9353. 4/98.
This looks on paper like another cooker (Gary Thomas (ts, f), David Kikoski (p, ky), Ed Howard (b), Victor Lewis (d)) but sounds curiously becalmed.

 Now As Then Justin Time 8499. 02.
This is credited to Project O, a collaboration with Gary Versace (org) and Jon Wikan (d) and with spots for guest reeds. Begins with a powerful 'Night Has A Thousand Eyes' that is never quite followed up.

Jerry Jerome (1912–2001)

TENOR SAXOPHONE, CLARINET

Busy since the '30s, he worked as a section-player with Miller, Goodman and Shaw, and as a studio regular thereafter.

(*) Something Old, Something New Arbors ARCD 19168 2CD Jerome; Yank Lawson, Chris Griffin, Bobby Hackett, Dale McMickle, Mel Davis, Randy Sandke (t); Henry 'Red' Allen (t, v); George Masso, John Messner, Frank Sirocco, Vernon Brown, Ray Coniff (tb); Tyree Glenn (tb, vib); Bill Stegmeyer (cl); Toots Mondello, Paul Rickey, Wolfie Tannenbaum (as); Arthur Rollini, Hymie Schertzer (ts); Joe Grim (bs); Teddy Wilson, John Potoker, Dick Hyman, Johnny Guarnieri, Frankie Hines, Dick Cary, Bill Clifton (p); Phil Kraus (vib); Charlie Christian, Johnny Smith, Allen Hanlon (g); Oscar Pettiford, Bob Haggart, Sid Weiss, George Roumanis, Tommy Abruzzo (b); George Wettling, Joe Ascione, Mousie Alexander, Dave Tough, Specs Powell (d). 9/39–3/96.
 Something Borrowed Something Blue Arbors ASRCD 19213 2CD Similar to above, except add Charlie Shavers (t); Lou Colombo (t, flhn); Lawrence Brown, John Allred (tb); Tommy Newsom (ts); Hank Jones (p); Bob Leary (g); Frank Tate (b); Ed Metz (d); Lynn Roberts (v). 9/39–3/01.
These were Jerome's first jazz albums for 40 years. The first disc is almost a 'bonus' album, since it consists of Jerry reminiscing on his career – with Glenn Miller, Goodman and Shaw, and as a studio regular. There are some fascinating fragments from many years of work – a 1939 jam with Charlie Christian, small groups with Charlie Shavers and Teddy Wilson, commercials featuring Bobby Hackett and Henry Allen and plenty more besides. Not a record to hear often, but an engaging audio-documentary. The 'New' section is a delight. Jerome was almost 84 when he made the date, but his tenor sound is still big and unfaltering, and none of the tempos troubled him. Arbors assembled one of their repertory casts for the session and, with Sandke and Masso at their best, it's a fine hour or so of blue-chip mainstream, and a beguiling tribute to a likeable old pro.

Amazingly, they did it all again five years later. As before, the first disc has Jerome reminiscing about some of his old recordings before we hear them; the second, cut only weeks before his 89th birthday, is his farewell to jazz (he died the following November). The old stuff is interesting if rather tame, though it ends with a 1964 jam on 'I Found A New Baby' from a birthday party gig with Shavers, Lawrence Brown and Hank Jones. The new music is solid mainstream, and Jerry holds his own.

J-Life

GROUP

Part of the new wave of black British jazz.

(*) Tomorrow's Warriors Present ... Dune 02 Jason Yarde (ss, as); Robert Mitchell (p, ky); Darren Taylor (b); Daniel Crosby (d); Julie Dexter (v). 05.
Garlanded with awards and accolades, J-Life seemed to be heading somewhere, but immediately fell foul of the understandable backlash that had older heads reminding enthusiasts that 'British jazz booms' happen about every ten years and are no more reliable than the weather. J-Life are bright and sassy; Yarde is a formidable technician and Mitchell sounds more comfortable in this context than on his own records. The guest appearances – not listed above – are as bland as award ceremony walk-ons. It just doesn't add up to anything, though, and one feels one has been presented with a slick marketing concept rather than a jazz record.

Bjørn Johansen (1940–2002)

TENOR AND BARITONE SAXOPHONES

Much-admired Norwegian player and composer.

 Bjørn Johansen: Portrait Of A Norwegian Jazz Artist Gemini GMCD 9505 Johansen; Tore Nilsen, Jens Wendelboe, Øivind Westby (tb); Bjarne Nerem (ts); Terje Bjørklund , Egil Kapstad (p); Bjørn Alterhaug , Erik Gard Amundsen, Terje Venaas (b); Svein Christiansen, Ole Jacob Hansen (d); and others. 60–90.

An honoured figure on the Norwegian scene with a saxophone tone and subtly oblique approach to phrasing which sets him apart from any obvious American model. Inevitably, a memorial compilation of this sort is bitty and inconsistent in quality, but it does what it sets out to do and offers a convincing portrait of a little-known (outside his own country) musician.

Egil Johansen

DRUMS

One of a vast cohort of fine Scandinavian section-men. Known as 'Bop'.

 Stockholm 1986 Gemini GMCD 117 Johansen; Scott Hamilton (ts); Knud Jørgensen (p); Sture Nordin (b). 4/86.

 OBSession! Live At Fasching Four Leaf Clover 138 Johansen; Anders Widmark (p); Jan Adefelt (b). 94.

Like so many of his fellow Scandinavian drummers and bassists, Johansen seems to know exactly what's needed in every situation, and to do it with a little individuality. This is obviously a feature date for Hamilton, who was beginning his Wanderjahre in Europe as a single around this time. The material's chosen for maximum straightforwardness – 'Don't Get Around Much Any More', 'Body And Soul', 'Honeysuckle Rose' – but Hamilton seems to like what he's getting and rises to some fine solos along the way. Johansen isn't featured much, but he makes his presence firmly felt.

The trio date is more Bop's date but the group swings through it all as a unit. It's not much more than a pleasing club souvenir but as a time-waster it's fine.

Jonas Johansen

DRUMS

Perhaps most widely recognized for his work in bassist Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen's group.

 Please Move Stunt STUCD 1990 Johansen; Fredrik Lundin (ss, ts); Ben Besiakov (p); Lars Danielsson (b). 99.

 Move Up! Stunt STUCD 3152 As above, except omit Danielsson; add Anders Christensen (b). 03.

Johansen has a brisk, confident touch but never seems to over-rev a tune, always providing exactly the right background. On his own projects, he's inevitably a little more assertive and he's mixed sufficiently up on both of these to seem comfortably in charge. These are basic hard-bop dates with some intriguing wrinkles. Lundin doesn't sound like an American copyist and Besiakov has established a distinctive personality at the keyboard. Hard to separate the records, but Danielsson's silky authority probably gives the first one the nod.

Åke Johansson

PIANO

Able repertory pianist who's worked with many visiting Americans.

 Trio 77 Dragon DRCD 364 Johansson; Torbjørn Hultcrantz (b); Leif Wennerstrøm (d). 77.

(*) With Chet Baker And Toots Thielemans Dragon DRCD 333 Johansson; Chet Baker (t); Toots Thielemans (hca); Kjell Hansson (b); Rune Carlsson (d). 2/85.

 Spinning Top Dragon DRCD 314 Johansson; Stefan Isaksson (sax); Kjell Jansson (b); Magnus Gran (d). 97.

Johansson has a lovely, distinctive touch, particularly on a ballad. It's hard to know whether it's better to say he's an ideal accompanist for Chet and Toots or whether they're ideal guests for him. He's certainly not outshone on the 1985 encounter (one of literally scores of guest appearances Chet was making at the time). They start off enterprisingly with Sam Rivers's 'Beatrice' and J. J. Johnson's 'Lament' before moving into more settled, standards-based areas. Chet's playing is erratic and he doesn't sing much, so there's plenty of chance to listen to Johansson on his spots. He knows his repertory and sounds great on 'For Minors Only'.

There's an interesting chronological spread to these CDs. Johansson was already something of a veteran when he met Chet, and the early trio (only released in 2003) is a good example of his evolving style. He's fine, but he hasn't yet found partners who can pick up on his lyricism and not overpower it. Spinning Top has him more securely in charge, working in solo, trio and quartet, of which the second still seems his natural territory.

A shame to define him in terms of his work with visiting celebrities, but that was the fate of a lot of these guys, and there are worse destinies.

Jan Johansson (1931–68)

PIANO, ORGAN, VIBES

Born in Söderhamn, Johansson studied piano from the age of eleven. He moved to Copenhagen in the late '50s and then to Stockholm in 1962. He became a prolific composer and performer in the Swedish modern scene of the '60s and wrote music for film, radio and TV, as well as recording his own albums, but a meteoric career was cut short by his death in a car accident en route to a concert.

(*) En Resa I Jazz Och Folkton Heptagon HECD-0101 Johansson; Bernt Rosengren (ts); Rune Gustafsson (g); Sture Akerberg, Roman Dylag (b); Egil Johansen (d); Rupert Clemendore (perc). 2/61–8/66.

* 8 Bitar Johansson / Innertrio Heptagon HECD-005 Johansson; Gunnar Johnson, Georg Riedel (b); Ingvar Callmer, Egil Johansen (d). 2/61–7/62.

* Folkvisor Heptagon HECD-000 As above, except add Bosse Broberg (t), Arne Domnérus (cl), Lennart Aberg (ts); omit Johnson and Callmer. 2/62–9/67.

 Spelar Musik Pa Sitt Eget Vis Heptagon HECD-012 Johansson; Andreas Skjold (tb); Arne Domnérus (as, cl); Claes Rosendahl (cl, f); Rune Gustafsson (g); Sture Nordin (b); Egil Johansen (d); Rupert Clemendore (perc). 10/64–11/66.

(*) Jazz Pa Ungerska / In Pleno Heptagon HECD-014
Johansson; Svend Asmussen (vn); Rune Gustafsson (g); Palle Danielsson, Georg Riedel (b); Egil Johansen (d); Rupert Clemendore (perc). 64.

(*) Live In Tallinn Heptagon HECD-007 Johannson; Rune Gustafsson (g); Georg Riedel (b). 6/66.

 Spelar Musik Pa Sitt Eget Vis Megafon MFCD-2021 2CD
Johansson; Andreas Skjold (tb); Arne Domnérus (cl, as); Claes Rosendahl (cl); Bjarne Nerem (ts); Rune Gustafsson (g); Georg Riedel, Sture Nordin, Sture Akerberg (b); Egil Johansen, Rupert Clemendore (d). 9/64–11/66.

* Den Korta Fristen Heptagon HECD-001 Johansson; Bertil Lövgren , Rolf Ericson, Jan Allan, Bosse Broberg, Lars Samuelsson (t); Runo Ericksson (btb); Arne Domnérus , Claes Rosendahl, Lennart Aberg, Erik Nilsson, Rune Falk (reeds); Rune Gustafsson (g); Georg Riedel (b); Egil Johansen (d). 67–68.

 300,000 Heptagon HECD-006 Johansson; Lennart Aberg (ts); Georg Riedel (b); Egil Johansen, Rupert Clemendore (d); Gote Nilsson (elec). 8/67–7/68.

 Musik Genom Fyra Sekler Heptagon HECD-002 2CD
Johansson; Claes Rosendahl (cl, f); Sven Berger (f, ob, bsn); Rune Gustafsson (g); Georg Riedel (b); Arne Wilhelmsson, Sture Akerberg (b). 9–10/68.

Johansson seems destined to remain a local legend, rarely mentioned outside his native Sweden, despite several contemporary masters from the region acknowledging his importance. The wider jazz audience should certainly be aware of this pioneering composer-pianist whose inquiring mind was extraordinary enough to demand a place for him among the modern masters of the music. Heptagon's initiative has done much to bring back several of Johansson's major albums. Though most of his recording was compressed into an eight-year period, he was prolific enough to have cut some 20 LPs, and several of the best are now back in circulation. Many may know him for his work with Stan Getz on some of the saxophonist's recordings in Scandinavia, but that seems like mere 'prentice-work compared with the two marvellous discs reissued on 8 Bitar Johansson / Innertrio. Beautifully shaded between differing jazz styles, the music seems entirely fresh and unjaded, even after almost 40 years. The standards include a lovely 'She's Funny That Way' and a remarkable revision of Morton's 'The Chant', while the originals drift placidly between bebop and swing tempo, improvisations falling out of the set patterns, tamed by the lucidity of Johansson's touch and the variety of his voicings. Folkvisor is, if anything, even more impressive, bringing together the original albums, Jazz Pa Svenska and Jazz Pa Ryska. The 12 variations on Swedish folksong, with only the solid Riedel for company, make up a heartfelt meditation that equals any fusion of jazz and folk music so far committed to disc and, if the Russian themes that make up the rest of the disc are less affecting, they're a delightful makeweight. Johansson's insights are uniquely valuable and it's fitting that his own notes mention Jimmy Giuffre, since one is reminded of the American folklore which Giuffre inculcated into his own masterpiece, The Jimmy Giuffre Clarinet.

A recent reissue couples Jazz Pa Ungerska, where Johansson's usual team are joined by Svend Asmussen for another investigation of local themes, this time from Hungary, and the almost experimental In Pleno, where strange pieces such as 'Musik' and 'Mitt Piano' mingle with Coleman's 'Una Muy Bonita' and a tremendous fast blues, 'Pleno'. With the Asmussen tracks a fine legacy, this is another strong issue. Less successful is the patched-together En Resa I Jazz Och Folkton, which includes some early mischief-making – 'Tea For Two' is double-tracked with a backwards-tape solo, and 'Tico Tico' is ludicrously fast – as well as an unexpected appearance by Rosengren on one track, a waltz, a couple of polkas and some unfunky Hammond organ. For Johansson collectors only.

The live album suffers from indifferent sound but gains from the intense communication among the three men, Gustafsson sounding especially involved: sample the interplay on 'Blues For Lange', or the jaunty treatment given to Oscar Pettiford's 'Laverne Walk'. Spelar Musik Pa Sitt Eget Vis is comparatively disappointing, a hotch-potch of bits and pieces from various radio sessions: there's a fine 'Django' with strings and some other telling fragments, but some of the experiments take on an unappealing cast – a strange 'Camptown Races', for instance. Half of this set is also available on the one-disc Spelar Musik Pa Sitt Eget Vis, now also available on Heptagon. This is completely outdone by the compelling scores for Radiojazz Gruppen on Den Korta Fristen, music of real power and originality that makes one realize why his fellow-musicians held Johansson in such high regard. The almost shocking revision of 'A Night In Tunisia', set up as a feature for Nilsson's superb baritone, is a revelation – but so is 'Hej Blues', a haunting feature for Domnérus, the sparse setting for Gustafsson on 'Samba Triste' and several of Johansson's own scores, crowded with ideas.

Another live album, 300,000, is less essential: Johansson had a taste for flirting with the edges of the avant-garde, and the two pieces which involve electronics and radio static sound as dated as most such adventures of the period. Musik Genom Fyra Sekler is a curious coda to the rest, a double-CD covering further explorations into Swedish traditional music. Johansson handles his group like a chamber ensemble, the reed-players switching between instruments from track to track, melodies given a poker-faced treatment or just slightly subverted by the leader's variations. 'Ack Varmeland Du Skona', which every Swedish jazzman has played at some point, is given a soberly attractive reading, but some of the other tunes run dangerously close to kitsch. An odd if intriguing end: Johansson's death was only weeks away.

Sven-Åke Johansson (born 1943)

DRUMS, VOICE

The Swede was in at the start of the free-music scene in Germany with Brötzmann, Schoof and von Schlippenbach. He also sings, paints and writes poetry and operetta.

 Schlingerland Atavistic Unheard Music UMS/ALP 212
Johansson (d solo). 10/72.

(*) Six Little Pieces For Quintet hatOLOGY 538 Johansson; Axel Dörner (t); Rudi Mahall (bcl); Sten Sandell (p); Matthias Bauer (b). 1/99.

 Barcelona Series hatOLOGY 559 Johansson; Axel Dörner (t); Andrea Neumann (pianoharp). 99.

Johansson's Six Little Pieces were conceived as a retrospective look at the '60s free jazz, so he came up with 'early free jazz on period instruments' (and, suitably enough, he uses his old Slingerland kit for the job). The music has a nostalgic fin de siècle feel, but lacks nothing in vitality. The pieces are pitched mostly at a steadily rolling lope, the drummer directing in Sunny Murray-like style from the kit, and it's all done with sufficient restraint – no Brötzmannesque brawling – so that the solos and ensembles have an almost painterly feel to them. Dörner and Mahall play with fine lyrical feeling for the settings, although if anyone stands out it's Sandell, who finds a way into what was often thought of as pianoless music with great insight. If you want to hear what Johansson was doing three decades earlier, Atavistic have reissued his old solo album for SAJ, Schlingerland, where the drummer simply rambles around the kit for what were originally two side-long pieces.

Johansson is not really a sentimentalist about music. For one 1996 festival set, as recounted in the notes to Barcelona Series, he conducted an ensemble of 12 vintage tractors. He's also pin-sharp on what his groups are about: for this trio, he offers the description: 'a mechanistic, almost non-expressive playing stance, with the aesthetics of renouncement or of leaving out instead of filling in'. As with the other group record, the music has a reposeful quality: purposeful rather than busy, and steadily accruing detail rather than teeming with activity.

* Kalt Welle 102 – Dreizehn Fragmente Kning Disk KD027 Johansson; Michael Renkel (g). 07.

Thirteen mostly very quiet fragments, made up of small sounds and no particularly insistent drama. Renkel is what one might call a 'post-Bailey' guitarist, except that his language seems to come more from the advanced techniques required of string-players of new music. Whatever the provenance, he's an ideal partner on this, and Johansson's calm focus makes the music come alive even when it seems ready to stall and fall back on improv cliché.

Budd Johnson (1910–84)

TENOR, SOPRANO AND ALTO SAXOPHONES, CLARINET

Born in Dallas. He started as a drummer but became a stylist in the Hawkins mould. Worked in a KC band in the late '20s and then co-led with Teddy Wilson in Chicago. Subsequently with Louis Armstrong and Earl Hines, for whom he arranged. Stayed until 1942, then was with Dizzy Gillespie, Boyd Raeburn and Billy Eckstine.

 Budd Johnson 1944–1952 Classics 1307 Johnson; Little Benny Harris, Al Killian, George Treadwell, Howard McGhee, Joe Newman (t); Trummy Young, Dickie Harris, Dicky Wells, J. J. Johnson (tb); Aaron Sachs (cl, as); Herbie Fields, George Dorsey, Hilton Jefferson (as); Charlie Singleton (ts, v); Harry Carney, Cecil Scott, Cecil Payne (bs); Clyde Hart, Marty Napoleon, Jimmy Jones, Luther Henderson, Kenny Drew, Billy Taylor (p); Chuck Wayne, Herman Mitchell (g); Oscar Pettiford, Joe Shulman, Al McKibbon, Trigger Alpert, Oscar Pettiford, Milt Hinton (b); Denzil Best, George Jones, Jimmy Crawford, Kansas Fields, Kelly Martin (d); Joe Gregory, Mary Stafford, Leslie Scott, Freddie Jackson, Johnny King (v). 12/44–3/52.

Budd Johnson was a jazz giant for over five decades, yet made comparatively few recordings under his own leadership. Classics have mustered a typical hotch-potch of sessions that cross between bop, swing and the early stirrings of mainstream. Four tracks by Clyde Hart's Hot Seven, for Savoy, are as close as Budd got to playing straight bebop (with the bonus of Benny Harris in rare close-up). Otherwise there are one-off dates for labels such as Manor and Continental, under the nominal leadership of Al Killian, J. C. Heard and Dicky Wells, where Budd sails serenely through solo duties. Of the eight titles cut for Cyclone in 1947, only a single coupling turned up. There are two soupy Leslie Scott vocals from 1947, then a jump to an All Stars date from 1951, which is a bit ordinary, though there's a fine Johnson ballad feature on 'It's The Talk Of The Town'.

 Budd Johnson And The Four Brass Giants Original Jazz Classics OJC 1921 Johnson; Nat Adderley (c); Ray Nance (t, vn); Clark Terry (t, flhn); Harry 'Sweets' Edison (t); Jimmy Jones, Tommy Flanagan (p); Joe Benjamin (b); Herbie Lovelle (d). 8–9/60.

(*) Let's Swing Original Jazz Classics OJC 1720 Johnson; Keg Johnson (tb); Tommy Flanagan (p); George Duvivier (b); Charli Persip (d). 12/60.

Johnson was already a veteran when he made these: the tone settled, big, broad, soaked in blues feeling. 'Blues By Budd', on Let's Swing, is an inimitable example of Johnson at his best. There is a certain dry humour in his playing which never spills over into parody or flippancy: listen to the way he opens his solo on 'Uptown Manhattan' on the quintet album, and hear how he intensifies his playing from that point. His brother Keg plays some cheerful solos, but it's Budd's record – try the lovely reading of 'Someone To Watch Over Me', in which the saxophonist composed a unison passage for himself and Duvivier.

Four Brass Giants was a session instigated by Cannonball Adderley, who'd been listening to some of Johnson's scores for the Hines band. Johnson swings almost blandly through this one and the brassmen aren't given the most compelling of duties, but it has its moments.

 Mr Bechet Black & Blue 884 Johnson; Earl Hines (p); Jimmy Leary (b); Panama Francis (d). 7/74.

Johnson and Fatha had worked together during the later '30s and this was a happy reunion. The pianist dominates proceedings on 'Blues For Sale' and 'Linger Awhile', but the set is mostly interesting for Johnson's soprano-playing on the title-track, a tribute to the great Sidney. Panama Francis was in excellent form at this period, though some of his time-keeping is wayward.

Also, in brief:

 The Complete Stanley Dance Sessions Lone Hill Jazz LHJ 1125. 2/58, 67.

Two different 1958 groups and some bonus tracks from later. Budd's at his most Hawkins-like on 'Foggy Nights' and 'Leave Room In Your Heart For Me'.

 The JPJ Quartet Storyville STCD 8235. 69–6/71.

An obscure studio session (even the date isn't certain) with better live stuff taped at Montreux with Dill Jones (p), Bill Pemberton (b) and Oliver Jackson (d).

Bunk Johnson (1889–1949)

TRUMPET

A frequent second-trumpet man in New Orleans ragtime-to-jazz groups, he left in 1915 to tour the South, and in the '30s more or less quit music. Rediscovered in 1942, he became emblematic of the New Orleans revival, playing in a style which many found moving and mystically primeval.

 Bunk Johnson And His Superior Jazz Band Good Time Jazz 12048 Johnson; Jim Robinson (tb); George Lewis (cl); Walter Decou (p); Lawrence Marrero (bj); Austin Young (b); Ernest Rogers (d). 6/42.

(*) Bunk Johnson 1942/1945 Document DOCD-1010 Johnson; Louis Armstrong (t); Jim Robinson, Albert Warner, J. C.

Higginbotham (tb); Sidney Bechet (cl, ss); George Lewis (cl); Walter Decou, James P. Johnson (p); Lawrence Marrero (bj); Austin Young, Alcide 'Slow Drag' Pavageau, Ricard Alexis (b); Ernest Rogers, Edgar Mosely, Paul Barbarin, Abbie Williams (d). 6/42–2/45.

 Bunk And Lou Good Time Jazz 12024 Johnson; Lu Watters, Bob Scobey (c); Turk Murphy (tb); Ellis Horne (cl); Wally Rose, Burt Bales (p); Clancy Hayes, Russ Bennett, Pat Patton (bj); Dick Lammi (bb); Squire Girsback (b); Bill Dart (d). 2/44.

A difficult and contentious man, Bunk Johnson remains mysterious and fascinating, still the figurehead of 'revivalist' jazz even though his records remain relatively difficult to find, and even marginalized where those by, say, George Lewis have kept their reputation. Deceitful about his age – he claimed to have been born in 1879, older even than Buddy Bolden, with whom he'd played – Johnson was rediscovered in 1942 and fitted out with new teeth. He had never recorded before, but many records came out of the next five years. Those for Good Time Jazz were among the earliest. Bunk Johnson And His Superior Jazz Band establishes the best-remembered Johnson line-up, with fellow veterans Robinson, Lewis and Marrero, and the material is mostly New Orleans staples such as 'Down By The Riverside'. Bunk And Lou pits him against the Lu Watters band, who mix 'modern' items such as 'Ory's Creole Trombone' with a number of truly ancient ragtime pieces like 'Smokey Mokes', although, frustratingly, Johnson plays on only the more recent material. While neither is a really satisfactory record – Watters and company sound too slickly amateur – they establish the tenets of his own trumpet style: a polished, almost courtly sort of phrasing, the elimination of 'hot' tricks such as growls or shakes or needless vibrato, a bright and optimistic open tone and a way of swinging which sounds like a development out of ragtime and older brass tradition; something, perhaps, between swing and syncopation.

The Document CD fills an important gap, bringing together the 14 sides Johnson made following his initial Jazz Man dates. Unfortunately, the band isn't as good as the first line-up, with the very poor Albert Warner a dull substitute for Robinson. Lewis fares much better, but isn't as audible as he might be. Johnson chose some arcane material for the date and a lot of it goes straight back to ragtime. Four titles from 1945 with Robinson and Lewis fare much better, although the sound-quality is even worse. Finally, a fragment from a poll-winners' concert which is the only example of Johnson playing alongside Louis Armstrong.

(*) Bunk Johnson In San Francisco American Music AMCD-16 Johnson; Thomas 'Mutt' Carey (t); Jim Robinson, Kid Ory, Turk Murphy (tb); Wade Whaley, Ellis Horne (cl); George Lewis (cl); Buster Wilson, Burt Bales, Bertha Gonsoulin (p); Frank Pasley (g); Lawrence Marrero, Pat Patton (bj); Sidney Brown (bb); Ed Garland, Squire Gersback (b); Everett Walsh, Clancy Hayes, Edgar Moseley (d). 9/43–1/44.

 The King Of The Blues American Music AMCD-1 Johnson; Jim Robinson (tb); George Lewis (cl); Lawrence Marrero (bj); Sidney Brown (b, bb); Alcide 'Slow Drag' Pavageau (b); Baby Dodds (d). 44–45.

* Bunk Johnson 1944 American Music AMCD-3 Johnson; Jim Robinson (tb); George Lewis (cl); Sidney Brown (bb); Lawrence Marrero (bj); Alcide 'Slow Drag' Pavageau (b); Baby Dodds (d). 8/44.

* Bunk Johnson 1944 (2nd Masters) American Music AMCD-8 As above. 8/44.

Johnson's American Music recordings are his most substantial legacy, even if there is occasionally indifferent sound-quality and various incompatibilities with sidemen and material. Robinson and Lewis may have been New Orleans's finest, but Johnson didn't seem to like them all that much, and he frequently plays much better than Lewis on these sessions. Nevertheless The King Of The Blues and 1944 – as well as its subsequent CD of alternative takes on AMCD-8 – feature much fine music, the first all on blues themes, the second a mix of the obvious ('Panama' and so forth) and tunes which show Johnson's weakness for popular novelties, such as 'There's Yes Yes In Your Eyes'. It is mostly an ensemble music, leads being passed around the front line and small inflexions making each performance unique to itself; but there is a freshness and intensity here (Johnson had, after all, been waiting a long time to make serious records) which give the music a real cumulative power that grows with each listening. Any raggedness in the playing or flaw in the sound is made to seem insignificant by the surpassing rigour of Johnson's men and their fierce craftsmanship, especially on the 1944 discs (recorded on a hot day: a photo shows everyone in their undershirts). Bill Russell's session-notes make fascinating reading in the booklet with AMCD-8.

The other disc is at least as interesting. In San Francisco includes a This Is Jazz broadcast with an all-star band including, intriguingly, Johnson's trumpet contemporary Mutt Carey, and though Johnson sounds unhappy on 'Dipper Mouth Blues' it's absorbing music. Even better, though, are the six trumpet/piano duets with Bertha Gonsoulin. Nowhere else can one hear Johnson's silvery tone and proper phrasing so clearly.

CORE COLLECTION

* Bunk's Brass Band And Dance Band 1945
American Music AMCD-6 Johnson; Louis 'Kid Shots' Madison (t); Jim Robinson (tb); George Lewis (cl); Isidore Barbarin (ahn); Adolphe Alexander (bhn); Joe Clark (bass hn); Lawrence Marrero (bj, d); Alcide 'Slow Drag' Pavageau (b); Baby Dodds (d). 5/45.

This is a fine introduction to Johnson's music, since it features what would have been a regular parade band line-up on 11 tracks and a further nine by a typical Johnson dance group (recorded at George Lewis's home). Lewis sounds a little shrill on the Brass Band tracks, which makes one wonder about the credit for 'pitch rectification' on the CD. It is a pioneering record nevertheless, as the first authentic, New Orleans brass band session. The 'dance' tracks are very sprightly and feature some fine Lewis, as well as some of Johnson's firmest lead and even some respectable solos. The sound is quite clean as these sessions go, though some of the Brass Band acetates are in less than perfect shape.

(*) Last Testament Delmark DD 225 Johnson; Ed Cuffee (tb); Garvin Bushell (cl); Don Kirkpatrick (p); Danny Barker (g); Wellman Braud (b); Alphonse Steele (d). 12/47.

Johnson's farewell was reportedly the only session in which he really got his own way, choosing both sidemen and material; and New Orleans purists must have been surprised on both counts: he lined up a team of players quite different from the American Music cronies, and he chose rags and pop tunes to perform. 'The Entertainer', 'Kinklets' and 'The Minstrel Man' have a rather wistful animation about them, while a tune such as 'Till We Meet Again' has a (perhaps inevitable) air of valediction about it. Cuffee and Bushell play with more fluency and zip than Robinson and Lewis ever did, but their slightly anonymous quality stops them from overwhelming Johnson himself, who sounds far from finished. He plays a firm lead and takes simple, bittersweet solos.

The sound is a drawback: though recorded in the Carnegie Recital Hall, the quality is indifferent, often boxy and without much definition.

Also, in brief:

(*) Bunk Johnson And His New Orleans Band 1945–1946 Document DOCD-1001. 11/45–1/46.
Four Decca titles, eight for Victor and two V-Discs, plus eight alternative takes. Compared to the original American Music sessions, these are less heavy with authenticity, and some may prefer them for that. Familiar personnel.

 Bunk & Leadbelly At New York Town Hall 1947 /  Bunk Johnson & Mutt Carey In New York 1947 American Music AMCD-46 / AMCD-45. 9 & 10/47.
Two souvenirs from a high-profile stay. Leadbelly's only heard for four minutes on the first and Mutt replaces Bunk for four tracks on the second, rather than sitting in with him. None of this counts as 'authentic' Johnson.

Eddie Johnson (born 1921)

TENOR SAXOPHONE

Born in East St Louis and a few years older than Miles Davis, he had to wait many years for recognition on record.

 Love You Madly Delmark DE 515 Johnson; John Young (p); Eddie de Haas (b); George Hughes (d). 1/99.
There's an earlier record on Nessa, but this is a good snapshot of Johnson's easily swinging, Websterish tenor, caught in sympathetic company. Cat Anderson's 'Trombonio-Bustoso-Issimo' isn't often called for on bandstands and it helps to shape an often unusual set: Hefti's 'Whirly Bird', Ray Brown's 'Gravy Waltz', Ellington's 'You Dirty Dog', as well as the Sinatra crooner 'This Love Of Mine'.

Eric T. Johnson

GUITAR

Stylish student of bop's byways.

 Herbie Nichols: Volume One Summit 351 Johnson; Phil Grenadier (t); George Garzone (ts); Bob Nieske (b); Nat Mugavero (d). 00.
Somewhere in jazz limbo, there are dozens of 'volume twos' floating around. The Nichols title 'Love, Gloom, Cash, Love' is perhaps apposite here. Johnson is of an age to have seen Herbie's music rescued from its own limbo and elevated upsides with Monk and Powell. His arrangements sound a little unusual on the guitar, but on most of the tunes – and the set includes 'Lady Sings The Blues', 'Chit Chattin'', 'Dance Line', 'Shuffle Montgomery' and five more – he gets the idiom just right. Garzone and Grenadier help out, too, when they appear. It's a nice, well-balanced set, good enough on its own not to be wondering when the other boot is going to fall.

George A. Johnson Jr

DRUMS

Seasoned sideman, who's made a couple of appearances as leader.

 Turquoise Ocean Challenge AL 79037 Johnson; Gary Thomas (ss, ts); Ralph Bowen (ss, ts, f); Rick Budesa, Kenny Drew Jr (p); Charles Fambrough, Steve Kirby (b). 97.
If every dog has his day, Johnson's not over-anxious to make the most of this. He's one of those drummers who doesn't like to solo, which is fine with us, though he should perhaps take a couple of choruses and leave the singing alone. There are two quartets here: Thomas, Drew and Kirby caught live, the others in a top-up of studio recordings. It's coach-built modern jazz and Thomas gets off some signature solos, but not an essential record. There's a later one on BCS, called All-Star Tribute, which follows the same pattern but sounds like a home release.

Gunnar Johnson (born 1924)

BASS

Born in Gothenburg, he was a key presence in Swedish modern jazz in the '50s. Though he was later a semi-pro, he never lost touch with the music.

 Gunnar Johnson Quintet 1957–1959 Dragon DRCD 335 Johnson; Erik Norström (as); Curt Severö (bs); Jan Johansson (p); Ingvar Callmer, Rolf Svensson, Björn Ågeryd (d); Sonya Hedenbratt (v). 57–59.
A precious, if dusty, survival of the music of Johnson's quintet, which buzzed Swedish jazzgoers for a brief period in the mid- to late '50s. The main point of these mostly dusty broadcasts is to hear the quicksilver Norström, a Getzian stylist who turns in one terrific solo after another. But there is also the star-crossed Johansson, who is constantly turning bebop clichés on their heads and reaching towards the amazing albums he would go on to make in the '60s. The group supported Hedenbratt on many occasions, and she sings agreeably enough on six tracks. Lars Westin's outstanding sleeve-essay tells you all you may be curious about regarding the group's history.

Henry Johnson (born 1954)

GUITAR

A follower of Wes Montgomery, who started out in lite-jazz.

 An Evening At Sea Chiaroscuro 367 Johnson; Kenny Drew Jr (p); Larry Gray (b); Paul Humphrey (d). 11/99.
Johnson made some slight records for MCA in the '80s but seems, like George Benson, to have turned back towards straight-ahead jazz. The material here is mostly untroubling – 'In A Sentimental Mood', 'Wave', 'My Shining Hour', with maybe only 'Oleo' a shade more boisterous – and Johnson and his group breeze through it with admirable professionalism while the QE2 purred her way across the Atlantic. Not the worst gig in the world.

J. J. Johnson (1924–2001)

TROMBONE

Born in Indianapolis, he emerged in Benny Carter's orchestra and as part of Jazz At The Philharmonic, but he left an indelible mark as half of Jay and Kai with fellow trombonist Winding. A master musician.

 J. J. Johnson's Jazz Quintets Savoy 78813 Johnson; Cecil Payne (as); Leo Parker (bs); Hank Jones, John Lewis, Bud Powell (p); Leonard Gaskin, Al Lucas, Gene Ramey (b); Max Roach, Shadow Wilson (d). 6/46–11/49.

 Jay & Kai /  Origins: The Savoy Sessions / (*) Savoy, Prestige & Sensation: Complete Early Master Takes Savoy 17220 / 17127 / Definitive 11161 Johnson; Kai Winding (tb); Wally Cirillo, Lou Stein (p); Billy Bauer (g); Al Lucas, Charles Mingus (b); Kenny Clarke, Tiny Kahn (d); Al Young (perc). 10/49; 46–49; 46–49.

 J. J. Johnson, 1946–1949 Classics 1176 As above, except add Kenny Dorham (t); Sonny Stitt (ts). 46–49.

(*) Trombone By Three Original Jazz Classics OJC 091 Johnson; Kenny Dorham (t); Sonny Rollins (ts); John Lewis (p); Leonard Gaskin (b); Max Roach (d). 5/49.

Trombonists found it hard to keep up in bebop, but J.J. developed an agile and pure-toned bop voice for the horn that was influenced by saxophone phrasing. He frequently hung an old beret over the bell of his horn to soften his tone and bring it into line with the sound of the reeds around him.

The Savoys were recorded when J.J. was in his early 20s. They're already the work of a mature and confident talent. The playing is brisk, full-toned and never short of an idea, though Johnson's writing ('Jay Bird', 'Boneology', 'Riffette', 'Bee Jay', 'Jay Jay') is fairly generic. Savoy and Definitive overlap the same fine additional material, including the lovely 'Audubon' and other elegant bebop tunes; they help round out the early picture. 'Blue For Trombones', 'What Is This Thing Called Love?', 'Lament' and 'The Major' on Origins offer a first glimpse of the legendary Johnson–Winding partnership, but no sooner was this set available than Jay & Kai reappeared with bonus tracks. The Definitive set skips all of that material but includes three cuts of J.J. with the Russell Jacquet group. The Classics set as usual sticks to stuff under his leadership, though there are a couple of other things thrown in to make up the duration.

[illegible]

♛ * The Eminent Jay Jay Johnson: Volumes 1 & 2 Blue Note 32143-2 / 32144-2 Johnson; Clifford Brown (t); Hank Mobley (ts); Jimmy Heath (ts, bs); Wynton Kelly, John Lewis, Horace Silver (p); Paul Chambers, Percy Heath, Charles Mingus (b); Kenny Clarke (d); Sabu Martinez (perc). 6/53–6/55.

The first volume of the Blue Note set is one of the central documents of post-war jazz. Johnson – who was working as a blueprint checker at the time of the earliest sessions recorded – sounds fleet and confident, and he has a marvellous band round him, including a young Clifford Brown. 'Turnpike' and 'Capri' exist in two versions each and show Johnson's ability to rethink his phraseology, adjusting his attack on the original-release versions to accommodate Clarke's powerful but unemphatic swing (swamped on the September 1954 sessions by Mingus's chiming bass and the slap-happy Martinez); even on the slow-tempo 'Turnpike', Clarke provides an irresistible moving force underneath the melody. 'Get Happy' is appropriately upbeat and joyous, with notes picked off like clay pipes at a shooting gallery. In contrast, 'Lover Man' is given a mournful, drawn-out statement that squeezes out every drop of emotion the melody has to offer. The 1954 session yields some fine exchanges between Johnson and Kelly, notably on 'It's You Or No One' and 'Too Marvellous For Words', where the leader's tone and attack are almost as perfect as on 'Turnpike'. Volume 2 is filled out with a less than inspiring 1955 date featuring Hank Mobley and Horace Silver, neither of whom seems attuned to Johnson's taxing idiom. In their new RVG remastering, the records have come up as fresh as paint.

 Four Trombones: The Debut Recordings Prestige PCD 24097 Johnson; Willie Dennis, Bennie Green, Kai Winding (tb); John Lewis (p); Charles Mingus (b); Art Taylor (d). 9/53.

Originally recorded for the short-lived independent label co-run by Mingus and Max Roach, this suffers slightly from an ungainly format, which buries Johnson. There are, though, fine and fresh performances all round, including a stirring account of 'Now's The Time'. Mingus takes charge more than once. The sound is too bright on the transfer and the top notes are vinegary.

 Complete Fifties Studio Recordings Lone Hill Jazz LHJ10179 Johnson; Kai Winding (tb); Wally Cirillo, Dick Katz (p); Billy Bauer (g); Milt Hinton, Wendell Marshall, Charles Mingus, Peck Morrison (b); Al Harewood, Osie Johnson (d). 8/54–6/55.

Generously proportioned compilation of Johnson's best quintet work with Winding. There are some lovely things that bespeak the closeness of this working relationship. 'Close As Pages In A Book' just about says it, but Johnson's 'We Two' is even more exactly pitched for the two horns. Say what you like about Lone Hill, they get the stuff out there and at a very affordable price.

 The Birdlanders Fresh Sound FSCD 186 Johnson; Al Cohn, Gigi Gryce (as); Milt Jackson (vib); Henri Renaud (p); Percy Heath, Charlie Smith (b); Walter Bolden, Jerry Lloyd (d). 5/54.

 Live At Café Bohemia Fresh Sound FSCD 165 Johnson; Bobby Jaspar (ts, f); Tommy Flanagan (p); Wilbur Little (b); Elvin Jones (d). 2/57.

As ever, Fresh Sound rescue lost and forgotten tapes from the dusty back of the cupboard. The first of these, which we remember fondly for a wonderful version of 'Indiana' and a totally unexpected Milt Jackson vocal on 'The More I See You', was formerly issued on Inner City. The mixed personnels and boppish repertoire on The Birdlanders are highly effective in their different ways and there is some astonishingly good playing on the Bohemia date; also a chance to hear the pale but interesting sound of Bobby Jaspar, who often sounds anaemic alongside more rambunctious horn-players, but spot-on with Johnson. J.J. takes the opening shot in the broadcast, roaring away on 'Bernie's Tune'. Jaspar comes in after that for 'In A Little Provincial Town' and showcases his lyrical flute behind the leader's muted solo. An all too short 'Angel Eyes' and 'Old Devil Moon' are the other outstanding tracks.

(*) Jay And Kai + 6 / JJ In Person /  An Afternoon At Birdland Collectables 5677 / Lone Hill Jazz 10218 Johnson; Nat Adderley (c); Kai Winding (tb, trombonium); Urbie Green, Bob Alexander, Eddie Bert, Jimmy Cleveland (tb); Bart Varsalona, Tom Mitchell (btb); Hank Jones, Tommy Flanagan (p); Milt Hinton, Ray Brown, Wilbur Little (b); Osie Johnson, Albert 'Tootie' Heath (d); Candido Camero (perc). 4/56–2/58; 10/54, 4/56.

 Trombone For Two Mosaic 1015 Johnson; Kai Winding (tb); Dick Katz (p); Paul Chambers (b); Osie Johnson (d). 6/55.

 Trombone Master Columbia CK 44443 Johnson; Victor Feldman (p, vib); Tommy Flanagan (p); Paul Chambers, Wilbur Little, Sam Jones (b); Albert 'Tootie' Heath, Max Roach (d). 57–60.

(*) The Great Kai And J.J. Impulse! 051225-2 Johnson; Kai Winding (tb); Bill Evans (p); Paul Chambers, Tommy Williams (b); Roy Haynes, Art Taylor (d). 60.

The Impulse! recording was a commercially motivated reunion, some time after the partnership had been amicably dissolved.

Perhaps because the band behind them was so good, J.J. and Kai quickly rediscovered their old groove. The two horns are in balance, and the vibrato, which in Winding's case was apt to get wider as he aged, is exactly co-ordinated. There is much good-natured four-bar swapping which might pall were it not so sweetly and tunefully done. There is nothing like Bill Evans's brief but elegantly articulated solos on the first record, and he makes an enormous difference to the overall feel of the Impulse!, which sounds like a proper group project rather than a trombone feature with accompaniment. The best point of comparison, before and after, is 'Going, Going, Gong', which refers back to the lively 'Gong Rock' on a 1955 Bethlehem session. If this is qualitatively representative, then the later sessions have gained considerably in sophistication and sheer class. Trombone nuts will find themselves drawn to the earlier Columbia session (now on Collectables and Lone Hill), which features eight of the sliding fellows, often in jubilant unison. The two frontmen vary the sound a bit on the self-explanatory 'Piece For Two Tromboniums'. The arrangements are very good indeed and the material (with the exception of 'Surrey With The Fringe On Top') highly original and exciting. The JJ In Person date is a quintet from 1958 with Nat Adderley and Flanagan; the Lone Hill brings together club dates from 1954 and 1956, material previously only available in Japan.

Trombone For Two was also originally on Columbia and now reappears with all 20 releasable tracks from the session. Some of the 'rejects' are very good indeed, though there are moments on 'Caribe' and 'Trombonisms In Motion' where the co-ordination slips a little.

Trombone Master corrals material from four different albums, so it isn't much more than a sampling compilation from a relatively quiet period in J.J.'s career. There are some fine moments, notably his solo on 'Misterioso' and the almost eponymous 'Blue Trombone', but it isn't a particularly coherent or satisfying album.

(*) Live At The Café Bohemia Fresh Sound FSRCD 143 Johnson; Bobby Jaspar (ts, f); Tommy Flanagan (p); Wilbur Little (b); Elvin Jones (d). 2/57.

Despite Jaspar's shortcomings as a soloist, the Café Bohemia sessions provide an ideal blowing context for Johnson; he lets go joyously on 'Angel Eyes', 'Old Devil Moon' (see also Eminent: Volume 1) and, a favourite, 'Solar'. Flanagan's chording and fills are as near perfect as they could be.

 1958 European Tour Rare Live Recordings RLR 88361 3CD Johnson; Kai Winding (tb); Lee Konitz (as); Zoot Sims (ts); Red Garland, Phineas Newborn (p); Oscar Pettiford (b); Kenny Clarke (d). 58.

A genuine find. The sound isn't fantastic, but these are historic recordings that find the group in Berlin, Munich and Stockholm and at the Free Trade Hall in Manchester. A lot of detail is lost, but there's enough to satisfy J.J. fans and collectors.

(*) Yokohama Concert /  Volume 2: Chain Reaction Pablo 2620-109 / 2620-121 Johnson; Nat Adderley (c); Billy Childs (ky); Tony Dumas (b); Kevin Johnson (d). 4/77.

This was J.J.'s first recording for several years. He had a good stock of new originals, though the gig also includes a version of Nat's 'Work Song', Tony Dumas's clever 'It Happens' and the standard 'Walkin''. Despite too much emphasis on wishy-washy electric keyboards, and the naivety of Johnson Jr's drumming, the live sound is very good indeed and J.J.'s solos are strong enough to suggest that he'd never really been away.

Volume 2, released only after J.J.'s death, adds in another eight tracks. There's nothing revelatory, though the opening 'Blue 'N' Boogie' is quite good. Not so 'Suicide Is Painless', a rare instance of Johnson's taste slipping.

(*) We'll Be Together Again Pablo 2310911 Johnson; Joe Pass (g). 10/83.

 Things Are Getting Better All The Time Pablo Today 2312141 Johnson; Al Grey (tb); Kenny Barron (p, ky); Ray Brown (b); Mickey Roker (d). 11/83.

Johnson kept out of sight for most of the '70s, composing and arranging. Within five weeks in 1983, however, he made two sterling albums. The sanguinely titled Things looks suspiciously like another attempt to reduplicate the Jay and Kai sound, but it comes across much more individually. Grey, a year younger than Johnson, is a more traditional stylist; a genius with the plunger mute, he has a big, belting tone that goes well with Johnson's increasingly delicate fills and recapitulations. 'Soft Winds', 'Paper Moon' and 'Softly, As In A Morning Sunrise' are particularly good. Pianist Barron is contained and exact, but Brown and Roker are uncharacteristically listless.

Like Johnson, Joe Pass represents an extraordinary cross-section of modern jazz idiom, all carefully assimilated and absorbed. His constant lower-string pulse makes him particularly adaptable to solo and duo performance, and Together Again has the fullness of texture that might be expected of a larger group. The performances – 'Nature Boy', 'Bud's Blues', 'Solar', 'When Lights Are Low' and six others – have a fresh-minted sparkle.

(*) Quintergy – Live At The Village Vanguard /  Standards ... Emarcy 842814 / 510059 Johnson; Ralph Moore (ts); Stanley Cowell (p); Rufus Reid (b); Victor Lewis (d). 7/88.

Even nearing retirement age, Johnson sounds as full of controlled energy as ever on this fine pair of sets from a New York residency. The first record is perhaps the most grabbing, with a wonderful opening arrangement of 'When The Saints Go Marching In' and a brief but beautiful unaccompanied version of 'It's All Right With Me'. J.J.'s tone and phrasing are faultless on the faster numbers, Kenny Dorham's 'Blue Bossa', Wayne Shorter's exacting 'Nefertiti' and his own title-track.

The standards set is probably shrewd economics but makes for a duller listen. There are some lovely moments, particularly when J.J. hits pungent, single-note lines over Lewis's vivid cymbalism, but these tunes really ought to be out in a field somewhere, grazing.

Also, in brief:

 At The Opera House Verve 847340-2. 9–10/57.

J.J.'s Verves have uncertain status at the moment. This is a mixed bag anyway, with some mono material, but the material with Stan Getz (ts) is worth finding.

 Live In London Harkit 108. 64.

J.J. enjoyed working with the house band at Ronnie Scott's and there are some great exchanges with Stan Tracey (p), albeit cheerfully strained. The sound-quality isn't terrific.

 Goodies /  Broadway Express / (*) The Total J.J. Johnson Cloud 9 93846 / 93544 / 93843. 7 & 12/65; 11 & 12/66.

Good things on all three (except perhaps the bland big-band record) but somehow not quite up to J.J.'s best. He was being commercially marketed at this period and it never quite suited.

(*) Complete 60s Big Band Recordings Lone Hill LHJ 10293. 63–66.

All the material from Goodies, Broadway (see below), The Total JJ and more, so an excellent buy.

 J. J.'s Broadway Verve 000060402. 3 & 4/63.
The sound of five trombones working the theme of 'My Favorite Things' takes a bit of getting used to if your benchmark is Coltrane, but it works surprisingly well.

 Cleopatra Jones Warner Bros 248090. 73.
Standard blaxploitation stuff, but some predictably nice touches from J.J. Frankly the film didn't deserve as much.

 Pinnacles /  Concepts In Blue Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1006 2 / 735. 9/79; 9/80.
Dated by things like Tommy Flanagan's Fender Rhodes, synth and clavinet and J.J.'s pitch-shifters, but both are fine records, with some strong Joe Henderson (ts) on the first and Clark Terry (t, flhn) and Ernie Watts (ts, as) on the second.

 Bone-O-logy: A Proper Introduction Proper 2069. 6/46–6/53.
Twenty-two strong (and out-of-copyright) tracks from the early years. Cheap and cheerful packaging.

James P. Johnson (1894–1955)

PIANO, COMPOSER

A versatile and subtle jazz player and classical composer, he is the inventor of stride piano. He came to New York as a youngster and was exposed to a huge range of music at rent parties and shebeens in the ghetto 'Jungles'. His interest shifted to formal composition during the '30s and '40s, but his influence on jazz piano is inestimable.

 Carolina Shout Biograph BCD 105 Johnson (p rolls). 5/17–6/25.
(*) James P. Johnson, 1921–1928 Classics 658 Johnson; Louis Metcalf (c); David Nelson, Cootie Williams (t); Bobby Holmes (cl, as); Fats Waller (p); Teddy Bunn (bj, g); Joe Watts (b); Fred Moore (d); Perry Bradford (d, v). 8/21–6/28.
 James P. Johnson, 1928–1938 Classics 671 Johnson; Louis Metcalf (c); Joe 'King' Oliver (t); James Archey, Geechie Fields, Joe 'Tricky Sam' Nanton (tb); Ernest Elliott (cl); Barney Bigard (cl, ts); Johnny Hodges (as, ss); Charles Frazier (ts); Clarence Williams (p, v); Bernard Addison (bj, g); Harry Hull (b); Sonny Greer, Edmund Jones, Fred Moore (d); Perry Bradford, Gus Horsley, Andy Razaf (v). 10/28–3/38.
Too little is known now about Johnson's orchestral music (of which much has been lost) to make any settled judgement about his significance as a 'straight' composer. Ironically, though, his enormous importance as a synthesizer of many strands of black music – ragtime, blues, popular and sacred song – with his own stride style has been rather eclipsed by the tendency to see him first and only as Fats Waller's teacher. Johnson was in almost every respect a better musician than Waller, and perhaps the main reason for his relative invisibility has been the dearth of reliable recorded material. The early Biograph brings together some staccato and lumpy piano rolls, hard listening but of unmistakable significance for the history and development of jazz in the period. 'Charleston' is a rarity, and 'Carolina Shout' had a profound impact on Duke Ellington.

As so often, Classics have made up a considerable deficit. The early material is as close as anyone is going to get to the sound of Harlem rent parties and it's a pity that some of these sessions are not more fully documented. The group that recorded the autumn 1921 'Carolina Shout' (there is a solo version from the same period, different label) goes unidentified. Johnson is unmistakable from the first moments of 'Harlem Strut', a subtle, propulsive player with bags of ideas.

Classics omit a piano roll 'Charleston (South Carolina)' from June 1925 but fill in with four Original Jazz Hounds numbers from March 1927 and March 1928. The second volume takes the story on a full decade, opening with a couple of numbers by the Gulf Coast Seven (an uncertain personnel but possibly including Ellingtonians Nanton and Hodges). Among the highlights here are two duets and chirpy kvelling with Clarence Williams, together with three songs from 1931 with Andy Razaf (co-author of 'Honeysuckle Rose') as vocalist. As on Classics 658, Johnson tends to get buried in the group recordings. Ultimately it is the solo tracks, including little gems like 'You've Got To Be Modernistic' and the earlier 'Riffs', that are most significant. The disc ends with a session by Pee Wee Russell's Rhythmakers; Johnson solos on a second take of 'There'll Be Some Changes Made'.

(*) James P. Johnson 1938–1942 Classics 711 Johnson; Henry 'Red' Allen (t); J. C. Higginbotham (tb); Pee Wee Russell (cl); Gene Sedric (ts); Al Casey, Eugene Fields (g); George 'Pops' Foster, Johnny Williams (b); Big Sid Catlett, Zutty Singleton (d); Anna Robinson, Ruby Smith (v). 8/38–7/42.
(*) The Original James P. Johnson, 1942–1945 Smithsonian Folkways 40812 Johnson (p solo). 42–45.
 James P. Johnson 1943–1944 Classics 824 Johnson; Sidney De Paris (t); Vic Dickenson (tb); Ben Webster (ts); Jimmy Shirley (g); John Simmons (b); Big Sid Catlett (d). 7/43–4/44.
 James P. Johnson 1944 Classics 835 Johnson; Frankie Newton, Sidney De Paris (t); Vic Dickenson (tb); Al Casey, Jimmy Shirley (g); George 'Pops' Foster, John Simmons (b); Big Sid Catlett, Eddie Dougherty (d). 4–6/44.
 James P. Johnson 1944 – Volume 2 Classics 856 Johnson; Sterling Bose, Max Kaminsky (t); Frank Orchard (vtb); Rod Cless (cl); Eddie Condon (g); Bob Casey, George 'Pops' Foster (b); Eddie Dougherty, George Wettling (d). 44.
 James P. Johnson 1944–1945 Classics 1027 Similar to above. 44–45.
The picture gets steadily more patchy as the decade advances. Classics 711 is significant because it contains a lot of band material which scarcely saw the light of day during the LP era and which is now heard for the first time since its first release. One of these features vocals by Bessie Smith's niece Ruby. The disc overlaps with Classics 671 in the shape of a trio with Pee Wee Russell and Zutty Singleton, apparently recorded at the end of the August 1938 date. There are excellent solo performances from the following spring, made for Columbia.

The Smithsonian Folkways release is of excellent quality. The remastering, by Malcolm Addey and Alan Yoshida, is clean and unfussy, and classics like 'Yamekraw', 'Snowy Morning Blues' (two versions) and 'Daintiness Rag' come through clear and unwavering alongside tunes by Handy, Joplin and Pickett.

The later Classics anthologies have filled in much of the rest of the picture, inevitably with some further overlap with earlier releases. Some of the 1944 and later cuts already betray signs of the mild but debilitating strokes that overtook Johnson later in the decade, finally incapacitating him in 1951. The basic elements of the style are still in place, though, and on the most recent Classics volume there is an opportunity to hear several versions of themes like 'Blue Moods' and 'Yamekraw', as well as a session devoted to Handy material. The subtly varied bass-figures and the forward motion of his sophisticated melodic variations place him closer to later jazz than to the increasingly basic syncopations and repetitions of ragtime. For that reason alone, and for his incorporation of jazz and blues tonalities, Johnson sounds much more 'modern' than many of his contemporaries.

(*) James P. Johnson, 1945–1947 Classics 1059 Johnson; Albert Nicholas (cl); Danny Barker (g, v); George 'Pops' Foster (b). 6/44–6/47.

These few cuts round out Classics' documentation of Johnson. Only serious collectors will be troubled by these rather lame performances, recorded for Folkways, Riverside and Circle, with a couple of tracks rejected by Moses Asch, including the recently rediscovered 'Woman Blues' and the two-part 'Jazzamine Concerto'. Though only just turned 50, Johnson sounds tired and slightly disorientated. His recovery from a stroke sustained while working with Eddie Condon (which couldn't have been anyone's idea of a rest cure) was temporary and this compilation marks a sad conclusion to such a distinguished and influential career.

Marc Johnson (born 1953)

DOUBLE BASS, ELECTRIC BASS

Made his first mark with the final Bill Evans trio, 1978–80, then with various leaders and fronting his own Bass Desires band.

 Right Brain Patrol Winter & Winter 919051 Johnson; Ben Monder (g); Arto Tunçboyaciyan (perc, v). 9/91.

 Magic Labyrinth Winter & Winter 919073 As above, except omit Monder; add Wolfgang Muthspiel (g). 6/94.

We were harsh about the first of these on its first (JMT) appearance, but it wears well, and an early glimpse of Monder is given retrospective authority by all he's done since. Johnson lives up to his reputation of little giant on the solo 'Batuki Burundi', but for the most part it's a fine group performance and the only downside is the percussionist's 'singing'. Muthspiel was hailed as a major plus when he joined, but that isn't borne out by the reissued Magic Labyrinth, where he sounds forced and out of touch for stretches. 'Samurai Hee-Haw' is Johnson's main contribution to the repertory; it sounds fine here.

(*) Shades Of Jade ECM 987 1477 Johnson; Joe Lovano (ts); John Scofield (g); Eliane Elias (p); Alain Mallet (org); Joey Baron (d). 1 & 2/04.

The title is an obvious echo of Bill Evans's 'Jade Visions', but this is no attempt to recapture that era. Johnson has moved on steadily and here creates a sound that blends the mild experimentalism of Bass Desires into something solider and more traditional. Lovano and Scofield are in formidable form, but it's Eliane Elias who steals the honours as both writer and performer. 'Ton Sur Ton' is a cracking idea and a great start to a very strong record.

Also, in brief:

 Bass Desires / (*) Second Sight ECM 827743-2 / 833038-2. 5/85; 3/87.

Two overrated dates with Bill Frisell and John Scofield (g) and Peter Erskine (d). Too many rock effects and high-note twiddles.

Osie Johnson (1923–66)

DRUMS

Began his career as an 18-year-old with Sabby Lewis's Boston band and became a trusted sideman on a host of records (and as arranger for Dinah Washington and others), a career interrupted only by his early death.

 A Bit Of The Blues RCA Johnson; Conte Candoli, Gus Johnson (t); Al Cohn (ts); Hank Jones (p); Barry Galbraith (g); Milt Hinton (b); Gus Johnson (d). 56.

Osie took enough time out from other people's gigs to lead a few of his own, mostly on Period and Jazztone. As a more than average arranger, he got a quite distinctive sound from this small-scale orchestra. There's nothing here that ought to be in everyone's collection, but as a signature moment from one of jazz's best journeymen it's worth having. A slightly later set, The Happy Jazz Of Osie Johnson, is worth looking out for, too. The title tells you all you need to know.

Pete Johnson (1904–67)

PIANO

Born in Kansas City, he became prominent during the boogie-woogie craze of the late '30s, but faded thereafter, though he kept playing to the end.

* Pete Johnson 1938–1939 Classics 656 Johnson; Harry James, Hot Lips Page (t); Buster Smith (as); Albert Ammons, Meade Lux Lewis (p); Lawrence Lucie, Ulysses Livingston (g); Abe Bolar, Johnny Williams (b); Eddie Dougherty (d); Joe Turner (v). 12/38–12/39.

(*) Pete Johnson 1939–1941 Classics 665 Johnson; Hot Lips Page (t); Eddie Barefield (cl, as); Don Stovall (as); Don Byas (ts); Albert Ammons (p); John Collins, Ulysses Livingston (g); Abe Bolar, Al Hall (b); A. G. Godley, Jimmy Hoskins (d). 12/39–6/41.

(*) Pete Johnson 1944–1946 Classics 933 Johnson; Hot Lips Page (t); Clyde Bernhardt, J. C. Higginbotham (tb); Albert Nicholas (cl); Don Stovall (as); Budd Johnson, Ben Webster (ts); Jimmy Shirley (g); Abe Bolar, Al Hall (b); Jack Parker, J. C. Heard (d); Etta Jones (v). 2/44–1/46.

 Central Avenue Boogie Delmark DD-656 Johnson; Arnold Wiley (p, v); Charles Norris, Carl Lynch (g); Bill Davis, Al McKibbon (b); J. C. Heard, Jesse Price (d). 4–11/47.

 Pete Johnson 1947–1949 Classics 1110 As above, except omit Wiley; add Jewel Grant (as); Maxwell Davis (ts); Johnny Rogers, Herman Mitchell (g); Johnny Parker, Ralph Hamilton, Bill Cooper (b); Al Wichard, Roy Milton, Jesse Sailes (d). 4/47–4/49.

Johnson's mastery of boogie-woogie and blues piano is given a near-definitive airing on these CDs. Classics' survey begins with the Kansas City pianist accompanying Joe Turner on the singer's first studio date, before two quartet tracks with Harry James: 'Boo-Woo' is an outright classic. His complete 1939 date for Solo Art is another memorable occasion, nine solos that go from the Tatum-like elaborations on Leroy Carr's 'How Long, How Long Blues' to the furious 'Climbin' And Screamin'' and 'Shuffle Boogie'. The sound is thin, but Johnson's energy and invention shine through. There are four more tracks with a small band including Page and Turner, a solo 'Boogie Woogie', two trio pieces and the first trio with Albert Ammons and Meade Lux Lewis on 'Café Society Rag'.

His 1939 session for Blue Note is, unfortunately, split across the end of Classics 656 and the beginning of Classics 665, which opens on the stunning 'Holler Stomp', the most audacious of boogie showcases. 'You Don't Know My Mind', from the same date, is contrastingly dreamy and may remind blues aficionados of pianists such as Walter Davis and Lane Smith. Aside from another track with Joe Turner's Fly Cats and a small group with Page and others, the rest of the disc is made up of duets with Ammons; often elegant, but prey to routine.

The 1944–1946 collection starts with eight superb solos made for Brunswick: 'Answer To The Boogie' and the breathtaking 'Dive Bomber' are Johnson at his most powerful. Then follow three band dates made for National, with various swing veterans helping out in the front line (two vocals by the young Etta Jones). The later two both feature variations in line-up, with the players entering one at a time on the first and Webster, Page and Higginbotham taking turns out front on the second. It all ends on the rent-party stomping of 'Pete's Housewarming'.

Delmark's compilation sets Johnson back in front of guitar, bass and drums, and includes several previously unheard takes. He still sounds best by himself, but there is some virtuoso stuff on 'Margie' and the several takes of 'Hollywood Boogie'.

The original master-takes from that session are all on the final CD in the Classics sequence, which goes on to take in the final studio sessions under Pete's leadership: three trio pieces for Modern, four live pieces from a Gene Norman concert and six sextet tracks made in LA in 1949. The saxophonists play mooing R&B licks and would be better out of the way, but when Johnson's at the front on a mighty two-part 'Rocket 88 Boogie' he still sounds in fine form.

T. J. Johnson

PIANO, VOICE

An associate of Max Collie, now making waves on his own.

 Presents Bourbon Kick Lake LACD 214 Johnson; Sky Murphy (tb); Adrian Cox, Karl Hird (reeds); Jim Ydstie (b). 05.

Johnson has enormous personality and drives along these sessions with an energy that doesn't preclude subtlety on the slower numbers. It isn't unimaginative repertoire, with 'Vou Vivendo' and 'Help Me Make It Through The Night' not often called for on trad dates. There's an earlier Johnson on Lake called The Heat Of The Night, which we rather prefer to this, but it wasn't listed in the label catalogue at time of writing.

Philip Johnston (born 1955)

ALTO AND SOPRANO SAXOPHONES

Leader of the Microscopic Sextet in the '80s. Declared a self-imposed 'recording ban' between 1988 and 1992 but returned with Big Trouble and an impressive bag of new tunes.

(*) Philip Johnston's Big Trouble Black Saint 120152-2 Johnston; Bob DeBellis (ss, bs, bcl); Jim Leff (tb); Marcus Rojas (tba); Joe Ruddick (ky, as); Adam Rogers, David Tronzo (g); David Hofstra (b, tba); Kevin Norton (d, perc, mar); Richard Dworkin (perc). 6 & 7/92.

 Flood At The Ant Farm Black Saint 120182-2 Johnston; Bob Henke, Ron Horton (t); Steve Swell (tb); Bob DeBellis (f, af, bcl, bs); Joe Ruddick (p, syn); David Hofstra (b); Kevin Norton (d, perc, vib). 95.

Big Trouble drew on the Micoscopic Sextet's swing-influenced arrangements but added a beat coloured by contemporary rock and pop. In the new band, Johnston has pushed even further his offbeat arranging skills. 'Chillbone' on the later Black Saint album is scored for soprano saxophone, tuba and marimba, set over a stark wind ostinato. The set also includes notably complex compositions by Steve Lacy (the brief but awkwardly structured 'Hemline') and by Herbie Nichols, who's credited with both 'Step Tempest' and 'Twelve Bars'. The addition of slide guitar gives the last of these and the closing 'Powerhouse' an entirely unexpected dimension.

Flood At The Ant Farm was a disappointment. In a rush to get some of the band's better material recorded, it feels rushed and prosaic. Opening and (almost) closing with a Steve Lacy tune (including another version of 'Hemline') underlines again this crucial influence on Johnston's writing, but his own tunes receive a too studied treatment: 'Pontius Pilate Polka' should have been a scabrous knees-up, surely, instead of this perfunctory reading. That said, there's still some strong playing (from Swell especially), which keeps the ears involved.

 The Needless Kiss Koch 7898 Johnston; Joe Ruddick (p, bs); Mark Josefsberg (vib); Dave Hofstra (b). 4/98.

A remarkable line-up and some flagrantly good music from the new Transparent Quartet. Ruddick's an amazing guy to have in any kind of line-up, but one does get the impression that Johnston is these days always soundtracking even when there isn't a specific project on hand.

Also, in brief:

 Normalology Koch 7884. 4/96.

Previously unrecorded pieces from Johnston's capacious workbook. These sound like throwbacks to the Microscopic Sextet, for the most part.

 Music For Films Tzadik 7510. 98.

In some regards, Johnston is the perfect Tzadik artist: intellectual, playful, perverse and generically undefinable. He's also an effective movie composer.

 Rub Me The Wrong Way Innova 626. 4/98–7/03.

More mixed-media work, this time for choreographer Keely Garfield.

 The Merry Frolics Of Satan: The Georges Meliès Project Koch 7885. 4–6/99.

Johnston's found a niche with this kind of work, and there's no hint of compromise in the writing or playing of the Transparent Quartet. But you somehow want to hear him just blowing again.

Randy Johnston (born 1956)

GUITAR

In the Grant Green mould, he's worked for Etta Jones and Lou Donaldson.

(*) Somewhere In The Night High Note 7007 Johnston; Uri Caine (p); Nat Reeves (b); Mickey Roker (d). 7/97.

Johnston's spare delivery was noted during his time at Muse. His later sessions are no less appealing and no less deceptive. Two brilliant takes of 'Secret Love' confirm the impression of intelligence. 'Dat Dere' gets the set off to a good start. The guitarist has an ability to make small gestures read large on tunes that are normally piano vehicles but strong enough to last a less full-bodied reading. 'Sack O' Woe' and Hank Mobley's 'Third Time Around' keep Johnston's funkier side in view, but it's the closing run of 'In The Wee Small Hours Of The Morning' and that second 'Secret Love' that represent Johnston's more effective side. The band is top-flight, with Caine taking a relatively boisterous course through the charts and Roker pushing them along like a drill sergeant. Houston Person presides.

(*) Riding The Curve J Curve 898 Johnston; Johnny Griffin (ts); Joey DeFrancesco (org); Idris Muhammad (d). 9/98.
 Homage J Curve 7010 Johnston; Jim Rotondi (t); Wayne Coniglio (btb); Eric Alexander (ts); Nick Brignola (bs); Xavier Davis (p); Nat Reeves (b); Kenny Washington (d). 4/00.
Johnston has a genius for getting top-flight players onto the strength. Muhammad was the ideal choice for the Grant Greenish Riding The Curve, an old-fashioned organ/guitar trio, with two fine guest spots from Griff. Johnston springs his first surprise with a stallingly slow version of 'I Get Along Without You Very Well', a most unexpected tempo that takes the song into new and unfamiliar territory. The two originals are a floating Latin idea set in 'The Park', and a nostalgic evocation of the late Thomas Chapin, who roomed with Johnston at college.

The other J Curve disc is a homage to ten artists who've made a substantial impact on Johnston. No nod for Grant Green, surprisingly, given the last record, though Kenny Burrell and 'Pat And Wes' are acknowledged. The other names dropped are perhaps more surprising: Cedar Walton on 'Cedar's Place', Jimi Hendrix with 'Angel', Warne Marsh, Dexter Gordon and, on 'All Or Nothing At All', Frank Sinatra. Johnston plays with his usual easy swing and sophistication, but it's a low-key performance.

(*) Detour Ahead High Note 7027 Johnston; David 'Fathead' Newman, Houston Person (ts); Joey DeFrancesco (org); Byron Landham (d). 4/01.
Producer Houston Person gets out of his booth for a solo on the first track but isn't heard from again. He does his stuff, though, in shaping a notably full-voiced set that goes back to the same format as Riding The Curve. 'Blues For Edward G.' is again one of only two originals. The other new one here, 'The Triangle Pose', is his best yet, worthy of classic Blue Note and featuring the initially unplaceable tenor voice of David Newman.

 Hit & Run High Note 7098 Johnston; Bruce Barth (p); Joe Locke (vib); Nat Reeves (b); Grady Tate (d). 10/02.
The writing gets more confident by the album, and here Johnston ends with 'For The King', a delightful tune for his girlfriend which ought to sprout lyrics one of these days. No organ this time round, but a clever use of Joe Locke, either doubling Barth on three of his four appearances or standing in for him on 'The Best Thing For You'. One of the originals, 'Down Time', seems to be based on the 'Autumn Leaves' line, while 'Hit & Run' itself is an old-fashioned hard-bopper that gets the group roaring along like a runaway car.

 Is It You? High Note 7122 Johnston; Xavier Davis (p); Dwayne Burno (b); Gene Jackson (d). 7/04.
Back in the LP era, this would have been near-perfect. The really good stuff is weighted to the front of the disc. The title-piece provides an immediate reminder of Johnston's under-recognized talent. He then shows off his touch as a balladeer on a lovely 'Nancy (With The Laughing Face)' before cracking through a deft original, 'The Jump Back'. After about 35 minutes, it all winds down a bit.

Pete Jolly (1932–2004)

PIANO, ACCORDION

A veteran West Coast man, who made countless sideman dates but few as leader. He did, though, make a go of jazz on the accordion.

 Quartet, Quintet & Sextet Fresh Sound FSR 2241 Jolly; Conte Candoli, Shorty Rogers (t); Bill Perkins (ts); Jimmy Giuffre (bs); Howard Roberts (g); Bob Bertaux, Buddy Clark, Curtis Counce (b); Mel Lewis, Shelly Manne, Bob Neal (d). 3/55, 6/56.
A definitive West Coast man, Jolly has spent most of his professional life in studios and on soundtracks. He likes to use his right hand at the very top of the keyboard and the insistently dinky phrasing which results gets tiresome over time. The FSR Jazz City imprints throws up some nice things and the compilation of early small groups is about all the Jolly anyone could want. The early quartets with Perkins swing easily enough, but there's a definite increase of energy on the dozen tracks where Candoli makes it a quintet. The big group with Rogers, Giuffre and Roberts sees Pete switch to accordion. 'I Get A Kick Out Of You' confirms that he knows how to make the instrument swing, but it's still an uneasy sound that never quite shakes off a novelty feel. These are agreeable sides rather than anything essential.

 The Duo VSOP 115 Jolly; Ralph Pena (b). 9/60.
 The Red Chimney And Sherry's Bar Recordings VSOP 118 As above, except add Chuck Berghofer (b); Nick Martinis (d). 60.
The duo with Pena was a regular association before Jolly began to work with Berghofer and Martinis, but they rarely played as far out of the way as this date in Auckland, New Zealand, a virtual jazz wilderness at the time. Originally, only a dozen copies of the record were pressed, which gives it a certain additional frisson. It's an interesting set, with George Wallington and Monk compositions enlivening the mix. The LA live dates are fun, but you start wondering about all the alcohol references: VSOP, Sherry's Bar, Martinis? Not quite as intoxicating as that, but pretty good.

 Collaboration Fresh Sound FSR 5038 Jolly; Jan Lundgren (p); Chuck Berghofer (b); Joe LaBarbera (d). 9/01.
Button-bright and twinkling, these duets-with-rhythm are entertainingly delivered, although it's really one of those discs which is best handled a few tracks at a time. Jolly and Lundgren get a solo apiece, but otherwise it's interlocking improvs worked out with seemingly military precision (as the detailed session-notes make clear). It's fun hearing one man start a phrase and the next finish it, although, as suggested, the format does pall.

Also, in brief:

* Pete Jolly And Friends VSOP 78. 11/62–8/64.
Pulls together tracks from three obscure early-'60s dates with a lot of hack orchestral arrangements.

 Timeless VSOP 105. 7/69.
Drawn from sessions with Chuck Berghofer (b) and Nick Ceroli (d) at Donte's. Feels like studio guys on a day off; 'Stars And Stripes Forever' and 'Hey, Jude' weren't ideal choices.

() Yeah! VSOP 98. 10/95.
Still playing with Chuck Berghofer (b) and Nick Martinis (d); this isn't bad – some nice choices of tune, and the trio are as comfortable as an old pullover, but it's a potboiler.

Chris Jonas

SOPRANO SAXOPHONE

He has worked with Anthony Braxton and with Assif Tsahar and Susie Ibarra. Superficially reminiscent of Steve Lacy at his freest.

 Ensembles Unsynchronized Newsonic 18 Jonas; Cuong Vu (t); Joe Fiedler (tb); James Fei (ss, as); Kevin Norton (perc). 12/98.
(*) The Sun Spits Cherries Hopscotch HOP 4 Jonas; Joe Fiedler (tb); Chris Washburne (btb); Andrew Barker (d). 9/99.
 The Vermilion Hopscotch HOP 8 As above, except add Myra Melford (p). 2/00.

Jonas's sleeve-note to Ensembles Unsynchronized offers a rebuke to sentimentalists: 'Don't look for overt meaning in my music. For me a piece of music does not tell a specific story.' That and the functional title may lead to expectations of a dreary experience but, for all its abstractions, the music – open, but much of it based around canonic principles – has plenty to 'say'. A few sections flag rather badly as the process goes forward.

The title of The Sun Spits Cherries (now used as a group name) refers to the fact that four and a half pounds of sunlight strike the earth every second, and there is a juicy warmth to be extracted from these spare and uncomplicated sounds. Jonas exploits the interesting textures available from saxophone and trombones, with no harmony instrument. Some of it is little more than old-fashioned musical pointillism, but it is clear that the leader's imagination is more capacious and more structured than that. Heard as a continuous suite, it has a satisfying logic.

The Vermilion is by the same group, with Melford guesting. Jonas does sometimes get hung up on his processes, although the clear organization of the music is one of its strengths – there's the feeling that anything aimless has been rigorously cut out. It's a peculiar instrumentation and sometimes (as in 'Portico') it generates a feeling of some sort of novelty music. We await his masterpiece.

Carmell Jones (1936–96)

TRUMPET

Born in Kansas City, he moved to California in the '60s, did sideman work with Gerald Wilson and Horace Silver, and eventually returned to KC after a spell in Europe.

 Jay Hawk Talk Original Jazz Classics OJC 1938 Jones; Jimmy Heath (ts); Barry Harris (p); George Tucker (b); Roger Humphries (d). 8/65.

Jones had a lovely take-my-time trumpet style, even though he could play hot and old-fashioned if he chose, a legacy of his KC roots. His few albums as a leader have been neglected, though he turns up as co-leader on some Harold Land dates (see under his entry) and five of his Pacific Jazz sessions have been released by Mosaic. This likeable date is no great shakes, but Jones, Heath and Harris all play themselves rather than any more fashionable model, and the session has an honest, men-at-work feel to it which has held its integrity. Carmell's sweet-and-sour treatment of 'Willow Weep For Me' is a capsule summary of his thoughtful skills.

Elvin Jones (1927–2004)

DRUMS, GUITAR

The kid brother of the Jones family, he spent five intense years with John Coltrane and subsequently toured and recorded with his own Jazz Machine groups.

 Elvin! Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 259 Jones; Thad Jones (c); Frank Wess (f); Frank Foster (ts); Hank Jones (p); Art Davis (b). 7/61–1/62.

Elvin remained an enigma; a shy but affable man whose exterior masked a turbulent and often self-destructive nature, he transformed modern jazz drumming with his introduction of African-inspired 'polyrhythms' into the John Coltrane quartet.

Elvin!, by contrast, is noisy, heated bop, with some good interplay between Jones and a front line that refuses to play by the rules. The trio tracks with elder brother Hank and Art Davis are particularly good, at once fiery and lyrical, stretched out rhythmically and yet sounding quite accommodating. Wess and Foster are perhaps too strait-laced for this session, but both are adventurous enough to go along for the ride, and Wess in particular turns in some lovely ideas.

(*) And Then Again / Midnight Walk Collectables COL 6242 Jones; Thad Jones (t); Hank Mobley (ts); Frank Wess (ts, f); Don Friedman, Abdullah Ibrahim, Steve James, Hank Jones (p); Paul Chambers, Art Davis, Donald Moore (b); George Abend (perc). 2 & 3/65; 3/66.

Jones's Atlantic albums gain fascination from their proximity to some of his greatest work with the Coltrane quartet. Again, he's a much more straightforward player on his own date, still intrigued by polyrhythms, but in a less obviously structural way. This is a fascinating pairing. The first album is relatively conventional hard bop, even if Melba Liston's arrangements (including the originals 'Elvin Elpus' and 'Len Sirrah') raise the interest level. The later record is fascinating for the inclusion of Ibrahim (then Dollar Brand) and for the interaction between pianist, drummer and Mobley on Brand's 'Tintiyana', an outstanding performance in Elvin's body of work, full of subtly interwoven rhythm and harmonic ideas taken from Ellington and Coltrane in equal measure. A great rediscovery, though the extra star's for the second album.

(*) Live At The Village Vanguard Enja 2036 Jones; Hannibal Marvin Peterson (t); George Coleman (ts); Wilbur Little (b). 5/68.

This was a tough gig in terms of its abrasive, compellingly forceful soundscapes, but also because what we are hearing for most of the time is a pianoless trio, a form Jones was to experiment with for some years. Working without a harmony instrument, and leaning very heavily on big Coleman's very sophisticated and often lateral harmonic sense, Jones plays as if he's conducting an entire orchestra – but also on occasion as if he has a personal grudge against each and every member. Little is something of a passenger in this setting and spends most of his time laying down steady, patient figures with just the odd embellishment to keep himself interested. Peterson gatecrashes on 'Mr Jones', taking the shine off another perfectly good trumpet.

 Very R.A.R.E. Evidence ECD 22053 2 Jones; Art Pepper (as); Frank Foster, Pat LaBarbera (ss, ts); Roland Hanna (p); Roland Prince (g); Richard Davis, Andy McCloud III (b). 78.
 Love & Peace Evidence ECD 22065 2 As above, except omit Pepper, Hanna; add Pharoah Sanders (ts); McCoy Tyner (p); Jean-Paul Bourelly (g). 78, 79.

The first of these brings together material by a wonderful quartet fronted by Art Pepper with some other stuff recorded in the Far East. Pepper's salty alto works well, though sometimes you feel he is floundering with the count, especially on 'Tin Tin Deo'. Davis's dark-toned bass is, as ever, a delight. The bonus material consists of a 26-minute run-through of 'A Love Supreme'. A cynical gesture? Arguably the piece belonged as much to Elvin as to Coltrane himself. The real problem is that it's a dud performance.

Love & Peace also includes one dispensable track from the group with Foster, Prince, LaBarbera and McCloud which adds nothing to Jones's first reunion with Tyner since Coltrane days. It's not a meeting of minds. Tyner's agenda is very different and the two spend more time duelling than communicating. Sanders is in mildly antagonistic form, but the whole thing is muddied by Bourelly's squalling guitar.

(*) Youngblood Enja 407051-2 Jones; Nicholas Payton (t); Joshua Redman, Javon Jackson (ts); George Mraz (b). 4/92.
There is plenty of excitement here, with three then-young turks in the front line, and though the material is actually rather ordinary – standards and solo features in the main – the playing is hot, and Jones performs with regulation muscle and intensity.

 The Truth: Heard Live At The Blue Note Half Note HNCD 4519 Jones; Darren Barrett (t); Robin Eubanks (tb); Michael Brecker (ts); Antoine Roney (ss); Carlos McKinney (p); Gene Perla (b). 9/99.
Jones worked up almost until his death, yet he made few records from 1990 onwards. This is an all-star band (Barrett could almost be the younger Freddie Hubbard) and the programme strongly showcases Elvin, with 'E.J.'s Blues' and 'Three Card Molly' bracketing the set, an interesting version of Trane's 'Wise One' and the traditional African 'Ballad Of Itsugo Village' providing a showcase for Brecker, who seems curiously unwilling to take on 'Body And Soul' earlier in the set. It's an intriguing CD rather than a major one, and an affectionate farewell on record to a great musician.

Also, in brief:

 Heavy Sounds Impulse! 547959-2. 6/67.
Billed as a collaboration between Jones and Richard Davis (b), this breaks down into a series of feature spots, stitched together with some suspect ensemble play. Elvin even plays a guitar blues.

 Time Capsule Universe 38. 77.
A scrappy session originally made for Vanguard; it's Bunky Green (as) who emerges as the most prominent voice.

 Earth Jones Quicksilver 4015. 82.
With Terumaso Hino (t), Dave Liebman (ss, ts, f), Kenny Kirkland (p) and George Mraz (b); it wobbles between masterful and oddly inept.

 Brother John Quicksilver 4001. 83.
Pat LaBarbera (ss, ts) seems to be anointed as Trane's successor on this and to his credit doesn't over-reach himself. Disappointing, though.

Etta Jones (1928–2001)

VOICE

Toured with Buddy Johnson at 16, later with Earl Hines, eventually making a solo success with her Don't Go To Strangers album. A big, bluesy voice and an in-my-own-time relationship to the beat.

 Etta Jones 1944–1947 Classics 1065 Jones; Joe Thomas, Hot Lips Page, Jessie Drakes, George Treadwell, Joe Newman (t); Clyde Bernhardt, Dickie Harris (tb); Barney Bigard (cl); Joe Evans, Floyd Williams, Don Stovall, Pete Clarke (as); Georgie Auld, Budd Johnson, Big Nick Nicholas (ts); Leonard Feather, Duke Jordan, Pete Johnson, Jimmy Jones, Luther Henderson (p); Chuck Wayne, Jimmy Shirley, John Collins, Herman Mitchell (g); Billy Taylor, Eugene Ramey, Abe Bolar, Al McKibbon, Trigger Alpert (b); Stan Levey, J. C. Heard, Jack Parker, Denzil Best (d). 12/44–10/47.
(*) Don't Go To Strangers Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 298 Jones; Frank Wess (ts, f); Richard Wyands (p); Skeeter Best (g); George Duvivier (b); Roy Haynes (d). 6/60.
 Something Nice Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 221 Jones; Lem Winchester (vib); Richard Wyands, Jimmy Neeley (p); George Duvivier, Michael Mulia (b); Roy Haynes, Rudy Lawless (d). 9/60–3/61.
(*) Lonely And Blue Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 702 Jones; Gene Ammons, Budd Johnson (ts); Patti Bown (p); Wally Richardson (g); George Duvivier (b); Ed Shaughnessy (d). 4–5/62.
 So Warm Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 874 Jones; Ray Alonge (frhn); Eric Dixon, Jerome Richardson, Phil Bodner, Arthur Clarke (reeds); Mal Waldron (p); George Duvivier (b); Charli Persip, Bill English (d); strings. 61.
 Love Shout Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 941 Jones; Jerome Richardson (ts, f); Kenny Cox (p); Sam Bruno (p, org); Larry Young (org); Kenny Burrell, Bucky Pizzarelli (g); Peck Morrison, Ernest Hayes, George Tucker (b); Oliver Jackson, Bobby Donaldson, Jimmie Smith (d). 11/62–2/63.
Jones began recording as a teenager. She was singing lightweight blues at this point, even if one of the Classics tracks is called 'Blues To End All Blues' (other titles include 'Osculate Me Daddy' and 'Misery Is A Thing Called Moe'!). Some pretty useful groups backed her up on these sessions, for Black & White, Chicago, Savoy and Victor, with Budd Johnson in several of the bands and Pete Johnson leading a group with Lips Page.

By the time she made Don't Go To Strangers, Jones was already a veteran; the title-song went gold. In its modest way the album remains a fine achievement, with Jones's heavy, blues-directed voice piling extra substance on to fluff such as 'Yes Sir, That's My Baby', with rolling support from an excellent band. The subsequent Something Nice is more quiescent, the 11 songs despatched matter of factly, although Jones's regal delivery makes such as 'Through A Long And Sleepless Night' into heady stuff. Lonely And Blue foreshadowed the kind of albums she would make for Muse a generation later: small-hours, lonesome music, a bare step away from outright blues. Johnson handles most of the tenor chores (as Houston Person would later do) and his wry rejoinders on 'Gee Baby Ain't I Good To You' are delightful. So Warm tips the scales towards MOR, but Etta's natural warmth heats up the string charts. Love Shout goes back to a small-band setting: Jerome Richardson turns in a great solo on the fine 'The Gal From Joe's', and the twin guitars of Burrell and Pizzarelli are a bonus on 'Hi-Lilli, Hi-Lo'. Some of the rest is fluff.

 The Melody Lingers On Highnote HCD 7005 Jones; Houston Person (ts); Tom Aalfs (vn); Dick Morgan (p); Keter Betts (b); Frankie Jones (d). 11/96.
(*) Easy Living High Note HCD 7059 Jones; Houston Person (ts); Richard Wyands (p); Ray Drummond (b); Chip White (d). 2/00.
* Sings Lady Day High Note HCD 7078 As above, except omit Drummond; add Peter Bernstein (g); John Weber (b). 6/01.
Etta recorded steadily through the '80s and '90s. She seems comfortable back with a band on The Melody Lingers On, a sequence of tribute songs to departed singers, and with Person returned to her side it's a pleasing if unexceptional occasion. Like Shirley Horn, Jones prefers a slow-to-ambling tempo, and though some of the songs are a bit obvious, on a less frequently encountered tune like 'For Sentimental Reasons' she's very good.

It would be almost an impertinence to say that Etta got better, the older she grew. But her final records are at least as fine as, and often superior to, anything she'd done earlier. The great, heavy voice is the most characterful kind of instrument, and her way with time and the way a phrase can be pulled into just the shape she wants are imperious. Easy Living is a delightful mix of standards with Houston, old master Wyands, and the attentive Drummond and White. But even this bows to the quite magisterial Sings Lady Day, recorded only months before her death, which never once bows to Billie's dreaded pathos. 'But Beautiful' is an incomparable version, but nothing here is less than wonderful.

Also, in brief:

(*) The Best Of Etta Jones: The Prestige Singles Prestige 11021-2. 7/60–11/62.
Given that Etta's Prestige catalogue contains no single defining album, a top-notch best-of would surely have been an essential purchase, but by making up an album from singles released off the various sets, the chance was slightly fudged.

 Hollar! Original Jazz Classics OJC 1061. 9/60–11/62.
This lifts tracks from three different sessions but it's by no means a bin-end selection.

Hank Jones (born 1918)

PIANO

The eldest of the three brothers was as quiet and unassuming as Elvin was extrovert, but shares something of Thad's sophistication. He worked in territory bands and became part of the first bebop generation.

 Urbanity Verve 537749-2 Jones; Johnny Smith (g); Ray Brown (b). 47, 53.
Some find Hank Jones lacking in substance, but there is such ease in the playing that it's hard to dismiss. Unfortunately, the six light-footed standards here are padded out on CD with an inordinate amount of unissued material from a 1953 drummerless trio session. There are five takes of 'Things Are So Pretty In The Spring' and four of 'Thad's Pad'. It requires a certain commitment to listen to these in sequence or to find much essential difference between them.

 The New York Rhythm Section Fresh Sound FSRCD 371 Jones; Jimmy Cleveland (tb); Barry Galbraith (g); Milt Hinton (b); Osie Johnson (d). 56.
This was a much sought-after group at the time. Cleveland is a guest on three tracks, but the basic unit was pretty much state of the art for studio sessions at the time, playing a strong, swinging bop idiom. The compilation brings together the Epic dates The Rhythm Section and After Hours Jazz and the titles say it all. There's a strong feeling that these are workmanlike guys, taking time out to indulge themselves. Oddly, it's Galbraith who stands out as a soloist.

 The Talented Touch / Songs From Porgy And Bess Okra-Tone 4972 Jones; Kenny Burrell, Barry Galbraith (g); Milt Hinton (b); Osie Johnson, Elvin Jones (d). 58, 60.
 Gigi / Here's Love Gambit 69194 Jones; Kenny Burrell, Barry Galbraith (g); Arnold Fishkin, Milt Hinton (b); Elvin Jones, Don Lamond (d). 58, 63.
 Complete Recordings: Volume 2 Gambit 69206 As above, except omit Fishkin, Lamond; add Osie Johnson (b). 58, 60.
The Talented Touch brought together four good friends for a relaxed album of familiar themes. Their rapport on 'My One And Only Love', 'Star Eyes' and even Gigi Gryce's seldom-played 'Blue Lights' is little less than miraculous. Hinton sounds as if he wrote every tune, Hank is effortless and Galbraith and Johnson contribute to a wonderfully confident and well-rounded record. Helping to fill out the picture on a very thin time in the Jones discography is the Porgy And Bess material with Burrell, Hinton again and brother Elvin: a lovely opportunity to hear the siblings working together; Elvin's health was good and his stint with the Coltrane quartet was just around the corner. Hank plays these familiar themes as if they were still rooted in the opera: dramatic, passionate and poignant.

Freshly licensed from EMI, these are now the complete recordings of Hank's piano/guitar quartet with Galbraith or Burrell. The show tune formula was extended to include Porgy And Bess, which is included on the second volume along with 1958's fine The Talented Touch. There's not much to say about the music, which is suave, not particularly demanding and flatly transferred.

 Arigato Progressive 7004 Jones; Ray Rivera (g); Richard Davis, Jay Leonhart (b); Ronnie Bedford (d). 10/76.
 The Trio Chiaroscuro 188 Jones; Milt Hinton (b); Bobby Rosengarden (d). 77.
 Compassion /  I Remember You /  Tiptoe Tapdance Black & Blue 879 / 947 / Original Jazz Classics OJC 719 Jones; George Duvivier (b); Oliver Jackson (d). 7/77; 7/78; 6/77, 1/78.
Jones had a quiet time of it in the '60s, but his re-emergence was sustained to the end of his life. Never much of a composer, he wasn't given to wholesale reassessment of standard progressions but preferred to concentrate on the sound of a tune. His delicacy and balance, that tiptoeing, tap-dancing feel, are among the qualities which have enhanced and prolonged his reputation as a great accompanist, but (unfairly) only as a lightweight soloist.

The Trio, not to be confused with an earlier disc of the same unrevealing name, is a great set, largely because the rapport with Hinton is so good. Sadly the reissue comes without additional tracks and the CD was remastered from the original LP; it would have been good to hear more of this fine group and in better sound. What there is, however, is excellent. ''S Wonderful' and 'Right Here, Right Now' are first rate and 'Lullaby Of The Leaves', so hackneyed it almost gets a cab licence, works like a dream off Hinton's resonant accompaniment.

Jones recorded in France every July from 1977 to 1979 and turned in some respectable dates for Black & Blue. Bluesette (see below, 'in brief') is a more solid session, despite the variation of personnel, but Jones fans will enjoy the relaxed bluesy swing of Compassion and I Remember You as well. Some good bonus tracks on the reissue. Arigato is a splendid date, a basic trio (either Davis or Leonhart on bass) augmented for a couple of easy Latin swingers by Rivera, who is composer of 'Night Flight To Puerto Rico' and 'Majorca'. Jones's vigour is evident on 'Allen's Alley' and his own 'Recapitulation'. There's more south-of-the-border atmosphere on Gary McFarland's 'Notte Triste'.

 Lazy Afternoon Concord CCD 4391 Jones; Ken Peplowski (as, cl); Dave Holland (b); Keith Copeland (d). 7/89.
 The Touch Concord CCD 2157 2CD As above, except add Ray Brown (b); Jimmie Smith (d). 77, 89.
Lazy Afternoon is a peach: warm, vibrant jazz with the modulation and pace of a good club date. Jones is generous with solo space for his sidemen, though his unusual approach to Kurt Weill's 'Speak Low' is marred by an intrusive Copeland solo. Holland and Copeland had acted as the pianist's performing trio, with an evident empathy; quite properly, the bassist is featured strongly, with particularly fine excursions on J. J. Johnson's 'Lament', and the succeeding 'Comin' Home Baby'. Jones's fine touch as a colourist is evident on the title-track, where a hint of celeste under Ken Peplowski's smooth clarinet spices a slightly bland approach. Lazy Afternoon and the 1977 Rockin' In Rhythm are now available as a two-header called The Touch.

(*) Live At Maybeck Recital Hall: Volume 16 Concord CCD 4502 Jones (p solo). 90.
(*) Jazzpar 91 Project Storyville STCD 3091 Jones; Mads Vinding (b); Al Foster (d). 3/91.
 Upon Reflection Verve 514898-2 Jones; George Mraz (b); Elvin Jones (d). 2/93.
Jones entered the '90s as one of the music's elder statesmen. His Maybeck recital was one of the high-points of the series, and recent recording was all of a tremendously high standard. There are inconsistencies in the disc from the Danish Jazzpar project. There is, however, a second masterwork to sit alongside the Maybeck. Upon Reflection is devoted to the music of brother Thad, who died in 1986. Properly, the drummer's job went to Elvin rather than to Foster or Higgins, who might have been more suitable musically. It's a tender, but by no means sentimental, record. However, if you can listen to 'A Child Is Born' without a tear, tear up your donor card; they can't transplant hearts of stone.

 For My Father Justin Time 209 Jones; George Mraz (b); Denis Mackrel (d). 1 & 2/04.
At 85 Hank still had an appetite for performance. There are initially no surprises on this pleasant standards set, but then towards the end Jones plays a version of Harold Mabern's '(There But For) The Grace of End' that will simply take your breath away. It's almost worth having the album just for that track, though there is much else to enjoy, with Mraz and Mackrel both in fine form.

 West Of 5th Chesky 313 SACD Jones; Christian McBride (b); Jimmy Cobb (d). 1/06.
He was still capable of playing with real energy when the mood was upon him. He sticks here to pretty familiar material, much of it from the bop and hard-bop era – 'Billie's Bounce', 'Confirmation', 'If I Were A Bell', a magisterial 'On Green Dolphin Street' – and his pace on the two Parker themes wouldn't disgrace a man less than half his age. The real delights, though, are a long 'Speak Low' and a beautiful version of Thad's 'A Child Is Born'. Cobb is another living historian of the music. He uses brushes throughout, which suits the light, nimble feel of McBride's bass-playing, and the drummer's 'Eleanor' is a perfect end to a lovely set. Producer David Chesky gets a lovely, even sound and the SACD playback is immaculate.

Also, in brief:

 The Complete Quintet/Sextet With Tyree Glenn Lone Hill Jazz LHJ 10138. 57–61.
Interesting material from the trombonist's group.

* Happenings Impulse! 9071. 10/66.
Despite fine Oliver Nelson arrangements, a woolly and inconsequential session, marred by Jones's decision to play an electric harpsichord on seven tracks.

() Just For Fun Original Jazz Classics OJC 471. 7/77.
It's a grower, but unlikely in a crowded market to get its subtle message across.

 Bluesette Black & Blue 907. 7/78, 7/79.
Blues-dominated European sessions, marked by good, strong playing but no particular originality.

 Ain't Misbehavin' Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1027. 8/78.
Hank pays his dues to the spirit of Fats Waller on six elegantly crafted themes. With Teddy Edwards (ts) and Kenny Burrell (g).

* Darji's Groove Prevue 22. 82.
Most of the material is credited to Darwin Gross (vib), who's a reasonable player but no composer. A few flourishes from Hank fail to rescue it.

 Sarala Verve 528783-2. 4/95.
The result of Jones's desire to record an album of traditional African music, this finds him overpowered by the presence of Cheick-Tidiane Seck (org, perc, v) and his Mandinkas.

 Hank & Frank Lineage 103. 11/03.
The encounter with Frank Wess (ts, f) taps a vast reservoir of experience.

Jo Jones (1911–1985)

DRUMS

Known as Chicago to distinguish him from Philly Joe, he changed the sound of the drums in jazz by switching the emphasis from bass to hi-hat.

 The Essential Jo Jones Vanguard 101/2 Jones; Emmett Berry (t); Lawrence Brown, Freddie Green (tb); Lucky Thompson (ts); Rudy Powell (cl); Count Basie, Ray Bryant, Nat Pierce (p); Tommy Bryant, Walter Page (b). 8/55–4/58.
Jones was the subtle driving force of the Basie band between 1934 and 1948 and the Count repaid the compliment with a guest spot on Jo's solo disc, giving 'Shoe Shine Boy' a touch of the old magic. The other participants are familiar enough as well, with Berry, Green and Thompson all prominent. Inevitably, a lot of emphasis falls on the drums, but Jones is such a nimble, light player that he is always estimably listenable. The 1958 session with Ray and Tommy Bryant (originally an album called Plus Two) is mostly the pianist's work, but Jo revels in those bluesy themes and produces some of his best small-group work on record.

 The Main Man Pablo/Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 869 Jones; Harry 'Sweets' Edison, Roy Eldridge (t); Vic Dickenson (tb); Eddie 'Lockjaw' Davis (ts); Tommy Flanagan (p); Freddie Green (g); Sam Jones (b). 11/76.
Jo didn't lose any of his fire when he hit retirement age. When he made this, he still had nearly a decade left to him, a time he spent cheerfully running down each and every symptom of milquetoast modernity. Here, he simply gets down to the business of playing classic swing jazz.

Jonah Jones (1908–2000)

TRUMPET

Born in Louisville, apprenticed in territory bands, then worked with Lunceford, Stuff Smith and Cab Calloway. Eventually scored a huge hit with At The Embers, and became a cabaret star.

(*) Jonah Jones 1936–1945 Classics 972 Jones; Tyree Glenn (tb, vib); Joe Marsala, Buster Bailey, Al Gibson (cl); Edgar Sampson, Hilton Jefferson (as); Ike Quebec (ts); Dick Porter (p, v); Clyde Hart, Buster Harding, Dave Rivera (p); Eddie Condon, Bobby Bennett, Danny Barker (g); Wilson Myers, John Kirby, Milt Hinton (b); George Wettling, Cozy Cole, J. C. Heard (d). 10/36–7/45.
Jones began as a minor Armstrong disciple. His big, blowsy style tends to dominate the groups he's in, and these rather motley sessions are more like swing-era footnotes than anything. Six tracks with the Fats Waller copyist Dick Porter are scarcely worth remembering, and two sessions for Keynote and one for Commodore form the meat of this CD. They have their moments, but the slow tunes are dreary and the most interesting player is Glenn, whose sleepy-sounding solos have the odd quirk. The Porter tracks have very indifferent sound; the later ones are all right.

 J.J. Special Fresh Sound FSR445 Jones; Urbie Green (tb); Sidney Bechet (ss); George Clarke, Alix Combelle (ts); Kenny Kersey, Jean-Claude Pelletier, André Persiany (p); Jean Bonal (g); Alix Bret, Milt Hinton, Benoît Quersin (b); Marcel Blanche, Osie Johnson, Pierre Lemarchand (d). 6, 9 & 12/54.
The June and September dates were made in Paris with Combelle's group and with Bechet. They find Jones playing as a fairly restrained front-man, in contrast to the hammy entertainer he turned into when he was given any encouragement to sing. This isn't a bad sampling, but it doesn't lift him up the rankings.

Oliver Jones (born 1934)

PIANO

Born in Montreal, he played in local clubs when he was still in high school. He led a showband in Puerto Rico for some years, before returning to Canada in 1980.

 A Class Act Justin Time JUST 41 Jones; Steve Wallace (b); Ed Thigpen (d). 4–5/91.
 Have Fingers, Will Travel Justin Time JUST 102-2 Jones; Ray Brown (b); Jeff Hamilton (d). 5/97.
 Just In Time Justin Time JUST 120/1-2 2CD Jones; Dave Young (b); Norman Marshall Villeneuve (d). 11/97.
 Then & Now Justin Time 180 Jones; Skip Bey (b). 86–01.
Jones was always destined to be the second most famous jazz pianist from Canada. Although he actually studied with Daisy Peterson and grew up in Montreal, he didn't get serious about a jazz career until after he'd spent 20 years directing music in Puerto Rican tourist shows. Maybe his showmanship derives from that experience; he clearly aspires to being a communicator, just as Oscar Peterson does, and his closeness to the master's methods extends to his uptempo blues compositions.

Since his playing scarcely varies in intensity or prowess from record to record, preferred sessions are more a matter of the setting. A Class Act is one of his best, with two of his finest originals in 'Mark My Time' and 'Peaceful Time', and a couple of mature embellishments on Kenny Wheeler's 'Everybody's Song But My Own' and Bill Evans's 'Very Early'. Thigpen and Wallace offer seamless support. The difference with Have Fingers, Will Travel is the rhythm section, the best he ever recorded with: Brown had more gravitas than any bassman, Milt Hinton excepted, and Hamilton is a drummer whose merits far outweigh his wider recognition. On a medium-tempo groove, they're peerless, and Jones revels in the situation.

By 1997, Jones had gone into semi-retirement but was still enjoying his jazz. He's always fun to hear in person, so the concert set on Just In Time, replete with the usual dazzle, is a nice place to make his acquaintance. Jones's approach to things like 'The Way You Look Tonight' and 'Our Love Is Here To Stay' is resolutely old-fashioned and literal, almost like a karaoke track.

Then And Now, though, is our favourite Jones record. No themes, no orchestra; just a simple duo and a hatful of well-seasoned themes. Hokey as it is, 'Over The Rainbow' is magnificent, with some of the childish simplicity of the original still in there. 'Perdido' and 'I Remember Clifford' have a touch more muscle, and Bey's strong, resourceful presence is a huge plus. Half of the album was recorded as early as 1986, the remainder as a retirement package in 2001.

Also, in brief:

(*) The Many Moods Of Oliver Jones Justin Time JUST 3. 2–3/84.
One admires Jones more for generous virtuosity than for depth of feeling, so solo records like this are at something of a discount.

(*) From Lush To Lively Justin Time 73. 02.
A low-fibre set marked by smooth orchestral arrangements.

Philly Joe Jones (1923–85)

DRUMS

As opposed to 'Chicago' Jo Jones. Originally influenced by Sid Catlett, he became one of the key modern-jazz drummers, despite succumbing to heroin abuse at intervals. His mid-'50s work with Miles Davis was definitive of an era and a style.

 Blues For Dracula Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 230 Jones; Nat Adderley (c); Julian Priester (tb); Johnny Griffin (ts); Tommy Flanagan (p); Jimmy Garrison (b). 9/58.
 Drums Around The World Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1792 2 Jones; Blue Mitchell, Lee Morgan (t); Curtis Fuller (tb); Julian 'Cannonball' Adderley (as); Benny Golson (ts); Sahib Shihab (bs); Herbie Mann (f, picc); Wynton Kelly (p); Jimmy Garrison, Sam Jones (b). 5/59.
 Philly Joe's Beat / Philly Joe & Elvin Jones Together! Collectables 6264 Jones; Michael Downs (c); Blue Mitchell (t); Curtis Fuller (tb); Bill Barron, Hank Mobley (ts); Walter Davis Jr, Wynton Kelly (p); Paul Chambers (b); Elvin Jones (d). 5/50, 64.
 Showcase Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 484 2 Jones; Blue Mitchell (t); Julian Priester (tb); Bill Barron (ts); Pepper Adams (bs); Charles Coker (p); Jimmy Garrison (b). 11/59.
These bracket a torrid decade in Philly Joe's personal life, but his most productive as a musician. Blues For Dracula was recorded towards the end of the drummer's main association with Miles Davis's touring band, a period in which he was much in demand musically but was also making absurd physical demands on himself. There are some signs of strain on a mainly good-natured blowing album, with Jones well up in the mix and his characteristic rimshots slightly overloud; 'Two Bass Hit', which inspired some of Philly Joe's best moments on Davis's Milestones, is particularly strong. The three horns were well-chosen but sound ragged in some of the less frenetic ensembles. The 'European' sessions sound altogether less certain, though Wheeler and King in particular produce an acceptable synthesis of their own slightly abstract idiom with Jones's whacking verve and oblique intelligence. Showcase is notable for a multi-tracked trio, 'Gwen', on which Philly Joe plays swinging piano, bass and drums. The other tracks are strongly coloured by the horn-players, Mitchell's raw earth colours, Priester's slightly surreal tinge, Garrison's magnificently centred bass-playing.

The 1959 large-ensemble record was intended to show off rhythm styles from around the world and it reflected Philly Joe's fascination with Max Roach's multiculturalism. It isn't entirely successful, but the playing is uniformly good – as well it might be, given such a dream band. Two versions of Benny Golson's 'Stablemates' stand out strongly, as does the long, Dameron-composed 'Philly J. J.', but quite how 'Cherokee' fits into the global perspective isn't clear.

The Collectables pairing brings together two long-deleted Atlantic records. Both feature strong bands. Downs is little known but he plays his part on the first disc, which includes some bebop staples ('Salt Peanuts') and 'Dear Old Stockholm', which is oddly attributed to Jimmy Garrison. The second date is a fascinating pairing with non-sibling Elvin, who's a very different kind of drummer. The percussion work is as busy as you'd expect, but it's immaculately recorded.

 Philly Mignon Original Jazz Classics OJC 1935 Jones; Nat Adderley (c); Ira Sullivan (ss, ts); Dexter Gordon (ts); George Cables (p); Ron Carter (b). 11–12/77.

Jones didn't live quite long enough to enjoy elder-statesman status and this 1977 comeback was more like business as usual. Gordon was in a comeback mode himself, recently returned to the USA, but he makes heavy weather out of both 'Neptunis' and 'Polka Dots And Moonbeams'. Better are three pieces with Adderley and the restless-sounding Sullivan, although the star performer is probably Cables – why he sat out both 'Jim's Jewel' and 'United Blues' is a mystery. Philly Joe plays well enough, although it's nobody's finest hour.

Quincy Jones (born 1933)

ARRANGER, BANDLEADER, TRUMPET

He played trumpet with Lionel Hampton, then did freelance arranging, including a stint in Europe. Toured with his own big band, 1959–61; arranged for Basie and several singers; then took an industry job at Mercury Records. He has worked in film music and pop (Michael Jackson!) and run his own record label, but he keeps his roots in jazz.

 Quincy Jones + Harry Arnold + Big Band = Jazz! Gambit 69256 Jones; Benny Bailey, Art Farmer (t); Jimmy Cleveland, Åke Persson (tb); Arne Domnérus (as); Rolf Blomquist (ts, f); Lars Gullin (bs); Bengt Hallberg (p); Simon Brehm (b); Alan Dawson (d). 3, 4, 6 & 11/58.

 Free And Easy Ancha ANC 9500-2 Jones; Lennie Johnson, Benny Bailey, Floyd Standifer, Clark Terry (t, flhn); Åke Persson , Melba Liston, Quentin Jackson, Jimmy Cleveland (tb); Julius Watkins (frhn); Porter Kilbert, Phil Woods, Jerome Richardson, Budd Johnson, Sahib Shihab (reeds); Patti Bown (p); Les Spann (g, f); Buddy Catlett (b); Joe Harris (d). 2/60.

 Swiss Radio Days Jazz Series Vol. 1 TCB 02012 As above, except omit Terry, Lennie Johnson, Budd Johnson; add Roger Guerin, Clyde Reasinger (t); Harold McNair (as). 6/60.

 The Quintessence Impulse! 051222 Jones; Jerry Kail, Clyde Reasinger, Clark Terry, Joe Newman, Thad Jones, Freddie Hubbard, Al DeRisi, Snooky Young, Ernie Royal (t); Billy Byers, Melba Liston, Paul Faulise, Rod Levitt, Curtis Fuller, Tony Mitchell (tb); Julius Watkins, Jimmy Buffington, Earl Chapin, Ray Alonge (frhn); Phil Woods, Jerome Richardson, Eric Dixon, Oliver Nelson, Frank Wess (reeds); Gloria Agostini (hp); Bobby Scott, Patti Bown (p); Milt Hinton (b); Harvey Phillips (tba); Buddy Catlett, Stu Martin, Osie Johnson (d). 11–12/61.

 Strike Up The Band Mercury 830774-2 Joe Newman, Clark Terry, Ernie Royal, Snooky Young, Jimmy Nottingham, Al DeRisi, Jimmy Maxwell, John Bello, Benny Bailey (t); Curtis Fuller, Urbie Green, Richard Hixson, Billy Byers, Quentin Jackson, Tony Studd, Paul Faulise, Jimmy Cleveland, Kai Winding, Thomas Mitchell, Santo Russo, Melba Liston (tb); Zoot Sims, Rahsaan Roland Kirk, Walter Levinsky, James Moody, Phil Woods, Frank Wess, Al Cohn, Jerome Richardson, Seldon Powell, Romeo Penque, Walter Kane, Sahib Shihab, Eric Dixon, Stanley Webb, Budd Johnson, Seldon Powell (reeds); Jimmy Buffington, Tony Miranda, Bob Northern, Ray Alonge, Julius Watkins, Earl Chapin, Bob Ingraham, Fred Klein, Willie Ruff (frhn); Charles McCoy (hca, perc); Toots Thielemans (hca); Lalo Schifrin, Bobby Scott, Patti Bown (org, p); Gary Burton (vib); Wayne Wright, Sam Herman, Kenny Burrell, Jim Hall, Vincent Bell, Mundell Lowe, Don Arnone (g); Bill Stanley, James McAllister (tba); Milt Hinton, Art Davis, George Duvivier, Major Holley, Ben Tucker, Chris White (b); Rudy Collins, Osie Johnson, Ed Shaughnessy, Stu Martin, Jimmy Crawford (d); Tito Puente, Carlos 'Patato' Valdes, Mike Olatunji, Martin Grupp, Philip Kraus, James Johnson, Carlos Gomez, Jack Del Rio, Jose Paula, Bill Costa, George Devins (perc). 1/61–2/64.

Jones has been among the most charismatic figures in black music in the past 50 years. His specific jazz records have been few, since he's chosen to make his mark as a producer/Svengali to countless other artists, involving himself in some of the most successful recording projects of recent years with Michael Jackson and others. But his best music assuredly deserves a place in a comprehensive jazz collection.

His best CD, This Is How I Feel About Jazz, which combined the original album of that name with most of Go West, Man, is only available as part of a Mosaic box. Otherwise, his story on record starts with the 2007 re-release of the early sides with Harry Arnold's orchestra and his own smaller ensemble, made in Stockholm in 1958, crisp, effective charts. The Ancha disc, recorded for Swedish Radio in Gothenburg, is in decent hi-fi, but the similar programme from Lausanne swings with greater abandon. Interesting to compare solo spots between the two shows: Clark Terry and Benny Bailey each take a crack at 'I Remember Clifford' (Terry wins), while Melba Liston and Quentin Jackson go through 'The Phantom's Blues' (honours even).

The Quintessence is a disappointment after This Is How I Feel About Jazz. The tracks are concise and undeveloped, the charts considerably less imaginative and, though the players (all top studio pros) don't stint of themselves, there's little to turn the head other than a few breezy passages of section-work. Strike Up The Band is culled from various Mercury albums of a commercial bent, though Jones again assembles several remarkable orchestras and persuades them to make the most of 'Baby Elephant Walk' and 'Cast Your Fate To The Wind'.

Also, in brief:

() Gula Matari / (*) Smackwater Jack A&M 393030-2 / 393037-2. 3–5/70; 71.

By 1970, Jones was leaving jazz to other hands. Gula Matari has a simpering treatment of 'Bridge Over Troubled Water', but it also has 'Walkin''. Smackwater Jack walks a similar line, but it has a certain metropolitan flash to it which Jones liked to keep hold of.

 Straight No Chaser: The Many Faces Of Quincy Jones Universal 541542-2 2CD. 61–81.

Universal's two-disc compilation concentrates on his pop/lounge music side (just two and a half minutes of the jazz title-track), and within that brief it's very entertaining.

Richard M. Jones (1889–1945)

PIANO, VOICE

He came from New Orleans and was an important A&R man for OKeh in Chicago, often doubling as pianist. He later worked in a similar capacity for Mercury.

 Richard M. Jones 1923–1927 Classics 826 Jones; Shirley Clay, Eddie Mallory, Don Nelson, Willie Hightower (c); Preston Jackson, Henry Clark, John Lindsay (tb); Albert Nicholas (cl); Artie Starks, Fred Parham (cl, as); Warner Seals (ts); Johnny St Cyr, Ikey Robinson, Bud Scott, Leslie Corley (bj); Rudy Richardson (d); Lillie Delk Christian (v). 6/23–7/27.

 Richard M. Jones 1927–1944 Classics 853 As above, except omit Nicholas, St Cyr, Corley, Seals, Nelson, Hightower, Scott, Parham, Richardson; add Jimmy Cobb, Elisha Herbert (c); Jimmy McLeary, Eddie McLaughlin, Milton Fletcher, Thomas Gray, Lee Collins, Bob Shoffner (t); William Franklin, Roy Palmer, Edward Fant, Albert Wynn (tb); Darnell Howard (cl); Omer Simeon (cl, as); John Davis, John McCullin (as); Otha Dixon, Herschel Evans (ts); Dave Peyton, Gideon Honore, George Reynolds (p); Huey Long, Hurley Ramey (g); Quinn Wilson (tba); John Lindsay, Bob Frazier, Oliver Bibb (b); Wallace Bishop, Eddie Green, Roy Slaughter, Baby Dodds (d); George Washington (v). 11/27–3/44.

Composer, talent scout and studio A&R man, Jones did much for jazz in the Chicago scene of the '20s. He might have helped bring about the Armstrong Hot Five sessions in the OKeh studios, but his own records are relatively undistinguished and largely forgotten. After a couple of doughty 1923 piano solos there are six good tracks by a trio of Jones, St Cyr and the young Albert Nicholas. Various tracks by Jones's Jazz Wizards, with the indifferent lead cornet of Shirley Clay, don't amount to much, although a stray 1927 trio date for Paramount – of cornet, clarinet and piano! – is surprisingly hot and furious. Scholars of the period will nevertheless want this CD for the presence of just two tracks: the incredibly rare sides by Hightower's Night Hawks featuring the legendary cornetist Willie Hightower.

The second disc features some very obscure music. After four sessions at the far end of the '20s there's a leap forward to 1935, and the remaining dozen tracks offer an anachronistic survival into the swing era of old-style Chicago hot music. The final session, made some 18 months before Jones's death, is a competent if pointless exercise in nostalgia. 'Jazzin' Babies Blues', which Jones had cut solo at his first date in 1923, appears again in a poignant farewell.

Rodney Jones (born 1956)

GUITAR

Born in Connecticut; spent his early years working with Jaki Byard and Dizzy Gillespie. Light, fluent sound.

 Dreams And Stories Savant 2068 Jones; Kenny Kirkland (p); Marc Johnson (b); Jeff 'Tain' Watts (d). 85–87?

(*) Soul Manifesto Blue Note 30499 Jones; Arthur Blythe, Maceo Parker (as); Dr Lonnie Smith (org); Lonnie Plaxico (b); Idris Muhammad (d). 1/01.

 Soul Manifesto Live! Savant 2054 Jones; Teodross Avery (ts); Will Boulware (p); Lonnie Plaxico (b); Kenwood Dennard (d). 5/03.

Soul Manifesto was something of a surprise, a change back to funk after the brisk modern bop of earlier discs. It works well over Smith's and Plaxico's solid groove and with Muhammad, a master of this idiom. 'Groove Bone' is a vamp quite similar to some of Miles's electric-period experiments. Waldron's 'Soul Eyes' varies the pace and mood. The live version of what has obviously become a standing project lacks the vigour of its predecessor and sounds insipid in places. However, it does throw Jones's own playing into relief. He isn't quite muscular enough for this repertoire, but his clean, deft approach is a lot more interesting than the 'funky' approximations of a lot of wannabes. Interesting appearance, too, by R&B songwriter Boulware.

The quartet disc only surfaced in 2005. It was made sometime before Kirkland's premature death, and at a time when Jones was still playing his crisp, modernist version of hard bop. There's nothing either challenging enough or sufficiently problematic here to suggest why the tapes have lain on the shelf for so long. Realistically, the disc will be valued for a posthumous glimpse of the much-missed pianist, but it's also a reminder of how Jones made his name in the first place.

Sam Jones (1924–81)

BASS, CELLO

His worked with Cannonball Adderley for almost a decade, then led occasional groups and freelanced.

 The Soul Society Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1789 Jones; Nat Adderley (c); Blue Mitchell (t); Jimmy Heath (ts); Charles Davis (bs); Bobby Timmons (p); Keter Betts (b); Louis Hayes (d). 3/60.

 The Chant Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1839 As above, except omit Davis, Timmons; add Melba Liston (tb); Julian 'Cannonball' Adderley (as); Tate Houston (bs); Wynton Kelly (p); Victor Feldman (p, vib); Les Spann (g). 1/61.

 Down Home Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1864 Jones; Blue Mitchell, Snooky Young, Clark Terry (t); Jimmy Cleveland (tb); Frank Strozier (as, f); Jimmy Heath (ts); Pat Patrick (bs, f); Les Spann (f); Joe Zawinul, Wynton Kelly (p); Israel Crosby, Ron Carter (b); Ben Riley, Vernell Fournier (d). 6–8/62.

() Visitation Steeplechase SCCD 31097 Jones; Terumasa Hino (c); Bob Berg (ts); Ronnie Mathews (p); Al Foster (d). 3/78.

Sam Jones had a beautiful sound on bass – fat, resonant, and fluid – and he was among the first to make the cello a plausible instrument in post-bop jazz. 'Some Kinda Mean' from The Soul Society gives an idea of his slightly gimmicky powers on that instrument; Betts takes over bass duties. The other session, with Mitchell in for Adderley, boils water on 'All Members' and 'The Old Country'.

The Chant is another good record. Cannonball takes a back-seat role, but most of the other horns get in a blow, and the studio sound gets a nice burnish on the section-work. Jones himself has a number of features, but what one remembers is his drive in the ensembles alongside old partner Louis Hayes.

Down Home repeated the formula of biggish-band tracks and small groups, with Sam taking up cello in the latter setting. Ernie Wilkins's charts are unemphatic and unsurprising, but there are some nice moments for Strozier, and Jones himself improvises against the grain of the orchestra to telling effect. The small-group pieces are more about the neatness of his cello playing than anything, though the instrumentation retains an appealing freshness.

Sam's few sessions as a leader in the '70s found him pursuing a lyrical kind of hard bop. Visitation is dependable rather than especially exciting, although Hino's peculiar mix of rhapsody and restlessness is as engaging as usual.

Thad Jones (1923–86)

TRUMPET, CORNET, FLUGELHORN, VALVE TROMBONE

Joined Count Basie in 1954 and stayed ten years. Began arranging and composing and formed an orchestra with drummer Mel Lewis in 1965, which lasted until 1978; also ran the Basie band for a time after its leader's death.

(*) The Fabulous Thad Jones Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 625 Jones; Frank Wess (ts, f); John Dennis, Hank Jones (p); Charles Mingus (b); Kenny Clarke, Max Roach (d). 54.
(*) The Magnificent Thad Jones Blue Note 6579 Jones; Billy Mitchell (ts); Barry Harris (p); Kenny Burrell (g); Percy Heath (b); Max Roach (d). 1/55.
 New York – Detroit Junction Blue Note RVG 74232 Jones; Billy Mitchell (ts); Tommy Flanagan (p); Kenny Burrell (g); Oscar Pettiford (b); Shadow Wilson (d). 3/56.
(*) Mad Thad Fresh Sound FSR CD 117 Jones; Henry Coker (tb); Frank Foster (ts); Frank Wess (ts, f); Tommy Flanagan, Jimmy Jones (p); Eddie Jones, Doug Watkins (b); Elvin Jones, Jo Jones (d). 12/56.

The middle Jones brother was consistently underrated as a soloist, and was recognized mainly as a composer and arranger. Not usually considered a small-group player, or even a soloist of any unusual interest, Jones none the less had a subtle and vibrant cornet tone similar to Nat Adderley's but was able to sustain big transitions of pitch with absolute confidence.

Mad Thad is terrific. The trumpeter was signed to Basie for most of the late '50s and early '60s, a period that firmed up his reputation as an arranger. He'd recorded on Mingus's demanding Jazz Experiment and won the bassist's heart with his bustling, opportunistic runs and confident entanglements in and around the theme. On Mad Thad, playing trumpet only, he sounds full-throated and sure of himself; there are what appear to be minor articulation problems, but these are incidental stammers in some beautifully crafted ('Whisper Not' especially) solos.

The sessions done for Mingus's and Roach's Debut label are very good indeed; these are also to be found in the 12-CD Debut compilation; Jones was the only artist to record twice under his own name for Debut. The duo on 'I Can't Get Started' is interesting first of all for Mingus's restructuring of the harmony, but Jones's response to this bare-boned setting and to the quasi-modal 'Get Out Of Town' is full confirmation of his ability to improvise at the highest level. Wess's flute makes a fine contrast on 'Sombre Intrusion'.

The Magnificent was out of favour for some time, which made the decision to give New York – Detroit Junction a Rudy Van Gelder Edition seem curious. It's a perfectly workmanlike record, and Mitchell is a player who deserves wider prominence, but it certainly isn't a patch on its predecessors. Of the earlier pair, the 1955 date probably just edges it.

 Live At The Village Vanguard Blue Note 60438 Jones/Lewis; this and later personnels from: Danny Moore, Al Porcino, Marvin Stamm, Richard Williams, Snooky Young (t); Eddie Bert, Bob Brookmeyer, Jimmy Knepper, Benny Powell (tb); Pepper Adams, Eddie Daniels, Joe Farrell, Billy Harper, Joe Henderson, Jerry Dodgion, Jerome Richardson (reeds); Roland Hanna (p, ky); Richard Davis (b). 4/67.
 Central Park North Blue Note 76852 Similar to above. 6/69.

'The Second Race', one of Jones's underrated compositions, is featured as a bonus track on the Village Vanguard date, which has been brought back by Blue Note, thankfully. The other big number is Brookmeyer's 'Samba Con Getchu'. The band still sounds proficient rather than inspired and the reissue of Central Park North (worth it for the title-track and the opening 'Tow Away Zone', which bookend the set) could have done with a couple of extra pieces to bulk out the sub-40-minute duration. Many avid collectors will have the Mosaic box; anyone wishing to have a detailed personnel for each session should check that.

(*) Basle 1969 TCB 2042 Similar to above. 11/69.

All that time working as a rehearsal band paid off. Barely two years after its public debut, the Jones–Lewis band was the most exciting large ensemble on the scene. This set for Swiss Radio isn't the most stimulating, but it's beautifully done and Joe Henderson was still with the group towards the end of his short tenure, so there's a more than usually heavyweight quality to the reed section. Extended examinations of 'Ah! That's Freedom', 'Second Race' and 'Don't Get Sassy' underline Jones's writing skills.

[illegible]

 Consummation

Blue Note 38226 As above. 1–5/70.

Consummation* is one of the best big-band records of its day and some kind of proof that the bands weren't completely dead. Jones's arrangements are as ever spot-on and there are enough fine soloists in the orchestra to guarantee a high level of interest. 'Tiptoe', the peerless 'A Child Is Born' and a long, long version of 'Fingers' are among the highlights. Thad does some nice work on his best-known composition and the high-quality recording registers him near perfectly.

* Live At Montmartre Storyville STCD 4172 Jones; Benny Rosenfeld, Palle Bolvig, Idrees Sulieman, Allan Botschinsky, Perry Knudsen (t); Vincent Nilsson (tb); Erling Kroner, Richard Boone (tb); Ole Kurt Jensen (btb); Axel Windfeld (btb, tba); Jesper Thilo (ss, as, cl, f); Per Carsten Petersen (ss, as, f); Bent Jaedig (ts, f); Uffe Karskov (ts, as, f, cl); Flemming Madsen (bs, cl, bcl); Ole Kock Hansen (p); Bo Sylvén (g); Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen (b); Bjarne Rostvold (d); Ethan Weisgard (perc). 3/78.

This was one of the finest recorded concerts of Jones's later career, made on the eve of his departure from the long-standing Jones–Lewis band, and the cornetist played his socks off. His tone on the ballad 'Old Folks', his own 'Tip Toe' and 'A Good Time Was Had By All' is pure and bell-like and the solos are relaxed enough to allow digressions into other themes and harmonic displacements without losing the thread. The sound is good. Bass trombonist Jensen co-produced and gets the brasses sounding as shiny as Gabriel's.

 Eclipse Storyville STCD 4089 Jones; Jan Glaesel, Tim Hagans, Egon Petersen, Lars Togeby, Erik Tschentscher (t); Richard Boone, Ture Larsen, Niels Neergaard, Bjarne Thanning, Axel Windfeld (tb); Michael Hove, Bent Jaedig, Ole Thoger Nielsen, Jorgen Nilsson, Sahib Shihab (sax); Horace Parlan (p); Jesper Lundgaard (b); Ed Thigpen (d). 9/79.

After leaving Mel Lewis in 1978, Jones spent most of his remaining years in Scandinavia, where he formed and led the Eclipse big band, an outfit which reflected some of the old partnership's combination of power and complexity. For all his virtues, Thigpen is no Lewis, but the band sounds well-drilled and the charts are razor-sharp. In the late '70s, Jones took up valve trombone as an alternative horn. It sounds fleet and subtle, and it lends him a breadth of tone he could not have achieved with the trumpet. The sound doesn't hold up to current digital standards, but it's big and warm and preserves enough of the grain in the ensembles to afford a hint of what this band was like in concert.

Also, in brief:

 After Hours Original Jazz Classics OJC 1782. 6/57.

It's not a daring record, compared to others of the period, but it has its delights.

 Mean What You Say Original Jazz Classics OJC 464. 4–5/66.

This came after the foundation of the Jones–Lewis band and it's an uncertain affair, with honours shared with Pepper Adams (bs).

 Opening Night: Live At The Village Vanguard Alan Grant Productions 5139. 2/66.

DJ Grant was MC at the Vanguard for the Jones–Lewis orchestra's first public performance on 7 February 1966. This music was included in the Mosaic box but was only available on Grant's website.

(*) Greetings And Salutations Four Leaf Clover FLC CD 125. 6/75–1/77.

These sessions with the Swedish Radio Jazz group have a startling crispness and panache, even when the structures seem comparatively straightforward and unfussy.

 Three And One Steeplechase SCCD 31197. 10/84.

Decent small-group set with Ed Thigpen at the kit. Nothing outstanding.

Herbert Joos

FLUGELHORN

Vienna Art Orchestra member whose work borders modern jazz and formal composition.

 Daybreak – The Dark Side Of Twilight ECM 841479-2 Joos; Thomas Schwarz (ob); Wolfgang Czelustra (b, tb); strings of Radio Symphony Orchestra, Stuttgart. 10/76.

This was originally released on ECM forerunner Japo. It's undeniably beautiful music, sensuous without being languid, and Joos's flugelhorn sound (imagine a mid-point between Thad Jones and Franz Koglmann) is very attractive, especially on 'Leicester Court 1440'.

(*) Adagio 1 + 2 PAO 10960 2CD Joos; Michel Godard (tba); Wolfgang Puschnig (as, c, bcl); Miriam Ernst (eng hn); Georg Breinschmid, Achim Tang (b); Mario Gonzi, Emil Kristof (d); Markus Faller (perc). 2/00.

This latter-day set has a similar, uncategorizable cast, somewhere between low-key new music and Nu Jazz. The first disc is a trio with Ernst and Faller, with a larger and more conventional ensemble (horns, two bassists, drums) on the second. It's difficult music to categorize, and difficult music to dislike.

Clifford Jordan (1931–93)

TENOR SAXOPHONE

He went to school in Chicago with Johnny Griffin and John Gilmore, but his sound had something of both Ben Webster and Lester Young in it, and only rather later a hint of the harmonic innovation of John Coltrane.

 Blowin' In From Chicago Blue Note 42306 Jordan; John Gilmore (ts); Horace Silver (p); Curley Russell (b); Art Blakey (d). 3/57.

 Cliff Craft Blue Note 81582 Jordan; Art Farmer (t); Sonny Clark (p); George Tucker (b); Louis Hayes (d). 11/57.

* Spellbound Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 766 Jordan; Cedar Walton (p); Spanky DeBrest (b); Albert 'Tootie' Heath (d). 8/60.

 Mosaic Milestone MCD 47092 Jordan; Kenny Dorham (t); Sonny Red (as); Tommy Flanagan, Ronnie Mathews, Cedar Walton (p); Art Davis, Wilbur Ware (b); Albert 'Tootie' Heath, Elvin Jones (d). 61.

(*) Bearcat Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 494 Jordan; Cedar Walton (p); Teddy Smith (b); J. C. Moses (d). 10/61, 62.

The Blue Note debut is a raw-sounding jam with old friend Gilmore, offering more heat than light, but still enjoyable as a two-tenor encounter. There's one alternate on the CD issue, a workmanlike 'Let It Stand', but the consensus is that the best of this first album is to be found on 'Billie's Bounce' and on the Gigi Gryce tune 'Blue Lights', which was a favourite with saxophonists for a time. Unfortunately, the contemporary eponymous Blue Note is still not available and nor is the OJC Startin' Time. The earlier reissue of Cliff Craft was a step in the right direction, but the picture is still patchy for these early years.

For some reason, Jordan didn't seem to find much favour at Blue Note, perhaps because his style still reflected an interest in the swing era. Fifty years ago, he was much closer to the tempestuous approach associated with Chicagoans like Johnny Griffin. And yet Cliff Craft is a markedly laid-back session, almost taken at a stroll. Never an easy bebopper, Jordan takes his own route through 'Confirmation' and 'Anthropology', pulling the teeth of both somewhat but managing to make the results sound logical and engaging. Art Farmer is the co-star, playing with all the grace and sensitivity that was to be his stock in trade in later years.

Two groups are involved in Mosaic, a quintet with Dorham and another with a second saxophone in the form of the underrated Sonny Red, who blows a forceful blues chorus when he gets the space. Almost all of the material is original, though Walton and Jordan vie for priority, with the pianist winning out on 'Mosaic' itself and the splendid 'One Flight Down'. Cliff's big, bruising sound is ideally suited to this context and producer Orrin Keepnews keeps him solidly in the front line.

Bearcat is the perfect characterization of Jordan's sound, sometimes growling, sometimes purring. This old Jazzland set isn't particularly well recorded, but the music is fine and Jordan is in good voice on 'How Deep Is The Ocean?' and the original 'Middle Of The Block'. The old hometown is eulogized in 'Dear Old Chicago', a performance that namechecks one or two distinguished ancestors.

Spellbound's 'Lush Life' is terrific. His understanding with Walton grew and deepened, but their level of communication here is most impressive and they hurtle through 'Au Privave' with almost cavalier abandon.

 Half Note Steeplechase SCCD 31198 Jordan; Cedar Walton (p); Sam Jones (b); Albert Heath (d). 3/74.

Recorded live at the New York club, Half Note is a good introduction to Cliff's music, with 'Highest Mountain' and 'The Glass Bead Game' both given definitive readings. There is also a fine interpretation of Monk's 'Rhythm-A-Ning' which points up the differences between Jordan and Charlie Rouse, who played that tune hundreds of times with Monk without plumbing some of the blues connotations Cliff finds in it. Walton is superb and his solos are always triggered by ideas from the tenor, so there is continuity and logic to these cuts. Jones (albeit poorly recorded) and Heath are excellent, too.

 The Highest Mountain /  Firm Roots /  Magic In Munich /  Night Of The Mark VII Steeplechase SCCD 31047 / 31033 / 37013/14 / Savoy Jazz 17299 Jordan; Cedar Walton (p); Sam Jones (b); Billy Higgins (d). 3/75; 4/75; 3 & 4/75; 4/75.

It was having such firm roots that allowed Jordan to drift through a theme as cavalierly as he often did. Throughout the highly productive mid-'70s, he was probably playing more 'legitimately' than at any other time in his career, but there are constant reminders of his Mingus-influenced tendency to regard the note as a dartboard (which, of course, you don't always want to hit dead-centre) and a progression as a series of mentally totted-up scores that always come out right in the end. Though he had a fair change of pace, he was definitely more successful at a medium-to-slow clip. He was a consummate ballad player with the kind of articulation and presence that suggest unused gears. Throughout these sets, it is the romantic ballads that consistently score high points. Compared to, say, Griffin, he never quite convinces at a gallop.

The mid-'70s were a very good time for Clifford Jordan. He was playing regularly with Cedar Walton, Sam Jones and Billy Higgins under the name The Magic Triangle, gigging pretty steadily and recording a substantial amount. Night Of The Mark VII was on Muse, then 32 Jazz, and has reappeared on Savoy, restoring another part of our picture of that hyperactive year and is another splendid outing by Cliff's working band of the time.

Much has been said about Jordan's supposed John Coltrane influence – some find it dominant by this stage; some profess not to hear it at all – so Bill Lee's 'John Coltrane' seems a reasonable place to test the hypothesis. Unlike Trane, Jordan strays over bar-lines and stretches theme statements out, without seeming to elaborate unnecessarily. His solos on 'Highest Mountain' and on 'Blue Monk' suggest influences from an earlier generation, combined with a phraseology that is entirely his own.

Firm Roots was more prosaic, but the evocative title captures something like the equidistance and responsiveness that Jordan, a great arranger, achieved with his colleagues. They work hard for one another, creating spaces and textures, laying off chords that lead whoever is soloing out into new territory, then gently pulling on the strings. Magic In Munich doesn't contain any new material, but simply pulls together Highest Mountain and Firm Roots, delivering pretty exceptional value at budget price.

(*) Royal Ballads Criss Cross 1025 Jordan; Kevin O'Connell (p); Ed Howard (b); Vernell Fournier (d). 12/86.

In later years Jordan perfected a ballad style that was strikingly reminiscent of Wardell Gray's. Royal Ballads is a lovely record; if it steers close to easy listening on occasion, a more attentive hearing uncovers all manner of subtleties and harmonic shifts. The opening 'Lush Life' is almost lost in Fournier's constant cymbal-spray, but the drummer – who has worked to great effect with Ahmad Jamal – is a great ballad player and every bit as adept as Jordan at varying an apparently sleepy beat with odd, out of synch metres and quiet paradiddles. As Jordan quotes 'Goodbye, Pork Pie Hat' on the original 'Royal Blues', Fournier squeezes the tempo almost subliminally, so that the reference evades identification as the mind subconsciously readjusts to the beat. Subtle and intelligent jazz.

(*) Play What You Feel Mapleshade 3232 Jordan; Jo Gardner, Dean Pratt, Dizzy Reece, Don Sickler (t); Kiane Zawadi (tb, euph); Benny Powell (tb); Charles Davis, John Jenkins (as); Junior Cook, Lou Orenstein, Willie Williams (ts); Robert Eldridge (bs); Ronnie Mathews (p); Ed Sanders (b); Tommy Campbell (d). 12/90.

* Down Through The Years Milestone MCD 9197 As above, except omit Gardner, Powell, Jenkins, Cook, Eldridge, Sanders, Campbell; add Stephen Furtado (t); Brad Shigeta (tb); Kiane Zawadi (euph); Jerome Richardson, Sue Terry (as); Charles Davis (bs); David Williams (b); Vernell Fournier (d). 10/91.

Jordan had a short but effective connection with Mapleshade in his last years. The output includes Masters From Different Worlds, an improbable association with 'mad monk' pianist Ran Blake, though Cliff only plays on less than half the tracks. Play What You Feel is a lovely big-band set that also pays homage to Thelonious with a fine, Dizzy Reece-arranged 'Evidence'. Charles Davis, Don Sickler, Julian Priester (who guested on Masters) and Jordan himself take responsibility for the other charts. The two highlights are originals, 'Bearcat' (predictably) and 'Charlie Parker's Last Supper', but it's on the ballads that Jordan's mature style comes through, alternately as hard and bright as spun wire, then as evanescent as smoke. Recommended.

The hand-picked orchestra on Down Through The Years was the fulfilment of considerable planning and thorough rehearsal. Recorded at Condon's in New York City, the disc captures the sound of an excellent ensemble playing at full stretch. The programme includes such long-standing favourites as 'Highest Mountain', on which the saxophonist is, appropriately, the only soloist, singing away on his solitary eminence, 'Japanese Dream', which provides an outlet for Dizzy Reece, and the strangely moving 'Charlie Parker's Last Supper', which brings the set to a close. Jordan played better many times, but rarely in such a completely sympathetic setting. His phrasing is almost always right on the beat, but he manages to avoid sounding mechanical.

Also, in brief:

 These Are My Roots: Clifford Jordan Plays Leadbelly Koch 8522. 1/65.

Not obvious bunkmates but this Atlantic set was part of an ongoing '60s rediscovery of American folklore, though it was usually rock musicians who explored this strand of blues.

 On Stage: Volumes 1–3 Steeplechase SCCD 31071 / 31092 / 31104. 3/75.

Similar in cast to the Magic Triangle albums. Cedar Walton (p) anchors; Cliff sounds best on the ballads.

 Repetition /  Two Tennor Winner Soul Note 121084 / Criss Cross 1011. 2/84; 10/84.
Similarly configured groups with Barry Harris and Kirk Lightsey respectively at the piano and Junior Cook as the other tenor on the Criss Cross. Good stuff, but not a patch on the later Royal Ballads.

 Meets Klaus Weiss JHM 3617. 87.
Recorded at Opus One in Vienna with a pick-up band, this is a strikingly good quintet set that's worth seeking out.

 The Mellow Side Of Clifford Jordan Mapleshade 5032. 89, 90.
Recorded quite informally, these duos and trios with old friends – Julian Priester (tb), Larry Willis and Chris Anderson (p) – mix quiet intimacy with sly competitiveness.

Duke Jordan (1922–2006)

PIANO

A bit player in the bebop movement; his style was an amalgam of Art Tatum and Bud Powell, facile rather than distinctive.

 Flight To Jordan Blue Note 92759 Jordan; Dizzy Reece (t); Stanley Turrentine (ts); Reggie Workman (b); Art Taylor (d). 8/60.
Duke Jordan's career has an odd trajectory. At 25, with an apprenticeship under Coleman Hawkins behind him, he was thrust into the limelight with Charlie Parker and proved himself an able and frequently imaginative accompanist. Thereafter, though, his progress has been curiously elided, with long disappearances from the scene.

The early Blue Note is a good place to make your acquaintance with Duke's Bud Powell-influenced pianism. It also introduces him strongly as a distinctive composer and the addition of a further rejected cut, 'Diamond Stud', plus a solitary standard, 'I Should Care', fills out the picture considerably. Reece and Turrentine are in good voice, and somewhat dominate the solos, but it's Duke's writing that makes this an important reappearance.

() Flight To Denmark /  Two Loves /  Truth Steeplechase SCCD 31011 / 31024 / 31175 Jordan; Mads Vinding (b); Ed Thigpen (d). 11 & 12/73; 11 & 12/73; 3/75.
Jordan disappeared from view until he began recording for Steeplechase. Though he was a fine standards player, he preferred to rework a sizeable but tightly organized body of original compositions. These have been documented by the Danish Steeplechase label with a thoroughness bordering on redundancy. 'Jordu' has become a popular repertoire piece. A Jordan theme tends to be brief and tightly melodic rather than just a launching-pad of chords.

Unlike his later work for Steeplechase, these are essentially albums of standards, and in some sense an attempt to come to terms with the legacy of bebop. There are finely judged readings of 'Here's That Rainy Day', 'On Green Dolphin Street' and 'How Deep Is The Ocean?' on Flight, 'I'll Remember April' and 'Embraceable You', 'Blue Monk' and 'My Old Flame' on Two Loves, which also includes the ubiquitous 'Jordu' and 'Lady Dingbat'. Jordan's career had been rather stop-start since the mid-'50s and there are occasional rust-spots on his faster runs and octaves.

 Lover Man Steeplechase SCCD 31127 Jordan; Sam Jones (b); Al Foster (d). 11/75.

(*) Duke's Delight Steeplechase SCCD 31046 As above, except add Richard Williams (t); Charlie Rouse (ts). 11/75.

 In Concert From Japan / (*) Flight To Japan Steeplechase SCCD 37005/6 2CD / 31088 Jordan; Wilbur Little (b); Roy Haynes (d). 9/76.

 Flight To Norway Steeplechase SCCD 31543 Jordan; Wilbur Little (b); Dannie Richmond (d). 11/76.

 Duke's Artistry /  The Great Session Steeplechase SCCD 31103 / 31150 Jordan; Art Farmer (flhn on Artistry only); David Friesen (b); Philly Joe Jones (d); Paul Jeffrey (bells on Great Session only). 6/78.

() Tivoli One / (*) Wait And See Steeplechase SCCD 31189 / 31211 Jordan; Wilbur Little (b); Dannie Richmond (d). 11/78.

() Solo Masterpieces: Vol. One / () ... Volume 2 / () Midnight Moonlight Steeplechase SCCD 31299 / 31300 / 31143 Jordan (p solo). 1 & 2/79, 2–11/79.

 Double Duke Steeplechase SCCD 37039/40 Jordan; Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen (b); Billy Hart (d). 10/79.

(*) When You're Smiling Steeplechase SCCD 37023/24 2CD Jordan; Jesper Lundgaard (b); Billy Hart (d). 79–7/85.
The late '70s were a productive time. In Billy Hart and Dannie Richmond he found drummers with the kind of rhythmic tension he required on which to sound his taut melodic figures. The mix of material is much as usual, but some mention should be made of 'Light Foot' and 'The Queen Is Home To Stay' on Double Duke, which brings together two single albums – Thinking Of You and Change A Pace.

The Tivoli sessions with Richmond are standards-based, with an accent on bebop-associated themes. Jordan adds vocals to When You're Smiling but we can't commend him as a singer. Much like Ahmad Jamal, Jordan occasionally skirts a Vegas-style 'entertainment' approach that obscures his more interesting ideas. Duke's Delight has long been one of our favourites.

Jordan was warmly received in Japan. Steeplechase have rationalized scattered material on a double-CD set. Since favourites like 'Misty Thursday', 'Jordu' and 'Flight To Jordan' are all included, it might make a sensible introduction to the pianist's work, although as a stand-alone disc it's not all that strong.

'Lady Bird' on The Great Session helpfully points to Tadd Dameron as a further factor in Jordan's development. These are unexceptionable sessions; Philly Joe plays with incomparable verve and exactness, and Friesen sounds confident and aware.

Though there are later recordings from the mid-'80s on When You're Smiling and the playing sounds as solid and untroubled as ever, Jordan's annus mirabilis had been and gone. Few will want more than two or three of these discs at best, and none of them make a pressing demand on the casual listener.

Also, in brief:

() Misty Thursday Steeplechase SCCD 31053. 6/75.
This includes one of Duke's best compositions, 'Night Train To Snekkersten', but otherwise unremarkable.

 One For The Library Storyville STCD 4194. 10/93.
An odd, even cynical title for a record. One does begin to wonder how much of the Jordan discography has been merely 'for the library', documentation for the sake of it. A pleasant solo date all the same.

Edward 'Kidd' Jordan

SAXOPHONES

Though Louisiana-born and based in New Orleans until Katrina, Jordan is no revival-traditionalist but a searching, adventurous player with a strong and determined saxophone sound. A dedicated educator at home and in Europe and Africa, Jordan was knighted by the French government.

 Live At The Tampere Jazz Happening 2000 Orchard 803259 Jordan; Joel Futterman (p, ss, wood f); Alvin Fiedler (d, perc). 11/00.

(*) Palm Of Soul Aum Fidelity 38 Jordan; William Parker (b); Hamid Drake (d, perc). 9/05.

Though he has a respectable list of credits as a sideman – with David Murray and others – Jordan has not recorded much under his own name. The Finnish gig is actually a collaborative group, and a relatively long-standing association, but it's Kidd's saxophone sound that tends to dominate, even keeping the hyperactive Futterman in check. All the music appears to be improvised and there are some slack passages, leading one to wonder why this performance, rather than many others by the same personnel, should have been selected for preservation on CD. Judicious editing might have made a better package of it.

No such concerns about the trio. Working with Parker and Drake is some guarantee of quality. There is no real danger that an experienced listener would mistake Jordan for any other contemporary saxophonist. He has a terse, almost discursive approach that is common to all his appearances and on whatever saxophone he chooses to play. The long improvisations here – 'Living Peace', 'Unity Call' and 'Last Of The Chicken Wings' – allow him and his collaborators to develop ideas to the fullest extent. The shorter pieces inevitably sound more predetermined, as one might expect, but Jordan's natural melodic skill emerges even in the freest setting. The Parker–Drake discography is already enormous, but this is worth searching out for the saxophonist alone.

Louis Jordan (1908–75)

ALTO AND BARITONE SAXOPHONES, CLARINET, VOICE

He came from Arkansas, of a vaudeville family. He quit big bands in the early '40s to form his Tympany Five, one of the most successful small bands in jazz history, which helped to father R&B.

 Louis Jordan 1934–1940 Classics 636 Jordan; Mario Bauza, Bobby Stark, Taft Jordan, Courtney Williams, Charlie Gaines (t); Ed Allen (c); Claude Jones, Sandy Williams, Nat Story (tb); Pete Clark (cl, as, bs); Cecil Scott (cl, as); Lem Johnson (cl, ts); Ted McRae, Stafford Simon (ts); Wayman Carver (ts, f); Stafford Simon (ts); Tommy Fulford, Clarence Johnson, James P. Johnson (p); John Trueheart (g); Cyrus St Clair (tba); Beverley Peer, Charlie Drayton (b); Chick Webb, Walter Martin (d); Floyd Casey (wbd); Rodney Sturgis, Clarence Williams (v). 3/34–1/40.

 Louis Jordan 1940–1941 Classics 663 Jordan; Courtney Williams, Freddy Webster, Eddie Roane (t); Stafford Simon (cl, ts); Kenneth Hollon (ts); Arnold Thomas (p); Charlie Drayton, Henry Turner, Dallas Bartley (b); Walter Martin (d); Mabel Robinson, Daisy Winchester (v). 3/40–11/41.

(*) Louis Jordan 1941–1943 Classics 741 Jordan; Eddie Roane (t); Arnold Thomas (p); Dallas Bartley, Jesse Simpkins (b); Walter Martin, Shadow Wilson (d). 11/41–11/43.

 Louis Jordan 1943–1945 Classics 866 As above, except omit Bartley; add Idrees Sulieman, Aaron Izenhall (t); Freddie Simon, Josh Jackson (ts); William Austin, Wild Bill Davis (p); Carl Hogan (g); Al Morgan (b); Slick Jones, Razz Mitchell, Eddie Byrd (d); Bing Crosby (v). 11/43–7/45.

 Louis Jordan 1945–1946 Classics 921 As above, except omit Roane, Thomas, Sulieman, Simon, Martin, Wilson, Jones, Mitchell, Crosby; add James Wright (ts); Joe Morris (d); Harry Dial, Vic Lourie (perc); Ella Fitzgerald (v). 45–46.

(*) Louis Jordan 1946–1947 Classics 1010 Jordan; Aaron Izenhall (t); James Wright, Eddie Johnson (ts); Wild Bill Davis (p); Carl Hogan (g); Jesse Simpkins, Dallas Bartley (b); Joe Morris (d); The Calypso Boys (perc). 10/46–12/47.

(*) Louis Jordan 1947–1949 Classics 1134 Jordan; Aaron Izenhall, Bob Mitchell, Harold Mitchell (t); Eddie Johnson, Josh Jackson (ts); Wild Bill Davis, Bill Doggett (p); Carl Hogan, Bill Jennings, James Jackson (g); Dallas Bartley, Bob Bushnell, Billy Hadnott (b); Joe Morris (d); Martha Davis, Ella Fitzgerald (v). 12/47–8/49.

 Louis Jordan 1950–1951 Classics 1238 Jordan; Louis Armstrong (t, v); Aaron Izenhall (t); Josh Jackson (ts); Wild Bill Davis (p, org); Bill Doggett (p); Bill Jennings (g); Bob Bushnell (b); Joe Morris (d); Ella Fitzgerald (v). 6/50–3/51.

* Swingsation GRP 059951-2 As above discs. 39–53.

Jordan was an incomparable funster as well as being a distinctive altoman and smart vocalist. His hit records, 'Five Guys Named Moe', 'Choo Choo Ch'Boogie', 'Caldonia' and many more, established the idea of the jump band as a jiving, irrepressible outfit. Rightly so: Jordan was a pro's pro, tirelessly seeking out fresh songs and constantly touring. But, surprisingly, the music seldom suffered, which is why his best sides still sound fresh. Most of the hits are collected on the GRP record, an irresistible platter to warm up a room. The Classics series tells much of the story. Classics 636 starts with an obscure 1934 Clarence Williams date where Jordan croons 'I Can't Dance, I Got Ants In My Pants'. Some of the sequence is a bit strained – try 'Sam Jones Done Snagged His Britches' – but there is some unbeatable jive here too. Classics 741 is probably the first choice, given that there are the first versions of some of Jordan's most enduring hits: 'Five Guys Named Moe' (also present in a V-Disc version), 'The Chicks I Pick Are Slender, Tender And Tall' and so on. But Classics 921 has 'Choo Choo Ch'Boogie' and 'That Chick's Too Young To Fry' plus a couple of duets with Ella Fitzgerald. Classics 866 includes eight tracks made for V-Disc, a radio ad for Oldsmobile and the sublime duet with Bing Crosby on 'Your Socks Don't Match'. Classics 1010 has a sublime put-down in 'You're Much Too Fat And That's That', as well as Jordan's first two versions of 'Open The Door Richard!'. These and a few other favourites of ours, such as 'Boogie Woogie Blue Plate' and the straight blues 'Roamin' Blues' and 'Inflation Blues', persuade us to award an extra point. Classics 1134 picks up the story with one last session before the 1948 recording ban, including two especially appealing duets for Louis and wife Martha Davis, before dashing through five eventful sessions in the first half of 1949. Besides the ridiculous Jamaican skit, 'Push-Ka Pee She Pie', there is a sequence of duets with Ella, including at least two immortals in 'Baby It's Cold Outside' and 'Saturday Night Fish Fry'. Jordan carries on through the sessions on Classics 1238, including two more duets with Ella and a pair with Pops, as well as 'Blue Light Boogie', which offers Bill Doggett the chance to start working on the kinds of thing that would make him a success in the later '50s. But Jordan's jive is starting to wear thin, all the same.

[redacted]

 Louis Jordan & His Tympany Five

JSP CD 905 4CD As above discs. 38–50.

Compared to the above discs, this four-decker is an unrivalled bargain: four CDs remastered from original copies, creaming off the best of Jordan from all through the '40s, and delivered at a bargain price. Yes, please!

Also, in brief:

 Rock 'n' Roll /  No Moe! Mercury 838219-2 / Verve 512523-2. 10/56–8/57.

Jordan's later recordings were remakes of his old ones. It worked well, because Quincy Jones's arrangements brought in some sterling instrumentalists and updated the sound without prettifying it too much.

Sheila Jordan (born 1928)

VOICE

Born in Detroit, she was turned on to modern jazz by hearing Charlie Parker, and began singing vocalese to Bird solos. Married to pianist Duke Jordan for a decade, and was a student of Lennie Tristano. Her style covers an enormous range, from scat and ballads to art song.

[redacted]

 Portrait Of Sheila

Blue Note 789902-2 Jordan; Barry Galbraith (g); Steve Swallow (b); Denzil Best (d). 9 & 10/62.

Sheila Jordan shows much of her former husband's concentration on the melodic progress of a song. Like the truly great instrumentalists, she is content to explore the potential of the middle register, where words are more likely to remain intact, rather than over-reach her range. At the end of phrases, she deploys a superbly controlled vibrato. On Portrait, her most complete artistic statement, she ranges between the rapid 'Let's Face The Music And Dance', which anticipates the surrealism of her contributions to Roswell Rudd's remarkable Flexible Flyer, and the fragile beauty of 'I'm A Fool To Want You' and 'When The World Was Young', with its extraordinary, ambiguous ending. Bobby Timmons's 'Dat Dere' is given just to voice and bass (and Swallow is superb), 'Who Can I Turn To?' to voice and guitar, while 'Hum Drum Blues' and 'Baltimore Oriole' are set against rhythm only, as if she were a horn.

 The Very Thought Of Two /  Songs From Within MA Records 5 / 14 Jordan; Harvie Swartz (b). 2/88, 3/89.

An important and, for a long time, settled creative partnership. Their interplay on the first record still sounds searching and sometimes provocative, trading lines, Jordan challenging the bassist to follow her, he outmanoeuvring her with a deft double stop. The medley of 'I Got Rhythm' and its descendant 'Anthropology' is virtuosic on both sides, the highlight of Songs From Within. Everything else is almost equally good.

(*) Jazz Child High Note 7029 Jordan; Steve Kuhn (p); Theo Bleckmann (v). 97.

Bracketed by Sheila's autobiographical 'Jazz Child', this is another astonishingly eclectic and various set, taking in Don Cherry ('Art Deco'), Jimmy Webb ('The Moon's A Harsh Mistress') and a lovely medley for Miles Davis. It features the singer in the kind of adventurous setting that shows off her bebop background and her straighter and more narrative approach to a song. Kuhn is a magnificent accompanist.

 I've Grown Accustomed To The Bass /  Celebration High Note 7042 / 7136 Jordan; Cameron Brown (b). 11/97; 11/04.

Brown is a more percussive and more flowing player than Swartz and their interchanges, also touched on in interview, are revealing, as they unpick 'Dat Dere', 'Pork Pie Hat', Charlie Parker licks and original blues. Sheila more than ever sounds as if she's possessed by the spirits of great jazzmen. She's not an impressionist so much as a medium, channelling the jazz of the past through an imagination that constantly reinvents its own material. Recorded live at Triad, Celebration is less upbeat in tone, but the relationship has matured and Jordan sounds wonderful.

 Little Song High Note 9076 Jordan; Tom Harrell (t, flhn); Steve Kuhn (p); David Finck (b); Billy Drummond (d). 6/02.

Quite wonderful. When she sings 'When I Grow Too Old To Dream', you know it's never going to happen. There is a dreamlike quality to much of this set, noticeable whenever Tom Harrell's otherworldly trumpet breaks through, but also evident in old friend Steve Kuhn's thoughtful and tasteful accompaniments. The title-track is segued with the Beatles' 'Blackbird'. Bassist Finck gets a credit with 'The Way He Captured Me', but it's a pity there's nothing from the pianist's pen. Kenny Dorham's 'Fairweather' is a fascinating inclusion, underlining how much of Jordan's musical language is still rooted in bebop, even though she nowadays sounds easier with the slower transitions of show-tunes and occasionally art song.

Also, in brief:

 Sheila Steeplechase SCCD 31081. 8/77.

Delightfully spare duets with Arild Andersen (b); this established her favourite format.

 Sheila's Back In Town Splasc(h) 804. 99.

A fine Italian encounter with the E.S.P. Trio. She's in great form on a long, ambitious version of Don Cherry's 'Art Deco', scatting like a horn-player.

Theo Jörgensmann (born 1948)

CLARINET

He started out in hard bop and developed a kind of modal free bop; later led a clarinet quartet, CL-4, and worked in chamber groups.

 Pagine Gialle hatOLOGY 553 Jörgensmann; Eckard Koltermann (bcl). 2/95.

Not released until 2001, this is 51 minutes of beautiful interplay. Woodwind duets have become relatively commonplace in improvised music, but this is a relatively unusual one. Distortion or caricature is eschewed in favour of streams of melody and precise conversational interplay, although the writing and improvisation work together at a temperature which feels hot rather than cool. Any question over Jörgensmann's mastery will be comprehensively answered by the solo which constitutes the opening of part two of the concert. This music can stand in John Carter's noble tradition.

 Fellowship hatOLOGY 616 Jörgensmann; Petras Vysniauskas (ss); Charlie Mariano (as); Karl Berger (vib, p); Kent Carter (b); Klaus Kugel (d). 4/98.

This also had to wait some considerable time for release. It actually sounds older still, for the basic language here is the free bop of the late '60s and early '70s, unapologetically revived. Berger's long piano opening to his own 'Nameless Child' sounds a little like one of Paul Bley's performances with Kent Carter and Barry Altschul. Jörgensmann still sounds like John Carter, but inevitably a lot of the attention here falls on the two saxophones, who give an intriguing edge to all three long-form improvisations with some delicious Trane-edged harmonics. Jörgensmann's own 'Nightmare' is the most effective single part and gives him more of the spotlight than the other sections, but there is a slight falling away in coherence during Carter's closing 'It Will Come', inevitable in a live performance with so many individual voices on the platform. Hugely satisfying, even if the buttons it pushes are nostalgic ones.

(*) To Ornette – Hybrid Identity hatOLOGY 576 Jörgensmann; Christopher Dell (vib); Christian Ramond (b); Klaus Kugel (d). 02

It's not entirely clear why this is dedicated to Coleman, since none of his music is played; nor does Jörgensmann sound like a natural disciple. However, the music is strong enough in its hybrid inside-outside mode. Jörgensmann's style is often likened to a miscegenation between Buddy De Franco and Don Byron. We'd venture that Perry Robinson or, again, John Carter provide a more realistic lineage, and this is borne out again here on the free-ish 'On Safe Roads' as well as the lovely 'Poème'. The use of vibes again suggests a liking for a lighter and fleeter timbre than that offered by a piano and there is no mistaking that Dell gives his boss a flattering context within which to work.

Also, in brief:

 Miniatures Not Two MW 748-23. 3/03.

Strictly, this is a record where Jörgensmann is a guest of the Oles brothers, who complete a free-ish trio.

Anders Jormin (born 1957)

DOUBLE BASS

A long-standing catalyst in Swedish post-bop. Raised in Jönköping, he came to prominence with the '70s group Rena Rama and is widely recorded as sideman and leader.

(*) Nordic Light Dragon DRCD 305 Jormin; Thomas Gustafson (ss, ts); Bobo Stenson (p); Christian Jormin (d). 5/84.

 Eight Pieces Dragon DRCD 306 Jormin; Staffan Svensson (t); Dave Wilczewski, Thomas Gustafson (ss, ts); Thomas Jäderlund (as, f); Bobo Stenson (p); Harald Svensson (ky); Göran Klinghagen (g); Audun Kleive (d). 2/88.

Nordic Light has worn the better of these two early sets. The quartet plays seven pieces based around Scandinavian compositions of the past, from Grieg, Peterson-Berger, Sjöberg, Nielsen and Ekstrom. Stenson is his usual powerful self and the quartet has much in common with the Garbarek–Stenson group. The original themes are elaborated on thoughtfully, rather than bowdlerized or turned into something else, and if this sounds conservative next to other such projects, the musicians clearly have the spirit of these pieces in their bones.

Next to this, Eight Pieces fails to catch: Harald Svensson's keyboards, as so often with synthesizers, sound dated and the blending of styles effortful. But the writing still has many points of interest, and it's a good band.

 Alone Dragon DRCD 207 Jormin (b solo). 91.

On the solo album Jormin says he aimed for something 'naked, pure and lyrical', cutting the 40-odd minutes of music in a single evening with a DAT machine, and the unaffected qualities of the playing lend the music much charm – where most bass albums are deliberately cumbersome and sombre in texture, this one is songful and optimistic. Jormin plays only three brief tunes of his own: the rest is dominated by three burnished melodies by Silvio Rodriguez and the unforgettable melody of A. Ramirez's 'Alfonsina'. Those hoping for the kind of sumptuous bass sound which hallmarks studio bass albums may be disappointed in the relatively light and 'live' atmosphere here, but it emphasizes the calibre of the playing over any mere hi-fi experience.

(*) Once Dragon DRCD 308 Jormin; Thomas Gustafson (ss, ts); Jarle Vespestad (d); Jeanette Lindström (v). 8/96.

Beautifully pitched between formality and abstraction, this quartet's music is complex without being unduly demanding. Vespestad is crucial to the freeness of the situation, playing straight time but often getting a tympani-like sound out of the bass and floor toms. Gustafson is alternately dramatic and respectful, and Jormin brings in some good themes as well as choosing works by Ornette Coleman, Evert Taube and Kurt Weill. But it's Lindström's singing, in English or Swedish, or wordless, which keeps it from formlessness.

 Silvae Dragon DRCD 338 Jormin; Arve Henriksen (t); Fredrik Ljungkvist (cl, ss, ts); Severi Pyysalo (vib, marim); Marc Ducret (g); Christian Jormin (d, p). 1/98.

Drawn from a commission, this is typically imaginative music, but the success of the record may depend on your response to Ducret. He unbalances the group, his rockier solos too splashy to fit in with Jormin's concept. For once, a Jormin record seems stitched together out of disparate pieces, with his usual impeccable flow suffering too many changes of mood; but much of it, such as the cod-Japanese 'Koto', with lovely trumpet from Henriksen, is still more than worthwhile. Had Henriksen and Pyysalo been made more use of, this might have been a classic.

(*) Xieyi ECM 013998-2 Jormin; Robin Rydqvist (t, flhn); Krister Petersson (frhn); Lars-Göran Carlsson (tb); Niclas Rydh (btb). 12/99.

Where else to go to make a solo bass record, interspersed with gravely beautiful pieces for a brass quartet, than ECM? Jormin's light, melodious approach to the bass violin is refreshing after the instrument's often portentous history as a solo instrument, and, as he did on Alone, he finds sweetness and uncluttered delicacy in several of the meditations presented here. If the brass pieces are modest enough to suggest that they wouldn't seem like anything much on their own, they work fine in context.

Also, in brief:

 Jord Dragon DRCD 243. 10/94.

A live-in-the-studio group record; a bit shapeless but with some exquisite passages.

 In Winds, In Light ECM 981123-2. 5/03.

A set of sacred songs to be performed in Västerås Cathedral; the jazz content is minimal, but Lena Willemark's strange vocals and Marilyn Crispell's luminous piano-playing make it worthwhile for all tastes.

Joseph Holbrooke (Trio)

GROUP

British improvisation pioneers, first convened in Sheffield in the mid-'60s, but reunited 30 years on to play and record afresh. The group name comes from a real English composer, 'the Cockney Wagner'.

 Joseph Holbrooke '65 Incus CD single Derek Bailey (g); Gavin Bryars (b); Tony Oxley (d). 65.
(*) Joseph Holbrooke '98 Incus CD 39 As above. 10/98.
* The Moat Recordings Tzadik TZ 7616 2CD As above. 12/98.
Initially, Joseph Holbrooke played what Bryars describes in his notes to The Moat Recordings as 'a refined form of harmonic jazz', with the Bill Evans trio as a model. The trio also performed behind Lee Konitz (with Bryars listed as 'player unknown') during one of the saxophonist's already experimental British tours. However, like a good deal of British free jazz, the group rather dramatically evolved into a new language with no predetermined structures, key signatures or rhythms.

There is virtually nothing left of the trio in its original incarnation, just the ten minutes or so of rescuable rehearsal material on the Incus single, on which they are still clearly playing with a jazz sensibility, and a bootleg of the Konitz tour. In 1998, however, Joseph Holbrooke was reformed for a concert at the Stadtgarten in Cologne. From the very first chords from Bailey's guitar, it is clear that something special is afoot. The music unfolds in two long pieces, with a tiny coda. It feels undifferentiated and flowing, with Bryars' nimble bass providing a solid substructure for the urgent, metallically comic cackle of Bailey and Oxley, whose kit has an instinctively recognizable range of timbres.

Joseph Holbrooke played a subsequent and longer set in Antwerp. The tapes have been found and will presumably soon be released. However, by that time (January 1999) the trio had already made a studio recording, an inspired decision. Also a tragic one, because Gary Todd of the Cortical Foundation, who produced the sessions at Moat Studios two months after the Cologne gig, was subsequently fatally injured in a fall from his apartment balcony, holding up release for some years. The music is flowing, graceful, organic, and full of quizzical intelligence. The component sound-personalities are by now utterly familiar, as is the liberty to play free music. While some of the surprise value the trio must have had in 1965 has gone – or been absorbed into a wider discourse – the nature of their relationships has only deepened, yielding one of the great documents of recent British music.

Vic Juris (born 1953)

GUITAR

He took up the guitar at ten and started playing in fusion situations in the '70s, though he also worked with Dizzy Gillespie and Phil Woods.

 Night Tripper Steeplechase SCCD 31353 Juris; Phil Markowitz (p); Steve LaSpina (b); Jeff Hirshfield (d). 4/94.
 Pastels Steeplechase SCCD 31384 Juris; Phil Markowitz (p); Jay Anderson (b); Matt Wilson (d). 11/95.
 Moonscape Steeplechase SCCD 31402 Juris; Dick Oatts (as, ts, f); Jay Anderson (b); Jeff Hirshfield (d). 10/96.
(*) Music Of Alec Wilder Double-Time DTRCD 118 Juris; Tim Hagans (t, flhn); David Liebman (ss, ts); Steve LaSpina (b); Jeff Hirshfield (d). 9/96.
Having worked extensively with Larry Coryell and Biréli Lagrène as duet partners and with fusion bands in the '70s, Juris began belatedly to acquire a leadership profile. He's a keen technician and likes to vary the pace on all his own albums: one tune done on open electric might be followed by another on nylon acoustic, before the guitar-synth comes out for the next. All the Steeplechases are nicely rounded and there's little to choose between them – though one could complain that there's not much that stands out either. Night Tripper has a lovely take on 'Estate', and Markowitz's 'Dekooning' is a clever and challenging piece; Pastels pulls out another charmer in 'Berlin', and Anderson and Wilson, if less ambitious than the other rhythm sections, do great service to the soloists. Oatts is a welcome addition to Moonscape and they open with the terrific 'Vampicide', but some of the other tunes seem a touch routine in the delivery. On balance, Pastels is our favourite of the three.

The Double-Time release is better still, though mostly for the superb horn-players. Liebman and Hagans could have had a more gracious sound in the studio, but they steal this date from Juris, who sounds more like the good and true sideman that he is here. The material, all Alec Wilder tunes and plenty of interesting obscurities among them (such as his extraordinary valedictory song for Sinatra, 'A Long Night'), is a bonus and the treatments are consistently imaginative.

(*) Remembering Eric Dolphy Steeplechase SCCD 31453 Juris; Dick Oatts (as, ts, f); Jay Anderson (b); Jeff Hirshfield (d). 4/98.
A provocative concept for a guitarist to essay, and this set of four Dolphy tunes and five in-the-spirit originals by Juris doesn't shirk any comparisons. Oatts gets a lean, almost rubbery sound, not much like the dedicatee but observant of the master's abstracted bebop roots, and the accuracy of the playing on the likes of 'Miss Ann' and 'Out There' – not to mention Oatts's own original 'Emphasizing Eric', which Juris admits is the hardest thing he's ever tried to play on the guitar – is a pleasure in itself. Anderson and Hirshfield create a free-flowing and open-minded pulse which is very suitable for the occasion.

* Songbook Steeplechase SCCD 31483 Juris; Jay Anderson (b); Jeff Hirshfield (d). 11/99.
(*) Songbook 2 Steeplechase SCCD 31516 Juris; Michael Formanek (b); Jeff Hirshfield (d). 3/01.
Juris is a favourite among guitarists, in part because his exceptional technique is all but masked by his dedication to playing interesting things. A plain old trio date which features the likes of 'Soul Eyes', 'Billie's Bounce' and 'All The Things You Are' hardly sounds like a candidate for major honours, but the first Songbook has claims to be his best record. Instead of playing Bill Evans's 'Time Remembered' as a sweet piece of fluff, he plays it solo with a tranforming focus and calm intensity, almost a scored improvisation. 'I Won't Dance' has the jocularity taken out, displaced by a beautifully lyrical feel. 'Milestones' and 'Billie's Bounce' are tough and direct. 'Nuages' is a set-piece that has always tempted technicians, but Juris breezes through it, completely secure. Anderson and Hirshfield are excellent, too.

If the second edition is only a shade behind, it's still as good a guitar record as will turn up in the straight-ahead racks. As before, Juris goes just slightly outside expectations: 'Django' is given a bluesy twang in the mid-section, 'Giant Steps' is almost serene.

Because he now prefers a softly articulated tone, Juris won't necessarily take the ear straight away, but every solo seems to ripple with melodic bounty in these top-drawer sessions.

 While My Guitar Gently Weeps Steeplechase SCCD 31553 Juris; Jess Chandler (org); Tim Horner (d). 11/02.

Naming your album after a George Harrison tune isn't a traditional way to the jazz audience's heart, even if times are changing. It is, in any case, misleading, since the programme is actually based around compositions by guitarists, everyone from Raney and Montgomery to McLaughlin and Stryker (and, of course, the late George Harrison). The organ combo setting is another surprise, moving away from the bass/drums duo of the last two records. And that's the drawback: given that Juris uses a sound which is very soft in its articulation, the edges of every note furred over, it blends so completely in with the equally cosy organ timbre to the extent that there are times when the two deliveries seem interchangeable. The playing's thoughtful and smart, but it's disappointingly homogeneous too.

Also, in brief:

(*) Blue Horizon Zoho Music 200409. 02–03.

Joe Locke (vib) makes a perfect foil on this set of duos and group tracks.

 A Second Look Mel Bay MB09782. 05.

Juris now delivers reliably, albeit on small and sometimes hard-to-find labels. Dave Liebman (ss, ts) is in great form here.

 Bohemia Jazzpoint 1023. 06.

In the company of British maestro John Etheridge. A pleasant meeting of guitar minds.

Roger Wolfe Kahn (1907–62)

ALTO AND TENOR SAXOPHONES, BANDLEADER

A poor little rich boy, he took up bandleading in '20s New York as a lark. But he had one of the best bands in the city.

 Roger Wolfe Kahn 1925–1932 Jazz Oracle BDW 8013 Kahn; large personnel, including Charlie Teagarden (t); Miff Mole, Jack Teagarden (tb); Artie Shaw (reeds); Joe Venuti (vn); Eddie Lang (g). 3/25–11/32.

Kahn was only 17 when he led the first of these sessions. The son of a banker, he wasn't much of a saxophonist but he bought his way into the dance band business and soon had one of the best white outfits in New York. Record-collectors have long prized the best of his Victor sessions in particular, and many of the choicest titles are on this excellent John R. T. Davies remastering, which includes 'Jersey Walk', 'The Tap Tap' and 'Say "Yes" Today'. There are head-turning breaks and solos by Miff Mole and Joe Venuti in particular, and Jack Teagarden turns up with a fine solo on 'She's A Great Great Girl'. Later sides for Brunswick and Columbia weren't quite as good, although Kahn could still boast a very good orchestra. There's also a centenary ASV edition of the same material, but this is hard to beat. After he tired of bandleading, he went into aviation and often worked as a test pilot.

Henry Kaiser (born 1952)

GUITAR

Inspired by Derek Bailey, but also with his feet in blues and rock, he's a richly eclectic player. Co-leader of Yo! Miles.

 Improvised (Vancouver) Incus CD 26 Kaiser; John Oswald (sax). 78, 96.

 Invite The Spirit Tzadik TZ 7617 Kaiser; Charles K. Noyes (d, perc); Sang-Won Park (perc, kayagum, ajaeng, v); Ok Joo Moon, Laura So-Yeon Kim (v, perc). 87, 06.

So various is Kaiser's output that his work can only be excerpted here. The duos with Oswald bespeak a relationship that has continued over more than 20 years. Each man has a distinct improvising language; together, they sound more than the sum of their considerable parts. It's friendly, at times almost jovial stuff by the dour standards of improv situations and endlessly replayable. Very few improvisers have taken on the challenge of Korean music, with its very specific rhythmic and tonal language. Invite The Spirit documents another long-standing relationship, with the first track dating back to the '80s. Kaiser's guitar-playing is extraordinary and the 'ethnic' instruments sound fine in this context.

Goran Kajfeš (born 1970)

TRUMPET, KEYBOARDS, OTHER INSTRUMENTS

A member of the admired Oddjob. Kajfeš's career has embraced free jazz alongside contemporary styles and beats.

 Home EMI/Kaza 5269222 Kajfeš; Per 'Ruskträsk' Johansson (as, ts, bs, f); Jonas Kullhammar (ts); Per 'Texas' Johansson (bcl); Davor Kajfeš (p); Daniel Karlsson (ky); Johan Norberg, David Nyström (g); Jonas Lindgren (vn); Peter Forss (b); Janne Robertson (d); Crille Olsson (perc). 00.

 Headspin Amigo Musik AMCD 899 Kajfeš; Per 'Texas' Johansson (ts, bcl); Per 'Ruskträsk' Johansson (as, af); Jesper Nordenström (p, org, omnichord); Davor Kajfeš (acc); Mattias Ståhl (vib); Mattias Torell (g); Johan Bertling, Peter Forss (b); Christer Björklund , Janne Robertson (d, perc); David Österberg (elec); ADL, Timbuktu (v). 04.

Easy to assume that, because he likes the mute in, he's just another Miles disciple. His actual provenance is far more eclectic. Both albums touch on worldbeats, modern big-band swing and a trancey/dancey aesthetic drawn from pop. Home is an engaging enough record but has little of the intense musical focus Kajfeš shows on the collaborative Nacka Forum (Moserobie mmp CD005), on which Kullhammar also plays. The saxophonist doesn't vary his strong approach so much on these dates, and often provides the grit otherwise lacking. Kajfeš favours lonely-sounding meditations over fairly regular, often almost hypnotic beats. The results are probably closer to Jon Hassell than to Miles.

Headspin is the more elegant of the pair, but also the more inconsistent. 'Kuti' and the closing 'Pulaski Bridge' are both moderately swinging and there is some fiery stuff on 'The Man With The Golden Arm' (nothing to do with Elmer Bernstein's soundtrack music, it seems) which does point in the direction of electric Miles. Österberg's electronics are mostly decorative and the rhythm section lacks bite. The whole package feels like a showcase and old-pals' act. Only the title-track and an intriguing vocal rework of Sun Ra's 'Nuclear War' (Nacka Forum includes 'We Travel The Spaceways') really jump out of the speakers. Pleasant enough stuff but hardly representative of his talents.

Max Kaminsky (1908–94)

TRUMPET

Long-lived Dixielander from the Condon circle.

 Copley Terrace 1945 Jazzology JCD 15 Kaminsky; Brad Gowans (vtb); Pee Wee Russell (cl); Teddy Roy (p); John Field (b); Buzzy Drootin (d). 11/45.

Max always sounded like he'd listened a lot to Louis Armstrong and Freddie Keppard: a big, full sound with a swinging approach to phrasing. There's surprisingly little bearing his name, but these private recordings of radio broadcasts from Boston make for refreshing listening. The repertoire is exactly the set-list you'd expect, with 'The World Is Waiting For The Sunrise', 'Sheik of Araby' and 'Dippermouth Blues', along with some rarer things. As the acetates were made by a private collector, the sound isn't great, but Max and Pee Wee come through richly enough.

Richie Kamuca (1930–77)

TENOR SAXOPHONE

Born in Philadelphia, where he was spotted by Roy Eldridge. He worked with Stan Kenton and Woody Herman and with smaller West Coast groups, notably Shelly Manne's.

 Richie Kamuca Quartet VSOP 17 Kamuca; Carl Perkins (p); Leroy Vinnegar (b); Stan Levey (d). 6/57.
 West Coast Jazz In Hi-Fi Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1760 Kamuca; Conte Candoli, Ed Leddy (t); Frank Rosolino (tb); Bill Holman (bs); Vince Guaraldi (p); Monty Budwig (b); Stan Levey (d). 58.

Apart from three late recordings for Concord, which were packed into the final year of his life, this is pretty much the sum of Kamuca's work as leader. The 1957 session offers the best measure of his quality. The tracks are mostly short and to the point, with just one original in a nicely judged set. 'Rain Drain' is closer to the quirky modernism of his big-band work, but it's an appealing enough tune. Perkins puts up two ideas of his own, 'Early Bird' and 'Fire One', and here and there steals the show with his terse, unshowy phrasing and offbeat ideas.

Kamuca favoured a seductive, close-to-the-ear murmur which comes direct from Lester Young, but without the ambivalence. His approach to standards – 'Star Eyes', 'Angel Eyes', 'Stella By Starlight' – is direct and unsentimental, and for combined impact and sophistication there's little to choose between the four quartet tracks and Holman's arrangements for the larger group. In the continued absence of the Concords, this makes for a highly desirable introduction to the saxophonist's work.

Michael Kanan

PIANO

Bostonian with a liking for the Tristano school.

() Convergence / () The Gentleman Is A Dope Fresh Sound FSNT 055 / 147 Kanan; Ben Street (b); Tim Pleasant (d). 1/99; 5/02.

Kanan makes the Tristano approach sound warm and approachable. He studied with Sal Mosca for a year before becoming disenchanted with the style, but these two discs show him trying it on for size again, modified a little by influences such as Monk and Jamal. The result is two swinging, delicate, sinewy recitals of standards and jazz tunes. He does Lennie and Lee favourites such as 'Ablution' and 'Tautology', and manages to heat them up and soften their astringencies without losing the essential flavour. Hard-core Tristano-ites might consider this a cop-out, but to us it sounds like a beautiful synthesis. He has a graceful touch, and Street and Pleasant create light, skipping rhythms behind him.

Seppo Kantonen

PIANO, KEYBOARDS

Finnish pianist, working in free-form, post-bop, mostly whatever takes his fancy.

(*) Klang Impala 001 Kantonen; Uffe Krokfors (b); Markku Ounaskari (d). N.D.

Kantonen isn't well known, but some may be familiar with his CD of duets with Jarmo Savolainen, Phases (Love BECD 4020), as well as sideman work with Eero Koivistoinen and Rinneradio. This excellent record shows how much mileage there still is in the piano trio. The writing is consistently intriguing, always looking to vary the dynamics of the group, the way the players move between form and freedom, the tonal colours available. Krokfors must take a big share of the credit, since he wrote four of the nine themes. 'Good Things', one of them, bounces off the simplest of bass riffs into a sizzling workout for the trio. Ounaskari can work up a terrific amount of noise, as he does on the climax of 'Lammen Haltija', without toppling the group over, but at least some of the time he's working in tiny strokes, or playing the kit – as on 'The Way In' – as if he's got a set of tuned tympani. Kantonen is quick and thoughtful and he uses what sounds like an old-fashioned analogue synth on a couple of pieces. Some of this music calls to mind a certain old-fashioned European elegance, as in some of the early ECM sessions. The impression is of a group that's thought long and hard about their music, without desiccating the essential spontaneity of their interaction.

Ori Kaplan (born 1969)

ALTO SAXOPHONE

Born in Tel Aviv, he studied in New York in the early '90s and has since worked on that scene with his Trio Plus band.

 Realms CIMP 190 Kaplan; Tom Abbs (b, tba); Geoff Mann (d, t). 1/99.
 Delirium CIMP 223 As above, except add Steve Swell (tb). 5/00.

The music of Realms takes some cues from Ornette Coleman (though Kaplan himself sounds nothing like the master) and the tunes touch on the folky feel of Coleman's trio music, but there are interesting envelopes opened here and there: especially when Abbs switches to tuba and Mann picks up the trumpet, as they do in the haunting later stages of the title-track. Kaplan writes some neat melodies, and he does best when he's playing melodically, too: when the saxophonist starts overblowing, cliché beckons. An agreeable date – as is the follow-up, with frequent CIMP guest Swell sitting in. This one is a little more groove-oriented, especially in 'Air' and 'Hazy Dazy On Mars', although a particularly peppy jam on Carla Bley's 'Ictus' works well.

Egil Kapstad (born 1940)

PIANO

He learned piano as a child and was working in the Oslo jazz scene by 1960, working as accompanist and leader but also writing choral and orchestral music and pieces for TV and theatre.

(*) Cherokee / * Remembrance Gemini GMCD 61 / 82 Kapstad; Terje Venaas (b); Egil Johansen (d). 11/88; 10/93.
A beautiful and typically individual record by a modern master of Norwegian jazz. Kapstad's absorption of the requisite piano influences lets him put a personal spin on what is actually his first-ever trio date: the nine standards all have a novel point of view, such as the piano/bass duet on 'Autumn Leaves' or the dreamily slow treatment of 'Cherokee' itself. His solo reading of 'Darn That Dream' is modelled out of a simple but detailed look at the harmonies, and the opening run through 'When You're Smiling' freshens even that tune. Venaas and the redoubtable Johansen are perfectly in step, and the only disappointment is that there isn't more of Kapstad's own writing.

The follow-up is even better, a celebration of eight native Norwegian composers (including the trio members). The abiding factor is Kapstad's meticulous technique: even in the middle of a fast piece such as 'Big Red', he displays a refinement of touch that elevates the composer without relinquishing his own stamp on the piece. If the overall feel of the session is romantic, even a trifle forlorn, the exacting lyricism which he gets out of most of the tunes is intensely satisfying.

Also, in brief:

 Storytellers Hot Club Records HRCD 110. 5/98.
Jan Erik Vold reads texts (Lawrence, Creeley, Uppdal) to accompaniments that range from 'St Thomas' and 'How Deep Is The Ocean' to an Eric Dolphy line.

Pandelis Karayorgis

PIANO

Raised in Greece, but studied at the New England Conservatory and under Paul Bley, and plays a ruggedly abstract style of piano.

 Lift & Poise Leo Lab 041 Karayorgis; Joe Maneri (cl); Mat Maneri (vn); John Lockwood (b). 12/96, 1/97.
* Heart & Sack Leo Lab 048 Karayorgis; Nate McBride (b); Randy Peterson (d). 4/98.
(*) Blood Ballad Leo LRCD 325 As above. 8/01.
 Disambiguation Leo LR CD 334 Karayorgis; Tony Malaby (ts); Mat Maneri (vn); Michael Formanek (b); Randy Peterson (d). 1/02
* Seventeen Pieces Leo CD LR 417 Karayorgis (p solo). 4/04.
Karayorgis's work for Leo is hard to categorize. There are 12 tracks on Lift & Poise divided into solo, duo and trio pieces, exploring a range of sonorities and improvising languages, ranging from the quasi-classical to the free-form and brutalist. Heart & Sack is much more obviously a jazz album and Pandelis's Monk influence comes across strongly. He does a wonderful cover of Dolphy's bluesy 'Miss Ann', Ellington's 'Frustration' and Ken McIntyre's rarely (if ever) covered 'Lautir'. That's enough to lend it interest, but the playing is richly evocative and never predictable, even if McBride and Peterson occasionally lapse into free-jazz argot during some of Karayorgis's more abstract passages. Blood Ballad's a tighter and more organized album than the first, though there are no reference points apart from the closing version of Coltrane's 'One Up, One Down'. Even so, it's a good place to start exploring his music. Disambiguation reunites the pianist with Maneri in a fine ad hoc line-up. Again, Pandelis's Monk influence is very evident, and he swings more easily and relaxedly than on most of his previous records. The long 'Three Plus Three' and the title-piece are the most effective cuts.

One still doesn't think of Karayorgis primarily as an interpreter of repertory material. Yet it's his clever reworking of material by Monk and Dolphy, and even Sun Ra, that catches the attention on Seventeen Pieces. The readings of 'Ugly Beauty' and 'Criss Cross' are hard to fault and Dolphy's 'Gazelloni' is a revelatory study-piece. The real surprise and delight, though, is Sun Ra's 'Deep Bronze', a surreal work in its original incarnation, delivered almost prettily here. Karayorgis has developed a powerful piano language of his own and this is its definitive statement to date.

Also, in brief:

(*) Let It Cadence 1115. 2–5/99.
Dull duo date with Nate McBride (b), though there are some moments of illumination.

 No Such Thing Boxholder BXH 104. 01.
Of more interest to fans of Ken Vandermark (reeds), who completes a trio with McBride (b).

Jan Kaspersen (born 1948)

PIANO

The Dane has a distinguished record of work since 1970 and a penchant for leopardskin hats and Thelonious Monk.

 Puzzle In Four Olufsen DOCD 5532 Kaspersen; Simon Cato Spang-Hanssen (ss, ts); Bjarne Roupé (g); Peter Danstrup (b); Ole Rømer (d). 9/85.
 Memories Of Monk Olufsen DOCD 5208 Kaspersen; Peter Danstrup (b); Ole Rømer (d). 11/86.
* Live In Sofie's Cellar Olufsen DOCD 5136 Kaspersen; Anders Bergcrantz (t); Bob Rockwell (ts); Peter Danstrup (b); Ole Rømer (d). 8/91.
(*) Heavy Smoke Olufsen DOCD 5188 As above. 12/92.
Marvellous records from a Dane whose music is a beautifully personal, inventive and humorous response to the particular influence of Thelonious Monk. This is made crystal-clear by the tribute album, which distils a nice blend of homage, celebration and evolution. Kaspersen has done better since and perhaps he can be a shade too slavish, but the sense of enjoyment shines through. The great disc here is the glorious live session: Bergcrantz reveals himself as a major soloist, Rockwell is only a beat behind, and Kaspersen directs with great exuberance from the piano. There is the third version of his favourite, 'I Mean Monk', and this is surely the best. Heavy Smoke returns the band to the studio, and while the music is unimpeachably inventive, we slightly prefer the dash of the live session. Puzzle In Four brings his initial LP to CD for the first time: a rowdy, exciting club set from the Café Montmartre, it's a bit short on finesse and the rhythm section had some improving to do, but it's great fun.

(*) Special Occasion Band Live In Copenhagen Jazzhouse Olufsen DOCD 5303/4 2CD Kaspersen; Lars Vissing (t); Erling Kroner, Lis Wessberg (tb); Simon Cato Spang-Hanssen (as); Bob Rockwell, Fredrik Lundin (ss, ts); Henrik Sveidahl-Hansen (ts, bs);

Aske Jacoby (g); Peter Danstrup (b); Ole Rømer (d); Jacob Andersen (perc). 9/94.

With seven horns, Kaspersen marshals a serious force to get the most out of his writing and, in what's almost a greatest-hits set, the band play with unquenchable enthusiasm and flair. Sound is just a little rough, but the ambience – the band were flying at the end of a tour – communicates a tremendous amount of fun.

(*) Katuaq Concert Olufsen DOCD 5384 Kaspersen (p solo). 3/97.

In Greenland, playing the first jazz gig at Katuaq Arts Centre. As ever, his dedication to Monk is steadfast, with 'Round Midnight', 'Ugly Beauty' and 'Light Blue', along with his own 'Red Monk' and 'I Mean Monk': yet the deeper he goes, the more he seems to find. A sober occasion, illuminated by the sparest flashes of wit.

 Out Of Sight Olufsen DOCD 5391 Kaspersen; Bob Rockwell (ts); Finn Ziegler (vn); Peter Danstrup (b); Ole Rømer (d). 1/98.
(*) More Ballads And Cocktails ... And The Blues Olufsen DOCD 5393 Kaspersen; Bob Rockwell (ts). 2/99.
(*) Jazz Talk Olufsen DOCD 5440 Kaspersen; Marc Davis (b); Ole Rømer (d). 7/99.
* Memo To The Moon Olufsen DOCD 5521 Kaspersen; Anders Bergcrantz (t); Lis Wessberg, Erling Kroner (tb); Simon Cato Spang-Hanssen (ss, as); Bob Rockwell (ss, ts); Fredrik Lundin (ts); Henrik Sveidahl-Hansen (ts, bs); Aske Jacoby (g); Peter Danstrup (b); Ole Rømer (d); Klavs Nordsø (perc). 9/01.
 Mind Pictures Olufsen DOCD 5507 Kaspersen (p solo). 9–10/05.

Guy still can't leave Monk alone: the trio set, live from the Copenhagen Jazzhouse, has three of his tunes plus Jan's own 'Red Monk', the wittiest of homages. New bassist Davis acquits himself well on a thoroughly engaging and grooving set. The earlier quintet session Out Of Sight is framed mainly as a feature for guesting violinist Ziegler, who has an indecently rich sound on the fiddle. The band are on their best behaviour. Rockwell is a long-standing accomplice by now and their growly, bumping dialogue on More Ballads is a sheer delight. A piano/sax duo is tough to sustain across a whole CD but this one manages the trick.

The mighty Special Occasion Band, with a few new faces, is reconvened for the superb Memo To The Moon. Some of Kaspersen's most characterful music comes out in his ensemble writing. His fast tunes are never funky or 'soulful': what you get is a swaggering, slightly pixilated groove which finds its own unique momentum, a touch fractious and never too serious. There are some strange sonorities in the title-track (almost an Ellington jungle tune), lush balladry in 'Silent Days In Opalblue' and a nutty, frenzied 'Beet Root Serenade'.

The solo record is more sober. All the tunes are Kaspersen originals; ten 'San Cataldo Variations' are even dignified by an opus number. Decisive playing, graceful music.

Manu Katché

DRUMS

Percussionist with a unique touch.

 Neighbourhood ECM 986 9815 Katché; Tomasz Stańko (t); Jan Garbarek (ss, ts); Marcin Wasilewski (p); Sławomir Kurkiewicz (b). 3 & 11/04.
 Playground ECM 2016 Katché; Mathias Eick (t); Trygve Seim (ss, ts); David Torn (g); Marcin Wasilewski (p); Sławomir Kurkiewicz (b). 1/07.

Katché started out as a rock drummer, but when Manfred Eicher heard him playing with Robbie Robertson, he spotted his potential as an improviser. Katché's strength is in playing highly regular patterns which are varied by the subtlest changes in attack and dynamic. That's most evident on the second record, where he colours the rhythms with infinite subtlety while still sustaining an exciting groove. The first sounds much like a Stańko record, with Garbarek as guest, but the drummer's contribution is inestimable and his own compositions offer considerable potential.

Bruce Katz (born 1952)

PIANO, ORGAN

Energetic post-bop keyboardist, now with substantial track record as a leader.

 Crescent Crawl Audioquest AQ CD 102 Katz; Bob Malach (ts); Marty Ballou (b); Lorne Entress (d). 92.
(*) Transformation Audioquest AQ CD 1026 Katz; Tom Hall (ts); Kevin Barry (g); David Clark (b); Lorne Entress (d). 11/93.
 Mississippi Moan Audioquest AQ CD 1047 Katz; Tom Hall (ts, bs); Mike Costello (hca); Julian Kasper (g); Mark Poniatowski (b); Ralph Rosen (d); Mighty Sam McClain (v). 10/97.
 Three Feet Off The Ground Audioquest AQ CD 1056 Katz; Julien Kasper, Duke Robillard (g); Blake Newman (b); Ralph Rosen (d). 8/00.

Katz's piano and organ sound had been heard in and around Boston for a while (including recordings with Ronnie Earl and the Broadcasters) before he took the plunge with a recording date of his own. Strictly the first couple are co-led with drummer Entress, who's also a fine composer. The first album comes right out of the box, an eclectic mix of styles from blues to near-folk things. 'Contrition', played on the Hammond, was originally co-written with the drummer for the Earl band; 'BK's Broiler' is another B3 groove, but Katz has the ability to change pace entirely, as he does with an astonishing piano version of 'Just A Closer Walk With Thee'.

The favoured groove is a medium funk shuffle, but with lots of unexpected elements – weird bent notes, busy little percussion interludes, top line/bass line swaps – that lift it out of the ordinary. Again on Transformation, the organ tracks are a bit more energetic and forceful, but it is Katz's piano-playing that is the key to his sound. He's an active, multi-directional player, often building solo ideas out of fast, narrow-interval arpeggios, with occasional excursions out into free time, almost like the young Cecil Taylor. Sensibly, he seldom dwells on an idea past its due time, preferring to spin off in a new direction. Like Malach, Tom Hall is more than just a bar-room honker and he turns in some very nifty solo work, as do bassist and guitarist on the second album.

It's tempting to start a new section for the third album, since the sound has changed substantially since Katz and Entress went their separate ways. The emphasis is much more on blues than on jazz strictly conceived and the addition of vocalist Mighty Sam McClain on 'Hanging On The Cross' and 'I'm Gonna Love You' puts the whole set in a rather different bag from past discs. Our instinct about Katz's piano-playing appears on the money, for while the organ would seem perfectly appropriate to this repertoire Bruce sticks largely to the piano.

But then the old B3 reasserts itself on Three Feet Off The Ground, a fast and funky set that seems to have gone up a notch in energy terms over the first albums. 'Wrecking Ball' is fantastic, but so, too, is the soul-jazz opener 'Beef Jerky' and the moving 'Walk With Me'. Katz has gone his own course and has created a vibrant body of work which deserves attention.

Dick Katz (born 1924)

PIANO

Grew up in Baltimore, and studied at the Peabody; his real apprenticeship was as house pianist at the Café Bohemia in New York.

 3 Way Play Reservoir RSR 127 Katz; Steve LaSpina (b); Ben Riley (d). 3 & 8/92.
 The Line Forms Here Reservoir RSR 141 As above, except add Ryan Kisor (t); Benny Golson (ts). 5/95.
One of Katz's finest moments was with Benny Carter's Further Definitions. 'Blues In My Heart' is not coincidentally the standout track on the first of these. Dick takes the album title very seriously. This is very definitely a trio at work, not piano-and-rhythm. The later record is not quite as coherent; Golson brings some quiet wisdom to a set that includes Strayhorn, Monk and Coltrane tunes as well as originals.

Shake Keane (1927–97)

TRUMPET, FLUGELHORN

Ellsworth McGranahan Keane was born in St Vincent (where he is now director of culture). Moved to London in 1952, studying literature, and joined up with the legendary Joe Harriott, whose legend overshadows most of his associates.

() Dig It! Vocalion 8412 Keane; Ivor Raymond Orchestra/Chorus; Johnny Keating Sound. 65, 69.
 That's The Noise Vocalion 8408 Keane; Bob Efford (ts, bs, bcl); Olaf Vas (f); Pat Smythe, Stan Tracey (p); Coleridge Goode (b); Bobby Orr (d). 67.
The earlier of these is a syrupy confection of pop hits, nicely done, but apart from Shake's bright, warm-toned flugelhorn not sustaining too much musical interest. That's The Noise is more compelling, though it may still be a shock to anyone who's picked up on the idea that Shake was a pioneer of modern and free jazz in Britain. The trumpeter preferred something prettier and more accessible. He kicks off with 'As Tears Go By', 'That Loving Feeling' and 'It's Not Unusual'. There's one Harriott composition in 'Morning Blue' and just a couple of originals, the unfussy 'New Sunday' and the closing 'Fidel'. Not really representative of what Shake could do in a more challenging setting.

Geoff Keezer (born 1970)

PIANO

He was the last Messengers piano-player when only 17, later working with Ray Brown.

(*) Trio Sackville SKCD2-2039 Keezer; Steve Nelson (vib); Neil Swainson (b). 11/93.
A fine, swinging, drummerless trio, this is one of Keezer's best current showings on record. The Oscar Peterson mannerisms show through here and there, but for the most part he plays for the trio and on a long 'Epistrophy' digs deeper into Monk's themes than most contemporary piano-players bother to. 'Relaxin' At Camarillo', Sonny Stitt's 'Eternal Triangle' and a solo piano medley are the other highlights.

 Sublime: Honoring The Music Of Hank Jones Telarc 83563 Keezer; Kenny Barron, Chick Corea, Benny Green, Mulgrew Miller (p). 8/02.
Five pianists pay tribute to a sixth, though it's not clear why Claus Ogerman's 'Favors' slips into the set-list. Keezer's main (negative) virtue is that he seems able to fit into every situation; that's somewhat underlined in these duos – he doesn't really shine in any of them.

 Falling Up Max Jazz 207 Keezer; Ingrid Jensen (flhn); Tim Garland (bcl); Steve Wilson (f); Joe Locke (vib); Richard Cottle (ky); Paul Bollenback (g); Keola Beamer (g, nose f); Moanalani Beamer (bamboo pipe); Scott Colley, Laurence Cottle (b); Karriem Riggins (d); Claire Martin (v). 8/02–2/03.
Whereas Concord's Maybeck series concentrated on unaccompanied performance, Max Jazz have offered artists in their piano sequence pretty much whatever permutations they fancy. When it works, it works, and here Keezer takes full advantage, ranging from taut trio pieces to strange, spacey numbers where he plays vibes and Fender Rhodes, to a collaboration with Hawaiian legend Beamer. It's too various to be entirely successful, but it underlines Keezer's adventurous spirit.

(*) Wildcrafted: Live At The Dakota Max Jazz 215 Keezer; Matt Clohesy (b); Terreon Gulley (d). 9/04.
His take on 'Stompin' At The Savoy' right at the beginning is remarkable, a wholly unexpected synthesis of bop and swing. It guarantees you're going to listen hard when he turns to Björk's 'Venus As A Boy' or even 'Black And Tan Fantasy'. The originals have a distinct oriental tinge, which is beguiling, though enigmatic rather than wholly convincing.

Roger Kellaway (born 1939)

PIANO

He studied at the New England Conservatory in the late '50s, spent the early '60s in New York, then moved to California. Most of his subsequent work has been as composer, arranger and producer, often in TV and film.

(*) The Roger Kellaway Trio Original Jazz Classics OJC 1897 Kellaway; Russell George (b); Dave Bailey (d). 5/65.
Kellaway's early records are buried treasure. He has a scholar's approach to jazz history, bundling together stride, boogie and swing devices into a manner otherwise entirely modern. His treatment of the then-contemporary Lennon and McCartney tune 'I'll Follow The Sun' is a rare example of successfully jazzing the Beatles. The blues waltz 'Signa: O.N.' is indecently rich and 'Ballad Of The Sad Young Men' is as sober as Kellaway is playful elsewhere – especially on the prepared-piano knockabout 'Brats'.

 Alone Together Dragon DRCD 168 Kellaway; Red Mitchell (b). 7/88.
 Some O' This And Some O' That Dragon DRCD 187 As above, except add Putte Wickman (cl). 6/89.
 That Was That Dragon DRCD 201 Kellaway; Jan Allan (t); Red Mitchell (b). 1/91.
(*) Roger Kellaway Meets Gene Bertoncini And Michael Moore Chiaroscuro CR(D) 315 Kellaway; Gene Bertoncini (g); Michael Moore (b). 2/92.

Kellaway was signed on and off, away from studio work. This duo with Red Mitchell is very like the ideal of eavesdropping on a couple of old friends after hours. The album sounds better all the time, though Mitchell's whimsical search for the lowest note a bass can produce may still irritate some listeners, and sometimes they ramble, as after-hours sessions will. The later one was also recorded at Red's place in Stockholm, but with Wickman in for the evening. The presence of Jan Allan on That Was That seems to focus the music much more and, though most of the tracks run to seven or eight minutes in length, there's no excessive meandering. Mitchell's amusing vocals on 'Leavin' Blues' and the title-track add to the fun and there are some very pleasing solos by Allan, whose unassuming and rather frail playing suits this context very well.

The Chiaroscuro trio session is a densely packed series of performances with high, concentrated interplay among the three men. On 'All The Things You Are' their contrapuntal thinking is astonishing, yet their simple, songful treatment of Moore's sweet-natured 'Old New Waltz' is as charming as it is naggingly memorable. Kellaway continues to surprise, improvising on the melody or the chords just when one expects the opposite, turning 'locked hands' playing into something ingenious.

Some recent things have been on Japanese labels.

Also, in brief:

 Cello Quartet A&M SP 3034. 70.
A surprise reissue. The name is a misnomer, since the pieces were written for cello/piano/bass/drums and are done here with strings and Joe Pass (g) on two tracks.

 The Art Of Interconnectedness Challenge CHR 70042. 1/87.
A rare jazz appearance for the time, live at the Vineyard.

Greg Kelley

TRUMPET

Studied at the Peabody before moving to Boston and beginning to work on the free scene. Founded his oddly named group nmperign in 1998 and has recorded with them and others since. Also associated with Anthony Braxton.

() Trumpet Meniscus 009 Kelley (t solo). 00.
We only have his word for it that a trumpet was actually used. Some of these sounds could probably be duplicated using some old plumbing pipe and a couple of tuned thermostats. No one denies Kelley's sincerity or indeed his musical gifts, but they're hard to find on this raw and unlovely set of free sounds.

 Forlorn Green Erstwhile 019 Kelley; Jason Lescalleet (computers, samples). 11/01.
This is a very different proposition, an album of bizarre atmospheres and contexts that is reminiscent of some of Braxton's more dramatic concert pieces. Found sound combines with eerie trumpet blasts that might be shouts of delight or fear or the cries of someone in pain. 'Conquest Of The Earth' is a desolate and initially forbidding soundscape that gradually acquires an aura of human tenderness; one can imagine this soundtracking the story of people who live in harsh places. 'Man On The Outside' is more specifically dramatic, a sound poem about estrangement and lack of contact. The techniques are very similar to those heard on Trumpet, but here they seem to have a raison d'être and aren't just deployed because they can be. We'd rate the album higher if it weren't such demanding music.

(*) If I Never Meet You In This Life, Let Me Feel The Lack Rossbin RS006 Kelley (t solo). 8/02.
And the same goes for this one. It's also quite a short record, though it's unlikely that any but the most committed listener would be up for more of it. It opens with dramatic clangour, sounds from inside the bell of a mic'ed trumpet and continues for a time as a collage of loud processed sounds, some instrumental, some electronic artefacts. Then, bizarrely and wonderfully, the surface detail disappears and all one hears for the rest of the set is a low roar, through which tiny details emerge almost subliminally. This may be what it sounds like in the womb, but for the absence of a countable heartbeat, or it may be the submarine wash heard by the drowned. For music so spare and abstract, it's remarkably humane and if you find the title pretentious as you approach the disc, you may have changed your mind 36 minutes later.

Brian Kellock (born 1962)

PIANO

Born in Edinburgh and still based there, he is beginning to carve out an international reputation.

 Something's Got To Give / * Live At Henry's Caber Music 003 / 020 Kellock; Kenny Ellis (b); John Rae (d). 98; 11/00.
Kellock's debut CD on Caber is a tribute to Fred Astaire. What is immediately impressive, apart from the obvious empathy of the trio, is how comfortably the pianist manages to blend standard material with a thoroughly contemporary sound. Rae's drumming calls on everything from Elvin Jones-inspired polyrhythms to a steady, folkish backbeat; above all, it swings. 'The Continental' is an obvious choice and by far the best single track on the album.

The appearance of Live At Henry's cemented his emergence as a major player. The decision to catch the pianist in his natural habitat – a popular jazz cellar in his native city – was a wise one and has yielded an extraordinary set. One surprise is the inclusion of two Tristano tunes, including the demanding contrefact on 'Pennies From Heaven' ('Lennie's Pennies'). It's an interpretation which calls for impressive hand-speed and inch-perfect co-ordination throughout the trio. 'TP In NYC' is written by saxophonist Phil Bancroft, an abrasive tune that establishes the tenor of a mostly upbeat set. There is less than might be expected of Kellock's more meditative ballad style, though his interpretation of Jimmy Rowles's 'The Peacocks' is pretty definitive. It's not (yet) The Village Vanguard Sessions, but it has the same unity of purpose, the same intelligence and equilibrium, and the same ability to yield new dimensions with each hearing.

Jon-Erik Kellso (born 1964)

TRUMPET, PUJE

Born in Detroit, but in thrall to the Crescent City, he's an unabashedly old-fashioned hot player with a strong swinging style. He has worked with Dick Hyman, Johnny Varro, Vince Giordano and others. The strange instrument listed above is a hybrid trumpet/cornet.

(*) Blue Roof Blues: A Love Letter To New Orleans Arbors ARCD 19346 Kellso; Evan Christopher (cl); Matt Munisteri (g, bj); Danton Boller (b); Marion Felder (d). 5/06.

Unfortunately, Kellso's two earlier CDs on Arbors, Chapter One and Chapter Two: The Plot Thickens, are currently out of print on CD; though try iTunes. The most recent one is a tribute to his beloved New Orleans in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina. Easy to be cynical about such projects, but Kellso is no bandwagon jumper. This is the real thing, hot, swinging jazz with a thoroughly authentic quality. A couple of nice originals, including the long title-blues, but 'Weary Blues', 'Hindustan' and 'Bye-Ya' are the top picks; the Monk tune receives its strangest-ever reading, complete with banjo solo.

Wynton Kelly (1931–71)

PIANO

Born in Jamaica. He worked extensively in hard bop and with Miles Davis, his playing always rooted in the blues.

 Complete Blue Note Sessions Jazz Factory JFCD 22852 Kelly; Oscar Pettiford, Franklin Skeete (b); Lee Abrams (d). 7 & 8/51.
 First Sessions: A Proper Introduction Proper 2037 As above. 51.
 Wynton Kelly – Piano Original Jazz Classics OJC 401 Kelly; Kenny Burrell (g); Paul Chambers (b); Philly Joe Jones (d). 1/58.

Kelly wasn't the most obvious replacement for Bill Evans and Red Garland in the Miles Davis group, but he had a lyrical simplicity and uncomplicated touch that appealed enormously to the trumpeter, who hired him in 1959; Kelly played on only one track on the classic Kind Of Blue, but 'Freddie Freeloader' is enough to show what distinguished him from Evans's more earnestly romantic style. The early stuff is still callow and at times Kelly is overpowered by Pettiford's forceful bass-playing, but there's enough good music to suggest that something bigger wasn't far away. It pays off in the next recording. Seven years on, Piano is a full-voiced quartet that makes full use of Burrell's boppish grace.

 Kelly Blue Original Jazz Classics OJC 033 Kelly; Nat Adderley (c); Bobby Jaspar (f); Benny Golson (ts); Paul Chambers (b); Jimmy Cobb (d). 2 & 3/59.

The gentle but dynamic bounce to his chording comes to the fore on the marvellous Kelly Blue (which also reunites the Kind Of Blue rhythm section). On the title-track and 'Keep It Moving', the addition of Adderley and Jaspar makes perfect sense, but Benny Golson's robust contributions tend to unbalance the delicate strength of Kelly's arrangements. The trio cuts are far superior.

 Kelly Great Vee Jay 003 Kelly; Lee Morgan (t); Wayne Shorter (ts); Paul Chambers (b); Philly Joe Jones (d). 60.
(*) Kelly At Midnite Vee Jay 006 As above, except omit Morgan, Shorter. 60.
 Wynton Kelly! /  Someday My Prince Will Come Vee Jay 011 / Collectables 714 Kelly; Paul Chambers, Sam Jones (b); Jimmy Cobb (d). 61; 10/61.
 1931–1971 Collectables 7168 As above, except add Lee Morgan (t); Wayne Shorter (ts); Philly Joe Jones (d). 60, 10/61.
 Pot Luck Charly-Snapper As above, except add George Coleman (ts); Ron McClure (b). 59–61, 68.

A Bill Evans influence creeps into Kelly's playing at this time, and it is possible also to hear echoes from the market dominance of Ahmad Jamal, who was being talked up by Miles Davis at every available opportunity. The three Vee Jays are good, strong albums, though the hard-bop horns sit uneasily with the leader's conception. The 1961 session with Jones, Cobb and Chambers is now available on Collectables and very good it is, too, with 'Wrinkles' featuring the two hornmen; five bonus tracks.

 It's All Right! Verve 557750-2 Kelly; Kenny Burrell (g); Paul Chambers (b); Jimmy Cobb (d); Candido Camero (perc); Tommy Rey Caribe Street Band. 3/64.
(*) Full View Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 912 Kelly; Ron McClure (b); Jimmy Cobb (d). 66.

Leaving in some studio noise on It's All Right! adds a touch of atmosphere but doesn't add much to the musical presence, though the musicianship is beyond question and will probably appeal to some far more than the rougher sound of the earlier date.

Ron McClure replaced Paul Chambers in 1966 and brought an immediate new dimension. Full View is excellent, an eclectic mix of styles and genres, with a much more balanced feel to the trio, not just piano and rhythm. Cobb is an asset, too, with a relaxed, springy pulse and the ability to cut in behind the melody line with near-instantaneous response figures.

 Complete Live At The Half Note /  Smokin' At The Half Note Lone Hill Jazz LHJ0181 / Verve 829 578 2 Kelly; Wes Montgomery (g); Paul Chambers (b); Jimmy Cobb (d). 6–9/65.

A valuable addition to the live picture and intriguing to hear Kelly's octave playing alongside Wes's. These aren't wonderfully recorded dates, but their documentary significance outweighs a few technical quibbles and the mostly mid-paced-to-slow material suits both of the featured guys very well indeed.

(*) Live At The Left Bank Jazz Society 1967 /  Interpretations Fresh Sound 1031 2CD / Vee Jay 30039 Kelly; Hank Mobley (ts); Cecil McBee (b); Jimmy Cobb (d). 11/67.
(*) Live At The Left Bank Jazz Society 1968 /  In Concert Fresh Sound 1032 2CD / Collectables 7141 Kelly; George Coleman (ts); Ron McClure (b); Jimmy Cobb (d). 9/68.

Rather scruffily recorded, these are valuable glimpses of Kelly at work with two distinguished guests. While hardcore hard-boppers will be eager to hear both Mobley and Coleman – rare instances of live sessions by both men in this period – the music's at least as interesting for Kelly himself. Obliged to solo at greater length than on his studio dates, he never does anything startling, but over many choruses the merits of his bright, swinging, communicative style refuse to fade – perhaps remarkable for a man who once said, 'I'd just like to get a groove going and never solo.' Mobley is more unbuttoned than he is on many of his studio dates, while Big George simply piles through his solos – their set starts with marathon versions of 'Unit 7' and 'Surrey With The Fringe On Top'.

The Collectables issue – just two long tracks: Grofé's 'On The Trail' and a superb 'On A Clear Day' – were released on Vee Jay before disappearing again. They fill out the picture nicely and the disc should be easy enough to find.

 Last Trio Session Delmark 441 Kelly; Paul Chambers (b); Jimmy Cobb (d). 8/68.

This had been a long-standing unit since leaving Miles Davis and spending a further tenure as Wes Montgomery's rhythm section. As a curtain-call, it's deeply disappointing and is rendered all the more poignant by the early death of Paul Chambers (just five months after these cuts were made) and then of Kelly. The choice of material is suspect. The Doors' 'Light My Fire' isn't a comfortable theme for a trio of this sensitivity, though the version of Aretha's 'Say A Little Prayer For Me' is very affecting. Chambers is in good if slightly detached form, and Jimmy Cobb rarely slipped below standard.

Kelly's death, still on the wrong side of 40, robbed jazz of one of its most inventive and hard-working figures. A British reviewer recently referred to him as simultaneously underrated and overrated. It sounds perverse, but it makes the point.

Also, in brief:

() With Joe Henderson: Complete Recordings Lone Hill Jazz LHJ10142. 4/68.
These started life as Joe Henderson records, Four! and Straight, No Chaser. They do, however, add to Kelly's formidable live Maryland discography.

(*) Complete Vee Jay Studio Recordings Lone Hill Jazz LHJ10296 2CD. 60–67.
Nice option for anyone who doesn't have the separate CDs.

The Ken Colyer Trust Band

GROUP

Formed in honour of 'The Guvnor', the group has a fluid personnel which plays in the spirit of Colyer's kind of diehard trad.

 It's All Down To You P.E.K. Sound PKCD-220 Allen Beechey (c, v); Len Baldwin (tb); Alan Robinson (cl); Pete Morcom (bj); Mickey Ashman (b); Malc Murphy (d, v). 3/03.
The KCTB have made a number of records in the past, but this one was compiled from the wish-lists of various fans and features youth and experience, with young hothead Beechey lining up alongside veterans Ashman, Murphy and the rest. Colyer's mordant shadow is never far away, though, and the group get close to the signature trudge of a kosher Colyer group. Beechey even sounds a little like the old man when he takes a vocal on 'Postman's Lament'. 'Nobody Knows The Trouble I've Seen' is very slow and generously done. There is an almost shocking departure, though, in 'Sim', which comes from the Portuguese fado tradition(!). Recorded with plenty of atmosphere at The Bull's Head in Barnes, though not with an audience present.

Stacey Kent (born 1968)

VOICE

Kent is a New Yorker who came to London and studied at the Guildhall School. She is an unapologetic mainstreamer in terms of material and approach.

 Close Your Eyes Candid CCD 79737 Kent; Jim Tomlinson (ts); David Newton (p); Colin Oxley (g); Andy Cleyndert (b); Steve Brown (d). 11/96.
(*) The Tender Trap Candid CCD 79751 As above, except omit Cleyndert, Brown; add Dave Green (b); Jeff Hamilton (d). 2/98.
(*) Let Yourself Go Candid CCD 79764 As above, except omit Green, Hamilton; add Simon Thorpe (b); Steve Brown (d). 7/99.
 Dreamsville /  In Love Again Candid CCD 79775 / 797786 Kent; Jim Tomlinson (ts); David Newton (p); Colin Oxley (g); Simon Thorpe (b); Jesper Kviberg (d). 6/00; 7–9/01.
 The Boy Next Door Candid CCD 70797 Kent; Jim Tomlinson (sax, v); David Newton (ky, v); Colin Oxley (g); Dave Chamberlain (b); Matt Home (d); Curtis Schwarz (v). 2/03.
Kent's curiously lean voice and unmannered phrasing have become addictive to British audiences, and these neatly tailored records are a fine calling-card for her work. There's hardly a song on any of these records which is less than familiar from the American songbook – and this may discourage collectors familiar with the classic vocalists – but at least she makes no self-conscious attempt at crossing over into pop material. The band, directed largely by saxophonist Tomlinson, is absolutely assured and glances off and around the singer's vocals. The third record is dedicated to music associated with Fred Astaire and is arguably the pick of the three, although both Close Your Eyes, with its sexy-samba title-track, and The Tender Trap, a graceful smooch record of a high order, have had a profusion of admirers.

Problem is, the singer has simply repeated the formula across each subsequent record, and given her temperate approach they've taken on a soundalike quality. Next came one record of dreamy ballads and one of Richard Rodgers music, and, since Kent is not a singer to offer any kind of surprise, the results are entirely satisfactory to her followers and will do little for anyone else. Not much change to talk about with The Boy Next Door, but this one really only just scrapes its three stars: some of these song-choices, supposedly by Kent's musical heroes, will make the uncommitted wince, such as 'What The World Needs Now' and James Taylor's unlistenable 'You've Got A Friend'.

 Breakfast On The Morning Tram Blue Note 01611 Kent; Jim Tomlinson (ss, as, ts, f); Graham Harvey (p); John Parricelli (g); Dave Chamberlain (b); Matt Skelton (d, perc). 3–4/07.
At least here there's some effort to widen the remit and attempt something original. Kent, Tomlinson and novelist Kazuo Ishiguro collaborate on a group of songs, but while the title-track has a curious charm, the opening 'Ice Hotel' sounds like a retread of that old saw – one that Ishiguro is obsessed with – about the British inability to unlock passion. A couple of Gainsbourg songs add colour, but she hardly lifts them, and 'Hard Hearted Hannah' again exposes her frailties cruelly. Tomlinson is OK, but you wouldn't pick him out of a crowd.

Stan Kenton (1911–79)

PIANO, VOICE, BANDLEADER

Born in Wichita but raised in California, he learned piano and toured with bands as a teenager. Formed his own band in 1940; he had a yen to experiment and tried to create a 'progressive jazz'. Ran the 40-strong Innovations Orchestra in the early '50s, with strings, but gradually reverted to more conventional big-band music, with a couple of exceptions. Often dismissed as pretentious, but his orchestra and their records still have a huge following.

 Stan Kenton 1941–1944 Classics 828 Kenton; Frank Beach, Chico Alvarez, Earl Collier, Ray Borden, John Carroll, Buddy Childers, Karl George, Dick Morse, Mel Green, Gene Roland (t); Harry Forbes, Dick Cole, George Faye, Bart Varsalona, Bill Atkinson, Freddie Zito, Milt Kabak, Lory Aaron (tb); Jack Ordean, Ted Romersea, Eddie Meyers, Art Pepper, Boots Mussulli, Al Harding, Bill Lahey, Chester Ball (as); Red Dorris (ts, v); Maurice Beeson, Dave Matthews, Stan Getz, Emmett Carls (ts); Bob Gioga (bs); Bob Ahern, Ralph Leslie (g); Buddy Hayes, Clyde Singleton, Gene Englund, Bob Kesterson (b); Chauncey Farre, Jesse Price, John S. Bock, Joe Vernon (d); Anita O'Day, Gene Howard (v). 11/40–12/44.

The further away the Kenton era gets, the more prodigious the outpourings of Kenton material. Yet while the number of airshot and semi-official concert CDs seems to increase all the time, some of his own Creative World vinyl dics were only reappearing on CD as we went to press: more next time. With his penchant for symphonic uproar, grandiose conception and a demanding menu, his discography is a curious achievement. Given the 'modernist' tag which stuck to him, it's odd how quaint some of it now seems. Kenton seemed to believe in volume, power, weight, noise. Much of the orchestra's output seems to derive from half-assimilated ideas of 20th-century orchestral composition, and it always sat uneasily next to more familiar notions of jazz scoring. Later editions of the band pilfered from rock and soul idioms, with another batch of mixed results, though less mixed than Woody Herman's similar ventures. His best music still swung mightily, was brilliantly played, and went to exhilarating extremes of both musicianship and showmanship.

The very early sessions for Decca and Capitol are collected on the Classics disc. 'Artistry In Rhythm', Kenton's theme, turns up in the fourth session, but otherwise these are often run-of-the-mill swing arrangements, and the main point of interest is the early vocal features for Anita O'Day.

 On AFRS 1944–1945 Status DSTS 1019 Kenton; Buddy Childers, Ray Wetzel, John Anderson, Russ Burgher, Bob Lymperis, John Carroll, Karl George, Gene Roland, Mel Green, Dick Morse (t); Harry Forbes, Freddie Zito, Milt Kabak, Jimmy Simms (tb); Bart Varsalona (btb); Bob Lively, Boots Mussulli, Al Anthony, Eddie Meyers, Chet Ball (as); Stan Getz, Dave Matthews, Emmett Carls, Vido Musso, Bob Cooper (ts); Bob Gioga (bs); Bob Ahern (g); Eddie Safranski, Bob Kesterson, Gene Englund (b); Jesse Price, Ralph Collier, Jim Falzone (d); June Christy, Gene Howard, Anita O'Day (v). 5/44–11/45.

 The Transcription Performances 1945–1946 Hep 47 Kenton; Buddy Childers, Ray Wetzel, John Anderson, Russ Burgher, Bob Lymperis, Chico Alvarez, Ken Hanna (t); Freddie Zito, Jimmy Simms, Ray Klein, Milt Kabak, Kai Winding, Miff Sines (tb); Bart Varsalona (btb); Al Anthony, Boots Mussulli (as); Vido Musso, Bob Cooper (ts); Bob Gioga (bs); Bob Ahern (g); Eddie Safranski (b); Ralph Collier, Shelly Manne (d); June Christy (v). 11/45–7/46.

Not so different from the studio dates, although here and there on these transcriptions the band stretches out a little. Musso's tenor treatment of 'Body And Soul', for instance, features an extended coda on the version on Status, whereas it's briefer and sharper on the Hep disc – though both times he ends it with the Hawkins tag. The earlier tracks on Status mean that O'Day is still present for a couple of features and there's a couple of interesting rarities – 'Conversin' With The Brain', for one. Sound on the Hep disc is superior; the Status transfers tend to sound their age rather more.

 Stan Kenton 1945 / (*) Stan Kenton 1946 Classics 898 / 949 Basically similar to above discs. 12/44–5/45; 1–8/46.

Anita O'Day left the band at the beginning of 1945 (her last two features open the 1945 disc) and the introduction of June Christy brought a sweeter, brighter sound to Kenton's palette. The other key import was arranger Pete Rugolo, who charted several staples and hits for Kenton's book. Classics 898 has its share of novelties, which Kenton himself probably detested, such as 'Shoo Fly Pie And Apple Pan Dowdy', and Christy's big hit, 'Just A-Sittin' And A-Rockin''. More typical is the protoype of 'Opus In Pastels' (rejected from a May 1945 date and not cut again until August 1946) and six titles from a hard-hitting V-Disc session. Classics 949 sees Rugolo flexing his muscles and the debut of several Kenton classics: 'Intermission Riff', 'Artistry In Boogie', 'Artistry In Bolero' and the brooding 'Concerto To End All Concertos', a good deal more reflective in its original incarnation than in some subsequent versions. It ends on the accepted version of 'Opus In Pastels'.

(*) Stan Kenton 1947 Classics 1011 Kenton; Buddy Childers, Ray Wetzel, Chico Alvarez, John Anderson, Ken Hanna, Al Porcino (t); Kai Winding, Skip Layton, Milt Bernhart, Harry Forbes, Bart Varsalona, Eddie Bert (tb); Eddie Meyers, Boots Mussulli, George Weidler, Frank Pappalardo (as); Red Doris, Bob Cooper, Vido Musso, Warner Weidler (ts); Bob Gioga (bs); Bob Ahern, Laurindo Almeida (g); Eddie Safranski (b); Shelly Manne (d); Jack Costanzo (perc); June Christy, Don McLeod, The Pastels (v). 2–9/47.

 Stan Kenton 1947 Vol. 2 Classics 1039 As above, except omit Winding, Layton, Meyers, Mussulli, Doris, Musso, Ahern, McLeod, The Pastels; add Dizzy Gillespie (t); Bill Harris (tb); Buddy DeFranco (cl); Art Pepper (as); Flip Phillips (ts); Nat Cole (p); Billy Bauer (g); Buddy Rich (d); Carlos Vidal, Machito (perc). 9–12/47.

Kenton was busy in the studios in 1947 and there are 13 sessions for Capitol spread across these two discs. There are many surprising things in what was an adventurous period for the band. Rugolo's 'Machito' is an astonishing explosion. 'Collaboration' (here in both the rejected and issued versions), the two-part 'Rhythm Incorporated', George Weidler's virtuoso turn on 'Elegy For Alto', Kenton's own curiously effective playing on 'How Am I To Know' and a couple of gorgeous Christy vocals make Classics 1011 a priority for Kentonians. Classics 1039 includes the issued version of Rugolo's 'Monotony' (Charlie Parker: 'Very weird, marvellous idea!'), a fine Pepper solo in 'Unison Riff', Christy at her best in 'I Told Ya I Love Ya, Now Get Out' and 'Lonely Woman', several more full-on Rugolo scores and the kitsch masterpiece that is 'The Peanut Vendor'. Pretty good sound throughout. The Metronome All Stars sit in on one track, which accounts for the presence of the starry names listed in the personnel.

* The Innovations Orchestra Capitol 59965-2 2CD Kenton; Buddy Childers, Maynard Ferguson, Shorty Rogers, Chico Alvarez, Don Paladino, Al Porcino, John Howell, Conte Candoli, Stu Williamson, John Coppola (t); Milt Bernhart, Harry Betts, Bob Fitzpatrick, Bill Russo, Eddie Bert, Dick Kenney (tb); Bart Varsalona, Clyde Brown, George Roberts (btb); John Graas, Lloyd Otto, George Price (frhn); Gene Englund (tba); Bud Shank, Art Pepper, Bob Cooper, Bart Caldarell, Bob Gioga, Bud Shank (reeds); Laurindo Almeida, Ralph Blaze (g); Don Bagley, Abe Luboff (b); Shelly Manne (d); Carlos Vidal, Ivan Lopez, Stenio Orozo, Jose Oliveira, Jack Costanzo (perc); strings. 2/50–10/51.

 Carnegie Hall – October '51 /  Stan Kenton 1950 Hep CD 68 / Classics 1185 Similar to above. 10/51; 2/50.

The Capitol disc is all of the LPs Innovations In Modern Music and Stan Kenton Presents, along with 14 extra tracks, offering a detailed look at Kenton's fine 1950–51 orchestra. With the swing era gone, and bebop acclimatizing jazz to more oblique areas of expression, there was no need for Kenton to be shy about the kind of scores he offered here; sifted with strings, 'Mirage', 'Conflict', 'Solitaire' and 'Soliloquy' are intriguing little tone-poems which, for all their occasionally arch details and overreaching style, work well enough to survive the years. There are one of Christy's finest vocals in 'Lonesome Road'; smart scores by Shorty Rogers like 'Jolly Rogers' and 'Round Robin'; Bob Graettinger's eerie 'House Of Strings'; skilful features for Manne, Pepper, Rogers and Ferguson; Bill Russo's lovely 'Ennui', one of four live tracks used to round off the second disc; and the feel of a very considerable orchestra entering its most challenging period, with soloists befitting an important band. Along with City Of Glass, this is surely Kenton's most valuable CD entry. Classics 1185 covers the first half of the same material and, while this may appeal to those following the label's sequential offerings, it obviously takes second place to the parent-label edition.

The Hep transcription of a couple of Carnegie Hall concerts emerges as an interesting pendant to the studio sessions. There are the inevitable sonic shortcomings compared to the Capitol dates, and much of it is no more than secondary versions of the studio sides, but there's a movement from 'City Of Glass' and the soloists – Pepper, Candoli, Cooper, Betts – make their mark.

(*) Stan Kenton 1950–1951 Classics 1255 Kenton; Buddy Childers, Maynard Ferguson, Shorty Rogers, Chico Alvarez, Don Paladino, Jimmy Salko, Al Porcino, John Howell, Ray Wetzel (t); Milt Bernhart, Harry Betts, Bob Fitzpatrick, Bill Russo, Herbie Harper, Eddie Bert, Dick Kenney (tb); Clyde Crown, John Halliburton, Bart Varsalona (btb); John Graas, Lloyd Otto (frhn); Bud Shank (as, f); Art Pepper (as, cl); Bob Cooper (ts, ob, cor); Bart Calderell (ts, bsn); Vido Musso (ts); Bob Gioga (bs, bcl); Nat Cole (p, v); Laurindo Almeida, Ralph Blaze (g); Gene Englund (tba); Don Bagley (b); Shelly Manne (d); June Christy (v); strings. 5/50–3/51.

(*) Stan Kenton 1951 Classics 1292 As above, except omit Paladino, Porcino, Salko, Wetzel, Harper, Bert, Crown, Varsalona, Musso, Cole, Almeida, Englund; add Conte Candoli, Stu Williamson, John Coppola (t), George Roberts (tb), Paul Wiegand (btb), Stan Fletcher (tba), Abe Luboff (b), Jay Johnson (v). 3–10/51.

Some measure of Kenton's range can be gleaned from the first tracks on Classics 1255, which start with the Innovations band tackling five extraordinary charts – before Nat Cole sits in with a version of 'Orange Coloured Sky'. They carry on through most of the rest of the Innovations In Modern Music material. Classics 1292 is entirely different, again, and starts with the hokum of 'Tortillas And Beans', before such vintage pieces as Bob Cooper's feature 'Coop's Solo', three splendid settings for June Christy, solid Capitol singles such as 'Dynaflow' and 'Night Watch', and finally four tracks from a live session by the Innovations In Modern Music Orchestra, convened again.

(*) New Concepts Of Artistry In Rhythm Capitol 92865-2 Kenton; Conte Candoli, Buddy Childers, Maynard Ferguson, Don Dennis, Ruben McFall (t); Bob Fitzpatrick, Keith Moon, Frank Rosolino, Bill Russo (tb); George Roberts (btb); Lee Konitz, Vinnie Dean (as); Richie Kamuca, Bill Holman (ts); Bob Gioga (bs); Sal Salvador (g); Don Bagley (b); Stan Levey (d); Derek Walton (perc); Kay Brown (v). 9/52.

Laden with top-flight musicians, this was another of Kenton's best bands. There is one arrangement by Bill Holman – the intriguing 'Invention For Guitar And Trumpet' – but most of the scores were penned by Bill Russo, including the glorious kitsch of the opening 'Prologue: This Is An Orchestra!', a kind of Young Person's Guide with Kenton himself narrating and characterizing each member of the band (considering the personalities he's describing, it's both funny and oddly moving at this distance, especially when he calls Frank Rosolino – who would later take his own life – 'this fellow who has few if any moody moments'). The brass section is top-heavy and blows all else before it, but the rhythm section swings hard, and there are some wonderful interjections on almost every piece by the major soloists, especially Salvador on 'Invention', Konitz on 'Young Blood' and 'My Lady', and Rosolino on 'Swing House'.

* Easy Go Capitol 24553-2 As appropriate discs above. 8/50–3/52.

A smartly compiled set which covers 20 instrumentals, all set down between the first Innovations In Modern Music tour and the New Concepts band of 1952, with the orchestra in its most swinging, straight-ahead mode. There are charts from Shorty Rogers, Pete Rugolo, Gene Roland, Johnny Richards and Bill Russo, and Stan's own hand is immediately apparent in the relaxed swing of the opening 'Easy Go'.

CORE COLLECTION

* City Of Glass

Capitol 832084-2 Similar to above discs. 12/47–5/53.

The 16 pieces arranged by Bob Graettinger which make up this CD number among the most exacting works Kenton was ever responsible for. Graettinger's two major pieces, 'City Of Glass' and 'This Modern World', are extraordinary works – Ellingtonian in their concentration on individuals within the band, yet using the bigger resources of the orchestra to create its own sound-world. All of his 14 originals create their own kind of jazz, and its suitability to Kenton's orchestra might almost be likened to Strayhorn's music for Ellington – except Graettinger was a more original thinker. Max Harrison's typically elegant sleeve-note supplies the fine context.

(*) 'Live' In Munich 1953 Sounds Of Yesteryear DSOIY 608 2CD Kenton; Buddy Childers, Conte Candoli, Don Dennis, Don Smith, Ziggy Minichiello (t); Bob Burgess, Frank Rosolino, Bill Russo, Keith Moon (tb); Bill Smiley (btb); Lee Konitz, Davey Schildkraut (as); Bill Holman, Zoot Sims (ts); Tony Ferina (bs); Barry Galbraith (g); Don Bagley (b); Stan Levey (d); June Christy (v). 9/53.

Kenton's European tour of 1953 was a sensation: British fans still talk about making the trip to Dublin to hear him (the MU ban prevented them from playing in London), and the band and their leader were all but mobbed everywhere they went. This concert from the Kongress-Saal Deutsches Museum gets a tumultuous reception and almost every piece is cheered to the echo. Packed with some of the best soloists he could ever boast, this was a vintage edition of Kenton's orchestra, and there are great moments for Konitz ('Lover Man') and Sims ('Zoot') and a sequence of features for Christy, by then working as a solo but persuaded back to join for this tour. Though the sound is clearly from an amateur tape, it survived in pretty good shape.

 Live At Palo Alto / (*) At Soldiers Club Fort Ord California Status DSTS 1036 / Status DSTST 1042 3CD Kenton; Al Porcino, Ed Leddy, Sam Noto, Stu Williamson, Bob Clark (t); Bob Fitzpatrick, Gus Chappell, Kent Larsen, Ted Dechter (tb); Don Kelly (btb); Lennie Niehaus, Charlie Mariano (as); Bill Perkins, Dave Van Kriedt (ts); Don Davidson (bs); Ralph Blaze (g); Max Bennett (b); Mel Lewis (d); Ann Richards (v). 5/55.

A completely new line-up. Bill Holman's charts are driving the book at this point, although there's still the odd piece from Mulligan and Russo – and Kenton, whose 'Street Of Dreams' score is a highlight. The band sound in very good form at this dance at The Surf Club, Stanford University, and the sound is very clear, although some soloists seem to be badly off-mic at times. Among the soloists, a perhaps surprise standout is Lennie Niehaus. Status have also unearthed three discs' worth of music from a concert played at Fort Ord in the same month. With 43 pieces played, it's a comprehensive picture of the band at this period.

 At Ernst-Merck-Halle, Hamburg, Germany Sounds Of Yesteryear DSOD622 2CD Kenton; Sam Noto, Vinnie Tanno, Lee Katzman, Phil Gilbert (t); Bob Fitzpatrick, Kent Larsen, Carl Fontana (tb); Don Kelly (btb); Irving Rosenthal, Fred Fox (frhn); Lennie Niehaus (as); Bill Perkins, Don Rendell (ts); Harry Klein (bs); Ralph Blaze (g); Jay McAllister (tba); Curtis Counce (b); Mel Lewis (d). 4/56.

A fascinating memento of Kenton's second European tour, given that the British Klein and Rendell are in the band, depping for two reed-players who had had to go home. Niehaus and Perkins take solo honours, although Holman's feature for Fontana, 'Carl', is a peach. Not the best sound in this series: Mel Lewis's bass drum sometimes overpowers every section.

(*) Kenton In Hi-Fi Capitol 84451-2 Kenton; Ed Leddy, Dennis Grillo, Lee Katzman, Phil Gilbert, Tom Slaney (t); Archie LeCocque, Kent Larsen, Jim Amlotte (tb); Ken Shroyer (btb); Irving Rosenthal, Joe Mariani (frhn); Lennie Niehaus (as); Bill Perkins, Richie Kamuca (ts); Pepper Adams (bs); Ralph Blaze (g); Jay McAllister (tba); Don Bagley (b); Mel Lewis (d). 2/56–7/58.

 Cuban Fire Capitol 96260-2 Kenton; Ed Leddy, Sam Noto, Phil Gilbert, Al Mattaliano, Bud Brisbois, Dalton Smith, Bob Rolfe, John Audino, Steve Hofsteter (t); Bob Fitzpatrick, Carl Fontana, Kent Larsen, Don Kelly, Dick Hyde, Ray Sikora (tb); Jim Amlotte, Bob Knight (btb); Dwight Carver, Joe Burnett, Bill Horan, Tom Wirtel, Gene Roland (mel); Gabe Baltazar, Lennie Niehaus (as); Bill Perkins, Lucky Thompson, Sam Donahue, Paul Renzi (ts); Wayne Dunstan (bs, bsx); Billy Root, Marvin Holladay (bs); Ralph Blaze (g); Jay McAllister, Albert Pollan (tba); Curtis Counce, Pete Chivily (b); Mel Lewis, Art Anton (d); Sol Gubin, George Gaber, Tommy Lopez, George Laguna, Roger Mozian, Maro Alvarez, George Acevedo (perc). 5/56–9/60.

The mid-'50s found Kenton somewhat in transition, from the more stylized West Coast touches of the early-'50s band to another kind of progressive-orchestral music which he had tried in the '40s, with mixed results. Live sessions were customarily a blend of straight-ahead swing variations on standards, the Afro-Cuban element and Kenton's penchant for bombast.

Kenton In Hi-Fi was a hit album for the bandleader and offered a reworking (almost Ellingtonian in intent) of many of his early successes, seeking the crisper definition of LP-era sound. If hardly a dramatic improvement or a startling revision, it reasserts the orchestra's clout on its staple themes. The CD is beefed up with three 1958 tracks. Cuban Fire chronicles the arrival of arranger Johnny Richards, who had been studying Latin rhythms and came up with a series of charts which incorporated a six-man percussion team. The results catch much of the undertow of explosive kitsch which Latin bands love, although how 'authentic' it is in other ways is harder to judge. The six later tracks, from 1960, document one of Kenton's so-called 'mellophonium' bands, with five men playing that instrument among what is incredibly a band with 16 brass. Much of it sounds like mood or movie music, taken at trudging tempos.

 Stompin' At Newport Pablo 5312-2 Kenton; Ed Leddy, Sam Noto, Billy Catalano, Lee Katzman, Phil Gilbert (t); Kent Larsen, Archie LeCocque, Don Reed, Jim Amlotte (tb); Kenny Shroyer (btb); Lennie Niehaus, Bill Perkins, Bill Robinson, Wayne Dunstan, Steve Perlow (reeds); Red Kelly (b); Jerry McKenzie (d). 7/57.

The Newport set comes from a year in which Norman Granz ran the event and insisted on handling all the recording, which meant that sets by people who weren't his artists never got released. Its belated appearance is welcome, though the sleeve-note suggestion that it's in much superior sound to the likes of the Status material simply isn't true. In the end, it's no more than a typical Kenton festival set.

 Live From The Las Vegas Tropicana Capitol 35245-2 Kenton; Frank Huggins, Bud Brisbois, Jack Sheldon, Joe Burnett, Roger Middleton (t); Archie LeCocque, Kent Larsen, Jim Amlotte (tb); Bob Olsen, Bill Smiley (btb); Lennie Niehaus (as); Richie Kamuca, Bill Trujillo (ts); Billy Root, Sture Swenson (bs); Red Kelly (b); Jerry McKenzie (d). 2/59.

Stan opens with a self-deprecating announcement to the effect that they're going to try and make a record that sells. Admittedly, there's little from his obviously progressive side to the programme: mostly standards and a few Gene Roland originals, and the band are relatively quiescent, but the playing is up to scratch and a few nice routines, like the piano/bass embellishments on 'Bernie's Tune', give it plenty of appeal.

(*) Standards In Silhouette Capitol 94503-2 Kenton; Bud Brisbois, Clyde Reasinger, Dalton Smith, Bill Chase, Rolf Ericson, Roger Middleton (t); Archie LeCocque, Don Sebesky, Kent Larsen (tb); Jim Amlotte, Bob Knight (btb); Charlie Mariano (as); Bill Trujillo, John Bonnie (ts); Jack Nimitz, Marvin Holladay (bs); Pete Chivily (b); Jimmy Campbell (d); Mike Pacheco (perc). 9/59.

 Adventures In Blues Capitol 20089-2 Kenton; Dalton Smith, Marvin Stamm, Bud Brisbois, Bob Rolfe, Bob Behrendt, Sam Noto, Steve Huffsteter, Norman Baltazar (t); Bob Fitzpatrick, Dee Barton, Bud Parker, Jack Spurlock, Dick Hyde, Ray Sikora (tb); Jim Amlotte, Ray Knight, Dave Wheeler (btb); Gene Roland (mel, ss); Dwight Carver, Joe Burnett, Bill Horan, Tom Wirtel, Keith La Motte, Carl Saunders, Ray Starling (mel); Gabe Baltazar (as); Buddy Arnold, Paul Renzi, Sam Donahue (ts); Marvin Holladay, Allan Beutler (bs); Wayne Dunstan (bsx); Albert Pollan (tba); Pat Senatore, Red Mitchell, Pete Chivily (b); Jerry McKenzie, Art Anton (d). 9/60–12/61.

 Adventures In Jazz Capitol 21222-2 As above, except omit Noto, Huffsteter, Hyde, Sikora, Knight, Burnett, Horan, Wirtel, Pollan, Chivily, Anton; add Joel Kay (bsx). 7–12/61.

Standards In Silhouette is a modest gem of the period. The charts were by the 22-year-old Bill Mathieu, and they fashion 'concert' settings for nine ballads, from 'Little Girl Blue' (which is barely recognizable) to John Lewis's 'Django', which survives Kentonization mainly through a beautiful contribution from Charlie Mariano. There are some other good soloists – LeCocque in 'Ill Wind', Roger Middleton on 'The Thrill Is Gone'. A long haul, but track by track an accomplished and handsome big-band record.

The two Adventures records have their moments. The Blues set was arranged by Gene Roland, who seldom bothers to tax the resources of this over-resourced band, although he does what he can to vary the sonorities coming out of this brass-heavy orchestra. There were fewer interesting soloists in the band at this point, though, and both this and Jazz could use a maverick spirit to cut loose here and there.

 Together Sounds Of Yesteryear DSOY 601 Kenton; Marvin Stamm, Steve Huffsteter, Bob Rolfe, Bud Brisbois, Dalton Smith (t); Gene Roland (mel); Dick Hyde, Jack Redmond, Ray Sikora (tb); Jim Amlotte, Bob Knight (btb); Gabe Baltazar (as); Sam Donahue, Sam Renzi (ts); Marvin Holladay, Wayne Dunstan

(bs); Pete Chivily (b); Jerry Mackenzie (d); George Acevedo (perc); June Christy (v). 60.
A reunion of Stan and June, the occasion being another four National Guard transcription programmes. Not too many surprises in the programme – 'Opus In Chartreuse' is about the only unusual score – but June sounds fine and the sound is good enough.

(*) Mellophonium Moods Status STCD 106 Kenton; Dalton Smith, Marvin Stamm, Bob Behrendt, Keith La Motte, Bob Rolfe (t); Gene Roland, Dave Wheeler (btb, tba); Ray Starling, Dwight Carver, Carl Saunders (mel); Bob Fitzpatrick, Dee Barton, Bud Parker (tb); Jim Amlotte (btb); Gabe Baltazar (as); Charlie Mariano, Ray Florian (ts); Allan Beutler (bs); Joel Kaye (bsx); Val Kolar (b); Jerry McKenzie (d). 3/62.
() 1962 Sounds Of Yesteryear DSOY 603 As above except add Jean Turner (v). 5/62.
() At The Holiday Ballroom, Northbrook, Chicago /  More Mellophonium Moods Status DSTS1018 / 1010 As above, except omit Rolfe, Roland, Kolar, McKenzie; add Bill Briggs (t), Lou Gasca (mel), Tom Ringo (tb), Bucky Calabrese (b), Bill Blakkested (d), Jean Turner (v). 5/62; 8/62.
Kenton's 'Mellophonium' band took his fascination with brass to new lengths: there are 15 brass-players in both of these bands. The leader's verdict was that the band represented 'the New Era in Modern American Music', but it actually sounds like a beefier, more metallic edition of the old Kentonian machine. By this time, the winds of jazz fashion had little effect on the orchestra's direction. But he was still usually on the dinner-dance circuit, and all of these discs contain somewhat rueful admissions from the leader that they'll play something people can dance to, but he wouldn't mind if some people also wanted to listen. No false pride: this was a great, swinging band and, if Kenton had lost most of his best soloists, the features for Baltazar, Mariano and some of the brassmen are handled with great aplomb. The Mellophonium Moods set is the best one in terms of fidelity and, with a higher degree of original material, including a number of Kenton rarities, it's marginally the most interesting musically, too. 1962 is from Chicago's Holiday Inn: Jean Turner sings a couple of sexy vocals, and Stan, in a state of complete exasperation, plays a Twist in answer to several requests. More Mellophonium Moods doesn't quite have the hi-fi of the other one, but it still sounds pretty good, and there is some lovely playing: Ray Starling takes a perfectly poised solo on 'Misty', and 'Maria' is a resplendent treatment of Johnny Richards's arrangement. The comedy version of 'Tea For Two' is a drawback, though. The same band took to the boards at Northbrook, Chicago, and this time the sound is muzzier and the programme a little lacking in lift. Nevertheless, Status should be congratulated for unearthing so much by this edition of the band.

 Adventures In Time Capitol 55454-2 Kenton; Dalton Smith, Bob Behrendt, Marvin Stamm, Keith La Motte, Gary Slavo (t); Bob Fitzpatrick, Bud Parker, Tom Ringo (tb); Jim Amlotte (btb); Ray Starling, Dwight Carver, Lou Gasca, Joe Burnett (mel); Dave Wheeler (btb, tba); Gabe Baltazar (as); Don Menza, Ray Florian (ts); Allan Beutler (bs); Joel Kaye (bs, bsx); Bucky Calabrese (b); Dee Barton (d); Steve Dweck (perc). 9/62.
One of the studio entries by the Mellophonium band. The charts are all by Johnny Richards, neither the best nor the worst of Kenton's arranging clique. There's an awful lot of fff in the scoring and some of the crescendoes are apocalyptic, even by Kenton's standards. Soloists make their mark – Gabe Baltazar's alto in particular – but this isn't about the jazz improviser; it's about Kentonian hosannas.

 At Brant Inn 1963 Sounds Of Yesteryear DSOY 6018 Kenton; Gary Slavo, Ronnie Ossa, Ron Keller, Bob Behrendt, John Ecqart (t); Jiggs Whigham, Bob Curnow, (tb); Chris Swanson (vtb); Jim Amlotte, Dave Wheeler (btb); Tony Scodwell, Dick Martinez, Bob Faust, Bob Crull (mel); Gabe Baltazar (as); Steve Marcus, Ray Florian (ts); Archie Wheeler (bs); Joel Kaye (bsx, picc); John Worster (b); Dee Barton (d). 6/63.
Modern times are starting to creep into Stan's music here. Steve Marcus is the first tenorman who sounds as if he's a Coltrane follower, and even Jiggs Whigham is clearly not looking back to the '40s. Less than 40 minutes of music, the brass and reeds sound fine, but the piano sounds like an old upright.

 Stan Kenton Conducts The Los Angeles Neophonic Orchestra Capitol 94502-2 Kenton; Dalton Smith, Frank Higgins, Gary Barone, Ronnie Ossa, Olie Mitchell (t); Bob Fitzpatrick, Vern Friley, Gil Falco (tb); Jim Amlotte (btb); Vince DeRosa, Bill Hinshaw, John Cave, Richard Perissi, Arthur Maebe (frhn); Bud Shank, Bill Perkins, Bob Cooper, Don Lodice, John Lowe (reeds); Claude Williamson (p); Emil Richards (vib); Dennis Budimir (g); John Worster (b); Nick Ceroli (d); Frank Carlson (perc). 9/65.
The Neophonic Orchestra was permanently based in LA and used some of the mass of former Kentonians who'd gone on to regular studio work there. As it happened, this session was a mix of the regular men with old hands such as Shank, Cooper and Perkins. The music came from various hands, including Hugo Montenegro, Jimmy Knight and John Williams, but the only really interesting piece is the bonus track, Clare Fischer's 'Piece For Soft Brass, Woodwinds And Percussion'. The rest is standard if accomplished Kentonian grandiloquence. Excellent sound.

 Stan Kenton With The Danish Radio Big Band Storyville 101 8340 Kenton; Palle Mikkelborg, Idrees Sulieman, Allan Botschinsky, Palle Bolvig, Svend Ludvig (t); Torolf Molgaard, John Lind, Ole Kurt Jensen, Poul Kjaeldgaard, Steen Engelholt, Helmuth Hansen (tb); Preben Garnov, David Sternbach, Knud Sørensen , Per Larsen (frhn); Uffe Karskov (as, ts); Rolf Billberg, Erling Christensen (as); Bent Jaedig (ts); Bent Nielsen (bs); Ole Molin (g); Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen (b); Bjarne Rostvold (d); John Steffensen, Per Nielsen (perc). 3/66.
It's interesting to hear how the doughty men of the DRBB coped with some vintage Kenton scores with their distinguished guest leader at this 1966 Copenhagen concert. The music doesn't seem to have given them any real trouble and they even get through all of Johnny Richards's 'Cuban Fire Suite', but the brassy spark which an American orchestra would have brought to these charts is lacking to some extent.

 Clearwater '72 Hitchcock Media CD-0212 Kenton; Ray Brown, Mike Vax, Jay Saunders, Dennis Noday, Mike Snustead (t); Phil Herring, Fred Carter, Dick Shearer, Mike Jamieson, Mike Wallace (tb); Chuck Carter, Chris Galuman, Quin Davis, Richard Torres, Willie Maiden (reeds); John Worster (b); Jerry McKenzie (d); Ramón López (perc). 3/72.
() At The Pavilion, Hemel Hempstead /  Live At London Hilton 1973 Volumes I & II Status DTS1017 / 1005 / 1006 Kenton; Dennis Noday, Paul Adamson, Frank Minear, Mike Snustead, Robert Winiker (t); Dick Shearer, Harvey Coonin, Lloyd Spoon (tb); John Park (as); Chris Galuman (ts, f); Richard Torres, Willie Maiden (ts); Roy Reynolds (bs); John Worster (b); Peter Erskine (d); Ramón López (perc). 2/73.

 Live At Carthage College Volumes 1 & 2 Magic DAWE 69 / 70
Kenton; Mike Barrowman, Kevin Jordan, Glenn Stuart, John Harner, Mike Snustead (t); Dick Shearer, Lloyd Spoon, Brett Stamps (tb); Bill Hartman (btb); Mike Wallace (btb, tba); Terry Cooke (as); Richard Torres, Dick Wilkie (ts); Roy Reynolds, Rich Condit (bs); Kirby Stewart (b); Peter Erskine (d); Ramón López (perc). 2/74.

Like any bandleader working through this period, Kenton had to change and compromise to survive, and the orchestra he worked with through the '70s became as modish and subject to fads as any big-band survivor. But at least Kenton had always stood by his 'progressiveness' and, subject to trashy material and clockwork charts though many of the later records are, the orchestra is no less predictable or bombastic than, say, the Basie band in the same period. Kenton had no charmed team of soloists by now, but, as with the Buddy Rich band, he valued precision and overall effect, and all the current CDs have their virtues.

The Clearwater show from 1972 is in especially vivid sound and the surging power of the band on pieces such as 'A Step Beyond' and 'Ambivalence' is still impressive. The British concerts from February 1973 appear in good sound on their respective discs, but since the programme at Hemel Hempstead is largely duplicated on the Hilton show, which is spread across two discs (with a lot of chat, banter and introductions), only fanatics would consider getting both. Each is a decent set, though, with some of Kenton's most jazz-directed charts and Park, Winiker and Torres all taking good turns – Park's feature on 'Street Of Dreams' at the Hilton is a gem. The Carthage College date also sounds full and vivid, with occasional bass-heaviness. The programme is a typically catholic mixture, with 'Peanut Vendor' sitting next to 'MacArthur Park'.

 Live At Sunset Ridge Country Club, Chicago Magic DAWE 59
Kenton; Jay Sollenberger, Dave Kennedy, Steve Campos, Tim Hagans, Joe Casano (t); Dick Shearer, Dave Keim, Mike Egan (tb); Allan Morrisey (btb); Doug Purviance (btb, tba); Terry Layne (as); Roy Reynolds, Dan Salmasian (ts); Greg Smith, Alan Yankee (bs); John Worster (b); Gary Hobbs (d); Ramón López (perc). 5/76.

() Live In Cologne 1976 Volumes 1 & 2 / (*) Kenton Plays Poland /  Live In Europe Magic DAWE 64 / 65 / Yesteryear DSOY 648 / Vocalion CDLF 8125 As above, except omit Keim, Salmasian, Smith; add Jeff Uusitalo (tb); Teddy Andersen (ts); Greg Metcalf (bs). 9/76.

Some concerts from towards the end of the band's life. Kenton is still reprising his remarks about music for dancing versus music for listening at the start of the Chicago dance date, but he's humorous enough about it, and the band are very full and strong (though the sound-mix shoves Worster to the very front). Terry Layne sounds good on alto, and though the tempos are easy-going, they don't get slack. The Cologne date is more ambitious, though not necessarily more enjoyable: sound is a bit less palatable, and 'Intermission Riff' on the first disc is something of a never-ending story, but the band sound fit and Kenton enjoys himself, even though his own health was in serious decline. The Poland set begins, cheekily enough, with a version of 'Take The "A" Train', and the other choices – 'Stompin' At The Savoy', 'Send In The Clowns' and some average originals – show how awkward it was finding a balance of material. Rather boxy sound and Stan's piano could have used some attention. The Vocalion set, cut in Holland only three days later, is in superior fidelity, although the overall merit of the music is about the same.

 Live At Newport 1959 – 1963 – 1971 Jasmine JASBOX 1 3CD As various discs above. 7/59–7/71.

Three editions of the Kenton band at three different Newport Festivals. Stan was too ill to attend his own set at the ill-fated 1971 festival, and it does seem to be lacking in sparkle – or, at least, the old man's authority. The earlier sets are decent enough representations. As a bargain-box of live Kenton, a fair enough deal.

(*) Live Hits And Rarities Status DSTS 1041 As various Status discs above. 52–76.

It seems fitting to end this entry with a compilation of what the title says, a track each from the numerous live releases on Dave Kay's Status label, which did much to keep Kenton's music out there in the '80s and '90s. Doubtless dedicated Kentonites will have it all, but it makes for one of the very few long sweeps through the bandleader's career, and there is a bonus version of the previously unreleased 1976 version of 'Mack The Knife'.

A few words to close: Magic and Status CDs have an in-and-out existence, pressed in limited numbers, possibly as demand dictates – be patient; a good deal of later material from Creative World arrived right on press time and, as mentioned above, will be reviewed in due course. The essential picture, though, remains the same, even if Kenton fans seem to have an insatiable jones for product.

Also, in brief:

() Balboa Bash / () Etude For Saxophones / () Eager Beaver / (*) Painted Rhythm Naxos Jazz Legends 8.120517 / 8.120518 / 8.120703 / 8.120714. 41–42; 41–42; 12/44; 12/44–12/45.
Transcriptions sets from the early '40s, in some cases prehistoric Kenton. Budget buys for specialists.

() On The Air /  One Night Stand Status DSTS 1022 / Candid Choice CHCD 71051. 3/51; 7/52.
Some good music in these airshots from shows in Hollywood, Catalina Island and Bristol, Connecticut. The second disc is from the Hollywood Palladium.

() Let's Go To Town Magic DAWE 108. 9/53.
Four short sets from a radio recruitment show for the National Guard.

 Live At The Patio Gardens Ballroom Vol. 1 / () ... Vol. 2 / () ... Vol. 3 Magic DAWE 56/7/8. 8/57.
Typical Kenton sets for a dancing audience, which means less ambitious programmes, many standards, brief interpretations, careful solos.

 The Ballad Style Of Stan Kenton Capitol 56688-2. 5–6/58.
Kenton Plays Pretty.

 Viva Kenton! Capitol 60445-2. 9/59–4/63.
ns:d="urn:JZG"
Stan meets the cha-cha. Some surprisingly effective pieces.

() Live In Biloxi / (*) Return To Biloxi /  Live At Barstow 1960 Magic DAWE 30 / 35 / Status DSTS1001. 60.
Part of a rash of live material around 1960. The two Biloxi sets are recorded mistily and the orchestra comes over rather waywardly. Live At Barstow is nearly all standards, with many nice solo spots.

 A Merry Christmas Capitol 92601-2. 10/60–4/63.
The strangest jazz Christmas album ever made ends on Maynard Ferguson's 'Christmas For Moderns' spectacular. Gorgeous sound.

() At The Arcadia Theatre 1974 Magic DAWD 94 2CD. 10/74.
A few late sparks, but not many.

Freddie Keppard (1890–1933)

CORNET

A bandleader in New Orleans at 16, he was touring by 1910, his massive sound shaking up the pre-jazz scene. Secretive about his own playing and alcoholic, he missed the chance to record early and was overtaken by Armstrong.

(*) The Complete Set 1923–1926 Retrieval RTR 79017 Keppard; Elwood Graham, James Tate (c); Fred Garland, Eddie Vincent, Fayette Williams, Eddie Ellis (tb); Jimmie Noone (cl, as, v); Clifford King (cl, as); Johnny Dodds, Angelo Fernandez (cl); Joe Poston (as); Jerome Pasquall, Norval Morton (ts); Arthur Campbell, Antonia Spaulding, Adrian Robinson, Jimmy Blythe (p); Jimmy Bell (vn); Stan Wilson, Erskine Tate (bj); Bill Newton (tba); Bert Greene, Jasper Taylor, Jimmy Bertrand (d); Papa Charlie Jackson (v). 6/23–1/27.
One of the great unanswered questions in jazz is how good Keppard really was. The second 'King' of New Orleans cornet, after Buddy Bolden and before Joe Oliver, his handful of records offer ambiguous evidence and suggest a musician who cottoned on to ragtime but never quite got a grip on where jazz was going. He has a big, jabbing sound, when you can hear him, and, cut loose from his surroundings, he can work up genuine excitement. That happens only a few times on the 24 tracks which are his entire legacy, and even then his presence on a few of them is doubtful. The bigger-band sides with Doc Cook and Erskine Tate are often a disappointing lot, and one has to turn to the small-group performances with Jimmy Blythe, Jasper Taylor and Keppard's own Jazz Cardinals to hear him working at something like optimum level, in the rough-and-ready Chicago jazz of the day.

The Retrieval edition is so well remastered that it made us reconsider our verdict on Keppard. The Doc Cook band numbers have never sounded finer, and even the Erskine Tate tracks from 1923 stand up much better than before. One still needs ears sympathetic to the music of that day, but more than any other previous issue this brings Keppard back to life.

Anthony Kerr

VIBRAPHONE

Irishman who follows in the steps of Hampton and Gibbs.

 Too Marvellous For Words Zephyr 32 Kerr; Jim Watson (org); Steve Brown (d). 01.
 Now Hear This Ronnie Scott's Jazz House JH55 Kerr; Albert Bover (p); Matt Miles (b); Stephen Keogh (d). 03.
Kerr has a greater reputation among musicians than among fans. These don't quite capture the essence of his live performances, which are electrifying. The Ronnie Scott's date comes close, but the sound is flat and uninviting, while the more adventurous studio session for Zephyr doesn't gel. Kerr favours a standards repertoire and is always alert to the emotional cadence of a song. His mostly two-mallet approach is crisp and always dead-centre, though it sometimes lacks light and shade.

Martin Kershaw (born 1973)

ALTO AND SOPRANO SAXOPHONES

English-born; moved to Edinburgh after a period at Berklee.

 Fruition Caber CD026 Kershaw; Chick Lyall (p); Mario Caribé (b); Stuart Brown (d). 02.
There's a mature ease to this debut record. A lot of the credit goes to the experienced Lyall, whose calm, often philosophical playing establishes a foundation for most of these tracks, especially the ballads 'Eclipse' and 'Hope'. Kershaw's own sound is pungent and alert, sometimes reminiscent of Art Pepper. His arrangement of 'Dance Of The Siamese Children' suggests a well-grounded musician who's at ease in many different idioms.

Barney Kessel (1923–2004)

GUITAR

Born in Muskogee, Oklahoma, he played in LA big bands in the mid-'40s, did studio work and formed The Pollwinners Trio with Ray Brown and Shelly Manne. He continued touring until 1992.

 Easy Like Original Jazz Classics OJC 153 Kessel; Bud Shank, Buddy Collette (as, f); Harold Ross, Claude Williamson (p); Harry Babasin (b); Shelly Manne (d). 11/53–2/56.
 Plays Standards Original Jazz Classics OJC 238 Kessel; Bob Cooper (ts, ob); Claude Williamson, Hampton Hawes (p); Monty Budwig, Red Mitchell (b); Shelly Manne, Chuck Thompson (d). 6–7/54.
(*) To Swing Or Not To Swing Original Jazz Classics OJC 317 Kessel; Harry 'Sweets' Edison (t); Georgie Auld, Bill Perkins (ts); Jimmy Rowles (p); Al Hendrickson (g); Red Mitchell (b); Irv Cottler (d). 6/55.
 Music To Listen To Barney Kessel By Original Jazz Classics OJC 746 Kessel; Buddy Collette, Jules Jacob, George Smith, Howard Terry, Justin Gordon, Ted Nash (reeds); André Previn , Jimmy Rowles, Claude Williamson (p); Buddy Clark, Red Mitchell (b); Shelly Manne (d). 8–12/56.
'The blues he heard as a boy in Oklahoma, the swing he learned on his first band job and the modern sounds of the West Coast school': Nesuhi Ertegun's summary of Kessel, written in 1954, still holds good. Kessel has often been undervalued as a soloist: the smoothness and accuracy of his playing tend to disguise the underlying weight of the blues which informs his improvising, and his albums from the '50s endure with surprising consistency. Easy Like, with flute by Shank and Collette, is a little too feathery, but the guitarist's clean lines spare little in attack and the terrific 'Vicky's Dream' emerges as furious bop. The two subsequent albums suggest a firm truce between Basie-like small-band swing and the classic West Coast appraisal of bop. The inclusion of such ancient themes as 'Louisiana', 'Twelfth Street Rag' and 'Indiana' suggests the breadth of Kessel's interests, and although most of the tracks are short, nothing seems particularly rushed. Lester Koenig's superb production has been faithfully maintained for the reissues: Manne, especially, is well served by the engineering. Music To Listen To Barney Kessel By sweetens the mix by sticking to cute woodwind and reed arrangements of familiar tunes while Kessel swings smilingly through it; nothing demanding, but it's done so breezily that it cuts most of the so-called easy-listening jazz of recent years.

() The Poll Winners /  The Poll Winners Ride Again / () Poll Winners Three Original Jazz Classics OJC 156 / 607 / 692 Kessel; Ray Brown (b); Shelly Manne (d). 3/57; 8/58; 11/59.

Since Kessel, Brown and Manne regularly scored high in jazz fans' polls of the day, Contemporary's decision to record them as a trio was commercially impeccable. But they were a committed musical group too. The Poll Winners includes jamming on 'Satin Doll' and 'Mean To Me' which is sophisticated enough to imply a telepathy between Kessel and Manne. But the group push harder on the remaining records, although Ride Again includes some weak material. The superb studio sound highlights inner detail.

 Let's Cook! Original Jazz Classics OJC 970 Kessel; Frank Rosolino (tb); Ben Webster (ts); Victor Feldman (vib); Jimmy Rowles, Hampton Hawes (p); Leroy Vinnegar (b); Shelly Manne (d). 8–11/57.

 Some Like It Hot Original Jazz Classics OJC 168 Kessel; Joe Gordon (t); Art Pepper (cl, as, ts); Jimmy Rowles (p); Jack Marshall (g); Monty Budwig (b); Shelly Manne (d). 3–4/59.

 Swingin' Party! Original Jazz Classics OJC 1066 Kessel; Marvin Jenkins (p, f); Gary Peacock (b); Ron Lundberg (d). 7/60.

 Workin' Out! Original Jazz Classics OJC 1061. Kessel; Marvin Jenkins (p, f); Jerry Good (b); Stan Pepper (d). 1/61.

 The Artistry Of Barney Kessel Contemporary 60-021 As OJC albums listed above.

Let's Cook! offers a couple of tracks where Barney jams with a band including Rosolino, Webster and Rowles: an unusual line-up (playing 'Tiger Rag'!) which has its moments. The rest is a more conventional quintet with Feldman and Hawes. Some Like It Hot works much better, since this set of tunes from the then-hit film offered the kind of new-lamps-for-old which Kessel had already been trying on earlier records. Pepper shines on all three horns, Gordon contributes some acrid solos on one of his rare appearances on record, and Kessel experiments with three different guitars and a couple of duo-only tunes. 'Runnin' Wild', taken at a blistering pace, is a tiny gem.

Swingin' Party! has studio applause, and works up a fine head of steam on Milt Jackson's 'Bluesology' and Brownie's 'Joy Spring', with the young Peacock sounding very good; but Jenkins is no great shakes at the piano and his flute feature is querulous. Workin' Out! finds Kessel starring in front of a very workmanlike quartet. The Artistry Of is a user-friendly selection from the OJC albums and is an effective sampler of the period.

(*) Feeling Free Original Jazz Classics OJC 1043 Kessel; Bobby Hutcherson (vib); Chuck Domanico (b); Elvin Jones (d). 2/69.

 The Poll Winners / Straight Ahead Original Jazz Classics OJC 409 Kessel; Ray Brown (b); Shelly Manne (d). 7/75.

Kessel spent most of the '60s as a studio session guitarist. The Poll Winners reunion is as good as their earlier records, yet looser, less drilled. 'Caravan' and 'Laura' become springboards for playing as freely as they ever could together.

The odd one out is Feeling Free, as unbuttoned a record as Kessel ever made. As ever, Jones makes a huge amount of noise, which the guitarist does his best to ride over, and with Hutcherson also in volatile mood this is excitingly spontaneous. The material is rather drab – a couple of blues, 'This Guy's In Love With You' and 'The Sounds Of Silence' – but the group plays with real involvement, as if to see what they could make out of a situation which in other hands would have been just another pop-jazz date.

 Solo Concord CCD 4221 Kessel (g solo). 4/81.

Kessel's only solo album isolates the virtues and the vulnerabilities of his art. In an age of superfast guitarists and everyday eclectics, Kessel's simplicity and trust in his touch seemed almost elemental. On a ballad like 'What Are You Doing The Rest Of Your Life?' he treats the melody like a recitalist, brushing through it, the soul of discretion. His finger technique makes you feel the physicality of the guitar, and the strumming on the uptempo section of 'Manha De Carnaval' reminds one that he helped establish the grammar for rock'n'roll guitar, playing on some of the Coasters' classic sides. He touches on bebop almost as an aside, and one can hear him thinking back to Charlie Christian some of the time. This is the most unpretentious of solo records and, while nothing like a masterpiece, it affords much pleasure.

Also, in brief:

 Blues For A Playboy Five Four 25. 11/52–12/56.

A nice compilation of early recordings and appearances with Art Tatum (p), Lester Young (ts), Anita O'Day, Billie Holiday (v).

* Plays Carmen Original Jazz Classics OJC 269. 12/58.

A cute idea that should have stayed as no more than that.

() Breakfast At Tiffany's / Bossa Nova / Contemporary Latin Rhythms Collectables COL-CD-2857 2CD. 1/62–63.

Three albums made for Reprise. Kessel gets in a few decent passages, but these records are strictly kitschville.

 Live In Los Angeles At P.J.'s Club Gambit 69226. 65–73.

The bulk of this is from LA, with a trio track from Denmark, some blues from a 1973 Swedish TV show and a blues jam with Kenny Burrell and Grant Green, supposedly from Ronnie Scott's in 1969.

Stefan Keune (born 1965)

SOPRANINO, ALTO AND TENOR SAXOPHONES

Born in Oberhausen. A late-ish starter, he began on tenor saxophone and switched largely to sopranino in the late '80s/early '90s. Has a strong interest in modern classical styles as well as the taxing discipline of solo improvisation.

 Loft Hybrid HMP CD 3 Keune; Hans Schneider (b); Paul Lytton (d, perc, elec). 3/92.

 Excerpts & Offerings /  Frequency Of Use Acta 14 / Nurnichtnur Berlston 102 12 31 Keune; John Russell (g). 11/00; 10/02.

 Sunday Sundaes Creative Sources CS 030 Keune (sno, as solo). 8 & 9/04.

Keune first came to wider notice with this distinctive trio. He differs from the 'Evan Parker school' of improvising saxophone-players in still favouring a broadly vocalized tone and still mostly playing in distinct breath groups, which none the less seem to form propositions, paragraphs and whole sections within a piece. That is not to say that Keune is discursive or unduly linear, only that he is after different game.

His sopranino – still a relatively rare choice for saxophonists – has a sharp, keening quality, overblowing uncertainly and often setting up curious chordal effects which suggest Keune may vocalize across his reed on occasion. His tenor-playing is also very strong but seems to have been sidelined in more recent times.

Certainly the solo record is dominated by sopranino. Again, here, the tracks are relatively short and give some impression of predetermined structure, or at least of some prior sense of organization. If this is illusory, all the more credit to Keune's improvisational logic. Sunday Sundaes is an exciting record in a cruelly difficult discipline.

The duos with Russell, recorded at the Bluecoat in Liverpool and the Red Rose in London, have a jagged interest, but here the short-form improvisation often seems artificially foreshortened, as if ideas are abandoned rather than fully worked out. When Keune and Russell stretch out, as they do on the opening 'Big George' on Excerpts & Offerings, it's very impressive. This was the last CD issued on the Acta imprint. Better sound than on the Red Rose date.

Keystone Trio

GROUP

Top-of-the-line piano trio, living up to its on-paper promise.

* Heart Beats Milestone MCD 9256 John Hicks (p); George Mraz (b); Idris Muhammad (d); Freddy Cole (v). 12/95.

* Newklear Music Milestone MCD 9270 As above, except omit Cole. 2/97.

The odd, electric-motor sound is the authors purring. This is piano-trio jazz of the very highest quality, two records which just beg to be played again and again. Hicks has his critics, some of whom condemn him for insubstantiality. This, we think, is missing the point. Almost always, he is more concerned to work within the dimensions of a song than to go off into the stratosphere. On Heart Beats he is admirably disciplined, relying on the exquisitely toned Mraz for counter-lines and embellishment. The opening 'Speak Low' is a tour de force and 'How Deep Is The Ocean?' wrings more feeling out of that rather tired song than any group we have heard in years.

As the awkwardly punning title suggests, the later record is a tribute to the music of Sonny Rollins, and a highly adventurous sampling of Newk's workbook at that: 'O.T.Y.O.G.', 'Times Slimes', 'Wynton', the inevitable 'Airegin', and others. The initial idea for the project came from session producer Todd Barkan, who is responsible for a pristine sound, and it comes to mark the great man's 25 years with the label. If people think of him as a saxophonist first and foremost and a composer only in a somewhat pragmatic sense, this is the record which may reshape that consensus. What is immediately clear is that Newk writes songs, not chord shapes. Hicks and Mraz intuit that and build on them gracefully. Muhammad provides the appropriate rhythmic impulse, and the results could hardly be better. The pianist signs off with 'Love Not For Sonny', a piece that bears more than a passing resemblance to his own classic 'Naima's Love Song', and none the worse for that.

Steve Khan (born 1947)

GUITAR

Born in LA, he arrived in New York in 1970 and did pop and jazz sessions and his own fusion records before returning to a more straight-ahead guitar style.

* Got My Mental Evidence ECD 22197-2 Khan; John Patitucci (b); Jack DeJohnette (d); Café (perc, v); Don Alias, Bobby Allende, Marc Quiñones (perc). 9/96.

(*) The Green Field ESC 37052. As above, except omit Café, Alias, Allende, Quiñones; add Manolo Badrena (perc). 5/05.

(*) Borrowed Time ESC 37172 Khan; Randy Brecker (flhn); Bob Mintzer (bcl); Rob Mounsey (ky); John Patitucci, Reuben Rodriguez (b); Jack DeJohnette (d); Manolo Badrena, Ralph Irizarry, Marc Quiñones , Badal Roy (perc); Gabriela Anders (v). 5/05, 1/07.

Khan's adventures in fusionland are far behind him by now, but his progress has been hard to follow since many of his records are deleted. His Verve albums have been given the axe, but his newer label brought off his best record for years in Got My Mental. The nucleus of Khan, Patitucci and DeJohnette play with stunning authority. Ornette Coleman's 'R.P.D.D.' is beautifully stretched out, light yet intense. 'The Last Dance' and 'I Have Dreamed' are gorgeous ballads, the latter glimpsed through a pollen drift of percussion that seems unlikely yet works superbly. 'Paraphernalia' and 'Cunning Lee' are full-blooded jazz performances that are perfectly weighted. DeJohnette, who can often be overpowering in the studio, is at his most subtle and searching throughout and Patitucci seems twinned with the guitarist's lines.

Just when it seemed Khan had disappeared back into the studios, the same group came back with The Green Field. Again, there's a slight feeling that his music runs down over time, a principle of fusion entropy taking over, but enough of this is compelling to send you back again and again. Khan's guitar has that lovely mercurial sound again and 'El Prado Verde' itself is a delightful conception. The delicious Latinization of things like 'Congeniality' on the 2005 disc and another Ornette tune, 'Mr And Mrs People' on the Grammy-nominated Borrowed Time, allows Khan to indulge his fusion instincts as well as blow freely. Spots for Brecker, Mintzer and others on the later record, which takes some material from the Green Field sessions, are well up to scratch.

David Kikoski (born 1961)

PIANO

After studying at Berklee, he worked in Boston before moving to New York with Roy Haynes and David Sanchez.

(*) Inner Trust Criss Cross 1148 Kikoski; Ed Howard (b); Leon Parker (d). 12/97.

 The Maze Criss Cross 1168 Kikoski; Seamus Blake (ts); Scott Colley (b); Jeff 'Tain' Watts (d). 6/98.

* Almost Twilight Criss Cross 1190 Kikoski; John Patitucci (b); Jeff 'Tain' Watts (d). 12/99.

(*) Surf's Up Criss Cross 1208 As above, except omit Patitucci; add James Genus (b). 1/01.

Kikoski was almost ten years into his recording career when Inner Trust was made. It documents a superb but one-off trio: Howard and Kikoski worked together in the Roy Haynes band for many years, and Parker was with the pianist in the Sanchez band. It's a handsome repertory record where all the music seems to flow freely under the fingers of the musicians: Monk's 'We See' is as sprightly as 'You Don't Know What Love Is' is flowingly lyrical, the melody voiced in a way that offsets the normally dolorous feel of the song. Parker plays some remarkable things, not least on Kikoski's original title-track.

Writing is the pianist's strength, and he even gets away with an all-original programme for both The Maze and Almost Twilight. The former is slightly undone by Blake's rather faceless offerings as the sole horn, although the material has much food for thought, especially the opening 11-bar blues 'Revival' and the ensuing 'Puddles Of Memory'. Almost Twilight is, by contrast, almost overpowering in its assurance. Watts and Patitucci are fail-safe pros who need something out of the ordinary to make them sit up. Clever stuff like the oddly timed 'Water' is part of the story, but Kikoski is good at making this kind of music speak for itself in a clear voice, and he refuses to obfuscate what could be merely inscrutable jazz. 'Blues In The Face' is a classic essay, and the closing 'Immediacy', fast enough to make the unwary giddy, is showing off at a sublime level.

Surf's Up is perhaps not quite so good, but Kikoski picks some smart pieces to cover. Brian Wilson's title-tune is a daring choice, even if we remain unconvinced of its jazz-worthiness, but Frank Zappa's 'Oh No' comes over as a melody just waiting for this treatment, and Jackie McLean's 'Little Melonae' is turned into something surprisingly spare, even desolate.

(*) Details /  Limits Criss Cross 1249 / 1284 Kikoski; Seamus Blake (ts on Limits only); Larry Grenadier (b); Bill Stewart (d). 12/03; 12/05.

Details is an exceptional trio record. Kikoski opens with a long, sensitive reading of 'In Your Own Sweet Way' and makes the Brubeck tune sound very different. The other standard on a long set – that might have been strengthened by the pruning of one track – is Joe Henderson's 'Inner Urge', always a great blowing vehicle. Stewart is one of the best of his kind and Grenadier can always be relied on for something original.

Again, we're not persuaded that Blake adds a telling something. His vigorous, booting sound doesn't preclude strong ideas, but on the live date one wants to hear more of the recent trio at work and less diesel-powered blowing.

Also, in brief:

 Combinations Criss Cross 1226. 12/01.

Reunites the group that made The Maze, but minus the excellent Colley.

 Lighter Way Apria 4503. 6/06.

Nice trio set – Ed Howard (b), Victor Lewis (d) – on an unfamiliar label. Good representation of Dave's fine synthesizer work.

Rebecca Kilgore (born 1949)

VOICE

Previously a computer programmer, she took up singing part-time in 1980 and worked in and around Portland, Oregon. She now sings full-time and specializes in vintage repertory.

 I Saw Stars Arbors ARCD 19136 Kilgore; Dan Barrett (t, tb); Scott Robinson (cl, ts, bsx); Chuck Wilson (as); David Frishberg (p); Bucky Pizzarelli (g); Michael Moore (b). 4/94.

(*) Not A Care In The World Arbors ARCD 19169 Kilgore; David Frishberg (p); Dan Faehnle (g). 11/95.

* Rebecca Kilgore Jump JCD 12-22 Kilgore; Dan Barrett (c, tb); Bob Reitmeier (cl, ts); Keith Ingham (p). 10/98.

Becky Kilgore isn't a profound singer, at least not in the way we understand Billie Holiday and Sarah Vaughan to be, but she has enormous charm and a sweet control over her material. The first finds her matched with one of Dan Barrett's swing groups, and they sparkle on his canny arrangements of standards and obscurities. If it all sounds a fraction precise and calculated, it must be because this kind of repertory date has become a commonplace in its craft and sunny expertise. We prefer the duets and trios with Frishberg and Faehnle. The pianist and singer work regularly together and there is a free-flowing empathy between them that makes the music almost sing itself. Out of 22 songs, several of them medleyed, more than half are rarely encountered nuggets from long ago, and Kilgore's fresh voice renews their acquaintance with perfect brio. When she gets to a wistful one, 'Talkin' To Myself About You', it's surprisingly affecting.

Appropriate that the Jump CD was recorded at the Manchester Craftsmen's Guild. The music is sheer unpretentious class, as close to perfect as a repertory CD can be. Barrett and Ingham confect little arrangements for 18 songs, of which only 'Just You, Just Me' could be called even close to hackneyed, and Becky's clear, melodious voice sings through the lyrics without any trace of routine. She finds a poignancy in 'Very Good Advice' which makes one wonder why this song is so obscure, and even the cutesy 'Ain't We Got Fun' has a dignity about it. And the instrumentalists are in superb fettle.

(*) The Starlit Hour Arbors ARCD 19255 Kilgore; David Frishberg (p). 2/97.

(*) Harlem Butterfly Audiophile ACD-308 Kilgore; Bobby Gordon (cl); Chris Dawson (p); Hal Smith (d). 4/00.

(*) Rebecca Kilgore With The Keith Ingham Sextet Jump JCD 12-24 Kilgore; Joe Wilder (t); Ken Peplowski (cl, ts); Keith Ingham (p); Gene Bertoncini (g); Frank Tate (b); Steve Little (d). 2/01.

(*) The Music Of Jimmy Van Heusen Jump JCD 12-27 Kilgore; Dan Barrett (tb, c); Bob Reitmeier (cl); Keith Ingham (p); Nicki Parrott (b). 5/04.

Recorded on the final night of the duo's residency at Portland's Heathman Hotel, The Starlit Hour is delightful. Francis Davis makes the point in his sleeve-notes that Kilgore never resorts to any kind of melodrama, so even the likes of 'It's The Talk Of The Town' are swinging and upbeat, almost in defiance of the lyrics. Yet she never does anything but put herself at the service of the song. Her control of pitch and way with time are unfussily exact, and though Frishberg can sometimes challenge an unwary performer, there's never anything less than ideal communication between the two, even on comparatively rare songs such as 'Not Mine' and 'I Hear The Music Now'.

On Harlem Butterfly Kilgore paid gentle homage to that gentlest of singers, Maxine Sullivan. The feel is so smilingly laid-back that the music sometimes approximates the horizontal, but it lets Becky get into her sultriest threads for 'When A Woman Loves A Man', and 'Enjoy Yourself' seems to be sprung off a calypso beat. Gordon sounds like a dozing Pee Wee Russell and Dawson and Smith get up to some interesting business when they get the chance. But it's the singer's show, and quite right too.

The Jump sessions continue the good work of the earlier disc with Ingham, although a few of the arrangements work a little too cleverly, as if the pianist were trying too hard to gild some of these lilies; and the instrumental interludes weren't needed – they only make you impatient for Becky to return.

Frank Kimbrough (born 1956)

PIANO

A player who straddles Bill Evans-like elegance and a more outside approach.

 Lonely Woman Mapleshade 52682 Kimbrough; Ben Wolfe (b); Jeff Williams (d). 12/98.

This was already a settled trio when Lonely Woman was recorded and if anything some of these cuts betray signs of too much polish. The Ornette title-track has the air of a grand romantic opus, though that's blown away by Herbie Nichols's suitably boisterous 'House Party Startin''. Wolfe and Williams play a full part, but it's Kimbrough's rich touch that carries the moment.

* Noumena Soul Note 121318 Kimbrough; Scott Robinson (ts, bsx); Ben Monder (g); Tony Moreno (d, perc). 9/97.
A wonderful set that deserves to be better known. The ballad 'Quiet As It's Kept' is certainly the best of the six compositions, but Kimbrough finds a wonderful sound on 'Nightscape', thanks to Robinson's bass saxophone, and without a conventional bass-line 'Air' and '727' have a mysterious, levitating quality. Monder interacts splendidly with the leader. A terrific live recording, with enough rough edges to suggest the group's adventure.

* Quickening Omnitone 5203 Kimbrough; Ben Allison (b); Jeff Ballard (d). 9/98.
Kimbrough has been much involved with the Jazz Composers Collective in NYC and Allison is a colleague there. This live set from the New School has some of the adventurousness of the Keith Jarrett Trio, but without that fêted combo's self-regarding gloss. Allison keeps things tough and edgy, and it's slightly unfortunate that none of the bassist's themes are included in the set, which is again all-Kimbrough. The emphasis is reversed on Ben's records, of course.

(*) Lullabluebye Palmetto 2100 Kimbrough; Ben Allison (b); Matt Wilson (d). 4/03.
Wilson's another master player, but he slightly unbalances this group. Kimbrough leans on a sequence of terse, taut new compositions, with more emphasis on vigorous structure and less on extended improvisation. Their version of 'You Only Live Twice' is delightful and unexpected, and Allison gets a nod as composer on his own 'Ben's Tune'. Fine, though not as compelling as its predecessor.

 Play Palmetto 2118 Kimbrough; Masa Kamaguchi (b); Paul Motian (d). 4/05.
Motian's a near-legend in the music, but it's Kamaguchi's lateral playing on these harmonically rich tunes that immediately takes the ear. He merits more of a feature than he gets and it would be good to hear some of his writing, too. Motian's represented by the classic 'Conception Vessel', but no one's going to steal Frank's crown; he's arguably the most exciting writer for piano trio around at the moment and 'The Spins' and 'Waiting In Santander' are terrific modern jazz.

Also, in brief:

(*) Saturn's Child Omnitone 11901. 8/97.
Delicious duets with Joe Locke (vib), and together they'll make you throw out your Chick Corea and Gary Burton records.

(*) The Willow Omnitone 12103. 12/00.
With Joe Locke (vib) again at the heart of the group, this is also terrific, though these earlier Omnitones are harder to find now.

Soweto Kinch

ALTO AND TENOR SAXOPHONES, VOICE

Working until recently out of Birmingham, this young British saxman mixes straight-ahead and hip-hop influences.

 Conversations With The Unseen Dune CD08 Kinch; Abram Wilson (t, v); Femi Temowo (g); Michael Olatuja (b); Troy Miller (d); Eska Mtungwazi (v). 12/02–1/03.
(*) A Life In The Day Of B19: Tales Of The Towerblock Dune CD 014 As above, except add Abram Wilson (t); Harry Brown (tb); Jason Yarde (perc); Denys Baptiste (ts); Rasiyah, Francis Mott, Moira Stuart (v). 06.
A lot of what he plays still has a workshopped feel, but he's already thinking his way into more original settings, and the deftly inserted flavours of hip-hop which bubble through every so often are more striking given that basically he's a hardcore altoman with nods to cool-school players as much as anything more modish. The band are somewhat less impressive, and they're asked to provide a sometimes unambitious support, with Miller not exactly the most swinging drummer on record. The most interesting partnership is with Temowo.

Kinch received as much press attention for who he is and where he comes from as for the music. The second album played on that to some degree. Note the switch from the Courtney Pine-ish title to something more ruggedly personal and immediate. It's also part of a two-part fable, to be continued with Basement Fables, and it features three characters on a London sink estate, with newsreader Moira Stuart as narrator. Musically, it's deft only episodically and the set is too long by half. One simply doesn't feel any deep interest in the characters and the guest musicians just feel like an intrusion, like a Dune day out; even so, an instrumental version would be welcome.

Bob Kindred

TENOR SAXOPHONE

Came out of Philadelphia and settled in New York. Much admired by fans and fellow musicians but hasn't made a wider impact.

 Gentle Giant Of The Tenor Sax Mapleshade 09032 Kindred; Larry Willis (p). 3 & 5/01.
Kindred's tone and phrasing resemble a cross between Ben Webster and Stan Getz, but he has a distinctive timbre that recalls neither of those giants. He hasn't attracted much notice from major labels as yet, and some of his discs probably have to be sourced through the website. The Mapleshade duos are lovely, though, with Willis an inspiring and expressive partner. 'Blood Count' is heart-rending, and the closing interpretation of Django's 'Anouman' is one of the most affecting ever. Nothing much here if you want fire and anger from your jazz, but as a late-night ballad set and sampling of one of the music's real gentlemen it's recommended.

Peter King (born 1940)

ALTO AND SOPRANO SAXOPHONES, CLARINET

Born in Surrey, he was still a teenager when he opened at Ronnie Scott's Club in 1959. An initial bebop style has gradually absorbed other influences.

(*) East 34th Street Spotlite SPJ-CD 24 King; John Horler (p); Dave Green (b); Spike Wells (d). 1/83.
 Brother Bernard Miles Music MM CD 076 King; Guy Barker (t); Alan Skidmore (ts); John Horler (p); Dave Green (b); Martin Drew, Tony Levin (d). 88–89.

 Tamburello Miles Music MM CD 083 King; Steve Melling (p, ky); James Hellawell (ky); Alec Dankworth (b); Stephen Keogh (d, perc). 10/94.
King remains Britain's most eminent keeper of the bebop alto flame. It's good to have the best of four Spotlite LPs back in circulation. This presented King's working group of the period. The resounding impact of King's playing seems more impressive at this distance. There are six originals, each just individual enough to take the context out of the ordinary, and the saxophonist's brimming virtuosity goes in tandem with an inner calm.

Brother Bernard includes extended solos on 'Overjoyed' and 'But Beautiful' which offer intensely lucid thinking on fertile melodies, but the rhythm section contribute facelessly admirable support and the guest spots by Barker and Skidmore add little except extra weight. Tamburello is a deal more ambitious yet doesn't hang together very well as an album. Fine improvisations on Wayne Shorter's 'Yes And No' and McCoy Tyner's 'You Taught My Heart To Sing' sit alongside a couple of diffident King originals and arrangements on Bartók and Purcell, with the final four tracks standing as a linked meditation on the death of Ayrton Senna. Touchingly effective in parts, but too much of the music is compromised by the electric keyboards. It's not that their presence is disagreeably 'modern', but that they're just not recorded or mixed with any subtlety.

 Speed Trap Jazz House 41 King; Gerard Presencer (t); Steve Melling (p); Alec Dankworth (b); Steven Keogh (d). 96.
Recorded at Ronnie Scott's, this is a fine set by an established group. Mixing originals like the fiery title-piece with standards ('My Man's Gone Now') and modern jazz repertoire (Coltrane's love theme 'Naima'), King puts the group through their paces. Presencer is superb in the ensembles though possibly a little reserved in his solo spots, while Melling and Dankworth keep things tight but not restricted at the back. The only slight question mark is Keogh's drumming, but this is the fault of the recording rather than the player. Otherwise, the sound is pretty faithful and captures a hot and even stormy night at the famous club.

 Janus: Live At The Purcell Room Miles Music CD088 King; Gordon Beck (p); Jeremy Brown (b); Stephen Keogh (d); Lyric String Quartet. 97.
 Lush Life Miles Music MM CD085 As above, except add Gerard Presencer (t); Steve Melling (p); Steve Hamilton (ky). 7/98.
King's own playing remains marvellous, but he is still searching for something which suggests a more meaningful context as far as records are concerned, and we are unconvinced by some of these settings. For a bebop disciple, it's noticeable how much King is taking on later influences: the live South Bank set finds him working in larger structures and arrangements that only really pay off on the later project. Coltrane looms large over the intense soprano improvisation on 'Ronnie's Sorrow', and the solo treatment of 'Lush Life', if a bit rehearsed in feel, is something new in his work on record. As is the subtle reworking of 'Nefertiti'. Yet it's still the straight-ahead burners such as 'Flying Scotsman' which carry the most pleasure.

(*) Footprints Miles Music CD087 King; Steve Melling (p); Jeremy Brown, Arnie Somogyi (b); Stephen Keogh (d). 02.
A phenomenal live set, recorded at Pizza Express. There are very strong versions of the Wayne Shorter title-piece and McCoy Tyner's 'Search For Peace', a fantastic final version of Victor Feldman's 'Joshua' and strong originals from Melling. The real tour de force, though, is an emotive rendition of Waldron's 'Soul Eyes' on which King plays one of his best recorded solos. The disc was recorded at different sessions, which explains the two bassists. Another great one from King.

Scott Kinsey

PIANO, KEYBOARDS

Began piano at an early age and later studied at Berklee. First came to prominence with Tribal Tech but has since played with an impressive array of jazz stars. Also respected as a movie soundtrack performer.

 Kinesthetics Abstract Logix 003 Kinsey; Tim Hagans (t); Steve Tavaglione (sax); Michael Landau, Jinshi Ozaki (g); Jimmy Earl, Abraham Laboriel, Gary Wills (b); Cyril Atef, Vinnie Colaiuta, Kirk Covington (d); Alex Acuna, Brad Dutz, Arto Tunçboyacayan (perc). 12/04–2/05.
Former boss Joe Zawinul exec-produces on this fine debut and the influence (or homage on 'This Is That') is reasonably plain, though Kinsey's conception is already an advance on the old Weather Report/Update/Zawinul Syndicate idiom. Various members – early and more recent – of Tribal Tech took part in the sessions, which are predictably eclectic for a debut album.

Kinsey likes his synths and sounds like a guy constantly on the lookout for the bit of kit that will match the sounds in his head. Like the various line-ups, the sonic palette is perhaps too mixed to yield a satisfactorily coherent album, but track by track it's great stuff. On some of the earlier tracks, it's left to the guest players to provide the real drama: Hagans's great playing on 'The Combat Zone', Tavaglione's on his own 'Sometimes I ...'. Gradually, though, the leader's vision becomes more evident. He has a richly individual touch, even on electronic instruments, and when he marshals his ideas most effectively, as on 'Uncle Pat's Gypsy Van' and the closing pair of 'Shinjuku' and 'One For Jinshi' (which seem to have something of an Agharta-period Miles Davis influence to them), he is as fresh and original as anyone on the fusion front at the moment. He can play straighter, too, as 'Quartet' (with Colaiuta in topping form) amply confirms. Great stuff all round.

John Kirby (1908–52)

BASS

Joined Fletcher Henderson in 1930 and then worked in various bands until scoring a big hit with a small group at the Onyx Club in 1937, with Charlie Shavers and latterly vocals by Maxine Sullivan.

() John Kirby, 1938–1939 / () John Kirby 1939–1941 Classics 750 / 770 Kirby; Charlie Shavers (t); Buster Bailey (cl); Russell Procope (as); Billy Kyle (p); O'Neil Spencer (d, v). 10/38–10/39; 10/39–1/41.
 John Kirby, 1941–1943 Classics 792 Kirby; Charlie Shavers (t); Buster Bailey (cl); George Johnson, Russell Procope (as); Clyde Hart, Billy Kyle (p); Bill Beason, Specs Powell, O'Neil Spencer (d, v). 7/41–12/43.
They played in white ties and tails – and they often sounded that way – but the Kirby Sextet has exerted a small and subtle influence on recent jazz. The original septet, led by Buster Bailey, shed a member and Kirby (a better organizer and front-man, despite his instrument) was appointed leader. Many of the early arrangements are, surprisingly, credited to Charlie Shavers, and it's fascinating to hear him sound so well-mannered, both with horn and with pencil. Titles like 'Opus 5', 'Impromptu' and 'Nocturne' on Classics 750 point to classical sources and ambitions for some of the material, and there are borrowings from Schubert, Chopin ('The Minute Waltz', alas) and Dvořák elsewhere: an ASCAP ban meant that groups could only perform out-of-copyright material.

(*) John Kirby, 1945–1946 Classics 964 Kirby; Emmett Berry, Clarence Brereton, George Tait (t); Buster Bailey (cl); Hilton Jefferson, George Johnson (as); Budd Johnson (ts); Billy Kyle, Roger 'Ram' Ramirez , Hank Jones (p); Bill Beason (d); Shirley Moore, Sarah Vaughan (v). 4/45–9/46.

At the end of the war the Kirby band reinvented itself, with a new, fuller sound that combined some of the strengths of the old line-up, but also with a richer and darker palette. Budd Johnson's tenor is oily and intensely coloured, perfectly suited to 'Mop Mop' and 'K. C. Caboose' on the solitary 1945 session, less so to 'Passipied'. Kirby had made some V-Discs during the war, but he found his activities a little restricted at war's end. The following year began with a session backing Sarah Vaughan on four sides for Crown. She is very much the focus, and the arrangements are unusually formulaic in response; they're a little off the money on 'It Might As Well Be Spring', but Sassy more than makes up the deficit. Working from a lower league, Shirley Moore is included on two tracks from the April session, and there is also a single track ('Freedom Blues', which was done for Danish Baronet) on which the nominal leadership reverts to Buster Bailey. The final session – indeed the final date under Kirby's name – is an oddity, reworked versions of Sextet staples like 'Schubert's Serenade' and 'Sextet From Lucia', as well as the Jones–Kirby 'Ripples'. The main point of interest is the participation of Hank Jones, sounding very different indeed from his mature self.

Roy Kirby (born 1942)

BANJO

Loyal keeper of the British trad flame, based in Stroud, Gloucestershire, and leader of the Paragon Jazz Band.

 Way Down Yonder In New Orleans P.E.K. Sound PKCD-152 Kirby; Gwyn Lewis (c, v); Mike Owen (tb); Chris Rogers (c, as); Bob Pearce (b); Colin Bushell (d). 3/00.

A superior example of the British trad style, as it stood at the beginning of the new century, recorded live at Wycliffe College, Stonehouse. Kirby and his Paragon Jazz Band model themselves on a classic New Orleans sound, the ensemble taking honest precedence over solo showboating, although the group can actually boast some decent soloists; Lewis plays a strong lead when he's not singing in a lusty baritone, Owen is impressive with the plunger mute, and Rogers makes with the old-fashioned vibrato when he's on alto. They come up with plenty of interesting tunes to go with the familiars, and Peter Kings gives them an excellent sound, with Roy's strumming coming through loud and clear. Good value!

Steven Kirby

GUITAR

Works on the Boston scene. A light, contemporary sound not unlike Pat Metheny but with a hint of Kenny Burrell.

 Point Of Balance Challenge 73124 Kirby; Carl Clements (ss); Bevan Manson, Bennett Paster (p); Harvie Swartz, Gerald Wilfong (b); John Mettam, George Schuller (d). 98.

(*) North Light A Records 73193 Kirby; Tony D'Aveny (t, flhn); Chris Potter (ts); Bill Vint (ss, ts); Bruce Barth, Laszlo Gardonyi (p); Mark Shilansky (p, org); Scott Colley, Keala Kaumeweiha, Gerald Wilfong (b); Matt Wilson (d). 01.

The young Bostonian's touch and ideas are by no means as featherlight as they might seem on first exposure. The debut album, which uses a range of players, is cleverly programmed and well executed. Soprano saxophonist Clements is only in for a couple of numbers, which leavens the sound but also keeps the emphasis squarely on the leader's delicately spun themes. The central sequence of 'An Ever Fixed Mark', 'High Place' and 'Nima's Way' contains most of the session's substance, and even here there are some longueurs, but Kirby has set out his stall convincingly.

The second album also uses a range of players but this time Kirby's own range is greater, from softer ballad themes where he very definitely sounds like Pat Metheny to more upbeat rock-tinged essays. All but two of the tunes are originals, and the closing version of 'When You Wish Upon A Star' is brief enough to seem a throwaway or maybe it's just there to prove he can do it. 'North Lights' is strongly constructed around two simple melodic cells but it has a lot of harmonic subtlety. The organ-driven pieces don't always come off, largely because Kirby doesn't rev up quite enough, but he's getting there and the next couple of albums should be fascinating.

Andy Kirk (1898–1992)

BANDLEADER, BASS SAXOPHONE, TUBA

Took over Terrence Holder's Dark Clouds Of Joy in 1929 and with the writing and arranging skills of Mary Lou Williams turned the band into a successful touring and recording unit. His biggest success was with 'Until The Real Thing Comes Along' in 1936.

 Andy Kirk 1929–1931 Classics 655 Kirk; Clouds of Joy (various personnel). 29–31.

* Andy Kirk 1936–1937 / () Andy Kirk 1937 / () Andy Kirk 1937–1938 Classics 573 / 581 / 598 Kirk; Paul King, Harry Lawson, Earl Thomson, Clarence Trice (t); Ted Donnelly, Henry Wells (tb); John Harrington (cl, as, bs); John Williams (as, bs); Earl Miller (as); Dick Wilson (ts); Claude Williams (vn); Mary Lou Williams (p); Ted Brinson, Ted Robinson (g); Booker Collins (b); Ben Thigpen (d); O'Neil Spencer , Pha Terrell (v). 3–12/36; 2–12/37; 2–12/38.

 Andy Kirk 1939–1940 Classics 640 As above, except add Harold 'Shorty' Baker (t); Fred Robinson (tb); Edward Inge (cl, ts); Rudy Powell (as); Don Byas (ts); Floyd Smith (g); June Richmond (v). 11/39–7/40.

 Andy Kirk 1940–1942 Classics 681 Similar to above. 40–42.

 Andy Kirk 1943–1949 Classics 1075 Kirk; Art Capehart, Talib Daawud, Claude Dunson, Harry Lawson, John Lynch, Howard McGhee, Fats Navarro, Fip Ricard, Clarence Trice (t); Joe Baird, Bob Murray, Wayman Richardson, Milton Robinson, Henry Wells (tb); Reuben Phillips, Ben Smith (as); Eddie 'Lockjaw' Davis , Jimmy Forrest, John Harrington, J. D. King, John Taylor (ts); Ed Loving, John Porter (bs); Hank Jones, Johnny Young (p); Floyd Smith (g); Lavern Baker, Booker Collins, Al Hall (b); Ben Thigpen (d); Jimmy Anderson, Bea Booze, Billy Daniels, June Richmond, Beverley White, Kenny White, Joe Williams, The Four Knights, The Jubalaires (v). 12/43–5/49.

Though he was often out front for photo opportunities, Andy Kirk ran the Clouds Of Joy strictly from the back row. The limelight was usually left to singer June Richmond or vocalist/conductor Pha Terrell; the best of the arrangements were done by Mary Lou Williams, who left the band in 1942; as a bass saxophonist, Kirk wasn't called on to take a solo. All the same, he turned the Clouds Of Joy into one of the most inventive swing bands. His disposition was sunny and practical and he was a competent organizer (who in later life ran a Harlem hotel, the legendary Theresa, and organized a Musicians' Union local in New York City).

Inevitably, given Kirk's low musical profile, critical attention is more usually directed to other members of the band. The classic Clouds Of Joy cuts are those that feature Mary Lou Williams's arrangements and performances, and for these the three earliest Classics compilations are essential, though many of the best tracks can be found on compilations under Williams's own name. The earlier material is still the best, with 'Moten Swing', 'Until The Real Thing Comes Along' and the hit 'Froggy Bottom' prominent. There are, though, fine performances from 1937 and 1938, most notably 'Mary's Idea' from December 1938. Sound is reasonable if not startling.

As the lengthening chronology suggests, opportunities to record were fewer and further between in the mid- to late-'40s, though Kirk successfully negotiated the band through the draft and a recording ban. As ever, the outfit sounds like a proving ground for artists who were to make the grade on their own account in future years. Players like Fats Navarro, Howard McGhee and Jimmy Forrest enjoyed a valuable apprenticeship with Kirk. But the writing was already on the wall and gigs were becoming more sporadic. By the end of the war, the musical and commercial impetus was elsewhere and Kirk's later bandleading career was very much ad hoc.

Rahsaan Roland Kirk (1936–77)

TENOR SAXOPHONE, MANZELLO, STRITCH, FLUTE, ASSORTED INSTRUMENTS

Lost his sight as an infant, and learned music at a blind school. Learned to play three saxophones at once, and tinkered with hybrid instruments; began recording under his own name at 20, and worked with Charles Mingus but otherwise as a maverick soloist-leader. Fought back from a stroke in 1975.

 Introducing Roland Kirk Chess 051821-2 Kirk; Ira Sullivan (t, ts); W. E. Burton (p, org); Don Garrett (b); Sonny Brown (d). 6/60.

 Third Dimension And Beyond Gambit 69210 As above, except add Jimmy Madison (p); Carl Pruitt (b); Henry Duncan (d). 11/56, 6/60.

In November 1956, the 20-year-old Kirk cut a record for King, originally released as Triple Threat but subsequently reissued on Bethlehem as Third Dimension. It's the rawest of the raw, but engagingly rather than off-puttingly crude, and there is no mistaking the young man's easy grasp of harmonics. The debut set, not to be followed up for four years, is now reissued with the Introducing set. With the remarkable Sullivan on hand, and with Burton providing big, raw organ chords on some tracks, the harmonic spectrum sounds far bigger than a quintet date would normally offer. The opening track is 'The Call' and it immediately identifies itself as Kirk's work, a haunting blues-derived theme with weird polytonal appendages as all three of the leader's horns are called into play. As ever, though, he varies the texture and timbre by modulating from tenor to tenor-plus-manzello to manzello alone during his solo. 'Soul Station' follows, a more straightforward blowing theme that demonstrates his credentials as a mainstream jazz musician. On 'Our Love Is Here To Stay' he opts for the manzello alone, a forlorn, emotional sound that is unlike anything or anyone else. Sullivan's trumpet feature on 'Spirit Grill' is backed by two of Kirk's horns, presumably tenor and stritch, but sounding like a whole section. The rhythm section sound like R&B-ers.

(*) Kirk's Work Original Jazz Classics OJC 459 Kirk; Jack McDuff (org); Joe Benjamin (b); Art Taylor (d). 7/61.

(*) Pre-Rahsaan Prestige PRCD 24080 As above, except add Jaki Byard (p); Richard Davis (b); Alan Dawson (d). 7/61, 9/68.

'Skater's Waltz' is one of Kirk's best bits of surreal kitsch, combined with his familiar inventive ambiguity. He clearly enjoys the big, bruising sound of McDuff's electric organ and boots furiously on all three saxophones and flute. On 'Three For Dizzy' he executes difficult tempos with quite astonishing dexterity. A largely forgotten Kirk album, but one which generally deserves the classic reissue billing. It's now doubly garlanded, available on Pre-Rahsaan with a later recording called The Jaki Byard Experience (featuring Roland), which makes for a nice pairing.

(*) We Free Kings Mercury 826455 Kirk; Richard Wyands, Hank Jones (p); Art Davis, Wendell Marshall (b); Charli Persip (d). 61.

This is the first major Kirk record, and the opening 'Three For The Festival', a raucous blues, is evidence for his greatness. Kirk's playing is all over the place. He appears out of nowhere and stops just where you least expect him to. On 'You Did It, You Did It', he creates rhythmic patterns which defeat even Persip and moves across the chords with a bizarre crabwise motion. A wonderful record.

(*) Domino Verve 543833-2 Kirk; Herbie Hancock, Andrew Hill, Wynton Kelly (p); Vernon Martin (b); Henry Duncan, Roy Haynes (d). 4–9/62.

This caught Kirk at a transitional moment. The two-day April session saw a shift of piano-player overnight, with Kelly coming in to replace Hancock, and immediately giving 'Get Out Of Town' and 'Rolando' an easy blues bounce. The best take of the previous day's recording was 'Termini's Corner', a tribute to the Five Spot's location. Later in the year, Kirk also recorded with his then working band of Hill, Martin and Duncan. The new version is called 'Meeting On Termini's Corner', but the track everyone remembers is 'Stritch In Time'. Fascinating to hear him in the company of three piano heavyweights, each of whom had to adjust his attack and natural harmonic language; arguably, Hill thrives best of all.

 Does Your House Have Lions? Rhino R2 71406 2CD Kirk; Ron Burton, Jaki Byard, Hank Jones, Charles Mingus, Trudy Pitts, Lonnie Liston Smith, Sonelius Smith, Richard Tee (p); Ron Carter, Major Holley, Vernon Martin, Steve Novosel, Henry Pearson, Henry 'Mettathias' Pearson , Bill Salter, Doug Watkins (b); Sonny Brown, Charles Crosby, Jimmy Hopps, Oliver Jackson, James Madison, Khalil Mhridri, Bernard Purdie, Robert Shy, Harold White (d); woodwinds, strings. 61–76.

Does Your House Have Lions? covers Kirk's recording for Atlantic. The label deliberately encouraged his more maverick side on the assumption that Kirk unfettered was the only Kirk anyone really wanted, when in fact he was an artist who needed a sympathetic but steadying hand. As a result, these discs are patchy and sometimes downright disappointing. But Kirk is Kirk, and it would be a mistake to expect smoothly crafted mainstream jazz.

 I Talk With The Spirits Verve 558076-2 Kirk; Bob Moses (vib); Horace Parlan (p); Michael Fleming (b); Walter Perkins (d); Crystal Joy Albert (v). 9/64.
The flute album. Roland had a heavy, sometimes massive sound, often vocalized and multiphonic, that contrasted sharply with the thin, skittery voicings of players who were saxophonists first and foremost and who used the flute solely for colour. The title-track and the opening 'Serenade For A Cuckoo' are essential. The rest is fine, but rather wearisome, even over a scant 40 minutes.

I Talk is a fascinating exercise, as perverse and quirky as anything he ever put on tape. As a concept album, it's right up there. As a listening experience, it's a little unrelieved and shrill, but listening to Rahsaan playing a kettle for 40 minutes is always more interesting than listening to the average jazz player on a Selmer Mark V.

 Gifts And Messages Ronnie Scott's Jazz House JHAS 606 Kirk; Stan Tracey (p); Rick Laird (b); Allan Ganley (d). 10 & 11/64.
On the opening tune, 'Bags' Groove', Kirk shouts at Stan Tracey to 'Play them blues', something the Englishman has always done with absolute authenticity. This band was something of a gift for an American musician 'going single' through Europe. Poor Eric Dolphy, who had died in Berlin in the summer of 1964, had had to make do with much less. The understanding between group and leader was cemented by Tracey's familiarity with material like Tadd Dameron's 'On A Misty Night' and Duke's 'Come Sunday', which receives a rather short performance.

There's more emphasis on vocal devices than was usual for the time, perhaps because Kirk's lip doesn't seem to be in tip-top working order. He does a good deal of singing through the flute and on 'It Might As Well Be Spring' he pioneers the 'saxophonium', a sax without mouthpiece. The whole set is peppered with quotes, allusions and tags from other songs, sometimes punning, sometimes surreal, always absolutely musical. Not the best recording, but the music more than makes up for any technical deficiencies.

[illegible]

(*) Rip, Rig And Panic / Now Please Don't You Cry, Beautiful Edith

Emarcy 832164 Kirk; Lonnie Liston Smith, Jaki Byard (p); Ronnie Boykins, Richard Davis (b); Elvin Jones, Grady Tate (d). 1/65, 4/67.

This twofer revived one of Kirk's unaccountably least-known recordings; Now was his only record for Verve, made between contracts. Kirk's usual approach to schmaltz was to pepper it furiously. Brief as it is, 'Alfie' is given a half-ironic, half-respectful reading that is genuinely moving, with a typically ambiguous coda. Elsewhere, Kirk ranges from big Ellingtonian themes to out-and-out rock'n'roll. Rip, Rig And Panic justifies single-CD release in this packaging by its sheer energy and popularity. The opening 'No Tonic Pres' is a tribute to Lester Young developed without definite key resolution. Like the succeeding 'From Bechet, Fats And Byas', it underlines Kirk's allusive invention and ability to make music with the most attenuated materials. Both 'Slippery, Hippery, Flippery' and the furious title-track develop Kirk's interest in 'found' or chance effects; Byard's piano-playing switches between Bud Powell, the rhythmic fractures of Monk and the uncentred tonality of Cecil Taylor. Elvin Jones's drum solo on 'Rip, Rig And Panic' is one of his very best on record. On the final 'Mystical Dream', Kirk plays stritch, tenor and, incredibly, oboe at the same time, posing articulation and harmonic problems that would have sunk a less complete musician.

 Here Comes The Whistleman Atlantic 7567 80785-2 Kirk; Jaki Byard, Lonnie Liston Smith (p); Major Holley (b); Charles Crosby (d). 66.
(*) The Inflated Tear Warner Jazz 8211-736142 Kirk; Ron Burton (p); Steve Novosel (b); Jimmy Hopps (d). 5/68.
The Inflated Tear was Roland Kirk's first studio album for Atlantic and a triumphant confirmation of his improvising powers. The title-track relates to his blindness and conveys the dreamlike oddity and human passion of his music to perfection. The band are by no means top-drawer, but Kirk had a happy knack not just of getting the best out of players but also of subtly adapting his own delivery to the men round him. An ideal place to begin if you've never heard a note of Kirk; but prepare for surprises elsewhere. Recorded live, it has a raw immediacy which is instantaneously beguiling. Kirk's tenor solo on 'I Wished On The Moon', something he used to busk with washboard-players and phonebook drum at house parties, has an almost unbearable simplicity of feeling. The title-track is a more virtuoso performance, doubled on tenor and nose flute, and 'Making Love After Hours' sees him run the whole range of his horns; but by and large Here Comes The Whistleman gives the lie to any impression of Kirk as a gimmicky showman. Most of the horn-playing is straight and unadorned, almost deliberately minimal. Of particular interest is his alto work on the closing 'Step Right Up'. At first hearing he might almost be Eddie Vinson: the same boppish, bluesy phrasing, but behind it a dark and almost tearful intensity of feeling. Not a classic album, but a most enjoyable representation of Kirk in a club setting.

(*) Volunteered Slavery Atlantic Masters 8122-731732 Kirk; Charles McGhee (t); Dick Griffin (tb); Ron Burton (p); Vernon Martin (b); Charles Crosby, Sonny Brown, Jimmy Hopps (d); Joe 'Habao' Texidor (perc); Roland Kirk Spirit Choir (v). 7/69.
(*) Rahsaan Rahsaan Collectables 6341 Kirk; Dick Griffin (tb); Howard Johnson (tba); Ron Burton (p); Sonelius Smith (p, cel); Leroy Jenkins (vn); Vernon Martin (b); Alven Bunn, Joe 'Habao' Texidor (perc). 12/69.
(*) Blacknuss Atlantic Masters 8122-731712 Kirk; Charles McGhee (t); Dick Griffin (tb); Richard Tee, Sonelius Smith (p); Mickey Tucker (org); Cornell Dupree, Billy Butler, Keith Loving (g); Henry 'Mettathias' Pearson , Bill Salter (b); Bernard Purdie, Khalil Mhridri (d); Richard Landrum, Joe 'Habao' Texidor , Arthur Jenkins (perc); Cissy Houston, Princess Patience Burton (v). 8 & 9/71.
 (I, Eye, Aye) Warner 8122-724532 Kirk; Ron Burton (p); Henry 'Pete' Pearson (b); Robert Shy (d); Joe 'Habao' Texidor (perc). 6/72.
 Bright Moments Rhino R2 71409 2CD As above, except add Todd Barkan (syn, perc). 6/73.
Blacknuss, Volunteered Slavery and Bright Moments are the records which brought Kirk to a wider audience in the '70s but which maintained a degree of creative integrity that was lost on nonsense like The Case Of The Three-Sided Dream. There were signs of failing powers even before the debilitating stroke of 1975. Bright Moments is disconcertingly bland and overlong, and for the first time Kirk's multi-instrumentalism began to seem a mere gimmick.

He is at his best on Volunteered Slavery: five powerful studio tracks, followed by a set from the 1968 Newport Festival, at which Kirk played a deeply felt and touching 'Tribute To John Coltrane' before finishing with his own 'Three For The Festival'. There is nothing quite so powerful on Blacknuss, but it holds up. Kirk was playing a lot of pop tunes at this point. On Blacknuss he includes Marvin Gaye's 'What's Goin' On' and 'Mercy Mercy Me'; on Slavery, Burt Bacharach's 'I Say A Little Prayer' and Stevie Wonder's 'My Cherie Amour'. Though doubtless under a certain amount of pressure from the label, he sounds comfortable with the change of repertoire, and throws in old spirituals and hymn tunes as well. What it essentially does is reassert the continuity of Afro-American music; Cissy Houston ('Never Can Say Goodbye' and 'Blacknuss') to Whitney Houston. Whitney Houston. Some of the arrangements are guitar-heavy and the backbeats are decidedly uncouth, but Kirk can transcend difficulties of that sort.

Rahsaan Rahsaan, credited to Kirk and the Vibration Society, is plain odd. 'The Seeker', a long, through-composed suite, is unbearably dull, even when punctuated by Kirkian idiosyncrasies. If you can survive that, there are tiny takes of 'Satin Doll', the original 'Sweet Fire' and 'Lover', before Roland goes for broke and for seemingly certain dental damage on 'Baby, Let Me Shake Your Tree': pure hokum.

(I, Eye, Aye) was recorded at the 1972 Montreux Jazz Festival, and has also been released on video. At this point Kirk had a young band who were responsive to his every need and forbearing enough to allow him the full glare of the spotlight. If this was jazz showmanship, the straight-men were there as well. The sequence from 'Balm In Gilead' to a rousing version of 'Volunteered Slavery' is one of the best of this period, and this is a record rich in period feel. The remaining years were to be marked by illness and failing powers, but in the early '70s Kirk worked tirelessly to propagate his version of 'black classical music'. This is it at its rawest and most immediate.

♛  A Meeting Of The Times Warner Brothers 81227-3689-2 Kirk; Hank Jones, Lonnie Liston Smith (p); Ron Carter, Major Holley (b); Oliver Jackson, Charles Crosby (d); Al Hibbler, Leon Thomas (v). 9/66–3/72.

A small masterpiece, all the better for Kirk's decision to set aside his usual multi-instrumentalism and concentrate on single horns for this deeply felt but by no means pious tribute to Ellington. Al Hibbler, also blind, had been a member of Duke's band in the '40s. By 1972, he was almost forgotten, but here his rich baritone and bizarre diction are the perfect complement. Just as nobody every sounded quite like Kirk, nobody sang a lyric quite like Al. He slides into 'Do Nothing Till You Hear From Me' as if giving dictation, and never quite lets go the speech-song until he starts to syncopate phrases in the middle. On 'Don't Get Around Much Any More', he stretches weird triphthongs on phrases like 'moy moy-und's never at ease'. Not since Dick Van Dyke has English diction been put through the mincer quite so thoroughly. Al also turns 'This Love Of Mine' into a thing of almost operatic splendour, before Kirk picks up and doubles the time on his beautifully simple solo. 'Daybreak' features Kirk on clarinet before he switches to flute for a tremulous out passage. On 'Lover Come Back To Me', the harmonization of horns is so bizarre that it sounds as though the saxophonist is playing fiddle. Roland takes 'Carney And Bigard Place' as an instrumental, which is a welcome respite from the surrealism. The other Ellington tunes are 'Something 'Bout Believing' and 'I Didn't Know About You' and there's a wonderful version of the Hammerstein–Romberg classic 'Lover, Come Back To Me', which manages to sound deeply threatening underneath the romance. There's also a stray track from another session, with Leon Thomas reprising Kirk's autobiographical 'Dream', but it's very much Hibbler's moment back in the spotlight. The accompaniments are simple, funky and straightforwardly loyal to the song at hand. The set is also available on a Collectables twofer, bizarrely paired with Ornette!.

 Other Folks' Music Collectables 6343 Kirk; Richard Williams (t); Trudy Pitts, Hilton Ruiz (p); Gloria Agostini (hp); Leroy Jenkins (vn); Kermit Moore (clo); Sonny Brown, Roy Haynes (d); Arthur Jenkins, Joe 'Habao' Texidor (perc). 76.

Kirk survived his stroke and continued to make music despite the physical limitations it imposed. This is a curiously poignant set, with an elegiac mood established right from the off with a moving sample of Paul Robeson singing. 'Water For Robeson And Williams' is the only original, hence the title; elsewhere, Kirk tackles Parker's 'Donna Lee', Hilton Ruiz's spooky 'Arrival' and electric pianist Trudy Pitts's 'Anysha'. It's by no means an essential Kirk set, but there is plenty of good music on it, and the orchestral approach that attracted him in later years is well-represented.

Also, in brief:

() Kirk In Copenhagen / (*) The Complete Copenhagen Concert Verve 000162902 / Lone Hill Jazz LHJ10200. 10/63. Lone Hill's completist reissue filled in material previously only available on Mercury's Rahsaan box. Verve subsequently gave the set a glossy launch. Sonny Boy Williamson guests at 'Big Skol'.

* The Case Of The Three-Sided Dream In Audio Color Warner 8122-765982. 68.

Drab attempt to bring Kirk to the attention of a rock audience.

 Left & Right Collectables 6340. 6/68.

Kirk and stellar cast (including Alice Coltrane (hp) and Roy Haynes (d)) in a characteristically eclectic old Atlantic set.

() The Man Who Cried Fire /  Brotherman In The Fatherland /  Prepare Thyself To Deal With A Miracle / (*) Compliments Of The Mysterious Phantom Hyena 9302 / 9347 / 9323 / 9311. 70s.

It's a grisly but all too accurate name for the label and a reasonable provenance for these shoddy selections (Compliments and part of Prepare Thyself excepted) of live and studio material from the final decade. How could you like a record called Brotherman In The Fatherland?

 Return Of The 5000lb Man Collectables 6311. 75.

Post-stroke but still firing on more cylinders than most players muster in a lifetime. 'Sweet Georgia Brown' and Minnie Riperton's high-note 'Loving You' are excellent.

Yoshiko Kishino (born 1960)

PIANO, KEYBOARDS

Japanese contemporary pianist recording in America with the local talent.

* Tenderness GRP 014120-2 Kishino; Sal Marquez (t); Ernie Watts (ts); Tommy Morgan (hca); Tom Kennedy (b); Dave Weckl (d); strings and woodwinds. 00.

After two agreeable small-group dates, which presumably did little business for GRP, Kishino has been importuned into making this softcore fudge of a record. Prettily done, from the opening meander through 'Danny Boy' onwards, but with Sal Marquez hired to make Miles Davis-like noises, and strings and woodwinds hired to sweeten what's already sugar, it's a waste of a talented pianist.

 Siesta GRP 450737-2 Kishino; Romero Lubambo (g); Marc Johnson, Nilson Matta (b); Danny Gottlieb (d); Bashiri Johnson (perc); Emiko Shiratori (v). 7/02.

'I hope listeners would enjoy a siesta of their own, on a quiet afternoon, with this album', is Yoshiko's rather unfortunate suggestion in the sleeve-note. This is a bit more substantial than the last one, though. The originals are still pretty and some imported Brazilian tunes sit nicely with a band that makes a fine job of playing ersatz-bossa grooves, with Gottlieb and Johnson or Matta apparently enjoying themselves.

Ryan Kisor (born 1973)

TRUMPET

A New York veteran at 21; still in demand.

(*) Battle Cry Criss Cross 1145 Kisor; Sam Yahel (org); Peter Bernstein (g); Brian Blade (d). 10/97.

 Point Of Arrival Criss Cross 1180 Kisor; Justin Kisor (t); Peter Zak (p); John Webber (b); Willie Jones III (d). 12/98.

Kisor has some of the ebullience of the young trumpet masters of hard-bop yore. He doesn't have that measure of originality or capacity to surprise, but there's a kindred energy in his playing, and he has quite a personal, immediate sound. His two deleted Columbia albums put him in more heavyweight company, but none of these guys is exactly a slouch either, and if both dates are quickly organized blowing sessions, they're cultured with it. He's a schooled player, so he treats a melody such as 'Falling In Love With Love' or 'I'm Old Fashioned' with a kind of old-fashioned respect. Those are both on Battle Cry, which isn't quite the stormy affair suggested by the title, based around several long ballad features, but it has a lot of beguiling trumpet, and Bernstein and Yahel are excellent.

Point Of Arrival seems that bit more ordinary, a rather plain trumpet-and-rhythm outing. Kisor is always worth hearing, even on a prosaic blues such as 'Smoke Signal', but the date needs an extra spark from somewhere. Brother Justin arrives for one duet, his own 'Sir Lancelot'.

* Power Source Criss Cross 1196 Kisor; Chris Potter (ts); James Genus (b); Gene Jackson (d). 6/99.

 The Dream Criss Cross 1215 Kisor; Eric Alexander (ts); Peter Zak (p); John Webber (b); Willie Jones III (d); Renato Thoms (perc). 5/01.

 Awakening Criss Cross 1239 Kisor (t); Grant Stewart (ts); Peter Bernstein (g); Sam Yahel (org); Willie Jones III (d). 12/02.

With no keyboard on Power Source, Kisor takes a risk which he is fully up to facing and, with the invincible Potter standing at his shoulder, the music has a feel of synthesis which takes in all manner of post-bop jazz directions. As he gets older, the tone's losing some of its brassy snap, taking on a faintly cloudier edge, and with the saxophonist if anything moving in the other tonal direction, it makes for an attractive contrast. The covers are a superb lot, with Jimmy Heath's 'New Picture' outstanding. We're not so keen on 'Boogie Stop Shuffle', which doesn't really scale down, but the closing 'Bird Food' was an audacious choice that the players peck off in the hungriest manner. Surely Kisor's best to date.

For some reason he sounds much less involved in the strangely disappointing follow-up, The Dream. This has a much more conventional, even quiescent feel (Alexander arrives only for the closing 'Fiesta Mojo'), the rhythm section do nothing special and, though Kisor still gets off some sharp ideas (check his 'Minor Ordeal' solo), the record never really gets started. Awakening is also a touch disappointing – good skills on show, interesting tunes, but both Kisor and Stewart feel underprepared, and they don't articulate the themes with the precision which would create a springboard for the solos to work effectively.

(*) This Is Ryan Videoarts Music 1266 Kisor; Grant Stewart (ts); Peter Zak (b); John Webber (b); Jason Brown (d). 3/05.

Blunt, straightforward title and an estimably direct new record, on which Kisor covers Don Cherry ('Art Deco') and Kenny Dorham ('Una Mas') with a confident individuality as if inscribing himself and his own tough originals into the continuum of modern jazz trumpet. The chemistry with Stewart and the underrated Zak is fizzy and upbeat, though not so volatile as to strip the slower numbers of emotion, and the rhythm section does a machine-tooled job that suggests plenty of rehearsal.

Göran Klinghagen (born 1955)

GUITAR

A stalwart guitarist on the modern Swedish scene, he worked with Lars Danielsson in Time Again, and has since played with numerous groups and soloists.

 Time Again Dragon DRCD 247 Klinghagen; David Wilczewski (ss, ts); Lars Jansson (p); Bruno Råberg (b); Magnus Gran (d). 6/93.

The opening track, 'Include', is one of those set-pieces that linger long in the mind. After a rambling introduction, the music settles into a shifting groove in which Wilczewski's soprano picks out a melody against Klinghagen's lonesome guitar arpeggios. The record is never quite as haunting as this again, though it's an interesting showcase for the guitarist's range, which extends from Hendrix licks to the kind of windswept impressionism that Terje Rypdal made his own. Jansson guests on one track only.

 Trometric Dragon DRCD 325 Klinghagen; Christian Spering (b); Leroy Lowe (d); Lina Nyberg (v). 12/97.

Klinghagen's second Dragon CD is much more of a group record, closely argued between himself and the superbly talented Spering in particular. Their lengthy investigation of 'Hello Young Lovers', where the bassist contributes a roving, virtuosic line, repays many listens. Lowe seems content to take a more quiescent role, but his more reserved style is just what's needed. Tonally, though, the record becomes a bit monochromatic after a while, the soft articulations a little too lulling. Nyberg comes in right at the end for a duet on 'Prelude To A Kiss'.

 Diimst Dragon DRCD 371 Klinghagen; Ylva Nilsson (clo); Terje Sundby (d). 01.

No fewer than 17 tracks on this interesting three-way encounter. Klinghagen is by no means the dominant voice; Terje Sundby has more composer credits, and several shorter pieces are group improvisations. A lot of it is soundscaping in the tradition of Rypdal, Frisell and Tibbetts, but there's a close-up, resinous quality which Nilsson's cello – apparently unadorned by electronics – brings to the music. It's a pity, actually, that some of the improvisations weren't allowed to reach their natural conclusion; the brevity of 'Bollnäs', which has a lot more energy than some of the meandering pieces, is frustrating. Next time they may do better by throwing caution to the winds.

Eric Kloss (born 1949)

ALTO AND TENOR SAXOPHONES

Born blind, he was a prodigy who started working as a teenager in Pittsburgh. Eclectic and prolific, but now rarely heard of.

(*) About Time Prestige 24268 Kloss; Richard 'Groove' Holmes , Don Patterson (org); Pat Martino, Vinnie Corrao, Gene Edwards (g); Billy James, Grady Tate (d). 1/65–4/66.
 Sky Shadows In The Land Of Giants Prestige 24217 Kloss; Booker Ervin (ts); Jaki Byard (p); Pat Martino (g); Richard Davis, Bob Cranshaw (b); Jack DeJohnette, Alan Dawson (d). 8/68–2/69.
(*) Eric Kloss And The Rhythm Section Prestige 24125 Kloss; Chick Corea (ky); Pat Martino (g); Dave Holland (b); Jack DeJohnette (d). 7/69–1/70.

Kloss's Prestige dates have reappeared in a two-on-one series. The first CD brings together Introducing Eric Kloss and Love And All That Jazz, neither of which stands up too well: Kloss is dumped straight down into the land of clichés which was the organ/sax/guitar combo, and he can't do much with the situation. Sky Shadows and In The Land Of The Giants are coupled on the next one. The latter featured Booker Ervin as second horn and they have some engaging fisticuffs on 'So What' and 'Things Ain't What They Used To Be'. The previous one is more ordinary, but these were typical Prestige rush jobs: at 19, Kloss already had eight albums behind him.

To Hear Is To See! and Consciousness! make up the third, both of them faintly reminiscent of the beatific aspirations of the day but filled with hard-edged blowing that teeters on a line between bop and the oncoming explorations of Miles Davis's electric music. Given the rhythm section personnel, this was hardly a surprise: Holland and DeJohnette lay down some of their funkiest parts (better recordings than Teo Macero's), and Corea's almost minimalist electric piano cushions the harshness of Kloss's solos. Martino arrives for the second session, which opens on the bizarre choice of Donovan's 'Sunshine Superman'. No problem, though, since the quintet pile into it, Kloss lets go with some of his greasiest licks and they almost succeed in turning it into a blues. Most of the music bumps along on this path, and perhaps the souped-up tightness palls a little in the way that some of Gene Ammons's records do, but it's a superior example of the style. Kloss is mostly involved in education now.

Jimmy Knepper (1927–2003)

TROMBONE

Born in LA, he spent time in big bands before joining Charles Mingus. Injured in a contretemps with the bassist, he worked in pit bands from 1962, returning to jazz in the later '60s and '70s.

 Cunningbird Steeplechase SCCD 31060 Knepper; Al Cohn (ts); Roland Hanna (p); George Mraz (b); Dannie Richmond (d). 11/76.
 Tell Me ... Daybreak DD 001 Knepper; Eddie Engels (flhn); Dick Vennik (ts); Floris Nico Bunink (p); John Emmery (b); John Engels (d). 8/79.
 Special Relationship Hep CD2012 Knepper; Bobby Wellins (ts); Joe Temperley (bs, ts); Pete Jacobsen, Derek Smith (p); Dave Green, Michael Moore (b); Billy Hart, Ron Parry (d). 10/78–11/80.
(*) I Dream Too Much Soul Note 121092 Knepper; John Eckert (t); John Clark (frhn); Roland Hanna (p); George Mraz (b); Billy Hart (d). 2–3/84.
 Dream Dancing Criss Cross Jazz 1024 Knepper; Ralph Moore (ts); Dick Katz (p); George Mraz (b); Mel Lewis (d). 4/86.

Knepper had an astonishingly agile technique (based on altered slide positions) which allowed him to play extremely fast lines with considerable legato, more like a saxophonist than a brass-player. Doing so allowed him to avoid the dominant J. J. Johnson style and to develop the swing idiom in a direction that was thoroughly modern and contemporary, with a bright, punchy tone. A fight with Mingus drove him out of active jazz performance for some time, and much of the next decade was spent in relative obscurity. Cunningbird effectively marked his renaissance as a soloist and leader. It's a strong enough album, though Knepper's tone isn't quite as assured here as it became in the '80s, and Al Cohn is below par. Mraz's firm melodic sense makes him the ideal accompanist, but Knepper has also been shrewd or lucky in his choice of drummers. Hart has the right kind of swing and Richmond is endlessly adaptable; an initial question mark about Lewis's big sound on Dream Dancing resolves into an ignorable quirk of the mix. It's not quite the best of the bunch, but it's still a fine album. Ralph Moore still had some growing to do, but he didn't make the mistake of doing it in the studio, concentrating on playing within his perfectly respectable limits. The beautifully arranged brass tonalities of I Dream Too Much make it Knepper's most ambitious and fulfilling album. Hanna's comping is first-rate throughout.

Tell Me was originally on Challenge. It's a relative unknown group, with the exception of Bunink, who joins the leader for two duo takes of 'I Thought About You', but they serve the leader's charts well and they're right behind him on the burning title-track, which leads off. Knepper has most of the solo space and turns in some excellent features, though one senses he's rather shut off expressively at this period.

Special Relationship, as the name and personnel imply, is a transatlantic project, two quintets of respectively Americans and Brits, though Joe Temperley really falls into both categories. Wellins is the star turn. His tone is as airy as ever and his soloing on 'Round About Midnight' and 'Latterday Saint' underlines once again what a loss his absences from the scene always were. Knepper plays against him with great delicacy and control, reserving his more expansive gestures for the sessions with an engagingly gruff and even impatient-sounding Temperley.

Jonas Knutsson

SOPRANO, ALTO AND BARITONE SAXOPHONES, VIBES, KEYBOARDS

The Swede has taken a strong interest in synthesizing folk materials and idioms into a European jazz dialect.

 At Glenn Miller Café Live Vol. 1 Amigo AMCD 889 Knutsson; Christian Spering (b); Bengt Berger (d). 6/00.
 At Mosebacke Live Vol. 2 Amigo AMCD 890 As above, except add Bobo Stenson (p); Mattias Ståhl (vib). 4/00.
 Norrland /  Cow Cow: Norrland II ACT 9014-2 / 9425-2 Knutsson; Johan Norberg (g, kantele). 99–03; 4/05.

Knutsson's music is a colourful and upbeat fusion of styles. The Nordic brooding often associated with the mixing of jazz playing with Scandinavian folk elements makes its presence felt at times, but more often there's a joyful swing that goes with the melodies. The two live sessions are more properly credited to the Berger–Knutsson–Spering trio, and are in a more familiar free-bop idiom. Many of the pieces on both discs are swiftly over and done with and there are a few rather melancholy-sounding standards, including 'Falling In Love Again' and 'My Ship'. The second disc is rather more interesting, with Ståhl arriving for one track and Stenson for three, but overall this doesn't seem to be Knutsson's métier: if there is a dominant player it's the powerful Spering.

The duo records with Norberg restore him to folk song, although of the 26 pieces across both discs only a scant half-dozen are actually traditional melodies. The playing is consistently enthusiastic and charming, yet there is a perhaps unavoidable sameness and consistency of tone which tends to let the music slip into the background.

Hans Koch (born 1948)

SAXOPHONES, CLARINETS

The Swiss reedman's long-standing trio with Schutz and Studer is a rich amalgam of jazz, classical and folk forms.

* Uluru Intakt CD 014 Koch (solo). 1/89.

Until the appearance of the utterly marvellous Uluru, Koch was heard to best advantage on the FMP record Duets, Dithyrambisch, with Evan Parker and Louis Sclavis. Here, he creates a bewildering variety of voices with his three horns. 'Whirly Bird' and 'Tongue Salad' are both virtuosic, but there are more accessible things as well.

 Chockshut Intakt CD 031 Koch; Andreas Marti (tb); Martin Schutz (clo); Jacques Demierre (p); Stephan Wittwer (g); Fredy Studer (d, perc). 12/91.

(*) Hardcore Chambermusic Intakt CD 042 As above, except omit Marti, Demierre, Wittwer. 10/94.

* Heavy Cairo Traffic Intuition INT 3175-2 As above, except add El Nil Troop. 95.

 Fidel Intakt CD 056 As above, except add Musicos Cubanos. 3 & 4/97.

(*) Roots And Wires Intakt CD 060 As above, except add DJ M. Singe, DJ I. Sound (turntables). 99.

Koch, Schutz and Studer take on all-comers; they are among the most fearless and welcoming collaborators in European jazz. The boldest association is the encounter with El Nil Troop on Heavy Cairo Traffic, a haunting musical soundtrack that draws inspirations from Sun Ra to Grace Jones and which is invested with the passionate improvisational spirit of the great Omm Kholsoum. 'Belly Button Rave' and the Sun Ra-dedicated title-track are great jazz, and there are moments on 'Vice Versa' which recall Herbie Hancock at his most extreme. The mix is heavy with found sounds and overlaid vocal- and horn-lines from the members of El Nil Troop. The Cuban album is a messy, sprawling postcard from another culture. Episodically, it's gorgeous, but there's little cohesion. Perhaps the best place to start, and before plunging into the dense sound-world of Heavy Cairo Traffic, is the trio performance on Hardcore Chambermusic, on which the individual contributions of the three members are most straightforwardly evident.

Chockshut is more straightforwardly instrumental, but Koch uses the harmonic range of the 'shadow' trio to create a spacious background of effects. Something of its energy is carried over into the highly effective trio set with DJs. 'Thai Speed Parade' is a nervy, twittering thing, built round an insistent pulse which seems to be the dominant metre for the album as a whole.

* London Duos And Trios Intakt CD 081 Koch; Phil Durrant (vn); Mark Wastell (clo); John Edwards (b); Rhodri Davies (hp); Steve Noble (d); Roger Turner (perc); Pat Thomas (elec); Phil Minton (v). 12/00.

Towards the end of 2000, Koch spent a fruitful few days in London, working with some of the younger improvisers on the scene. The second qualifier there obviously doesn't apply to Minton, who is a grand old veteran and in scarily good form. There isn't a dull or self-indulgent track on the set and Koch, who packs his soprano saxophone and bass and contrabass clarinets, rises to the occasion with some of his most focused and alert playing.

 Life Tied / (*) Tales From 30 Unintentional Nights Intakt CD 094 / CD 117 Koch; Martin Schutz (clo, 5-str clo, elec); Fredy Studer (d, perc). 10/01, 5/02, 3 & 9/03; 9/05.

The first of these was recorded in a wide variety of locations, by the basic trio, and they bear witness to the almost telepathic awareness these men have developed. Nice to hear them without other collaborators for a change. Schutz's cello sounds are extraordinary and his manipulation of electronics provides a vivid environment for Koch.

The other represents the best of a month's worth of nightly improvisations in an old locksmith's workshop in downtown Zurich, so in that sense is very different to the peripatetic quality of the previous record. The collective sound-world is extraordinary, but Koch is in amazing form, every phrase and pattern a repository of ideas, every new initiative a subtle pick into the heart of the conundrum. Wonderful.

Also, in brief:

 Acceleration ECM 833473-2. 6/87.

There is some harsh, interesting music on this, but the programming lets it down and there's not much interaction.

 Live In Schiffbau Intakt CD 074. 10/00.

An intriguing collaboration with poet Christian Uetz, recorded in Zurich.

Tony Kofi

SOPRANO, ALTO AND BARITONE SAXOPHONES

London-based saxophonist in a crowded post-bop field.

 All Is Know Specific 001 Kofi; Jonathan Gee (p); Orphy Robinson (marim); Madeleine Easton (vn); Reiad Chibah (vla); Andrew Joyce (clo); Ben Hazleton (b); Winston Clifford (d). 1/04.

 Future Passed Specific 004 Kofi; Byron Wallen (t); Anders Olinder (org); Cameron Pierre (g); Robert Fordjour (d); Donald Gamble (perc). 05.

Kofi's ambitious debut presents an all-Thelonious Monk programme, a tough call not so much because the music is difficult – though many of these tunes are – but because it's already been so intensively covered. Aside from the enigmatic string chart which adorns 'Ugly Beauty', the themes are given a pretty straightforward reading by the core quartet. Kofi primarily uses the alto and his fierce tone collars the attention, but while it's an enjoyable repertory record the leader doesn't master the project sufficiently to place his own stamp on the music, and some of the pieces, such as 'We See', sound self-consciously 'Monkian'. Gee is awarded a solo ('Teo') and Robinson is an effective guest on the fine 'Misterioso'.

The second record moves him up a notch with a variation on the organ combo groove. But there's something ordinary about the band. Wallen doesn't always sound secure in his solos and the group never find the intense delivery which Kofi's music calls for.

Franz Koglmann (born 1946)

TRUMPET, FLUGELHORN

The Austrian trumpeter believes that jazz, as an active and developing genre, is dead, which is why he keeps playing it, in an intriguing hybrid of cool and classical modernism.

(*) We Thought About Duke hatOLOGY 543 Koglmann; Rudolf Ruschel (tb); Raoul Herget (tba); Lee Konitz (as); Tony Coe (cl, ts); Burkhard Stangl (g); Klaus Koch (b). 6/94.

 O Moon My Pin Up hatOLOGY 566 Koglmann; Rudolf Ruschel (tb); Raoul Herget (tba); Mario Arcari (ob, ob d'amore, eng hn); Tony Coe (cl, ts); Angelika Riedl (bsn); Michael Hintersteininger (g); Barre Phillips (b); Phil Minton, Wiener Vokalisten (v). 3/97.

Until the establishment of his own label, Koglmann's output was exclusively on hatART. The most appealing survivor is the Ellington tribute, which has Konitz as co-leader. The saxophonist has worked in very similar territory over recent years and he sounds like a soulmate. He's quite at home in the Monoblue Quartet of Koglmann, Coe, Stangl and Koch; the stripped-down Pipe Trio is credited with the other five tracks. Koglmann contributes three original compositions under the generic heading 'Thoughts About Duke', and otherwise explores the less-familiar reaches of the canon. 'Dirge' and 'Zweet Zurzday' bear the counter-signature of Billy Strayhorn and 'Pyramid' is a Tizol tune; otherwise, it's 'Lament For Javanette', 'Ko-Ko', 'Love In My Heart' and 'The Mooche'. All are beautifully played and atmospheric.

O Moon My Pin Up is one of the more ambitious and formally structured of Koglmann's projects. Like Cantos, it reflects his long-standing obsession with Ezra Pound. It derives its texts from the Pisan Cantos, written while the poet was held by the American army at the end of the Second World War, accused of making pro-Fascist and anti-Semitic broadcasts; the poems are a curious mixture of floating lyricism and the most bilious polemic against the modern world and its works. Koglmann worked to a libretto by Christian Baier. The choice of Phil Minton as the voice of EP is a stroke of genius and the choral accompaniment is superb.

 Make Believe / (*) An Affair With Strauss Between The Lines btl 001 / 006 Koglmann; Tom Varner (frhn); Tony Coe (ts, cl, v); Brad Shepik (g); Peter Herbert (b). 11/98–99; 6/99.

 Venus In Transit Between The Lines btl 016 Koglmann; Chris Speed (ts, cl); Michael Rabinowitz (bsn); David Fiuczynski (g); Mat Maneri (vn, vla); Peter Herbert (b); John Mettam (d). 2/01.

 Don't Play, Just Be Between The Lines btl 021 Koglmann; Tony Coe (ts, cl); James Emery (g); Ulli Fussenegger, Peter Herbert (b). 02.

The first releases on Koglmann's new label continue the project of recent years. Make Believe is a quiet and thoughtful set. Koglmann has cited Jean Cocteau before, but Make Believe is a series of meditations on the Frenchman's classic Les Enfants terribles. It represents an attempt to demonstrate by musical means 'the hidden world of dreams, the intoxication of fantasy and the artificial reality of life in closed spaces'. As such, it succeeds pretty well. Koglmann, Coe and Varner evoke a world of claustrophobic intimacy. As ever, it is a world governed by rules and forms, but also prey to irruptions from elsewhere, slashed across by the opium nightmares and sudden estrangements of Shepik's effects-laden guitar. An instrumental 'Interlude', led by Coe in his Pink Panther mode, seems to lead out into a more brightly lit world, but then 'Rue Montmartre' re-establishes the mood of threat and existential danger. Set as faux-rock, it bears just one instruction to the players, the simple, devastating 'Stupid'. This is certainly the least predetermined and written-out project Koglmann has released. In addition to the Cocteau material, which also includes the suave, menacing lullaby 'Blut', there is a new appearance of an old Koglmann composition, 'Der Vogel'. An Affair With Strauss again imaginatively hybridizes classical procedures and standards jazz in a way that sparks new ideas. Coe is, as ever, such a brilliant technician that he dominates proceedings; and yet Koglmann, always a diffident player, asserts himself more completely on 'A Metropolitan Affair' and 'Out Of Strauss' than he ever has before.

The two later releases consolidate Koglmann's project with ever greater confidence. Don't Play, Just Be is a clever and playful set, marked by the trumpeter's usual gift for delicate instrumentation. But it is Venus In Transit which really stands out. The first sequence of tracks is dedicated to Marilyn Monroe and was apparently written for a theatre piece. The remainder touch on ideas in architecture. Some of the tracks are as tiny and jewel-like as Webern and are written in a version of the Klangfarbenmelodie approach, with each instrument taking different tones in a line. Consummately brilliant music.

(*) Fear Death By Water Between The Lines btl 034 Koglmann; Tony Coe (cl, ts); Martin Siewert (g, elec); Peter Herbert (b); Wolfgang Reisinger (d); Birgit Doll, Morenike Fadayomi, Walter Raffeiner, Alexander Waechte (v); members of Ensemble XX. Jahrhundert. 3/03.

Koglmann's long-standing interest in the literary modernists emerges again in this jazz opera to a libretto by Christian Baier. As the title suggests, Fear Death By Water is inspired by The Waste Land, not such an unlikely source since T. S. Eliot's poem is full of jazz and jazz rhythms, juxtaposed with images of human frailty and death. Koglmann's core unit, the Monoblue Quartet, acts as the piece's Tiresias, exposing a society that has lost its ability to feel. At the recorded première, the audience was shown images of war casualties as the music unfolded.

The basic group is augmented by drummer Wolfgang Reisinger, and the main parts, named after Tarot characters, are performed by a group of very able and flexible vocalists who manage to balance the Grand Guignol elements of the libretto with the studied cool of the score. It's difficult to separate out the elements that make up a piece divided into 17 short, songlike passages. The quartet's uninflected tonality is defined by Koglmann's Chet-like flugelhorn, Coe's weeping clarinet and Siewert's Hawaiian guitar; it's reminiscent of the most laid-back West Coast jazz, transcribed and played back mechanically, and offers a disturbing perspective on the disasters that lurk on the horizon. No coincidence that the piece was performed as the world slid towards the second Gulf War.

 Let's Make Love Between the Lines btl 71206 Koglmann; Rudolf Ruschel (tb); Tom Varner (frhn); Raoul Herget (tba);

Tony Coe (ts, cl); Mario Arcari (vn); Robert Michael Weiss (p, hpd); Gert Schubert (vn); Peter Herbert (b). 11/05.

Described as 'imaginary theatre without speakers or singers', this is somewhat reminiscent of a Michael Mantler project, but with a lightness and delicacy that puts it closer to the sound-world of Carla Bley on Escalator. The title is explained by Marilyn Monroe's adulterous affair with Yves Montand on the set of that Cukor movie and in 12 scenes magically evokes a world of illicit romance, Oedipal dependency ('A Hero (My Heart Belongs To Daddy))' and ultimately autumnal despair ('Les Feuilles Mortes'). A small masterpiece.

Eero Koivistoinen (born 1941)

TENOR, SOPRANO AND SOPRANINO SAXOPHONES

One of a richly talented generation of Finnish horn-players, Koivistoinen was a member of the rock group Blues Section before diversifying into funk and jazz.

 Wahoo! What Music 8358 Koivistoinen; Kaj Backlund (t); Juhani Aalto (tb); Juhani Aaltonen (as, f); Umto Haapa-Aho (bs, bcl); Olli Ahvenlahti, Esa Helsvuo, Esko Linnavalli (p); Matti Kurkinen, Ilja Saastamoinen (g); Ilkka Willman, Heikki Virtainen (b); Reino Laine, Esko Rosnell (d); Edward Vesala, Sabu Martinez (perc). 12/72.

() The Front Is Breaking Love LRCD 188 Koivistoinen; Olli Ahvenlahti (p); Wlodek Gulkowski (syn, ky); Jukka Tolonen, George Wadenius (g); Pekka Pohjola (b); Esko Rosnelli (d). 5/76.

 Labyrinth Love LRCD 232 Koivistoinen; Vladimir Shafranov (p); Pekka Sarmanto (b); Reino Laine (d). 5/77.

Koivistoinen has a pungent, spicy tone that is deceptively 'American' in accent. His kinship with the dominant Garbarek approach is only incidental, and he veers towards a free style that dispenses with orthodox changes. The earlier of these reissued records now sound a little dated. Wahoo! is somewhat overburdened with generic electric-piano ripples and guitar chords, but the level of musicianship is such that there is always enough incident to keep the attention focused. At this point Koivistoinen hadn't yet found the delivery that later made him such a compelling soloist, but his tone is superb and on long tunes like 'Suite 19', 'Hot C', '7 Up' and '6 Down' he has genuine presence.

The Front Is Breaking is even more time-stamped with 'funky' electronics, pastiche Shaft wah-wah accompaniments and soft-edged production. Gulkowski's synth solo on 'Safari', though, is testimony to the high level of musicianship in Finland at the time and the kind of quality accompaniment that has made Koivistoinen such an enterprising player. The saxophonist is relatively unemphatic on this occasion, blending with the ensemble as often as not.

Labyrinth is much more securely Koivistoinen's album and a more idiomatic session. It also marks the end – for the time being at least – of the saxophonist's electronic groups. Koivistoinen again demonstrates his skill on the treacherously pitched sopranino, playing the tiny horn in the middle section of the title-suite and on the delicious 'Arabeski'. The reissue includes a second take of the latter and a further unreleased take of 'Spring Song', which he performs soprano. The former composition student is as deeply aware as his ex-teacher, the distinguished Aulis Sallinen, of the richness of Finnish folk music and includes an arrangement of 'Yksi Ruusu On Kasnavut Laaksossa', on which he plays his tenor with an almost vocal inflection.

 Sometime Ago A Records AL 73139 Koivistoinen; Seppo Kantonen (p); Severi Pyysalo (mar); Jesper Lundgaard, Ron McClure (b); Jeff Hirshfield (d). 10/92–10/94.

Koivistoinen has always been an attractive ballad-player, but this was the first time he has made a whole album of slower and mainly standard tunes. The sessions involved three separate units, all of them anchored on Kantonen. Trio X is completed by Severi Pyysalo on marimba, a warm and responsive sound that works wonderfully on the title-piece and on the only original, 'Relation'. The quartet with McClure and Hirshfield revives an association that goes all the way back to Berklee days. 'Every Time We Say Goodbye' is masterly, with some detailed interplay between saxophone and bass. The third group is a drummerless trio with Lundgaard, similar in conception to Trio X but more boppish in conception. An impressively varied and textured album.

Dmitri Kolesnik

DOUBLE BASS

Grew up in St Petersburg but abandoned plans for an engineering career to come to the US to study with Ron Carter, who remains a staunch supporter of his pupil's work.

 Blues For Dad / (*) Five Corners Boheme 10327 / Challenge 73256 Kolesnik; Alex Sipiagin (t, flhn); Jim Rotondi (t, flhn on Five Corners only); Eric Alexander (ts); Andrei Kondakov (b); Lenny White (d). 5/00; 5/06.

One can see why Carter, who contributes a liner-note to the debut album, would enjoy Kolesnik's sound, big and warm, with an impressively intelligent approach to note-choice. Given that, it's no surprise that he should also be an impressive composer. Everything except Kondakov's 'New York Wind', a long blowing (!) piece, is credited to the bassist, but what's nice is how well he tailors his line to the talents of the band. 'Blues For Dad' is terrific and the autobiographical thread continues with 'Home', 'Waltz for B.E.' (Bill Evans, we'd guess) and 'White Nights, Gray Days'. It's a record full of plangent nostalgia but also resolute ambition. A most auspicious debut.

The same band (plus Rotondi) returns for the second album, but it doesn't quite have the immediate impact of its predecessor. Kolesnik features himself within the ensembles, rather than insisting on lots of solo space for the bass, and while this is a sensible tactic in the main, he does seem to waste some of his best ideas in less than clearly audible contexts. 'Blues For Dad' is repeated, and again Kondakov gets his share of credits, with two compositions this time. This, you might say, is the New York album, still tinged with regret but coming to terms with his new home. 'In Monk's Mood' is a heartfelt tribute and 'Bitter Chocolate', with Sipiagin glorious on flugelhorn, is a beautiful line.

Krzysztof Komeda (1931–69)

PIANO

The Lost Leader of Polish jazz. A brilliant composer rather than a virtuosic player, he's best known in the West for film scores for his friend Roman Polanski. Moved to America, but was returned home in an irreversible coma.

(*) Ballet Etudes / Breakfast At Tiffany's Power Bros PB 00155 Komeda; Tomasz Stańko (t); Eje Thelin (tb); Zbigniew Namysłowski (as); Michal Urbaniak (ts); Jerzy Lesicki (f); Janusz

Sidorenko (g); Roman Dylag, Jacek Ostaszewski (b); Rune Carlsson, Adam Jedrzejowski (d); Wanda Warska (v). 10/62, 1/63.

 Memory Of Bach Power Bros PB 00157 Komeda; Tomasz Stańko (t); Zbigniew Namysłowski (as); Michal Urbaniak, Jan 'Ptaszyn' Wróblewski (ts); Jerzy Milian (vib); Roman Dylag, Jozef Stolarz, Maciej Suzin (b); Czeslaw Bartkowski, Rune Carlsson, Jan Zylber (d). 56–67.

 Nighttime, Daytime Requiem Power Bros PB 0159 Komeda; Tomasz Stańko (t); Zbigniew Namysłowski (as); Roman Dylag (b); Rune Carlsson (d). 11/67.

 Moja Ballada Power Bros PB 0161 Komeda; Tomasz Stańko (t); Michal Urbaniak (ts); Adam Skorupka, Maciej Suzin (b); Czeslaw Bartkowski, Adam Zielinski (d); other personnel. 11/61, 67.

♛ * Astigmatic Harkit HKRCD 8158 Komeda; Tomasz Stańko (t); Zbigniew Namysłowski (as); Günter Lenz (b); Rune Carlsson (d). 12/65.

 Sophia's Tune /  Roman Two Power Bros PB 00167 / 00169 Komeda; Tomasz Stańko (t); Michal Urbaniak (sax); Bo Stief (b); Simon Kopel (d). 65.

 What's Up Mr Basie? Power Bros PB 00171 As above, except omit Stief, Kopel; add Maciej Suzin (b), Czeslaw Bartkowski (d). 63.

Komeda was born Trzcinski and trained as an ear, nose and throat specialist. He changed his name to avoid the attentions of both the political and the medical authorities; later, in America, he anglicized his first name to Christopher. In 1956 he made his musical debut at a small, semi-official jazz festival at the coastal town of Sopot in Poland, the forerunner to the now annual Jazz Jamboree in Warsaw.

Much of his music has been reissued on CD by the Power Bros label, and the essential Astigmatic has also emerged in a new edition on Harkit. The series begins with a set of ballet studies Komeda made for an experimental troupe at Cracow Engineering College, together with a score for a theatre production of Truman Capote's Breakfast At Tiffany's. Both suggest a musician with a clear but idiosyncratic understanding of American jazz, and also a composer with a wonderful gift for suggestive musical drama. Memory Of Bach includes material written for Komeda's Sopot debut and the title-track is the original version of an important piece for the composer, one that established him as an original, albeit respectful voice. In addition to the title-track, the record includes a version of 'Crazy Girl', one of the tunes on his Knife in the Water soundtrack. 'Crazy Girl' was a dedication to Zofia, who emerges as the composer's muse. 'Sophia's Tune' appears in another slice of the same Copenhagen concert on the disc of the same name. The remainder occupies the whole of Roman Two. The sound is still appalling, the quality of music unexceptionable.

'Nighttime, Daytime Requiem' on the album of that name is a good example of Komeda's otherworldly impressionism. This is unmistakably the composer of the film music, a musician with a keen but maverick sense of structure. Mood almost always dictates the dimensions and pace of a piece and subtly invests the harmonic language as well. For once it is easy to pick out his further debt to Polish Romanticism.

What's Up Mr Basie? is the Komeda set from the 1963 Warsaw Jazz Jamboree, the gathering which evolved out of Sopot. The group is by now a familiar one. Stanko, who later felt snubbed by the festival organizers, is in cracking form, and the only pity is that the piano is so far back in the mix, not at all true to the balance of the group.

Which leaves Astigmatic, in both studio and live forms. We cannot recommend this record highly enough and we envy anyone who can come to it fresh, ideally with no prior knowledge or expectations of Komeda. It is a record that never fails to repay close attention, but one that has an engrossing emotional physicality. Stańko's tone is lustrous and intense and the great Namysłowski projects his complex bop-derived lines in phrases that link together like pieces of DNA into living wholes. One misses him on the live version, where again the spotlight falls on Stańko. As ever, Komeda is a presence and a unifying element rather than a commanding soloist. The studio sound favours his rather unemphatic touch, and he certainly had a better piano in Warsaw than on the road – though, listening to it again, we wonder if the instrument wasn't perhaps tuned a little dark. Deliberately? There is no indication that tape speed is the problem, but it raises the interesting possibility that Komeda was already experimenting with the kind of detuning and pure sound that would resurface on Rosemary's Baby. The soundtrack album to that still-frightening film can probably be found in good film music sections and in specialist stores; it merits comparison with these records. It also hints at the tragic aura that seemed to hang round Polanski and his circle.

Lee Konitz (born 1927)

ALTO, SOPRANO AND TENOR SAXOPHONES

The redoubtable Chicagoan came under the influence of Lennie Tristano early and along with Warne Marsh shaped the definitive cool saxophone sound, but later he assimilated bebop and free playing as well.

(*) Subconscious-Lee Original Jazz Classics OJC 186 Konitz; Warne Marsh (ts); Sal Mosca, Lennie Tristano (p); Billy Bauer (g); Arnold Fishkind (b); Denzil Best, Shelly Manne, Jeff Morton (d). 1/49–4/50.

Astonishingly, Konitz spent what should have been his most productive years in limbo: teaching, unrecognized by critics; unrecorded by all but small European labels. Perhaps because of his isolation, Konitz has routinely exposed himself in the most ruthlessly unpredictable musical settings. The discography is huge.

Subconscious-Lee brings together material made under Lennie Tristano's leadership in January 1949, with quartet and quintet tracks made a few months later, featuring Marsh on 'Tautology' and four other numbers. The remaining group material with Mosca and Bauer is less compelling, but there is a fine duo with the guitarist on 'Rebecca' which anticipates later intimacies.

(*) Konitz Meets Mulligan Pacific 46847 Konitz; Chet Baker (t); Gerry Mulligan (bs); Joe Mondragon, Carson Smith (b); Larry Bunker (d). 1/53.

Konitz was to remember Chet Baker more fondly as the years went by. Here the relationship sounds creatively acerbic, as two of the coolest voices of the time vie for supremacy without seeming to lift a finger. Mulligan's light-toned baritone fits into the mix perfectly and there are moments on 'Lover Man', 'I'll Remember April' and 'All The Things You Are' when this might be a permanent line-up, so sympathetic are the three front-men. Phrases and whole lines are traded back and forth; Konitz and then Mulligan modulate unexpectedly; the pianoless rhythm section slips the rhythm here and there.

[illegible]

(*) With Warne Marsh
Warner Bros 75356 Konitz; Warne Marsh (ts); Ronnie Ball, Sal Mosca (p); Billy Bauer (g); Oscar Pettiford (b); Kenny Clarke (d). 6/55.

It is one of the most famous saxophone partnerships in jazz, cool and oblique without being either chill or soulless. 'Donna Lee' is given a drier and less wild delivery than even its composer, Miles Davis, would have favoured, but it is no less true to the dictates of bebop. 'Don't Squawk' is the most developed piece here, a sinuous and awkward idea that moves with reptilian grace. 'Topsy', 'I Can't Get Started' and 'There Will Never Be Another You' aren't merely the best of the rest but are genuinely powerful tracks. Not always the most engaging and comfortable of records, but essential.

 Inside Hi-Fi Atlantic Masters 81227 3615 2 Konitz; Sal Mosca (p); Billy Bauer (g); Arnold Fishkind, Peter Ind (b); Dick Scott (d). 9/56.
 Peter Ind Presents Lee Konitz In Jazz From The 1950s Wave 26 As above, except omit Fishkind; add Don Ferrara (t). 57.

Immediately after the guitar solo on the opening 'Kary's Trance', Konitz puts down his alto and switches to tenor for the first time on record. He found it a liberating experience, and though he persists with alto on the first side of this 1957 LP, he switched to tenor for the second, with a different group. It gave him an alternative to the whispery alto sound of his early days, but even on the smaller horn, on 'Sweet And Lovely', he's playing with more edge and attack. Scott had caught his ear with a fresh, flexible delivery and was an important collaborator for a time. The 'tenor group' was completed by Mosca and Ind.

[illegible]

♛  Motion
Verve V6 8399 Konitz; Sonny Dallas (b); Elvin Jones (d). 8/61.

One of the great modern jazz records. Its unique chemistry is due in part to the unlikely pairing of the 'cool' Konitz with the hyperactive Jones. The sessions were recorded pretty much straight down and some of the additional material was issued on a Verve triple set some years back; a 1990 reissue increased the track listing of the original LP to eight tunes. Nothing, though, matches the impact of the issued LP, which is now available again in digipack with original liner-notes.

The trio starts off with 'Foolin' Myself', and Konitz's fleet, agile alto sound immediately gels with the surprisingly soft playing of Jones. 'You'd Be So Nice To Come Home To' is superb. Again, Konitz floats round the melody more than he disappears on the back of the chords. Dallas is firm-footed and precise. 'I'll Remember April' is another of the highlights but anyone who has the three-CD set will know that 'I Remember You' caused the trio some grief and had to be retaken. The release take is quite brilliant, flowing, seamless and harmonically subtle. The set ends with 'All Of Me', Konitz rippling through the theme and embellishing the structure from beginning to end.

(*) The Lee Konitz Duets Original Jazz Classics OJC 466 Konitz; Marshall Brown (vtb, euph); Joe Henderson, Richie Kamuca (ts); Dick Katz (p); Karl Berger (vib); Jim Hall (g); Ray Nance (vn); Eddie Gomez (b); Elvin Jones (d). 9/67.
 I Concentrate On You Steeplechase SCCD 1018 Konitz; Red Mitchell (b, p). 6/74.
(*) Windows Steeplechase SCCD 31057 Konitz; Hal Galper (p). 77.

The duo format balances Konitz's conversational affability with gimlet sharpness of thought. The 1967 album pivots on five versions of the classic duo piece, 'Alone Together'; the first is solo, the next three are duets with Karl Berger, Eddie Gomez and Elvin Jones, culminating in a fine quartet reading. The pairings with Henderson ('You Don't Know What Love Is') and Kamuca ('Tickle Toe'), and with Brown are astonishing, as far as possible from the comforting horn-plus-rhythm options, most of them refused, of the tracks with Katz, Hall and even Ellingtonian Nance (who plays his 'second' instrument). It all culminates in a fine, all-in nonet.

Galper's velvety backgrounds inspire some of Konitz's most lapidary performances. There is very little harmonic tension in the pianist's approach, in contrast to Mitchell (on either double bass or piano), and the result is to focus Konitz very much on the tune rather than on its changes. That is particularly noticeable on 'Stella By Starlight'. Each man has one (improvised) solo slot: Konitz's 'Soliloquy' is a lean, unselfindulgent exercise in low-fat improvisation and, as such, an illustration of the album's considerable strengths; Galper's 'Villainesque' is exactly the opposite, a multi-layered Viennese confection.

The Cole Porter readings with Red Mitchell explore equally familiar territory, but as if by night. Konitz revels in this kind of dead-reckoning performance and steers through the chords with finely tuned instinct. He also seems to like the extremes of pitch he gets opposite the notoriously straight-backed Mitchell, and it's a shame he wasn't carrying a soprano as well.

() European Episode / () Impressive Rome Camjazz 214 / 216 Konitz; Martial Solal (p); Henri Texier (d); Daniel Humair (b). 10/68.

The association with Solal, revived so memorably in duo in 1983, was important to Konitz during what was the thinnest time in his career. These two discs belong as much to the pianist as to Lee, but the empathy is evident in every track and the level of music-making is superb throughout.

(*) Jazz A Juan Steeplechase SCCD 1072 Konitz; Martial Solal (p); Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen (b); Daniel Humair (d). 7/74.

Solal is one of the great harmonists, with the ability to find anomalous areas within the most restrictively familiar themes; his statement and subsequent excursions on 'Round About Midnight' are typical of his innate resistance to cliché. NHØP sounds willing to go anywhere, able to communicate in almost any company, a reconciler of opposites, gentle, but with a hard centre. Konitz sounds relaxed and easy, flurrying breathy top notes and leaving space round the brighter middle register.

(*) Lone-Lee Steeplechase SCCD 31035 Konitz solo. 8/74.

Even three years after Anthony Braxton's For Alto, solo-saxophone performance was still considered a radical strategy. Konitz's unaccompanied treatment of just two standards – 'Cherokee' and 'The Song Is You' – contains some of his very best playing. Smooth legato passages are interspersed with harsher, almost percussive sections in which his pads snap down impatiently on the note. There are few if any hints of the free playing he essayed later, but there is a looseness rarely encountered elsewhere in his work.

 Satori Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 958 Konitz; Dick Katz, Martial Solal (p); Dave Holland (b); Jack DeJohnette (d). 9/74.

Originally for Milestone. With a top-flight rhythm section who had seen service with Miles Davis, he dips a toe into rock-influenced free funk, adding producer Dick Katz on electric piano on the long title-track. Solal also uses a Fender Rhodes on 'Sometime Ago', a rare flirtation. The mix of material is determined by the instincts of the group, not just the leader. 'What's New' and the closing 'Free Blues' are geared to Holland in particular and he makes a sterling job of yoking together sometimes incompatible elements. DeJohnette strains at the leash a bit.

 The London Concert Wave 16 Konitz; Warne Marsh (ts); Peter Ind (b); Al Levitt (d). 76.

Recorded at the Shaw Theatre during a memorable trip to the UK. The sound is good for the time, but has a curious period feel that makes this seem like a more ancient document.

 Tenorlee Candid 71019 Konitz; Jimmy Rowles (p); Michael Moore (b). 1/77, 3/78.

On tenor Konitz favours a soft middle register that is often within alto range, but the darker sonority puts him in a different relation to both piano and bass, and on 'Skylark' and 'Autumn Nocturne' it's possible to hear him renegotiating his line as Moore moves too close. 'Tenorlee' is unaccompanied saxophone; it's not quite Coleman Hawkins, indeed much closer to Lester Young, which is why the segue into a trio 'Lady Be Good' is so effectively redolent of Pres's and Basie's version of the song.

 Yes Yes Nonet / (*) Live At Laren Steeplechase SCCD 31119 / Soul Note 121069 Konitz; Tom Harrell (t, flhn on Yes only); Red Rodney (t on Live only); John Eckert (t, picc t, flhn); Jimmy Knepper (tb); Sam Burtis (btb, tba); Ronnie Cuber (bs, cl); Harold Danko (p); Buster Williams (b); Billy Hart (d). 8/79.

The Nonet was one of Konitz's best and most durable larger groups. The brass settings were well-ventilated and open-textured and Konitz soloed confidently, often oblivious to the constraints of metre. The Steeplechase is the better of the two, largely because Harrell sounds more sympathetic to Konitz's own conception; Wayne Shorter's 'Footprints' is the outstanding cut. On Live At Laren, generally a good concert rendering, the saxophonist accommodates Rodney's backward-looking bop manner with what occasionally sound – on 'April' and 'Moon Dreams' – like pastiches of himself.

 Toot Sweet Owl 013 432 2 Konitz; Michel Petrucciani (p). 5/82.

Recorded in the cavernous acoustic of the Centre Musical Bösendorfer in Paris, with Petrucciani on a ripe-sounding house piano. The still teenaged Frenchman plays without much in the way of swing, leading Konitz through the melody and chords of 'I Hear A Rhapsody', before taking things in a more promising direction on his own solo 'To Erlinda'; the later 'Ode' is a solo from Lee. The two big performances are 'Lover Man' and 'Round About Midnight', both given new life. The closing track is a worked-up theme for the date which suggests that some musical empathy emerged, even though they remain as politely remote as they sound on the mix.

 Dovetail Sunnyside 1003 Konitz; Harold Danko (p); Jay Leonhart (b). 2/83.

How a 'terzet' differs from a trio isn't clear, though the geometry of this set differs from the average jazz threesome. Rhythm duties are distributed round the group and, particularly on 'Alone Together' and 'Cherokee', it is hard to differentiate between melodic, harmonic and time-keeping roles.

 Star Eyes: Hamburg 1983 hatOLOGY 518 Konitz; Martial Solal (p). 11/83.

In Solal's hands, even 'Cherokee', tucked away at the end of the set, seems reinvented, but it's the duo's approach to 'Star Eyes', 'It's You' and even 'Subconscious-Lee' that startles. Solal stays well inside the tune in terms of chordal patterns and basic trajectory, but his harmonies are so rich and ambiguous that Konitz is initially obliged to work his way back to the source before taking the theme out as he would normally do.

 Wild As Springtime Candid CCD 79734 Konitz; Harold Danko (p). 3/84.

This pairs Konitz with his most responsive accompanist of the '80s. The big plus on this carefully mastered CD issue is an unreleased track, 'It's You', and two alternatives, Chick Corea's 'Hairy Canary' and George Russell's classic 'Ezz-thetic'. This is the territory Konitz loves, and his own 'Hi, Beck', which is mined from 'Pennies From Heaven', takes on a startling new profile. 'Hairy Canary' suggests a very different Corea from the wistful composer of 'Duende', also represented here. Danko weighs in with a couple of themes, both dance-based: 'Silly Samba' is an invitation to Konitz to step and slide away on one of his fugitive lines, while 'Spinning Waltz' is woven out of the lightest of materials. Perhaps the best place to judge the empathy between these two remarkable players is the spontaneously composed 'Ko'. Hard to believe that no element of this exquisite performance was predetermined; Danko sweeps the open strings of the piano, creating a shimmering backdrop to a formally perfect off-the-cuff statement from the other Ko.

 Ideal Scene Soul Note 121119 Konitz; Harold Danko (p); Rufus Reid (b); Al Harewood (d). 7/86.

 The New York Album Soul Note 121169 Konitz; Harold Danko (p); Marc Johnson (b); Adam Nussbaum (d). 8/87.

Danko's exact chording and fine grasp of durations on Ideal Scene open up the challenging spaces of George Russell's 'Ezz-thetic' and the more familiar, but inexhaustible, 'Stella By Starlight'. He is more conventional but no less inventive on The New York Album. Duo performance tended to reinforce Konitz's early preference for very long, unpunctuated lines. Working with an attentive band as closely attentive as both of these allows him to break up his development and give it the emotional directness – if not the explicit form – of the blues. Johnson's and Reid's moody delivery and Nussbaum's almost casual two-fours on the later album reinforce the darker sound.

(*) Zounds Soul Note 121219 Konitz; Kenny Werner (p, ky); Ron McClure (b); Bill Stewart (d). 5/90.

Konitz continues to surprise with three remarkable free improvisations, interspersed with two staple items ('Prelude To A Kiss' and 'Taking A Chance On Love'), an original samba and the astonishing 14-minute 'All Things Considered', which sounds like a summation of what Konitz has been doing for the last 25 years. The whole set has a freewheeling, spontaneous feel.

(*) Lullaby Of Birdland Candid CCD 79709 Konitz; Barry Harris (p); Calvin Hill (b); Leroy Williams (d). 9/91.

Harris plays the changes immaculately, eschewing fancy modulations and non-canonical key-changes. Both men are at the top of their craft, and the solos on a totally standards-based programme are packed with invention. Konitz's solo on 'Cherokee' even manages to squeeze in a couple of Ornette phrases, just as he inverts a Parker idea, stretching out its metre in the process, on 'Anthropology'. The sound's a bit wayward but otherwise hard to fault.

 Friends Dragon DRCD 240 Konitz; Gunnar Bergsten (bs); Lars Sjøsten (p); Peter Söderblom (b); Nils Danell (d). 12/91.

The performances of two Lars Gullin compositions – 'Lars Meets Jeff' and 'Happy Again' – suggest that Konitz may have been studying the great Swede's records, since he quotes from original solos in a couple of places. This sort of gig was bread-and-butter, but there's never a moment when attention flags. Sjøsten's quartet is highly professional and very musical, and the permutation of alto/soprano with baritone saxophone works delightfully.

(*) Unleemited Owl 014 727 2 Konitz; Kenny Werner (p, cel). 1/92.

During a prolific spell, Konitz hooked up with yet another fine pianist to record this set of Alain Guyonnet compositions. The title-piece is a very fair approximation of the kind of sliding, angular blues-based tune that Konitz himself creates, but it is with pieces like 'Brazilian Fondue' and 'Baby, I'm A Legend' that the Swiss bandleader reveals his eclectic originality, switching from neo-bop harmonies to rich Latin structures to relatively abstract chord shapes, all within the space of a couple of songs. Werner is in excellent form and his celeste adds a hint of spice.

 Leewise Storyville STCD 4181 Konitz; Jeff Davis (t); Allan Botschinsky (t, flhn); Erling Kroner (tb); Niels Gerhardt (btb, tba); Jens Sondergaard (ss, as, bs); Peter Gullin (ts, bs); Butch Lacy, Peggy Stern (p); Jesper Lundgaard (b); Svend-Erik Nørregaard (d); Brigitte Frieboe (v). 3/92.

Konitz was the 1992 Jazzpar winner, an accolade which brings with it the opportunity to record with a hand-picked Danish group. Only the first three tracks – 'Partout', 'Alone Together' and 'Body And Soul' – were recorded at the Jazzpar concert. The All-Star Nonet, directed by Jens Sondergaard, is exemplarily professional but lacks expressiveness. As probably befits a celebratory event, the emphasis is on playing rather than on groundbreaking new material. There are a couple of more improvisatory duets, with saxophonist Sondergaard and with Botschinsky, but these are less focused than usual.

(*) Jazz Nocturne Evidence ECD 22085 Konitz; Kenny Barron (p); James Genus (b); Kenny Washington (d). 10/92.

No disrespect to his European colleagues, but these are the saxophonist's peers – Barron at least – and this is the kind of music where his gifts are best deployed. It's entirely a standards session: 'Misty', 'Body And Soul', 'You'd Be So Nice To Come Home To', 'Everything Happens To Me', 'Alone Together', 'In A Sentimental Mood'. Impeccably engineered by Peter Beckerman.

 Speakin' Lowly /  All The Way Philology W.71.2 / W.117.2 Konitz; Renato Sellani (p). 95.

 Tender Lee (For Chet) Philology W.163 2 Konitz; Stefano Bollani (p); Pietro Giangaglini (b); Fabrizio Sferra (d, v). 12/98.

Bollani is one of the strongest figures in Italian jazz and he's enormous on the second of these. The duos cover mainly standard material, but with a high degree of invention. The quartet set is taken from two nights at La Palma in Rome and dedicated by Lee to the memory of Chet Baker. The opening 'Blues For Chet' leads almost inevitably into a handsome 'My Funny Valentine'. The highlights of the set come over the final stretch with 'But Not For Me', 'What's New' and a lovely closing version of 'I'll Remember April'. The sound isn't perfect, but the playing is first-rate.

 Thingin hatOLOGY 547 Konitz; Don Friedman (p); Attila Zoller (g). 3/95.

Art Lange's liner-notes present Thingin as a confluence of several different strands of musical history, although he seems to blunt his own argument by showing how Zoller learned much of what he knows of 'Tristano school' harmony from Lars Gullin and Hans Koller. The reality of the session is three musicians of somewhat different sensibilities coming together on a body of readily agreed material. There's not much contention here, just a confident sweep across familiar turf. 'Thingin'' is Konitz's familiar contrafact on 'All The Things You Are' and provides the group with a marvellous starting-point in standards that surfaces again on 'Alone Together'. Zoller's original 'Joy For Joy' is more obviously rooted in his own CV, as is Don Friedman's 'Opus D'Amour', but these two share a past in Herbie Mann's group, so the light, Latinized swing is second nature. They also contribute 'Cloisterbells' and 'Images' respectively, two more impressionistic sketches that don't require much development. Friedman's 'Suite For 3' is a cleverly confected theme and variations that puts each voice in the forefront for a time.

 It's You Steeplechase 31398 Konitz; Ron McClure (b); Billy Hart (d). 3/96.

Without a piano again, Konitz almost recaptures the fleeting quality of his classic Motion. McClure in particular seems to relish the job of filling in the missing chords with crisp double-stops and slow arpeggios across the fingerboard. The title-piece is a long, somewhat enigmatic meditation and the best moment of the set comes on 'Angel Eyes', when Konitz rhapsodizes in the driest and most unromantic tone imaginable and still comes away with the girl.

(*) Dearly Beloved Steeplechase SCCD 31406 Konitz; Harold Danko (p); Jay Anderson (b); Billy Drummond (d). 10/96.

* Out Of Nowhere Steeplechase SCCD 31427 As above, except omit Danko; add Paul Bley (p). 4/97.

Paul Bley's career trajectory has been broadly similar to Konitz's: a huge output, yet with only an insubstantial purchase on popular recognition. Listen to the two veterans negotiate 'Lover Man' and you realize how much of this business depends on experience, not just technical facility but the ability to distil sound from the brute business of getting by. The two other long numbers, 'Sweet And Lovely' and 'I Can't Get Started', are more abstract but no less effective. Anderson and Drummond provide unflagging support, and Nils Winther's production skills are once again evident, as they are on the slightly earlier Dearly Beloved. Danko is more of a melodist than Bley, and on 'The Way You Look Tonight' and 'Bye Bye Blackbird' he sticks close to the basic code, only really breaking loose on the closing 'Night Has A Thousand Eyes'. By then, though, the spell has been cast; a less venturesome and cerebral album than Out Of Nowhere, but no less vibrantly exciting.

* Alone Together / (*) Another Shade Of Blue Blue Note 57150 / 98222 Konitz; Brad Mehldau (p); Charlie Haden (b). 12/96, 12/97.

Turning 70, Konitz was playing with magisterial calm and an elder statesman's mischief, as when he turns more than one of these chestnuts inside out. 'Round Midnight' is the most thoroughly subverted, with every cliché going registered and passed over almost mockingly. 'Cherokee', 'The Song Is You', 'What Is This Thing Called Love' and the title-tune are the other standards covered, but, lest this suggest a pedestrian run-through of familiar changes, nothing is taken for granted in any of these performances. Everything, from the basic harmony to the final detail of the tune, is open to question and to rearrangement. Mehldau and Haden are equal partners, the latter not unexpectedly so, but the pianist too has things to say and creates a feeling of space and relaxed time whenever he is featured.

The sequel doesn't match up to the original record, but the long, thoughtful versions of 'Body And Soul' and 'What's New' are packed with musical detail and with some drama as well.

 Self Portrait Philology W.121 Konitz (as solo and multitracked). 2/97.

Not quite, as producer Paolo Piangarelli claims, Konitz's only solo recording since Lone-Lee, but an unexpectedly rare return to such a successful and technically uncomplicated formula. The difference here is that the saxophonist is heard in counterpoint with himself and in canonical groups of up to four lines. The effect is quite mechanical, and when one turns to the central 'Self Portrait In Blues', it's clear that much of the multitracked material relies more on technical trickery than on straightforward expression. Made to celebrate the saxophonist's 70th birthday.

(*) Three Guys Enja ENJ 9351 2 Konitz; Steve Swallow (b); Paul Motian (d). 5/98.

A trio of radical individualists, doing their several and collective thing on a set of clever and challenging themes, most of them originals. Another fabulous version of 'Thingin'', with the trio weaving and interlocking in the most imaginative way. The really interesting writing is Swallow's, 'Ladies' Wader' and 'Eiderdown', but Motian delivers two cracking themes on 'From Time To Time' and 'Johnny Broken Wing'.

 Pride Steeplechase SCCD 31479 Konitz; George Colligan (p); Doug Weiss (b); Darren Beckett (d). 5/99.

The band here is patchier than most of Lee's recent line-ups. Individually, all three rhythm section players are fine, but there's not much chemistry. As ever, Konitz is magisterially good and for much of the set he and Colligan just work away together; his own 'Stellar' and 'Once I Had A Secret Love' make the set.

(*) Richlee Steeplechase SCCD 31440 Konitz; Rich Perry (ts); Harold Danko (p); Jay Anderson (b); Billy Drummond (d). 00.

A fairly straightforward blowing date. Perry is no Warne Marsh soundalike but Lee has the ability to modulate his own delivery to suit his partners, without compromising one millimetre on what he has to say. The set kicks off with 'You're A Weaver Of Dreams', and the two saxophones whirl away. Between them, 'Three Little Words' and a profound 'How Deep Is The Ocean' take up about half the set, but they are endlessly listenable performances, packed with detail and with ideas crossing the studio at a furious pace. Konitz slackens off only on a short 'Out Of Nowhere', a song canonized by Warne Marsh.

 Dig-It Steeplechase SCCD 31466 Konitz; Ted Brown (ts); Ron McClure (b); Jeff Williams (d). 00.

The association with Ted Brown goes back some time now and really bears fruit on this free-wheeling pianoless set. As one might expect, McClure makes the harmonic base sound as solid as anyone could want. At any point in any song, check what McClure is doing and he's always there, either anticipating the next direction or quietly tidying up the loose ends. There are some ragged spots on Brown's own 'Smog Eyes' and even on familiar stuff like 'Hi Beck' and 'Subconscious-Lee': an air of haste all round.

(*) Live-Lee /  More Live-Lee Milestone MCD 9329 2 / 9338 2 Konitz; Alan Broadbent (p). 10/00.

If you want to sample just how extraordinary a session this is, scroll straight forward to track five on the first disc, where Broadbent deconstructs 'Cherokee' from the headdress downwards, leaving Konitz to make a few cursory embellishments to the melody. The pianist is in absolutely titanic form throughout this wonderful live date from the Jazz Bakery in LA. Not since the 1983 duets with Martial Solal has Konitz sounded so thoroughly tested by his playing partner. Broadbent has a confidently percussive, ringing tone which combines precision of touch with a lot of power and authority. On the less-familiar material – Konitz originals like 'Gundula' and 'Keepin' The News' – he's a touch more reticent and restricts himself to filling in the background, but whenever he does one finds oneself willing him to break loose again. The follow-up isn't quite as good, but 'Body And Soul' contains some remarkable playing and 'I Can't Get Started' should be required listening for anyone contemplating this kind of partnership.

 Parallels Chesky 240 Konitz; Mark Turner (ts): Peter Bernstein (g); Steve Gilmore (b); Bill Goodwin (d). 12/00.

Released in Super Audio, this makes the most of a recording done in a downtown New York church, a lovely acoustic for a very relaxed but not uninventive session. The addition of guitar offers Konitz some interesting possibilities, which he exploits to the full. The opening 'How Deep Is The Ocean?' has been partly restructured, 'For Hans' is beautifully constructed and deeply felt and the co-composition 'Eyes' with guest Mark Turner, who also sits in on '317 East 32nd St', is a worthy attempt to keep clear of Warne'n'Lee clichés.

(*) One Day With Lee Capri 74064 Konitz; Scott Englebright, Louis Fasman, Steve Hufstetter, Ron Stout (t); Les Benedict, Bob Enevoldsen, Dave Woodley (tb); Gary Foster, Jack Montrose, Bill Perkins, Jerry Pinter (sax); Cecilia Coleman (p); Putter Smith (b); Kendall Kay (d). 5/02.

'The American Jazz Institute presents' Lee with the Mark Masters Ensemble in a set of fine arrangements of his own contrefacts and themes. What's nice about Masters' charts is that they specifically pitch Konitz up against other soloists, Hufstetter and Coleman on the opening 'Thingin'', Foster on 'Dream Stepper', and so on. There's just one straight standard, but on 'Lover Man' Konitz packs a whole musical history into the song, even referencing the notorious Charlie Parker version. The studio sound is terrific.

(*) The Soprano Sax Album: Standards Philology 333 Konitz; Riccardo Arrighini (p). 4/03.

The soprano has been a regular part of Konitz's sound for years, but it's still unusual to hear him so closely focused on it. 'Acappellakee' is an unaccompanied original built on the 'Cherokee' changes and shows how deftly the master craftsman builds a line on the lighter horn. Arrighini, a thoroughly competent player who builds in stride and blues/boogie influences alongside his usual cool-bop approach, also has a solo spot, based on 'There Is No Greater Love'. Though the two individual features are based on chestnuts, and the glorious 'One More Time' (on which Lee plays an astonishing introduction) is, like the staple 'Thingin'', palpably based on 'All The Things You Are', the standards rubric is not strictly observed.

 Inventions OmniTone 15215 Konitz; Ohad Talmor (ts, bcl); Spring String Quartet. 4/04.

(*) New Nonet OmniTone 15214 Konitz; Russ Johnson (t); Jacob Garchik (tb); Ohad Talmor (ts); Dennis Lee, Oscar Noriega (bcl); Ben Monder (g); Dimos Goudaroulis (clo); Bob Bowen (b); Matt Wilson (d). 8/05.

Talmor's an interesting fellow and between the two of them the saxophonists manage to swing some awkward arrangements. The best things are the collaborative 'Qu'Est-Ce Que C'Est?', which opens the set, and the solo 'Alone In Cologne' and the all-in 'Struttin' With Some Barbecue', which ends it. Some good stuff in the middle, but the string quartet makes for tiring, if not tiresome, listening.

Talmor also directs the New Nonet, a group with a subtle and distinctive sound built around Monder's guitar, with trombone, cello and bass clarinet, and so with a middle-and-bottom that is relatively unusual in groups of this kind. Lee is in fine form, though the opening 'Chromaticlee Suite', co-written with his fellow saxophonist and MD, tends to the schematic; interesting music, and woven into a continuous whole, but without much for the heart.

 Organic-Lee Steeplechase SCCD 31599 Konitz; Gary Versace (org). 1/06.
Play someone the version here of 'Giant Steps' and watch the forehead wrinkle. The saxophone sound should be instantly recognizable even if the context is not. To be fair to Versace, he makes a very respectable hand of those familiar intervals and turns in some daring work of his own, but one senses that he's more at ease with 'In Your Own Sweet Way' and 'A Flower Is A Lovesome Thing'. Konitz seems to be checking off new playing situations almost by the month. This wouldn't be top of anyone's priority list, but it's a fine album by any standard(s).

(*) Portology OmniTone 15217 Konitz; Orquestra Jazz De Matoshinos. 3/06.
The rare sound of Lee Konitz in front of a big band, with an album that after three free-standing opening tracks then falls loosely into two suites. The latter and longer is punningly titled 'Rhythm Sweet' and pays further tribute to Talmor's skills as an arranger. The individual themes are nothing to write home about, and the mock-classical headings a touch too arch, but Konitz's solo playing is terrific. The other element is a medley of 'Ornetty' with Lee's own tribute to the dead of 'September 11', an affecting enough piece in a Hodges mode. Of the opening sequence, 'June '05' and 'A New Ballad' are both generic Konitz, which is to say quirkily original without burning down any fences.

Also, in brief:

(*) Sound-Lee Membran 221950 2CD. 1/49–8/54.
Valuable double compilation of early – and now out-of-copyright – work from the Tristano years; 37 classic tracks.

 Meets Jimmy Giuffre Verve 527780 2CD. 51–59.
This brings together a great deal of experimental Third Stream work from the '50s.

(*) Complete 1953 The Haig Performances Jazz Factory 22861. 53.
An exhaustive documentation of Konitz with Gerry Mulligan (bs), Chet Baker (t) and Chico Hamilton (d) at the LA club.

 Spirits Milestone/Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1024. 71.
Mostly duos with Sal Mosca (p), but Ron Carter (b) and Mousie Alexander (d) are wheeled on for part of a mainly Tristano set.

 Figure & Spirit Progressive 7003. 10/76.
Done in the Tristano spirit with Ted Brown (ts) standing in for Warne Marsh.

(*) Dedicated To Lee Dragon DRCD 250. 11/83.
A decade before this session, Konitz had played on one of the last studio sessions by Lars Gullin. Hence the happy idea of putting Konitz together with Lars Sjøsten's octet and a group of Gullin pieces.

 Medium Rare Label Bleu LBLC 6501. 86.
Positively undercooked in places, but there's enough juicy substance in 'Monk's Mood' to keep eyes on the plate.

 Swiss Kiss TCB 93072. 90.
Konitz reacted warmly to the music of Swiss composer/bandleader Alain Guyonnet. After a duo set of Guyonnet pieces with Kenny Werner (p), here he is joined by the Guyonnet Tentet and Big Band.

 Lunasea Soul Note 121249. 1/92.
With Peggy Stern (p), Vic Juris (g) and others: Konitz thrives on the settings.

 Strings For Holiday Enja 9304. 3/96.
Hard to know if the title came before the music. All the tunes are associated with Billie, but the context is irrelevant: Lee just plays as he always does.

 Subconscious-Lee Summit 213. 96.
Recorded on tour in Europe with a German band. 'Yardbird Suite' is rousing and 'Thingin'' helps to bring the group into line.

 Body And Soul Camerata 12. 96.
Dedicated to Warne Marsh's memory – Gary Foster (as) is second horn – this consists of nine extended variants on familiar progressions.

 Dialogues Challenge 70053. 4/98.
Recorded in Holland and in real time, this easily swinging session is further evidence of Konitz's ability to catalyse and transform a seemingly ordinary pick-up session.

 L'Age Mür [sic] Philology 123. 98.
A surprisingly unadventurous and straight-ahead album given Enrico Rava's appetite for experiment. 'Cherokee' gets a Latin spin, but that's about it for invention.

(*) At The Mississippi Jazz Club Philology W 503.2. 3/00.
This starts so shakily you wonder why it's on a record, but after a stumble through 'Yesterdays'/'The Song Is You' Konitz pulls the Italian band into line and coasts into a superb 'Body And Soul'.

 After Hours: Volume 7 Go Jazz GO 6056 2. 1/01.
Konitz was unaware that mics were on during the final hour of this lock-in session at a St Paul club, but he told producer Ben Sidran that he'd liked the set and hoped the tapes preserved a 'looking around feeling'. They do.

 Outra Vez Philology W 502.2. 4/01.
A vocal album with Sandro Gibellini (g) and Barbara Cassini (v).

(*) Gong With Wind Suite Steeplechase SCCD 31528. 3/02.
A misleading title for a shapeless collection of mostly free improvisations with Matt Wilson (d). Konitz is in pretty acerbic form without songs to get his teeth into.

(*) Palo Alto: A Proper Introduction To Lee Konitz Proper 2025. VARIOUS DATES.
Ticks all the right boxes, career-wise.

Olga Konkova

PIANO

Russian-born, she studied classical music in Moscow before going to the US for a course at Berklee. Now based in Oslo.

 Her Point Of View Candid 79757 Konkova; Adam Nussbaum (d). 97, 98.
 Northern Crossings Candid 79766 Konkova; Ole Mathisen (ss, ts); Per Mathisen (b); Jojo Mayer (d). 9/97.

 Some Things From Home Candid 79777 Konkova; Per Mathisen (b); Jon Christensen, Adam Nussbaum (d). 5/97–3/01.
Konkova takes remarkable liberties with familiar material, recomposing rather than merely improvising on changes. Her very exact technique isn't any obstacle to swing and she lags behind or pushes ahead of the beat as the spirit moves her. On the first disc, she gives 'Round Midnight' one of its freshest readings in years, as well as introducing new compositions like 'The Little Prince' and 'Adam's Checking In'.

The second record features all original material, by Olga and husband Per Mathisen. Mayer is Swiss, so the group certainly doesn't play like a New York outfit. The best of the writing is the pianist's, though Mathisen's 'Fifth Corner' and 'Northern Crossing', which bookend the set, are both very fine compositions and 'Olga's Dream' is delightful. The trio album is well up to scratch, with two of the world's best drummers. Most of these records were made within a very short space of time and don't seem to have been followed up.

Bernd Konrad

TENOR, SOPRANO AND BARITONE SAXOPHONES

German reedman with advanced ideas.

 Phonolith hatOLOGY 520 Konrad; Herbert Joos, Kenny Wheeler (t); Hans Koller (ts, sno); Ekkehart Rössle (ts); Paul Schwarz, Christoph Spendel (p); Didier Lockwood (vn); Thomas Heidepriem, Thomas Stabenow (b); Martin Bues, Pierre Favre, Michael Kersting (d). 80, 94.
As the recording dates suggest, Konrad has had to wait some time before breaking out. It's a pity because his music is far from inaccessible. Harmonically adventurous and rhythmically tough it may be, but it has a graceful quality that comes out on the nonet recordings, with Wheeler and Joos very much to the fore. Lockwood is riveting on 'Phonolith 1', demonstrating a range that goes beyond the usual Ponty style. The other 'Phonolith' is distinguished by Koller's tenor and sopranino solos, the difficult pitching of the small horn troubling him not in the least; his solo on 'Lush Life' is richly inflected and logical, sticking closer to the tune than initially evident. Konrad himself occasionally recalls those other European giants Bobby Jaspar and (on baritone) Lars Gullin, but though he has his own voice, one suspects that his greatest talent lies in shaping large structures with relatively restricted means.

Larry Koonse

GUITAR

He has a substantial discography as a lyrical accompanist, but few titles as a leader.

 Secret Tea Sea Breeze 3048 Koonse; Anders Swanson (b); Chris Wabich (d). N.D.
 Americana Jazz Compass 1001 Koonse; Chris Roitstein (p); Scott Colley (b); Kendall Kay (d). 2/97.
 Dialogues Of The Heart Jazz Compass 1005 Koonse; Dave Koonse (g). 00.
 Snowfall Jazz Compass 1009 Koonse; Clay Jenkins (t); Bill Cunliffe (p); Tom Warrington (b); Joe LaBarbera (d). 7/04.
 Storybook Jazz Compass 1013 Koonse; Darek Oleskiewicz (b); Munyungo Jackson (perc). 6/06.

Snowfall is a Christmas album recorded in California in July, and it sounds pretty much like that. Its predecessor is a father–son collaboration that will immediately conjure up echoes of the Raneys. It's a not unhelpful guide to the kind of music Larry makes on his own. His is a quiet and unassuming talent, very correct in execution but endlessly adaptable. The Americana set is different in that he is less responsible for the chords and can concentrate more on flowing lead lines, all of them delivered like the lines of a song, legacy of his considerable experience working with singers. Colley is the main composer on that set, revealing a still unrecognized talent. The first record is in some ways the best, certainly the most adventurous of the group, but there is some fascinating stuff on Storybook as well. Basically a set of duos with the bassist, who features and solos prominently throughout, it benefits from some unobtrusive percussion flourishes here and there. 'For Chopin' and 'Senegal Dance Trance' are the highlights, the former pointing up Koonse's interest in classical procedures, the latter his appetite for unusual metres and harmonies.

Kristin Korb

VOICES

San Diego-based singer making her debut in impressive company.

 Introducing Kristin Korb With The Ray Brown Trio Telarc 83386 Korb; Conte Candoli (t); Plas Johnson (ts); Benny Green (p); Oscar Castro-Nueves (g); Ray Brown (b); Gregory Hutchinson (d). 96.
The line-up alone should be enticing. The Count's trumpet-playing is always worth hearing, in any context, and Johnson (still best known for the saxophone line in Henry Mancini's 'Pink Panther Theme') is greatly under-recognized. And, of course, any chance to hear the late Ray Brown is to be welcomed. But this is the singer's gig and Kristin acquits herself very nicely on her first outing. It isn't a big or specially dramatic voice, but inherently musical and she is wise enough not to tackle material that doesn't suit her. 'Peel Me A Grape' is the first highlight, delivered with an innocence that probably isn't all it seems. 'Take the "A" Train' is done slow, almost funereally on first hearing, but with a good deal of expression. Johnson brightens up 'Yeh Yeh' considerably and guitarist Castro-Nueves is an asset on 'Black Orpheus'. Our favourite cut, though, is something of a rarity, Neal Hefti's 'Whirlybird', which lifts the pace and sets the listener up nicely for the more relaxed stuff.

Peter Kowald (1944–2002)

DOUBLE BASS

One of the key figures in European free music – as leader, sideman and éminence grise.

 Touch The Earth – Break The Shells FMP CD 67 Kowald; Wadada Leo Smith (t); Günter Sommer (d, perc). 11/79, 1/81.
One of the most individual of the European free players, Kowald is more often adduced as an influence on other players than for his own work. The catalogue is thin enough, but what is available is of consistently excellent quality, concentrated and intense, with an independence of spirit audible in the voice which recalls Pettiford and Mingus.

Smith's free-jazz credentials are beyond question, and he brings a great range of voices to the session, whether on the tiny

'Wind Song In A Dance Of Unity' or larger conceptions on which he has stamped his personal concerns like 'Rastafari In The Universe' and 'In Light', a trio of tracks in the middle of the album which are almost a Smith project in miniature – except that Kowald is so obviously the master of all one hears: guiding, directing, sometimes cajoling.

(*) Bass Duets FMP CD 102 Kowald; Maarten van Regteren Altena, Barry Guy, Barre Phillips (b). 3/79–3/82.
This reissues large parts of three FMP vinyl releases, Die Jungen: Random Generators, Paintings and Two Making A Triangle. Kowald's uncanny mastery of the duet form – and the duet-with-another-bassist form – ensures that even over a long CD's duration the music keeps the attention. His three partners shirk nothing in terms of each engagement, and Kowald is as interested in the songful sonorities of Phillips as he is in the disjunctive leaps of Guy and Altena.

* Duos: Europa America Japan FMP CD 21 Kowald; Conrad Bauer, Masahiko Kono (tb); Danny Davis, Akira Sakata (as); Peter Brötzmann (ts); Evan Parker (ss); Floros Floridis (cl); Seizan Matsuda (shakuhachi); Irène Schweizer (p); Derek Bailey (g); Tom Cora, Keiki Midorikawa (clo); Tadao Sawai (koto); Junko Handa (biwa, v); Joëlle Léandre (b, v); Han Bennink (d, perc); Andrew Cyrille (d, v); Diamanda Galas, Jeanne Lee (v). 3/86–8/89.

(*) Duos 2 FMP CD 124 Much as above, except add Toshinori Kondo (t, elec); Butch Morris (c); Julius Hemphill (as); Fred Frith (g); Michihiro Sato (shamisen); Yoshisaburo Toyozumi (d); Marilyn Mazur (perc). 3/86–6/90.
Kowald's discography took a pasting with the demise of FMP's vinyl catalogue. Indeed, three geographically divided LPs containing material from the Duos were the last to be issued by the German label. This is not simply a compilation, but also a sampling of material not included on the vinyl release. Serious collectors will want to have both formats, but the issue of a second CD means that the documentation is now pretty complete on the new format. The project finds Kowald in a wide array of performing contexts, and in very different stylistic situations, from Julius Hemphill's post-bop jazz on the second volume to the more familiar European free partnerships, to slightly unexpected associations like Marilyn Mazur (who proves her mettle in this demanding context) and it affords a clear view of his changing priorities, sometimes playing time, sometimes accentuating double-stopped chords, sometimes producing pure sound.

Nothing is more than seven minutes long – and most of the tracks are very much shorter than that. By no means all are the product of free improvisation: the pieces with Evan Parker, Conny Bauer, Andrew Cyrille, Akira Sakata, Peter Brötzmann and some others were developed on predetermined ideas. Nor is the usual convention of absolute democracy and equality among instruments strictly observed. In quite a number of cases, Kowald is content to take an accompanist's role, backing Diamanda Galas's fraught vocal with doomy pedals, and Andrew Cyrille's complex body-language with quite conventional octaves and a vocal drone. Always musical, though, and thoroughly responsive to the needs of the moment.

The instrumental combinations are of particular interest, and other bassists will learn enormously from Kowald's capacity to vary his attack according to context. He takes a more prominent role with the horn-players, building counter-melodies, right-angled lines and even little retrograde progressions which create an impression of harmonic resolution even where no such thing is actually happening. This works fine with the Westerners, but there are inevitable difficulties with the Japanese performances. The problems certainly aren't to do with sonorities (Bailey's guitar often sounds like a shamisen or a biwa) but of basic aesthetic philosophies. Though Sakata and Kono are well-versed in jazz and formal harmony from the West (and they play familiar improvising instruments), most of the others espouse a kind of violent synthesis between great formality of diction and a transgressive abstraction. If this sounds unduly abstract, then so does the music, almost as if realistic images have been collaged on to painterly canvases.

(*) When The Sun Is Out You Don't See The Stars FMP CD 38 Kowald; Lawrence 'Butch' Morris (c); Werner Lüdi (as, bs); Sainkho Namtchylak (v). 11/90, 7/91.
The problem with Namtchylak is that the sheer strangeness of her vocal technique tends to overpower everything around it. In the context of this project she is the sun, scorchingly intense and tending to blot out her partners. Even Kowald seems slightly diffident. The presence of Morris points up a fundamental incomprehension that divides European and American improvisers. He seems prepared to trade off some cherished notions, but offers little leeway. Fortunately, individual performances are strong enough to sustain interest and attention, and Kowald himself has some magnificent moments.

♛ * Was Da Ist FMP CD 62 Kowald (b solo). 94.
It may seem difficult, if not impossibly perverse, to justify the highest ranking for a record of solo contrabass improvisations. We remain unrepentant. This is music of the very highest order, technically adroit, emotionally and intellectually concentrated, and beautifully recorded. Only Derek Bailey and Evan Parker have shown themselves capable of sustained solo performance at this level; what distinguishes Kowald is the light, dry humour he brings to these pieces, philosophical quiddities that seem perfectly content not to be answered. Without other instruments in attendance, Kowald goes for a stronger and more than usually resonant attack which mitigates a slightly dry sound. A record to savour and ponder; a record to return to, as often as time allows.

 Cuts FMP 94 Kowald; Evan Parker (ss); Carlos Zingaro (vn); Lê Quan Ninh (perc); Ort Ensemble Wuppertal. 10/95.
This is Kowald the composer/conductor in full modernist fig, with the music of Anton von Webern, as well as Edgard Varèse, looming in the background. In each of 20 sections, a sequence of soloists, but principally Parker, Zingaro and the yet to be widely discovered Lê Quan Ninh, lead sections of the orchestra in carefully modulated episodes. This is perhaps too formal and academic a project to merit extended attention, but there is an important improvisational element, albeit largely belied by the orchestral sections which are largely in droned forms, and some of the individual sections have real excitement and electricity.

(*) Open Secrets Forward 01 Kowald; Carlos Bechegas (f). 10/99.
For sheer exhilaration, the duets with Bechegas take some beating. Whether going at top speed, all over their instruments, or inventing ballad-like counterpoint, the music has a joyful quality rare in this kind of improvising. While Bechegas clearly has extended techniques in abundance, he prefers to make his instrument sound like what it is: a flute. The recording itself doesn't always feel entirely truthful, but this is otherwise an encounter to rank with the best of Kowald's many duo situations.

(*) Global Village Free Elephant 001 Kowald; Gunda Gottschalk (vn, vla); Xu Feng Xia (guzheng); Jin Hi Kim (komungo); Otomo Yoshihide (elec); Pamela Z (v, elec). 99–01.

The basic trio here is Kowald, Gottshchalk and Xu, but with impressive guest contributions on about half the tracks. The album is presented as a single continuous suite and probably best heard that way without undue concern as to who plays what. The exception is the extraordinary Pamela Z, one of the most exciting composer-performers on the improvised/compositional scene and always an arresting presence. A shame that Kowald's premature death prevented further collaboration.

(*) Mirror – Broken But No Dust Balance Point Acoustics BPA 001 Kowald; Damon Smith (b). 4/00.
 Deep Music /  The Victoriaville Tape Free Elephant 002 / Victo 88 Kowald; Peter Jacquemyn (on Deep Music only), William Parker (b). 3/00, 8/01; 5/02.

Peter Kowald died in New York in September 2002. This should make these duo recordings all the more precious; in practice, it makes them all the more disappointing. The inaugural release on starstruck bassist Smith's own label is well short of vintage. What interest there might have been in their long live performance is lost in a muddled and imprecise recording. The studio material is at least clearer, but one senses that Kowald is politely standing by while a young acolyte 'does' him, even imitating Kowald's occasional vocalizations.

The Free Elephant disc has two long duets with Parker and Jacquemyn respectively. There are moments of quite profound communication on both, but mostly one senses two musicians moving in parallel. Kowald worked with Parker again on his final appearance at Victoriaville. Neither is in impressive form and the shortish numbers that make up the set seem like conversation pieces rather than effective duet improvisations. There had been no intention to record the occasion, but a tape was acquired from the mixing desk and Kowald's death made release inevitable. Fortunately, sufficient fine work from earlier in his career remains available to leave a lasting monument to a genuine pioneer.

Also, in brief:

 Silence & Flies: Live At Nigglmühle Free Elephant 005. 6/01.
Still hugely impressive, but the vast solo language and intense delivery of Was Da Ist seem quenched.

 Aria Free Elephant 004. 12/03, 3/04.
Solos, duos and trios recorded in Italy with Giancarlo Locatelli (cl) and Alberto Braida (p). Kowald shines.

Krakatau

GROUP

Much sound and fury from this Finnish blend of improvisation and dark rock-music, led by guitarist Björkenheim.

 Ritual Cuneiform RUNE 86 Raoul Björkenheim (g, shekere, talking d, rebab); Jorma Tapio (as, bcl, bf, perc); Tapani Rinne (ts, bs, wood f); Sampo Lassila (b); Michael Lambert, Heikki Lefty Lehto (d). 88–90.
 Volition ECM 511983-2 Raoul Björkenheim (g, shekere); Jone Takamaki (ts, krakaphone, toppophone, whirlpipe); Uffe Krokfors (b); Alf Forsman (d). 12/91.
 Matinale ECM 523293-2 As above, except Ippe Kätka (d) replaces Forsman. 12/93.

Krakatau is essentially guitarist Björkenheim's band, hived off from percussionist Edward Vesala's Sound & Fury collective in the mid-'80s. Where Vesala mixed free playing with '60s psychedelia, tangos and straight composition, Björkenheim has a declared interest in Hendrix, Cream, Zappa, and a line of post-bop jazz that takes in Coltrane, Eric Dolphy, and the Miles of Agharta. The debut Ritual suggests a folkier edge to the music than will be familiar to those who first heard the group in a later incarnation, and the continuity with Vesala's workshop bands is more obvious. 'Ritual' and 'Relentless' perhaps too neatly sum up the overall impact. Björkenheim is a very concentrated musician, but he does occasionally leave his foot on the pedal too long, sometimes literally so.

Volition is a cheerfully noisy record with remarkably little of the big-biceps nonsense that often comes with guitar-fronted groups. In Sound & Fury, Vesala had used Björkenheim a little aside from the main thrust of a composition, often asking him for explosively abstract sound-shapes that encouraged non-standard techniques: bowed and scrabbled strings, electronic distortion, 10+ volume readings. A dedicated instrument-hunter, like Vesala, saxophonist Takamaki supplies his own fair share of unusual sonorities, most notably the 'krakaphone', a copper organ pipe two feet taller than the performer and fitted with a baritone saxophone mouthpiece and reed. It lends its bulk most effectively to 'Little Big Horn', a title that's also been used by Gerry Mulligan. It's a not entirely absurd parallel, for there is a softer and more lyrical side to Krakatau, most obviously heard on the soothingly oriental 'Changgo' and the folkish 'Nai', but clearly audible too on the closing ballad, 'Dalens Ande', which has a cool modality far removed from the all-out impact of the title-track.

Matinale is a second helping of the ECM-era band, the music again somewhat mediated by the studio but recorded with a handsome degree of clarity and body that helps punch up the impact. When they're going for the visceral, that is; pieces such as 'Unseen Sea Scene' and 'Rural' are more about brooding atmosphere than any sonic fisticuffs. 'Sarajevo' and 'Matinale' itself even echo some of Terje Rypdal's old work for the label. Attractive in a sluggish, world-weary way, the music finally doesn't seem to go anywhere much.

Diana Krall (born 1964)

VOICE, PIANO

A Canadian, she was a teenage prodigy who studied with Jimmy Rowles and is now a major crossover star.

 Stepping Out Justin Time 50-2 Krall; John Clayton (b); Jeff Hamilton (d). 93.
(*) Only Trust Your Heart GRP 059810-2 Krall; Stanley Turrentine (ts); Ray Brown, Christian McBride (b); Lewis Nash (d). 94.
 All For You Impulse! 051164-2 Krall; Benny Green (p); Russell Malone (g); Paul Keller (b); Steve Kroon (perc). 10/95.

Krall sounds a generation older than her chronological age. She has a rich, resonant contralto and a preference for standards. The most obvious influences are Carmen McRae and Shirley Horn. As 'Straighten Up And Fly Right' and 'Frim Fram Sauce' on the first of these suggest, Krall has also listened attentively to Nat Cole. Indeed the third album is intended as a tribute to his great trio, hence the piano, guitar and bass format, with just a touch of percussion thrown in on 'Boulevard Of Broken Dreams'. What the third album lacks, inevitably, is musicianship of the sort guaranteed by Brown, McBride and Nash. Turrentine does more than just show up, contributing hugely on his three tracks. Our preference for Only Trust Your Heart is based solely on their roles;

Krall's singing is impeccable throughout. The debut set has been remastered with an extra track, an ebullient 'Sunny Side Of The Street'; listening again, it's surprising to hear how much piano she was playing, compared with the recent records.

(*) Love Scenes Impulse! 051234-2 Krall; Russell Malone (g); Christian McBride (b). 97.
Krall was now the warmest commercial property in the music, but at least (unlike Cassandra Wilson) she seems unencumbered by her status and has so far hardly let the hype invade her records. This one may be cannily pitched at an audience hungry for a sexy young jazz singer, but the performances are hard to fault, and Malone and McBride are more than willing partners. The obvious killer is Dave Frishberg's 'Peel Me A Grape', cheekily done; but more demurely effective are 'The Gentle Rain' and 'Garden In the Rain'. Understatement is part of her strength, and she hasn't given up on it yet.

(*) A Night In Paris Verve 065369-2 Krall; Michael Brecker (ts); Rob Mounsey (ky); Anthony Wilson, John Pisano, Ron Eschete (g); John Clayton, Christian McBride (b); Jeff Hamilton, Lewis Nash (d); Paulinho da Costa (perc); strings. 12/01.
This is a warmly effective concert performance, with a good band – mainly Wilson, Clayton, Hamilton and da Costa – and some of the affectation of her recent studio work set to one side. 'The Look Of Love' is the sexiest since Dusty Springfield's version, and 'East Of The Sun' is nicely languorous rather than horizontal. There's a lot more piano, too, though it doesn't stand too much exposure. An orchestra heaves through three tracks, but it's not too overbearing. A studio treatment of 'Just The Way You Are', with a superstar band including Michael Brecker, is stitched onto the end.

 The Girl In The Other Room Verve 9862063 Krall (p, v); Anthony Wilson (g); Christian McBride, John Clayton (b); Peter Erskine, Jeff Hamilton, Terri Lyne Carrington (d). 4/04.
Krall's husband, Elvis Costello, helped write much of an album which is generously stacked with originals. Whether Krall's audience will welcome this development or not so far remains to be seen. She sounds terrific on Mose Allison's 'Stop This World', which starts the record, but her version of Costello's 'Almost Blue', cut at a tempo which a tortoise would breeze past, is wincingly self-conscious, and the new songs often sound either weepy or sarcastic, the latter not a trait which Krall does well. There's more piano, and the band is very good.

(*) From This Moment On Verve 007323 Krall; Terell Stafford (t); Anthony Wilson (g); Robert Hurst (b); Jeff Hamilton (d); Clayton–Hamilton Orchestra . 9/06.
This marks a return to more mainstream American songbook material and it suits her just fine. Some of the mannerism has been dropped, there are some good jazz solos (from Stafford, in the main) and the arrangements aren't quite as high-cholesterol as in the past. Hard to know whether this is a further marketing strategy, a 'return to roots' or just a way of marking time. For the moment, though, it'll do, and 'Willow Weep For Me' is a high-point in her records to date.

Also, in brief:

(*) Christmas Songs Verve 06024 98821213. N.D.
The Clayton–Hamilton group play unexceptional arrangements with good grace, but Krall makes a meal out of most of these tunes. Get Ella Wishes You A Swinging Christmas instead.

 When I Look In Your Eyes Verve 050304-2. 98.
This is still just about a jazz record, but it's pitched to make Krall a vocal star, and the accompaniments are almost peripheral.

 The Look Of Love Verve 549846–2. 1–3/01.
This isn't a bad album, but aside from its million-dollar upholstery, Claus Ogerman's crawling arrangements and a band of players on a very tight rein there's not much happening.

Maj-Britt Kramer

PIANO

Danish pianist, much interested in her native music, leading a post-bop quartet.

 Once Stunt STUCD 19701 Kramer; Andy Sheppard (ss, ts); Jens Skou Olsen (b); Benita Haastrup (d). 4–11/96.
(*) Something About Heroes Stunt STUCD 19903 As above. 9/98.
Kramer leads a capable group through two programmes of Danish music set to modern jazz manners. Once uses older material, from folk and composed sources, while the second disc has a more contemporary feel, with five originals from members of the quartet. British readers may welcome the chance to hear Sheppard in the kind of straightahead setting which he rarely inhabits these days, and he sounds strong. Once is handsomely turned, with the odd surprise, such as the curious, faintly chaotic finale to 'Ulandsvise' but tends towards pale meditation, and the unfamiliarity of the material may deter some listeners. Something About Heroes is an improvement, and has a bit more go in it, especially in the two-minute subversion of Benny Andersen's 'En Svante Vise' and the marching 'Take It Easy Boy, Boy'. Kramer herself seems reluctant to take too much of a lead, although her playing works a nice blend of poise and working for the band.

Jonathan Kreisberg (born 1970)

GUITAR

Born in New York, he returned after study in Florida. A born-again jazzman, he turned away from Stratocasters and a Hendrix, etc., influence to embrace hollow-bodied guitars and crisp single-note lines.

 Nine Stories Wide Criss Cross 1244 Kreisberg; Larry Grenadier (b); Bill Stewart (d). 10/03.
(*) New For Now Criss Cross 1266 Kreisberg; Gary Versace (org); Mark Ferber (d). 10/04.
Apart from a dispensable reading of 'Michelle', not much sign of Kreisberg's rock influences left on the fluent and expressive jazz debut. Grenadier and Stewart are able partners, but to be honest they don't have an awful lot to do, so competent and musical is Kreisberg's approach. It's not often you find a Lennon–McCartney tune nudging up against Parker's 'Relaxin' At Camarillo' (Kreisberg has chops but isn't a natural bopper) and Wayne Shorter's 'Juju'. It's a mark of his attitude and ambition that the most challenging stuff comes at the end, once we've been softened up by 'Summertime' and 'My Ideal'. The originals are good if unspectacular, but it's the quality of playing that makes the set.

It takes something special to make a contemporary organ trio stand out, but this one has the lot. The leader is now a known quantity and the kind of player who generates excitement with each new project. He currently divides his time between a standards group and one devoted to originals. There are both here: the skittish 'Peru', on which Kreisberg shows off his technique a bit; the awkwardly metred 'From The Ashes'; Monk's 'Ask Me Now'; and a version of 'Stardust' so slow you almost feel that time has stopped – it's magnificent, though. Versace has been making a name for himself elsewhere and sounds full of idiosyncratic ideas. Ferber takes a couple of features, but his strength really lies in holding the package together, which he does with conviction and grace.

(*) Unearth Mel Bay 9812 Kreisberg; Scott Wendholt (t); Aaron Goldberg (ky); Matt Penman (b); Anthony Pincotti (d). 9/05.
* The South Of Everywhere Mel Bay 10452 Kreisberg; Will Vinson (as); Gary Versace (p); Matt Penman (b); Mark Ferber (d). 4/07.

Kreisberg's writing has come on in leaps, though you sometimes get a feeling that he doesn't know how to develop interesting ideas beyond a bare statement in an unusual time-signature followed by generic blowing. The instrumentation on Unearth (with an electric piano) is interesting, the texture helps the music a lot and to be fair Jonathan is acquiring a rich grounding in post-bop language. 'Hobroken' is an interesting off-centre blues and 'Minor Leaps' is more than just an exercise: a genuinely arresting opener.

There's again too much emphasis on uncommon metres on the most recent disc, but Kreisberg gets better all the time. His ballad writing and playing on 'Elena' are exemplary, there are touches of rock fire creeping back in in all the right places, and his version of 'Stella By Starlight' is just terrific.

Ernie Krivda (born 1945)

TENOR SAXOPHONE, VOICE

His father was a swing-era reedsman, and he followed in those steps in the '70s with an individual approach to hard-bop orthodoxy.

 Ernie Krivda Jazz Cadence CJR 1049 Krivda; Dennis Reynolds, Mike Hazlett (t); Pat Hallaran (tb); Joe Hunter (p); Pete Selvaggio (acc); Jeff Halsey, Gary Aprile, Roger Hines, Chris Berger (b); Paul Samuels, Scott Davis (d). 1–8/91.
 So Nice To Meet You Cadence CJR 1056 Krivda; Joe Hunter (p); Bill Plavan, Chris Berger (b); Val Kent, Mark Gondor (d); Paula Owen (v). 6/93–1/94.
 Sarah's Theme CIMP 102 Krivda; Bob Fraser (g); Jeff Halsey (b). 9/95.
 Focus On Stan Getz: Live At Severance Hall Cadence CJR 1165 Krivda; Andy LaVerne (p); Rufus Reid (b); Adam Nussbaum (d); strings. 9/98.

Krivda has a markedly individual approach to the tenor: wildly elongated lines with barely a pause for breath, a hiccupy kind of rhythm that abjures conventional hard-bop phrasing, and a tone that evades obvious comparison, though he sometimes gets a scuffling sound similar to Warne Marsh. It all tends to make his music exciting but unresolved. On Ernie Krivda Jazz, the three duets with bassist Halsey are the most interesting things: two pieces with accordionist Selvaggio are unusual but not terribly involving, 'The Bozo' is a more complicated chart involving the two trumpeters, and the final quartet/quintet tracks are lively but let down slightly by modest support. The pairing with singer Paula Owen is a strange one: Owen's straightforward style is embellished by Krivda's jaw-breaking solos, everything pitched in double-time, each solo a blitz. It's oddly exhilarating, but also exhausting. One could say the same about Sarah's Theme: the title-track runs just over 20 minutes and, aside from the three subsequent interludes, each of the tracks seems obsessively long. Halsey and Fraser play a shadowy role, but Krivda himself is in comparatively restrained mood. CIMP's two-track digital sound, designed for 'realism', rather suits Krivda's tough and uncompromising approach.

The 1998 live session records a concert where Krivda played a quartet set of Getz-associated tunes and then went on to perform Eddie Sauter's Focus charts with a full string orchestra. This must have been a memorable gig and Krivda, hardly the obvious choice for such a role, plays with tremendous conviction. The two problems are that, first, Getz's Focus solos are more or less untouchable and, second, the cavernous acoustic of Cleveland's Severance Hall hardly flatters the performers. The track order is wrong on the sleeve.

(*) The Music Of Ernie Krivda Cadence CJR 1154 Krivda; Dominic Farinacci (t); Steve Richko (p); Bob Fraser (g); Demetrius Steinmetz (b); Carmen Intorre (d). 8/01.

* Plays Ernie Krivda Volumes 1 & 2 CIMP 293 / 302 As above, except omit Richko, Steinmetz; add Kurt Kotheimer (b). 7/03.

 Live In New York City Cadence CJR 1195 As above, except omit Kotheimer; add Yasushi Nakamura (b). 1/05.

 Stellar Sax CIMP 334 As above, except omit Nakamura; add Jeff Halsey (b). 6/05.

Krivda goes back to basics. As the first three titles suggest, these are albums of his own originals with working line-ups. If these are among his most conventional records, they're also satisfyingly rounded and accomplished – excellent players stretching out on decent material, with no hang-ups about concepts or experimentalism. Krivda suggests that the earlier session is part blowing date, part 'composed', while the second is more like a straightforward blow, yet neither really falls back on routine. Farinacci, still in his teens at the time of the earlier one, is a real find, with a singing tone and a beautifully clean attack. Even when asked to carry a long solo, as on 'The Jerry Turn', he's unfazed. Fraser works in a classic electric sound, and handles his role with quiet skill: he's especially effective on Plays, where Richko's absence doesn't seem to matter. As for the leader, his chops are in top shape: check 'The Bebop Interlude' for the evidence.

The sound of the CIMP session, in its usual bone-dry acoustic, is a bit of a shock after the lush feel of the Cadence record, although this is one time we find that it works better for this group. For all its set-up-and-go feel, it's arguably Krivda's best record. The second helping from the same session we like almost as much.

The live set was a long time in appearing, but it's well up to scratch. The band is now pretty stable (apart from a revolving door in the bass department) and Ernie's themes – while not exactly straight blowing vehicles – fall under the fingers with impressive ease. 'Alcara Li Fusi' is wonderfully developed, with everyone contributing and Ernie shaping a long grumbly solo. The tune also appears on Stellar Sax, where the CIMP approach seems to sell the music short; it could all do with some studio juice to bring it forward.

Karin Krog (born 1937)

VOICE

She skipped school to see Billie Holiday sing in Oslo and that was that: an expressive, astute singer with advanced musical ideas.

(*) Some Other Spring Meantime MR10 Krog; Dexter Gordon (ts); Kenny Drew (p); Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen (b); Epsen Rud (d). 5/70.

(*) Gershwin With Karin Krog Meantime MR4 Krog; Egil Kapstad (p); Arild Andersen (b); Jon Christensen (d). 74, 89.

Krog is one of Europe's most stylish and significant jazz singers. The early work finds her working an idiosyncratic swing vein, with strong intimations of bebop. She has shrewdly taken possession of her own back catalogue, bringing it out again on Meantime; a real shame the classic Joy isn't currently available. The date with Dexter Gordon (living in Scandinavia at the time) is a set of blues and ballads, stylishly sung, with Dexter in handsome form. The Gershwin set is simpler and more straightforward, the voice endlessly appealing.

 We Could Be Flying Meantime MR Krog; Steve Kuhn (ky); Steve Swallow (b); Jon Christensen (d). 7/74.

Kuhn wrote a superior sort of fusion music and this is a wonderful record, best characterized by the adorable 'Raindrops, Raindrops', which manages to be both funky and lyrical. Typically, Krog was ahead of the game in performing a Joni Mitchell cover in a jazz setting, but it's the weakest thing on the set.

 Cloud Line Blue Meantime MR11 Krog; John Surman (ss, bs, bcl, syn, etc); Janet Cooke (p); Stu Martin (d). 76.

A duo album to all intents and purposes, with some nice additional arrangements from Cooke and a welcome appearance by Stu Martin, who was another third of the legendary Trio. It's not the best set of themes, but the two principals turn it into an elegant essay, introspective but also communicative.

 Hi-Fly Meantime MR3 Krog; Archie Shepp (ts); Charles Greenlee (tb); Jon Balke (p); Arild Andersen, Cameron Brown (b); Beaver Harris (d). 6/76.

Shepp turned himself from a screamer into a sensitive balladeer. Krog adds lyrics to Carla Bley's 'Sing Me Softly Of The Blues' and makes an impressive job of Mal Waldron's 'Soul Eyes' and Randy Weston's affirmative 'Hi-Fly'. The horns are too dominant and Harris is slightly overpowering in places; Krog also sounds uncomfortable on Shepp's own 'Steam', though their duet, 'Solitude', suggests that there was more than enough common ground.

 I Remember You Meantime MR 8 Krog; Warne Marsh (ts); Red Mitchell (b). 4/80.

These cool stylings are fascinating. The saxophonist's take on the title-track gives a good impression of how abstract a date this is going to be, and it progresses in very much that vein. Mitchell's singing lines and unusual tuning complement Karin's voice beautifully and she's rarely sounded so adventurous on a jazz date, giving 'Moody's Mood For Love' a fine run for its money. 'Lover Man' and 'Speak Low' come from more-familiar territory, but even these are bold renditions.

 Two Of A Kind Meantime MR1 Krog; Bengt Hallberg (p). 4/82.

 Something Borrowed ... Something New Meantime MR2 Krog; Kenny Drew (p); Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen (b); Alex Riel (d). 6/89.

Hallberg is a graceful accompanist who gives her a softly insistent beat as a springboard into her vocal, and there isn't a track that one wouldn't want to listen through again, so subtle is some of her phrasing and her awareness of harmony.

The group on Borrowed is much better attuned to what Krog is doing. NHØP emerges as the dominant voice, easing aside a rather lacklustre and uncharacteristically heavy-handed Drew. The sound is far from ideal, pinching some of the top notes, but the vocal performances are generally of a very high standard.

* Bluesand Meantime MR9 Krog; John Surman (ss, bs, bcl, cbcl, p, syn). 99.

Immaculately recorded by Jan Erik Kongshaug at the legendary Rainbow Studio in Oslo, this fine duo set conjures up a huge range of timbres and tonalities, the product of now 20 years working as a duo. Krog's voice has rarely sounded better and Surman's finely developed accompaniments are deployed as effectively here as on his own solo records. The longer tracks are the most powerful, allowing both performers to stretch out, but the shorter pieces, like the mysterious 'Hidden Dreams', work just as well. The title-track is equally enigmatic, a terse central theme strung out across a rich, almost orchestral backdrop. Even when the arrangements are stripped down to basics, there is so much grain and texture to Surman's playing that one senses much larger forces at work.

(*) Where You At? Enja ENJ 9144-2 Krog; Steve Kuhn (p); David Finck (b); Billy Drummond (d). 02.

Kuhn and Krog recorded together back in 1974, on We Could Be Flying, and she apparently had wanted to repeat the experience ever since. Kuhn is an ideal accompanist, neither intrusive nor self-consciously unobtrusive. He plays and listens, listens and plays, and his interplay with Krog is immaculate throughout. Add David Finck and Billy Drummond to the mix and you have a band poised between the drummer's rugged swing and a robustly underwired lyricism.

Krog heard and admired Kuhn on Pete LaRoca's fine Basra and it was agreed to reprise 'Lazy Afternoon' from that album. Karin's softly enunciated vocal, often near to speech in pace if not pitch, is perfect for the melody. She brings the same qualities to Kuhn originals like 'Speak Of Love' and the mysterious 'Saharan'. Other tracks are collaborations with partner and producer John Surman. 'Kaleidoscopic Vision' is one of their best wheezes yet and the mysterious intro to 'Canto Mai', spoken in a seemingly invented language, gives a shimmer of drama to a lovely song.

The real pay-off of the set is the swinging, Latinized 'Missing Calada', followed by a slow and mournful 'Gloomy Sunday'. The sound isn't ideal but it's another fine record.

 Where Flamingoes Fly Norway Music 5189 Krog; Jacob Young (g). 5/03.

Again produced by Surman, this is a lovely, softly swinging set, which sticks to fairly predictable material – 'Cry Me A River', 'Prelude To A Kiss', 'Once I Loved', 'Caravan', 'Every Time We Say Goodbye' – but lavishes a lot of imagination on it. Young's playing is unspectacular but more than functional and his harmony is spot-on, even on pacier things like 'K.C. Blues'. Krog's voice has acquired something of the depth of experience you hear from Sheila Jordan and makes every song seem as full of life and emotion as a movie.

* Seagull Grappa 4212 Krog; Bergen Big Band; John Surman (dir). 6/06.

She gets better all the time. Unlike many singers, certainly unlike her original model, Billie Holiday, the voice hasn't acquired that expressive 'maturity' that usually takes the place of good pipes. Krog still resembles the younger Billie, the sassy improviser. She has acquired more gravitas with the years, though, and Surman's arrangement of 'My Shining Hour' is a good place to sample it, better than 'Lament', which oddly precedes it in the set-list. The band is great, loose enough to be swinging but absolutely in tune and in sync with the singer.

Also, in brief:

 Jazz Moments Meantime MR12. 66.
Valuable for an early glimpse of Jan Garbarek (ts) but a good selection of Krog standards, too.

 Raindrops, Raindrops Crippled Dick Hot Wax 81. 66–85.
A nice compilation of work over nearly two decades.

 You Must Believe In Spring Meantime MR5. 5/74.
She's sometimes swamped by Palle Mikkelborg's dense orchestrations of Legrand tunes, but it's a lovely set.

* One On One Meantime MR7. 7 & 10/77, 2/80.
Krog made a number of recordings in the late '70s for Frank Heman's Bluebell label. Three of those duo performances are compiled here: with Nils Lindberg (org), Bengt Hallberg (p) and Red Mitchell (b).

(*) Together Again Grappa 4247. 10/06.
If she has a special chemistry with Surman, this duo with Steve Kuhn (p) is equally simpatico. Slightly odd choice of material – 'Alfie'? – but delivered with absolute musicality by both.

Gene Krupa (1909–73)

DRUMS

Born in Chicago; he joined Benny Goodman's orchestra and became one of its stars: a master drummer to the end of his life.

(*) Gene Krupa, 1935–1938 Classics 754 Krupa; Tom Di Carlo, Tom Gonsoulin, Dave Schultze, Roy Eldridge, Nate Kazebier (t); Chuck Evans, Joe Harris, Charles McCamish, Bruce Squires (tb); Murray Williams, George Siravo (as); Chu Berry, Dick Clark, Vido Musso, Carl Bleisacker (ts); Benny Goodman (cl); Milt Raskin, Jess Stacy (p); Ray Biondi, Allan Reuss (g); Israel Crosby, Horace Rollins (b); Helen Ward, Jerry Kruger (v). 11/35–7/38.

 Gene Krupa, 1938 Classics 767 Krupa; Tom Di Carlo, Ray Cameron, Tom Gonsoulin, Nick Prospero, Dave Schultze (t); Charles McCamish, Bruce Squires, Toby Tyler, Chuck Evans (tb); Murray Williams, Mascagni Ruffo, George Siravo (as); Vido Musso, Carl Bleisacker, Sam Musiker, Sam Donahue (ts); Milt Raskin (p); Ray Biondi (g); Horace Rollins (b); Irene Daye, Leo Watson (v). 7–12/38.

There is a memorable photograph of the young Gene Krupa at the kit, hair slick, tux sleeves and collar soaked with sweat, mouth and eyes wide and hungry, his brushes blurred to smoke with the pace of his playing. Received wisdom has Krupa down as a showman who traded in subtlety for histrionic power, but even in comparative neglect Krupa's impact on the jazz rhythm section is incalculable. He himself said, 'I made the drummer a high-priced guy.'

Krupa joined the Benny Goodman band in 1934 and stayed till 1938, when his boss finally decided there was room for only one of them on stage. The drummer recorded under his own name only twice during the Goodman years. The sessions of November 1935 (made for Parlophone UK) and February 1936 kick off the first Classics volume on a high. Being able to call on Goodman, Stacy and the remarkable Crosby offered some guarantee of quality, and 'Three Little Words' and Krupa's own 'Blues For Israel' are spanking performances, driven along by that dynamic drumming. The following session included Berry and Eldridge, an established double-act in the Fletcher Henderson outfit and always ready to try something new. Berry cheekily weaves in and out of Goodman's line, while Eldridge dive-bombs from above.

There is then a chronological hiatus until Krupa's break with Goodman and the chance to capitalize on his own rising stardom. The April 1938 Brunswicks also signalled a move to New York City and a move into self-management, which seems to have put a slight brake on Krupa's invention for a while. Not yet the banked strings of the later band but a slightly cumbersome feel nevertheless, and the fourth item ('The Madam Swings It') of an uninspired session was eventually rejected. Singers Helen Ward, Jerry Kruger and Irene Daye fail to add very much, but vocals were commercially essential and these discs did big business right through 1938, with the band averaging a session a month. Leo Watson's scats were lively and often very musical, but Krupa must have felt partly inhibited by the formula and there's an audible sense of relaxation and renewed vigour about the sessions recorded back in Chicago in October, when he is able to lay down a couple of fine instrumentals, including the excellent 'Walkin' And Swingin''. November and December saw the band on the West Coast, where a new audience was conquered and three excellent recording sessions laid down. Watson's 'Do You Wanna Jump, Children?' brought the year to a happy close.

 Gene Krupa, 1939 Classics 799 Krupa; Ray Cameron, Charles Frankhauser, Tom Gonsoulin (t); Toby Tyler, Bruce Squires, Dalton Rizzotto (tb); Bob Snyder, Mascagni Ruffo (as); Sam Musiker, Sam Donahue (ts); Milt Raskin (p); Ray Biondi (g); Horace Rollins (b); Irene Daye (v). 2–7/39.

(*) Gene Krupa, 1939–1940 Classics 834 Krupa; Johnny Martel, Corky Cornelius, Torger Halten, Nate Kazebier, Johnny Napton, Shorty Sherock (t); Al Sherman, Floyd O'Brien , Red Ogle, Al Jordan, Sid Brantley (tb); Bob Snyder, Clint Neagley (as); Sam Donahue (ts); Sam Musiker (cl, ts); Tony D'Amore , Milt Raskin (p); Ray Biondi (g); Biddy Bastien (b); Irene Daye, Howard DuLany (v). 7/39–2/40.

The following year was no less busy and there is a strong sense of consolidation in the band, which begins to sound like a more solidly integrated unit. Krupa's leadership is tight and very musical. A new version of 'The Madam Swings It' is cut and this time passes muster. Kazebier returns to the fold and O'Brien signs up to stiffen the brasses. Apart from a couple of novelty instrumentals made for dancing ('Dracula' and 'Foo For Two') the standard is very high and Krupa can increasingly be heard to experiment with rhythmic embellishments, off-accent notes, single beats on the edge of his cymbals, and with the dynamics. Even with such a powerful group, he was always prepared on occasion to play quietly and to contrast fff and pp passages within a single song, relatively unusual at that time when up was up and a ballad was a ballad. Into 1940, it's pretty much a question of steady as she goes, even with the inevitable personnel changes. By this point Krupa can be heard to be shaping the band to his new requirements, which were much less histrionic. The Benny Carter piece 'Symphony In Riffs', recorded for Columbia in September 1939, and the majestic two-part 'Blue Rhythm Fantasy' (nearly seven minutes in total) stand out as representative masterpieces.

 Gene Krupa, 1940 – Volumes 1–3 Classics 859 / 883 / 917 Krupa; Corky Cornelius, Torg Halten, Nate Kazebier, Rudy Novak, Shorty Sherock (t); Al Jordan, Jay Kelliher, Pat Virgadamo (on Volume 3 only), Babe Wagner (tb); Clint Neagley, Bob Snyder (as); Walter Bates, Sam Donahue, Sam Musiker (ts); Tony D'Amore , Bob Kitsis (on Volume 3 only), (p); Ray Biondi (g); Biddy Bastien (b); Irene Daye, Howard DuLany (v). 3–5/40; 11/39, 1–9/40; 9–11/40.

Krupa could hardly have been busier during 1940, milking the market with a series of slick, pop-orientated sides for OKeh. The element of showmanship is inevitably missing on record, and most of these extended solos drag their feet. The bands increasingly seem to be foils for the soloist, chugging away anonymously and with little of the personality that made the Goodman, Dorsey and James units so distinctive. Collectors of this sort of material will find much to enjoy, including two rarities on Volume 2 from November 1939 and January 1940, rejected takes of 'Time Out' and 'The Birth Of Passion' for Columbia.

 Drum Boogie Columbia Legacy 473659 Krupa; Norman Murphy, Torg Halten, Rudy Novak, Shorty Sherock (t); Pat Virgadamo, Jay Kelliher, Babe Wagner (tb); Clint Neagley, Mascagni Ruffo (as); Walter Bates (ts); Sam Musiker (cl, ts); Bob Kitsis (p); Ray Biondi (g); Biddy Bastien (b); Irene Daye (v). 40–41.

It would be hard to ignore the Columbia compilation, which affords a glimpse of the band in a somewhat more reflective mood. Jimmy Mundy's arrangements often cleave to a rather mechanical shuffle-beat that doesn't suit a group of this size or inclination, but the horns are nicely voiced and there is a lot more space round the music than in earlier days. Irene Daye is still the singer, still leaning on ballads rather than faster numbers. She was soon (in 1941) to be replaced by one of the great presences in the band. Anita O'Day refused to wear a spangly frock and turned out in a band jacket like the rest of them, emphasizing that she was part of things and not just a walk-on. (Re)joining with her was Eldridge, who helped transform the group yet again, into a less poppy, more jazz-based and improvisational unit.

 Gene Krupa, 1941 Classics 960 As above. 41.

 Gene Krupa, 1941 – Volume 2 /  Gene Krupa, 1941–1942 Classics 1002 / 1006 Krupa; Roy Eldridge (t, v); Al Beck (on 1941–1942 only), Torg Halten, Mickey Mangano (on 1941–1942 only), Norman Murphy, Graham Young (t); John Grassi, Jay Kelliher, Babe Wagner (tb); Ben Feman (on 1941–1942 only), Rex Kittig (on 1941–1942 only), Sam Listengart, Jimmy Migliore, Clint Neagley, Mascagni Ruffo (as); Walter Bates, Don Brassfield (on 1941–1942 only), Sam Musiker (ts); Bob Kitsis, Milt Raskin, Joe Springer (on 1941–1942 only) (p); Ray Biondi (g); Biddy Bastien, Ed Mihelich (b); Johnny Desmond, Howard DuLany, Anita O'Day (v). 6–10/41; 10/41–2/42.

This was the period of maximum productivity, with the band going into the studio virtually every month up to Pearl Harbor. The key recruitment during 1941 was O'Day, though she sometimes distracts attentions from the band. Roy Eldridge is the featured soloist and singer elsewhere, and the vocals certainly can't be dismissed. Gene doesn't vary much from an alternation of 4/4 and 6/8, but his sheer presence is infectious and his attack unfailingly dramatic. The vocal contributions tend to predominate, but Gene's own playing is revelatory for anyone who thinks that polyrhythms began with Elvin Jones.

 Gene Krupa 1942–1945 /  Gene Krupa 1945 /  Gene Krupa 1945–1946 Classics 1096 / 1143 / 1204 Krupa; Tommy Allison, Al Beck, Bill Conrad, Don Fagerquist, Mickey Mangano, Norman Murphy, Tony Russo, Pinky Savitt, Al Stearns, Joe Triscari (t); Roy Eldridge (t, v); Leon Cox, Joe Conigliaro, John Grassi, Tommy Pedersen, Greg Phillips, Babe Wagner (tb); Francis Antonelli, Johnny Bothwell (on 1945 only); Ben Feman, Bill Hitz (on 1945 only); Rex Kittig, Harry Klee, Jimmy Migliore (as); Murray Williams (as, cl); Don Brassfield, Andy Pino, Charlie Ventura (ts); Sam Musiker (ts, cl); Buddy DeFranco (cl); Stuart Olson (bs on 1945 only); Earl Hines, Dodo Marmarosa, Teddy Napoleon, Joe Springer, George Walters (p); Marty Olson (p, t); Ray Biondi, Teddy Walters, Frank Worrell (on 1945 only), Ed Yance (g); Harry Babasin (on 1945 only), Ed Mihelich, Clyde Newcombe, Sid Weiss (b); Joe Dale (d); Johnny Desmond, Dave Lambert, Lilian Lane, Anita O'Day , Buddy Stewart (v); other similar to Hep sets below. 42–45; 2–9/45; 9/45–12/46.

Things were changing in the music industry. These sides include Gene's recordings with strings, not high-points in his canon, but interesting in their way. The set also takes in some V-Discs made with Marmarosa and DeFranco, which are curiously evocative of a wartime provenance. Trio work was what lay ahead as the bands became increasingly unsustainable and the disc ends with three cuts made with guest soloist Ventura. They're less exuberant than one might expect, but there are signs of an incipient bop influence even here on 'Body And Soul', though the only overt bebop comes in the vocals of Lambert and Stewart on 'What's This'. Inevitably, other singers still figure strongly: Anita O'Day is still very much part of the operation at the tail-end of 1942 and Roy Eldridge is on hand with a rambunctious spot on 'Knock Me A Kiss'. If there's a signature-piece from the set, it's 'The Drummer's Band'.

Anita's back in 1945, as is the trio with Ventura, from whom there are a couple of previously unissued cuts. This was another hectic time for the Orchestra, and all the recordings on Classics 1143 were made over a four-month period. The highlights are O'Day's 'Opus No. 1' and some good band tracks, though there's a certain feeling that Krupa is marking time professionally at this stage.

 Gene Krupa: 1946 – Volumes 1 & 2 /  1946–1947 – Volume 3 Hep CD 26 / 46 / 51 Krupa; Ed Badgley, John Bello, Gordon Boswell, Richard Dale, Don Fagerquist, Vince Hughes, Jimmy Milazzo, Al Porcino, Red Rodney, Joe Triscari (t); Bob Ascher, Nick Gaglio, Urbie Green, Tasso Harris, Cley Hervey, Emil Mazanec, Emil Melnic, Dick Taylor, Jack Zimmerman (tb); Charlie Kennedy, Tommy Lucas, Sam Marowitz, Harry Terrill (as); Mitch Melnic, Charlie Ventura, Buddy Wise (ts); Joe Koch, Larry Patton, Jack Schwartz (bs); Bob Lesher, Mike Triscari (g); William Baker, Buddy Neal, Teddy Napoleon (p); Irv Lang, Bob Strahl (b); Carolyn Grey, Dolores Hawkins, Buddy Hughes, Anita O'Day , Buddy Stewart (v). 46; 46; 46–47.

Krupa was almost forced out of the music business altogether in 1943 when he was charged with 'contributing to the delinquency of a minor'; in our view, this is what jazz music is all about, but marijuana was involved. Typically, the drummer bounced back and the following year formed his second orchestra, an outfit which achieved a rare peak of popularity, consistently outperforming its rivals by the sheer force and concentration of the ensembles. Krupa regulars like Sherock, Neagley, Bondi and Bastien became instinctive interpreters. Not much in the way of musical subtlety was required and only genuine devotees of this style and period will have much use for three volumes, albeit disc-mastered with a care that puts the Classics to shame. The presence of O'Day made this a rather special band. Her replacement, Carolyn Grey, was a reasonable band singer, but she entirely lacked Anita's sense of drama and swing. There are a group of interesting trio tracks, Krupa with Teddy Napoleon and Charlie Ventura, recorded in February 1946, on which the crash and bash give way to something a little more spacious.

 Gene Krupa & His Orchestra, 1947–1949 /  ...1949–1951 Classics 1319 / 1359 Krupa; Ed Badgley, John Bello, Gordon Boswell, Buddy Colaneri, Dick Dale, Roy Eldridge, Don Fagerquist, Al Porcino, Ed Shedowski, Ray Triscari (t); Urbie Green, Clay Hervey, Allan Langstaff, Emil Mazaneo, Frank Rehak, Frank Rosolino, Dick Taylor, Walter Robertson, Jack Zimmermann (tb); Lennie Hambro, Charlie Kennedy, Tommy Lucas, Sam Marowitz, Harry Terrill (as); Carl Friend, Mitch Melnick, Buddy Wise (ts); Dale Keever, Bob Morton, Larry Patton, Jack Schwartz (bs); Bill Baker, Joe Cohen, Teddy Napoleon, Buddy Neal (p); Ralph Blaze, Bob Lesher (g); Pete Ruggiero, Don Simpson, Bob Strahl (b); Joe Dale (d); Hernando Bravo, Ramon Rivera (perc); Bill Black, Carolyn Grey, Delores Hawkins, Buddy Hughes (v). 1/47–1/49.

These are the 14th and 15th in Classics' Krupa series. The exuberant showboating isn't so much in evidence here. The first few tracks, from the early months of 1947, are dominated by Carolyn Grey's vocals.

The peerless 'Disc Jockey Jump' originally went out backed with 'By The River St Marie'; it's near enough the perfect party record. 'Jump' owes its place in musical history very largely to a crisp arrangement by the 19-year-old Gerry Mulligan, who'd already done the charts for 'How High The Moon' a year or so earlier. George Williams and Eddie Finckel do the honours elsewhere and herein lies the problem, for these were astute industry guys who knew what was going to sell.

There was, however, a new sound around and the fascination of this disc is hearing Gene tackling bebop. On 'Gene's Boogie', he declines Williams's invitation to give it a go, but also concedes that swing might not be the thing any more. But given that even at his most restrained Krupa could give the USAF lessons in 'dropping bombs', bop held no terrors for him and it was inevitable he'd at least flirt with it. Recorded in January, 'Bop Boogie' and the even crunchier 'Lemon Drop' are model big-band bop, the latter graced by a superb Rosolino. That later group also features high-wire work by Roy Eldridge, though for the most part Krupa stuck to his familiar pool of quick-fingered swing players. The later disc pretty much reruns the same story.

 Krupa And Rich Verve 521643-2 Krupa; Roy Eldridge, Dizzy Gillespie (t); Illinois Jacquet, Flip Phillips (ts); Oscar Peterson (p); Herb Ellis (g); Ray Brown (b); Buddy Rich (d). 5 & 11/55.

 The Drum Battle: Gene Krupa & Buddy Rich At JATP Verve 559810 Krupa; Roy Eldridge, Charlie Shavers (t); Benny Carter, Willie Smith (as); Flip Phillips, Lester Young (ts); Oscar Peterson, Hank Jones (p); Barry Kessel (g); Ray Brown (b); Buddy Rich (d); Ella Fitzgerald (v). 52.

Krupa And Rich shouldn't be confused with an earlier Compact Jazz compilation. This record documents a typical Norman Granz summit, bringing together the younger Rich and probably the only man who could properly be said to have influenced his own fiercely swinging style. Given the nature of the occasion, this wasn't nearly as arid and tiresome as the majority of contemporary 'drum battles'. Each takes a big solo spot – 'Gene's Blues', 'Buddy's Blues' – and, for the rest, it's a matter of trading fours and eights until the customers are satisfied. Fortunately the band is good enough to assert itself and nobody will feel percussed out of countenance when they hear Oscar Peterson's sweepingly elaborate accompaniments or Dizzy poking gentle fun at the vanities of drummers.

The 'drum battle' is something of an acquired taste, but there are enough interesting diversions along the way. Smith plays some masterly pre-bop ideas and Ella's scatting on 'Perdido', which emerges out of 'Drum Battle' itself, is wonderful. Jones is also in very solid form. The duel with Rich is entertaining enough, but you feel the all-clear should be sounded at the end.

 Gene Krupa: 1952–1953 Classics 1390 Krupa; Charlie Shavers (t); Charlie Ventura, Ben Webster (ts); Teddy Napoleon, Teddy Wilson (p); Herb Ellis (g); Ray Brown, Israel Crosby (b). 3/52–9/53.

Krupa's creative longevity wasn't merely an attribute of stamina. He evolved steadily over the course of his career, something the occasional laddish 'drum battle' tended to camouflage. These mostly small-group sessions aren't among his best, but 'Coronation Hop' and 'I'm Coming, Virginia' are full of creative urgency, thanks in part to Shavers's arrangements, but even more to Krupa's rich rhythms. We thought the transfers here uncommonly good for Classics as well.

 Live From The Inn Club, Chicago, Illinois – January 11 1957 Soundcraft 5011 Krupa; Eddie Shu (t, ts, cl, hca); Dave McKenna (p); Johnny Drew (b). 1/57.

Most interesting, one suspects, for the early glimpse it affords of pianist McKenna, though to be honest it could be almost anyone at the piano. A long, closing version of 'Drum Boogie' is Gene's most prominent feature and for the most part he seems willing to let the band do the work. Shu's multi-instrumentalism is more impressive on paper than in fact, but he does some decent work on 'Stompin' At The Savoy' and on 'Harmonica Shu Boogie'. No one will mistake who's behind the kit, but even his most loyal fans will have to recognize that this isn't the Krupa of years gone by.

 Plays Gerry Mulligan Arrangements Verve 543 8692 Krupa; other personnel unidentified. 10/58.

Mulligan had joined Krupa in 1946 as a teenager and was a solo star by this stage. It's a nice compliment none the less and 'Bird House' and 'Mulligan Stew' are strong collaborations. Utter laziness not to list an orchestra that included Hank Jones, Phil Woods and Danny Bank in the baritone chair.

 The Big Noise From Winnetka Sounds of Yesteryear 628 Krupa; Charlie Ventura (ts); Dave Frishberg (p); Eddie Wassermann (b); Dave Perlmann (d); Betty Madigan (v). 3/61, 8/62.

A nice find of rare live performances, not to be confused with a slightly earlier set bearing the same name. One obviously misses the exuberant slam and sophisticated voicings of the big bands, but Krupa was exciting even in a small-group setting and Ventura is in good form. The title-track (some may recall Bette Midler's version) is outstanding.

 Live At The New School 1973 Chiaroscuro CR(D) 207 Krupa; Eddie Shu (ts, cl, hca); John Bunch (p); Nabil Totah (b). 4/73.

Only six months away from being claimed by leukaemia, Gene still played this gig with evident enthusiasm, and with some old friends – Eddie Shu had been a Krupa sideman since the '50s – he revisits some of the music which made his name, one final time. They go from 'Don't Be That Way' to a closing 'Sing Sing Sing', and that Krupa still sounds good (if inevitably diminished a little) makes it all the more poignant.

Also, in brief:

 Drummin' Man Jazz Legends 1023. 12/27–1/49.
One of a number of overworked titles, but a respectable trawl through two decades' work.

 The Instrumental Mr Krupa Jasmine 2572. 38–49.
This will appeal to those who don't want their music mussed up by singers, which slightly misses the point. A modest 21 tracks.

 Boogie, Ballads & Bebop Collectables 7490. 45–49.
The best of the Columbia years, with each of those styles nicely ticked off.

 Complete Sextet Studio Sessions Jazz Factory 62859. 4/53–2/54.
Dominated by Charlie Shavers compositions but also graced by Teddy Wilson (p), Willie Smith (as), Ben Webster and Lockjaw Davis (ts) ... and many more.

Tom Kubis

REEDS, ARRANGER

LA big-band leader and arranger with a Steve Allen fixation.

 Slightly Off The Ground Sea Breeze 109 Kubis; Wayne Bergeron, George Graham, Stan Martin, Dan McGurn, Charlie Peterson (t); Rich Bullock, Andy Martin, Bill Watrous (tb); Gordon Goodwin, Dan Higgins, Greg Huckins, Bill Liston (sax); Matt Catingub (as, ky); Kevin Axt (b); Matt Johnson (d); Jack Sheldon (v). 1/89.
 At Last Cexton 21251 Similar to above; add Jeff Bunnell, Darrel Gardiner (t); Alex Iles, Charlie Morillas (tb); Eric Messerschmidt (tba); Bob Reitmeier (cl); Sal Lozano, John Mitchell (sax); Doug Mattocks (bj); Jack Reidling (p); Kurt Rasmussen (perc). 92.
(*) It's Not Just For Christmas Anymore Cexton 21333 Similar to above; add Gary Halopoff (t); Jack Sheldon (t, v); Pete Christlieb, Mike Whitman, Brian Williams (sax); Trey Henry (b); Ray Brinker, Dick Weller (d); Pat McCormick, Jack Riley (v). 95.
(*) Fast Cars And Fascinating Women: The Tom Kubis Big Band Plays Steve Allen Sea Breeze 2079 Similar to above; add Steve Allen (v). 96.
 Keep Swingin': The Tom Kubis Big Band Plays Steve Allen Sea Breeze 2090 Similar to above. 97.
 You Just Can't Have Enough Christmas Cexton 21444 Similar to above. 97.
Slightly off the ground seems the ideal location for a musician who goes to work with a smile on his face and since 1989 has produced a consistently high standard of big-band jazz. Jack Sheldon is a vital factor in the band's success, working a wonderful riff on Casablanca behind 'Play It Again Sam' and appearing on the Steve Allen sessions as well.

These are probably the best of the bunch, though we'd recommend the first album to any big-band fanatics. Allen's compositions are little known and less covered these days, but Kubis is a devoted disciple and even engineers an appearance from the great man on 'The Girl Can't Help It' (Fast Cars) and 'Livin' In LA' (Keep Swingin'). Sheldon almost upstages him on the second record with wonderful interpretations of 'Chittlins' and 'Tango Blues', the latter a clever vocal.

The first Christmas album is the best ever, a wonderful romp through some very familiar fare, but done with unpretentious flair and that engaging smile. 'Rudolf The Red Nosed Reindeer' should be played at high volume in all shopping malls when the tension starts to mount around 19 December. The follow-up Yuletide set is a bit more laboured but the musicianship is so tight that you stop worrying about the material and just enjoy it.

The personnel has shifted somewhat over the stretch but Kubis retains a very distinctive crisp sound inherited from his predecessors and perfectly attuned to the repertoire. He's a more than decent saxophonist himself and his soprano features are always particularly good.

Joachim Kühn (born 1944)

PIANO, KEYBOARDS

Born in Leipzig, the brother and collaborator of clarinettist Rolf Kühn. Studied and performed as a classical pianist through his teens. Best known for virtuosic solo and duo performances.

 Easy To Read Owl 014 802 2 Kühn; Jean-François Jenny-Clark (b); Daniel Humair (d). 85.
Technically astute, often virtuosic, but ultimately rather dry and emotionless, Kühn seems here to be working through a huge range of pianistic influences (Evans, Jarrett, Tyner) without settling on anything he can distinctively claim as his own. 'Guylene' is a rousing opener, but many listeners will feel that the pace slips away as the record progresses. A fine memorial to the late Jenny-Clark.

(*) Sometime Ago New Edition 87045 Kühn; Harry Beckett (t, flhn); Jerry Bergonzi (ts); Jean-François Jenny-Clark , Jesper Lundgaard (b); Thomas Alkier (d). 4/91, 9/92.
The Frenchman was already gone when these fine sessions, unaccountably left in the vault for nearly 15 years, were finally released in 2006. The real plus here, though, is Beckett. Why is he not more widely admired? His lines – on either horn – have a sunny warmth that sometimes belies their great sophistication. A long 'Autumn Leaves' is cut-out-and-keep stuff, with lovely variations on the harmony from Kühn. 'Amsterdam' is the other substantial cut, though the very brief 'The Time Keeper' just edges it for sheer fascination.

(*) Famous Melodies Label Bleu 6564 Kühn (p solo). 95.
An interesting and eclectic mix of material, including some Weill interpretations that look forward to a very successful rendition of songs from The Threepenny Opera. But again one feels that Kühn has subordinated emotion to technique, and many of these performances (check 'Lili Marlene') fail to engage with the song in question.

 The Diminished Augmented System /  Allegro Vivace
Emarcy 542 320 2 / ACT 9750 Kühn (p solo). 5 & 6/99; 6/03.
For those who argued that Western harmony begins with J. S. Bach and ends with Ornette Coleman, System is the ideal record since the composers involved are Bach, Coleman and Kühn, recorded in three distinct blocks. Kühn seemed to fall under Ornette's spell when they worked together and the experience has significantly reshaped his own harmonic thinking. The original pieces are short, dissonant sketches in asymmetrical metres. The first of them sound very much like test-pieces, though 'Portrait Of My Mother' and 'Thought Of JF' (Jenny-Clark?) are more personal. After that, Kühn plays four Coleman pieces, 'Sex Is For Woman', 'Pointe Dancing', 'Researching Has No Limits' and 'Foodstamps On The Moon', followed by the sarabande, chaconne and allemande from Bach's Partita II, cleverly arranged by Kühn himself. It's a heady mix, too technical to be comfortably approachable, too good to be overlooked.

Subtitled Piano Works 1, the second album adds Couperin and Mozart to the mix. Again, it's all a bit desiccated but there's such intelligence and invention in Kühn's playing that one doesn't baulk even at 'jazz' versions of a 1690 mass.

 Poison In + Out 770716 Kühn; Jean-Paul Celea (b); Wolfgang Reisinger (d). 04.
A fascinating 'concept' album which deals with the connections between intoxication and creativity. It's somewhat unexpected to hear Kühn tackling 'Purple Haze', and still more so Chuck Rio's jazz-lite 'Tequila', but the killer track is an almost romantic reinterpretation of Gil Scott Heron's 'Angel Dust'. Association with Ornette Coleman has strengthened Kühn's resolve to play his alto saxophone in public and it makes a few intriguing appearances here, sounding like no one else around: not necessarily either idiomatic or virtuosic but with a quality all its own. Recommended.

Rolf Kühn (born 1929)

CLARINET, SYNTHESIZER

The elder Kühn brother played in '40s dance orchestras before going to America, where he depped for Benny Goodman and formed his own group. Latterly returned to Germany.

 Rolf Kühn And His Sound Of Jazz Fresh Sound FSR-CD 326 Kuhn; Jack Sheldon (t); John Bunch (p, org); Jim Hall, Chuck Wayne (g); Henry Grimes, George Duvivier (b); Don Lamond, Ray Mosca (d). 60.
On the 1960 reissue, he is very much in thrall to Buddy DeFranco (building on an earlier admiration for Benny Goodman), and the sound of these sessions isn't far from Buddy's '50s dates for Verve. It's coolly pleasant jazz which Kühn and some sympathetic collaborators move fluently through without really striking any original sparks.

(*) Affairs Intuition 3211 Kühn; Randy Brecker (t); Albert Mangelsdorff (tb); Eddie Daniels, Buddy DeFranco (cl); Ornette Coleman (as); Dave Liebman (ss); Chuck Loeb (g); Dieter Ilg (b); Wolfgang Haffner (d). 1/97.
A meeting with DeFranco was always going to be an intriguing proposition, but the juxtaposition with Ornette and Mangelsdorff, to say nothing of Liebman, was not to be missed. In the event, this isn't quite the record it might have been. It's too patchy to work as a whole, and while 'Fractions' and 'There Is A Mingus Amonk Us' are both fascinating ideas, they don't work as much more than that. Impressive all the same and certainly recommended.

 Smile Intuition 3342 Kühn; RIAS Big Band; Cologne Voices. 6/01.
The product of a long-standing ambition to make a Hollywood album, this also marked a farewell to the RIAS Big Band, which was squeezed out of existence by financial problems. The vocals are often distracting, right from the opening 'When You Wish Upon A Star' and thoroughly off-putting elsewhere, but Kühn's clarinet-playing is exceptional throughout.

(*) Internal Eyes Intuition 3328 Kühn; Bob Mintzer (ts); Martial Solal (p); Frank Chastenier (ky); Chuck Loeb (g); Peter Erskine (d). 11/03.
As good as the personnel would suggest, and certainly Kühn's best available record. Much of the material is by Mintzer and it's quality stuff, in a modern swing/mainstream idiom that suits Kühn's approach very well. Solal is a master in situations like this and Erskine's drumming gives the set a powerful impetus.

Also, in brief:

 Inside Out Intuition 3276. 99.
The title gives a strong sense of the idiom explored here. Not entirely successful but testament to Kühn's continuing venture.

 Bouncing With Bud In + Out 10744. 04.
Kühn and the NDR Big Band with a brisk set of swing-to-modern arrangements.

Steve Kuhn (born 1938)

PIANO, KEYBOARDS

A piano pupil of the celebrated Margaret Chaloff, he worked the New York scene from the late '50s. He lived in Stockholm in the late '60s, accompanying Sheila Jordan and leading his own groups.

 The Country And Western Sound Of Jazz Pianos Dauntless 4308 Kuhn; Toshiko Akiyoshi (p); Barry Galbraith (g); David Izenzon, John Neves (b); Pete LaRoca Sims (d). 63.
This is a strange one. The idea was to record a set of C&W and traditional tunes with jazz arrangements. It's not such a radical notion, but nobody had pushed it quite as far as this before. Kuhn and Akiyoshi have strikingly different styles, as do the two bassists, so it's left to Barry Galbraith to strike some kind of balance between her coltish bop and Kuhn's more deliberate delivery, which often sounds like a singer holding back the metre. In the same way, Neves plays fairly orthodox walking lines, while Izenzon plays cello-like lines with the bow. 'Nobody's Darling But Mine' and 'Along The Navajo Trail' are pretty orthodox country, but it's with the gospel songs that the sextet really starts to come together. Akiyoshi is on celesta for 'May The Lord Bless You And Keep You' and one suspects that just a few years later this set would have been done on Fender Rhodes and other electric keyboards.

 Three Waves BMG 37272 Kuhn; Steve Swallow (b); Pete LaRoca Sims (d). 10/66.
A first chance to hear Kuhn as a composer. 'Today I Am A Man', 'Memory' and 'Bits And Pieces' all point to a classically alert and harmonically sophisticated player who uses the whole of the keyboard without much left-hand/right-hand split. It's left to Swallow to keep the metre flowing and this he does right from the opening cut, Carla Bley's 'Ida Lupino'. Sims is a great drummer and a seriously neglected figure now; both Kuhn and Swallow had worked on his Blue Note session for Basra. This is a tightly organized trio, reminiscent of some of the things Swallow would be doing with Paul Bley in later years.

(*) Trance ECM 1052 Kuhn; Steve Swallow (b); Jack DeJohnette (d); Sue Evans (perc). 11/74.
An exquisitely conceived and executed record with a superior group. Kuhn's empathy with Swallow is again evident and DeJohnette brings his innate musicality, too. 'Squirt' and the title-track are the highlights of a record that doesn't quite sustain its fantastic opening. Kuhn doubles on Fender Rhodes, one of the few who give the electric instrument real character.

 Oceans In The Sky Owl 013428-2 Kuhn; Miroslav Vitous (b); Aldo Romano (d). 9/89.

Even the label this time will spark off further associations with Paul Bley's trios, notably the one with Steve Swallow and Jimmy Giuffre. Vitous has a very different sound and philosophy from Steve, but the same intricate counterpoint is at work and Romano's drumming keeps the set light, open and intricate. This is one of the most interesting items Owl ever issued and it's good to have it available again as news spreads of Kuhn's neglected importance. The title-track, 'The Island' and 'In Your Own Sweet Way' are the outstanding cuts.

 Dedication / (*) Countdown / * The Best Things Reservoir 154 / 157 / 162 Kuhn; David Finck (b); Billy Drummond (d); Luciana Souza (v on Best Things only). 98; 99; 12/99.

Kuhn struck a rich seam with Reservoir, and these trios find him playing some of the best jazz of his career. The earliest of the three is the most easily overlooked, but it is a more than competent and often very thoughtful session that paves the way for the achievement of Countdown. This is modern jazz pianism at its best. Opening with a Coltrane composition (the title-track) was a stroke of genius and the inclusion of Steve Swallow's 'Wrong Together' – the two Steves seem like creative soulmates – is the clincher. Miles Davis's 'Four' and Kurt Weill's 'Speak Low' are both titanic performances. Steve kicks off the most recent of the group with a chestnut, 'The Best Things In Life Are Free', but manages to transform it into something quite magnificent, as he does to Parker's 'Confirmation' and the following 'Poem For #15', which takes every second of its ten-plus minutes to unravel. The vocalist is used to add some wordless tone-colours to 'Adagio', but by then the set has been firmly clinched. An artist in his pomp, overdue some serious attention.

 Love Walked In Sunnyside 1109 Kuhn; Buster Williams (b); Bill Stewart (d). 9/98.

A consistently swinging set of bop and jazz tunes. Kuhn's liking for very expressive, even dominant, bass-players is amply served here. Buster Williams plays like a whole string section, laying down delicious lines on Sheila Jordan's 'No Problem' and transforming 'Prelude To A Kiss' into something almost classical. Bill Stewart is one of the best drummers of his generation and very much the third leader here, putting his considerable authority behind 'The Land Of The Living Dead' and a magisterial 'Autumn Leaves'. We didn't like the sound that much: too plush and soft-focused.

 Quiereme Mucho Sunnyside 1145 Kuhn; David Finck (b); Al Foster (d). 00.

This looks like a Latin date but plays like a Kuhn record. There's plenty of swing, but it's not south-of-the-border stuff and the Finck–Foster axis keeps it pretty straight down the line. 'Besame Mucho' is the most familiar theme, but even at a brisk tempo it doesn't sound much like the conventional reading.

 Promises Kept ECM 1815 Kuhn; David Finck (b); strings, Carlos Franzetti (cond). 6 & 9/02.

With the loyal Finck in support and a beautifully marshalled 15-piece string section, this is a gorgeous record, with a deep personal resonance. The title-piece is a dedication to Kuhn's Hungarian family. 'Lullaby' and the often played 'Life's Backward Glance' begin the album in meditative mood and what unfolds thereafter is a flowing suite of themes, some elegiac, some celebratory. No hard edges in sight but rock-solid musicianship in every measure.

 Live At Birdland Blue Note 72992 Kuhn; Ron Carter (b); Al Foster (d). 7/06.

There were, apparently, no rehearsals for this. The trio had worked together before, in the '80s, when The Vanguard Date and Life's Magic were both recorded at New York's other iconic jazz club, and the chemistry is pretty much guaranteed. By and large, it's a standards and repertory set and, perhaps nettled or unsettled by not being able to play his own stuff, Kuhn packs every solo with so much allusion and quotation that it's sometimes difficult to remember whether he's playing Charlie Parker's 'Confirmation' – the climax of the set and the culmination of an increasingly strident final sequence – or 'Jitterbug Waltz', which gets the album under way after a relatively tentative 'If I Were A Bell'.

Carter takes a couple of sonorous features, on Kenny Dorham's 'Lotus Blossom' and, better, on his own 'Little Waltz', but Foster is his usual adaptable and unshowy self, laying some gold leaf over 'Stella By Starlight' and driving away strongly on the upbeat numbers, but rarely conspicuous.

The two best things, significantly, are Kuhn's own 'Two By Two' and 'Slow Hot Wind'. One can't imagine that he minds playing other composers' stuff, so maybe he just feels he isn't offering value unless he's doing the full Dictionary of Quotations thing. This is drawn from four nights at the club and it would interesting to hear how some of the rejected material went down: quieter and less showy, would be our guess.

Also, in brief:

 Mostly Ballads New World 351. 1/84.

Solos and duos with Harvie Swartz (b). 'Airegin' receives spirited attention, but for the most part the title tells it all.

 Remembering Tomorrow ECM 1573. 3/95.

Not much spark or variety. With David Finck (b) and Joey Baron (d).

 Seasons Of Romance Postcards 1009. 4/95.

Intriguing quintet with Tom Harrell (t), Bob Mintzer (ts), George Mraz (b) and Al Foster (d). Harrell's 'Visions Of Gaudi' is outstanding.

... plus several fine recent recordings on Japanese Venus.

Jonas Kullhammar

ALTO, TENOR AND BASS SAXOPHONES

Swedish saxophonist, pushing the modern envelope.

 Salut /  The Soul Of Jonas Kullhammar Moserobie MMP CD001 / CD002 Kullhammar; Torbjörn Gulz (p); Torbjörn Zetternberg (b); Jonas Holgersson (d). 5/00; 7/01.

(*) Plays Loud For The People Moserobie MMP CD009 As above, except add Per Johansson (as). 12/02.

(*) Nacka Forum Moserobie MMP CD005 Kullhammar; Goran Kajfeš (t, flhn, pkt-t); Johan Berthling (b); Kjell Nordeson (d). 8/02.

Kullhammar's blazing music is free bop with a crazy edge to it. The first two records are both live gigs from Stockholm's tiny Glenn Miller Café and the music is fast, exciting and sometimes funny, but it's also prone to dead spots. Kullhammar is an accomplished and power-packed soloist – he sticks to tenor on these – but he doesn't quite have the structural command of Petter Wettre, to choose an illustrious contemporary, and in the end both discs feel like entertaining gig souvenirs; it's his label, after all.

Plays Loud For The People is a studio set although, oddly, the sound is if anything less clear. The opening 'Snake City East' is about as tumultuous as a sax-and-rhythm quartet piece is going to get, and though there's a certain amount of pressure drop after that, this is a more finely honed and satisfying set. Johansson comes in on one track only. Holgersson plays out of his skin.

Nacka Forum is arguably the best of the four. The excellent Kajfeš provides a very useful foil to Kullhammar, who uses his bass sax for Sun Ra's 'We Travel The Spaceways'. If the music doesn't quite have the zany momentum of the other quartets, it has a sustained assurance.

Sergey Kuryokhin (1954–96)

PIANO, OTHER INSTRUMENTS

Born in Murmansk, he was ejected from the conservatory, played rock, formed vast and unwieldy 'pop mechanics' ensembles and music-theatre events, and played a lot of piano along the way. Cancer killed this mercurial man at 42.

 Ways Of Freedom Leo Golden Years Of New Jazz 14 Kuryokhin (p solo). 81.

(*) Divine Madness Leo CD LR 813–816 4CD Kuryokhin; Igor Butman (as, ss); Vladimir Chekasin (sax, v); Boris Grebenschikov, Yuri Kasparyan, Alexander Pumpyan, Victor Sologub, Igor Tikhomirov, Alexander Titov, Viktor Tzoi (g); Elvira Shylkova (acc, v); Seva Gakhil (clo); Sergey Panasenko (b, tba); Sergey Belischenko, Alexander Kondrashkin (d); Anatol Adasinsky, Gustav Gurianov, Leonid Leykin, Valentina Ponomareva (v). 3/80–10/86.

 Some Combinations Of Fingers And Passion Leo LRCD 179 Kuryokhin (p solo). 91.

Kuryokhin was easily the most charismatic of the younger Russian players. He fronted his own pop mechanics performances, mixed-media pieces that ape Western forms in a deliberately exaggerated, 'Martian' fashion that is not so much satirical as clownishly respectful. His first record, The Ways Of Freedom, was initially released on the official Soviet label Melodiya. The recording is no better than average, but the reissue offers a quick primer in Kuryokhin's dazzling range of voices, effects and keyboard attacks. He can sound as tightly disciplined as a classical player and as vividly intense and rapid-fingered as Tatum. 'Theory And Practice', 'Archipelago' and 'The Other Way' are the main statements.

Since his death, though, the major source for Kuryokhin enthusiasts is Divine Madness, a multiple-CD set of mostly unreleased material which covers his solo-piano work and his pop mechanics projects in some detail. Disc one includes two long piano improvisations, a 15-minute track from 1980 with the Creative Ensemble, and a 12-minute 'Opera' with the Vladimir Chekasin Big Band. The saxophonist was already chafing against what he saw as the limitations of the Ganelin Trio and was looking for a more overtly theatrical formulation. Kuryokhin helped steer him in that direction. The second disc features solo-piano material formerly released on the Leo LP Popular Zoological Elements, as well as Pop Mechanics No. 17, a key development in Kuryokhin's multi-genre theatre. The disc begins with a performance recorded in Novosibirsk with Valentina Ponomareva, Sergey Belischenko and Sergey Panasenko, who were the mainstays of Pop Mechanics.

There is a story attached to the late-night improvisations on disc three. Allegedly, Kuryokhin and guitarist Grebenschikov bribed their way into the Kirov Ballet and Opera Theatre in Leningrad with bottles of vodka, in order to record 'Subway Culture' on the theatre organ. The technical difficulties of taping pipe organ and guitar (which is played with a razor blade) were scarifying, but the result is grandly operatic. A middle section with the addition of saxophonist Igor Butman was recorded two years earlier. The final disc is the big-band Introduction To Pop Mechanics; taped live in Leningrad, in a country on the brink of disintegration and political realignment, it has a quality compounded of optimism and nostalgia, a sense that things are never going to be quite the same again. Divine Madness is too concentrated and too personal a testament to unpick. Anyone who has fallen under his spell should experience it.

Kuryokhin was more likely to refer to Rachmaninov than to Art Tatum in his solo performances, and he seemed to make it a point of principle to avoid direct reference from the jazz tradition. 'Blue Rondo A La Russ – A Tribute To Dave Brubeck' on Some Combinations is an apparent exception, but Kuryokhin's tribute is typically oblique. His technique is interesting largely for its avoidance of the usual jazz piano dichotomy between the left hand, with its rhythmic chording, and the right, which carries the melody and the subsequent improvisation. In addition, Kuryokhin was a virtuosic user of the pedals, creating some quite remarkable two-piano illusions. Rapidly pedalling also creates an occasional sense, as on the long 'Passion And Feelings' section of the later session, that tiny segments of music are being edited together at high speed, creating the studied artificiality of tone one hears throughout his earlier work. Kuryokhin's is difficult music to characterize, because it consistently undermines its own premisses. A single-CD introduction would be an excellent idea. Leo?

Billy Kyle (1914–66)

PIANO

Philadelphia-born. He worked with Tiny Bradshaw and Lucky Millinder, then with John Kirby, until he was drafted. He joined the Louis Armstrong All-Stars in 1953 and stayed until his unexpected death while on tour.

 Billy Kyle 1937–1938 Classics 919 Kyle; Charlie Shavers, Billy Hicks (t); Rex Stewart (c); Tyree Glenn (tb, vib); Buster Bailey (cl); Eddie Williams (cl, as); Tab Smith, Rudy Williams, Russell Procope (as); Harold Arnold, Don Byas, Ronald Haynes (ts); Danny Barker, Brick Fleagle (g); John Williams, Walter Page, John Kirby (b); O'Neil Spencer (d, v); Fran Marx, Jo Jones (d); The Palmer Brothers, Leon Lafell, Jack Sneed, Inez Cavanaugh (v). 3/37–9/38.

 Billy Kyle 1939–1946 Classics 941 Kyle; Nat Gonella (t, v); Dick Vance, Charlie Shavers (t); Trummy Young (tb); Buster Bailey (cl); Benny Carter, Lem Davis (as); John Hardee (ts); Milt Herth, Bob Hamilton (org); Teddy Bunn (g, v); Brick Fleagle, Dave Barbour, Jimmy Shirley (g); John Kirby, Marty Kaplan, John Simmons (b); O'Neil Spencer (d, v); Jack Maisel, Buddy Rich (d). 1/39–9/46.

The Philadelphian was a great acolyte of Earl Hines, so much so that his best work sounds like Hines on a good day: try the solo on 'The Song Is Ended' on the first record. Eventually, Kyle replaced Hines in the Armstrong All-Stars. But he also had a touch of Teddy Wilson urbanity in his playing, and the two trio sides he made for Decca in 1939, on the second disc, are beautiful examples of how elegant he could be. Classics have gathered together a group of sometimes obscure small-group swing dates which have Kyle's presence as their common element, and while some of them are forgettable most have some bright moments on even a routine chart. There is a very agreeable 1938 date for Victor with Rex Stewart and (making their debuts) Tyree Glenn and Don Byas, while four tracks find Kyle turning up in support of Nat Gonella with Benny Carter and Buster Bailey. There is an intriguing 'Afternoon In Africa', from a trio date with Bailey and O'Neil Spencer, and the closing 1946 session includes the idiosyncratic tenorman John Hardee. A trio session from the same year includes some splendid music from the backwaters of swing.

Charles Kynard (1933–79)

ORGAN

LA-based organist of the '60s.

 Reelin' With The Feelin' / Wa-Ta-Wa-Zui BGP CDBGPD 055 Kynard; Virgil Jones (t); Wilton Felder, Rusty Bryant (ts); Joe Pass, Melvin Sparks (g); Carol Kaye, Jimmy Lewis (b); Paul Humphrey, Idris Muhammad, Bernard Purdie (d). 8/69–71.

() The Soul Brotherhood Prestige PRCD-24257-2 Kynard; Blue Mitchell (t); Wilton Felder, David 'Fathead' Newman (ts); Grant Green, Joe Pass (g); Jimmy Lewis, Carol Kaye (b); Mickey Roker, Paul Humphrey (d). 3–8/69.

Kynard, who was from Kansas City, was perhaps the last of the jazz organists to make his mark in the '60s. The BGP reissue doubles up two of his five Prestige albums. The first session is sagging with organ combo clichés and Humphrey is a pedestrian drummer; the second adds electric piano to Kynard's instrument list and is a bit brighter, thanks to the reliable Jones and Bryant, who can play the legs off a blues. Prestige's entry manages to couple Reelin' With The Feelin' with the slightly earlier The Soul Brotherhood, which has a cracking ensemble yet quickly congeals into a series of glaringly obvious set-pieces.

L.A.4

GROUP

One bossa nova pioneer, one cool West Coaster, one of the key bebop bass-players and a drummer who must have been a Time Lord: a genuine supergroup.

() The L.A.4 Scores! Concord CCD 4018 Bud Shank (as, f); Laurindo Almeida (g); Ray Brown (b); Shelly Manne (d). 7/74.

 Concord Jazz Heritage Series Concord CCD 4827 As above, except add Jeff Hamilton (d). 74–81.

The L.A.4 only foundered when Brown's career as a bandleader began to take off and the quartet's legacy is rather muted in hindsight. While it shares something of the Modern Jazz Quartet's intelligent conflation of jazz with classical forms, it hasn't had the same staying power. Even though the palette and dynamic range are greater, it's hard to recall an L.A.4 album in the way one remembers the classic MJQs.

The obvious difference was the hefty infusion of Latin American themes and rhythms which came from Almeida. Like his models Charlie Parker and Art Pepper, Shank has a tendency to float free of the rhythm section, which in this context permits some interesting counterpoint with Almeida. His flute-playing is usually more challenging but heightens Almeida's vapidity on slower ballads. The others are unimpeachable, and though Manne was a more interesting drummer, Hamilton is a better blend with the overall sound. With most of the group's eight Concords now deleted, the Jazz Heritage compilation is a very worthwhile buy.

Joe LaBarbera (born 1948)

DRUMS

Worked with Woody Herman and Chuck Mangione before playing in Bill Evans's last trio. In-demand sideman who's establishing his own reputation.

 The Joe LaBarbera Quintet Live / (*) Mark Time Jazz Compass 1004 / 1437 LaBarbera; Clay Jenkins (t); Bob Sheppard (ts); Bill Cunliffe (p); Tom Warrington (b). 11/99; 00.

 Native Land Jazz Compass 1014 As above, except omit Cunliffe; add Alan Pasqua (p). 8/06.

'Kind Of Bill' and 'Message For Art', the two closing numbers on the live record, pay tribute to Joe's most celebrated employer and to his greatest influence respectively. The Buhaina tinge is evident throughout this lively 1999 date with LaBarbera's working group. They kick off with Freddie Hubbard's 'On The QT', a nice feature for Jenkins, continue with 'Speak Softly', Monk's 'Evidence' and Mal Waldron's peerless 'Soul Eyes'. By this stage, it's pretty clear that this is a robust but slightly unsubtle band, lacking the leader's ability to modulate mood without losing energy and momentum.

The second record is a good deal more sophisticated, as charts by Kenny Wheeler (the title-piece) and John Abercrombie ('Suite Sixteen') might suggest. There is also a feeling tribute to another West Coast great, the late Conte Candoli, who is dedicatee of 'Bella Luce'. LaBarbera has got his band working with him now, rather than just blazing away on their own, and his arrangements are thoroughly impressive. Anyone interested in the Messengers' legacy as it emerges in a new decade would be well advised to give either of these a try.

The most recent one is pretty good, too, but after a while these do seem like calling cards by a repertory group, and even though the repertory is as bold as ever – Kenny Wheeler's 'Everybody's Song But My Own', the smart original 'Manne-Risms' – they don't seem like priority purchases.

Butch Lacy

PIANO

An American expat in Denmark, he used to be Sarah Vaughan's accompanist.

 Solo – But Not Alone Stunt STUCD1084 Lacy (p solo). 01.

He's still little known, but on the strength of a long, long 'Footprints' and a fine, imaginative retread of 'Body And Soul' (no mean feat in this day and age) he should be more widely admired. Tyner's 'A Search For Peace' was a bold – or, rather, low-key – choice to start the set, and if 'Willow Weep For Me' and 'Summertime' then flirt with cliché, he pulls it off both times. Recorded on a well-behaved piano at the Academy of Music, West Jutland.

Steve Lacy (1934–2004)

SOPRANO SAXOPHONE

Born Steven Lackritz in NY, he began his career playing Dixieland but was recruited by Cecil Taylor and became obsessed with Thelonious Monk. Inspired by Sidney Bechet, he in turn influenced John Coltrane's turn to the soprano saxophone..

 The Complete Whitey Mitchell Sessions Lone Hill Jazz LHJR 11045 Lacy; Don Stratton (t); Tom Stewart (thn); Herbie Mann (f, ts); Dave McKenna (p); Joe Puma (g); Whitey Mitchell (b); Osie Johnson, Al Levitt (d). 2 & 4/56.

 Early Years: 1954–1956 Fresh Sound FSRCD 364 2CD As above, except add Dick Sutton (t), Rai Anderson, John Welch (tb), John Sitterlix, Frank Caputo (bs), Mark Trail (b), Bill DeHay, Herb Wassermann (d). 8 & 11/54, 2 & 4/56.

 Soprano Sax Original Jazz Classics OJC 130 Lacy; Wynton Kelly (p); Buell Neidlinger (b); Dennis Charles (d). 11/57.

* Reflections Original Jazz Classics OJC 063 Lacy; Mal Waldron (p); Buell Neidlinger (b); Elvin Jones (d). 10/58.

Lacy's prolific output anticipates that of Anthony Braxton, but where Braxton has been promiscuously eclectic in his multi-instrumentalism, Lacy concentrated his considerable energies on the soprano saxophone and on a style of playing that typically consisted of tiny episodes, repeated many times with minimal variation and punctuated with onomatopoeic effects, bird-calls and toneless shouts.

Since Lacy's death, there has been a rush to issue or reissue anything that reflects on his career. Good as it is to catch a glimpse of him still in Dixieland mode, the sideman dates with Red Mitchell's bassist brother and with tenor horn-player Tom Stewart are only of historic interest and curiosity value. On his features, Lacy already sounds much like himself. The same material is included on Fresh Sound but with some earlier sets that find Lacy doubling on clarinet and again sounding very much like a Dixielander.

There was some attempt at the end of the '50s to trade on the soprano saxophone's recent unfamiliarity. Soprano Sax is somewhat atypical in that it consists of rather more developed harmonic improvisations on open-ended standards. Kelly's time-feel and exuberant chording aren't obviously suited to Lacy's method, and 'Rockin' In Rhythm' sounds much as if a lion were playing see-saw with a swan. There is, though, an excellent offbeat reading of 'Alone Together'.

Reflections was the first of Lacy's all-Monk recordings. Waldron understood how such intractable material could be approached, and there are hints already of what he and Lacy were capable of in duo performance. Neidlinger has an attractively firm sound on both records, but Jones sounds out of place.

 The Straight Horn Of Steve Lacy Candid 9007 Lacy; Charles Davis (bs); John Ore (b); Roy Haynes (d). 60.

The Straight Horn now sounds muted and tentative. Though there are two Cecil Taylor compositions, Monk again provides the keystone. While the saxophonist sounds comfortable with this material – 'Introspection', 'Played Twice' and 'Criss Cross' – his approach to Miles Davis's 'Donna Lee' is more hesitant. Nor is it certain that Lacy or his sidemen have got a firm purchase on Taylor's 'Louise' and 'Air'. Davis's throaty baritone fulfils the same timbral function as Roswell Rudd's or George Lewis's trombone on later recordings, and the pianoless rhythm section generates a more sympathetic context than Elvin Jones's wilder rush.

(*) Evidence Original Jazz Classics OJC 1755 Lacy; Don Cherry (t); Carl Brown (b); Billy Higgins (d). 11/61.

Evidence is the closest Lacy comes to the sound if not the substance of Ornette Coleman's great quartets. On 'The Mystery Song' and 'Evidence', he achieves something like Ornette's lonely stillness. Cherry, on trumpet rather than one of his squeaky miniatures, provides a strong tonal contrast and the rhythm section, pianoless again and with the little-known Brown in for Haden, plays with good understanding.

 Early And Late Cuneiform 250/251 Lacy; Roswell Rudd (tb); Jean-Jacques Avenel, Bob Cunningham (b); John Betsch, Denis Charles (d). 10/62, 99–02.

Lacy and Rudd had played Dixieland together. The 'early' tracks here are previously unheard cuts from a pioneering group with Cunningham and Charles. The remainder come from a Lacy–Rudd reunion that continued off and on, mostly in live situations, over the latter few years of the saxophonist's life. Inevitably, Monk figures strongly, various takes of 'Eronel' and a great read of 'Think Of One', but also a Cecil Taylor tune that is rarely in repertory (Rudd takes a great solo here) and a strong account of Herbie Nichols's 'Twelve Bars'. Strictly, this ought to sit later in the Lacy story, but those early cuts are fascinating and a perfect introduction to a relationship that flowered again three decades later.

* Scratching The Seventies / Dreams Saravah SHL 2082 3CD Lacy; Enrico Rava (t); Lawrence 'Butch' Morris (c); Italo Toni (tb); Steve Potts (as, ss); Claudio Volonte (cl); Takashi Kako (p); Michael Smith (p, org); Derek Bailey, Boulou Ferre, Jack Treese (g); Irène Aëbi (clo, v); Jean-Jacques Avenel (b, kora, cheng, autoharp); Kent Carter (b, clo); Kenneth Tyler (d, perc, f); Oliver Johnson, Carlo Tonaghi (d). 6/69–77.

A rich garnering of material from a period that yielded one of Lacy's classic records, The Owl, and also some of his least-known material. To deal with the latter first, there are two long parts to 'Roba', from the 1969 group featuring Enrico Rava and recorded by arch-modernist Alvin Curran. This includes a rare excursion by Lacy on the bat-squeak sopranino, and a 1971 solo performance, chronologically the next thing on the record, which makes inventive use of tape.

The material on the original LPs Scraps and Dreams (with Derek Bailey) is more familiar in conception and execution, and the latter includes a wonderful version of 'The Wane'. 'The Uh Uh Uh' is inspired by Monk (but later dedicated to Hendrix) and could almost pass for a composition of the master's except that it is so far removed from the blues.

The Owl is masterly, and the inclusion of these seven tracks is what makes this compilation indispensable. Morris is only present for part of the set, but his urgent, pungent tone makes a huge difference. Lacy had not worked much with trumpeters; here, though, he feeds off Butch's delivery and flow of ideas, and weaves himself into a double helix with the cornetist.

* Weal & Woe Emanem 4004 Lacy; Steve Potts (as, ss); Irène Aëbi (v, vl, clo); Kent Carter (b); Oliver Johnson (d). 72, 73.

Two important components to this valuable reissue of Emanem and Quark LP material. The earlier recording is a document of Lacy's first-ever solo soprano saxophone concerts, made in Avignon. Just four years after Braxton's For Alto, it is fascinating to hear Lacy take a very different course, sinuously melodic, less antagonistic in attack than Braxton but no less percussive and definite, and no less willing to superimpose different rhythmic shapes over a basic line. The Woe was Lacy's powerful anti-war suite. The recording is unfriendly to Aëbi and to some of the quieter soprano saxophone parts, but there is so much meat and meaning to the performances that one hardly notices.

 Saxophone Special Emanem 4024 Lacy; Steve Potts; Trevor Watts (ss, as); Evan Parker (ss, ts, bs); Derek Bailey (g); Michel Waisvisz (syn); Kent Carter (b); John Stevens (d). 7/73, 12/74.
These are tapes recorded at the 100 Club and the Wigmore Hall in London. At the time, Lacy was experimenting with saxophone harmonics based on seconds; Potts, who came to Britain with Lacy and Kent Carter, is supremely confident in the idiom. '38', performed at the 100 Club with Bailey and Stevens, is a tribute to Coleman Hawkins, and it's followed by 'Flakes' and 'Revolutionary Suicide', the latter from a damaged tape. The whole session was first released in faulty stereo, but the reissue uses a single good mono channel. The 1974 session makes use of pure noise and found sounds, and from Michel Waisvisz's crude but expressive synth effects. Essentially, though, it's a saxophone quartet spread out across the stereo picture, but very different from the usual SATBar line-up. When all four players are on soprano, the overtone field is immensely complex, and one wishes to hear this same grouping recorded with more up-to-date technology.

 Esteem: Live In Paris, 1975 Atavistic 260 Lacy; Steve Potts (ss, as); Irène Aëbi (vn, clo); Kent Carter (b); Kenneth Tyler (d). 2/75.
Taken from tapes held by Steve's widow, this documents a residency at La Cour des Miracles with the core members of what was to be Lacy's great sextet of the following decade. With Carter's almost orchestral sound, there is a lovely opposition of winds and strings, often weaving together in Lacy's quirky compositions – 'The Duck', 'The Crust' – but just as often flying apart in wild, improvised flights and fugues. 'The Rush' and 'Flakes' have a folkish quality, curiously reminiscent of Tunisian oud music, and 'Esteem', the other long piece and another destined to become a Lacy staple, calls on the composer's full array of calls and cries, interwoven with more lyrical lines.

 Axieme / * Hooky /  Straws Red RR 123120 / Emanem 4042 / Cramps CRSCD 066 Lacy (ss solo). 9/75; 3/76; 77.
The 1975 Axieme is probably the best available example of his more abstract style. Straws, recorded in Italy, is more eclectic in its inspiration, with pieces dedicated to Stravinsky and Janis Joplin, dedicatee of the moving 'Hemline'. Recorded in extreme close-up, it's one of the most revealing of the records in terms of the microstructure of Lacy's saxophone sound, exposing all the gritty little resonances, breath sounds and clicks.

Set down in a big church acoustic, Hooky is a characteristic solo set of its time. Some of the tracks are built on spoken phrases which yield intervals and a certain rhythmic foot on which Lacy builds elaborate improvisations: 'No Baby' (ambiguously spoken) and 'Hooky' work like this. The latter, 'The Tao' pieces, 'Pearl Street' and 'Revolutionary Suicide', for instance, all also feature on the New York recording listed below. But this one is faithfully transcribed, there is a particularly fine specimen of 'New Duck', and its focus on some of the composer's most significant texts makes this one an important entry for Lacy followers.

 Trickles Black Saint 120008 Lacy; Roswell Rudd (tb, chimes); Kent Carter (b); Beaver Harris (d). 3/76.
Trickles works by the slowest accumulation. There is also, unfortunately, an obduracy and resistance in this music that one doesn't often find elsewhere. The fault is not with the band. Rudd carves big, abstract shapes that are shaded in by Carter and Harris. It's Lacy who seems unyielding. On sabbatical from his lifelong study of Monk, he seems at something of a loss, stating ideas without rationale or conviction, redeeming them only by the absolute consistency of his playing.

 Snips / (*) Clinkers Jazz Magnet JAM-2001 2CD / hatOLOGY 546 Lacy (ss solo). 5/76, 6/77.
Recorded on a return visit to New York, Snips was his first-ever solo concert there, right at the heart of the then-busy Loft Jazz scene. It's very shabbily recorded, unfortunately, but still intriguing to hear then-current thoughts on staple Lacy texts such as 'The Tao', 'The 4 Edges' and 'Revolutionary Suicide'. Also a vintage 'New York Duck'. The later disc finds him in Basel, delivering five solos. There is another (Swiss) 'Duck', and this and 'Micro Worlds' are Roscoe Mitchell-like explorations of soprano sound. 'Clinkers' itself is high-spirited.

 Trio Live Felmay FF1002 Lacy; Kent Carter (b); Andrea Centazzo (d). 12/76.
Originally released on Centazzo's own Ictus label, this is now augmented (and improved) with the remaining material from the concert. Lacy is in great form, squawking and yawping his way through some relatively familiar material (including 'Ducks' and the similar 'Stalks') but also some of the 'Tao' compositions. Carter has a rich and resonant tone that contrasts and complements wonderfully and Centazzo himself, still better recognized for his label than for his idiosyncratic percussion-playing, is a more than competent third hand.

 NY Capers & Quirks hatOLOGY 532 Lacy; Ronnie Boykins (b); Dennis Charles (d). 12/79.
These are not players one immediately associates with Lacy, though his association with Charles went back more than 20 years. Boykins is strikingly similar in sound to Jean-Jacques Avenel, suggesting that this is the kind of bass-tone Lacy hears as he negotiates his high-wire stuff. The five cuts are all Lacy originals. 'Bud's Brother' and 'Kitty Malone' are long, nostalgic-sounding pieces with lots of action from both bass and percussion, but focusing on Steve's winding, microtonal lines.

(*) Clichés hatOLOGY 536 Lacy; George Lewis (tb); Steve Potts (ss, as); Bobby Few (p); Irène Aëbi (vn, clo, v); Jean-Jacques Avenel (b); Oliver Johnson (d); Cyrille Few, Sherry Margolin (perc). 11/82.
This is edited from the original release of Prospectus, which makes a change from overstuffed CD reissues. Whether Clichés benefits from the trimming we'd beg leave to doubt, but it's resolutely unclichéd music from the opening 'Stamps', written in honour of Miles Davis, to the title-track, which was inspired by an African postcard from a friend. Again, Lacy works from short speech-phrases woven into subtle scalar forms. Oddly, the septet seems less full-voiced than the sextet. Lewis is a deconstructionist, even if he isn't pulling his instrument apart, and he treats each of these lines as minimal strategies that require little in the way of embellishment. Margolin, Cyrille, Few and an unidentified 'friend' add some fun to the title-piece.

 At The Bimhuis, 1982 Day Break 249 Lacy; Mal Waldron (p). 12/82.
Further unissued recordings from a well-documented partnership and a phenomenally busy year for the saxophonist. Each player has one compositional credit, Lacy's 'Blues For Aida' and Waldron's staple 'Snake-Out', but predictably the bulk of the set consists of Monk tunes, resonantly stated by the pianist and brightly, often skittishly interpreted by Lacy. They even find new things to say about 'Round Midnight', though the key performance is the closing 'Epistrophy', an astonishingly bold but faithful reading.

 Associates – Duets 82–93 Felmay FF1001 Lacy; George Lewis, Roswell Rudd (tb); Steve Potts (ss, as); Bobby Few, Ulli Gumpert, Mal Waldron (p); Derek Bailey (g); Muhammad Ali (d); Masahiko Togashi (perc); Irène Aëbi (v). 82–93.
These are all unreleased tapes. It's an inevitably bitty and sporadic set, touching on a huge range of styles, but that was the reality of Lacy's career. The duos with Waldron and Few, in their different ways, underline his 'jazz' side, while the fascinating encounters with Lewis and Bailey show how adept he was playing free. Our personal favourite is 'Pannonica' with Rudd, a familiar theme given a most unusual reading. Also 'Clichés' with Rashied's brother Muhammad: a ferocious explosion of sound.

 The Condor / (*) The Window Soul Note 121135 / 121185 Lacy; Steve Potts (ss, as on Condor only); Bobby (p on Condor only); Irène Aëbi (vn, v on Condor only); Jean-Jacques Avenel (b); Oliver Johnson (d). 6/85, 7/87.
'Morning Joy' kicks off The Condor, where the balance of written-out passages and freer improvisation seems almost ideal; it also features some of the best interplay between the two saxophones, with Potts in exceptionally good form. One of the great pleasures of Lacy's mammoth output is the comparison of different versions of an 'instant standard'. These are valuable for an understanding of how unconventionally he relates to a 'rhythm section'.

Stripping down to sax, bass and drums on The Window, he refuses all the obvious rhythmic and chordal cues, playing lines so oblique as almost to belong to another piece altogether. 'Flakes' is a wonderfully self-descriptive composition.

 Chirps FMP CD 29 Lacy; Evan Parker (ss). 7/85.
By the turn of the '80s, Lacy appears to have regarded total improvisational abstraction as a way-station rather than a long-term direction. Nevertheless, in Chirps he and Parker produced one of the best and most significant free albums of the decade. Concentrating on high, brief sounds that are more like insect-twitter than bird-song, the two players interleave minimalist episodes with a level of concentration that seems almost superhuman.

 Morning Joy hatOLOGY 556 Lacy; Steve Potts (ss, as); Jean-Jacques Avenel (b); Oliver Johnson (d). 2/86.
Though simply a recording of a Paris gig without Few and Aëbi, the music comes across with rare intensity, Lacy and Potts working off each other even more strikingly than usual. With two outstanding Monk covers and four Lacy themes where the spiked melodies are sharpened to pristine points, this is an ideal entry level for listeners new to his work.

 Sempre Amore / * Communiqué / (*) Let's Call This ... Esteem Soul Note 121170 / 121487 / Slam CD 501 Lacy; Mal Waldron (p). 2/86; 3/94; 5/93.
The partnership with Waldron was one of the most productive in Lacy's career. The pianist's name comes first on the wonderful Sempre Amore, but the honours are strictly shared. Waldron's big, dark left-hand chords and single-note statements take some of the acid out of Lacy's frail and thinly voiced takes on a bag of Ellington and Strayhorn themes. The opening 'Johnny Come Lately' is appealingly off-centre and 'Prelude To A Kiss' sounds at the edge of sleep. It's worth comparing 'A Flower Is A Lovesome Thing' to the version Waldron recorded with Marion Brown the previous year on Songs Of Love And Regret, where his accompaniment is little more than a sequence of moodily recessed pedals. With the undemonstrative Lacy, he's all over the place, arpeggiating and trilling furiously.

The Slam disc was recorded during a concert at the Oxford Playhouse, compèred by another soprano specialist, Lol Coxhill. The sound is oddly cavernous but the performances are uniformly excellent. Another version of 'Johnny Come Lately' suggests how much they've grown into the partnership. The Monk tunes – 'Let's Call This', 'Monk's Dream', 'Evidence' and the inevitable 'Epistrophy' – are expertly co-ordinated and by no means soulless. Waldron's own 'Snake Out' sounds great without a larger band, and the pianist has his moment again on 'In A Sentimental Mood'. The other Soul Note disc catches the duo in one of their better latter-day encounters.

(*) Revenue Soul Note 121234 Lacy; Steve Potts (as, ss); Jean-Jacques Avenel (b); John Betsch (d). 2/93.
 Vespers Soul Note 121260 As above, except add Ricky Ford (ts), Tom Varner (frhn), Bobby Few (p), Irène Aëbi (v). 7/93.
Betsch's arrival gave the Lacy group a slightly more delicate rhythmic feel. Even so, as he proves on 'The Rent' and the title-track, the new drummer is no slouch. He powers these tracks along very crisply and on 'Gospel' subtly stretches and compresses the time exactly in keeping with Lacy's own elastic pulse. Potts more than ever brings in ideas of his own and a range of contributions that might be likened to Don Cherry's in the classic Ornette quartet: responsive, aware of the leader's intentions and requirements, but still absolutely individual and effortlessly taking up point on 'The Uh Uh Uh'.

Vespers is focused on Blaga Dimitrova's lyrics for Aëbi; the songs are softly melancholy farewells and remembrances of departed friends and idols: Miles Davis, Corrado Costa, the artists Arshile Gorky and Keith Haring, clarinettist John Carter, John Coltrane, Charles Mingus and Stan Getz. This is perhaps the least reticent music we've heard from Lacy, and all the more affecting for that.

[illegible]

* 5 x Monk 5 x Lacy

Silkheart SHCD 144 Lacy (ss solo). 3/94.

Having spent a good deal of time over the past few years working with the group and with larger-scale arrangements, Lacy showed every sign of wanting to return to unaccompanied performance. This one is exactly as described, five tunes by the master and five originals, including the familiar 'The Crust' and 'Deadline', both of them well-established Lacy repertory tunes. His take on both 'Pannonica' and 'Evidence' is notable for subtle shifts in the geometry of the tune, changing internal relationships without changing the components, rather like one of those relativity diagrams in which time-space is presumed to be gridded on a sheet of rubber which can then be stretched and folded but not cut or torn. All the material was recorded during an improvisation festival in Stockholm.

 Actuality Cavity Search CSR 24 Lacy (ss solo). 4/95.
'Actual' is an interesting word because it doesn't mean 'real', but 'here and now'. And what this live record documents is Lacy's commitment to the thought of the moment, to a kind of articulation in which a phrase or a note is not predetermined, analysed or debated but simply articulated and allowed its moment in the air. As usual, Lacy draws on compositions from the span of his career. 'Revolutionary Suicide' is dedicated to Black Panther Huey Newton but was called back to mind by news of violent struggle elsewhere. 'Moms' is exactly what it says, a song of affection and thanks. 'The Door', with its knocking sounds, is devoted to Joseph Haydn; for Lacy, the knock at the door is also the moment of maximum immediacy, a challenge. With the exception of the final club track, Actuality was recorded in a church, an acoustic that throws a wrap round Lacy's chill tone.

* Five Facings FMP CD 85 Lacy; Marilyn Crispell, Ulrich Gumpert, Misha Mengelberg, Vladimir Miller, Fred Van Hove (p). 4/96.

Five nights at the Workshop Freie Musik; five confrontations with piano-players of markedly different dispositions. Four of the eight performances are Lacy compositions. Two rather short items with Crispell open the record and fail to catch light, mainly because she tends to think in great massy blocks of sound which don't sit easily with Steve's weaving lines. At the opposite end, Miller is perfectly content to act as accompanist on 'The Wane'. The real meat of the record lies in between, a magnificent duo improvisation with Van Hove, a long meditation on 'Art' with the classically inclined and suitably dry Gumpert, and three Monk tunes performed with the redoubtable Mengelberg. Of these, 'Ruby, My Dear' is a masterpiece; 'Off Minor' and 'Evidence' are a little drier but no less thoughtful and accomplished.

 Solo: Live At Unity Temple Wobbly Rail WOB 003 Lacy (ss solo). 11/97.

Unity Temple is an ecumenical religious building in Chicago, designed by Frank Lloyd Wright. As such, and given its humane acoustic, it's the perfect setting to run through an unusual, comfortable and familiar set of themes, including his now well-attested Monk medley and the delightfully wry 'Revenue'. 'Crust' and 'Art' are textbook Lacy, and this is the kind of record with which you might win round someone who's previously found his unaccompanied performances hard to follow.

(*) The Rent Cavity Search 44 Lacy; Jean-Jacques Avenel (b); John Betsch (d). 98.

A cracking trio record that retreads some of Lacy's most distinctive themes – 'Door', 'Flakes', 'Shuffle Boil (Monk)' – and re-energizes them considerably. His playing has taken on a more expressive cast, a more vocalized tone than in the past. Avenel and Betsch respond in kind.

(*) Monk's Dream Verve 543090-2 Lacy; Roswell Rudd (tb); Jean-Jacques Avenel (b); John Betsch (d); Irène Aëbi (v). 6–8/99.

This was a cherished project of veteran jazz producer Jean-Philippe Allard, and one that was intended to rekindle a four-decade-old association with Rudd. The trombonist isn't the force of yore; some of his expressionism sounds more like short-windedness, even if the musical intelligence remains keen. Lacy himself is magnificent; two Monk tunes, a nod to Duke with a 'Koko' that starts in very remote places indeed, and a bunch of typical Lacy originals, two with texts sung by Irène. Beautifully recorded.

* The Holy La Freelance 0201 Lacy; Jean-Jacques Avenel (b); John Betsch (d); Irène Aëbi (v). 01.

The title refers to the A-natural note that orchestral musicians tune to. Lacy revisits some of the music he and his companions created over the previous 30 years. 'Flakes' is there, played with something approaching solemnity. 'The Door' is classically inspired and very moving. They kick off with Monk's 'Shuffle Boil', which helps to establish a language that grows in eloquence as the set advances. Aëbi sings Robert Creeley's lyrics to 'Inside My Head', but otherwise it is Lacy, Avenel and Betsch who command attention.

 One More Time Leo CD LR 422 Lacy; Joëlle Léandre (b). 7/02.

Lacy toured in Europe just before returning 'home' to the US. A few glasses of Belgian beer must have been drunk during this session, judging by the noises-off. They do, to be frank, detract from an absorbing but oddly structured set in which pieces seem to stop mid-flow. The difficulties of balancing the two voices can't be underestimated, but Léandre's empathy bridges the gap. As if to legitimize the release, she includes a posthumous voice-mail message from Steve approving the tapes; after more than two decades in Europe, his French is touchingly schoolboyish.

 Recessional (For Oliver Johnson) Mode 04 Lacy; John Heward (d, kalimba, perc). 6/03.

One of Lacy's last concerts before being diagnosed with liver cancer, this was taped in Montreal and is dedicated to an old colleague. Heward's percussion imparts an African feel to the event, but the energy levels are highly variable and there are points when the dynamic is pppp, and all the more effective for it. Lacy has some anguished moments that in retrospect seem untypical, so perhaps some particularly strong emotion was at work.

 The Beat Suite Sunnyside 3012 Lacy; George Lewis (tb); Jean-Jacques Avenel (b); John Betsch (d); Irène Aëbi (v). 03.

An ambitious attempt to set some of the Beat Poets to a jazz score that goes far beyond 'spontaneous bop prosody'. Aëbi's voice is the stumbling-block here and what the project needs more than anything is a variety of vocalists to bring to life the very different registers required for Kerouac, Creeley, Burroughs, Ginsberg, Rexroth and Corso. The texts make for interesting reading, but the real drama is in the accompaniment, which is subtle and carefully inflected by the two horns and the rest of the band. These guys have worked together for so long and with such intensity that there are moments when too much is elided, a conversation conducted in winks, nods and monosyllables. Fascinating, none the less.

Also, in brief:

 Plays Monk Fuel 2000 061830. 69.

Made for BYG just after he moved to Paris, this is a surprisingly straight and un-idiosyncratic reading of seven Monk tunes.

 Cinco Minutos De Jazz Strauss ST 1087. 72.

Recorded in Lisbon to celebrate the sixth anniversary of a radio show which dedicated the same length of time to jazz that orthodox psychoanalysts give to their patients.

 Sidelines Improvising Artists Incorporated 123847. 1/76.

Lacy in duo with the little-recorded Michael Smith (p). There are fine things here, but Smith's music is opaque and obscure.

(*) The Way hatOLOGY 302. 1/79.

Valuable reissue of a quintet date, augmented with material from a Swiss concert.

(*) Troubles Black Saint 120035. 5/79.

This is what he calls 'poly-free', juxtaposing group improvisation with scored or predetermined passages.

(*) The Flame Soul Note 121035. 1/82.

A trio with Bobby Few (p) and Dennis Charles (d) which seems to combine the musical legacies of Monk and Cecil Taylor.

 One Fell Swoop Silkheart 103. 6/85.
An often overlooked set on a label not normally associated with Steve. Fellow saxophonist Charles Tyler shines.

(*) Only Monk / * More Monk Soul Note 121160 / 121210. 7/85; 4/89.
These are tremendous records, though as close to repertory playing as Lacy ever got.

 Spirit Of Mingus Freelance FRLCD016. 12/91.
Lacy got different things from Eric Watson (p) than from Waldron and this helps point them up, though it might be more evident if they were playing Monk rather than Mingus.

 Dummy Splasc(h) 843. 92.
A collaboration with Riccardo Fassi (p), who wrote 'Dark Water' for Steve. An unusual diversion from the familiar line-up.

 We See: Thelonious Monk Songbook hatOLOGY 529. 92.
Well-trodden material but the originality lies in the instrumentation, with vibes and trumpet.

 The Joan Miró Foundation Concert New Contemporary Music NCM 10. 6/95.
A flawed tape, never intended for release, but a lovely duo recital with Irène (v).

 Bye-Ya Freelance 25. 3/96.
Aëbi (v) has only a walk-on role this time, leaving the trio to spin out taut, well-structured songs and improvisations; 'Trinkle Tinkle' as well as the title-piece.

 Sands Tzadik 7124. 98.
Pages from Steve's and Irène's musical workbook, spun out at leisure and with admirable concentration at home.

Guy Lafitte (1927–98)

TENOR SAXOPHONE

He switched from clarinet and established himself as a mainstreamer, working with many visiting Americans.

 Blue And Sentimental Emarcy 159852-2 Lafitte; Peanuts Holland (t); Raymond Fol, Jean-Claude Pelletier (p); Geo Daly (vib); Jean Bonal (g); Alix Bret, Charlie Blareau (b); Bernard Planchenault, Mac Kac Reilles (d). 54.
 Corps Et Ame Black & Blue 915-2 Lafitte; Hank Jones (p); George Duvivier (b); J. C. Heard (d). 3/78.
 Three Men On A Beat Black & Blue 973-2 Lafitte; Wild Bill Davis (org); Alvin Queen (d). 1/83.
Lafitte was a much-liked figure who recorded rather sparsely. These sets are likeable testaments from a man with a big sound and a grand manner. The Emarcy disc reissues some mild mainstream from an obscure French issue, mostly standard ballads where Lafitte's Hawkins influence is given full rein. Geo Daly throws in a little vibes shimmer, but otherwise the group is no more than quietly supportive.

The earlier Black & Blue finds Guy in top company, and he enjoyed it. Once past the feeble 'One For The Bean', the quartet tuck into the material like hungry men, though Jones is as polished as usual. No classic, just a good mainstream blow. With Bill and Alvin, Guy comes on like Lockjaw Davis. The tracks are too samey, but a modest tonic one or two at a time.

Biréli Lagrène (born 1966)

GUITAR

Born to a Sinti gypsy family, he was a child prodigy, already touring in his teens.

 Routes To Django / Biréli Swing '81 Jazzpoint JP 1055 2CD Lagrène; Bernd Rabe (ss); Joerg Reiter (p); Wolfgang Lackerschmidt (vib); Gaiti Lagrène , Tschirglo Loeffler (g); Scmitto Kling (vn); Jan Jankeje (b); Allen Blairman (d). 5/80, 4/81.
He's Django Reinhardt's spiritual heir, a player of stunning virtuosity. This material was all recorded in concert, with Lagrène's amazing acoustic improvisations conducted on a range of material which includes swing, blues, bop and original themes, all of it mastered with effortless aplomb, even when it sounds as if the guitarist isn't sure of his ground.

That hint of flying blind gives the greatest excitement to the debut album, Routes To Django, which includes a nerve-racking romp through the tune identified as 'Night And Day' (actually 'Don't Worry 'Bout Me'). The 1981 session is nearly as good, although Rabe is an irrelevance.

 A Tribute To Django Reinhardt Jazzpoint JP 1061 2CD Lagrène; Vic Juris, Diz Disley, Gaiti Lagrène (g); Jan Jankeje (b). 7/81–6/85.
Probably the best and the worst of Lagrène in this rather confusingly presented two-disc package. It's not really a Reinhardt tribute, more a combination of two concerts (there is a stray track from 1981, for no apparent reason) from Carnegie Hall and the Freiburg Jazz Festival. Juris is co-featured on the second gig and takes a guest turn on the first. Biréli's blues are little more than superfast clichés, played for effect, but there is also some daredevil interplay which is genuinely exciting. Chick Corea's 'Spain' has a solo which will have most guitarists shaking their heads in disbelief.

 Blue Eyes Dreyfus Jazz FDM 36591-2 Lagrène; Maurice Vander (p); Christian Minh Doky (b); André Ceccarelli (d). 6/97.
This is a bit of a shock, a Sinatra tribute which features the guitarist turning in vocals on four tracks. Sensibly, he sings only on chucklesome tunes like 'Luck Be A Lady' and doesn't go for the heartbreakers, since he's scarcely the crooning type. The guitar-playing remains heroic in a dashed-off sort of way, but this is a relentlessly swinging rhythm section and they're pushing him pretty hard.

 Duet Dreyfus FDM 36604-2 Lagrène; Sylvain Luc (g). 6/99.
As flush as it is with lightning picking, this has a softness of timbre which is very appealing. Luc matches Lagrène line for line, strum for strum, and the tunes are a likeable mix of pop, jazz and the odd original. Hardly profound, but maybe that isn't Biréli's style.

 To Bi Or Not To Bi Dreyfus FDM 36697 Lagrène (g solo). 06.
Some of the originals here are very good indeed. 'R & Bi' is a showpiece, with lots of flamenco-style tapping on the body of the instrument; 'Amparo' is long and involving, but what's with the medley of two Queen songs and 'It Was A Very Good Year'? Pure showbiz, though the worst thing is it doesn't really work. Good concert sound and a treat for Biréli's fans.

Also, in brief:

(*) Front Page Emarcy 549045-2. 1/00.
With John McLaughlin (g) and Dennis Chambers (d) on board, a land speed record seems a certainty.

 Gipsy Project & Friends Dreyfus FDM 36638-2. 2/02.
In a post-Gypsy Kings world, maybe this music has settled into an idiom which takes its place in whichever aisle of the world music supermarket, and just stays there.

 Move Dreyfus 36668. 1/04.
Not that he doesn't go molten whenever he touches the strings, but again it's high-class world music entertainment.

Oliver Lake (born 1944)

ALTO AND SOPRANO SAXOPHONES, FLUTE

Influenced by Eric Dolphy, but still best known as a member of the World Saxophone Quartet.

 Holding Together Black Saint 120009 Lake; Michael Gregory Jackson (g); Fred Hopkins (b); Paul Maddox (d). 76.
Apart from Jackson's tiny 'Ballad' right at the end, this is all Lake material, though played very much as ensemble fare. Hopkins is utterly delightful on this, buoyant and thoughtful by turns, and the only weak link is the drummer, though that's the fault of the recording.

 Buster Bee Sackville 3018 Lake; Julius Hemphill (sax, f). 78.
A limited-edition reissue of an early disc that finds Lake and fellow WSQ man Hemphill exploring the upper register on soprano saxophones and flute. It feels a little like eavesdropping, but a nice historical glimpse.

(*) Zaki hatOLOGY 639 Lake; Michael Gregory Jackson (g); Pheeroan akLaff (d). 9/79.
A welcome reissue. That said, this set from the Willisau Festival could do with some internal editing, mainly on the long opening title-track (which Lake reprises in less than two minutes at the end). There's a fair amount of space-filling, which deadens some very fine and often risky improvisation. Jackson and akLaff were both inclined to come on like rock stars at this period, which doesn't always fit with Lake's music. Even so, it's undeniably exciting and adventurous.

 Prophet /  Clevont Fitzhubert Black Saint 120044 / 120054 Lake; Baikida Carroll (t, flhn); Donald Smith (p); Jerry Harris (b on Prophet only); Pheeroan akLaff (d). 8/80, 4/81.
(*) Expandable Language Black Saint 120074 Lake; Geri Allen (p); Kevin Eubanks (g); Fred Hopkins (b); Pheeroan akLaff (d). 9/84.
Expandable Language consists of six provocative explorations, alternately fierce and lyrical. Prophet is a less cohesive album but also a far bolder one, and it's interesting to track the path of Lake's engagement with free procedures over this (almost) five-year period. The tension between orthodox, changes-based jazz and abstraction has always been a creative one for him; in his interchanges with Carroll one can detect distant echos of Parker and Gillespie duelling at Massey Hall, and indeed Ornette and Cherry trading ever sharper phrases on the early Atlantics. The middle record, with its enigmatic dedication to a 'good friend', is packed with intriguing themes and counter-themes, not least the title-track. 'November '80' is also finely judged, and there is a single composition by the fiery Carroll, who features on his own 'King'.

(*) Movement, Turns & Switches Passin' Thru 41210 Lake; Kenyatta Beasley (t); Donal Fox (p); Sandra Billingslea, Ashley Horne, Regina Carter (vn); Maxine Roach (vla); Eileen Folson (clo); Belden Bullock (b). 8/96.
 Matador Of 1st & 1st Passin' Thru 40709 Lake (ss, as, f, bells, v). 97.
A new label. Matador is a strange montage of instrumental miniatures, some of them only a matter of seconds long, others shaped almost like scaled-down bebop tunes. It's not the easiest or most accommodating of listens, but it reveals a great deal about the microstructure of Lake's playing and compositions. Increasingly he seems to cast himself in the latter role. The saxophonist doesn't play at all on the title-track of the earlier album, which is a duo for Carter and Fox. The remainder of the album is credited to his String Project, with additional instrumentalists added ad hoc. The album begins with stunning simplicity on 'Fan Fare Bop', a sharp, declamatory theme which is catchier than you'd imagine possible. The role of Kenyatta Beasley is all too brief. It might have been better to have included bassist Bullock on more of the tunes as well. He adds bottom to a sound that is a little shrill and unsupported.

(*) Talkin' Stick Passin' Thru 41213 Lake; Geri Allen (p); Jay Hoggard (vib); Belden Bullock (b); Cecil Brooks III (d). 3/97.
Given the experimentation of recent years, it's quite surprising to find Lake playing in a relatively orthodox bebop format. The partnership of alto and vibes will inevitably make some listeners think of Dolphy's Out To Lunch!, and the connection is definitely there. Fortunately, the material is so strong and the group so well-suited to the project that the results are high-quality. Including the late Julius Hemphill's 'Hard Blues' was a powerful stroke, and Curtis Clark's 'Only If You Live There' will be an ear-opener for many, but it is the long 'Masaai Moves' which dominates the album, heard here in a much more direct version than the original. Allen is as efficient an accompanist as one could wish for, and her straightforwardness is a huge asset on the closing 'Song For Jay' and 'Philly Blues'.

 Kinda Up Justin Time 1362 Lake; Reggie Washington (b); Pheeroan akLaff (d); Lyndon Achee (steel d). 99.
This Steel Quartet date is thoroughly infectious. There is enough darkness for anyone in a long interpretation of Coltrane's 'Lonnie's Lament', but the upbeat calypso of 'Yes You Broke' and a brilliant reading of Sonny Simmons's 'Land Of The Freaks' fulfil the promise laid out in the title-track, which opens the album. Even the closing rap isn't offensive.

* Dat Love Passin Thru 41219 Lake; Reggie Washington (b); Damon Duewhite (d); Lyndon Achee (steel d). 2/03.
A consistently fascinating and absorbing record on which the Steel Quartet concept works satisfyingly for the first time. Opening with an arrangement of 'Stolen Moments' by Oliver Nelson was a masterstroke, as is the read of Horace Silver's 'Senor Blues', but he isn't afraid to include the Stevie Wonder/Mary J. Blige song 'Time' as well. AkLaff gives way to the impressive Duewhite here, a less-seasoned voice and a less-mannered percussionist, but spot-on for this music. Crisp, uncluttered recording.

(*) Time Being Intakt CD 106 Lake; Reggie Workman (b); Andrew Cyrille (d). 3/05.
A superstar line-up, which goes out as Trio 3, and to be truthful Lake is somewhat eclipsed by his two playing partners. His sopranino playing is fascinating, a very different tonality and though his own writing isn't much featured here, he shows an ever-evolving sense of line and structure. A very fine recording, subtly mastered.

Also, in brief:

(*) Virtual Reality: Total Escapism Gazell 4004. 10/91.
Worth tracking down. This was Lake's working quartet, caught in good form.

 Edge-ing /  Dedicated To Dolphy Black Saint 120104 / 120144. 6/93, 11/94.
Compared to earlier Dolphy readings (and despite the fine work of trumpeter Russell Gunn) Dedicated is a disappointment. Lake veers towards lyricism again on Edge-ing, rejigging 'Zaki' for a fuller-voiced band.

* Have Yourself A Merry ... Passin' Thru 41216. 00.
A Christmas album, with singer Judy Bady. Who'd have thought it?

 Live Passin Thru 41221. 5/01.
Bebop, a Navajo chant and the dramatic presence of Mary Redhouse. Intriguing.

 Cloth Passin Thru 41217. 02.
A bold and mostly successful big-band project, with a lot of detail in the charts.

Ralph Lalama (born 1951)

TENOR SAXOPHONE

The son of a drummer and a singer, he had stints with Woody Herman, Buddy Rich and the Jones–Lewis band.

(*) Feelin' And Dealin' Criss Cross 1046 Lalama; Tom Harrell (t, flhn); Barry Harris (p); Peter Washington (b); Kenny Washington (d). 11/90.
 Momentum Criss Cross 1063 Lalama; Kenny Barron (p); Dennis Irwin (b); Kenny Washington (d). 12/91.
 You Know What I Mean Criss Cross 1097 Lalama; George Cables (p); Dennis Irwin (b); Leroy Williams (d). 12/93.
Lalama plays with iron in his tone. His choice of composer credits gives his idols away – Rollins, Dexter, Mobley – and, though he sometimes falls prey to the habitual anonymity of the great section-man, his improvising has real class and substance from moment to moment. A very fine solo on Mobley's 'Third Time Around' on the first record shows what he can do: the way he masters the rhythmic suspensions in the tune, throws in a couple of unexpected, whistling high notes and takes in a timbral exploration along the way suggests both technical and conceptual mastery. The record isn't consistently good, and Harrell doesn't seem quite at his best. Momentum is a degree more ordinary: Lalama handles the casting as sole horn with aplomb, but the session ends up as merely decent hard bop. You Know What I Mean follows a similar pattern: he gets all over the horn on 'This Love Of Mine' without apparent effort.

 Circle Line Criss Cross 1132 Lalama; Peter Bernstein (g); Peter Washington (b); Kenny Washington (d). 12/95.
 Music For Grown-Ups Criss Cross 1165 As above, except omit Bernstein; add Richard Wyands (p). 12/98.
Circle Line is something of a homage to Bridge-era Sonny Rollins: listen to the way Lalama swaggers into 'My Ideal'. 'Giant Steps' is ordinary and, while Lalama and the others are never less than assured, one waits in vain to be surprised. Despite the title, Music For Grown-Ups has a welcoming atmosphere, four pros flexing their collective muscle. Lalama's tone has been buffed to a hard matt surface: he wouldn't do anything to unbalance either band or listener and, while his stability is unarguable, it means that his records will rarely collar the attention. Best shot: a gruff, feisty stroll through 'Lullaby Of The Leaves'. But what's happened to him since?

Lambert, Hendricks & Ross

VOCAL GROUP

The original trio cemented a brief fashion for vocalese, a style in which instrumental jazz is replicated in sung lines and invented lyrics.

(*) Sing A Song Of Basie Verve 543827-2 Lambert, Hendricks, Ross; Nat Pierce (p); Freddie Green (g); Eddie Jones (b); Sonny Payne (d). 55.
 The Hottest Group In Jazz Columbia C2K 64933 2CD Lambert, Hendricks, Ross; Harry 'Sweets' Edison (t); Pony Poindexter (as); Gildo Mahones (p); Ike Isaacs, Ron Carter (b); Walter Bolden, Jimmy Wormsworth, Stu Martin (d). 8/59–3/62.
Vocalese may have begun with the Mills Brothers and their clever vocal mimicry of horns, but it developed along very different lines when Eddie Jefferson and then King Pleasure and Annie Ross began to fit words to famous jazz solos. Ross's virtuoso interpretation of Wardell Gray's 'Twisted' was a huge hit. Perhaps the finest exponent, though, was Jon Hendricks, who had an unfailing facility for glib rhymes and for words to fit instrumental effects.

The Basie record is in a sense atypical: the group had sought to re-create the Basie band with a large vocal ensemble but ended up singing all the lines themselves via overdubbing, and the set became a kind of novelty hit. Hendricks's lyrics are often a hoot, and the record set a precedent for a style which many have followed, few bettered. The best bet is the Columbia set, which pulls together their three albums for the label and a few odds and ends. Forty years and more on, the likes of 'Twisted', 'Cookin' At The Continental' and 'Swingin' Till The Girls Come Home' are still cool enough to overcome the stigma of jazz showbiz.

Michael Lambert

DRUMS

Drummer.

 Out Twice 483 Music 1019 Lambert; Lionel Garcin (sax); Milcho Leviev (p); John Giannelli, Barre Phillips (b). 2 & 4/02.
Two trios involved here, in separate sessions from LA and Pernes les Fontaines in France. Lambert uses his own artwork as graphic scores for spontaneous improvisation. The group with Leviev and Gianelli responds perhaps less confidently to the challenge, with Leviev in particular palpably looking for something to anchor the music, but the only reservation one can have about their pieces arises from the comparison with the wonderful work by Phillips and the little-known Garcin, who seem to enjoy Lambert's 'cartography' and revel in its secret landscapes. The drummer is a remarkable player, fluent but disciplined, and with a brilliant grasp of group dynamics.

Steve Lampert

TRUMPET

Bright new voice with interesting ideas.

(*) Venus Perplexed Steeplechase SCCD 31557 Lampert; Rich Perry (ts); Joe Locke (vib); Charles Blenzig (p); Gene Torres (b); Rick Butler (d); Carlos Gomez (perc). 00.

This is certainly different to the usual run of Steeplechases. Lampert interweaves short, quirky interludes with longer, more conventional group tracks. His writing is wry and not without emotion. 'Music Box' and 'Either/Or' are strong musical ideas and, while we'd hesitate to mention Kierkegaard in a family-oriented book, there do seem to be big ideas working behind the latter title; philosopher and label are both Danish, after all. Sterling work from Steeplechase favourites Locke and Perry, but Blenzig, who's new to us, is also arresting.

Byard Lancaster (born 1942)

ALTO SAXOPHONE, FLUTE

Though he made his name working with Sunny Murray and Bill Dixon, he has also worked in soul and blues.

 It's Not Up To Us Water 115 Lancaster; Sonny Sharrock (g); Jerome Hunter (b); Eric Gravatt (d). 12/66.

Much of Lancaster's career has been spent in and around his native Philadelphia. This valuable reissue captures the saxophonist in fine form, wailing and honking righteously but also veering towards abstraction, even on standard material like 'Misty' and 'Over The Rainbow'. The original material seems to be a mixture of Lancaster compositions – like the fine title-tune and 'Dog Town' – and collective improvisations/jams like 'Satan'.

Sharrock's style was steadily evolving in this period but cleaving to the same mix of free jazz and funk that Lancaster was pioneering. Sharrock is credited with one composition, 'John's Children', and provides ringing accompaniment throughout. The disc also provides a welcome glimpse of Gravatt, best known for his work with Weather Report.

 Documentation/The End of a Decade Jambrio 1005 Lancaster; Alfred Pollitt (p); David Eyges (clo); Bobby Byrd (b); Chucky Lee (d); Keno Speller (perc); Joan Hansom (v). 2–12/79.

Compared to the 24-year-old who made It's Not Up To Us, the mature player sounds drier and more sober, less inclined to flights of gospelly euphoria. There is some excellent playing on this compilation of two locally recorded dates pairing Lancaster with the Broadway Local Dance Band. Cellist David Eyges plays an interesting role and contributes a fine composition, 'A Bird's Eye View Of The World', but mostly the music is crossover stuff, driven along tramline grooves by Pollitt's rinky-rink electric piano.

 Philadelphia Spirit In New York CIMP 239 Lancaster; Odean Pope (ss, ts); Ed Crockett (b); J. R. Mitchell (d). 01.

Lancaster often favoured guitar over piano but here he dispenses with a harmony instrument altogether. It makes for a tough listen, with the two saxophonists weaving complex lines that sometimes appear to lean on a chordal structure and sometimes veer away from it altogether. The rhythm section's willing but uncertain.

() Pam Africa / () Ancestral Link Hotel CIMP 331 / 340 Lancaster; Ed Crockett, Bert Harris (b); Harold E. Smith (d). 4/05.

A tribute to the black community of Philadelphia, which explains why 'Blue Train' and 'Mr P.C.' are included on the first set. There's also a fine version of 'I'm An Old Cowhand'. Lots of little instruments, which sometimes muddies the mix, but there's more than enough excitement. The sequel was recorded the following day and it takes up a considerable head of energy from that. As so often with this label, there's too much unedited music, but in this case it gains qualitatively as well as quantitatively from the extra material.

Harold Land (1928–2001)

TENOR SAXOPHONE, FLUTE, OBOE

Born in Texas but raised in San Diego, he worked with Max Roach before becoming a fixture on the West Coast scene of the late '50s and '60s.

 Harold In The Land Of Jazz Original Jazz Classics OJC 162 Land; Rolf Ericson (t); Carl Perkins (p); Leroy Vinnegar (b); Frank Butler (d). 1/58.

This was made towards the end of Land's stint with bassist Curtis Counce's band. An underrated player, hampered by a rather dour tone, Land never quite put his interesting ideas into effective practice. He favoured unusual piano-players, not always to the benefit of the music. Perkins's crab-wise gait across the keyboard is mitigated by the vibrant rhythm work of Vinnegar and Butler, and the best track on the album is the quartet, 'You Don't Know What Love Is', which the showy Ericson sits out.

(*) Jazz At The Cellar, 1958 Lone Hill Jazz 10291 Land; Elmo Hope (p); Scott LaFaro (b); Lennie McBrowne (d). 11/58.

A terrific discovery that helps fill in the gap between Land's debut as leader and The Fox, his best-known recording. Recorded in Vancouver, this featured Sonny Rollins's rhythm section, though Land sounds as if he's been listening to Coltrane. The harmonic language is broader and more exacting than on his debut and his playing on 'Cherokee' is quite adventurous. There are only five tracks on an almost 80-minute CD. 'The Scene Is Clean' and the closing 'Come Rain Or Come Shine' contain some of the highlights. Sound is very decent for a club recording, though there are moments when the source seems suspect. LaFaro, inevitably, is least well served and some of his breaks are muffled and indistinct.

(*) The Fox Original Jazz Classics OJC 343 Land; Dupree Bolton (t); Elmo Hope (p); Herbie Lewis (b); Frank Butler (d). 8/59.

Jazz history has drawn a veil over Bolton's subsequent career. Here, he plays with confidence and some fire, at ease with the accelerated tempo of 'The Fox' and the easier flow of 'Mirror-Mind Rose'. If Carl Perkins recalls a crab, then Elmo Hope has to be a butterfly. His touch was as light as his ideas and colours were fleeting. One of the least dynamic of players (and singularly dependent on drummers of Butler's kidney), he was nevertheless able to keep track with a rhythm line he wasn't actually playing, laying out astonishing melody figures on 'One Down' in what is probably his best recorded performance.

 West Coast Blues Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 146 Land; Joe Gordon (t); Barry Harris (p); Wes Montgomery (g); Sam Jones (b); Louis Hayes (d). 5/60.

Solid bop on the first of these, kicked off by Land's own 'Ursula' but galvanized by an unusual reading of Bird's 'Klactoveesedstene'. The title-tune is a Wes Montgomery line and the great man's familiar octaves are there all the way through. Nice stuff, but not the most exciting of records.

 The Harold Land/Carmell Jones Quintets: Complete Studio Recordings Lone Hill LHJ 10268 2CD Land; Carmell Jones (t); John Houston, Frank Strazzeri (p); Jimmy Bond, Red Mitchell, Gary Peacock (b); Donald Dean, Mel Lee, Leon Petties (d). 6/61–7/63.
Much of disc one was issued as The Remarkable Carmell Jones, but jazz history hasn't been kind to the trumpeter. The quintet with Strazzeri, Peacock and Petties takes a loose-limbed tack on hard bop, attractive but uneventful; it's the trumpeter's solos that attract most attention, liquid and melodious. A further four tracks on disc two were also attributed to him on Business Meetin' with Dean at the kit. Eight cuts were put out under Land's name as Hear Ye!. None of this changes the picture significantly, but it adds significantly to Land's surprisingly small discography and there isn't a dud track here, even on the stray Jazz Impressions Of Folk Music cuts from the summer of 1963.

Also, in brief:

() Eastward Ho! Original Jazz Classics OJC 493. 7/60.
Land and Kenny Dorham (t) are both in fine voice but rarely seem to be thinking along the same lines.

 Take Aim Mighty Quinn 1057. 7/60.
Originally recorded for Blue Note with a fairly obscure group, though it included Amos Trice (p). This was a hectic summer for Harold.

Art Lande (born 1947)

PIANO, PERCUSSION

American pianist-composer whose brief tenure with ECM was responsible for the major part of his reputation. In the '80s he moved into full-time teaching.

() Red Lanta ECM 829323 Lande; Jan Garbarek (ss, ts). 11/73.
 Rubisa Patrol ECM 519875-2 Lande; Mark Isham (t, flhn, ss); Bill Douglas (b, f); Glenn Cronkhite (d). 5/76.
Lande's anagrammatic ECM debut doesn't stand up well to the test of time. It might look like a collaborative album, but the pianist is responsible for all the compositions and Garbarek is decidedly sub fusc for most of the record, which has a wan and pastel quality. Ironically, this is as close as one will find to what has been satirized as the 'ECM sound'.

Renewed acquaintance with Rubisa Patrol suggests that it is rather more durable than we had previously allowed. Isham, who has spent most of his time subsequently in film music, plays with a steely elegance and contributes two of the best themes, 'Many Chinas' (which opens the record after Douglas's remarkable bamboo flute solo) and 'For Nancy'. Although Lande's improvising is unremarkable, his own music displays a sense of nocturnal quiet that the group distil with great skill. The sound remains limpidly beautiful on CD.

 Skylight ECM 531025-2 Lande; Paul McCandless (ss, cor, ob, bcl, f); David Samuels (vib, mar, perc). 5/81.
Another charming record, though more of a co-operative venture: Lande contributes two tunes, and one of them, 'Dance Of The Silver Skeezix', is pure floss. It's McCandless's pair of compositions that suit the trio best. But the music as a whole is unaffectedly sweet: a bright summer's day after the cool evening of Rubisa Patrol.

* World Without Cars Synergy 5 Lande; Mark Miller (ss, ts, f, v). 99.
This looks like an attempt to recapture the sound of Red Lanta. Miller isn't quite a Garbarek copyist, but there are moments on these curious musical etudes that make the connection. Most of the original music is inoffensive Americana – pastoral themes that need an injection of energy to make them really sing. Here and there, one comes across harmonic oddities, which are just that, curios rather than original thinking. One is reminded of Lande's obscure Arch LP The Eccentricities of Earl Dant (another transparent anagram); it's hard not to wonder whether the eccentricity is a trifle too studied.

Adam Lane (born 1968)

BASS

Brooklynite bassist-composer, dividing his time between East and West Coasts.

 No(w) Music Cadence CJR 1133 Lane; Darren Johnston (t); Aaron Bennett (ss, ts, cl); Jeff Chan (ts, f, bcl); John Finkbeiner, Myles Boisen (g); Vijay Anderson (d). 10/99–3/01.
 Fo(u)r Being(s) CIMP 263 Lane; Paul Smoker (t); John Tchicai (ts, v); Barry Altschul (d). 1/02.
(*) DOS CIMP 281 Lane; John Tchicai (ts, bcl). 10/02.
Lane offers a pretty wide spectrum of music-making on these discs. A mixed bag. No(w) Music, credited to Lane's Full Throttle Orchestra, is in more of a new noise-making tradition (Lane mentions The Ruins and Motorhead as points of reference), although it's not quite nasty enough to really shock or surprise, and when they turn off the fuzzboxes and play 'proper' solos and swing band riffs and counterpoint, the group get grudgingly melodious. Good titles include 'Grape Ape Meets The Working Man' and 'Post-Industrial Folksong'.

Fo(u)r Beings is very different. 'House Of Elegant' is also on the Full Throttle Orchestra set; denuded of instruments, it sounds sketchy. As with so many CIMP dates, too many of the tracks last too long and end up with the listener's attention tiring, but it's an interesting and sometimes beguiling mix of personalities. Smoker is in great fettle and he thoroughly outplays Tchicai here. As if in compensation, the saxophonist plays much more clearly and purposefully on the duo record, which is elegantly performed by both men. Lane's tunes here exhibit a soft lyricism, his own playing flows serenely, and Tchicai responds with some of his most spare and aristocratic playing of recent times.

 Zero Degree Music /  Music Degree Zero CIMP 325 Lane; Vinny Golia (ss, ts); Vijay Anderson (d). 2/05.
Lane delivers a long-winded sleeve-note about the recording, but luckily the music itself is much better. It's a typically oversized CIMP outpouring with about 140 minutes of music on two separate discs, but Lane's tunes are worthwhile, Golia plays with his customary intensity and generosity (though for once he brought only two horns to the date), and Anderson is also excellent.

 New Magical Kingdom Clean Feed CF 052 Lane; Darren Johnston (t); Jeff Chan (ts); Aaron Bennett (sax); John Finkbeiner (g); Lynn Johnston (b); Vijay Anderson (d). 01–04.
It may be the kiss of death to describe a contemporary record as 'important', but Lane's septet is working towards a new ensemble sound that picks up the challenge of Mingus's Jazz Workshops and propels it in a new direction. There are tinges of rock here and there, sometimes not all that well judged, but for the most part this is subtle, sophisticated jazz, shaped with impressive authority by the bassist and unlike the usual sense of good, fair and average tracks, shaped into a coherent whole that is completely satisfying.

Also, in brief:

 Hollywood Wedding Cadence CJR 1102. 3/95–8/98.
Carpentered out of a mix of live and studio dates stretched over three years, this is an engaging 'sonic representation of my soul', with a series of carousing large groups.

Eddie Lang (1904–33)

GUITAR

Born Salvatore Massaro in Philadelphia, he met violinist Joe Venuti at school. They worked the NY dance band scene together in the '20s and Eddie went on to tour Europe, record with Louis Armstrong and become Bing Crosby's favourite accompanist.

(*) A Handful Of Riffs ASV AJA 5061 Lang; Joe 'King' Oliver (c); Leo McConville, Andy Secrest, Bill Margulis (t); Tommy Dorsey, Bill Rank (tb); Jimmy Dorsey (cl, as); Charles Strickfaden, Bernard Daly (as); Issy Friedman (cl, ts); J. C. Johnson, Frank Signorelli, Arthur Schutt (p); Hoagy Carmichael (p, cel); Henry Whiteman (vn); Lonnie Johnson (g); Joe Tarto, Mike Trafficante (b); George Marsh, Stan King (d); Justin Ring (perc). 4/27–10/29.
 Jazz Guitar Virtuoso Yazoo 1059 Lang; Frank Signorelli, Rube Bloom, Arthur Schutt (p); Lonnie Johnson, Carl Kress (g); Justin Ring (chimes). 27–29.
* The Quintessential Eddie Lang 1925–1932 Timeless CBC 1-043 As above, except add Bix Beiderbecke (c), Tommy Gott, Fuzzy Farrar, Ray Lodwig, Manny Klein, Bill Moore, Louis Armstrong, Harry Goldfield (t), Boyce Cullen, Miff Mole, Wilbur Hall, Loyd Turner (tb), Arnold Brilhart, Alfie Evans, Harold Sturr, Don Murray, Doc Ryker, Frankie Trumbauer, Andy Sannella, Tony Parenti, Happy Caldwell, Chester Hazlett, Red Mayer (reeds); Otto Landau, Matty Malneck (vn); Roy Bargy, Clarence Williams, Itzy Riskin, Joe Sullivan, Irving Brodsky (p); Cliff Edwards (uke, v); Harry Reser, Tony Colucci, Mike Pingitore (bj); Red McKenzie (comb); Dick Slevin (kz); Arthur Campbell, Min Leibrook (tba); Steve Brown, Ward Lay (b); Neil Marshall, Vic Berton, Kaiser Marshall (d); Bessie Smith, Noel Taylor, The Rhythm Boys, Bing Crosby (v). 1/25–2/32.
(*) Pioneers Of Jazz Guitar 1927–1939 Retrieval RTR 79015 Lang; Arthur Schutt, Frank Signorelli, Rube Bloom (p); Carl Kress, Dick McDonough (g); Justin Ring (perc). 4/27–8/39.
(*) Eddie Lang Classics 1357 As various discs above. 4/27–2/32.
Eddie Lang was the first guitarist to make a major impact on jazz away from the blues, and even there he took a hand by recording many duets with 'authentic' bluesman Lonnie Johnson. Lang's polished, civilized but swinging art was worked out in dance bands and as an accompanist; Crosby hired him until Eddie succumbed to complications following a tonsillectomy. He was an important member of the white New York school of the period and can be found on records by Beiderbecke, Joe Venuti and the Dorseys; but the sides made under his own name were plentiful and, for all his restraint and good taste, he was a jazzman through and through. His most characteristic playing is as rhythmically driving as it is harmonically deft and inventive.

There are inevitable overlaps on these, though provision is more generous than it was. As a cross-section, the Timeless disc sweeps the board, quite beautifully remastered by John R. T. Davies, and with a shrewd selection of material. Lang's bell-like tone is immediately identifiable on the early piece by the Mound City Blue Blowers, from 1925, and he turns up elsewhere in dance bands led by Fred Rich, Jean Goldkette, Roger Wolf Kahn and Paul Whiteman, backing Ukulele Ike and Bessie Smith, partnering Lonnie Johnson, sitting in with Armstrong and Oliver, and taking a solo turn on Rachmaninov's Opus 3 Prelude. Could any other musician of the era claim such a CV?

Eight of the Yazoo tracks are also included on the ASV set. Yazoo concentrate on Lang the soloist, including all eight of the sides he made in that context, plus two tracks with Carl Kress and three with Johnson. There isn't much jazz in 'April Kisses', but showpieces like 'Eddie's Twister' and the luxuriant duet with Johnson on 'Blue Guitars' show all of Lang's beauty of touch, harmonic shrewdness and rhythmical dexterity. A couple more spirited tracks wouldn't have come amiss here.

The ASV issue offers a wider choice of 21 pieces, including the famous session with King Oliver on cornet and the tracks by an orchestra led nominally by Lang. Sound on both issues is generally very good: the Yazoo is a little livelier but has a higher level of surface hiss.

Retrieval's edition contains all of Lang's solo and guitar/piano pieces, the two duets with Carl Kress, and a further ten tracks featuring the more modernistic Kress, either by himself or with Dick McDonough. For those who want to hear the guitar on its own, this is excellent, although it palls a little over CD length.

The new Classics disc includes a dozen guitar solos, the six titles by 'Ed Lang And His Orchestra', the duets with Kress and the two titles with King Oliver. A useful cross-section.

Don Lanphere (1928–2003)

TENOR AND SOPRANO SAXOPHONES

Out of the business for nearly three decades following drug problems, Lanphere returned to recording in 1981 after running the family music shop in Washington state. His early days were spent with the bebop crowd; his mature style was more measured and chastened.

 Stop Hep 2034 Lanphere; Jon Pugh (co); Marc Seales (p); Chuck Deardorf (b); Dean Hodges (d). 8/83, 1/86.
(*) Don Loves Midge Hep 2027 As above, except add Camille Peterson (hp). 10/84.
 Don Lanphere/Larry Coryell Hep 2048 As above, except add Marc Seales (ky); Larry Coryell (g). 4/90.
 Go ... Again Hep 2040 As above, except add Jeff Hay (tb); Jay Clayton (v). 12/95.
(*) Don Still Loves Midge Hep Lanphere; Jon Pugh (co); Jeff Hay (tb); Dave Peterson (g); Doug Miller (b); Dean Hodges (d). 6/97.
 Where Do You Start? Origin 82410 As above, except omit Hodges; add John Bishop (d). 02.
Lanphere is still an underrated improviser, somewhat in the way that J. R. Monterose's dogged originality was marginalized. All credit to Alastair Robertson of Hep for picking up on him. The earliest of these is a fine quintet session, though Pugh sits out 'Body And Soul' (as trumpeters should in the presence of the tenor saxophone) and 'Laura' is done as a saxophone/bass duet. Don's soprano work is crisp and cool in comparison to his husky sincerity on tenor and the modulation from one to the other makes Stop a well-rounded and satisfying record.

Don Loves Midge is better still, a confident but always thoughtful run through an impressive array of standards and repertory pieces. 'I Remember Clifford' has a breezy intensity and a telling Benny Golson quote in the first chorus; 'God Bless The Child' is drier and wryer than usually played; and 'My Foolish Heart' is terse and resigned. The album coda 'There's A Sweet, Sweet Spirit In The Place' is completely unexpected, but reflects a musician whose beliefs run deep.

Coryell steals the third one, emerging at the time as a formidable bop player who'd pretty much put fusion behind him, but without regret and with all of its power-plays still available. 'Spring Can Really Hang You Up The Most' is just a guitar/keyboard duet, while Don and Larry duet on Horace Silver's 'Peace', an unexpected choice but a tune that obviously has a real importance for the saxophonist. The other compositions are fairly standard fare, but there is nothing routine about the playing, which is committed and utterly professional.

Midge, as you'll have guessed, is Mrs Lanphere, and the repeat Valentine is no less sincere than the first. One of the highlights of the set is a rarity. 'Early Autumn' was on Lanphere's music stand when he took over from Stan Getz in the Woody Herman band; he hung onto it and it gets a rare outing here. There's some other fairly obscure material in the line-up but part of the appeal of Lanphere's playing at this time was his desire to explore neglected corners of the repertoire, not because he felt uneasy about testing himself on the warhorses, but because he was first to last a musician whose faith was very much a questioning one.

The final album is still restless, still looking for answers beyond the obvious. Pugh's tight, ripe cornet sound is so much a part of these sessions that one almost overlooks it. He always seems to know when to come in and when to stay silent and his reactions to Lanphere are almost telepathic on 'The Scene Is Clean', the longest and best of the cuts on what turns out to be Lanphere's curtain appearance.

Steven Lantner

PIANO

An associate of Joe Maneri, he helped set up the Boston Microtonal Society. In addition to acoustic piano, he uses a digital electronic instrument which allows variation of pitch.

 Reaching Leo Lab 062 Lantner; Mat Maneri (vn). 8/97.

(*) Voices Lowered Leo LR 317 Lantner; Joe Maneri (as, ts); Joe Morris(g). 8/00.

 Saying So Riti CD 5 Lantner; Joe Morris (b); Laurence Cook (d). 12/01.

 Blue Yonder Skycap 018 Lantner; Joe Morris (b); Luther Gray (d). 5/04.

Lantner has performed extensively with both Maneris. Mat's use of microtonality is highly sophisticated on both his conventional and his extra-stringed violins. The best sample track from which to get an impression of their collective aims is 'In The River', a slow, dirge-like theme using pitch-shifting on the keyboard and changes of string tonality. There is something of a sameness to the dozen tracks, but anyone who has listened to Ornette Coleman will have some familiarity with the language. As such, it is less radical than its admirers would suggest but is no less intriguing for that.

As Lantner says in his sleeve-note, the trio form 'suggests entering into a more complicated world' than the duo, and Voices Lowered is the fascinating result. If we've entered this world before, it probably had the sign 'Tristano' over the way in, since there's much which offers at least a misshapen echo of that doctrine. It's quiet but not monotonal music, often agitated in a contained way, and the sense of endlessly going forward, not up or down, seems to override any occasional dryness of inspiration. The Riti disc is strictly speaking a limited-edition issue, but there are plenty around and it's a fascinating set with Morris on his bass and better recorded than on Blue Yonder, five trio improvisations recorded at a gallery concert in Massachusetts which make the Tristano connection even more explicit: freely spoken, yet with a stringent sense of form, these engrossing pieces repay close study.

John LaPorta (born 1920)

CLARINET, ALTO AND TENOR SAXOPHONES

Tristano-influenced and associated with Charles Mingus and Teo Macero, he retired from playing to teach at the Manhattan School of Music.

 Themes And Variations Fantasy 24776 LaPorta; Louis Mucci (t); Sonny Russo (tb); Larry Wilcox (ts); George Barrow, Sol Schlinger (bs); Wally Cirillo (p); Wendell Marshall (b); Clem de Rosa (d). 56, 57, 58.

 The Most Minor Fresh Sound FSRCD 208 LaPorta; Jack Reilly (p); Dick Carter (b); Charles Perry (d). 58.

LaPorta's a revered teacher who briefly returned to recording in 1999; his most significant work can be found on Charles Mingus's Debut recordings and sounds like an adventurous cross between Cool School and Third Stream. The set brings together LaPorta's Conceptions LP with some later unreleased material. It offers an intriguing insight into a player whose musical education was worn rather too prominently for comfort but who was always able to come up with an effective idea, even if he isn't the most interesting soloist to listen to, on either of his main horns, clarinet or alto. As the 1958 record bears out even more strongly, he does have the classic jazz virtues, though: an understanding of the blues, a distinctive solo voice (albeit a rather pale one) and an ability to swing even such an unpromising line as 'Blues Chorale'.

Tim Lapthorn (born 1976)

PIANO

Young London-based pianist here makes an impressive debut.

(*) Natural Language Basho SRCD 9-2 Lapthorn; Tom Herbert (b); Patrick Levett (d). 1/04.

(*) Seventh Sense Basho 192 Lapthorn; Arnie Somogyi (b); Stephen Keogh (d). 11/05.

Lapthorn's beautiful debut set is a marvel. A well-thought-of accompanist, he has a command of spontaneous invention that makes him a natural trio leader. The originals are smart and insinuating: a simple groove tune such as 'Loose Connection', cleverly positioned to follow a gentle treatment of Ray Charles's 'Hard Times', is developed with impeccable logic while still sounding entirely fresh. The set-list also boasts interesting choices by Monk, Bill Frisell and Steve Swallow and the interaction with Herbert and Levett is quietly compelling. Best of all is Lapthorn's touch: he seems to find just the right dynamic for each phrase. Seventh Sense confirms it wasn't a flash in the pan. The group dynamic (perhaps that is the seventh sense) is stronger here and one senses him on the brink of a major statement.

Ellis Larkins (1923–2003)

PIANO

A child prodigy in Baltimore, he graduated from Peabody and Juilliard before turning to a jazz career, largely as an accompanist.

(*) A Smooth One Black & Blue 591232 Larkins; George Duvivier (b); J. C. Heard (d). 7/77.

Mostly, Ellis has to be sought out in other situations – with singers, and with old pal Ruby Braff. His mastery was so understated that his reputation remains far short of his abilities and there are few records for his 60 years of service. Several of the eight pieces on A Smooth One confirm his judgement that with some songs 'you just play them and get out'; but there are some bewitching moments hidden behind his professional excellence. A good Lone Hill pairing was out of stock as we went to press, so the picture's still thin.

Prince Lasha (born 1929)

FLUTE, ALTO FLUTE, ALTO AND BARITONE SAXOPHONES, CLARINET

Little-recorded Texan avant-gardist who worked with major figures but failed to make more than an idiosyncratic impact in his own right.

 Inside Story Enja ENJ 9131 2 Lasha; Hubert Eaves, Herbie Hancock (p); Ron Carter, Cecil McBee (b); Jimmy Lovelace, Roy McCurdy (d); Kenneth Nash (perc). 65, 74.
 Firebirds Contemporary OJCCD 1822-2 Lasha; Sonny Simmons (as, eng hn); Bobby Hutcherson (vib); Buster Williams (b); Charles Moffett (d). 9/67.
 The Mystery Of Prince Lasha CIMP 330 Lasha; Odean Pope (ts); Tyrone Brown (b); Craig McIver (d). 4/05.

Born William B. Lawsha in Fort Worth, he was in the same high school band as King Curtis, Ornette Coleman and Charles Moffett. He shares qualities with both saxophonists, but his closest musical cousin is surely another multi-instrumentalist, Eric Dolphy, with whom he recorded.

Primarily a flautist, Lasha has a frail, slightly thin tone on alto saxophone, explained in part by his occasional choice of a plastic instrument. His flute technique is more orthodox, but still original. The 1965 session on Inside Story offers an immediate chance to hear him switching from flute to saxophone within a few measures on the long 'Ethereal'. Interesting to hear Hancock, though he sounds ill at ease with Lasha's odd pitching and falls back on chromatic runs. The original LP is filled out with material from the 1974 Berkeley Jazz Festival, including a fine 'Search For Tomorrow'.

Firebirds was his second collaboration (after Cry!) with the like-minded Sonny Simmons, and the two lead voices engage in some intriguing exchanges on 'Psalms Of Solomon' and the title-tune. Moffett, Williams and Hutcherson are powerful in support. 'Prelude To Bird' perhaps hints at a more orthodox bebop lineage, but the real inspiration here is Ornette. The flautist drifted out of the business in the later '70s but re-emerged in 2005. The mystery is not so much why he was absent so long as why he is still not more highly regarded, other than as an associate of more famous men. The Pope trio gives him lots of space to manoeuvre as a multi-instrumentalist. It's hard music to pin down, but absorbing, with a kind of ritual calm underneath the bustle.

Steve LaSpina (born 1954)

BASS

Born in Texas but growing up in Chicago, and latterly based in Pennsylvania, he's carrying forward his father's trade.

 New Horizon /  Eclipse Steeplechase SCCD 31313 / 31343 LaSpina; Billy Drewes (ss, as, ts); Marc Copland (p); Jeff Hirshfield (d). 4/92, 4/93.
 When I'm Alone Steeplechase SCCD 31376 As above, except add Vic Juris (g). 95.
(*) The Road Ahead RAM RMCD 4526 As above, except omit Copland; add Jim McNeely (p). 12/95.
(*) Story Time Steeplechase SCCD 31396 LaSpina; Billy Drewes (ss, as, ts, cl); Vic Juris (g); Jeff Hirshfield (d). 3/96.
 When Children Smile Steeplechase SCCD 31419 As above, except add Dave Ballou (t). 10/96.

LaSpina writes most of the material, which tends towards soft-focus harmonies and elliptical melodic lines, and the basic band is well attuned to the feel: Drewes especially gets the mood right with his rather light sound and patient delivery. New Horizon and Eclipse are solidly inventive without being startling, and the originals on the latter pass dreamily by (Drewes plays alto for much of the record, contrary to the sleeve). Juris arrives for When I'm Alone and adds some piquant weight, although if there's a problem with these discs it's Copland, who's effective enough but tends to add a pretentious note. There's a noticeable upping of the ante with the arrival of McNeely on the RAM date: he's a superior player, and the trio version of 'Body And Soul' is just one instance of why this is the pick of the five discs. That said, Story Time is only just behind. With Juris handling what might have been the piano parts, the harmonic base expands further and some of LaSpina's originals are deliciously songful. There's also a rather surprising clarinet turn by Drewes on the curious 'Scott's Bop'.

When Children Smile continues the sequence and adds Ballou as a new voice in the group. Nothing wrong with it, but LaSpina's tunes here are so laid-back and uneventful that the music starts to seem tranquillizing. In this company, Coleman's 'Ramblin'' sounds almost raw, even in a relatively tame treatment.

(*) Distant Dream Steeplechase SCCD 31448 LaSpina; Billy Drewes (as, ts, cl, bcl); Fred Hersch (p); Ben Monder (g); Jeff Hirshfield (d). 98.

A very classy set, with Hersch contributing some delicious lines and fills and with some really nice interchanges between bass and guitar, often subtly in the background. 'First Light' and the title-track are both epic performances but right out of the top drawer.

 The Bounce Steeplechase SCCD 31502 LaSpina; Dave Ballou (t, flhn); Billy Drewes (ss, ts); Vic Juris (g); Jeff Hirshfield (d). 12/00.

A solid Steeplechase/LaSpina entry: material which asks something of the players, players who ask something of each other without being combative, and music which can sit agreeably in the background or provide at least some food for thought with hard listening. Ballou and Drewes are nobody's choice for an all-star front line, but without preening or fuss they go hard at this situation.

(*) Remember When Steeplechase SCCD31540 LaSpina; Dave Ballou (t); Andrew Rathbun (ss, ts); Vic Juris (g); Jeff Hirshfield (d). 02.

(*) Play Room Steeplechase SCCD 31590 LaSpina; Dave Ballou (t); Billy Drewes (as, cl, bcl); Gary Versace (p, org);
One of the most loyally supportive of labels, Steeplechase have given Steve an extended run. He repays the compliment with consistently fine and often quite adventurous records. Remembering When is one of the best of them. Ballou, Rathbun and Juris make a great line, and even if the guitarist is required to chord along in places, he's still an essential component. The palette's much richer on Play Room and LaSpina's writing is ambitious: 'Suite' comes in near a quarter of an hour, 'On The Run' and 'Do The Math' are almost as hefty. It all justifies its space though. Yet another CD – to be called Moments – was slated for release as we went to press.

Andy Laster

ALTO AND BARITONE SAXOPHONES

A well-documented player in New York's avant-garde.

 Polyogue Songlines 1507–2 Laster; Herb Robertson (t, c); Brad Shepik (g); Drew Gress (b); Tom Rainey (d). 1/95.

 Interpretations Of Lessness Songlines 1515–2 Laster; Cuong Vu (t); Erik Friedlander (clo); Kenny Wolleson (d, mar, glock, perc). 1/96.

(*) Soft Shell Knitting Factory KFW 281 Laster; Herb Robertson (t, c); Drew Gress (b); Tom Rainey (d). 5/98.
Laster's music is mostly a melodious free bop, which values clear declaration. The first and third of these discs is by his band Hydra. Polyogue is sometimes a bit cryptic, and the nine originals for all their smartness finally seem more about process than content, at least in these incarnations. The standout is the beautiful 'Chrysolite', which suggests that Laster is at his most appealing when he's looking to make his music as lyrical as possible. Interpretations Of Lessness is by a different band (called Lessness) and has more of a chamber feel. Vu makes only a modest impact, and the leader's baritone distortions are less impressive than his alto solos. Wolleson is also obliged to make more use of a tinkling arsenal of percussion and hammered instruments than his kit. Still, in the likes of 'Earth Sky Body' and 'Pale Blue' the music has much of interest.

Soft Shell slims Hydra down to four, and Laster plays alto throughout. This time the music sounds both more varied and more focused. It's a rare instance of this instrumentation owing little or nothing to the Coleman quartet, and in an attractive reading of the standard 'Here I'll Stay' (which is transformed into an original called 'Go') Laster explores his own kind of tradition. Rainey's ironic rock beat on 'South Shore Reform Experience Part II' is an amusing interlude, but in the main this is felt and powerful music-making by four accomplished performers.

Yusef Lateef (born 1921)

TENOR SAXOPHONE, OBOE, FLUTE, OTHER SAXOPHONES, COR ANGLAIS, OTHER INSTRUMENTS, VOICE

Born Bill Evans in Chattanooga, he worked with Dizzy Gillespie, Charles Mingus and Cannonball Adderley, before leading his own groups, teaching and studying philosophy. He latterly taught at Amherst College and ran his own YAL label.

 Other Sounds Original Jazz Classics OJCCD3992 Lateef: Wilbur Harden (flhn); Hugh Lawson (p); Ernie Farrow (b); Oliver Jackson (d). 10/57.
 The Last Savoy Sessions Savoy 92881 2CD As above, except add Terry Pollard (p); Bernard McKinney (euph); William Austin (b); Oliver Jackson (d). 10/57–6/59.
 Cry! – Tender Original Jazz Classics OJC 482 Lateef; Lonnie Hillyer (t); Wilbur Harden (flhn); Hugh Lawson (p); Ernie Farrow, Herman Wright (b); Frank Gant, Oliver Jackson (d). 10/59.
 Contemplation Charly 070 Lateef; Barry Harris (p); Sam Jones (b); Louis Hayes (d). 4/60.
(*) The Centaur And The Phoenix Original Jazz Classics OJC 712 Lateef; Clark Terry, Richard Williams (t); Curtis Fuller (tb); Tate Houston (bs); Josea Taylor (bsn); Barry Harris, Joe Zawinul (p); Ernie Farrow, Ben Tucker (b); Lex Humphries (d); Roger Sanders (perc). 10/60, 6/61.
(*) Lost In Sound Collectables 5792 Lateef; Vincent Pitts (t); John Hormon (p); Ray McKinney (b); George Scott, Clifford Jarvis (d). 8/61.
(*) Eastern Sounds Original Jazz Classics OJC 612 Lateef; Barry Harris (p); Ernie Farrow (b); Lex Humphries (d). 9/61.
 Into Something Original Jazz Classics OJCCD7002 Lateef; Barry Harris (p); Herman Wright (b); Elvin Jones (d). 12/61.
(*) Live At Pep's Vol. 2 Impulse! 547961-2 Lateef; Richard Williams (t); Mike Nock (p); Ernie Farrow (b); James Black (d). 6/64.
 Psychicemotus Impulse! 9884220 Lateef; Georges Arvanitas (p); Reggie Workman (b); James Black (d). 7/65.
 The Golden Flute Impulse! A-9125 Lateef; Hugh Lawson (p); Herman Wright (b); Roy Brooks Jr (d). 6/66.
 The Blue Yusef Lateef Atlantic 82270 Lateef; Blue Mitchell (t); Sonny Red (as); Buddy Lucas (hca); Hugh Lawson (p); Kenny Burrell (g); Cecil McBee, Bob Cranshaw (b); Roy Brooks (d); Selwart Clarke, James Tryon (vn); Alfred Brown (vla); Kermit Moore (clo); Sweet Inspirations (v). 4/68.
Lateef adopted a Muslim name in response to his growing and eventually life-long infatuation with the musics of the Levant and Asia. One of the few convincing oboists in jazz, he has been somewhat marginalized in reputation as a 'speciality' act. Like Roland Kirk's, Lateef's music was cartoonized when he came under Atlantic's wing, on albums that were enthusiastically promoted and received, but which rarely represented the best of his work.

The early Savoy stuff is intermittently covered. Other Sounds has lots of ethnic instruments added in, but it still has some free-blowing jazz and the compilation of later sessions major on Lateef blowing rough, burly tenor alongside two solid, hard-bop rhythm sections, together with the elegant Harden. Already, though, there are the exotic touches: 'A Night In Tunisia' gets off to a suitably authentic start with the muezzin-like wail of the argol. 'Gypsy Arab' and 'Prayer To The East' mix with 'Lover Man', and there is an 'Oboe Blues'. Rough-and-ready music, but worth reviving. Same with Contemplation, which eschews exotica and steams into territory more reminiscent of the Adderley brothers: bop, R&B, blues, with a devastating send-off in Nat's 'Sassy Ann'. Into Something's a nice blend of standards – including 'When You're Smiling' and more adventurous things. Lost In Sound reissues a generic hard-bop date from the short-lived Charlie Parker label: Lateef plays with customary vigour, but his playing companions are frankly undistinguished.

The OJC records are consistently interesting, with relatively unfussy arrangements leavened by unusual timbres and instrumental colours. The Centaur And The Phoenix isn't well-known, despite the presence of critically OK names like Terry and Fuller. The vocal 'Jungle Fantasy' is dire, but the large-group pieces are as good as anything on the earlier Cry! – Tender, and 'Summer Song' is among the most straightforwardly lyrical things in Lateef's whole output. Live At Pep's Vol. 2 stands up extremely well, substantiating Lateef's often queried jazz credentials. He plays with great spirit and an authentically bluesy drive that makes the exact choice of instrument (oboe, saxophone, shenai, flute) pretty much irrelevant. Psychicemotus follows the usual pattern of hard-blowing standards ('Why Do I Love You?') and more exotic fare, with wood flutes prominent. The other Impulse! set, The Golden Flute, is thinner. Bob Thiele's production seems to be directed towards cutting off Lateef just as he's getting going, and the tracks feel too short, aside from the closing 'The Smart Set', which at least lets the band stretch. The studio mix catches his sound nicely, though.

Like Kirk, the tenor saxophone is Lateef's natural horn, but in his best period he made jazz whatever he was playing. In approach, he is somewhat reminiscent of the pre-bop aspect of Sun Ra's long-time associate John Gilmore, working in a strong, extended swing idiom rather than with the more complex figurations of bebop. Just occasionally this spilled over into something schmaltzier. The Eastern Sounds session also included film music from The Robe and Spartacus, on flute and oboe respectively, that borders on kitsch, but the tenor-led 'Snafu' has a surging energy that leaves a very good band panting.

There are good things on Blue, with an orchestra fronted by Lateef, Mitchell and Lucas and anchored on two basses (upright and electric) and the power-drumming of Brooks. However, the vocal tracks and the string arrangements on 'Like It Is' are pretty shallow, or only rather shallowly pretty in a Summer Of Love-ish way, and the album as a whole lacks focus. Lateef's vocal contributions on some of the earlier records merely anticipate the grosser insult of 'Hey, Jude' on the (deleted) The Gentle Giant. In turning Lateef into a marketable crossover performer, Atlantic took most of the bite out of his playing.

(*) The African-American Epic Suite ACT 9214 Lateef; Charles Moore (flhn, dumbek, shofar, shell); Ralph Jones (ss, ts, bcl, f); Frederico Ramos (g, gimbri); Adam Rudolph (perc); Cologne Radio Orchestra. 10 & 11/93.

In the 1990s, Lateef formed his own YAL label and it has released a vast number of discs, ranging from two-tenor meetings with Archie Shepp and Von Freeman to goofy New Age suites of the sort which the leader has never been quite able to resist. We have listed these in previous editions, but they have never been easy to find, and we advise readers to trawl the internet if they want to avail themselves of any of them. This latter-day set is more readily accessible, but we'd question the desirability of that. Scored for quintet and orchestra, it's a well-meaning shambles and the classical players sound no better than confused about what's going on.

Also, in brief:

 Live In London Harkit 8074. 12/65.
This Ronnie Scott appearance finds him in fine shape, blowing the blues on 'Number Seven' and delivering an oboe feature on 'Trouble In Mind'.

 Yusef Lateef's Detroit Atlantic Jazz Masters 8122-75446-2. 6/67–2/69.
Aimless blathering over a funk rhythm section. Joel Dorn is the guilty man.

(*) The Diverse Yusef Lateef / Suite 16 Rhino Atlantic R2 71552. 5/69–4/70.
A strange blend of funk, a lot of flute, some pseudo-gospel singing and oddball string charts; Suite 16 is an extended concerto that veers wildly from passionate improvising to mere pretentiousness.

 Hush 'N' Thunder Collectables COL-CD-6353. 73.
A typically motley collection: boogaloo, mysterious rumblings on the flute feature, wordless howls and gospel hollerings elsewhere – a period piece.

() Autophysiopsychic CTI 5127952. 10/77.
Dumb; only Art Farmer's stoic flugelhorn lends this a scrap of dignity.

(*) Yusef Lateef's Little Symphony Collectables COL 6186. 6/87.
Pretentious and drab.

... plus other Collectables reissues and many releases, jazz and non-jazz, on the YAL label.

Mark Latimer

PIANO

Latimer is a British pianist who divides his time between classical repertory and jazz, although the former has occupied more of his recording time.

 Take #1 Spotlite SPJ CD 569 Latimer; Andy Panayi (ts, f); Mick Hanson (g); Mick Hutton, Andy Cleyndert (b); Trevor Tomkins, Hal Fisher (d). 6/98.
(*) Unhinged Take #2 Spotlite SPJ CD 573 Latimer; Andy Panayi (cl, ts, bcl, f); John Etheridge (g); Mario Castronari (b); Asaf Sirkis (d). 1/02.

Latimer's classical background doesn't, for once, impinge noticeably on his jazz playing. He has an agreeably cool and fluent way with his material. His only original on the first record is 'Pick 'N' Lix', a sort of bebop conundrum in 37 seconds, and he's chosen some rarely frequented jazz material, along with a few standards. The music comes from two different trios, with Hanson added for two tunes and Panayi for three more. Latimer is good behind soloists (listen to his cute fills behind Hanson on 'Gone With The Wind') and his own improvising has a smartness to it which is just this side of being overly clever. There's a vague sense of flippancy, as if Latimer were really too good for the whole situation, and the music might have made use of more bite in the rhythm sections.

The follow-up pursues similar ground, although there are more originals, and a somewhat exasperating sense that Latimer is clubbing listeners over the head with his musical acumen. Settings of Domenico Cimarosa and Gustav Mahler (the latter particularly irritating) tend to get in the way of the more interesting writing. Castronari's 'Peace Piece' gets an attractive treatment via Panayi's flute, but 'Giant Steps' is given an absurd deconstruction. Some of this would be better left in the rehearsal room.

Ingrid Laubrock (born 1970)

SOPRANO, ALTO AND TENOR SAXOPHONES

Grew up in Germany and came to London in 1989, where she studied with Jean Toussaint.

 Who Is It? Candid CCD 79745 Laubrock; Kim Burton (p, acc); Ife Tolentino (g); Davide Mantovani (b); Helder Pack (d, perc); Chris Wells (perc). 7/97.

 Some Times Candid CCD 79744 Similar to above, except add Byron Wallen (t); Julian Siegel (ts); Nikki Iles, Karim Merchant (p). 98.

 Forensic F-IRE CD04 Laubrock; Julian Siegel (sax); Karim Merchant (p); Ben Davis (clo); Tom Bartley (b); Tom Skinner (d). 04.

(*) Let's Call This ... Babel 2661 Laubrock; Liam Noble (p).

Laubrock's saxophone style is distinctive on all three horns and her grasp of Brazilian jazz serious and sympathetic. The band is not well-known but is ideally suited to Laubrock's delivery, which is smart, evocative and, on the debut's 'Piracuama' and 'Brasitaleiro', free of pastiche.

The second album reinforces what some thought was a strong Tristano influence on Laubrock's alto-playing. 'Lennie's Pennies' seems to clinch it, but there are other factors at play as well: Bird's Latin tinge, Bunnett's liberating example and teacher Jean Toussaint's eclecticism. There's an ease and confidence about Forensic that suggests the promise is about to be delivered; a strong album with a rare coherence and sense of purpose.

The duos with Noble are inevitably more abstract, but these are formidable sessions, abetted by Seb Rochford's occasional sonic 'treatments'. 'We See' and 'Duke Ellington's Sound Of Love' are pleasantly rather than intrusively unorthodox and the originals manage to avoid being merely pretty-pretty. A terrific record in a potentially dull genre.

Christof Lauer (born 1953)

TENOR SAXOPHONE

Born in Melsungen, Germany, he studied piano and took up sax at 18, now playing in a tough post-Coltrane style.

(*) Fragile Network ACT 9266-2 Lauer; Michel Godard (tba, serpent); Marc Ducret (g); Anthony Cox (b); Gene Jackson (d). 9/98.

(*) Blues In Mind ACT 9446 Lauer; Michel Godard (tba, serpent); Gary Husband (d, p). 06.

In addition to Coltrane, Lauer has assimilated Stan Getz's smooth legato and Albert Ayler's all-out fury. Engineer Walter Quintus steered an earlier CMP disc, which probably still stands as the saxophonist's best, but is on hand again on Fragile Network to create a brooding but brightly registered canvas of sound for Lauer and tubist Godard, who gets a nicely developed solo part. His serpent feature on 'Ferma L'Ali' is breathtaking, and his virtuosity on tuba transforms 'Vernasio'. Guitarist Ducret is a little overcooked, but on 'Human Voice' he shows a delicate touch. Lauer is much more obviously part of a group rather than a horn-player-plus-rhythm. That's true on Blues In Mind as well, a very stripped-down situation that depends on great writing – Husband's 'First Bite', the leader's 'Angels Over City Square', 'The Kite' and 'At Least' – and phenomenal playing from all three. The idiom moves between Coltrane-tinged harmonic stuff to gritty funk, hard to pull off with these forces, but confidently done.

Also, in brief:

() Shadows In The Rain ACT 94512. 01.

A murky and disappointingly bland setting for Lauer, with string quartet and Sidsel Endresen (v).

() Heaven ACT 9420. 03.

Another over-produced date, with Norwegian Brass and others.

Cy Laurie (1926–2002)

CLARINET

A major figure on the London trad scene of the '50s, Laurie won admiration among hardcore revivalists since he refused to go mainstream. In 1960 he left to live in India for a decade.

(*) Blows Blue Hot Lake LACD122 Laurie; Al Fairweather, Alan Elsdon (t); John Picard, John R. T. Davies (tb); Alan Thomas, Dick Hughes (p); Johnny Potter, Brian Munday (bj); Dave Wood, Stan Leader (b); Ron McKay (d, wbd). 7/54–1/55.

 Chattanooga Stomp Lake LACD61 Laurie; Alan Elsdon, Sonny Morris, Ken Sims (t); Graham Stewart, Terry Pitts (tb); Tedd Ramm, Ian Armit, Anne Varley (p); Brian Munday, Diz Disley (bj); Stan Leader (b); Peter Mawford (d); Viv Carter (d, wbd). 6/55–5/57.

 A Jazz Club Session Lake LACD 199 Laurie; Dennis Field (t, v); Terry Pitts (tb); Hugh Rainey (bj); Pete Corrigan (b); Phil Franklin (d). 12/68.

() Jazz From The Roots Lake LACD 156 Laurie; Dennis Field, (c); Terry Pitts (tb); Allan Bradley (p); Nevil Skrimshire (g); Hugh Rainey (bj); Peter Corrigan, John Sirett (b); Colin Bowden, Steve Nice (d). 3/89–5/92.

Laurie is the forgotten man of British trad clarinet, but he was as good as any of his peers. His style walked an awkward line between imitation and individuality: very much in thrall to Johnny Dodds, he led a band that, on the Chattanooga Stomp tracks, could play with surprising heat. Dodds favourites like 'Goober Dance' and 'Perdido Street Blues' emerge unscathed, but rather more interesting is the way they recompose 'Twelfth Street Rag', a variation on the Armstrong Hot Five version. 'St Phillips Street Breakdown' has nothing of George Lewis in it, and two amusing bits of Mozart (including 'Minuet Wobble'!) are entertaining features for the leader. Morris is the pick of the three trumpeters.

The earlier sessions on Blows Blue Hot have now also been reissued in another conscientious Lake release. The first eight tracks comprise the original Esquire 10-inch of the same title, with the balance made up of one 78 and three EP sessions. We slightly prefer these intense and full-blooded tracks, with the excellent Fairweather out front and Picard's blasting trombone just about manageable.

A Jazz Club Session is one of a trove of live tapes recorded at The Dancing Slipper in the '60s by soundman Allan Gilmour. It catches the Laurie band wayward at first, but eventually getting up a ferocious head of steam and some extravagant solos.

The later sessions are a good simulation. There seems little point in a band such as this attempting 'West End Blues' or 'Potato Head Blues', and they do better by some of the less-familiar items from the Oliver–Armstrong axis.

Matt Lavelle

TRUMPET, FLUGELHORN, BASS CLARINET

A raw-voiced but effective improviser, reminiscent at times of a more abrasive Paul Smoker, but very much his own man.

 Handling The Moment CIMP 266 Lavelle; Ras Moshe (ts); François Grillot (b); Lou Grassi (d). 3/02.

 Spiritual Power Silkheart SHCD 156 Lavelle; Hilliard Greene (b); Michael T. A. Thompson (d).

It's not often that a label boss admits that a session might have been, let's just say, a touch shambolic, but CIMP's refreshingly clear-sighted Bob Rusch was aware that recording Lavelle was always going to be like trying to saddle a bronco. The resulting disc is packed with energy and, once one gets used to the delivery, full of thoughtful and effective ideas, but one could certainly not describe it as polished. Moshe is the main composer and his opening pair, 'Amadou's Passage' and 'The Kitchen', the two longest pieces on the set, are far and away the best. Some of the shorter tracks that follow seem like ideas that don't really go anywhere, though 'Roy Campbell', tribute to a kindred spirit on trumpet, has an obvious sincerity as well as a measure of wry humour.

Lavelle plays mostly flugelhorn and bass clarinet on the Silkheart, reserving his trumpet for 'Si Se Puede (Yes, We Can)'. His tone on the bigger horn is sharper than is usual for the instrument and he gets some intriguing rasps and smears out of it. He finds lots of microtones, too, and unlike most players who go down that route follows a discernible logic in their deployment. It takes a moment to see the continuity between the brass and reed work, but concentrate on his bass clarinet solo on 'End Times' and it all jumps into focus.

One of the bright new spirits on the New York scene, Lavelle seems set to make a significant impact, and will do so on his own terms.

Andy LaVerne (born 1947)

KEYBOARDS

A pianist born in New York, LaVerne studied at Berklee for only weeks before turning professional and joining Woody Herman in 1973 and Stan Getz in 1977, the latter job lasting almost four years. He has since recorded extensively as a leader.

 Standard Eyes Steeplechase SCCD 31280 LaVerne; Steve LaSpina (b); Anton Fig (d). 10/90.

 Nosmo King Steeplechase SCCD 31301 LaVerne; John Abercrombie (g). 12/91.

(*) Severe Clear Steeplechase SCCD 31273 LaVerne; Tim Hagans (t); Rick Margitza (ts); Steve LaSpina (b); Anton Fig (d). 3/90.

 Pianissimo Steeplechase SCCD 31512 LaVerne; Rich Perry (ts); Jay Anderson (b); Matt Wilson (d). 12/00.

 All Ways Steeplechase SCCD 31569 LaVerne; Gary Versace (org); Billy Drummond (d). 3/04.

 Intelligent Design Steeplechase SCCD 31618 LaVerne; Gary Versace (org); Danny Gottlieb (d). 06.

LaVerne has appeared on more than 50 sessions for Steeplechase, almost a score of them under his own name. These are the ones we consider superior; others have been reviewed and noted in previous editions. Andy's technique and writing skill are beyond argument, and he is a lovely accompanist. The problem is finding any character at the heart of it all. Rhythmically he can be a little four-square, and he plays so many notes that his solos can get hung up on a rush to reharmonize. Standard Eyes is a strong if conventional programme of standard interpretations. LaVerne and Abercrombie work well together, and Nosmo King is sensibly varied in pace; but several of the pieces meander past their natural climax and LaVerne's heavy voicings make one wish for a lighter touch. The main highlight is the rarefied treatment of 'I Loves You, Porgy'. It's a great band for sure on Severe Clear, and this time LaVerne brought some of his best writing to the date, eight provocative originals that the musicians swarm all over. Fig's powerhouse display on 'No Guts, No Glory' or the flowing melodies of 'Plasma Pool' catch the ear, and Margitza and Hagans play up to their reputations. On Pianissimo, the programme is all contemplative balladry, which Perry is good at, even if a whole disc of it leaves the listener dry: LaVerne's customary equanimity makes it difficult to feel that the music has much to say, although there is the odd surprise – like a slow rock beat for 'Nineteen'.

All Ways and Intelligent Design represent an unusual partnership. They seem to have got the sound better organized on the second date, with less mud at the bottom end. There's some spirited jousting on both and LaVerne's writing is as solid as ever.

Our last edition noted a further dozen LaVerne albums on Steeplechase. All are still apparently available, but there isn't much to say about them. Devoted fans can track them down. Everyone else can make a selection from one of the above.

John Law

PIANO

The gifted Englishman straddles modern/free jazz and classical procedures.

* Exploded On Impact Slam CD 204 Law; Alan Wilkinson (as, bs); Roberto Bellatalla (b); Mark Sanders (d). 2 & 7/92.

 Abacus hatOLOGY567 Law; Jon Lloyd (ss, as); Tim Wells (b); Gerry Hemingway (d). 5/00.

(*) Out Of The Darkness Slam CD 264 Law; Andy Sheppard (ss, ts); Chris Laurence (b); Paul Clarvis (d, perc); Cornucopia Ensemble. 10/04.

 The Art Of Sound 33 Records 33JAZZ 155 Law; Sam Burgess (b); Asaf Sirkiss (d). 06.

Law is an improviser whose background in and understanding of classical piano language alternately fuels and haunts him. His earlier discs on FMR are worth seeking out but are difficult to find now. On the first Slam, the writing breathes intelligence and is distinguished by a firm architecture seldom encountered in free bop of this type. 'A Pissed-Off Tree' points in the direction of a certain 'felonious monk'. Law develops relatively small harmonic episodes, delivering climaxes that are as logical as they are explosive. The hatOLOGY set has mixed rewards. If only it weren't delivered so humourlessly, Law's 'Partita For Piano, Saxophone, Bass And Drums' would have the bearings of a triumphant fusion of jazz dialect with baroque form. There's much talk of Bach in the sleeve-notes, but not much evidence in the delivery, which feels curiously desiccated and 'proper', as if the players were afraid to step outside the lines of something which seems completely preordained and in its place. That said, much of the playing musters a grave beauty, and Law's modelling has its own merits, even if its joints feel unwontedly stiff. The live performance with the Cornucopia Ensemble and featured jazz soloists has an intriguing grandeur, though there are moments when one wonders whether the classical apparatus is either successful or strictly necessary. The 33 title is maddeningly pretentious and some of the music – 'The Close Of A Long Day' – seems to start and finish in Satie territory, but this is a good group and at his best Law still conjures up a rich intellectual excitement that's rare on the present scene.

Claude Lawrence

ALTO SAXOPHONE

A sometime sideman with William Hooker, Lawrence has a long association with Morris and Charles.

 Presenting CIMP 147 Lawrence; Wilber Morris (b); Dennis Charles (d). 4/97.

Lawrence plays with the kind of wounded lyricism that used to belong to Jimmy Lyons; he nags at certain phrases and makes whole pieces out of them. Some of this feels like little more than a man running up and down the horn, but the music is redeemed by the wonderful team of Morris and Charles, who make even simple free rhythms fascinating. Although Lawrence apparently played with them many times in the '80s, this CIMP disc is his first as a leader. It's not unworthy.

Hubert Laws (born 1939)

FLUTE

A ubiquitous presence in '70s fusion, the Texan, an original member of the Jazz Crusaders, had considerable success, with his clear, classically trained sound.

 The Laws Of Jazz Rhino 71636 Laws; Jimmy Owens (t); Garnett Brown, Tom McIntosh (tb); Benny Powell (tb, btb); Chick Corea, Rodgers Grant (p); Richard Davis, Israel Cachao Lopez, Chris White (b); Jimmy Cobb, Ray Lucas, Bobby Thomas (d); Bill Fitch, Carmelo Garcia, Raymond Orchart, Victor Pantoja (perc). 4/64–2/66.

Like Herbie Mann, Laws began his career as a pretty straight jazz player. He sounds very crisp and dynamic here on both flute and piccolo, making a surprisingly convincing solo voice of the latter instrument. His articulation is exact but the phrases still swing and there are enough blue notes and syncopated measures to justify the jazz standard waved in the title. Almost all the material is original and 'Baila Cinderella' is an idea that resurfaces later in the flautist's career. The Latin tinge is heightened by the inclusion of Corea, but it's a pity that none of the pianist's compositions are included. Anyone who thinks of Laws as a fusion colourist should sample this reissue of his Atlantic debut, packaged with his sophomore effort Flute Bylaws, which was a more ambitious but ultimately less engaging disc.

(*) In The Beginning Columbia 65127 Laws; Ronnie Laws (ts); Clare Fischer, Bob James (p, ky); Rodgers Grant (p); Richard Tee (org); Gene Bertoncini (g); Ron Carter (b); Steve Gadd (d); Airto Moreira (perc); Dave Friedman (perc, vib); string ensemble. 74.

Hubert's best album and a good, expansive representation of his flute-playing. There's also the plus of some very good spots by brother Ronnie, who shines and shows an unsuspected Coltrane influence on a couple of tracks, notably Trane's own 'Moment's Notice'. By the time he began to record for Creed Taylor's CTI label (from which this is a reissue), Hubert had softened his tone somewhat, but his harmonic awareness and clarity of diction are impressive here on a very mixed programme that includes an interpretation of a Satie 'Gymnopédie', the traditional 'Come Ye Disconsolate' and Sonny Rollins's 'Airegin', which falters a little on a rather too rigid tempo but is a creditable performance none the less. The string arrangements are impeccable and in no way intrusive.

Also, in brief:

 Afro-Classic / (*) The Rite Of Spring Epic/Legacy 651827. 6/71.

A terrible idea which nearly worked – twice: Mozart, Bach and James Taylor (on the first disc); then Bach (again), Stravinsky, Fauré and Debussy's Syrinx, where the flute's at least idiomatic, though not played this way.

(*) Baila Cinderella Scepterstein 1238. 02.

The '80s and '90s were fairly lean. This Latin set has an irritating narration and a programmatic feel. Some flashes of the old precision.

 Moondance Savoy Jazz 17269. 7–11/03.

Fashion's gone full circle and this sort of thing is hip again. It's OK, because it's Hubert, but you'd have to be a fan already.

Ronnie Laws (born 1950)

TENOR AND SOPRANO SAXOPHONES, FLUTE, VOCALS

Younger brother of Hubert, he's spent much of his career away from jazz proper, playing with the likes of Earth, Wind and Fire. Even so, he does have the ability to surprise and delight on occasion.

 Pressure Sensitive Blue Note Laws; Joe Sample (ky, g); Mike Kavanaugh, Jerry Peters (ky); Ronald Bautista, John Rowin (g); Wilton Felder (b); Steve Guittierrez, Mike Willars (d); Joe Clayton (perc). 3–4/75.

(*) Fever Blue Note 89541 Laws; Michael Hepburn, Bobby Lyle (ky); Marlon the Magician (g); Wilton Felder, Clint Mosley (b); Bruce Carter, Steve Guittierrez (d); strings, backing vocals. 1–3/76.

Ronnie has the right kind of saxophone voice for a certain strain of soul-jazz and his mid-'70s Blue Notes attracted some notice, even if that label was living largely off its past reputation. These are typical of the period – smoothed-out funk with a heavy production gloss and little in the way of imaginative improvisation. Listeners will be reminded of Grover Washington Jr on occasion, but none of these have Grover's soaring lyricism and sheer class. However, every now and then, Ronnie turns in a string of phrases, sometimes a whole chorus as on Fever's terse closer 'From Ronnie With Love', that suggests he might have cut it in more challenging contexts.

 Tribute To The Legendary Eddie Harris Blue Note 55330 Laws; Oscar Brashear, Michael Stewart (t); Gary Bias (bs); Patrice Rushen (p); Craig Cooper (g); Vernell Brown (g, p); Larry Antonino, Mike Elizondo (b); Bubba Bryant, Jeffrey Suttles (d); Munyungo Jackson (perc); Andrea Coleman (v). 10–11/96.

An unexpected attempt to play pretty much straight jazz, albeit of the funky, soulful sort associated with the cheerfully eccentric

Harris who, for all his shortcomings, had an armoury of unusual instrumental devices at his disposal. The problem with this 'tribute' is that it is neither particularly funky nor filled with soul and the eight Harris themes (including the de rigueur 'Freedom Jazz Dance') are played with more efficiency than passion or humour. Some good players in the line-up, though, and Oscar Brashear in particular has some respectable moments. So not a complete write-off.

Some of the Harris material also appears in live form on a Scepterstein concert set which has had some circulation. There are other Laws sets around and there is a best-of the Blue Note sessions which might be worth tracking down. Sadly, though, Ronnie remains an underachiever whose commitment to jazz seems intermittent at best.

Chad Lawson

PIANO

Resourceful and expressive contemporary swinger.

 Dear Dorothy: The Oz Sessions / (*) Summit 330 / 402 Lawson; Zack Page (b); Alfred Sergel (d). 8/02; 8/04.

The Wizard Of Oz has been mined somewhat for jazz performance, but never to this extent. Lawson wisely puts in 'Over The Rainbow' first – no reaching for a false climax on this record – but then moves into less-familiar fare in this context. 'Ding, Dong, The Witch Is Dead' sometimes attracts jazz players, but 'Munchkinland' and 'If I Only Had A Brain' have yet to appear on a Keith Jarrett programme. It's delightfully done and Sergel sets some intriguing tempos for things like 'The Merry Old Land Of Oz'. The title-track and 'Are We There Yet?' are originals, nicely integrated with the classics. Inevitably, the other record doesn't quite have the charm and freshness, but it's formidably good all the same and the Sting and Beatles tunes don't in any way jar with the standards and new themes.

Hugh Lawson (1935–97)

PIANO

Originally inspired by Bud Powell, the Detroiter was an underrated player in his day.

 Colour Soul Note 121052 Lawson; Calvin Hill (b); Louis Hayes (d). 1/83.

An earlier Storyville CD, Prime Time, might still be around, though the most recent reissue was in Japan. Its questionable status leaves Lawson looking more marginal than ever. Colour's a good representation, though, opening on an arresting version of Mussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition and including some striking hard-bop originals, including the far from generic '23rd Street Blues'. It's a tight unit, with Hayes in very fine form throughout. Shame there isn't more of this quality around.

Yank Lawson (1911–95)

TRUMPET

Born John Rhea Lawson in Missouri, he joined Ben Pollack's band in 1933, then spent a period (interrupted by an argument) with Bob Crosby. In the '50s and '60s he often worked with Bob Haggart, and they formed the World's Greatest Jazz Band together in 1968.

 Something Old, Something New, Something Borrowed, Something Blue Audiophile APCD-240 Lawson; George Masso (tb); Johnny Mince (cl); Lou Stein (p); Bucky Pizzarelli (g); Bob Haggart (b); Nick Fatool (d). 3/88.

 Jazz At Its Best Jazzology JCD-183 Lawson; George Masso (tb); Kenny Davern (cl); Al Klink (ts); John Bunch (p); Bucky Pizzarelli (g); Bob Haggart (b); Jake Hanna (d). 2/89.

(*) Singin' The Blues Jazzology JCD-193 As above, except omit Davern, Klink; add Joe Muranyi (cl, ss); Barbara Lea (v). 3/90.

 With A Southern Accent Jazzology JCD-203 As above, except omit Muranyi, Lea; add Kenny Davern (cl). 3/91.

Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart played together for almost 60 years and the records for Audiophile and Jazzology maintained a formidable standard: Yank's tough, growling solos have a bite and pungency which he retained, even into his 80s, and Haggart's steady propulsion never faltered at all. This is a splendid group of discs and only the relatively tame repertoire on the latter three keep them out of the top bracket: the mostly recent material on the first disc is so fresh and is played so enjoyably that one wishes the group had stuck to originals over warhorses. A lovely 'Blues For Louise', a Spanish-sounding 'Bumps', played by a trio of Lawson, Stein and Fatool, and a swaggering 'Come Back, Sweet Papa' are only three highlights from a very fine set. The next three all rely for the most part on Dixieland and traditional staples, and though all are played with gusto and panache, there's a trace of weariness here and there in the material. Jazz At Its Best despatches its tunes capably, with extended explorations of 'Willow Weep For Me' and 'Mandy Make Up Your Mind', as well as a memorial to Maxine Sullivan, 'Lonesome Yank'. Singin' The Blues finds Yank in tremendous form on the title-song, on a slow, sturdy 'Tin Roof Blues' and a fine 'Blue, Turning Grey Over You'. With A Southern Accent peaks on an intensely felt 'Creole Love Call'. This and Jazz At Its Best are somewhat pointlessly padded out with a couple of alternative takes.

Daunik Lazro (born 1945)

ALTO AND BARITONE SAXOPHONES

A free improviser with a citrus-sharp tone. His career launched in the Sahib Sarbeb group but has diversified since then.

 Outlaws In Jazz Bleu Regard 12140 Lazro; Jac Berrocal (t); Didier Levallet (b); Denis Charles (d). 11/93.

(*) Hauts Plateaux Potlatch P 498 Lazro; Carlos Zingaro (vn, elec). 2/95.

(*) Dourou Bleu Regard CT 1954 Lazro; Joe McPhee (pkt-t, ss, ts); Didier Levallet, Paul Rogers (b); Christian Rollet (d). 11/96.

 Zong Book Emouvance 1013 Lazro (as, bs solo). 1/97–11/99.

 A.H.O. & His Orchestra Bleu Regard 73553 Lazro; Jean Bolcato (b); Christian Rollet (d). 4/97.

Lazro can't prevent himself from playing songful, temperate lines, even in the midst of an otherwise wild collective passage or a temptingly open canvas. He often shows a Lacy-like restraint on the alto (he plays baritone too, but it's clearly his secondary voice). Outlaws finds him in the anarchic company of Berrocal, who plays Cherry to his Ornette on the opening '3 Wishes', with the trumpeter's own 'East River' medleyed with the Coleman theme. Tyler's 'The Legend Of The Lawman' is another strong idea, which seems to leap genres from folk to free, while offering a form of Charles Ives classicism in between. A terrific record. The duets with Zingaro were recorded at a Marseilles concert and feature some interplay which has as much Gallic charm as ferocity. Zingaro dusts some of the sound with a ripple of electronics; but what you mostly hear is the melodious ache of the alto against the gymnastic tarantella of the violin.

Dourou is a good deal darker, with the yin and yang of Levallet and Rogers underscoring McPhee's characteristically tough tenor. But this is full of colour and energy. Lazro's 'Africa Lab', which derives in part from some traditional melody-lines, is a long piece that brilliantly shows off the individual and collective strengths of the band, the music changing from solo to duo to trio and quintet passages as it evolves through a full 20 minutes in which nothing feels overcharged or underpowered. The Levallet–Rogers combo proves to be the most inspired ingredient to this playing, from their delicious arco groaning under 'Catty' to the double-solo on 'Candide'. Lazro should take credit for a singular and original group record.

Lazro plays Ayler on the solo record – at least, for 'In Heart Only', which comes out as a nicely judged mix of melancholy homage and intense interpretation. The baritone work is for once rather more interesting than the alto. Some of the improvising feels a little dry, and maybe Lazro is simply better in group situations.

He's certainly in cracking form on the 'orchestra' record. Bolcato sets things off with a rumbling funk ostinato on 'The Hornet', but the highlight is a superb reading of Steve Lacy's 'Kitty Malone', with some adventurous reworking of the harmonics. There's a tune by Charles Tyler, 'The Outlaws', which comes a close second. Daunik is in great voice throughout, still adventurous but with a scholarly elegance to his playing.

Nguyên Lê (born 1959)

GUITAR, DANH TRANH, GUITAR-SYNTHESIZER

Vietnamese guitarist seeking a fusion of his musical roots with a more worldly jazz-rock synthesis.

 Million Waves ACT 9221 Lê; Dieter Ilg (b, v); Danny Gottlieb (d, perc). 12/94.

Lê favours soft, clean-picked lines and delicately arpeggiated chords, often using a nylon-strung electric guitar to get a rich 'acoustic' sound. The synths are reserved for delicate background traceries or gently insistent ostinati.

After a couple of early albums Million Waves was a cautious step forward. It isn't quite a conventional jazz trio, but the rudiments are definitely there and the long, spontaneously improvised 'Trilogy' opens up sufficient files for a decade's worth of experimentation. The high gloss that producer Walter Quintus brings occasionally diverts attention away from less than stirring material. 'Butterflies And Zebras' is a short gloss on Jimi Hendrix's 'Little Wing', which follows it without adding much to the original. Surprisingly, Lê plays out on James Brown's 'I Feel Good'.

 Tales From Viêt-Nam ACT 9225-2 Lê; Paolo Fresu (t, flhn); Simon Cato Spang-Hanssen (sax, f); François Verly (p, ky, mar, perc); Michel Benita (b); Hao Nhien (danh tranh, dan bau, sao, perc); Thai An (dan nguyet); Joël Allouche, Steve Argüelles (d); Trilok Gurtu (d, perc); Huong Thanh (v). 10–11/95.

(*) Three Trios ACT 9245-2 Lê; Renaud Garcia-Fons, Dieter Ilg, Marc Johnson (b); Peter Erskine, Danny Gottlieb (d); Mino Cinelu (d, perc). 11/96.

Like Anouar Brahem and Rabih Abou-Khalil, Lê has already gone some considerable way towards broadening the constituency of 'world jazz'.

Tales From Viêt-Nam was the album that allowed Lê to break through to a wider audience. Where its predecessor's attempt to unite white and black Africa had a certain fresh logic, Tales is more like fusion food. Relying almost entirely on traditional material, it struggles in the dead zone between 'authenticity' and genuine adventure. Argüelles and Allouche share percussion responsibilities, and it's the Englishman who shows the more penetrating insight into the source material, playing brilliantly on a trio of wistful narratives. The drummers alternate on the two-part 'Mangustao', the name of a strange, dual-natured fruit whose rugged exterior and delicate flesh seem to hold a symbolic importance for Lê. Trilok Gurtu adds chipper cameo percussion to 'Hen Ho' and 'Ting Ning'.

By contrast, Three Trios is coherent, expressively focused and brimming with extraordinary playing. The best of the three line-ups is, predictably, the reunion with Johnson and Erskine from 1989's Miracles. It is also the most straightforwardly jazz-based. Lê characterizes the groups according to the titles of the first three tunes: 'Silk', 'Silver', 'Sand' – delicate but strong threads bind him to Marc and Peter; there is a shiny metallic edge to the group with Dieter Ilg and Danny Gottlieb; and a shifting, rhythmically looser quality to the performances with Garcia-Fons and Cinelu.

Some familiar themes are aired. 'Idoma' refers to an African tribe who wear white masks with slanting eyes, which strongly suggests Asian origin; the melody sounds Oriental but is actually a pygmy song. 'Woof' for Dieter and Danny and 'Foow' for Renaud and Mino are the same theme, a quick way of unpicking the differences in approach. The closing 'Straight, No Chaser', played à l'argent, is a complete surprise and a provocative close.

 Bakida ACT 9275-2 Lê; Paolo Fresu (t); Chris Potter (ts); Kudsi Erguner (f); Jon Balke (p); Renaud Garcia-Fons, Carles Benavent (b); Ilya Amar (mar); Tino di Geraldo (d, perc); Karim Ziad (perc). 5–10/99.

Lê spreads his net ever wider with a set of tunes that draw on an eclectic range of European and Asian influences. The basic trio instrumentation – Lê, Garcia-Fons and di Geraldo – is augmented by a range of effective guest stars, though Chris Potter seems a little out of place in this company. Fresu is once again a star turn, combining folksy themes with an element of welcome abstraction, but it is Lê's increasingly distinctive sound and strong compositional sense which dominate the album, all the way from the opening 'Dding Dek' through unexpectedly Hispanic ideas like 'Noche Y Luz' to the beautiful closing 'Romanichel'.

 Homescape ACT 9444-2 Lê; Paolo Fresu (t, flhn, elec); Dhafar Youssef (oud, elec, v). 1/04–12/05.

A collection of duets recorded at Lê's Paris studio over a two-year period. Given that provenance, it doesn't feel entirely coherent as an album, but the quality of writing and playing is high and the electronics are not so prominent as to glaze the whole thing over with an ambient reduction. 'Mangustao' is wonderful and elsewhere Fresu's clear, pealing trumpet tone, with its vocalized cast, is the perfect foil for the leader's amplified but clear sound. The guitar/oud confrontations work less well but Youssef is a formidable technician and well up to the demands of the music.

Also, in brief:

 Maghreb And Friends ACT 9261-2. 11/97–3/98.
An interesting attempt at synthesizing different traditions, probably too many and too different to pull off with absolute conviction: 'Funk Raï' is neither raï nor funk, nor jazz.

(*) Purple: Celebrating Jimi Hendrix ACT 9410-2. 5/02.
All guitarists sooner or later turn to Hendrix. It's not the most obvious spur to Lê's talents and the inclusion of spoken and sung vocals sounds a little like a failure of nerve. Terri Lyne Carrington co-leads.

 Walking On The Tiger's Tail ACT 9432. 10 & 11/04.
Oregon's Paul McCandless (ob) is a tougher soloist than his instrument might suggest and a great foil here to Lê.

The Leaders

GROUP

Conceived as a starry touring group, this turned into a regular unit for several years.

() Out Here Like This / () Unforeseen Blessings Black Saint 120119 / 120129 Lester Bowie (t); Arthur Blythe (as); Chico Freeman (ts, bcl); Kirk Lightsey (p); Cecil McBee (b); Famoudou Don Moye (d). 6/86; 12/88.
The records were an afterthought to help promote subsequent tours and were never as impressive as the stage show. Out Here is a varied sampling of contemporary styles. There's a good balance of sound between the front-row voices and a more prominent role for McBee. Bowie's theatrical presentation – mid-way between Art Ensemble and Brass Fantasy – is also a vivid jazz history lesson.

The sequel is curious. At points, it might almost be a Lightsey record, with guest horns, and there was indeed once a Leaders Trio record. The pianist plays unaccompanied on the opening track and two others, and is the most prominent soloist. Bowie only has one extensive feature, on 'Blueberry Hill', and there is precious little from Blythe and Freeman.

 Spirits Alike Blue Moon 71060 Eddie Henderson (t); Bobby Watson (as); Chico Freeman (ts); Fred Harris (p); Cecil McBee (b); Billy Hart (d). 8/06.
With Freeman and McBee the only remaining members from the original group, one might reasonably expect this to sound nothing like the earlier records. In fact, the similarities are greater than anticipated, a nice blend of straightforward hard bop and some more adventurous material. Henderson fills in well for the late Bowie and there are some nice piano touches which come out strongly on his own 'The Ascended One'. As if to assert their claims on the marque, Freeman and McBee play a couple of brief duets; Hart has his moment on 'Lullaby For Imka', showing his usual melodic touch, but it's Watson who steals the honours with the opening 'Deep Pockets', which must sound terrific live.

Joëlle Léandre (born 1951)

DOUBLE BASS, VOICE

Raised in Aix-en-Provence, before studying bass in Paris and Buffalo, where she encountered the musics of Feldman, Cage and Scelsi, who remain powerful influences.

(*) Blue Goo Park FMP CD 52 Léandre; Rüdiger Carl (acc, cl). 7/92.
Léandre has performed a good deal of new music, but she is also a formidable improviser. This is a highly concentrated session with another undervalued figure. Consisting of 23 tracks, at just over an hour's tracking time, it emphasizes Léandre's interest in brief, almost song-like forms.

(*) Contrabasses Leo CD LR 261 Léandre; William Parker (b). 97.

(*) E'Vero Leo CD LR 275 Léandre; Sebi Tramontana (p). 97.
Parker is a modern master and a musician of vast resource and intelligence. As on the duets with Tramontana, Léandre is comfortable enough to cede musical territory to her playing partner. With Parker, though, she is forceful and full-voiced. His sense of structure is without peer, and Léandre might seem a miniaturist by comparison, except that here she lengthens her line and adds weight to every stroke of the strings.

(*) Joëlle Léandre Project Leo CD LR 287 Léandre; Marilyn Crispell (p); Richard Teitelbaum (ky, elec); Carlos Zingaro (vn); Paul Lovens (d). 1/99.
A midwinter performance at Sons d'Hiver. Past associations with all these players guarantee a strong empathy and, as with the Parker duets, she has a partner of equal force and expression in Marilyn Crispell. Using Zingaro and Teitelbaum allows her to create broad and complex soundscapes, but much of the music is unexpectedly spacious and detailed; there is no clutter anywhere.

 Tricotage Ambiances Magnetiques 109 Léandre; Danielle P. Roger (d). 5/99.
The image of the infamous tricoteuses, knitting one and purling one while the guillotines rumbled, was very much part of a feminist aesthetic in the '80s. Léandre and Roger don't flog it to death but devote their energies instead to a set of sensitive and muscular improvisations (and a surprise version of Debussy's 'Au clair de lune'). It's bordering on the obvious, but the bass is as percussive as the drums are musical – check out 'Knit One, Purl Three'.

* C'Est Ça Red Toucan 9315 Léandre; François Houle (cl); Hasse Poulsen (g). 3/00.
Recorded live in Paris, these ten free improvisations conjure the best out of both Léandre and Houle. Poulsen is less familiar; he's a vigorous, angular player, closer to Bill Frisell in free mode than to Derek Bailey with a song in his heart. Often it's he who takes the 'bass' line, leaving Léandre to move freely with her bow work.

(*) Signature (Two Duets) Red Toucan 9321 2CD Léandre; Masahiko Satoh, Yuji Takahashi (p). 12/00.
Two concerts, recorded on consecutive days. Takahashi sounds the more classically inclined of the pair, and possibly more at ease playing Takemitsu than this sort of free music, but Satoh is fast and light. The self-titled tracks show no signs of advance preparation, though Léandre does increasingly draw on a large vocabulary of phrases and effects, many of them made with the bow, not formulaic but a useful anchor.

(*) For Flowers Leo CD LR 396 Léandre; Mat Maneri (vn); Christophe Marguet (d); Joel Ryan (elec). 6/01.
This falls apart completely at the end, with the dreary 'Iris' droning – literally – on for a quarter of an hour. Much of the rest is terrific. Ryan manipulates and degrades acoustic sounds from the other three, turning brisk, staccato lines into great whorls and spirals. On 'Tulips', he sets to work on Léandre's vocalized line and almost miraculously blends her singing and bass work to the point where they are indistinguishable. The fine opening piece is edited, for no obvious reason. Why didn't they do that with 'Iris'?

(*) At The Le Mans Jazz Festival Leo CD LR 458/459 Léandre; Markus Stockhausen (t, flhn); Sebi Tramontana (tb); Irène Schweizer (p); India Cooke, Carlos Zingaro (vn); William Parker (b); Paul Lovens (d); Mark Nauseef (perc); Maggie Nicols (v). 4–5/05.

A good sampling of associations and approaches. The collaboration with Parker is well attested, but her work with Stockhausen and Nauseef is a revelation, and the trumpeter's declamatory style gives Joëlle's familiar low bass tones an unusual and effective new range of colours. The work with Nicols and Schweizer (as Les Diaboliques) is also familiar, but it would be interesting to hear what a newcomer would make of the work with Lovens, all cheerful antagonism, or of the quartet with Tramontana and Zingaro. An impressive residency at the French festival, exemplarily recorded.

(*) Freeway Clean Feed CF080 Léandre; Pascal Contet (acc). 9/05.

The purple patch continues with a set that perhaps lacks a little for textural variety but which none the less conjures up some delightfully inventive music. Contet is an interesting player and it's interesting to compare this with the very first record in this entry: it's a similar sound-world, but a very different chemistry between the voices, and Léandre's approach has evolved in fascinating directions.

* Winter In New York Leo CDLR499 Léandre; Kevin Norton (vib, cym). 12/06.

The clichés have run out: metal and wood, earth and air, yin and yang, cold without, heat within. This was an astonishing encounter, caught live at New York's Stone club. Léandre has rarely, if ever, sounded better and Norton is one of North America's genuine innovators, a man destined for lasting greatness on his instrument(s). It's clever music, but it also has a visceral intensity that lasts and lasts.

Also, in brief:

 Incandescences / (*) Sapporo Duets Jazz'halo TS 007 / 013. 5/97; 9/98.

Duos with pianists Giorgio Occhipinti (mercurial, manic, full of almost comically combative playing) and Ryoji Hojito (more closely argued and allusive). A fascinating pair of discs, worth searching out.

 Organic Mineral In Situ 235. 6/99.

Bass and koto work well together and Kazue Sawai is a fine exponent. Lovely true sound from Radio Bremen.

 Evident 482 Music 1024. 03.

Mark Nauseef's use of frame drums and other percussion devices has opened up a rich seam of enquiry for him down the years. With Léandre, he sounds ever more expansive.

 Sur Une Balançoire AM 126. 04.

Fourteen fine free improvisations with Gianni Lenoci (p).

(*) Firedance Red Toucan 9327. 9/04.

A live set with violinist India Cooke from the Guelph Festival in Canada. Beautiful music marred by easily edited applause.

Led Bib

GROUP

Burly Brit-funk of a frankly nostalgic sort.

 Arboretum / (*) Sizewell Tea Slam 261 / Babel BDV 2665 Pete Grogan, Chris Williams (as); Toby McLaren (p); Liran Donin (b); Mark Holub (d). 1/05.

Led (!) by New Jersey-born Holub, this vivid quintet might remind some listeners of early Pinski Zoo. Williams bears an uncanny resemblance to the younger Gary Bartz, who may even be an influence. The compositional ideas and emotional range are more varied than such comparisons imply, and if the sound of Fender Rhodes, electric bass, lots of wah, fuzz and wobble conjures up the late '70s, Led Bib are actually much more contemporary and alert than that. 'Aural Assault' is the only track that drifts close to retro styling on the debut, but even here the sheer energy of Holub's drumming and of McLaren's keyboard abstractions keep things on course. The opening 'Clatter' is superb and there are two Satie reworkings, which, ironically, give a better insight into the group's subversive instincts than the Holub originals. Fantastic live band, as the extended final jam on David Byrne's 'Memories Can't Wait' suggests, who've shaped up brilliantly with Sizewell Tea. It's still noisy and slightly retro in feel, but it clatters along delightfully and these guys are no dummies, as the John Wyndham references make clear; 'Chocky''s fantastic and the cover of Bowie's 'Heroes' is a no-shit masterpiece.

LeeAnn Ledgerwood

PIANO

Born in Ohio, she studied classical piano but was won over by a Bill Evans LP. After Berklee, she moved to New York.

(*) Now And Zen Steeplechase SCCD 31432 Ledgerwood; Jon Gordon (ss, as); Matt Penman (b); Heinrich Köbberling (d). 9/97.

LeeAnn Ledgerwood received enthusiastic acclaim for her role on Marian McPartland's Piano Jazz radio series in 1990. Buoyed up by that success, she made a debut record for Triloka (now deleted) with more haste and enthusiasm than judgement. These are a lot more confident and settled. Gordon was an excellent choice for the quartet date, smoothly assertive in his solos but conservative enough not to bruise the reflexes of a rhythm section that had already worked together a lot. Ledgerwood doesn't write much and the focus here is on getting a group result. Even so, her 'Now And Zen' sparks what's perhaps the best performance on that disc, the group gradually raising the intensity until Gordon's alto fireworks seem like a logical outburst. Some of the pieces, such as Wayne Shorter's 'Water Babies', are under-coloured, but it's an assured set.

 Compassions Steeplechase SCCD Ledgerwood (p solo). 10/98.

(*) Paradox Steeplechase SCCD 31497 Ledgerwood; Ron McClure (b); Billy Hart (d). 4/00.

Ledgerwood takes a chance which doesn't quite come off to her best advantage on her debut as an unaccompanied soloist. Addressing the Coltrane songbook may appeal to questing young minds and fingers, but it's a portentous task, and her conservatory training often gets the better of interpretations which ask for softness and guile as well as rigour. 'Naima' goes well.

She looks like she's had a kd lang makeover for the cover of Paradox, and this is a good group. 'Wise One', which meandered on the solo record, is buoyed up by Hart's dramatic percussion and McClure's stentorian lines, and when they move into time, the results are a surprising match of joy and bluesiness. 'India', which comes next, is similarly upbeat, and the good-natured swagger of McCoy Tyner's 'Blues On The Corner' is very likeable.

Her best record, with one 'but'. Nils Winther has produced enough piano dates by now to make you think he'd get a better piano sound than this.

Also, in brief:

 Transition Steeplechase SCCD 31468. 4/98.
Some tracks are too long, like the smart but overbuilt 'Night And Day'. But it's an OK follow-up.

() Walkin' Up Steeplechase SCCD 31541. 9/02.
A disappointingly tepid continuation.

Mike LeDonne (born 1956)

PIANO, ORGAN

House pianist at Jimmy Ryan's in New York, he played with many of the swing-to-mainstream masters there.

 'Bout Time / (*) The Feeling Of Jazz Criss Cross 1033
(*) Soulmates Criss Cross 1074 LeDonne; Ryan Kisor (t); Joshua Redman (ts); Jon Gordon (as); Peter Washington (b); Lewis Nash (d). 1/93.
(*) Waltz For An Urbanite Criss Cross 1111 LeDonne; Steve Nelson (vib); Peter Bernstein (g); Peter Washington (b); Kenny Washington (d). 6/95.
The first two discs are typical, consistent, slightly soft Criss Cross dates. Tunes, charts and solos all bespeak an unflagging but rather charmless dedication to hard-bop routine. Four of the themes on the second record are handled by the rhythm section alone, but otherwise there's little to tell the two records apart. Kisor and Redman are an indecently talented front line and they finesse the material on Soulmates to a degree that takes this out of the usual neat-and-tidy session-man bag. LeDonne himself doesn't do anything awesomely different from the other records, but it all sounds very accomplished.

Waltz For An Urbanite continues the good form. LeDonne is used to playing alongside vibes after many years with Milt Jackson, and he makes a seamless team with the typically elegant and quick-witted Nelson. His originals have a flavoursome touch and the music as a whole has a sexier, more lilting feel than some of the earlier records.

 To Each His Own Double Time DTRCD 135 LeDonne; Peter Washington (b); Mickey Roker (d). 1/98.
 Then And Now Double-Time DTRCD-153 LeDonne; Jim Rotondi (t); Eric Alexander (ts); Peter Washington(b); Joe Farnsworth (d). 12/98.
 Bags Groove: A Tribute To Milt Jackson Double-Time DTRCD-182 LeDonne; Jim Rotondi (t); Steve Davis (tb); Steve Wilson (as); Jim Snidero (as, f); Steve Nelson (vib); Bob Cranshaw (b); Mickey Roker (d). 2/01.
Moving to Double Time, LeDonne turns in another genuine date in To Each His Own. Wes Montgomery's 'Movin' Along', an inspired choice, shows how much he can get out of the basic material of the blues. He's never a filigree player, but he rarely wastes a note, and the almost spidery lines are compelling.

The albums become ever-more generic and predictable, although they're pleasing enough. Then And Now risks Herbie Hancock's 'The Sorcerer', but there's very little magic in this one, and we could surely have done without yet another 'Round Midnight'. That said, the three principal soloists are fair value. The Jackson tribute is something LeDonne (who played with Bags, as did Cranshaw and Roker) is entitled to, but Milton may have put on one of his famous furrowed brows if he listened to the overly complex arrangements. Average.

(*) Night Song Savant 2067 LeDonne; Ron Carter (b); Joe Farnsworth (d). 9/05.
This is nice. Sammy Cahn, Stevie Wonder, John Coltrane and Duke Ellington: all together in piano jazz heaven. It sounds 'eclectic' and A&R driven, but LeDonne and his team have the chops to make it happen. 'After The Rain' is lovely and 'Don't You Worry 'Bout A Thing' comes off just as well. Carter's great on that.

 On Fire Savant 2080 LeDonne; Eric Alexander (ts); Peter Bernstein (g); Joe Farnsworth (d). 5/06.
The problem with a title like this is that if you aren't – on fire, that is – the whole thing sounds a bit sham. LeDonne has the chops and can turn in a great set on his day, but here he sounds as if he's cranking a cliché mill just long enough to deliver a CD, even though it's a live date. Short change all round, and the galling thing is: it could have been so much better.

Also, in brief:

() Common Ground Criss Cross 1058. 12/90.
Mike's in the spotlight in a trio format, but it looks good for nothing but showing off.

() Smokin' Out Loud Savant SCD 2055. 11/03.
Generic Hammond stuff; no one breaks sweat.

Crissy Lee

DRUMS

Female drummer? All-woman orchestra? Purple-faced stick-in-muds explode all over the place.

 With Body And Soul Keystone KCD 041 Lee; Annette Brown, Rebekah Noot, Sally Erskine, Craig Wild (t); Carol Jarvis, Becki Smith (tb); Alison Neale (as, f); Kellie Santin (as); Josephine Davies (ts); Alyson Adams (ts, f); Nancy Burgess (bs); Meredith White (p); Paula Gardner (b); Michele Drees (perc). 01.
The hugely experienced Lee has assembled a fine, well-drilled ensemble who deliver these relatively conventional charts with fire and commitment. The recording isn't great and some of the solos – including a decent one by Rebekah Noot on 'Sister Sadie' – are very remote. Crissy herself only takes a spot on 'It Don't Mean A Thing', and it's pretty much a token bow; her strength is manning the engine room, which she does with rugged authority. Craig Wild has the best job in British music.

Jeanne Lee (1939–2000)

VOICE, SYNTHESIZER

Powerful singer with strong avant-garde pedigree. She's much missed.

 The Newest Sound Around RCA 2500 Lee; Ran Blake (p); George Duvivier (b). 11–12/61.
This was the beginning of Lee's association with the like-minded Blake, who'd been a fellow student at Bard College. They run a varied programme of material, from 'Summertime', 'Lover Man' and 'Laura' to Terry Jacks's 'Seasons In The Sun' and 'Blue Monk', all done with a cool and thoughtful sound that still admits of passion. Jeanne's touch on the synthesizer is deft and sparing, and Duvivier makes the ideal third wheel.

 After Hours Owl 013426-2 Lee; Mal Waldron (p). 5/94.
 Travelling In Soul Time BvHaast 13214 As above, except add Toru Tenda (f). 95.
Lee's horn-like delivery is ideally suited to sets like these, which are very much in Waldron's deep-blue mode. After Hours is actually quite conventional, a standards session on which Lee does little more than sing the songs. Her only real improvisation is a wordless scat on 'Fire Waltz'. The other disc is more searching. Tenda makes some effective contributions, but the interplay between voice and piano is the important thing.

Michel Legrand (born 1932)

PIANO, ORGAN, VOICE

A capable jazz pianist, many of whose film themes have entered the jazz repertory.

* Legrand Jazz Philips 830074-2 Legrand; Miles Davis, Ernie Royal, Art Farmer, Donald Byrd, Joe Wilder (t); Frank Rehak, Billy Byers, Jimmy Cleveland, Eddie Bert (tb); Jimmy Buffington (frhn); Gene Quill, Phil Woods (as); Ben Webster, John Coltrane, Seldon Powell (ts); Jerome Richardson (bs, bcl); Teo Macero (bs); Herbie Mann (f); Bill Evans, Hank Jones, Nat Pierce (p); Eddie Costa, Don Elliott (vib); Betty Glamann (hp); Major Holley (b, tba); Paul Chambers, George Duvivier, Milt Hinton (b); Don Lamond, Kenny Dennis, Osie Johnson (d). 6/58.
 Paris Jazz Piano Emarcy 548148-2 Legrand; Guy Pedersen (b); Gus Wallez (d). 59.
(*) After The Rain Original Jazz Classics OJC 803-2 Legrand; Joe Wilder (t, flhn); Phil Woods (as, cl); Zoot Sims (ts); Gene Bertoncini (g); Ron Carter (b); Grady Tate (d). 5/82.
Legrand's name is so widely known as a pop composer that his jazz leanings are largely ignored. But this small discography is worth much more than a passing look. The sessions for the Legrand Jazz album are uniquely star-studded, and the quality of the writing matches up to the cast-list. Legrand chose many unexpected tunes – including ancient history such as 'Wild Man Blues', as well as the more predictable 'Nuages' and 'Django' – and recast each one in a challenging way. 'Night In Tunisia' is a controlled fiesta of trumpets, 'Round Midnight' a glittering set-piece for Davis, 'Nuages' a sensuous vehicle for Webster. The last is placed alongside a trombone section in one of the three groupings devised by the arranger; another is dominated by a four-man trumpet group. The third has the remarkable situation of having Davis, Coltrane and Evans as sidemen, playing Waller and Armstrong tunes. Many of the arrangements are tellingly compact, seven not even breaking the four-minute barrier, and it ends on a fast treatment of Beiderbecke's 'In A Mist'.

Legrand the pianist was featured on the sessions which are here reissued as Paris Jazz Piano. The ten tunes are all with Paris in mind, hence such obvious blooms as 'La Vie En Rose' and 'The Last Time I Saw Paris'. Legrand tends to show off his Peterson stylings, and some of it is far too grandiose, but the music does seem to give off a charming whiff of its locale.

After The Rain, which dates from much later and long after Legrand had made his fortune, was done almost off the cuff. The group works casually through six lesser-known Legrand ballads, yet the playing by the three front-liners is so exquisitely done that the music glows. 'Nobody Knows', in which Sims and Woods luxuriate in the lovely chords, is an impromptu classic.

Steve Lehman (born 1978)

ALTO AND SOPRANINO SAXOPHONES, FLUTE

A pupil of both Jackie McLean and Anthony Braxton, the impressive New Yorker works in an advanced post-bop vein. He is also a composer and a member of Fieldwork.

 Structural Fire /  Camoflage CIMP 245 / 255 Lehman; Roy Campbell Jr (t, pkt-t, flhn); Kevin O'Neil (g); John Heert (b); Kevin Norton (d). 5/01.
(*) Artificial Light Fresh Sound New Talent FSNT 186 Lehman; Mark Shim (ts); Chris Dingman (vib); Drew Gress (b); Eric McPherson (d). 03.
* Interface Clean Feed CF022 Lehman; Mark Dresser (b); Pheeroan akLaff (d). 5/03.
* Demian As Posthuman Pi 17 Lehman; Vijay Iyer (p); Me'shel Ndegeocello (b); Eric McPherson, Tyshawn Sorey (d); Jahi Lake (turntables). 3 & 6/05.
Lehman first came to notice as a member of Anthony Braxton's ensemble. The CIMPs are an interesting gesture of confidence from a label that normally prefers to showcase older musicians. A two-day session was devoted to a harder-edged, Braxton-influenced idiom than some of the saxophonist's later work. O'Neil and Norton are fellow alumni and the empathy is impressively strong, as is the writing; a Jackie McLean tune is the only non-original on the first album, John Coltrane's 'One Down, One Up' on the second. Perhaps a single album would have sufficed but there's enough impressive playing from all concerned to sustain interest across two discs.

If there is a mid-point between McLean and Braxton, it is probably Eric Dolphy. His style is evident here and there on Artificial Light, perhaps reinforced by the Hutcherson-derived vibes of Chris Dingman. There's a lively modernist feel to the tunes here, albeit without the abstraction of the earlier sets. 'Post-Modern Pharoahs' and 'Fumba Rebel' are both outstanding and, while one misses the bite and shiver of Campbell's small trumpet, Mark Shim is an able foil.

Interface was Lehman's breakthrough record, and probably his most approachable. That said, the trio with akLaff (also a teacher at Wesleyan) and Dresser is immensely powerful, packed with solid intent. More exposed as the sole horn, he sometimes over-elaborates ideas, notably on the long 'Motion', but a growing emphasis on sopranino sets him some stern harmonic hurdles which he clears without seeming effort and with some aplomb. The writing is hugely impressive.

Demian takes him on a different course. Basically a set of duets with Sorey, some pieces are reworked with almost a hip-hop sensibility. There was to have been a hip-hop track on the disc but copyright problems meant it was withdrawn. Lehman treats ideas like 'Damage Mobility' in a neo-Cubist way, using multiple saxophone perspectives and tough harmonizations in the over-dubbing. Some tracks are played over strong bass vamps from Ndegeocello, but the drama always returns to Lehman's work with the drummer. It's an intoxicating mix from a rising star.

(*) Manifold Clean Feed CF097 Lehman; Jonathan Finlayson (t); John Hebert (b); Nasheet Waits (d). 5 & 6/07.
* On Meaning Pi 25 Lehman; Jonathan Finlayson (t); Chris Dingman (vib); Drew Gress (b); Tyshawn Sorey (d). 6/07.

Lehman gets better and better and these are essential contemporary recordings. What's intoxicating about both discs is the feeling that he's taken the 'outside'/'inside' dichotomy – hinted at in the Out To Lunch! instrumentation used again on the superb Pi date – for a long walk and quietly abandoned it. His harmonic language is wonderfully subtle and the lines he gives to Finlayson and Dingman are vectors in conceptions that seem more three-dimensional than linear. 'Curse Fraction' and the title-piece, edgy, thoughtful ideas both, form the archstone of the record, which is perfectly sequenced. It's the better of the two discs only in the sense of being the more sophisticated. The quartet date has an urgent blowing quality, but this format always prompts comparison with another modern icon, the classic Ornette Coleman quartet, and here one feels the lineage isn't as confidently borne forward. 'Cloak And Dagger' is a perfect sample of Lehman's interest in combining formal exactness with real-time adventure. 'Dusk' pays tribute to Andrew Hill.

The sopranino is ever more comfortably assimilated into Lehman's language. It has a unique, supercharged sound that always implies urgency when it appears. On both his voices, though, he's creating music of genuinely visionary importance, a way forward for the art.

Peter Leitch (born 1944)

GUITAR

The gifted Ottawan is an accomplished performer whose very facility sometimes disguises his sophistication. He also writes on jazz matters.

(*) Red Zone Reservoir RSR CD 103 Leitch; Pepper Adams (bs); Kirk Lightsey (p); Ray Drummond (b); Marvin 'Smitty' Smith (d). 11/84–7/88.

 Exhilaration Reservoir RSR CD 118 Leitch; Pepper Adams (bs); John Hicks (p); Ray Drummond (b); Billy Hart (d). 11/84–12/88.

 On A Misty Night Criss Cross Criss 1026 Leitch; Neil Swainson (b); Mickey Roker (d). 11/86.

(*) Portraits And Dedications Criss Cross Criss 1039 Leitch; Bobby Watson (as); Jed Levy (afl); James Williams (p); Ray Drummond (b); Marvin 'Smitty' Smith (d). 12/88–1/89.

Leitch has evolved from an initially horn-influenced approach to a more guitaristic style. The tracks with Adams on the November 1984 session benefited from a striking separation between baritone and guitar. A couple of duos with Drummond explore a similar contrast. Hicks and Lightsey are both dark-toned piano-players, and that contributes to the overall feel of these sessions.

At Criss Cross, Gerry Teekens allowed him to make swinging but intelligent records which refuse to be pigeonholed. Like many debut discs On A Misty Night tries to pack in too much and gets caught between opposites rather than using them to fuel one another. The change of emphasis on Portraits And Dedications was quite striking. It would be difficult to imagine a saxophonist who sounds less like Adams than Watson, and the switch to Williams marked a clear recognition that Leitch was increasingly capable of sustaining a broader, self-accompanied sound. Levy's alto flute is used very sparingly, for the softly romantic 'Visage De Cathryn' and 'Portrait Of Sylvia'. His moment was to come later.

 Duality /  A Special Rapport Reservoir RSR CD 134 / 129 Leitch; John Hicks (p); Ray Drummond (b on Duality only); Marvin 'Smitty' Smith (d on Duality only). 7/93, 6/94.

The quartet date sometimes settles down too comfortably, though one can hardly blame Leitch for enjoying his surroundings, and in a medley of Strayhorn tunes the music reaches a peak of gentle but firm lyricism. In the pure duo situation, there's the same sageness and fertility, although again a sense of two men basking in their abilities rather than looking for challenge.

(*) Colours And Dimensions Reservoir RSR CD 140 Leitch; Claudio Roditi (t); Gary Bartz (as); Jed Levy (ts); John Hicks (p); Rufus Reid (b); Marvin 'Smitty' Smith (d). 7 & 8/95. 7/95.

This sounded like a settled group. Bartz is in excellent form, hot, intense and bluesy. 'Bluesview' is magnificent and 'Round Lake Burnt Hills' highlights the leader's elegance, with the big Zoller guitar ringing and singing in every chorus.

(*) Up Front Reservoir RSR CD 149 Leitch; Sean Smith (b); Marvin 'Smitty' Smith (d). 7/96.

(*) Blues On The Corner Reservoir RSR CD 160 Leitch; Bobby Watson (ss, as); Renee Rosnes (p); Dwayne Burno (b); Billy Har (d); Kendra Shank (v). 97.

Leitch is by now so reliable that much depends on his colleagues. Watson's plangent approach is even better suited to this material than is Bartz, and on 'The Hillary Step', 'Wendy's Shoes' and the title-piece he is magisterially good. The trio album is an all too rare opportunity to hear Leitch with just rhythm. 'You're My Everything' and 'Sea Change' are noteworthy for the interplay of guitar and percussion.

* Autobiography Reservoir RSR 179 Leitch; Jed Levy (ts, f); George Cables (p); Dwayne Burno (b); Steve Johns (d). 1/04.

(*) Self-Portrait Jazz House 7003 Leitch (g solo). 5/06.

It's not immediately clear in what sense the first of these is autobiographical, but the set-list does contain some personal or artistic dedications ('For D.T.', 'Allyson', 'Clifford Jordan') and runs through an eclectic mix of repertory material by Albert Ayler, Charlie Parker and Henry Mancini, plus some cherished standards, so it may be that Leitch is revisiting influences. Certainly his version of Ayler's 'Ghosts' is utterly unexpected and bewitching. It's done as a Caribbean swinger, which is much closer to the nub of the original than might appear. Bird's 'Segment' is a subtle blowing line and 'Theme For Mr Lucky' confirms there's more to Hank M. than the Pink Panther theme. The real highlight of an excellent set is, ironically, the one that misses out the band, a stunning acoustic reading of 'East Of The Sun'. Breathtaking.

He picks up the cue on Self-Portrait. Fifteen years ago, a solo Leitch album would have been ignorable, but here he's at the top of his powers and the material – an opening 'Soul Eyes', an Ellington and a Strayhorn medley, and lots of strong originals – is spot-on. Slightly unrelieved in tone, hence the qualified mark, but excellent in every other way.

John/Jennifer Leitham (born 1953)

BASS

As album titles have tended to trumpet, Leitham is a left-handed bassist, based in California. The major gig in the '80s and '90s was in the trio backing Mel Torme. A straightahead player with a big sound.

 Live! CARS CP 0020 Leitham; Pete Christlieb, Rickey Woodard (ts); Shelly Berg (p); Joe LaBarbera (d). 3/97.

A gifted and exceptionally skilful player, Leitham is one of those mercurial session players who have been filling West Coast studios for the past 40 years. Earlier discs for USA seem to be in the dead-letter office for now. This live album is familiar stuff: Christlieb and Woodard have at it for an hour's worth of virile and often exciting blowing. There's little in it if you're looking for the winner out of the two horns; both play it big and hearty. Lots of bass features and Leitham gathers in a solo arco piece as well. Since this recording was made, John has become Jennifer Leitham.

Peter Lemer (born 1942)

PIANO

His trio (including John Stevens) helped open the influential Little Theatre Club in 1965 and he subsequently worked with Stevens's Spontaneous Music Ensemble, before taking a turn into fusion.

 Local Colour ESP Disk 1057 Lemer; Nisar Ahmad 'George' Khan (ts); John Surman (ss, bs, bcl); Tony Reeves (b); Jon Hiseman (d). 66.

Lemer would later work with Mike Oldfield and jazz-rock group Gilgamesh, but this debut as leader was a sombre and angular modern jazz set probably best sampled via the Carla Bley composition 'Ictus', which is the best cut of a relatively short set. Surman already sounds distinctive, but he is often beaten to the punch by the effusive Khan. Lemer keeps things centred round particular tonalities and Hiseman's tight rhythms (further reminder what a good jazz drummer he always was), leaving freer space for his colleagues. Not a classic, but more than a footnote in British improvisation.

Brian Lemon (born 1937)

PIANO

A British stalwart who grew up in Nottingham and then worked with Sandy Brown and Al Fairweather. A jobbing sideman who's played with everyone and enjoyed a few moments in the sun.

(*) But Beautiful Zephyr ZE CD 1 Lemon; Dave Cliff (g); Dave Green (b); Allan Ganley (d). 1 & 3/95.

 A Beautiful Friendship Zephyr ZE CD 4 Lemon; Warren Vaché (c); Roy Williams (tb); Dave Cliff (g); Dave Green (b); Martin Drew, Allan Ganley (d). 2/95.

 How Long Has This Been Going On? Zephyr ZE CD 5 As above, except omit Vaché, Drew; add Scott Hamilton (ts). 8/95.

The answer to the third of these is: seven decades now, or five at least as an active musician. Lemon's easily overlooked only because he seems always to have been there, turning out classy, unpretentious jazz with an effortless swing. It was John Bune's lemon-liveried Zephyr label (the only imprint around to give credits for 'benign gophery') that cemented Lemon's class and standing.

The first of the bunch is quality. The title-track is a model of its kind, and the medley of 'Exactly Like You' and 'I Thought About You' is hard to fault. A version of Sonny Rollins's 'St Thomas' doesn't sit quite as obviously for Lemon's technique but, following as it does the one original on the set, 'Blues For Suzanna', it underlines his other gift, the pacing and direction of a set. The session with Vaché and Roy Williams is a little too polite and matey: however, the brass is nicely recorded and there are splendid readings of 'Moten Swing', 'Up With The Lark' and 'Skylark', further evidence of Lemon's skill in pacing a record. Hamilton makes a big contribution to How Long?, smooth, relaxed, but still challenging. The tracks are notably longer here, more stretched out and teasing, and 'Tenderly' is terrific.

(*) Old Hands – Young Minds Zephyr ZECD 12 Lemon; Alan Barnes, Gerard Presencer (t); Iain Dixon, Andy Panayi (reeds); Anthony Kerr (vib); Alec Dankworth, Dave Green (b); Clark Tracey (d). 97.

Though most of the younger players on the roster are associated with a more contemporary approach to jazz, at least Tracey and Dankworth have blood-ties to the older generation and grew up in the presence of this kind of music. Lemon and Barnes quite properly share the honours, but the excitement of the set comes when the two approaches rub up against each other with affectionate rivalry.

 Lemon Looks Back – Just For Fun Zephyr ZE CD 14 Lemon; Roy Williams (tb); Alan Barnes (as, cl); Ken Peplowski (ts, cl); Dave Cliff (g); Dave Green (b); Martin Drew (d). 4/96.

A relaxed and utterly enjoyable programme of standards, distinguished by an elegant guest-slot from Peplowski, who has been going through a purple patch. Lemon lies back a bit more than usual and leaves much of the running to the horns. Again, though, the pacing of the set is immaculate, with 'When It's Sleepy Time Down South', 'When Your Lover Has Gone' and 'Cottontail' rounding out the album. Not a classic, but a gift for Lemonheads everywhere.

 Brian Lemon And David Newton Zephyr ZECD 20 Lemon; David Newton (p). 98.

Once again, Lemon puts himself in the company of a younger player with a very definite stance on the tradition. Newton is an elegant melodist with a deceptively light left hand. However gentle and indefinite the chords might sound, there is no mistaking how surely Dave constructs a song. Hoagy Carmichael seems an ideal source for them both, and this songbook project will appeal to anyone who cherishes the originals.

 My Shining Hour Zephyr ZECD 30 Lemon; Dave Green (b); Allan Ganley (d). 12/99–3/00.

* The Brian Lemon Anthology Zephyr ZECD 36 2CD As discs above. 95–00.

After setting him up in many different playing situations, Zephyr asked Lemon for a straightforward trio date. If the results are predictably enjoyable, they are also, of course, predictable. Brian knows all the tunes inside out and isn't shy about introducing wrinkles such as the eventful climax to 'It's Only A Paper Moon', but he's not the kind of player for wholesale revisions and the record does tend to play out in a nice, easy-going and unsurprising way. Sadly, arthritis has all but curtailed this great professional's playing in recent times, but at least the recent Anthology, which cherrypicks from the above sets and his sideman work, is a glorious reminder of one of the master craftsmen in the music.

Harlan Leonard (1905–83)

CLARINET, ALTO AND BARITONE SAXOPHONES, BANDLEADER

Born in KC, he worked with Bennie Moten from 1923 to 1931, then joined the Kansas City Sky Rockets and took over three years later, keeping the group going in the city until 1945, when he left the music business.

(*) Harlan Leonard And His Rockets 1940 Classics 670 Leonard; James Ross (t); Edward Johnson, William H Smith (t); Fred Beckett, Walter Monroe, Richmond Henderson (tb); Darwin Jones (as, v); Henry Bridges (cl, ts); Jimmy Keith (ts); William Smith (p); Efferge Ware, Stan Morgan (g); Winston Williams, Billy Hadnott (b); Jesse Price (d); Myra Taylor, Ernie Williams (v). 1–11/40.

The forgotten men of Kansas City jazz. When Basie left for New York, Leonard's orchestra took over many of the Count's local engagements. But he didn't make many records; all 23 surviving tracks are here. A good band rather than a great one, it lacked individuality and some of the tracks are built round the kind of devices which Basie was personalizing to a much greater degree, the section work is occasionally suspect, and the KC rocking rhythm is something they fall back on time and again. But something good is to be found in nearly all these tracks, and some fine soloists, too – Bridges is an outstanding tenorman and Beckett (admired by J. J. Johnson) a surprisingly agile trombonist, and the trumpets hit the spot whenever they have to. Scholars will prize six early arrangements by the young Tadd Dameron, and one shouldn't miss the blues-inflected vocals of Ernie Williams, a lighter Jimmy Rushing.

Marilyn Lerner

PIANO

Born in Montreal, she's been a presence on the Canadian jazz scene since the early '80s.

* Birds Are Returning Jazz Focus JFCD 022 Lerner; Jane Bunnett (ss, f); Yosvany Terry (as, ts); Javier Falbo (bs); Kieran Overs (b); Dafnis Prieto (d); Carlos Francisco Hernandez Mora, Ogduardo Diaz Anaya, Atonio Martinez Campos, Inor Sotolongo (perc). 1/97.

Lerner's music demands wider recognition. This brilliant collection derives from a project to visit and record with local players in Havana. Unlike most such collaborations, Lerner's material refuses to simply lie back and get inundated with Cuban rhythm and the sunny (and, the less sympathetic might argue, sappy) sweetness of the country's music. While there is much that could be identified as Cuban – hardly avoidable, given the phalanx of local players alongside fellow Canucks Overs and Bunnett – Lerner makes sure that what she wants comes first. The opening 'Runaround' may work off Latin polyrhythms, but the off-kilter melody and simple but dark harmonies are pure Lerner. 'I Loves You, Porgy' is set to a stately bolero rhythm, fleshed out by thick, swelling chords. None of the original themes seem to fall in quite the place one expects: 'Imogene', set to a pulse that seems to snake alongside the melody, and 'Condensation', with its curious twinning of soprano and baritone, are striking in and of themselves, and the superb playing of the soloists – especially Bunnett and local man Terry – heightens their impact. For Lerner's own best moment, go to the tranquil but haunting 'Say Now Always'.

Bill LeSage (1927–2001)

VIBES, PIANO

A Londoner, he worked with John Dankworth and studied with Tristano. Cornerstone of the Bebop Preservation Society.

 The Right Vibes / (*) The Right Vibes: Final Volume Mainstem MSTCD0015 / 0030 LeSage; Phil Lee (g); Alec Dankworth (b). 00.

 Confirmation Marbil 005 LeSage; Steve Waterman (t); Gilad Atzmon (ts, cl); Laurence Cottle (b); Bill Eyden (d). 01.

LeSage's brand of bebop was too polite for some, but he was a formidable technician and his groups were the British equivalent of the Messengers as a proving ground. The spanking Confirmation, by his Bebop 2000 formation, was recorded at the Ealing Jazz Festival shortly before Bill's death. On piano, he's more anonymous, but he has two of the brightest young British horn stars in the group. There probably isn't enough quality stuff to justify two volumes of The Right Vibes, but 'Yoda' (was that his nickname latterly?) lifts Final Volume and sits with 'Hallelujah' and 'Boplicity' from the first set.

Carl Leukaufe

VIBES

Veteran Chicago bopper.

 Warrior Delmark DE 491 Leukaufe; Kevin Quail (tb); Lin Halliday (ts); Jodie Christian, Joe Iaco (p); Dan Shapera (b); Robert Barry (d). N.D.

The title's well chosen to recognize Leukaufe's long – and, until this, unrecorded – bop campaigning in Chicago, but it slightly misleads as regards the vibist's style, which is distinctly laid-back and relaxed. There are touches of Hampton in the playing, but Milt Jackson is the more obvious source. The material is mostly modern bop staples and standards – 'Airegin', 'Pannonica', 'Tricotism', 'The Man I Love' – but the drummer chips in with a lovely tribute to John Gilmore and Leukaufe's own 'Little Warrior' is a nice line. The group with trombone is probably superior, but Halliday is always a refreshing player and he gets in some solid solos as well as good work round the vibes.

Daniel Levin

CELLO

Levin began playing very young and later studied with the charismatic Paul Tobias at Mannes College.

* Don't Go It Alone Riti CD 09 Levin; Dave Ballou (t); Mat Moran (vib); Joe Morris (b). 10/03.

 Some Trees / (*) Blurry hatOLOGY 632 / 653 Levin; Nate Woolley (t); Mat Moran (vib); Joe Morris (b). 05; 06.

Not since David Darling and Hank Roberts has there been a more exciting jazz prospect on the cello. On the debut disc rich curlicues of string sound mingle with Ballou's terse inside/outside trumpet and rhythmic vibes. Label boss Morris, still on sabbatical from the guitar at this point, adds a dark but forceful line on his bass. Right from the opening 'Unfortunate Situation', Levin sounds like he's working in a post-Dolphy, post-Ornette idiom that is also responsive to contemporary compositional ideas. 'Nervous' is also very much in that mode, while 'Underground' weaves something subtle and complex from the simplest of materials.

Levin seems to engage with some of his household gods on Some Trees, opening with a tune that instantly recalls Ornette's groups with David Izenzon; the comparison is clinched later, when Levin includes the saxophonist's 'Morning Song' and a wonderful, foreshortened version of Dolphy's 'Out To Lunch'.

There is also a surprising interpretation of Steve Lacy's 'Wickets', not quite so successful but still sitting well for this personnel. Wooley was a great recruitment, conjuring up a wider and more expressive set of sound-colours than his predecessor and seemingly better able to find a place between cello and vibraphone. Levin negotiates lead lines and accompaniment with real skill, reminiscent in places of some of Ron Carter's cello work. Morris is no Carter, but he was a distinctive player on the bass, which he seems to have abandoned in favour of guitar once again. The follow-up record simply repeats its predecessor's strengths in an even more emphatic way. It leaves Levin very much the man to watch.

Elliott Levin (born 1953)

TENOR SAXOPHONE, FLUTE

He started at the deep end: with Cecil Taylor at Carnegie Hall!

(*) The Motion Of Emotion CIMP #153 Levin; Akira Ando (clo, b); Dominic Duval (b); Dennis Charles (d). 6/97.

Levin's loud approach and busking vibrato don't obscure the humorous spin on his music. The opener is called 'The Psychopathology Of Everyday Life', and there's something a bit whimsical about this gathering of personalities: Charles, the most down-to-earth of free drummers, referees between the groaning sound of the two bassists (much of it lost in the mix), while Levin tries to soar above. It is chaotically busy when the four of them play together; but two of the six tracks are trios and one is a duet for sax and drums. 'Lady Lord's Audacious Space' is a majestic parading of arpeggios. 'Burning Flames' is like a New Orleans march gone sour in the heat.

Tony Levin

DRUMS

Played with Tubby Hayes and others, but now mainly works in free situations with fellow members of Mujician.

 Spiritual Empathy Rare Music RM024 Levin; Paul Dunmall (as, ts). 12/93, 5/94.

The first of these duos was taped five months before the rest and one does get a feeling that, however close the working relationship already was, Levin and Dunmall benefited from that extra time. Where 'Mandalla' is convoluted, there is a freshness and intimacy to the remaining tracks. The recording isn't always ideal but Levin's unstaunchable flow is always impressive.

Rod Levitt (born 1929)

TROMBONE

Levitt worked largely as a session-player and sideman in New York but for a brief period led a small group on record which created a small but intriguing body of work for Riverside and RCA.

(*) Dynamic Sound Patterns Original Jazz Classics OJC 1955 Levitt; Rolf Ericson (t); Buzz Renn (as, cl); George Marge (ts, cl, picc, cor); Gene Allen (bs, bcl); Sy Johnson (p); John Beal (b); Ronnie Bedford (d). 7/63.

The first of Levitt's records perhaps isn't his best, but in the absence of the RCA albums this is all we have – and it's still a sly and entertaining trawl through some aspects of small-group jazz writing after bebop. Duke Ellington was Levitt's main man and there are numerous echoes of Ellington ensemble-writing in the six originals, even in the opener, 'Holler', supposedly framed after the singing style of Big Bill Broonzy. Some of the twists and turns in the tunes seem a little arch, 40 years on, but, as with the contemporaneous music of George Russell and Gil Evans, this feels like an avenue which jazz has yet to fully explore. The absence of star soloists in the band (Ericson might be an exception) helps to focus attention on the scoring and ensemble playing, which is impeccable.

Jed Levy (born 1958)

TENOR SAXOPHONE, FLUTE

Studied at the New England Conservatory, then played with Jaki Byard and Don Patterson.

(*) Sleight Of Hand Steeplechase SCCD 31383 Levy; George Colligan (p); Ron McClure (b); Gerry Gibbs (d). 11/95.

Levy's broad-shouldered tone and confident delivery give him the kind of full-on swing one associates with an earlier generation, but he's soaked in bebop and hard-bop practice. The superfast title-track and the closer, a recasting of the 'Cherokee' chords, show off his chops without just showing off.. 'Three And Me' is an ingenious use of 3/4 and it's the setting for a quite extraordinary solo by Colligan, who takes the McCoy Tyner method to its limit. Colligan is as imposing as Levy himself, with his playing on 'Nice And Easy' as humorous as it is inventive. McClure is his usual tower of strength and Gibbs is marvellously fluent and powerful. This is a great band and they change setting and pace throughout with no loss of interest, apart from a dead spot in the middle with the long and uneventful 'Desert Church'.

(*) Round And Round Steeplechase SCCD 31529 Levy; Bill Gerhardt (p); Mike McGurk (b); Jeff Brillinger (d). 3/02.

* Mood Ellington Steeplechase SCCD 31579 Levy; Jack Walrath (t); Bill Mays (p); Martin Wind (b); Jeff Brillinger (d). 12/04.

The belated follow-up is just as good. The rhythm section aren't as well-known but they do just fine; the tunes are another largely familiar group (he even has another go at 'Cherokee'). Jed's playing, though, is again tremendous. He powers through themes and solos in a way which ought to seem bland, in terms of the steely confidence of the execution, yet it's nothing but full-throated enjoyment. The sort of record which empowers jazz-repertory without rhetoric.

The Ellington set is a beauty. Levy took the trouble to choose a rare batch of Ducal tunes – the only really familiar one is 'Mood Indigo', and he adopts a strikingly different approach to it – and assembled a terrific quintet to play them, with Walrath at his crackling best and Mays playing some of his finest sideman work.

(*) Gateway Steeplechase SCCD 31606 Levy; George Colligan (p); Ugonna Okegwo (b); Billy Drummond (d). 1/06.

Probably only one in five modern jazz fans has more than a passing knowledge of Levy's work as leader. The latest of these, again a saxophone-and-rhythm situation, adds to the wonderment of his relatively obscurity. It's an all-original set, with the exception of 'Lost April' and 'How Am I To Know', and though there are few losses of pace along the way, it's well up to standard, with Colligan in brilliant form. In the LP era this would have been a small masterpiece, but there's too much of it; even with playing of this quality, it palls.

Lou Levy (1928–2001)

PIANO

Hugely prolific as an accompanist (Ella Fitzgerald, Peggy Lee), he also recorded under his own name.

 Jazz In Hollywood Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 1890 Levy; Harry Babasin (b); Larry Bunker (d). 9/54.

 My Old Flame Fresh Sound FSRCD 154 Levy; Fred Atwood (b); John Dentz (d). 78.

Apart from 1952–4, which he spent away from music, Lou's diary must have been stuffed. 'The kid's got ears' was the verdict of many a singer, and the title of one of his best-known albums. What was odd was that said ears were never quite aligned in the normal way. Levy was always looking for angles, tinkering with the changes. There's huge variety in these outwardly straightforward sets and it's difficult to offer more than a notional steer to those who want to sample Lou's art. Indeed, some of his best work can be found on his loyal mate Levey's Stanley The Steamer and as an accompanist. Jazz In Four Colors is the best record, but all the RCAs are hard to find now. Influenced by Tatum and Bud Powell, with a fleet delivery and an oddly jangled approach to a solo, he was a most musical fella.

George Lewis (1900–68)

CLARINET

One of the great primitives of early and classic jazz, he had a raw and untutored tone and an impassioned, technically unembellished approach to soloing. Keystone of the post-war revival in traditional jazz, he toured indefatigably.

(*) & His New Orleans Stompers: Volume 1 / * ... Volume 2 American Music AMCD 100 / 101 Lewis; Avery 'Kid' Howard (t); Jim Robinson (tb); Lawrence Marrero (bj); Sidney Brown (bb on Volume 1 only); Chester Zardis (b); Edgar Moseley (d). 5/43.

* George Lewis With Kid Shots American Music AMCD 2 Lewis; Bunk Johnson, Louis 'Kid Shots' Madison (t); Jim Robinson (tb); Lawrence Marrero (bj); Alcide 'Slow Drag' Pavageau (b); Baby Dodds (d). 7 & 8/44.

* Trios & Bands American Music AMCD 4 Lewis; Avery 'Kid' Howard, Louis 'Kid Shots' Madison (t); Jim Robinson (tb); Lawrence Marrero (bj); Ricard Alexis, Alcide 'Slow Drag' Pavageau, Chester Zardis (b); Baby Dodds, Edgar Moseley (d). 5/45.

 At Herbert Otto's Party American Music AMCD 74 Lewis; Herb Morand (t); Jim Robinson (tb); Albert Burbank (cl); Lawrence Marrero (bj); Alcide 'Slow Drag' Pavageau (b); Albert Jiles, Bob Matthews, Joe Watkins (d). 11/49.

 At Manny's Tavern, 1949 American Music AMCD 85 Lewis; Elmer Talbert, Johnny Wiggs (t); Lawrence Marrero (bj, g); Alcide 'Slow Drag' Pavageau (b); Joe Watkins (d). 49.

Rarely has a traditional jazz musician been documented on record in so concentrated a way as was Lewis. American Music's patient documentation, which now extends beyond the capacity of this listing, even gives street numbers and times of day for the earliest material here. Having been coaxed out of a 'retirement' working as a dockhand at the start of the war, Lewis was by the mid-'50s the surviving pillar of 'serious' revivalism, which he'd helped kick off with Bunk Johnson, working what looked like a politician's itinerary across the United States; Johnson is featured on three tracks of the With Kid Shots compilation.

The early material comes across with remarkable freshness. The first tracks on Volume 1 of the 1943 material were recorded in the drummer's house and, though they're more raggedy than the later sessions at the Gypsy Tea Room (high-point: two takes each of 'Climax Rag' and 'Careless Love'), they provide an excellent starting-point for serious examination of this remarkable musician. Lewis's solo breaks are oddly pitched (possibly owing to tape yaw), but the pitching remains consistent relative to other players so it has to be considered an idiosyncrasy rather than poor articulation. The Trios & Bands compilation includes some second takes from the group sessions with Shots (including a marvellous second try on 'San Jacinto Blues' and the first, presumably rejected, take of 'High Society'). He was apparently unhappy about the quality of some of the performances and asked to make some more discs with just banjo and bass. These contain some of his best-ever improvisations, all delivered in that plaintive, singing style that is among the most imitated of jazz sounds. The bounce and economy of 'Ice Cream' and the brief, gentle optimism of 'Life Will Be Sweeter' contain in four minutes the essence of Lewis's music: clear melodic statement, rhythmic simplicity and straightforward emotion.

The live material from Manny's is all previously unissued. It's raw fare, but interesting to hear Lewis on alto saxophone as well as his familiar clarinet and the versions of 'Weary Blues', 'Tishomingo Blues' and 'None Of My Jelly Roll', the last of which has an unfettered vocal by Talbert, are not just obscure collector's items.

(*) George Lewis With Red Allen American Music AMCD 71 Lewis; Alvin Alcorn (t); Henry 'Red' Allen (t, v); Bill Matthews, Jim Robinson (tb); Lester Santiago (p); Lawrence Marrero (bj); Alcide 'Slow Drag' Pavageau (b); Paul Barbarin (d). 8/51.

It's very rare that anyone catches American Music out in an error, but the Alcide Marrero playing bass on these tracks has to be old Slow Drag Pavageau, who is listed for one session and garbled for the other. Nor would we accuse the label of short measure, but Allen fans should be aware that he appears on only five tracks, albeit five excellent ones. 'Hindustan' and the two versions of 'St James Infirmary' are up with the trumpeter's best recorded work, and if Lewis sounds a little shadowed, he makes up for it later (presumably) that same day with Alcorn. These are studio recordings, a little boxy but not unpleasantly so, and the quality of the music – other highlights include 'Bourbon Street Parade' and 'Who's Sorry Now', taped a fortnight later – more than makes up for any technical deficit.

[illegible]

(*) Jazz In The Classic New Orleans Tradition Original Jazz Classics OJC 1736 As above, except omit Allen; add Alton Purnell (p). 8/51–9/53.

This involves bandleader and drummer Paul Barbarin, a nearly exact New Orleans contemporary of Lewis and one of the great originals in the music. The band is familiar enough by now, and the ability to extract the maximum expression from the most minimal of settings has rarely been better documented than here, coupled to an above-average standard of recording. Heard side by side, Lewis and Barbarin underline many of the contradictions that underlay the revivalist movement. To a degree it was exploitative and naïve, as the blues boom of the '60s was to be, but it was also a living source, and few were as angrily in thrall to its political dimensions as Barbarin. Utterly obsessed, where Lewis was innocently untroubled, about the status of black musicians, Barbarin dropped dead on his first appearance at the hitherto segregated Proteus parade; Lewis beat him to the farm by a mere two months.

(*) The George Lewis Ragtime Band Of New Orleans: The Oxford Series – Volumes 1–14 American Music AMCD 21–34 As above, except omit Walters, Barbarin; add Avery 'Kid' Howard (t). 52, 53, 55.
 Bands, Trios, & Quintets American Music AMCD 41 As above; some additional personnel. 53, 54, 55.
In 1952, Lewis was recorded by the American Folklore Group of the English department at Miami University, an institution rather confusingly situated in Oxford, Ohio. The Oxford Series CDs are well-mastered and sound amazingly fresh for recordings five decades old. Lewis made a studio recording of seven quite extended pieces, including a long 'Tin Roof Blues' (on which Humphrey makes his presence felt) and a rousing 'Saint' to finish. The subsequent concert discs are better still, with excellent performances of Lewis staples like 'Over The Waves', 'Darktown Strutters' Ball' and 'Careless Love', closing with a vintage 'Sheikh Of Araby'. It seems unlikely that anyone other than stoneground experts will want to have the later rehearsal and party volumes, though these contain some of the most unfettered playing in the set. The concert of 21 March on Volumes 7 and 8 is superior to that of the day before only because the band now sounds played in and relaxed. Lewis is soloing well and Howard plays with great dexterity on 'Glad When You're Dead, You Rascal You'. The sound may also be a shade brighter in places, though that is probably a function of Lewis lifting his enunciation to compensate for a generally more buoyant ensemble.

By 1955 Lewis's Ohio stopovers had acquired an almost hysterical following. There is certainly no sign of tiredness, either in the formula or in the playing, but larger projects beckoned and, over succeeding years, Lewis was to become an international superstar, albeit a modest and occasionally bewildered one. The later volume is the better of the pair, albeit dominated by Watkins's vocals. Purely as an experiment, it's fascinating to listen to this material continuously from start to finish. There are literally dozens of tiny changes of inflexion and emphasis (countless fluffs and missed cues, too, which might be overlooked on a more casual listen), but also a growing sense that the presumed spontaneity and freshness of this music are actually much less than its advocates might like to think. Lewis is prone to fall back on a set of stock phrases (though Howard is not) and there are very few real surprises. A double-CD of the very best performances would be welcome.

* Jazz Funeral In New Orleans
Tradition 1049 As above, except add Monette Moore (v). 10/53.
A classic New Orleans record and one of the best albums in Lewis's enormous catalogue, Jazz Funeral should be a building block in any decent jazz library. It's not entirely clear why the record bears this rather mournful title, since most of the music is decidedly upbeat and only the slow version of 'Just A Closer Walk With Thee' would be associated with a burial. What's exceptional about this album is that everyone seems to be in top form, with sparkling solos right through the band and tight, well-marshalled ensembles. The opening 'Ice Cream' sets things off in great style. 'Doctor Jazz' and 'When The Saints Go Marching In' are exemplary. George's clarinet is clearly pitched and in tune with everyone else, which isn't always the case at this vintage.

 Second Bakersfield Concert 1954 Storyville 6034 Lewis; Avery 'Kid' Howard (t, v); Jim Robinson (tb); Alton Purnell (p, v); Alcide 'Slow Drag' Pavageau (b); Joe Watkins (d, v). 2/54.
The repertoire is by now as familiar as the personnel, which bears repeating here. It remains unclear why some Lewis records are so fetishized, almost as if they were rare survivals from a bygone age. This, at least, captures a band in full flight and song, and George himself sounds in good shape. Highlights are 'Tin Roof Blues' and 'World Is Waiting For The Sunrise'.

* The Beverley Caverns Sessions / () Jazz At Vespers / () Jazz At Ohio Union Good Time Jazz GTCD 12058 / Original Jazz Classics OJC 1721 / Storyville STCD 6020/1 2CD As above. 5/53; 2/54; 3/54.
 Sounds Of New Orleans: Volume 7 Storyville SLP 6014 As above, except add Lizzie Miles (v). 12/53–1/54.
 George Lewis Of New Orleans Original Jazz Classics OJC 1739 As above, except omit Miles; add Baby Dodds (d); Sister Berenice Phillips (v). N.D.
 The Fabulous George Lewis Band: Kentucky 1955 American Music AMCD 39 As above, except omit Dodds, Phillips. 55.
 Doctor Jazz Good Time Jazz GTCD 12062-2 As above, except add Monette Moore (v). 5 & 10/53.
 George Lewis In Stockholm, 1959 Dragon DRCD 221 Lewis; Avery 'Kid' Howard (t); Jim Robinson (tb); Joe Robichaux (p); Alcide 'Slow Drag' Pavageau (b); Joe Watkins (d). 2/59.
The UK tours were homely, but those in Scandinavia and Japan had the appearance of an imperial progress. What this essentially modest man could have made of the adulation is anyone's guess. It certainly didn't always have a positive effect on his playing. Lewis seemed to strain for volume in larger halls, and there are occasions on the otherwise excellent Stockholm disc where he squeaks and overblows.

Lewis's studied primitivism and simplicity of tone led some to think of him as a primitive too. Many of these live discs, rough as they are, underline the extraordinary variety and depth of his playing, that disconcerting ability to invest almost subliminal changes of emphasis or diction with a disproportionate significance. The Beverley Caverns record, made in Hollywood, is a good case in point. A now familiar band, hardly a surprise in the set-list, and yet something to listen to and ponder in virtually every chorus. This is easily the most desirable of all the later sessions, and it should be a high priority for anyone who wants to get to grips with Lewis and his music.

The Kentucky set has poor sound, but the playing is up to scratch and Lewis plays nice solos on 'Wabash Blues' and 'Linger Awhile'.

 George Lewis And His New Orleans Stompers Blue Note 7243 8 21261 2 As above, except omit Robichaux; add George Guesnon (bj). 4/55.
Richly textured and thoroughly authentic traditional jazz from a group who could and often did play this material in their sleep. Lewis himself is most impressive on 'Gettysburg March', 'See See Rider' and 'High Society', where the pace and pitching suit his still raw technique. A bywater in Lewis's recorded output, attractive enough in its way, but not a classic.

 Famous Manchester Free Trade Hall Concert – 1957 – Rehearsal/First Half /  ... Second Half 504 Records 50 / 51 Lewis; Ken Colyer (c); Mac Duncan (tb); Ian Wheeler (cl); John Bastable (bj); Ron Ward (b); Colin Bowden (d, wbd). 57.
 1959 – Live In Germany 504 Records 56 As above, except add Ray Foxley (p). 3/59.

 In Concert 1959 – Manchester Free Trade Hall – Opening House /  … Second House 504 Records 58/ 59 As above, except omit Foxley; add Joe Robichaux (p on Opening House only); Pete Deuchar (bj on Second only). 1/59.

Nothing cemented Ken Colyer's reputation as the most authentic of all the British revivalists than these stellar meetings with the great Lewis. The sound is cavernous despite CEDAR remastering and there are some shaky passages on the 1957 set, but the rehearsal tape is a great asset and the playing is fine, but for one or two lapses of articulation.

The 1959 date with the Ragtimers was a triumphant return and from the beginning of 'Basin Street Blues' it's clear that the Americans are happy to rest on their laurels and soak up the applause, even for passages which are less than accurate, as during 'Bucket's Got A Hole In It'. These are treasured items for British collectors and jazz patriots, even if they don't always show him at his best; he's out of tune more than once.

 The Spirit Of New Orleans: Volume 1 Music Mecca CD 1014 Lewis; Avery 'Kid' Howard (t); Jim Robinson (tb); Charlie Hamilton (p); Emanuel Sayles (bj); Alcide 'Slow Drag' Pavageau (b); Joe Watkins (d). 61.

* Endless The Trek, Endless The Search American Music AMCD 59 Lewis; Kid Thomas (t); Jim Robinson (tb); George Guesnon (bj); John Joseph (b); Cie Frazier (d). 8–9/62.

(*) George Lewis In Japan: Volume 1 /  … Volume 2 GHB BCD 14 / 15 Lewis; Punch Miller (t); Louis Nelson (tb); Joe Robichaux (p); Emanuel Sayles (bj); John Joseph (b); Joe Watkins (d). 63.

 George Lewis And The Barry Martyn Band GHB BCD 37 Lewis; Cuff Bilett (t); Pete Dyer (tb); Graham Paterson (p); John Coles (bj); Terry Knight (b); Barry Martyn (d). 3/65.

 Classic New Orleans Jazz: Volume 1 Biograph BCD 127 Lewis; George Blod (t); Jay Brackett (tb); J. R. Smith (tba); Ronnie Bill (bj); Alex Bigard (d). 4/65.

 George Lewis With Ken Colyer's Jazzmen Lake LACD 27 Lewis; Ken Colyer (t, v); Geoff Cole (tb); Tony Pyke (cl); Johnny Bastable (bj); Bill Cole (b); Ryan Hetherington (d). 9/66.

In later life, Lewis was a living link back to the prehistory of the music. He turned up in such unlikely places as the White Horse Inn, Willesden, and The Dancing Slipper, Nottingham, both occasions documented on the GHB set, above.

Endless The Trek, Endless The Search rounds out a session recorded by Ken Mills for Icon. The two new tracks, 'Tiger Rag' and 'Icon Blues', are given pride of place at the front of the CD, rather than tacked on at the end, and it's difficult to see why they were rejected first time out. This date saw Lewis working with banjoist Guesnon's 'authentic' New Orleans band, whatever that means by this stage. The presence of Kid Thomas is a virtual guarantee of unvarnished realism, and Lewis himself plays with a raw and unpolished vigour. The legendary Josiah 'Cie' Frazier occupies the drum chair with his usual poise and confidence, and the sound is very good indeed.

In the autumn of 1963 the Lewis band played more than 100 concerts during an extended tour of Japan, arriving to a rapturous welcome in August, and leaving on the same flight as the Japanese prime minister, who was travelling to the USA for the funeral of John F. Kennedy. Most of the concerts seem to have been in Osaka. Lewis is in excellent form, and only Punch Miller sounds jaded and slow-fingered, though his vocal on 'Sister Kate' (Volume 1) is characteristically vital. More material from the tour is in circulation and should be sampled as and when it becomes available. Lewis, who was in his early 60s by this stage, made little or no attempt to leave hotel rooms, preferring to nap and prepare for these long, carefully staged events. In contrast to the Oxford, Ohio, sessions, these are pure showbiz, but they are no less attractive for that.

His appearance with Colyer's Jazzmen in Manchester must have been like the Road to Emmaus for these very purist believers and their fans. Clubs and concert halls in the British midlands and north were the last bastions of strict constructionism while players back in New Orleans were beginning to tinker with rock'n'roll. Are occasional bent notes the result of carelessness or a gesture of experiment from a seemingly conservative man whose putative conservatism was what made him famous? Were rephrased licks the result of new ideas or, as appears to be the case on 'Walk Through The Streets Of The City' at Beverley Caverns, a combination of faulty memory and fast reflexes? The Times-Picayune in his native city became inclined to harshness about Lewis's technical shortcomings in succeeding years, and there is no doubt that constant performance of a severely limited repertoire seriously overstretched his abilities. The life, in a curious way, was always more interesting than the music. Lewis's residency at the Hangover Club in San Francisco was the high-water mark of revivalism, and the many recordings from this period have a joyous optimism which it is hard not to like.

 Reunion With Don Ewell Delmark DE 220 Lewis; Jim Robinson (tb); Don Ewell (p); Cie Frazier (d). 6/66.

 A Portrait Of George Lewis Lake LACD 50 As above, except add Lars Edegran (p); Chester Zardis (b); Alex Bigard (d). 3 & 6/66.

Both discs contain material from a June 1966 high school gym in Salisbury, North Carolina. There's no overlap, so plenty of motivation to buy the Lake disc as well, which includes eight tracks recorded with Robinson at Preservation Hall in March of the same year. These are pretty standard fare for this vintage and may well be known from earlier Center and Biograph releases; these same labels also covered the Salisbury gig. The unacknowledged star of this late session is drummer Frazier, who died in 1985 and took with him at least some of the secrets of New Orleans drumming. At this age, he wasn't capable of the same flexibility as in his under-documented youth, and he has cut back on some of the elements of sheer noise (untuned woodblocks) which were part of his sound. Ewell is interesting in that he incorporated large elements of Harlem stride into the Morton-influenced New Orleans style that was his basic staple. The hybrid approach is evident on tracks like 'Yes, Yes, In Your Eyes', one of four numbers here for which alternatives have been included on this CD reissue. It's further testimony to the sheer mileage Lewis put in over the decade.

Also, in brief:

 Jazz Band Ball Good Time Jazz GTCD 12005. 6/50.

Not strictly a Lewis record, but featuring him in bands run by Turk Murphy and Kid Ory (tb) and Pete Daily (c), so a good snapshot of the period.

 At The Municipal Auditorium, Congo Square American Music AMCD 47. 9/51, 9/52.

Recorded in New Orleans despite one recent critic's exuberant assumption that Lewis had taken the music 'back to Africa'; the music's comme il faut for this period.

 Hello, Central, Give Me Doctor Jazz / (*) Ice Cream Delmark DE 201 / 202. 6/53.

Delmark's admirable commitment to American roots music seems to have overcome quality control on this occasion.

() With Papa Bue's Viking Jazz Band Storyville STCD 6018. 3/59.
Tired and undistinguished, with Lewis consistently outplayed by the Norsemen.

 Endless The Trek, Endless The Search American Music AMCD 59. 8 & 9/62.
George Guesnon (p) stood in for Alton Purnell from the mid-'50s. Here's Lewis with Guesnon's New Orleans Band; slightly unfamiliar sound.

(*) Plays Hymns Milneburg 1. 3 & 11/64.
Sacred music represented a large proportion of Lewis's repertoire, so this was a perfectly logical concept and a fine album.

George E. Lewis (born 1952)

TROMBONES, SOUSAPHONE, TUBA, COMPUTER

The Chicagoan taught himself improvisation while still in his early teens by transcribing Lester Young solos for trombone. He later studied formally at Yale, but his real musical education was with the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians, whose ethos and aesthetics have remained with him. Lewis is technologically astute, but also profoundly subversive, making music on computer, but also dismantling his horn to get at its spectral sound-colours.

(*) Solo Trombone Album Sackville SKCD3-3012 Lewis (tb solo). 11/76.
 Shadowgraph, 5 (Sextet) Black Saint 120016 Lewis; Roscoe Mitchell (as, ss, bs, cassette recorder); Douglas Ewart (cl, bcl, sno, f, bsn, cassette recorder, perc); Muhal Richard Abrams, Anthony Davis (p); Leroy Jenkins (vn, vla); Abdul Wadud (clo). 77.
♛  Homage To Charles Parker Black Saint 120029 As above, except add Anthony Davis (p); Richard Teitelbaum (syn). 79.
It is significant that, as a trombonist growing up in a period marked by the dominance of the saxophone, George E. Lewis should have taken saxophone-players as his primary models. His rather emotional legato is reminiscent of both Lester Young and virtually all the evolutionary stages of John Coltrane's style. Lewis habitually plays either with intense and surprisingly gentle lyricism or with a deconstructive fury that has led him to dismantle his trombone in mid-performance, producing non-tempered and abstract tones on mouthpiece and slide. He has also taken a close interest in electronics, using computers with increasing technical assurance to provide backgrounds and to create a much-needed dialectical tension in improvised performances.

Lewis's discography as leader is scandalously thin, but the quality is very high indeed. The solo album is a fairly tough listen in places, but it establishes Lewis's deconstructionist approach with a vengeance and the long opening 'Toneburst (Pieces For Three Trombones Simultaneously)' already shows his willingness to embrace technology in the interests of music, something that came through ever more strongly with his use of computers later. Shadowgraph and the duos with Ewart are characteristic of the free abstract jazz that emerged out of AACM's explorations in the '60s and early '70s. 'Monads' is almost a philosophical primer for free players, an oblique and sometimes violent outburst of sound in which ideas fly around almost too fast to be absorbed. One wonders how it would ever have been possible to assimilate this music in live performance. 'Triple Slow Mix' is a more spacious and accommodating piece, with Abrams and Davis (in opposite channels) suggesting different points of focus for Lewis's gloriously flatulent sousaphone. 'Cycle' recalls the duos, but the real meat of the record is the title-track. Though the sonic landscape is much more exotic, 'Shadowgraph' is identifiably in the line of one of Ellington's noise pieces. The main soloists are Mitchell and Abrams, with Lewis himself eschewing his synths in favour of an exotic selection of brasses, including Wagner tuba.

Homage To Charles Parker represents a further triumphant extension and synthesis of the same basic language premisses, combining improvisation with predetermined structures and reintroducing a strong programmatic element to abstract music. 'Blues' consists of four independent diatonic 'choruses' of absolute simplicity which are played in shifting configurations by the four musicians. Despite the fact that there are no conventional resolutions and no predictable coincidence of material, the piece evokes order as much as freedom. Although none of the material conforms to the blues, its 'feel' is unmistakable and authentic. If 'Blues' is a triumphant extension of the black tradition in music, 'Homage To Charles Parker' concerns itself intimately with the saxophonist's putative afterlife and musical real-presence. There is a long opening section on electronics, synthesizers and cymbals which evokes Parker's 'reality'. It gradually yields place to a series of apparently discontinuous solos on saxophone, piano and finally with no ensemble backing beyond the synthesizer sounds, which recast and project Parker's life and language. There are no explicit bebop references and, indeed, the piece seems to serve as a healing response to the fractures that separated bop from the earlier history of black American music, of which it was also the apotheosis. The music is calm and almost stately, occasionally suggesting a chorale. Lewis's concluding statements are both unbearably plangent and forcefully intelligent. In their refusal of tragedy, they also have to be seen as political statements. This is an essential modern record.

(*) Voyager Avant AVAN 014 Lewis; Roscoe Mitchell (ss, elec). 93.
A suite which lasts nearly three quarters of an hour and features saxophones and trombone improvising in front of a highly responsive computer-generated score that reflects Lewis's interest in real-time explorations of new softwares. It's an intensely absorbing experience, utterly musical and indicative of directions Lewis was to take over the following decade, when his interest in electronics, composition and the non-problem of the compo/impro dichotomy became one of the most fascinating discourses in the music.

 Endless Shout Tzadik TZ 7054 Lewis; John Korsrud, Bill Clark (t); Ralph Eppel, Rod Murray (tb); Brad Muirhead (btb, tba); Mark Nodwell (ss); Saul Berson, Coat Cooke (as, f); Paul Cram, Graham Ord (ts); Vinny Golia (bs, picc); Paul Plimley, Sarah Cahill (p); Ron Samworth (g); Peggy Lee (clo); Paul Blaney, Clyde Reed (b); Dylan van der Schyff (d); Steven Schick (perc); Quincy Troupe, Kate Hammett-Vaughan (v). 9/95–11/97.
A beautifully diverse programme of Lewis's work, almost a sampler of his range of interests and achievements, from trombone–computer interactivity to a full-scale performance of one of the 'Shadowgraph' pieces.The title-piece is a four-part piano work, dedicated to Richard Abrams, and a homage to the stride and boogie masters – seeking to 'reinterpret blues utterance in the light of my own experience'. Sarah Cahill gives an eloquent performance. 'North Star Boogaloo' fragments and reshapes a Quincy Troupe poem around a notated percussion part – deft, humorous, vibrant. But the most imposing pieces are a 1997 revision of 'Shadowgraph 4', where Lewis conducts the NOW Orchestra and enables them to pack a tremendous amount into an 11-minute rendition, and a new version of 'Voyager', where the composer-trombonist and his technology explore 'one potential outcome between the improviser and the computer'. A memorable collection altogether.

* Sequel Intakt CD 111 Lewis; Jeff Parker (g); Guillermo E. Brown (d, perc); Miya Masaoka (koto, elec, laptop); Kaffe Matthews (elec); DJ Mutamassik (turntables); Duo 48nord (laptop). 11/04.

Lewis's commitment to improvisation as a social process that draws on cutting-edge technology and makes no clear distinction between human and machine performance is heard to great effect on these remarkable performances, the first two of which are poignantly dedicated to Lester Bowie and Sun Ra. It isn't always possible to judge who or what is playing, but that is the essence of Lewis's method: it makes this music seem radical, egoless, but utterly approachable. Recorded in rehearsal, performance and at the Gare du Nord in Basel.

Also, in brief:

 Jila – Save! Mon – The Imaginary Suite Black Saint 120026. 78.

Duos with Jamaican-born Douglas Ewart on saxophone and 'Ewart flutes', paying tribute to his homeland.

 Conversations Incus CD 32. 11/97.

Bert Turetzky is less well-known than one of his pupils, Mark Dresser, but he's a formidable improviser and it's great to hear Lewis playing so much trombone.

John Lewis (1920–2001)

PIANO

Born in Illinois, he joined the Dizzy Gillespie band in 1946 and became an important bop figure, working with numerous leaders until a stint with Milt Jackson in 1951 led to the formation of the Modern Jazz Quartet. Continued to explore classical and soundtrack music.

 West Coast East Coast Encounter Gambit 69209 Lewis; Dizzy Gillespie (t); Sonny Stitt (as); Bill Perkins (ts); Jim Hall, Skeeter Best (g); Percy Heath (b); Chico Hamilton, Charli Persip (d). 1–2/56.

(*) Afternoon In Paris Lone Hill Jazz LHJ 10233 Lewis; Barney Wilen (ts); Sacha Distel (g); Pierre Michelot, Percy Heath (b); Connie Kay, Kenny Clarke (d). 12/56–2/57.

* The John Lewis Piano / Jazz Piano International Collectables 6251 Lewis; Dick Katz, Derek Smith, René Urtreger (p); Barry Galbraith, Jim Hall (g); Percy Heath, Ralph Pena (b); Connie Kay, Al Levitt (d). 7/56–58.

(*) Improvised Meditations And Excursions / Eastern Exposure Collectables 6629 Lewis; Fred Kaz (p); George Duvivier, Percy Heath, Victor Sproles (b); Connie Kay, Roger Wanderscheid (d). 2/57–3/60.

* Golden Striker / Jazz Abstractions Collectables 6252 Lewis; Melvyn Broiles, Bernie Glow, Alan Kiger, Joe Wilder (t); Dick Hixson, David Baker (tb); Gunther Schuller, Albert Richman, Ray Alonge, John Barrows (frhn); Eric Dolphy (as, bcl, f); Ornette Coleman (as); Bill Evans (p); Eddie Costa (vib); Joe Hall (g); Harvey Phillips, Jay McAllister (tba); George Duvivier, Scott LaFaro, Alvin Brehm (b); Sticks Evans, Connie Kay (d); Contemporary String Quartet. 2–12/60.

(*) The Wonderful World Of Jazz Atlantic 90979-2 Lewis; Herb Pomeroy (t); Gunther Schuller (frhn); Eric Dolphy (as, f); Benny Golson, Paul Gonsalves (ts); Jimmy Giuffre (bs); Jim Hall (g); George Duvivier (b); Connie Kay (d). 7–9/60.

Lewis made occasional discs under his own name from the mid-'50s. Collectables have licensed a number of them. Piano was his 'solo' debut and sets out all his primary concerns in impeccable detail: the blues ('D & E'), the intrigue with the commedia dell'arte ('Harlequin'), the refracting of standards through personal sensibility ('Little Girl Blue'), the almost film score music ('The Bad And The Beautiful'). With a touch as individual as Basie's or Claude Thornhill's, and an ever more careful and considered phraseology, this is swing and bebop lyrically distilled. The slightly later Improvised Meditations And Excursions is a shade less personal, though even here Lewis makes some marvellous piano jazz out of 'Love Me' and 'Delauney's Dilemma'. The earlier set is coupled with Jazz Piano International, which features Dick Katz, Derek Smith and René Urtreger, the second with Fred Kaz's Eastern Exposure: minor albums, but nice bonuses.

Golden Striker indulges his baroque leanings with a set of tunes arranged for piano and a large brass ensemble: the tone-colours are delightful, and 'Piazza Navona' and the reworked 'Odds Against Tomorrow' are gravely beautiful. But the point of this disc is the reissued Jazz Abstractions. Lewis doesn't play on this set (he is credited as 'presenter') but it does offer Third Stream scores by Jim Hall and Gunther Schuller. Ornette Coleman is set to wail over the four minutes of 'Abstraction' for strings, and there are variations on Lewis's 'Django' and Monk's 'Criss Cross', as well as Hall's 'Piece For Guitar And Strings'. In the past the music was criticized as pretentious fusion, but any chance to hear Coleman, Dolphy and Scott LaFaro playing on the same sessions is precious.

The Wonderful World Of Jazz is another great one. It opens with a superb Gonsalves solo on a 15-minute 'Body And Soul' and then works through a short programme of jazz standards, including a new '2 Degrees East, 3 Degrees West'. 'The Stranger' is valued for Eric Dolphy's solo, and there's a long quartet version of 'If You Could See Me Now'; but the whole disc is thoughtful and reflecive.

Meanwhile, the Lone Hill Jazz/Gambit operation have put together two of their cut-and-paste productions. Sheer delight is Afternoon In Paris, recorded on two December days in 1956, with local lads Wilen, Distel – his most distinguished jazz appearance – and Michelot assisting Lewis, Heath and Kay (Clarke on three tunes). Lewis's title-tune is one of his most charming love-letters to the old world. Two trio tracks from The John Lewis Piano have also been added. The Gambit issue couples their Pacific Jazz release 2 Degrees East, 3 Degrees West with a date for Verve where Gillespie and Stitt jousted on various blues and standards, with Lewis in respectful attendance. The 'West Coast' music, with label stalwarts Perkins, Hall and Hamilton, is suitably sunny and engaging playing; the other date is just a rote blow.

* Evolution Atlantic 7567-83211-2 Lewis (p solo). 1/99.

Lewis was one of the last senior survivors of the bebop era, and this marvellous solo album underscores what an extraordinary figure he was in jazz for over 50 years. As a composer, he is mysteriously neglected when it comes to source material for other players, but perhaps only Lewis's Lewis really hits the mark. He revisits five of his own favourites, and each is an affectionate new look at an old friend: 'Django', for instance, is elegantly recast around a left-hand bass that sounds almost like a tango. 'Sweet Georgia Brown' and 'Cherokee' are sketches that suggest a summing-up of both swing and bebop. 'Afternoon In Paris' muses on his lifelong affinity with the old world. Moving yet wonderfully fresh and unaffected, this is a consummate recital by the master.

* Evolution II Atlantic 83313-2 Lewis; Howard Alden, Howard Collins (g); Marc Johnson, George Mraz (b); Lewis Nash (d). 00.
Hardly any less masterful, generous or absorbing, the second part of what sadly proved to be Lewis's farewell sessions is as fine as the first. Though he has support from other hands here, mostly this is all about what's going on at the piano – and that includes 'One! Of Parker's Moods', his final thoughts on the blues; 'That! Afternoon In Paris', a delightful revision of an old favourite; and another look at 'Django', the tango feel of the previous encounter here cleverly evolved into something else.

Also, in brief:

 Original Sin / Essence Collectables 6605. 3/61–10/62.
An orchestral ballet, and a showcase for Gary McFarland's innocent/sophisticated charts. Charming, but not essential.

 A Milanese Story / Animal Dance Collectables 6253. 1–7/62.
A brief film score, and an encounter with Albert Mangelsdorff (tb), on which Lewis definitely plays second fiddle.

 Mirjana Black & Blue 933-2. 7/78.
A Paris trio with George Duvivier (b), Oliver Jackson (d) and a guest spot for Christian Escoudé (g).

Meade Lux Lewis (1905–64)

PIANO, CELESTE, HARPSICHORD

The Chicagoan Lewis created a signature-piece in 'Honky Tonk Train Blues' and his teaming with Albert Ammons and Pete Johnson at the 1938 Spirituals To Swing concert at Carnegie Hall started a craze for boogie-woogie.

CORE COLLECTION

* Meade Lux Lewis 1927–1939
Classics 722 Lewis; Albert Ammons, Pete Johnson (p). 12/27–1/39.
Lewis encapsulated his contribution to jazz in his first three minutes as a soloist with his 1927 Paramount record of 'Honky Tonk Train Blues'. He recorded it again at his second session, and again at his fourth. All three are on this CD, along with 15 other variations on the blues and boogie-woogie. His signature-piece remains a marvellous evocation of a locomotive rhythm, perfectly balanced through all its variations, and if he became tired of it his listeners never did, though they overlooked equally good music. His 1936 session for Decca includes two extraordinary pieces on celeste, 'I'm In The Mood For Love' and 'Celeste Blues', and his 1939 session for Blue Note – which supplied the first Blue Note issue, 'Melancholy' and 'Solitude' – opens with a five-part investigation of 'The Blues', all rejected at the time but a remarkable sequence, at least as personal and imaginative as his train pieces. The sound on the CD is poor, but the music is marvellous.

(*) Meade Lux Lewis 1939–1941 Classics 743 Lewis; J. C. Higginbotham (tb); Albert Ammons (p); Teddy Bunn (g); Johnny Williams (b); Big Sid Catlett (d). 1/39–9/41.
 Meade Lux Lewis 1941–1944 Classics 841 Lewis (p, cel, hpd solo). 4/41–8/44.
 Meade Lux Lewis 1946-1954 Classics 1401 Lewis; Israel Crosby (b); Frank Williams, Louie Bellson (d). 2/46–6/54.
(*) The Blues Piano Artistry Of Meade Lux Lewis Original Jazz Classics OJC 1759 Lewis (p solo). 11/61.
There's a modest decline on Classics 743: the 1940 version of 'Honky Tonk Train Blues' goes off at a faintly ludicrous tempo, and some of Lewis's boogie pieces end up as all the same. But three duets with Ammons and the rest of the Blue Note session tracks offer rewards, while the 1939 Solo Art session is mostly at a slow tempo and spotlights Lewis the bluesman to stunning effect.

That disc ends on two nutty harpsichord solos, and the next one starts with the other two from the same session. A single V-Disc finds Lewis playing piano and celeste simultaneously on 'Doll House Boogie' before nine tracks cut at a date for the Asch label. Again, the fast pieces suggest a sinking into cliché, but there are still some startling things, notably 'Denapas Parade' and above all the previously rejected 'Special No. One', with its melody carried in the left hand. There is yet another 'Honky Tonk Train', taken at a farcical pace. He must have been fed up with it.

Classics 1401 begins with four pieces from a JATP concert, ending in yet another overheated 'Honky Tonk'. Next are the nine titles he made with Crosby and Williams for Atlantic in 1954, and six with Bellson from a 1954 date for Granz. The Atlantic session has him paying homage to other blues and boogie masters by covering their pieces, and he does it capably enough, especially on the blues numbers. But the later date finds him strangely distracted, and misfingering.

His 1961 Riverside session wasn't a milestone or a major rediscovery. Lewis had clearly grown tired of his own work over the years, and this group of remakes is done professionally, without much joy.

Also, in brief:

 Gliding From Glendale To Chicago /  Barrel House Piano
Jasmine JASCD417 2CD / 2536. N.D.
Two good selections, with good notes by the erudite Chas Hall.

Ramsey Lewis (born 1935)

PIANO, KEYBOARDS

Like George Benson, Lewis's genuine jazz gift has been periodically eclipsed by commercial success. The Chicagoan has a deft and understated touch at the keyboard.

 Down To Earth Verve 538329-2 Lewis; Eldee Young (b); Red Holt (d). 58.
(*) Sound Of Christmas Verve 986277-8 As above, except add strings, conducted by Abe Meltzer. 60–61.
() In Person, 1960–1967 / () The In Crowd Chess 051 814 2 2CD / CHD 9185 As above, except add Cleveland Eaton (b); Maurice White (d). 60–67; 5/65.
Ramsey's million-seller, The In Crowd, is a remarkable record that still repays listening. Unfortunately, most of his latter-day material is drab, formulaic funk, sounding like a Herbie Hancock project gone disastrously wrong. These early records are now hard to place when heard out of context. There is already more than a hint of the smoothed-out funk of later years, and a tendency to build in big show-stopping tunes, like the Spartacus theme, or else current pop ('Hang On Sloopy'); apart from the characteristic attack, it might be Ahmad Jamal. Lewis's happy-clappy soul-jazz is less harmonically resonant, but the connection is there.

The de rigueur Christmas album is perfectly jolly, though there's too much of the strings, but these old tunes are standards in excelsis.

The gospel roots are most clearly heard on the well-named Down To Earth. 'Sometimes I Feel Like A Motherless Child' is played with genuine feeling, and there are moments on the live discs when pomp and 'style' are put aside to permit some unalloyed improvisation. 'Django' is splendid and 'Come Sunday', with its unexpected harmonic shifts, could hardly be bettered.

(*) Another Voyage Verve 986257-4 Lewis; Cleveland Eaton (b); Maurice White (d). 5/69.
A considerable chart success at the time and still very listenable on this 2004 reissue. 'If You've Got It, Flaunt It' bookends the set, and there are terrific versions of Eddie Harris's 'Bold And Black' and Stevie Wonder's 'My Cherie Amour'. Maiden Voyage is still deleted, so the title doesn't really make sense.

 Classic Encounter Columbia MK 42661 Lewis; Bill Dickens (b); Frank Donaldson (d); Philharmonia Orchestra. 88.
Easy to dismiss as mere mood-music, this orchestral 'encounter' is slightly edgier and less formulaic than expected. James Mack's orchestral arrangements are full and unctuous, but interesting things start to happen when orchestra and trio get together. A version of the 17th-century William Byrd's 'Earl of Salisbury Pavan' is an astonishing tour de force and almost sounds like some lost rarity of Latin jazz. A version of Johnny Mandel's 'Time For Love' is very strong, as is 'Spiritual', on which Ramsey finally lets loose his cool, gospelly sound.

 Meant To Be Narada 50774 Lewis; Larry Gray (b); Ernie Adams (d); Nancy Wilson (v). 01.
(*) Simple Pleasures Narada 80487 Lewis; Orbert Davis (t); Kirk Tracy (tb); Steve Eisen (ts, f); Llew Matthews (ky); Henry Johnson (g); Larry Gray (b); Joyce Leon Jr (d); Alejo Poveda (perc); Nancy Wilson (v). 7/03.
 Time Flies Narada 76895 Lewis; Larry Gray (b); Leon Joyce Jr (d, perc); Chicago Gospel Voices. 04.
(*) With One Voice Narada As above, except add Sanctuary Choir of J. W. James Memorial A.M.E. Church. 5 & 6/05.
Ramsey and Nancy had recorded together back in the mid-'80s, an album called Two Of Us, and met again at the Ravinia Festival, which Lewis directs. These two sets pick up where that left off. Apparently, the session for Meant To Be was to have been recorded on September 11. Whatever impact the events of that day had on the postponed session, it emerges as slick and as unproblematic as ever.

Van Morrison's 'Moondance' is a jazz favourite and in no way strains the credibility of the set. Blossom Dearie's 'Peel Me A Grape' is a more unexpected inclusion but it's over quickly. The Hague–Sherman 'Did I Ever Really Live' is a surprise, rarely covered and done here with a melting melancholy, but for the most part this is a rather forgettable set, lacking in substance and too dependent on unfamiliar material, including four of Lewis's own compositions; he may like to believe they are repertory pieces, but they fall some way short of that.

The second album isn't nearly as good. Wilson's approach to the pop idiom of Debarge's 'All This Love' shows her years. The slower tunes are more satisfactory: 'Give Me Something Real' and an unusual reading of 'God Bless The Child' are the tracks to savour. Llew Matthews's horn arrangements are intrusive and frankly dull.

Time Flies is frankly nostalgic, or opportunistic, with new versions of both 'The In Crowd' and 'Wade In The Water', arranged by Ramsey's son Frayne. There's an interesting opening track, an arrangement of the Allegretto from Brahms's Third Symphony, but not much else strikes one as particularly adventurous. Lewis's sister is a pastor, and her church choir is featured on With One Voice, which takes Ramsey back to his gospel roots. It sounds contrived and unspontaneous, as was perhaps inevitable, but the singing is uplifting and the group performs well.

Also, in brief:

 Ramsey Lewis's Finest Hour Verve 543763. 56–67.
A generous introduction to Lewis's most familiar recordings – 'The In Crowd', 'Hi Heel Sneakers', 'Wade In The Water' – without breaking the bank.

(*) Upendo Ni Pamoja Collectables 6691. 72.
Originally for Columbia, and pretty much of its time. A version of Concierto de Aranjuez and the long title-track take up much of the space.

 Funky Serenity Collectables 6869. 73.
Produced by Teo Macero. Includes a cover of the Moody Blues' smoocher 'Nights In White Satin', but redeemed by an upbeat 'Betcha By Golly Wow!'.

(*) Appassionata Narada 47996. 99.
A partial return to form, but there's too much showbiz in these classical covers.

Ted Lewis (1890–1971)

CLARINET, VOICE, BANDLEADER

A vaudevillian who broke into jazz when he began playing clarinet with Earl Fuller's Famous Jazz Band in 1917. He ran a hugely popular dance band throughout the '20s, with many important sidemen in its ranks. His own clarinet-playing and singing, though, remained in the realm of vaudeville. He continued to tour almost until his death.

(*) The Jazzworthy Ted Lewis Retrieval RTR 79014 Lewis; Muggsy Spanier (c); Dave Klein, Manny Klein, Red Nichols (t); George Brunies (tb, kz); Harry Raderman, Sammy Blank (tb); Benny Goodman, Rod Cless (cl, as); Frank Teschemacher, Donald 'Slats' Long (cl, ts); Jimmy Dorsey (cl, as, bs); Hymie Wolfson (ts); Louis Martin (bs); Sol Klein, Sam Shapiro (vn); Fats Waller (p, v); Jack Aaronson (p); Tony Girardi (g); Jimmy Moore (b); Bob Escamilla, Harry Barth (tba); John Lucas, Rudy Van Gelder (d); The Four Dusty Travellers, The Bachelors (v). 8/29–7/33.
 Is Everybody Happy? Naxos 8.120770 Similar to above. 9/23–1/31.
The title of the Retrieval set will raise a smile among those who know Lewis's work; he is unfortunately remembered as much for Eddie Condon's remark – 'Lewis could make the clarinet talk, and usually it said "put me back in the case"' – as for his merits as bandleader. The hammiest of showmen, he nevertheless ran a very fine dance band throughout the '20s and early '30s, and there are numerous great spots for the heavyweight names listed in the personnel – Spanier is magnificent on 'Lonesome Road' and 'Aunt Hagar's Blues'. This compilation cherrypicks the best of Lewis's later Columbia sessions, up until his final date in July 1933, the very rare (and surprisingly fine) 'Here You Come With Love'. The four tracks where Waller sat in with the band are here; George Brunies lets rip on kazoo on 'San'; and Ted himself is, for all his egregious mannerisms, not too hard to take when there's good music around him. The new Naxos set is a more characteristic selection of Lewis's music, and to that extent of less interest for jazz listeners, but there are still notable pieces such as his 1928 version of Jelly Roll Morton's 'Jungle Blues' and an amusingly depraved 'St Louis Blues'.

Vic Lewis (born 1919)

BANDLEADER, GUITAR

Played in London clubs in the '30s and worked in the USA before RAF service. Formed a Kenton-styled big band in the '40s, but later moved into management, though he continued to record with famous names.

 New York Jazzmen And Jam Session Upbeat Jazz URCD192 Lewis, Bobby Hackett (c, g); Billy Jones, Jake Koven (t); George Chisholm, Brad Gowans (tb); Bernie Billings, Joe Gudice (ts); Ernie Caceres (bs); Johnny Mince, Pee Wee Russell (cl); Dave Bowman, Dick Katz (p); Eddie Condon (g); Charlie Short (b); Jack Parnell (d); Zutty Singleton (d, v); Josie Carole (v). 10/38, 2/44.

() Singin' The Blues Upbeat URCD 163 Lewis; Billy Riddick (t, mel); Laddie Busby (tb); Ronnie Chamberlain (ss, as); Derek Hawkins, Cliff Townsend (as, cl); Dick Katz (p); Charlie Short, Lou Nussbaum, Bert Howard (b); Jack Parnell (d). 2/44–6/45.

Vic Lewis is one of the great fixers of modern music. In the '60s, he was involved in the company out of which Brian Epstein managed the Beatles and Cilla Black, so it's no surprise to find him a prime mover in 'the first time a British jazzman recorded with American musicians in an informal setting'.

Rejecting the family jewellery firm, Vic took the Queen Mary Stateside and immediately started sitting in on his favoured four-string guitar every chance he got. Taped privately at the Baldwin company's New York studio, the 5 October session is a showcase for the Chicagoans Vic so much admired. His idol Condon was to become a good friend, but the real star of the session is Hackett's lyrical trumpet; its opening statement on 'New York Blues' is as clear and open-hearted as anything he ever did. The next track is more of an oddity, with Bobby switching to Vic's guitar for 'Hackett Picking Blues', vocal by Singleton, whose cowbell accents are another delightful aspect of the date. Marsala breezed in late, but makes his tentative mark on 'Sugar' and a more substantial contribution to 'Baby, Won't You Please Come Home' (sung by Vic) and 'Keep Smiling at Trouble'.

Vic was in Texas for the next couple of weeks, but when he got back from his godmother's, he brokered another session, this time with saxophones and the peerless Pee Wee Russell on clarinet. His solo on 'Basin Street Blues' is a brilliant piece of harmonic sleight of hand. Hackett is in Bix mode throughout, sharper and more plangent than a fortnight before. Condon's laconic introduction – 'Tally ho!' – to a parody of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band's 'Tiger Rag' suggests that the hooch Vic brought along to the session might already have been sampled, and 'Leader's Headache Blues' implies it was just one of several in Vic's luggage.

Dave Bennett's meticulous remastering has restored the sessions' freshness and spontaneity. 'Early Rising Blues' was badly degraded and is included only as a footnote, alongside a brief test recording of 'Hackett Picking Blues'.

The 1944 dates were made by co-leaders Vic and Jack Parnell, who are also featured on Upbeat's Singin' The Blues. The special guests in wartime London were Johnny Mince and three fellow Americans lured from the morale-boosting This Is The Army at the Palladium. The clarinettist's 'Johnny Idea' is a high-point of a delightful session, though Gudice's solo on 'Ain't Misbehavin'' is also wonderful. Slight as his contribution is by comparison, the date is also a reminder of just how great a player dear old George Chisholm was, lithe and mellow by turns. The Scotsman's ensemble work is pitch-perfect and his solo fills full of meat and matter.

 Mulligan's Music / Progressive Jazz Vocalion CDLF 8103 Vic Lewis Orchestra. 54–55.

These were the sessions by which Lewis made aspects of Gerry Mulligan's and, on the second set, Stan Kenton's music popular in Britain. They're part of an ambitious reissue of Lewis material on the Vocalion imprint. Tubby Hayes is the obvious star turn on these former Decca recordings but it's the writing and Mulligan's own original arrangements which are impressive and make the music worthwhile.

 Tea Break / Back Again / Jazz From Two Sides Vocalion CDLF 8128 Vic Lewis Orchestra. 59, 84, 85.

A much bigger chronological spread here, but again the ensemble is a virtual who's who of British jazz over two generations, and the playing and arrangements are crisp and to the point, with some fine soloing.

 Shake Down The Stars /  Me & You! /  The Golden Years Candid CCD79526 / 79739 / 79754 Andy Martin (tb); Bob Cooper (ts); Bill Perkins (ts, bs, ss, cl, f); Mike Lang (p); Joe DiBartolo (b); Paul Kreibich (d). 4/92, 93, 94.

 A Celebration Of West Coast Jazz Candid CCD 7971/2 Steve Huffstetter (t, flhn); Andy Martin, Charlie Lopez, Alex Eyles, Bob McCheskie (tb); Don Shelton (as, cl, picc, f); Bill Perkins (f, cl, as, ts, bs); Bob Cooper (ts, cl, f); Bob Efford (bs, ob, ts, cl); Jack Nimitz (bs, bcl); Clare Fischer, Christian Jacob, Frank Strazzeri (p); John Leitham, Tom Worthington (b); Paul Kreibich, Bob Leatherbarrow (d); Sue Raney (v). 4/93, 2/94.

 With Love To Gerry Sea Breeze 3051 Bob Summers (t); Andy Martin, Bob McChesney (tb); Christian Jacob (p); Trey Henry (b); Ray Brinker (d). 95.

Vic's comeback project was the West Coast All Stars. As always, his role on this project – beyond having his picture taken – is strictly backroom. Even arranging and co-production credits have to be regarded with some scepticism. He does, though, manage to persuade top-flight players to turn out and record for the same rates as session-men, which implies a gift of the gab if nothing else.

Shake Down The Stars is attributed to Lewis's favourite songwriter, Jimmy Van Heusen. Among the tracks: 'But Beautiful', 'Here's That Rainy Day', the warhorse 'Polka Dots and Moonbeams', 'I Thought About You' and the title-track. Lewis had himself once turned to trombone, so featuring Martin on every track except 'I'll Only Miss Her' (a welcome outing for the stalwart Cooper) smacks of surrogacy or wishful thinking. Martin has a nice old-fashioned sound and isn't troubled by too many fancy ideas.

Celebration marked Lewis's own 75th birthday. The box contains two sessions, a year apart. Given that the band on the very first All Stars date included Shorty Rogers, Bud Shank, Laurindo Almeida, Victor Feldman and Shelly Manne, it might be thought that we have drifted into a Silver Age. The silvery quality of Perkins's flute-playing only serves to underline that. Everything is bright and polished, very clean-edged and uninvolving. Martin's solos are increasingly routine, and only Perkins continues to put in some emotion. Bob Summers has a prominent feature on 'Go Home', one of the strongest tracks on the Mulligan tribute – he's in the unusual position of being partnered by two trombones and no saxophones – which features arrangements by Holman, Brookmeyer and Albam, and includes a lovely first recording of Jeru's 'I Heard The Shadows Dancing'.

Also, in brief:

 Colours Vocalion CDLF 8112. 77.
With the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra. Includes 'Russian Suite' and 'Romance For Violin'.

 Play Bill Holman Candid CCD 79535. 8/89, 3/93.
Messy and offhand. Dudley Moore (p) played better solos in the middle of comedy programmes, but at least he sounds as if he's enjoying himself.

Victor Lewis

DRUMS

His parents were touring musicians; he has the same nomadic adaptability.

 Family Portrait Audioquest 1010 Lewis; John Stubblefield (ss, ts); Eduardo Simon (p); Cecil McBee (b); Don Alias, Jumma Santos (perc); Pamela Watson, Bobby Watson, Yvonne Hatchet, Shani Phillpotts, Michael Moses, Melissa Thomas, Thomas Raymond Cruz (v). 11–12/92.
(*) Know It Today, Know It Tomorrow Red RR 123255 2 Lewis; Eddie Henderson (t, flhn); Seamus Blake (ts); Eduardo Simon (p); Christian McBride (b). 4/92.
A few Lewis themes have turned up on other people's dates. These sessions give him more opportunity to show off his skills as a composer. The Audioquest album is obscured by an ambitious game-plan, with massed voices on three tracks and very dense percussion. Stubblefield is authoritative and Simon's Herbie Hancock touches make modest waves. The second record is less self-consciously striving and more detailed and meticulous. A showcase for the youthful Blake, who's very affecting on the mournful 'The Loss Of A Moment'. Lewis features himself on 'Swamp Dog' and that's about it. Henderson is an intermittent presence.

Bernd Lhotzky

PIANO

German traditionalist, well versed in swing and stride.

(*) Piano Portrait Arbors ARCD 19322 Lhotzky (p solo). 7/05.
Two dozen very familiar standards and jazz pieces, played on an immaculate piano by a conservatively minded German virtuoso won't warm the cockles of every heart, but Lhotzky's technique is superb, he has a real feeling for this music, and if it's acoustically pristine, wouldn't Willie 'The Lion' Smith and Fats Waller have given their right arms for that? Nothing is embellished and only 'I Cover The Waterfront' and 'Jitterbug Waltz' reach four minutes. But it's a great recital.

Steuart Liebig

BASS

Bass guitarist based in California and recording in the Nine Winds community of West Coast improvisers and free-bop players.

 Hommages Obliques Nine Winds NWCD 0158 Liebig; John Fumo (t, flhn); Jeff Gauthier (vn); Jeff McCutchen (d). 5/93.
(*) Lingua Obscura /  Pienso Oculto Nine Winds NWCD 0173 / 0191 As above, except Dan Morris (d) replaces McCutchen. 5/95, 2/97.
() No Train / () Antipodes Cadence CJR 1086 / 1129 Liebig; Vinny Golia (ss, bs); Billy Mintz (d). 8/97, 6/00.
(*) Quicksilver PfMentum 023 Liebig; Ellen Burr (f); Jeff Gauthier (vn); Jeanette Kangas (perc). 4/02.
(*) Pomegranate Cryptogramophone 109 Liebig; John Fumo (t); Scott Ray (tb); Tom Varner (frhn); Vinny Golia (reeds); Ellen Burr (f); Nels Cline (g); Mark Dresser (b); Alex Cline (d). 03.
Steuart Liebig plays what he calls ContraBassGuitars, getting a fluid, melodious sound that has air as well as boom. Quartetto Stig presents many opportunities for the musicians (Morris replaced the late McCutchen) to play within structure while still getting good improvising space. Liebig's compositions mix brief pieces with what are in some cases hugely long tracks, such as 'Commedia' and 'Overcoming Goingunder', which seem to touch on all sorts of stylistic bases. Lingua Obscura is the highlight: 'Plums And Apricots Falling From The Sky' shows what they can do in miniature, and the laments of 'Nef' and 'Coda', written for McCutchen, are played with great feeling.

No Train is more of a free-jazz blowout, with veterans Golia and Mintz digging in alongside. With Golia concentrating on baritone for much of the way, the music has a great rumbling feel that should blow away a few cobwebs as it goes. Fine and hard-headed virtuosity. There's a fine return match on Antipodes. The long track at the centre of the record is an outstanding blow for Golia at his most Trane-like on soprano (he brings the contra-alto clarinet along this time, too). Liebig adds some strange electronics.

There isn't enough strangeness on Quicksilver, which has a polite, almost academic quality. A long discontinuous suite with some unrelated material tacked on at the end, it isn't a compelling structure. With a dramatically enlarged ensemble and a more confident mixture of original and brought-in composition (Dresser shines in this), Pomegranate is a huge improvement and a genuinely exciting record.

David Liebman (born 1946)

TENOR AND SOPRANO SAXOPHONES, FLUTES

He studied with Lennie Tristano and Charles Lloyd and worked with Miles Davis. (Co-)founded Lookout Farm and Quest. For a time, he abandoned tenor saxophone in favour of the soprano.

[illegible]

* Drum Ode
ECM 159493-2 Liebman; Richie Beirach (p); John Abercrombie (g); Gene Perla (b); Bob Moses (d); Badal Roy, Collin Walcott (tabla); Steven Satten, Patato Valdez (perc); Elena Steinberg (v). 5/74.
Liebman was still part of Miles Davis's band when he recorded this remarkable album, and the influence of Miles's extended percussion sections is evident in the augmented percussion and the free-form vamps and quasi-modal heads. Drum Ode is one of the classics of the early ECM catalogue. Where many recordings of this kind are simply loose confederations of session-players, Liebman was wise enough to recruit percussionists who were already or would be shortly stars in their own right: Moses, Walcott, Roy, Altschul would all be significant recording stars. The result is an album with an almost orchestral unity and complexity. One hears individual voices rising and falling in an impeccably choreographed mix, with his own Coltrane-influenced saxophone at the centre.

* Double Edge Storyville STCD 4091 Liebman; Richie Beirach (p). 4/85.
Liebman's approach to an obvious-looking set of standards – 'Naima', 'Lover Man', 'Round Midnight', 'On Green Dolphin Street' – is unlikely to attract conservatives. It's the very lushness of Beirach's chording and the frequent but almost subliminal displacements of the rhythmic pattern that cue Liebman for his more adventurous explorations. On 'Naima', he moves outside the chords; on 'Green Dolphin Street' he all but ignores them. Throughout, he sounds quizzical, as if reading from an early and much-revised manuscript of the tune. Liebman at his best.

 The Tree Soul Note 121195 Liebman (ss solo). 4/90.
It's one of the paradoxes of Liebman's career that an improviser who has put such emphasis on collective improvisation and non-hierarchical musical tradition should so frequently evoke solitariness. The Tree is for unaugmented soprano saxophone, with no overdubs. Liebman solemnly intones, 'Roots – take one,' gradually building up his image of jazz tradition as a vegetative organism with taproots and trunk representing origins and mainstays, giving way to branches and twigs, and finally the transitory leaves of fashion. Palindromic in structure, the second takes occur in mirror order, leading back to the roots. It's simple and direct, and the mimetic references – wind, mainly – are logical and unintrusive. Liebman's sound is vocalized in a touchingly humane way.

(*) Classic Ballads Candid CCD 79512 Liebman; Vic Juris (g); Steve Gilmore (b). 12/90, 1/91.
* Setting The Standard Red RR 123253 Liebman; Mulgrew Miller (p); Rufus Reid (b); Victor Lewis (d). 5/92.
The ballads album is dedicated to Liebman's mother-in-law, Natalie Visentin. She chose songs that she loved in her teens. Liebman plays them pretty straight but does introduce material from outside the basic sequence; it sounds like romantic bebop. Juris is used as a second lead as well as a harmony instrument, which means that Gilmore is also called into play as an accompanist. That's clearly the case on 'Angel Eyes' and 'If I Should Lose You', the two most developed tracks.

Setting The Standard is played pretty straight, too. Miller has the same rolling, harmonically dense quality that McCoy Tyner brought to the Coltrane quartet ('Grand Central Station' is a nod in that direction) and he pulls Liebman along insistently. Liebman's tendency to play in fixed metres is less evident with a rhythm section as probing as this; his phrasing and dynamics here are quite varied.

(*) Joy Candid CCD 79531 Liebman; James Madison University Jazz Orchestra, Harrisonburg, VA. 3/92.
In the later '80s, Liebman became much obsessed with the legacy of Coltrane. He'd already made one tribute album. Joy was recorded just after what would have been Coltrane's 65th birthday. It's an altogether more positive and coherent session, backed by a forward-looking and competent campus jazz orchestra. Saxophonist Gunnar Mossblad directs and shares some solo responsibilities, playing Mayan flute on 'India' alongside Dave's subcontinental one. There are prominent roles for orchestra members, but Liebman, who doubles on ethnic flute, more or less surrenders himself to the music, playing unaffectedly in a lower register than normal. The recording, made by the Multitrack Recording Class, is first rate and puts a good many so-called professional efforts to shame.

* Voyage Evidence ECD 22157 Liebman; Vic Juris (g); Phil Markowitz (p, ky); Tony Marino (b); Jamey Haddad (d); Café (perc). 5/95.
This is the best of this group's records. It features a couple of superb Liebman originals, including 'The Gravel And The Bird' for soprano and piano, apparently written after Dave visited the site of Dachau, and the superb 'When To Love', one of his most impressive and also most joyous compositions. There are also versions of Hancock's 'Maiden Voyage' and Coltrane's 'The Drum Thing', which he plays on wooden flute.

 John Coltrane's Meditations Arkadia 71042 Liebman; Tiger Okoshi (t); Caris Visentin (ob); Phil Markowitz (ky); Vic Juris (g); Cecil McBee, Tony Marino (b); Jamey Haddad, Billy Hart (d). 12/95.
How brave it was to go back to Trane's classic album with a very different instrumentation, one that included brass, an extra woodwind, guitar and electric keys, as well as doubled-up bass and drums. The result is faithful to the spirit of the original tracks. 'The Father And The Son And The Holy Ghost', 'Compassion', 'Love' and the somewhat shorter but climactic 'Consequences' and 'Serenity' are integrated even more than on the original record, and Liebman, admittedly with the benefit of hindsight and long exposure to Coltrane's music, is able to import themes and ideas from one track to another, underlining the coherence of the project.

(*) Return Of The Tenor / Standards DoubleTime Records DTRCD 109 Liebman; Phil Markowitz (p); Vic Juris (g); Tony Marino (b); Jamey Haddad (perc). 1/96.
Liebman put away his tenor because he wasn't sure there was anywhere to go in the 'post-Coltrane' idiom he had been identified with. Returning to it brings a new simplicity and rawness to his sound, and a programme of familiar tunes – 'All The Things You Are', 'Summertime', 'Yesterdays', 'There Will Never Be Another You', and so on – encourages him to play with a minimum of embellishment and a refreshingly straightforward attack. The band is nothing exceptional. Markowitz is amiable, leaving much of the straight rhythmic work to Juris. Bass and drums don't so much drive things along as punctuate and sustain the beat. It's left to Liebman himself to provide the surface interest and the deeper ideas.

(*) Monk's Mood Double Time 154 Liebman; Eddie Gomez (b); Adam Nussbaum (d). 98.
Wonderfully pared down and spacious, these 11 Thelonious Monk compositions are both entirely idiomatic and entirely recast. The set is bracketed by two cleverly differentiated versions of 'Monk's Mood', but the outstanding performance is the leader's tenor solo on 'Gallop's Gallop'. Gomez is in stunning form throughout, and the duet version of 'Monk's Mood' is hijacked by the bassist. Also included are 'Introspection', 'Nutty', 'Skippy' and a revelatory account of 'Ugly Beauty' which should become a standard study-piece for all Monk students.

 Colors hatOLOGY 600 Liebman (ts solo). 02.

There are handsome tributes from both Joe Lovano and Michael Brecker among the liner-notes to this remarkable solo project, further evidence of Liebman's standing with saxophone-players. This companion piece to his solo soprano work reveals a very different Liebman, muscular, full-voiced, playing to a sometimes dark inner rhythm. These are not virtuosic performances in the sense that they display extended or radical technique; they are, however, supremely complex in tonality and emotional timbre as Liebman explores the synaesthetic associations of colour. Hard, strong and irreducible music.

 Different But The Same hatOLOGY 615 Liebman; Ellery Eskelin (ts); Tony Marino (b); Jim Black (d). 03.

Eskelin was a student for a while and Black is said to remind the saxophonist of his old comrade-in-arms Bob Moses, so there's an amicable and sympathetic air about this from the beginning. Liebman and Eskelin actually sound quite similar once the temperature goes up, which makes for some interesting cross-talk.

(*) Conversation Sunnyside 1112 Liebman; Caris Visentin (ob, eng hn); Vic Juris (g); Tony Marino (b); Marko Marcinko (d). 9/03.

Most of the tunes are relatively short, but when this band has a chance to stretch out, as it does on 'Anubis', it's obvious what a sympathetic and responsive group Dave has recruited. The presence of Visentin may evoke memories of Oregon, but so much the better if it does. The following 'Soft Spoken' is almost as good, a clever idea played out at modest length as most of these compositions are; many another player would have spun out these pieces mercilessly. Liebman's soprano work has rarely been more precise and evocative. His phrasing on 'Snow Day' is delightful.

 Beyond The Line Omnitone 2204 Liebman; Pat Dorian, Laurie Frink, Bill Warfield (t); Dave Ballou (t, flhn); Sam Burtis, Jeff Nelson, Scott Reeves (tb); Gunnar Mossblad (ss, as); Dave Reikenberg (ss, as, cl, f); Jay Brandford (as, cl, f); Tim Ries (ts); Chris Karlic (bs, bcl, f); Jim Ridl (p, syn); Vic Juris (g); Tony Marino (b); Marko Marcinko (d, perc). 9/03.

 The Seasons Reflected Soul Note 121324 Liebman; Gunnar Mossblad, Tom Christensen, Dave Reikenberg, Steve Wilson (sax); Chris Hanning (perc). 03.

So much of Liebman's output has been either solo or in small groupings that it's hard to imagine – let alone hear – him working in a larger ensemble, even when he is the main soloist. The big band here is arranged by Gunnar Mossblad, and right from the start of 'Hiroshima Memorial' you know you're in the presence of something big and powerful, in terms of composition, arrangement and playing. 'Sing, Sing, Sing' and 'Done With Restraint' are equally good, and there are plenty of fine solo features from the other players: Juris, Ries and Ridl most effectively. The whole package works just fine, though it might take you a moment or two to recalibrate and work out who the front-man is. He sounds tougher and more free-blowing here than usual.

The Manhattan Saxophone Ensemble, run by old friend and collaborator Mossblad, joins him on The Seasons Reflected, which takes ideas from the earlier Seasons record and explores them through a more complex prism.

 The Distance Runner hatOLOGY 628 Liebman (ss, ts, wood f solo). 8/04.

Though Liebman has recorded solo records quite often, this is his first unaccompanied concert. Or, at any rate, almost unaccompanied, for there is a highly effective tape backing – himself overdubbed in four saxophone parts – to 'Time Immemorial'. For the most part, though, this is one man and his horn(s), playing beautifully and with rare feeling. Much of the material is at first reading familiar: from The Loneliness Of A Long Distance Runner (here turned into a threnody for Steve Lacy), from Colors (a beautiful amalgam of 'Red', 'Gray' and 'Yellow') and The Tree ('Roots', 'Limbs', 'Branches'). In all three cases, though, the material is not much more than a starting-point for some highly concentrated but by no means dense improvisation. 'Mother, Father' deploys wood flute very effectively, but Liebman gets the greatest impact from his tenor, once again central to his playing vocabulary. His tone and attack on 'Colors' is exemplary, as it is on the closing 'Peace On Earth', a nod to late-period John Coltrane. There's another, less expected, tribute as well, a delicious and craftily reshaped version of Bechet's soprano classic 'Petite Fleur'. All in all, a beautiful record, strongly recommended to anyone who hasn't yet sampled Liebman's solo playing.

(*) We Three – Three For All Challenge 70130 Liebman; Steve Swallow (b); Adam Nussbaum (d). 5/05.

As the group title suggests, this is a triumvirate of equals, with a rigorous democracy in the improvising language. There is, perhaps, too much thoughtfulness in the playing and, equally arguably, too much mutual understanding. Often the improvisations sound slightly pat and prepared, impressive for their intelligence but lacking a spark of immediacy. Liebman plays all his main horns, modulating his approach considerably on each. His sound has never been better or more magisterial. The same goes for Swallow, who is magnificent on his own 'Up And Adam' and 'The Start Of Something Small'. Liebman takes honours with 'The Jewish Warrior' and Nussbaum reminds us he's a very decent composer with the deceptively complex 'We 3' and 'BTU'. Eleven tracks packed onto the CD, so nothing gets much of a workout and leaves us with that familiar feeling of wanting to hear this group stretch out live.

 Back On The Corner Tone Center 40532 Liebman; Vic Juris, Mike Stern (g); Anthony Jackson, Tony Marino (b); Marko Marcinko (d). 6/06.

The title is an obvious echo of Lieb's tenure with Miles Davis and the set reflects that in a fresh and inventive way. There are a couple of Miles themes in the mix, notably 'Ife' but also 'Black Satin', while the rest seems to be more of an attempt to capture something of Miles's recording method. There are interludes for most of the instruments and the work seems to have emerged with what sounds like great spontaneity, though one can assume that the leader knew exactly what he was doing at every stage. A musician of consummate intelligence, he invests every project with great authority and this is an ideal example of that.

Also, in brief:

 The Opal Heart Enja 3065. 2/79.

Fine quartet date with Mike Nock (p) featured strongly.

* The Energy Of The Chance Heads Up 3005. 88.

A curious piece of work, bordering on New Age soundscaping. It's pleasant enough to listen to, though some will find the floating, synth-washed sound irritating after just a couple of tracks.

 Nine Again Red RR 123234. 89.

Franco D'Andrea (p) is a less troubled romantic than Richie Beirach (see Double Edge above), but he's well up to Liebman's by now almost routine respraying of standards.

(*) Mosaic Select: Dave Liebman & Richie Beirach Mosaic Select 12. 76–91.
Despite the heading, not just a compilation of duos, but live material covering a decade and a half from Lookout Farm days to the beginning of the '90s and from adventurous fusion to Dave's later, highly individual style. Some cuts outstay their welcome, but an essential text for fans.

() Besame Mucho Red RR 123260. 3/93.
A not particularly successful Latin project.

 Songs For My Daughter Soul Note 121295. 5/94.
Liebman's lute-playing and Vic Juris's articulate guitar provide the main focus.

 Time Immemorial Enja 9389. 11/97.
Liebman improvises across acoustic environments created by virtuoso engineer Walter Quintus. Too little straight saxophone-playing, and a lot of extended technique and deconstruction; very dense, very detailed but also very involving.

 Elements: Water Arkadia Jazz 71043. 98.
Meditations on the primal elements. We're not sure where the other three are.

 The Unknown Jobim Global Music GMNJ 0501. 11/99.
A debut release by the label, this really does work some intriguing changes on the usual Jobim clichés.

(*) Liebman Plays Puccini: A Walk In The Clouds Arkadia Jazz 71044. 9/01.
A fascinating project. 'Un bel di, vedremo', from Madama Butterfly, has been used as a jazz standard before, but rarely has there been a more faithful or a more moving rendition. The inclusion of Phil Woods (as) in the line-up is a masterstroke.

(*) Latin Genesis Whaling City Sound 013. 01.
An interesting project which takes material from Elvin Jones's Genesis album (now deleted) and gives it a Latin – and very rewarding – spin.

 Bookends hatOLOGY 587. 3/02.
A long duo set with pianist Marc Copland. The blues basis of 'Impressions' and 'Blue In Green' is subjected to forensic analysis. 'Lester Leaps In' is a revelation, 'In Your Own Sweet Way' sheer delight.

 Lieb Plays Wilder Daybreak 75214. 10/03.
Ten Alec Wilder tunes played by Liebman and an unfamiliar group. Intriguing, but rarely engaging.

 Manhattan Dialogues /  Vienna Dialogues Zoho Music 200508 / 200612. 10/04; 10/06.
A mix of improvised and originals and a couple of standards (notably 'The Night Has 1000 Eyes' and 'Round Midnight' on the first record), played in duo with Phil Markowitz and Bobby Avey (p) respectively. Slightly overcooked in places but still impressive.

Chris Lightcap (born 1971)

DOUBLE BASS

The Pennsylvanian is an experienced sideman, working with Joe Morris, Anthony Braxton and Cecil Taylor, among others.

 Lay-Up / (*) Bigmouth Fresh Sound New Talent FSNT 74 / 148 Lightcap; Tony Malaby, Bill McHenry (ts); Gerald Cleaver (d). 99; 4/02.
The most obvious model is the pianoless Ornette Coleman group, or maybe the later version with two saxophonists. As if to clinch the connection, Lightcap includes Ornette's 'I Heard It Over The Radio' on the debut album, a mournful and slightly eerie piece that sits well with this group. Other modern groups have experimented with two horns and no harmony instrument, but Lightcap has his own approach, laying down a heavy and very dependable ostinato and basically letting the horns get on with it.

Sometimes the philosophy is more abstract than at other times, but there is plenty of singing and dancing on these albums as well. Lay-Up is a very enjoyable record, packed with good writing, some joyous playing and some very thoughtful experiments. Bigmouth is a very definite step forward. The opening 'Neptune 66' overturns twin-tenor clichés, and tunes like 'Celebratorial' and the closing 'Music Minus One' are endlessly replayable. A cover of the Beatles' 'Dig A Pony' is less successful.

Terry Lightfoot (born 1935)

CLARINET, ALTO SAXOPHONE, VOICE

Born in Potters Bar; Lightfoot was bandleading by the mid-'50s and became one of the big names during the ensuing trad boom. He weathered the leaner years of the late '60s and '70s, kept a pub, then went back to pro bandleading in the mid-'80s.

 Tradition In Colour /  The World Of Trad Lake LACD 212 / 234 Various groups. 57–58.

 Trad Parade /  Lightfoot At Lansdowne Lake LACD 206/ 208 Lightfoot; New Orleans Jazzmen. 59–60; 61–62.
Coined by Denis Preston, who produced Jazz Today for Pye and the Lansdowne series for Columbia, the word 'trad' first appeared on the cover of a July 1958 Lightfoot EP featuring Kenny Ball and included here along with the December 1957 'concept' album, Terry's first long-player, which gives the compilation its name. All tracks are named after colours and alongside the obvious ('Mood Indigo', 'My Blue Heaven', Handy's 'Yellow Dog Blues') there is Smith's original 'Green For Danger'. Its inclusion is a strong sign of the group's youthful originality. Terry was one of the youngest bandleaders on the scene, and if he sounds callow on the first couple of tracks, he makes you sit up every time on the later cuts. A fine follow-up to Lake's earlier Lightfoot At Lansdowne and Trad Parade (Cream fans should note that the Peter Baker drumming on the 1957 LP was their very own Ginger), it's since been complemented by The World, which also consists of an original LP plus EP. The Lansdowne material is pretty typical for its time and genre. Lightfoot's an easy, entertaining player who does nothing to scare the horses. This is second-row British trad, but none the worse for that.

Also, in brief:

 Strictly Traditional Lake LACD117. 1–2/99.
Infectious good humour and chutzpah. Solid, swinging British trad.

() Mainly Traditional Lake LACD 155. 4/01.
A rather tame follow-up by the Strictly line-up. Some more modern material, though.

Kirk Lightsey (born 1937)

PIANO

A Detroit-school player, gifted as an accompanist and trio leader; he has been a member of The Leaders and The Leaders Trio.

(*) Isotope Criss Cross Criss 1003 Lightsey; Jesper Lundgaard (b); Eddie Gladden (d). 2/83.

* The Nights Of Bradley's Sunnyside 1136 Lightsey; Rufus Reid (b). 1/85.

 Kirk'N'Marcus Criss Cross 1030 Lightsey; Marcus Belgrave (t); Jean Toussaint (ts); Santi Debriano (b); Eddie Gladden (d). 12/86.

 From Kirk To Nat Criss Cross Criss 1050 Lightsey; Kevin Eubanks (g); Rufus Reid (b). 11/90.

(*) Goodbye Mr Evans Evidence ECD 22165 Lightsey; Tibor Elkes (b); Famoudou Don Moye (d). 94.

Isotope documents a fine trio, with an unexpected 'Oleo', some good Monk stylings, and a fine version of 'Pee Wee'. Kirk'N'Marcus was a fine idea, well executed. The Detroit trumpeter immediately registers a presence on the opening 'All My Love', his own composition, and proceeds to dominate proceedings from there. Toussaint has some gentle skirmishes with the leader on his own 'Lower Bridge Level', which has an attractive harmonic originality. Kenny Dorham's lyrical 'Windmill' and bassist Debriano's 'Fixed Wing' help round out a strong set. The resonant duos with Reid document a very happy association for Lightsey. His playing on 'Giant Steps', 'Speak No Evil', Golson's 'From Dream To Dream' and Brubeck's 'In Your Own Sweet Way' is fairly definitive of his style. It's a good record to have if you only want one of Kirk's.

The immediate inspiration for From Kirk To Nat is Nat Cole's wartime piano/guitar/bass trio with Oscar Moore and Johnny Miller. One of the most copied of piano and vocal stylists, Cole has rarely been imitated successfully, and Lightsey steers well clear of pastiche. His singing on 'Never Let Me Go' and 'Close Enough For Love' is growly and soft, almost spoken, and it draws something from late Chet Baker. On piano he is already individual enough not to risk unconscious echo, and his firm touch on the opening 'You And The Night And The Music' sets the tone for the whole album. Eubanks presents a useful latter-day version of Moore's single-note runs and softly strummed counter-melodies; it's Rufus Reid who dominates the longest single track, a subtle 'Sophisticated Lady', with a resonant solo that is mixed too loud but which is as purposeful and strongly outlined as anything by Jimmy Blanton.

It's still a very thin discography, but the excellent 1994 date has struggled back into circulation. No Bill Evans material, oddly, but stuff by Brubeck, Eddie Harris and Wayne Shorter (the latter pair in an intriguing medley), Jimmy Heath and others. There's also a Chopin arrangement which swings well. The album title comes from the Phil Woods piece that closes the record. A nice chemistry in the group, with Moye in powerful form away from the Art Ensemble and the little-known Elkes a revelation. Why isn't there more stuff out there?

Abbey Lincoln (born 1930)

VOICE

Worked in California under the name Anna Marie, and began recording. Recorded with Max Roach (her husband, 1962–70), but her career faded in the '70s until a revival of interest in the '80s led to a Verve contract.

(*) That's Him! Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 085 Lincoln; Kenny Dorham (t); Sonny Rollins (ts); Wynton Kelly (p); Paul Chambers (b); Max Roach (d). 10/57.

 It's Magic Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 205 Lincoln; Kenny Dorham, Art Farmer (t); Curtis Fuller (tb); Benny Golson (ts); Jerome Richardson, Sahib Shihab (bs, f); Wynton Kelly (p); Paul Chambers, Sam Jones (b); Philly Joe Jones (d). 8/58.

(*) Abbey Is Blue Original Jazz Classics OJCCD 069 Lincoln; Kenny Dorham, Tommy Turrentine (t); Julian Priester (tb); Stanley Turrentine (ts); Les Spann (g, f); Wynton Kelly, Cedar Walton, Les Wright (p); Bobby Boswell, Sam Jones (b); Philly Joe Jones, Max Roach (d). 59.

Lincoln's own emancipation proclamation turned her from a conventional club singer into one of the most dramatic and distinctive voices of the day. As she concedes, she owes her creative emancipation to one-time husband Max Roach, with whom she worked on We Insist! Freedom Now Suite, but she had recorded under her own name before that.

Never a conventional standards singer, she indicated her individuality and occasionally her disaffection in subtle ironies, subliminal variations and occasional hot blasts of fury. She was both respectful of her material and inclined to manipulate it without mercy or apology. 'Afro Blue' with the Max Roach Sextet on Abbey Is Blue is one of her strongest performances at any period, though slightly hectoring in tone. The unaccompanied 'Tender As A Rose' on That's Him! is more mannered but, like so many Lincoln performances, succeeds through sheer force of personality. Dorham is one of the most naturally vocal of the bop trumpeters, though it's the still underrated Kelly who carries the day.

 Straight Ahead Candid CCD 79015 Lincoln; Booker Little (t); Julian Priester (tb); Eric Dolphy (as, bcl, f); Walter Benton, Coleman Hawkins (ts); Mal Waldron (p); Art Davis (b); Max Roach (d); Roger Sanders, Robert Whitley (perc). 2/61.

A stellar line-up which brought together players from two distinct generations in jazz. If Hawkins was the sole representative of the older gang, he was more than balanced by Little, Priester and Dolphy, who were just beginning to make waves. Lincoln herself isn't quite on top of her game yet; 'expressive' flatting of notes has to be handled with great care if it isn't to sound like incompetence.

Three tracks stand out: 'When Malindy Sings', based on a Paul Laurence Dunbar poem, a vocalization of 'Blue Monk' (made with the composer's blessing), and the raw and responsive 'Retribution', co-written with Priester, which sees her confront her music rather than stand upstage of it.

 The World Is Falling Down Verve 843476-2 Lincoln; Clark Terry (t); Jerry Dodgion, Jackie McLean (as); Alain Jean-Marie (p); Charlie Haden (b); Billy Higgins (d). 2/90.

Lincoln guested on Steve Williamson's Verve debut, A Waltz For Grace, and everything she did from the turn of the decade seemed to be touched with returning energy. The combination of Terry and McLean is irresistible and, with the session anchored by Haden and Higgins, it's hard to get the tunes back out of your head. As so often before and since, she manages to acidulate a ballad without making it sound either sardonic or cynical. 'How High The Moon' answers its own question astronomically, and 'African Lady' is perfectly judged.

(*) You Gotta Pay The Band Verve Gitanes 511110 Lincoln; Stan Getz (ts); Hank Jones (p); Charlie Haden (b); Maxine Roach (vla); Marc Johnson (d). 2/91.
Having once adopted the tough, survivalist persona, Lincoln found it hard to shrug off. With the sole exception of 'Bird Alone', which is dud, the material is excellent, and it's the sort of band singers will die for. After three previous albums, a word is due for drummer Johnson; not a fire-merchant like Roach or Higgins, but an elegant and subtle performer who knows where to place an accent and how to weight it. Getz was ailing, but he still performs with consummate grace; 'A Time For Love' could hardly be improved upon.

* A Turtle's Dream Verve Gitanes 527382 Lincoln; Roy Hargrove (t); Julien Lourau (ts, ss); Kenny Barron, Rodney Kendrick (p); Pat Metheny, Lucky Peterson (g, v); Charlie Haden, Christian McBride (b); Victor Lewis (d); strings. 5–11/94.
Where Betty Carter liked to shape a band of young players, Lincoln found herself being curated in all-star situations. One of the joys of the 1994 record, as with some of its predecessors, is flicking through and identifying one dream line-up after another – Metheny and house pianist Kendrick, or Metheny and Barron with Haden and Lewis – only to find that the saxophone solo you've just swooned to on 'A Turtle's Dream' or 'Not To Worry' is by the relatively unknown Lourau.

(*) Who Used To Dance Verve Gitanes 533559 Lincoln; Graham Haynes (c); Riley T. Bandy III, Steve Coleman, Oliver Lake, Frank Morgan, Justin Robinson (as); Julien Lourau (ts); Marc Cary, Rodney Kendrick (p); Michael Bowie, John Ormond (b); Taru Alexander, Alvester Garnett, Aaron Walker (d); Bazzi Bartholomew Gray, Arthur Green (v). 4–5/96.
This picks up where the last album left off, but with a better-integrated concept. The basic group is Cary, Bowie and Walker, teaming Lincoln with three of the brightest young instrumentalists around. The only track on which they don't appear at all is 'The River', a bittersweet fantasia. 'Love What You Doin'' is a big arrangement for three alto saxophones, and fine, terse solos from Coleman, Lake and the as yet unknown Bandy. Frank Morgan does alto duty on 'When Autumn Sings', one of two songs by R. B. Lynch. The only dud track is 'Mr Tambourine Man', a good enough idea but executed far too knowingly and redeemed only by Lourau's saxophone. The title-piece is intriguing in that it features tap-dancer Savion Glover, a young man in the great tradition of jazz hoofers but with moves all his own; don't dismiss the concept out of hand – it works.

(*) Wholly Earth Verve Gitanes 559538 Lincoln; Nicholas Payton (t, flhn); Marc Cary, James Hurt (p); Bobby Hutcherson (vib, mar); Michael Bowie, John Ormond (b); Alvester Garnett (d); Daniel Moreno (perc); Maggie Brown (v). 6/98.
The pairing of Lincoln with vibist Hutcherson is irresistible, two entirely opposite rhythmic concepts working together more comfortably than they have a right to. Abbey's reworking of the Johnny Mercer–Lionel Hampton song 'Midnight Sun' is one of the truly great things in her catalogue. The title-track, which follows, is one of only a couple which don't include Bobby, but it illustrates her ability to invest a slightly banal, almost poppy idea with unmistakable conviction.

The voice is now so confidently intimate, so easily conversational, that it becomes difficult to think of Lincoln in terms of 'performance'. Her ability to make large harmonic shifts and reshuffle the tempo allows considerable leeway in the songs 'Conversation With A Baby' and 'Caged Bird', both of which sound considerably less artful than they actually are.

Cary continues to offer sympathetic support, and the pairing of Ormond and Garnett is tailor-made for Abbey's laid-back approach. The group interplay on 'If I Only Had A Brain' is a model for anyone attempting vocal jazz of this sort.

 Over The Years Verve 549101 Lincoln; Jerry Gonzalez (t); Joe Lovano (ts); Brandon McCune (p); Kendra Shank (g); John Ormond (b); Jaz Sawyer (d). 2/00.
Still in fine form, though she increasingly relies on a grand manner. This is distinguished by a superb solo spot from Lovano on 'Blackberry Blossoms' and a nice contribution from Shank as well. The working group sounds well-drilled and responsive, delivering the kind of taut, thoughtful and ever-alert accompaniment Betty Carter used to demand of her young sidemen. Lincoln fans will gobble up both records. Those less convinced may (rightly) feel that they're getting more of the same, tricked out with a few gimmicks.

* Abbey Sings Abbey Verve 9847030 Lincoln; Larry Campbell (g, pedal steel g, mand); Gil Goldstein (acc); Dave Eggar (clo); Scott Colley (b); Shawn Pelton (d). 9–11/06.
A genuinely inspirational record that seems to move out of jazz strictly constructed and into the realms of country music, pop, even klezmer. The accompaniments are elegance itself, and Larry Campbell – known for his work with Bob Dylan and others – supplies a rich array of guitar sounds, including Dobro and pedal steel. 'The Merry Dancer' is an amazing thing, but there are more familiar themes, like 'The World Is Falling Down', the main melody of 'It's Supposed To Be Love' and the stunning 'Bird Alone'. Unusual, but we defy anyone not to dash away a tear at the close.

Also, in brief:

 People In Me Verve 515246-2. 6/73.
Lincoln's unflinching self-determination succumbs to a ridiculously self-conscious négritude, possessed by the spirits of Bessie Smith, Billie Holiday, Betty Carter and even, God bless her, Diana Ross. Only Max Roach's 'Living Room' and Johnny Rotalla's 'You And Me Love' stand out.

(*) Abbey Sings Billie: Volumes 1 and 2 Enja ENJ 6012 2CD. 11/87.
Lincoln seems torn between paying tribute to her greatest influence and subverting it: an overcooked 'Strange Fruit', an oddly dismissive 'Lover Man', while 'God Bless The Child' is lovingly and creatively revisited.

 When There Is Love Verve 519697-2. 10/92.
The duets with Hank Jones are good, but it isn't one of the pianist's better dates and 'C'Est Si Bon' was an awful mistake.

 It's Me Verve 0126802. 02.
Excessively theatrical, especially on the tracks with strings.

Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra

ORCHESTRA

A powerful advocacy for the music, especially with Wynton Marsalis at the helm.

* A Love Supreme /  Don't Be Afraid: The Music Of Charles Mingus Palmetto 2106 / 2114 Wynton Marsalis, Ryan Kisor, Marcus Printup, Lew Soloff (t); Vincent Gardner, Andre

Hayward, Ronald Westray (tb); Walter Blanding, Victor Goines, Joe Temperley, Wessell Anderson (sax); Eric Lewis (p); Carlos Henriquez (b); Herlin Riley (d). 8/03.

Of all the reworkings of Coltrane's great spiritual statement, the one above is in most respects the most unexpected and the grandest. If the work has a symphonic, continuous structure, divided into movements, the jazz equivalent of the New York Phil seems the ideal messenger. The sections are packed with extraordinary players, the production (Delfeayo Marsalis) is crisp and detailed and the familiar themes are given weight but allowed to fly upwards, particularly in the climactic final movement. There are dull bits, like the 'Love Supreme' motto itself, and Riley's bridge into 'Pusuance' is sketchy. But it's a worthy response to a masterwork.

Hard to imagine Wynton Marsalis being any more intuitively at home with Charles Mingus than with Coltrane, but Don't Be Afraid cedes arranging duties to trombonist Ron Westray, who makes a good job of the charts. Unfortunately, the orchestra does what classical players usually do when asked to swing, and tightens up. 'Black Saint And The Sinner Lady' and 'Meditation On Integratin'' have no drama and even the Latin-tinged pieces seem flat. Only the closing title-track – 'Don't Be Afraid, The Clown's Afraid Too' – makes much impact, though it's a dourer reading than the original.

John Lindberg (born 1959)

DOUBLE BASS

At 19 he was a member of the Human Arts Ensemble. Later associations included a stint in Anthony Braxton's group and charter membership of the String Trio Of New York.

* Dimension 5 Black Saint 120062 Lindberg; Hugh Ragin (t, picc t); Marty Ehrlich (as, f); Billy Bang (vn); Thurman Barker (d). 2/81.

Lindberg jumped to notice 20 years ago with a solo recording for the Leo label and since then has produced a steady sequence of thoughtful, intelligent records, whose calm and orderliness sometimes count against them in the modern rush. Untypically for a bassist, Lindberg is a miniaturist, most successful when on a restricted canvas and dealing in tiny, almost calligraphic gestures, though he also knows how to harness musical chaos.

Dimension 5 is a live recording from New York City with a working group centred on two pairs of winds and strings. Bang and Lindberg do most of their head-to-head stuff on the opening 'Eleven Thrice', leaving the shorter middle numbers, 'Twixt C And D', as ensemble pieces. The sound is far from ideal, fuzzy at the lower end but peaky and percussive in Ragin's upper register.

* Dodging Bullets Black Saint 120108 Lindberg; Albert Mangelsdorff (tb); Eric Watson (p). 6/92.

() Quartet Afterstorm / () Resurrection Of A Dormant Soul Black Saint 120162 / 120172 As above, except add Ed Thigpen (d). 94; 2/95.

These are wonderfully open and uncluttered sets, and they suggest a fruitful synthesis between Lindberg's more avant-garde approach and a jazz tradition. Mangelsdorff is one of the true stars of European jazz, but there is nothing abstractly 'European' in his strong-toned playing or in writing like 'Dots, Ditches And Scratches' on Resurrection. The addition of Thigpen on Quartet Afterstorm and the later record is as effective as it is unexpected. It rises above chamber-jazz, but Ed's rootsy, funky approach slots in without a join. He solos joyously on 'X.1' and brings in his own 'E.T.P.' to the Resurrection date, and Lindberg turns into Ray Brown before your startled ears.

* Bounce Black Saint 120192 Lindberg; Dave Douglas (t); Larry Ochs (sax); Ed Thigpen (d). 2/97.

The Lindberg Ensemble combined advanced ideas with sheer firepower. Thigpen's designation as 'Mr Taste' doesn't prevent him from cutting loose, but here he keeps the reins fairly tight, suggesting contained energy, but rarely breaking into the open. Douglas's contribution is as distinctive and idiosyncratic as ever. His use of extended technique and non-standard timbres, some of them remarkably close to saxophone tonality, is a constant delight and his soloing on these taxing themes is perceptive to a degree not even suspected from his own recordings. 'Fortone On A Sphere' and 'The Terrace' are the two main pieces. Each negotiates a path between through-composition and improvisational freedom. Lindberg himself sounds roomy and relaxed and the recording has weight.

 The Catbird Sings / (*) A Tree Frog Tonality Black Saint 120198 / Between The Lines BTL 008 Lindberg; Wadada Leo Smith (t); Larry Ochs (as); Andrew Cyrille (d). 4/99; 3/00.

This group is one of Lindberg's best, and the two sessions already show a year's growth and a positive evolution. The Black Saint record is still the work of a band in the process of stabilizing itself, and much of the set is in a more or less conventional post-bop mode; Smith more attacking and incisive than on some of his own, moodier projects, Ochs booting himself clear of ROVA rigour. But the title-track at the end paves the way for the more ambitious and individual music of A Tree Frog Tonality. The Ivesian leanings of 'Thanksgiving Suite' and the carefully considered mouldings of the other pieces bespeak a composer steeped in Americana, and without Frisell's opportunism.

* Ruminations Upon Ives & Gottschalk / * Winter Birds Between The Lines btl025 / btl71203 Lindberg; Baikida Carroll (t); Steve Gorn (ss, cl, bansuri); Susie Ibarra (d). 02; 12/03–1/04.

The title of the first of these is needlessly off-putting, for it's an album of powerfully thoughtful modern jazz, executed by a group that thinks on its feet and remains alert at every turn to changes in texture and emotional temperature. For instance, the Gottschalk tribute is a piece called 'Spirit Great, Golden Shine', written in response to the classical composer's 'Holy Spirit, Light Divine' and as a reaction to the 9/11 attacks. The Ivesian element is less obvious and thus more effectively assimilated. The exotic timbre of 'Yatan-Na' could have been explored more thoroughly, and the quartet is at its most effective when pitched in on challenging charts like the closing trio of 'Generations', 'Implications' and 'Upon Powerhouses'.

If anything, the second record is even better. A mini-suite of pieces headed 'Bam! Quatre, Cinq, Six, etc' kicks off the set in witty fashion, but the highlights are a reworking of 'Resurrection Of A Dormant Soul' and the beautiful, Eastern-tinged 'Ether', which underlines Gorn's quality as a multi-instrumentalist. Ibarra stays on the money and Carroll has long been an undersung genius. Lindberg's most expressive group yet.

 Duets 1 Between The Lines btl71210 Lindberg; Karl Berger (p, vib). 11/04.

These are curiously pedestrian encounters. Berger's a forgotten giant, but he seems to have traded in much of his fire. There's a lot of subtle music being made, even on a relatively straight retread of Ornette Coleman's 'Peace', but the music seems polite and settled and a long way from the avant-garde.

Also, in brief:

 Give And Take Soul Note 120072. 11/82.
Fine trio session with George Lewis (tb) and Barry Altschul (d).

(*) Trilogy Of Works For Eleven Instrumentalists Black Saint 120082. 9/84.
Large-scale works in a new-music idiom.

(*) Two By Five Between The Lines btl019. 6/01.
Mostly through-composed, though the 'Basement Of Desire' suite has more sinew and flow.

Nils Lindberg (born 1933)

PIANO

A giant of Swedish jazz who has also worked in a modern classical idiom. He pioneered the synthesis of traditional Swedish music and jazz.

* Sax Appeal & Trisection Dragon DRCD220 Lindberg; Jan Allan, Idrees Sulieman, Lars Samuelsson (t); Sven-Olof Walldoff, Eje Thelin (tb); Rolf Billberg (as); Harry Bäcklund , Allan Lundström (ts); Lars Gullin (bs); Sture Nordin (b); Olle Holmqvist (tba); Sture Kallin, Conny Svensson (d). 2/60–1/63.
(*) Symphony No. 1 & Jazz From Studio A Dragon DRCD 331 Lindberg; Jan Allan, Benny Bailey (t); Åke Persson (tb); Rolf Billberg (as); Bjarne Nerem, Harry Bäcklund (ts); Lars Gullin, Erik Nilsson (bs); Sture Nordin, Georg Riedel (b); Sture Kallin, Egil Johansen (d); Swedish Radio Orchestra. 6/61–8/63.
(*) Saxes Galore / Brass Galore Bluebell ABCD 3004 Lindberg; Jan Allan, Allan Botschinsky, Markku Johansson (t, flhn); Torgny Nilsson (tb); Sven Larsson (btb, tba); Herb Geller (as, ss, f); Claes Rosendahl (ts, f); Bernt Rosengren (ts, as, f); Lennart Åberg , Erik Nilsson (bs, f); Mads Vinding, Red Mitchell (b); Rune Carlsson (d). 5/79–5/81.
(*) Lindberg Mitchell Paulsson LCM C-128 Lindberg; Anders Paulsson (ss); Dan Almgren, Torbjörn Bernhardsson (vn); Hans Lindström (vla); Ulrika Edström (clo); Red Mitchell (b). 92.
(*) Melody In Blue Dragon DRCD 245 Lindberg; Anders Paulsson (ss, ts); Johan Hörlén (as); Joakim Milder, Krister Andersson (ts); Charlie Malmberg (bs); Jan Adefeldt (b); Bengt Stark (d). 5/93.
 Alone With My Melodies Dragon DRCD 277 Lindberg (p solo). 4/95.

Nils Lindberg plays piano, but what he loves to do is to write for saxophones, and now for three generations of Swedish reed-players. The first, Sax Appeal, has been reissued in tandem with the slightly later Trisection on a single Dragon CD. In Jan Olsson's words, Lindberg's sound is 'the sound of Swedish summer nights and 52nd Street at the same time' – although, more accurately, it's the timbre of West Coast saxes that he gets here and on Saxes Galore. There are superb sequences not only for the whole section but also for Gullin and Billberg, and the subsequent Trisection brings in brass for a Gil Evans-like exploration of timbre.

The first track, 'Curbits', turns up again as the first on Saxes Galore, where Lindberg repeated his formula with another all-sax team, and this time inveigled a genuine West Coaster to participate. The sound he gets out of the section is a haunting drift that seems to float between traditions, with solos emerging from the ensemble like smoke drifting through clear, cold air. Brass Galore is coupled with this session on the Bluebell reissue: not quite as impressive, but there are still some inventive charts here, especially the 3/4 ballad 'Waltz For Anne-Marie'.

The Symphony No. 1 was a commission from Swedish television. Lasse Sarri's very entertaining notes recall all the circumstances surrounding the preparation of the music (such as Gullin's hospitalization, which meant he had to walk into the recording completely unprepared), yet they do not prepare one for the freshness of the score and the uncomplicated melding of soloists with orchestra. Lindberg's writing might not always stand up to the most merciless scrutiny, but it is beautifully realized and now has a nostalgic sheen. Making up the CD are five tracks from another informal session for Stockholm television, two years earlier, comprising five warm-natured tracks by a septet with Bailey, Billberg, Persson and Nerem in the front line.

Lindberg Mitchell Paulsson is a typically beautiful session from this supreme melodist. Lindberg arranges parts for a string quartet, has old friend Mitchell (on one of his final dates) play a roving bass-line, and adds embellishments by himself and the lyrical voice of saxophonist Paulsson. There are several pieces inspired by Swedish folksong, from the Dalarna district, plus reworkings of two pieces from his 'Seven Darlecarlian Pictures' and some new originals. Where other Scandinavian composers get an autumnal chill from their heritage, Lindberg seems to find only warmth and light. The charm and radiance of these settings is very hard to resist.

Melody In Blue puts together a third reed team, made up of the latest generation of Swedish saxophonists, and, if anything, this sounds like the best of the three, given a modern studio mix and vivid, energetic playing from all hands. One or two of the pieces sound comparatively ordinary, and Lindberg doesn't always set out to have the band swing; but 'Blue Bop' defies that judgement, and in the extraordinary miniature of 'Polska With All My Love' – once a student work of Lindberg's – the poise of the playing is breathtaking.

His solo piano album is a slow and reflective set, a bit ponderous in parts, and perhaps one of those records which means more to the maker than to his audience. Worth hearing, though, for his deeply felt 'In Memoriam', the piece he wrote on the untimely death of Rolf Billberg in 1966 – which brings this discography full circle for now.

Jason Lindner

PIANO

Able post-bop player with good big-band experience.

 Premonition Stretch 9026 Lindner; Avishai Cohen, Diego Urcola (t); Alex Norris (t, flhn); Ari Lebovich (tb); Myron Walden (as); Gregory Tardy, Charles Owens (ts); Jimmy Greene (ts, f); David Schumacher (bs, bcl); Omer Avital, Dwayne Burno (b); Jeff Ballard, Daniel Freedman (d); Kahlil Kwame Bell (perc); MC Benu Merata (v). 7/00.

The debut record arrives with a strangely angular fanfare before kicking into the vigorous post-bop of the title-track, which features Tardy. Lindner had been working regular band dates at Smalls' and he knows most of these guys well. Lebovich contributes 'Mr Demargary', a most unusual line that seems to slip between styles as it moves along. Lindner plays electric here, and it's a nice change of texture under the brasses. His own 'Space' suite is a curious thing that doesn't quite come off (why is part two stuck away at the end?), but his tribute to Mary Lou Williams, 'Mary's Vibe', is terrific and for once even the rap works. Cohen brings in his own 'Gaga', which gets a brief reading, as do another couple of Lebovich lines, which might have merited longer treatment.

 1, 2, 3, Etc. Fresh Sound New Talent FSNTCD Lindner; Giulia Valle (b); Marc Ayza (d). 12/01.
This collaborative trio sounds a bit pleased with itself, hopping from folk themes, to jazz repertory like 'Brilliant Corners' to pop staples like 'Don't You Worry 'Bout A Thing' in a brilliant mash-up of styles. The three guys are all terrific players, though Lindner probably works a different street to the other two, but it seldom rises above cleverness.

 Ab Aeterno – From The Beginning Of Time Fresh Sound World Jazz 033 Lindner; Omer Avital (b, oud); Luisito Quintero (perc). 12/04.
An intriguing world-jazz project designed to highlight the relationship between Lindner and Avital, Ab Aeterno kicks off with a multitracked 'Overture', which shows off some of the sonorities the trio has at its disposal. 'The Gathering' has bop roots and it's here that the musical chemistry between the two men is most confidently asserted. Two Bud Powell tunes are medleyed in the middle of the record, an unexpected inclusion but one of the record's strongest tracks, and the same blending of bop with other backgrounds – Afro-Cuban, Middle Eastern and abstract – continues to the close.

(*) Live At The Jazz Gallery Anzic 4101 CD/DVD Lindner; Avishai Cohen, Duane Eubanks (t); Joe Fiedler, Dana Leong, Rafi Malkiel (tb); Anat Cohen (ts, cl); Jay Collins (ss, ts, f); Miguel Zenón (as); Chris Karlic (bs, bcl); Omer Avital (b); Eric McPherson (d); Yosvany Terry Cabrera (chekere). 11/05.
The best of a couple of nights with Lindner's limber but solid-sounding big band. There's still a curious impression of smugness in the music, which it's hard to shake off and harder to like. The DVD option actually helps a lot. Lebovich's arrangements are quite detailed and it's good to have visual cues to some aspects of the voicing. Avital's 'Song For Amos' is the cornerstone of the set: big, emotional, free-hearted.

Trevor Lines

DOUBLE BASS

British bassist and composer, with an interesting approach to traditional song material.

 The Cats Hide Under The Bed When I Play My Gary Windo Records Wriggly Pig WPIG 002 Lines; Duncan Mackay, Martin Shaw (t); Martin Dunsdon (ss, ts); Tom Porter, Liam Noble (p); Simon Pearson (d). 99.
The title is, inevitably, one of our favourites ever, but the band Lines has put together is unexpectedly swinging and the material is never less than intriguing. His use of themes associated with the legendary Copper Family of folk singers (on 'Gentlemen Of High Renown') and the singer Triona Ni Dhombhnaill ('Coolmore') is inventive and not in the least arch or fey. 'The Pipe On The Hob' is taken from O'Neill's Music of Ireland and 'Bonaparte's Retreat' is a folk tune well known in Britain and in Appalachia. The original material includes the powerful title-track which kicks off the record and a tribute to Spontaneous Music Ensemble pioneers Trevor Watts and John Stevens.

Anyone seeing any of these names on the cover might well expect an exercise in freebop or perhaps folk-free. Lines, though, is too intelligent a musician and too seasoned a player to let his influences show that clearly. He has created something genuinely original and consistently moving. Of the band, Simon Pearson is the most innovative, taking a strong feature on 'Howitt', while Mackay's high, declamatory trumpet is a true delight. Shaw and Noble appear only on the title-track and 'Weplaywattsandstevens'.

Worth hearing, and cat owners will be grateful for the behavioural observation; if the cover is to be believed, His Master's Bones is the Windo disc that will most disturb Fluffy.

Paul Lingle (1902–62)

PIANO

A West Coast star in the '40s, he combined Dixieland and ragtime.

 Live At The Jug Club Delmark DE219 Lingle (p solo). 11 & 12/51.
Much of Lingle's output was on the Euphonic label, and impossible to find now. Delmark have licensed this one and it's a nice sampling of his style: a boisterous blend of rags (mostly played too fast) and jazz. Unless you're deeply allergic to his style of playing, which is an acquired taste, the main problem here is the scruffy recording, which does him no favours. This was his favourite setting, though, and it's a lovely snapshot.

Rudy Linka (born 1960)

GUITAR

He draws from mainstream jazz guitar, folk and classical elements, with an occasional rock tinge.

() Live It Up Timeless 407 Linka; Gil Goldstein (ky); Michal Formanek (b); Adam Nussbaum (d). 5/91.
 Every Moment Acoustic Music AM422 As above; omit Nussbaum; add John Abercrombie (g); George Mraz (b). 94, 98.
The talented Czech made earlier discs than these, but they have not been widely available. The quartet with Goldstein was quite a conventional unit and nothing on the first of these really jumps out. Every Moment brings together two sessions, but is surprisingly coherent for that. Linka revels in Abercrombie's generous imprimatur and in the presence of his Czech-mate(!) Mraz. This most purely singing of bassists works an indefinable magic with the guitarist, whether Linka is playing smooth but peppery chords or single-note lines.

 Simple Pleasures MidLantic 105 Linka; Dan Fabricatore (b); Kenny Wollesen (d). 9/02.
If the outstanding cuts here are 'Autumn Leaves' and Sam Rivers' lovely 'Beatrice' that doesn't in any way detract from Rudy's own writing. 'Where Is My Delay Pedal?' is a wry, attractive thing, probably worked up in the studio, while the title-track works his familiar folk-tinged current. Fabricatore and Wollesen sound as if they're enjoying things too, especially when the arrangements are left loosest. The Kosma/Prevert tune is the highlight, though, and at eleven and a half minutes a lasting pleasure.

(*) Lucky Southern Quinton Q03032 As above; add John Scofield (g). 04.

